

WEEK OF OCTOBER 20

Mild weather and the summer type of storms will still be with us in Michigan as the week of October 20 begins. These early days of the week will display a rather marked storm period that we expect will have started last week in the Northwest states, traveled into the Plains states and middle Mississippi valley and then move abruptly northeast over the Lake region, Ohio valley and Eastern states.

These storms almost invariably bring plenty of rainfall with them or rather in their advance. There will also be wind storms in connection with this area during early part of week. By Monday there will be a sharp change to cooled weather that will continue in Michigan until after the middle of the week with attending fair weather and some killing frosts.

During Thursday and Friday temperatures will moderate somewhat from previous readings, there will be increasing cloudiness and local storms of rain or snow flurries. Unsettled, cloudy weather will remain in Michigan during the balance of the week.

A writer in the Daily Mail, London, states that last year Sir William Osler contributed a hot weather design for men's dress. His ideal man wore a soft hat, a coat of quite original cut and a somewhat scanty straw, kill similar to that worn by native Hawaiians, while the legs were bare and the feet graced with sandals.

There is probably little danger this design will be introduced into Michigan for a week or two, anyway, but it is our idea that several of the knit dresses could be used advantageously during the winter when wrapped tightly around each leg like exposed water pipes are treated.

Notwithstanding the coming winter is expected to be about normal in temperature, with some rather warm spells, we believe the overalls, ragged overcoat, fur cap and mittens will still be stylish.

Modern Mothers Help Create New Slogan

Millions More Each Year Turn To Famous External Method of Treating Colds

Each year more and more mothers turn to Vicks VapoRub, the modern external treatment for colds, because it is just rubbed on and cannot upset children's stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do.

Vicks VapoRub is designed and first used largely for children's colds, this better external method gradually spread as one enthusiastic mother told another. Years of actual use also proved it equally effective for the colds of grown-ups. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing" and Vicks—a household word in America—is used in more than 60 countries abroad.

The ever-growing demand for Vicks is shown in its familiar slogan, expressing the number of jars used yearly. First announced when Vicks reached "1 Million Jars Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—the figures are again being changed, as there are now "Over 28 Million Jars Used Yearly."

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly: relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is expelled, all sourness is soon gone, the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drugstore has the genuine, prescription product.

CHATTY COPRESS OF CAB

HER MAN, "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of

COPYRIGHT 1928, CENTRAL PUBLISHING CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

For she could tell just by looking at Billie Langenau that she was the kind of girl who has "boy friends" from the time she starts to school until she walks down the church aisle to the strains of "Here Comes the Bride." Her brown hair was wavy and had golden tints in it. Her eyes were the friendliest, sweetest eyes that Chatty had ever seen.

And everything about her was so clean and sweet. Her little fingers, with their polished pink nails. Her skin, with a film of flower-scented powder on it. Her black satin dress, with its spotless white organdy collar and cuffs.

At noon she took Chatty out into the cloakroom with her.

"We'll go to lunch together today," she said. "Your first day is pretty hard, I know, and we'll go out and forget it for forty-five minutes. Tomorrow, and always after that, one of us at a time will go out—so that there'll always be someone on the job in our department in case anyone wants anything out of the files."

There were two other girls in the cloakroom.

One was a tall, plain girl, in a plain serge dress and low-heeled shoes.

The other was a bit wild looking. Her hair had been dyed a dark red, and it stood up in ringlets all over her head. She had mascara on her eyes, lashes and bright scarlet paint on her mouth. Her skirts were too short, her stockings too thin, her heels too high.

But she was pretty, all the same, and she had an air of dash and snap that made her very attractive.

Billie introduced the tall, plain, quiet looking girl first.

"This is Miss Herford, Mr. Van Nuys' secretary," she said. "And this is Miss Winnie Talcott, who helps her."

The flapperish looking girl grinned broadly at Chatty.

"I hope you'll like it here in this Little Group of Willing Workers," she said, airily, pulling a bright purple hat down over her mahogany hair.

"I'm sure Miