CLARENCE McCracken

GOES FREE

Two weeks ago the cottage of Clarence McCracken at Rush Lake was raided and a quantity of wet goods seized. McCracken was taken before Judge Yelland Saturday and on the motion of Prosecutor Sweeney the charge of selling liquor was dismissed as it was held that the four ounces of wine found in the house was not sufficient evidence on which to base a charge. The other liquor was found outside and the officers were unable to prove that McCracken owned it.

He was immediately arrested on a disorderly conduct charge to which he pled guilty, paying a fine of $5.00. At the time of the raid a number of people were there making whoopee and had their suspicions, but have since been assured that none of those present were from Pinckney, all hailing from Brighton, Howell and Fowlerville.

SHERIFF RAIDS GOLF CLUB

Livingston county sheriff's officers raided the Brighton Hills Golf Club on U. S. 16, east of Brighton and arrested the hostess, Mrs. Clara Thompson on charge of selling whiskey. CHARGE AGAINST BASING

DISMISSED

Several months ago Alton Basing who owns the west frontage on Cedar Lake, Marion township, was arrested on complaint of Charles Potter and Earl Baughn, owners of the east frontage, charged with destroying a dam which they had built there to raise the waters of the lake. The case came up before Judge Yelland of Howell Saturday and the charge of malicious destruction of property against Basing was dismissed on the grounds that the dam destroyed by Basing was not a legally established dam and that the liability of governing dams had not been followed. Under the law the lake level must be legally established by the board of supervisors. This it was claimed was not done.

The L. A. S. of the Pinckney Community Church, will serve a Roast Pork supper, Saturday, October 5th (in the church dining room). Price 75c. Everyone welcome. Mrs. Ona Campbell, Sec.

C. H. KENNEDY

Cloudy, windy and probably rainy weather will overlap this week from the storms expected in Michigan last week. Rains will become heavier and more general during the early part of the week beginning October 6th in this state and several days of farm activities will be halted.

Temperatures during this same period will be rather high for the season. Fall electrical storms are entirely probable. Between the thunder bolts and strong winds that will hit some sections of the state there will be some financial loss to life or property.

Following the middle part of the week, when the skies will be clearing off, temperatures will still remain quite moderate yet gradually fall lower until the end of the week. At this time the readings will have reached normal to slightly sub-normal marks.

Bad Radio Weather
October this year will probably be the worst month for radio reception since the advent of this new mystery science, according to James Stockley in an article printed in Science News Letter. This forecast is based on the probable number of sun spots that will appear during this period; the greater the number, the more disturbance there is apt to be in the earth's magnetic currents.

Radio reception during any period is usually worse just before a storm breaks in any particular section, more especially storms of the electrical rather than the rain or snow type. Based on this plan the following dates will be the worst for radio reception in Michigan during October: 4 to 8, 12 and 13, 18 to 20, 24 to 26, 29 and 30. The best dates will fall close to the 14, 15, 16, 21, 22 and 31.

Estimates of Detroit's Population Is 1,601,73

With an increase of 122,838 persons over last year's figure, Detroit's population is now 1,601,073, according to the statement of Frank Cody, Detroit superintendent of schools. This population estimate is contained in the school board annual survey for the purpose of budget information. It compares with 1,478,735 for August, 1928. The figures do not include Hamtramck, Highland Park and other adjacent suburbs.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, head-aches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois.

CHATTY GODDESS OF GAB
By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "MAY'S SQUIDDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PUBLISHING CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

But she had a dainty beauty that was all her own. Her long, straight hair was always soft and shining with sheer cleanliness. And many a girl would have given up all her next year's lipstick and face powder for Chatty's smooth, coral colored lips and the faint pink in her satiny cheeks.

Her great beauty was her eyes. They were brilliant, gray-green ones, and the lashes that fringed them were thick and jet black. They were always wide open, except when Chatty was asleep at night, and they saw everything. Everything... They never missed a thing that happened anywhere near Chatty.

"I'm not so bad," she said to herself, when she had bathed and was slowly dressing before the old-fashioned bureau in the bedroom. "I'm just as good looking as lots of girls who have plenty of men running after them. The only trouble with me is that I never have a chance to meet any men myself."

And then and there, standing in front of the long mirror in the old dresser, the Big Idea came to her. She would go out into the Front Room and ask Mrs. Van Nuys if Mr. Van Nuys could give her any kind of a job in his big offices downtown! Mrs. Van Nuys would surely help her if she could. She was such a friend of Chatty's mother—and to help Chatty to get a job would be helping Mrs. Chatterton, too.

But when Chatty came out into the front of the flat once more Mrs. Van Nuys had gone, and her mother was ripping the hem out of the blue taffeta dress.

"She says this skirt is too long," Mrs. Chatterton explained. "I'll have to shorten it, and then perhaps you'll take it over to her, Chatty. She wants it for early church tomorrow."

"Ticked to death to do it," answered Chatty. "My coat will be dry by the time you've put that hem in—and I'll stop in at Mrs. Mayberry's on my way home and collect those eighteen simoleons she owes me."

"I won't say a word to mother about asking her to get me a position until after I've done it," she decided. "I'll surprise her with the good news when I get back."

Surely there would be some kind of odd job that Mr. Van Nuys could give her in the offices of his bond house down on Kinney street—in those offices where fully a dozen young men who were neither married nor engaged, and who might possibly ask a girl to have lunch with them, sometimes, or date her up for the movies or for dancing.

"Funny, I never thought about Mr. Van Nuys' office before," thought Chatty, drying her coat before the kitchen stove. She smiled to herself and her heart was suddenly light.

It was after six when Chatty reached the Van Nuys' big lemon-yellow Colonial house on Wuthering Hill. A neat white-aproned maid sent her upstairs, where Mrs. Van Nuys was having a cup of hot tea before the fire in her bedroom.

"I got my foot wet, running around from store to store this afternoon," she said. "And I'm not young like you. I have rheumatic pains if I get cold or wet."

But she did not look old. She looked fifteen years younger than Chatty's mother, who was just a few days from plump pink from a beauty "treatment," and her light hair had been "touched up" until it was as bright and smooth as beaten gold.

"If you'll give me my purse from the desk I'll send your mother the money I owe her. I imagine she'll be glad to get it," she went on, pouring herself another cup of tea from the silver pot on the table beside her.

"I didn't come for the money, though," the girl answered. "I came to ask you to do me the biggest kind of a favor. I've lost my job, and I wonder if you'd ask Mr. Van Nuys to give me some kind of work in his office."

"What kind of work do you want to do, Catherine?" Mrs. Van Nuys asked. Her own name was Catherine, although she was called "Kate," and there had been some talk of naming Chatty after her when she was a baby. So Mrs. Van Nuys had always called her "Catherine."

"ANY kind of work," said Chatty, her eyes shining with eagerness in the firelight. "I'm not trained to take dictation or do typewriting or anything like that. But I know I could answer telephones—or make myself generally useful. I'll do ANYTHING—ANYTHING!"

"Well—I don't know whether he can hire you if you aren't trained along some line or other," Mrs. Van Nuys replied, "but—I'll ask him. I think I'll be able to see that you get a place there, Catherine."

She looked up at the little gilt clock on the mantel piece. "Mr. Van Nuys is having some people in for dinner—some of the men at the office," she added, getting up from her Sleepy

She would be wearing the flowers he had bought for her, of course, and she would smile up into his face the way she had smiled up at him that morning.

"Oh, poppycock! What do I care?" Chatty asked aloud of the wet spring evening, as she started down Wuthering Hill, jostling through the puddles, and taking deep breaths of the sweet, cool air.

Before she reached the bottom the rain had stopped, and down in the town she could see the smoke rising straight into the still air. In the dark west there was the faintest glow of pink... It was going to be a fine day tomorrow, after all.

"It ain't goin' to rain no more—no more," sang Chatty, under her breath. She felt cheerful and happy once more... She was going to have the kind of job she wanted. She was going to meet some men at last, and life looked pretty fine to her.

And then and there the Big Idea came to Chatty.

Hollow chair. "I think I'll have to get dressed now, if you'll excuse me," Mr. Van Nuys said to her as she came in. "I always say 'Hello' to them when they come."

Outside it was still raining—a steady drumming rain that sounded as if it was going to keep on all through the night.

It was almost dark, too, and the lights were turned on in the three automobiles that were parked in the driveway of the Van Nuys' house.

As Chatty came down the steps a fourth car turned in and stopped with a great shrieking of brakes behind the other three... It was a sub-nosed roadster, splashed with mud. Its top was down, and so was its windshield. And in it sat a young man whose hair was unmistakably red, even in the deep twilight.

CHAPTER III

There is no doubt about it. The red-headed man who was getting out of his roadster was the same red-headed man who had bought flowers for his girl in Tallman's shop that very morning.

He was wearing the same black oilskin "slicker" that he had worn that morning. And as he went across the wet lawn towards the Van Nuys' house, the wind blew it back from his tall, broad, young figure, and Chatty saw the gleam of a white evening shirt under it.

"He must be one of the men Mr. Van Nuys is having in for dinner," Chatty said to herself. "He must be one of the bond salesmen who work for him downtown—where I'm going to work, too! And I'll meet him!" Her spirits went sailing up like a kite.

She stood, smiling to herself in the dusk near the tall evergreen hedge that ran along the driveway, and watched him run up the steps and ring the bell.

She did not move until the front door was opened, letting a broad shaft of yellow light out into the dusk, and he vanished behind it.

Even then she stayed where she was a second or two longer, looking up at the house where the lamps within made golden oblongs out of all the windows. Behind those windows the red-headed man was slipping out of his oilskin coat by this time and shaking hands with Mr. Van, no doubt.

"It's only half past six," Chatty looked down at the cheap little silver watch she wore on her wrist. She could just make out the time in the dimness.

By nine the dinner and the "smoker" would be over probably. Then in all likelihood the red-headed man would jump into his open car and speed to his girl's house to spend the rest of the evening with her.

"I won't go down to Mrs. Mayberry's and fight with her," she told her mother when she got back to Lipton street. "I'll write her a note and ask her for my salary and Pud can take it down when he gets home from the drug store and, oh, mother, Mrs. Van Nuys says that Mr. Van will give me a job down in his office! She says she's sure she can make him give me a chance—and I'm not a bit sorry that Mrs. Mayberry fired me, after all! It was the best thing that ever happened to me—the very best thing EVER!"

And then Mrs. Chatterton, without raising her head from the seam she was putting in by hand, said something that made Chatty very cross—something that hurt her feelings, besides.

"Yes—it WILL be a fine thing for you to go down there to work. But not unless you learn to keep your tongue between your teeth!" was what she said.

Chatty actually glared at her with her bright gray-green eyes.

"Mother, that's mean of you!" she blazed. "You know I don't talk too much... You are just rubbing it into me that I do because Mrs. Mayberry said so, today. And it's not fair of you!"

Mrs. Chatterton shook her head and raised her gentle blue eyes to Chatty's flushed and angry little face.

"No—but I've been thinking about you a lot this afternoon while I sat here alone," she answered very quietly and soberly. "You've always talked too much—ever since you were a little thing, Chatty. You used to run around the neighborhood, telling everybody what we'd had for supper, or that the grocer wouldn't let us charge anything more until we'd paid the bill... It was cute, then, because you were just a little girl—"

"Oh, mother!" Chatty snapped, and turned to walk out of the Front Room. She wasn't going to stand here and let her mother talk to her like this! Let her do it, she said. She knew she didn't deserve it.

But Mrs. Chatterton stopped her.

"No, you've got to listen to me, Chatty," she went on. "You're going out into the world, in a way, when you go down to work for Mr. Van Nuys—it won't be like working for Mrs. Mayberry, and seeing nobody but her for weeks and weeks at a time. You'll be on trial in the business world, and you'll find that it's necessary to guard your lips there."

"Oh, why preach at me like this?" The girl was resentful and sulky now. "I have a few brains, mother—"

Real Dyes are easier to use

DIAMOND DYES are used by practically the same method as any other dye. They go on easier, though—more smoothly and evenly; without spotting or streaking. That's because they are made from real anilines, without a trace of fillers to injure fabrics or give things that redyed look.

Diamond Dyes contain the highest quality anilines that money can buy. That's why they give such clear, bright, new-looking colors, which keep their depth and brilliance so remarkably through wear and washings.

Next time you have dyeing to do, try Diamond Dyes—at our risk. See that they are easier to use. Then compare results. You will surely agree Diamond Dyes are better dyes. The white package of Diamond Dyes is the highest quality dye, prepared for general use. It will dye or tint silk, wool, cotton, linen, rayon or any mixture of materials. The blue package is a special dye, for silk and wool only. With it you can dye your valuable articles of silk or wool with results equal to the finest professional work. When you buy—remember this. The blue package dyes silk or wool only. The white package will dye every kind of goods, including silk and wool. Your dealer has both packages.

Diamond Dyes contain the highest quality anilines money can buy. And it is the life of that count. They are the life of their rich dyes: the source of their rich colors: brilliance and permanence.

Finer Than a Hair
To study wind velocity and direction the United States Department of Commerce has its own tunnel of winds where various tests are conducted. One of the latest is that of measuring wind velocity by means of an electrical heated wire and a five-tube amplifier. The wire is about one-fifth of a human hair in diameter.

The experiment was designed to reproduce the condition of flow around airplanes which move in ripples and waves. Quantitative methods of measuring the amount of these disturbances are now made available for the first time.

Bobbie in Hard Luck
Five-year-old Bobbie seemed greatly grieved by the illness of his big seven-year-old brother. No one had time to notice Bobbie. He decided to help with the housework, but his sister kindly informed him that he was too young. Then he attempted to play but was told not to get his toys out and dirty up the house. Daddy seeing him seated, almost crying, in a corner, took him on his lap.

"What's the matter, little fellow?" asked the father, sympathetically.

"I ain't got nothin' to do, and nobody'll let me do it."

Constitutional Changes
The first ten amendments to the United States Constitution were submitted to the states along with two others, which were not ratified, and the last ratification by a state took place on December 15, 1791. The eleventh amendment was declared to be ratified on January 8, 1798; twelfth, September 25, 1804; thirteenth, December 18, 1865; fourteenth, July 23, 1868; fifteenth, March 30, 1870; sixteenth, February 25, 1913; seventeenth, May 31, 1913; eighteenth, January 29, 1919; nineteenth, August 26, 1920.

Invention That Would Dispel Fogs Awaited
No practical way has as yet been found for dispelling fogs, declare weather bureau meteorologists. Many schemes have been advanced for the artificial dissipation of fog, but the places that have always been notorious for the thickness of their atmosphere still have their mark.

Shortly before the World war the city of Lyons, France, voted money for preventing the formation of fog in that city by coating the Rivers Rhone and Saone with oil. About the same time the Cottrell process of electrical precipitation, which is successfully applied in trapping industrial dusts and fumes, was tried on the fogs of the California coast, but nothing seems to have resulted. The naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia has tried to eliminate mists by means of electrified sprays, but no tangible results have been announced. Schemes for draining off fog-laden air from flying fields and for warming the air over such places and thus causing the fog to evaporate have been investigated and found impracticable.

On a small scale and in favorable circumstances fog can be dispelled, say the meteorologists, but all known methods are too costly for commercial use.

Tamed Ground Squirrel Makes Good as Mouser
A golden-mantled ground squirrel, tamed by rangers at the Dunraven Pass station, in Yellowstone National park, not only made an excellent pet, but also took upon himself the duties of mouser. At first considerable local comment was caused by the fact that that squirrel, known as Chipple, had caught a mouse, but Ernest Thompson Seton, well-known naturalist, states that this species of squirrel, which is really a rodent, is in the habit of catching field mice. Therefore the step to catching a mouse indoors was not such a long one for Chipple.

Chipple made a great hit with the Dunraven rangers. "Chipple has proven quite a bit of company to me," said one of them. "He will come when I call him if he is within hearing distance. He shows no fear of me at all unless I make a very sudden movement."

"He is as jealous as he can be and will not allow me to feed another squirrel at all. He will chase them out of my hand, then sit up there and chatter at them to let them know their place."—Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Old Connecticut House
Built in 1639 by Henry Whitfield and a small group of his followers who settled in what is now Guilford, Conn., the "Old Stone House" stands today as a monument of substantial construction.

Its foundation was laid only 19 years after the Pilgrims landed in Plymouth. Its walls are two feet thick. Its main chimney is 16 feet across and is built into the wall itself. The fireplace inside was so large that a team of horses drove through the front door, since altered and made smaller, and out the rear, dragging huge logs behind them which, when in position, were rolled into the fire with crowbars. Mr. Whitfield, according to the town records, used 40 cords of wood each winter.

Rhodes' Prediction
In "Rhodes' All Red Route," by Lewis R. Freeman, this statement is attributed to Rhodes upon his first visit to Victoria falls: "Do you know that the natives claim that they can see far into the future by looking into the depths of that big rainbow? . . . I can see two lines of shining steel running from one end of Africa to the other . . . all the way from Cape Town to the Mediterranean. . . . Do you see that bar of red?" (Then the rainbow glowed a dusky rose where the light of the setting sun struck there the smoke of smoldering veiled fires). "That means it's going to be an 'All Red' railway; that it will run in British territory all the way."

Knowing the Truth
Many feel themselves very confidently on safe ground when they say: It must be good for man to know the truth. But it is clearly not good for a particular man to know some particular truth, as irretrievable treachery in one whom he cherishes—better that he should die without knowing it. Of scientific truth, is it not conceivable that some facts as to the final destination of the race might be more hurtful when they had entered into the human consciousness than they would have been if they had remained purely external in their activity?—George Elliot.

Health Hint
Carbolic acid poisoning is perhaps the commonest of all poisonings. A half ounce of sulphate of soda in a glass of warm water should be given as quickly as possible and a physician called. Afterward, vomiting should be induced.

Keep the Mind Active
Avoid stagnation of mind as you would the vilest plague. If you are content with such, then you are through. Never forget, "He who ceases to grow greater becomes smaller; stagnation is the beginning of the end."

WHILE THE world is full of darkness, the light of the electric lamp is a beacon of hope. It is the result of the genius of Thomas Alva Edison, who has shown us the way to a brighter future. His inventions have changed the world, and his spirit lives on in every lamp that glows.

"Let There Be Light"

connected to the station, in customer's installations, 1,284 lamps; on January 1, 1883, this had been increased to 3,477 lamps, furnishing service to 231 customers. In 1884, the first motor was connected to the system, and the first arc lamp of the "multiple" type in 1889.

The original district served extended from Wall Street to Spruce and Ferry Streets, and from Nassau Street to the East River—a territory of about one square mile, requiring about 18 miles of Edison underground feeder and main tubes.

The historic Pearl Street Station did the remarkable work of demonstrating not only the practicability, but also the commercial success of the Edison system—that epoch-making series of Mr. Edison's inventions for generating, distributing, and utilizing electric current. The station was totally destroyed by fire in January, 1890, only one "Jumbo" surviving the wreck.

JUMBO No. 1 was sent to the Paris International Exposition, where it was hailed by scientists and engineers from all lands as a marvel of perfect electrical and mechanical construction. It had a capacity equal to about 700 of the 16 candle-power Edison lamps. Construction was begun at once on "Jumbo" No. 2 with a capacity of 1000 lamps. It was shipped to London with Jumbo No. 3 (capacity 1200 lamps), and installed in the Holborn station of The Edison Electric Light Company.

Subsequent "Jumbo" generators were constructed substantially like Jumbo No. 3, with only minor changes. From all records now available, it appears that twenty-three were built, distributed as follows: Paris Exposition, one; Holborn Viaduct, three; Pearl Street, New York, eight; Milan, Italy, ten (of which one, at least, was obtained from Holborn Viaduct); and Santiago, Chile, two. Two "Jumbos" were constructed in France, at the factory of the Societe Industrielle et Commerciale Edison, Ivry sur Seine, and installed in the basement of the Paris Opera House in 1884.

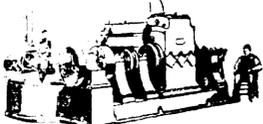

Scientists at the time maintained that the armature of the generator should be wound with a high resistance. Mr. Edison, however, insisted that they were on the wrong track, and proceeded to design his armature with a minimum resistance. When the generator returned a part of the mechanical energy put into it.

In New York City in the spring of 1881, the Edison-Murray Avenue began the construction of the first successful direct-current power plant. The combined weight of the generator and engine was 30 tons. Its size excited great wonder, and resulted in its being called "Jumbo" by the people. A very large snake element at the Zoological Gardens who was a friend with the children because of the number he would carry at once on his back.

HAVING invented a practical lamp, a dynamo, and a distribution system, Thomas Edison began the construction of a generating station in a four-story building on Pearl Street, New York City, from which to supply current for lighting homes and commercial premises.

To support the weight of the engines and dynamos in this historic Pearl Street Station, the old building was torn out and a structure of heavy girders erected, entirely independent of the building walls. There were four boilers rated 240 horse power each, and six "Jumbo" dynamos each with a capacity of 1200 lamps or 16 candle power.

Mr. Edison passed several months in the building, day and night, making experiments and tests. The station was started September 4, 1882. Less than a month later, on October 1, there were renewing his influence on the development of the Electric Light and Power Industry. The fourth will appear in this paper next week.

CURRENT COMMENTS

A great flurry and hubbub is being raised over the catastrophe in the Study Club at Detroit where 22 people were killed in a panic which ensued when the place caught fire. Investigations galore have been started as it was found that the club has been running for a year while violating all the safety first measures ever passed. Several others have been closed which have also been flaunting the fire laws. We don't look for any drastic action against the proprietor of the club as we do not see where he was any more blameable than the authorities who let him run. Night clubs figure in the papers largely for violating the prohibition laws. We don't know whether they are all on the order of Texas Gulinan's night club or not but we are consumed with a curiosity to learn what was studied at the Detroit Study Club.

tion passed a drastic law against drunken hunters. The penalty is confinement of hunting license and gun and a heavy fine or jail sentence. The many fatalities which occur in the north woods each year during the deer hunting season are the result of drunkenness and the law is intended to curb this. Its workings will be watched with interest.

A Grand Rapids judge has ruled that all defendants held on liquor charges committed before August 25 shall be released as the Cuthbertson law now in effect does not carry a savings clause. The prosecutor has appealed the ruling to the supreme court. This will be watched with interest as if the ruling is sustained it would empty the court dockets of many counties of a majority of liquor cases.

was selected dean of the college of liberal arts at Northwestern university; Prof. Ulrich B. Phillips, a world authority on the history of the south, who accepted an offer from Yale university, and Prof. Robert Mason, who was lost to the Harvard business school. Other losses, particularly in the department of English and rhetoric, comprise "too large a group for any self-respecting university to lose," the editorial states.

Attention is called to recent losses by death of several scholars, including Francis W. Kelsey, Alfred H. Lloyd, Robert Mark Wenley and Charles Horton Cooley and depletion of the faculty by retirement as in the cases of Harry B. Hutchins, Mortimer E. Cooley, Victor H. Lane, Horace Wilgus, Arthur G. Canfield and Frederick M. Taylor.

Such losses, the Alumnus holds, while regrettable, are unavoidable. The claim is made that the University of Michigan must be prepared to meet offers of other institutions in the matter of salaries.

The issue reprints the appeal of Regent Ralph E. Stone, of Detroit, to the alumni of the university to support with special funds the sums made available for salaries by state appropriations. The Alumnus predicts that "Regent Stone's appeal will meet with favorable reaction."

Poems That Live

LINCOLN

This bronze doth keep the very form and mold Of our great martyr's face. Yes, this is he; That brow all wisdom, all benignity; That human, humorous mouth; those cheeks that hold Like some harsh landscape all the summer's gold; That spirit fit for sorrow, as the sea For storms to beat on; the lone agony Those silent, patient lips too well foretold. Yes, this is he who ruled a world of men As might some prophet of the elder day— Brooding above the tempest and the fray With deep-eyed thought and more than mortal ken. A power was his beyond the touch of art Or armed strength—his pure and mighty heart. —Richard W. Gilder (1844-1909)

W. C. T. U. TO MEET AT HOLLAND OCT. 25

The Holland W. C. T. U. is making elaborate plans for the entertainment of the 400 delegates who will assemble in state convention here Oct. 2 to 25. The program will feature a banquet on the first evening of the convention, a sight-seeing tour of the city and vicinity, a delegates' luncheon, and an evening meeting in Home memorial chapel at which Mrs. Anna Marden DeYo, corresponding secretary of the national organization, and Miss Winona Jewell, general secretary of the young people's branch, will be the principal speakers.

Tentative plans will be made for an effective educational campaign, increased membership, and a stronger mobilization of forces to aid in obtaining for the country the benefit of a great and economically sound law.

Chairmen of committees include: Mrs. E. Walvoord, Mrs. R. B. Champion, Mrs. E. J. Leddick, Mrs. S. Habing, Mrs. J. W. Visscher, Mrs. M. DeBoer, Mrs. K. Veneklasen, Mrs. P. E. Hinkamp, F. J. Dressel, Mrs. Carl Shaw and Mrs. P. Ihrman. Mrs. E. Walvoord has been appointed general chairman and Mrs.

Some idea of the manner in which this beading is used can be gathered from the evening frocks in the sketch. The frock at the left is of pale pink flat crepe, belted with a girde of small coral beads at the normal waistline, the same small beads forming the shoulder straps and edging the deep hip yoke. A cartridge-pleated flounce gives the effect of a turic at the front and sides, and extends abruptly from the yoke in a long split panel at the back. Coral crepe slippers complete the costume.

Imitates Tennis Frock

Built on the lines of the suntan tennis frock is the model in the center. This is of pale green chiffon. Its décolletage is outlined with a band of darker green crystal beads ending in a bow above the waistline. There is also a narrow belt of the darker green beads placed at the normal waistline. The gored skirt is set on with a scalloped effect at the deep hip yoke. Green crepe slippers embroidered in beads were worn with this frock.

The third frock shows a model in white crepe de chine combined with brown, which is rather an unusual combination. The crepe de chine is printed in geometric flowers in brown and rust. The circular, uneven panels extending from the hips are of white crepe ending in deep flares of brown tulle. The shoulder straps and narrow girde are beaded in crystal beads matching the brown and rust in the print. Brown kid slippers with bead trimming are worn with this frock.

The World and All

By CHARLES R. DRISCOLL

TEA AND TIME

Tea, as you have heard, is an important institution in England. While in London I have had tea in half a dozen offices and shops. At about 4 in the afternoon the stenographers or clerks lay the tea-table cloth, bring in the big teapot, carefully covered by a little quilted nightcap called a teacoty, and set down the marmalade, bread and butter and cakes.

There are dishes enough to go around among the persons regularly taking tea at this table, and some to spare for guests.

While I was picking over old pirate records at Maggs Brothers book store Mr. James Maggs asked me to have tea. There were present at the table the heads of the firm, three or four heads of departments, and three guests. One was a resident of Ceylon, who was traveling around the world for his health, another was a customer from Australia, and I represented America. It was a very pleasant tea-time.

At the office of my friend, Herbert Lewis, we had as tea guest one day Mr. Percy Marks, a London journalist of the traditional type, with monocle and heavy gold chain, profoundly sweeping mustache, and an accent good enough to preserve on phonograph records. He proved an interesting conversationalist, although he had never heard of his namesake, Percy Marks, the American novelist.

Another day, Mr. Ronald Kenney, of the British foreign office, 10 Downing street, had tea with us. He is a Lancashireman, with a soft and pleasant manner of speech and a talent for diplomacy which is good in ordinary discussions as well as in international brawls.

When the English tea-drinkers and I became involved in a spirited argument about the comparative degrees of democracy to be found in England and America, Diplomat Kenney intervened with explanations and interpretations which somehow kept the Englishmen and I from throwing the tea things at one another.

I am all for this English custom of tea. Provided, of course, that the tea is good, which it always is in England. I have yet to taste a bad cup of tea in this island.

But can you imagine an American office, store or factory stopping operations in the middle of the afternoon for a sociable cup of tea? I can't. The custom might fit into the atmosphere of the sociable South, but in the rest of this country I fear it would be greeted with hoots of derision. Yet it is a gracious and enjoyable institution in England.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

HAIR GROOMING UP TO DATE

Once upon a time a woman had a comb and she had a brush and she had a mirror, and tucked away in the top drawer of her bureau there was a fat little brown bundle of kid curlers with which she tortured her hair into an exaggerated curl, a curl that rarely escaped plain "frizziness."

That was hair grooming a decade ago, but ten years change minds and habits, characters and customs, and today, milady has a set of military brushes (if she is wise), a magnifying mirror (if she is careful) and a permanent wave.

On her bureau there is always a bottle of tonic, and in her bathroom closet the real secrets of her hair beauty are carefully tucked away.

What are they? First her shampoo, for all beauty depends most upon absolute cleanliness. The modern woman could no more think of rubbing a cake of soap on her hair than she would of washing it with benzine.

And before we go further into the "intricacies" of modern hair grooming, I want to tell you something about washing your hair.

I have given detached instructions on shampooing a short time ago, and it is not my intention to repeat them here, but the few little points which came to my mind, seem to me worth passing on. When you wash your hair, learn to depend on the strength of your fingers more than you do on the quality of the shampoo. If your hands are dirty you scrub them. Soaking, unless it's by the hour, is not going to remove embedded dirt. If it won't work with your hands, why expect it to on your hair? Your scalp needs cleansing just as much as the hair itself does, and surface latherings of soap won't clean your scalp. So after your hair has been wet with warm water, rub your shampoo well into the hair roots, using the TIPS of your fingers, not the cushioned pads.

Don't be afraid of a little energy. Your scalp is quite sufficiently resistant as it is. All your rubbing won't do anything more than wake it up into healthful animation, and that should be done anyway. It isn't necessary to lather four times. Twice is quite sufficient, but if your hair is very much inclined toward oiliness, three latherings are more effective. You can quickly learn how to manipulate your finger tips so that the nails won't graze your scalp.

For the woman who likes a soft, loose wave the water wave is excellent, but there must be some tendency toward a natural wave in the hair, or a water wave will not be successful. You can give yourself a water wave at home, but it's an intricate process and I don't particularly advise an amateur to attempt it.

Since women have learned how to protect against the resultant dryness, the permanent wave has truly become a blessing. But don't get a permanent wave unless you're prepared to give your hair the extra stimulus of an occasional hot oil shampoo, and regular applications of a good hair tonic, which you may obtain for either dry or oily hair.

Psychological Tests

Dr. John N. Washburne of Syracuse university has devised a set of simple tests designed to measure the ability of children to sacrifice an immediate satisfaction to a greater future satisfaction. A set of children from the ages of 3 to 17 years, whose home and school records were known to the investigators, were asked whether they would prefer to own a motor car now or have $1,000,000 a year from now. They were given a choice of one piece of candy now or five pieces next week, and a further choice of a present outright of one cent or ten cents in one week.

Almost invariably the younger children chose present benefits in place of greater deferred awards, but the majority of children who consistently chose the more substantial future handouts were in the behavior-group labeled "good." Most of the older children choosing an immediate satisfaction were delinquent.

"It appears," said Dr. Washburne in a report of his experiment to the Journal of Juvenile Research, "that these tests measure something which, when missing in children over a certain age, leads to the type of behavior which is detected and reported as

"bad," and which, when present in children under a certain age, leads to conduct which is generally considered "good."

Impulse judgment is the term coined by the psychologist to cover this trait of character. "Our results indicate," he added, "that impulse judgment generally grows apace with mental age and chronological age, that when it lags behind there is trouble, and when it lags far behind there is serious trouble."

Holland Sand Hills Are Being Reduced

The big sand-hills near the east limits of Holland are being materially reduced for filling in the low sections on the property of the Hart & Cooley plant on M21, just east of Holland.

Hundreds of loads have been removed to the property in connection with new additions being made to the plant. Martin Oudemool, contractor, has started construction of a new $30,000 addition.

The plant now is among the largest of Holland's industries.

The beef and vegetable recipe may be varied to suit individual taste. Tomatoes may be added and any other vegetable you have on hand. I happened to have one small turnip, one carrot and the greater part of a good sized onion when I evolved the dish. Green peppers would add a flip to the flavor.

Recipes

Chopped Beef and Vegetables—Brown one pound chopped round steak in a loaf or small cakes in a little bacon or other fat. When brown on both sides add one good-sized carrot, one turnip and a large onion cut in cubes, add hot water to keep from burning, season with pepper and salt, cover and let cook until vegetables are tender. Serve meat on platter, surrounded or covered with vegetables. Serves four.

Spice Cake—One cup brown sugar, one-half cup lard, two eggs, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon each cinnamon and cloves, one scant cup hot water, two and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons soda. Bake in layers and put together with any desired frosting. The batter may seem thin, but do not add more flour if you have used the quantities given.

SUGGESTIONS

Setting Table

Every young housekeeper is anxious to set her table correctly, according to standard rules. Not so much the setting for the daily meals perhaps as for Sunday dinner, and company is a bit disturbing until one really knows. Let us talk of the everyday table first, starting with breakfast. Although it may be a hurried meal, yet it should be neatly and attractively placed.

The breakfast cloth may be of damask, colored linen, Japanese toweling, a large linen square, or one of the new cloths made of tea toweling put together with fagot stitching. Or it may be a set of mats in linen, straw or oilcloth. Whatever it is, it must be a spotless covering. Napkins should be changed three times a week, four if it can be managed.

Before each place a service plate is placed. At the right side the breakfast knife, blade edge turned out, then the fruit, then the cereal spoon. At the upper end of the knife stand the tumbler, if the napkin is ringed it is at the head of the plate. At the left of the plate lay the fork, tines up; at the top of the fork the butter plate and across it the spreader. At the right of the one who serves lay fork and tablespoon. Coffee service on a tray at the right of the hostess and with its needed cups and saucers. Butter-serving plate and server should be rather centrally placed at either side of the table most convenient with bread or toast plate near it.

Lum Bago—Service in this hotel is rotten. I'd like to phone the clerk and give him a piece of my mind. Addie Noyd—Why don't you? Lum Bago—I tried to, but nobody answered the phone.

Know this, that every country can produce good men.—Lessing.

RECEIPTS FROM HIGHWAY FUND SHOW INCREASE

Predictions of a $55,000,000 increase in highway receipts this year were substantiated recently when Sidney Schulte, deputy secretary of state, revealed that collections from the freight tax for the first eight months are almost $2,500,000 more than the 1928 total. On August 31 Schulte showed the state had collected $21,147,000 from the sale of license plates, in comparison with $18,773,000 the whole of last year.

Gasoline tax receipts are also greater than last year, and it was predicted that instead of $18,000,000 from this source the state will obtain $20,000,000.

When the last legislature was seeking in vain for available funds in order to keep down the property tax it was suggested that, because of this apparent increase, part of the highway money could be diverted for other purposes. Only a few of the lawmakers would consider this plan.

Of the weight tax collections during the eight-month period, Wayne county paid $8,559,000; Kent $1,136,000; Oakland, $1,034,000, and Genesee $920,348.

Mrs. Alice Alexander, head of the corporation division, estimated that receipts from the corporation tax this year will be increased $500,000. So far, she has collected $6,800,000, a sum equal to the total last year and she said another $500,000 would be received before January. This money is deposited in the general fund.

WAYNE AIRPORT READY NOV. 1

That the Wayne county airport at Middle Belt and Goddard Roads will be ready for landings by November 1 was announced by Edward N. Hines, chairman of the road commission.

The commission is laying 12 runways of 1,000 feet length each and with a width of 100 feet. They are 8-inch concrete, reinforced in the same manner as are Wayne county's highways.

Recent developments included starting of erection of a fence about the field and further progress on the foundation for the hangar. The hangar foundation is expected to be finished by the end of the month, it was said.

The drainage system being laid will require more than 1,000,000 feet of tiling in addition to the trunk system, which already has been installed.

Waters of Lake Michigan Are Slowly Receding

The level of the waters in Lake Michigan dropped nearly two inches — 1.8 inches to be exact — during the month of August, but is still 1.64 feet higher than at this time last year, according to the United States Lake survey report just issued.

That part of the report dealing with Lake Michigan follows:

Lake Michigan is 0.15 foot lower than in July (since 1860 the August level has averaged 0.05 foot lower than July); it is 1.64 feet higher than the August stage of a year ago, 2.24 feet above the average stage of August of the last ten years, 1.33 feet below the high stage of August, 1876, and 3.74 feet above the low stage of August, 1925.

State Taxidermists Given New Rights

Michigan commercial taxidermists may hereafter be authorized to possess during closed seasons protected birds and animals which have been legally taken under the provisions of the new law that authorized the director of the conservation department to issue these taxidermy licenses.

Taxidermists customarily have specimens for mounting in their possession after the close of the season in which the animals were legally killed, and in such cases, strictly speaking, the taxidermists were violating the state game laws. The new provisions are intended to be of actual assistance to them, and not an added restriction.

It is required, however, that holders of these permits keep a record of all species which they receive. To possess birds coming under the provisions of the federal migratory bird laws, it is necessary to have a federal permit as well. These may be secured from the Biological Survey, Washington, D. C.

U. S. Army Will Repair Mackinac Breakwaters

The corps of army engineers will take immediate steps to repair the breakwaters at Mackinac island, according to information received by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg. The work will be undertaken as an emergency measure without waiting for an appropriation from congress.

In the past the policy of the war department has been to spend money in such ports only when justified by the amount of its commerce in goods. Mackinac island has had little commerce of this kind, but Senator Vandenberg pointed out that 300,000 passengers enter its port each year.

Not only are the breakwaters crumbling away, but they are submerged by the high water and have become a menace to navigation. This condition constitutes an emergency which justifies immediate action in making repairs, the war department has decided.

War Medal Given To Ex-State Solon

A distinguished service cross has been received from the war department by Major Edgar B. Strom, former state representative, for meritorious service in the line of duty. On October 14, 1918, he led a patrol of eight men through the German lines in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. For this deed, each member of the patrol has received a medal. Major Strom then was a captain in command of Company I, 126th Infantry, 32nd division.

Reorganize Rail Line

Reorganization of the Detroit and Port Huron Shore Line railway on a more favorable financial basis is now being effected, according to Campbell, Bulkeley and Ledyard, attorneys for the Detroit and Security Trust company, receivers for the line. It is believed that this reorganization will be followed by reorganization on some similar basis of other subsidiaries of the Rapid Railway company.

LAW RESTRICTS JUSTICE RIGHTS

Among the new laws passed at the 1929 session of the legislature which are now in effect, is one regulating the condition under which a justice of the peace can issue a warrant in a criminal case. The act is No. 290 of the Public Acts of 1929, and the portions of the 1927 measure which were amended are Section 1 of Chapter 1, and Section 4 of Chapter 11 of Act No. 175 of the Public Acts of 1927.

The act as amended permits a justice of the peace to issue a warrant in a criminal case only when he has on file in the office a written order from the prosecuting attorney authorizing the issuance of a warrant or when the complaining witness files a curity for the costs of the trial. The procedure to be followed is explained by Prosecuting Attorney John D. Kerr as follows:

"When a complaining witness wishes to lodge a complaint with a justice of the peace against another person for violation of the law, by the complaining witness a peace officer or private citizen, the justice should first examine under oath the complaining witness and all other witnesses produced before him and take the written complaint of the complaining witness and then submit the matter to the prosecuting attorney. If the justice is satisfied from his examination that an offense under the law has been committed, and there is reasonable cause to believe the accused person or persons guilty thereof, he should so inform the prosecuting attorney and the prosecuting attorney should then issue an order to the justice of the peace to issue the warrant. This order from the prosecuting attorney, the justice should have on file in his office before he issues the warrant. If the prosecuting attorney is not satisfied either that an offense under the law has been committed, or that there is sufficient evidence to justify the issuance of a warrant and fails to give the justice the order allowing the issuance of the warrant, then if the complaining witness desires to furnish security for costs, the justice is authorized to issue the warrant.

This new statute applies only to criminal arrest warrants and not to search warrants. A search warrant can still be issued by a justice of the peace upon proper showing made with or without the consent of the prosecuting attorney."

Methods of Drilling Oil Wells Studied

New producing sands have been found as a result of drilling oil wells to an increasingly greater depth in the past few years, the Bureau of Mines of the Department of Commerce announced in a statement issued Sept. 11. In some cases drilling tools deviate to one side and wells at a considerable depth are not always vertical, according to the statement, which follows in full text:

During the past few years oil wells have been drilled to increasingly greater depths, with the result that many new producing sands have been found, the existence of which was not suspected a few years ago. During the course of an engineering study of one of the most notable of these deep fields, the Seminole area, in Oklahoma, the petroleum experiment station, which is maintained by the United States Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce, and the State of Oklahoma at Bartlesville, Okla., have paid particular attention to deep wells which deviate from a truly vertical direction.

When the depths of the wells and the efforts that are made to reach the producing sand as quickly as possible are considered, it is not surprising that in some cases the drilling tools deviate to one side after descending for some distance in a truly vertical direction. The two effects of the deviation are of great importance in preparing engineering maps and cross sections of the producing field. In the first place, the well is actually shallower than it appears to be so that its true depth can only be determined by measuring the average deviation from the vertical and correcting the apparent depth as measured by a tape line. The second effect is that the location of the well as shown on the map is not necessarily directly above the location of the hole where it enters the producing sand.

These and other difficulties are today well recognized by the major producing companies who are making every effort to keep their wells as nearly vertical as possible.

From Milwaukee To Detroit, 5 Hours

The trip from Milwaukee to Detroit was cut to five hours recently when the Kohler Aviation Corporation established its air-mail schedule between those cities. An amphibian plane from Milwaukee made connections at the Grand Rapids airport with the Wolverine, Michigan Central line, at 12:30 p. m.

Changes Under Way At Harbor Springs

Considerable changes in ownership of resort property has taken place in Harbor Springs recently and plans are on foot to add many attractions to this vicinity as a resort center.

The Larbe Creche club, recently formed by 10 members of the Harbor Point association, has purchased the Hankey property adjacent to Harbor Point and will build a club house, swimming pool, five tennis courts and beautify the water front.

The Hawkey Milling Co. will move its elevator, warehouse and coal yard to the Pennsylvania railroad property near the freight house.

Another association, known as the Beach Club, whose officers are: President, E. C. McCluney, St. Louis; vice president, Edward P. Russell, Chicago; secretary, Sterling Edmunds, St. Louis, has purchased the Bradley and E. M. Johnson property west of Harbor Point. They have considerable shore line frontage and a fine bathing beach. Harold S. Reynolds, Toledo; Joseph E. Otis, Chicago; W. L. Ross, Cleveland, and H. S. Leyman, Cincinnati, with the officers, constitute the board of directors. Plans now are being made by E. H. Mead, architect, for a club house and bath houses, which will be ready next summer.

Mrs. L. Gardner of New York city, who owns a cottage at Harbor Point, has purchased a boat house site. A warehouse will be moved to make room for it.

BERRIEN OIL FIRM IS REORGANIZED

The T. R. Oil & Gas Co. is the name of a new Michigan corporation that has taken over the Bi-County Gas & Fuel Co. that has been drilling on the Emanuel Home camp grounds four miles north of Watervliet in Covert township. The incorporators of the T. R. Oil & Gas Co. are largely the same as those holding the stock in the Bi-County. However, some additional Kalamazoo capital is interested in the project.

The new company is capitalized at $50,000 with the stock all subscribed for. Officers and directors are: President, C. O. Thorne, Watervliet; vice president, P. G. Fennell, Butler, Pa.; secretary-treasurer, B. F. Rogers, Watervliet. Directors are the officers and Leslie F. Muter, Chicago; Fred Scheid, Kalamazoo; Charles J. Mondor, Kalamazoo.

The hole is down to a depth of 2,000 feet and drilling is being continued. While no oil has been struck there has been a strong showing of gas and the promoters are encouraged by the pressure in the hole which they believe indicates oil and gas somewhere in the field. The company has several thousand acres of land under lease in the field and President Thorne says it will drill to the Niagara formation. If it proves barren another hole will be started some miles to the east of the present operations.

The Blatchford Gas & Oil exploration hole on the north shore of Paw Paw lake is down to a depth of about 1,800 feet. The Blatchford people say they will drill to the Niagara, which is believed to lie at a depth of 2,400 to 2,500 feet.

HAMBURG WINS SECOND SERIES GAME 16 TO 8

Hamburg won the second game of the three games series with Pinckney by a score of 16 to 8. The game was played at Hamburg. On account of threatening weather it was not known until noon that the game would be played consequently two Pinckney players failed to show up. This made a switch in the lineup necessary and only three men played the same positions they played the first game. Richmond and Cox played second and short and Pat Lavey who has not played in three years played first. He rapped out three hits and fielded well. The weather was too cold for base ball and Moran could not get going. The seven Pinckney errors also figured largely in the scoring. Each team got 17 hits but Hamburg grouped theirs to better advantage. Hamburg won the game in the 1st three innings when they scored 11 runs on hits and Pinckney errors. Pinckney had men on every inning but could not score until the final stages of the game. When Cox was safe on the 4th throw, Moran and Lee walked, Cox and Moran scored on two wild throws to second by Searies, and Lee scored on Lavey's hit, who was out at second trying to stretch it into a double. Richmond doubled to start the fifth and Beeman beat out a hit. Eck flied to center and Richmond was doubled at second. Cox got a hit but Webber threw out Doyle. Lee doubled with 2 out in the sixth and Lavey singled but Richmond flied to Radtke. In the 8th Doyle walked, Brown hit a three bagger over the center field fence, but was out at home trying to score. Moran walked, Lee singled, Moran scoring. Lavey walked, Richmond was thrown out by Webber and Beeman flied to center. In the ninth Eck singled, Cox grounded out at first, Doyle doubled, Eck scoring, Brown struck out, Moran got a hit, Lee singled, Lavey singled, Moran scoring, but Lavey was out at second. The last game of the series will be played at Hamburg next Sunday and Pinckney will have a real team in the field and will be prepared to win. Favorable weather conditions are hoped for.

PINCKNEY HIGH SCHOOL WINS ANOTHER

The Pinckney High School won the second game of their schedule Friday when they defeated South Lyon at South Lyon by a score of 38 to 0. South Lyon had plenty of weight, including a 240 lb center but they were unable to gain consistently and Pinckney was able to make 30 and 40 yard gains around end and through the line at will. South Lyon did not seem to have any plays and only made three first downs. The referee seemed determined to make the game an even affair and penalized Pinckney 18 times for a total of 115 yards. South Lyon drew no penalties. This is believed to be a record. Pinckney's penalties were for line offense, backfield in motion and the last one for 15 yards was for talking back to the referee. In the third period three successive penalties gave South Lyon the ball on Pinckney's five yard line. However they could not gain and Pinckney got the ball on downs. Three attempts failed but on the fourth Murray Kennedy made 25 yds. and first down. Pinckney tried numerous forward passes but only one was successful, that being caught by Har Hall. Most of the local gains were made through tackle and around end, several lateral passes were successful. Pete Gerycz and Murray Kennedy made most of Pinckney's yardage the former through the line and the latter around end. Gerycz afforded fine interference for the latter on his runs taking out two and three tacklers repeatedly. Pinckney found Van Atta, South Lyon's 240 lb center hard to handle, Devereaux and Jim Hall both being forced from the game after collisions with him. He also broke through the Pinckney line a number of times and tackled the ball carrier before he got started. South Lyon plays a return game here Friday, October 4 and should show improvement as Friday was their first game.
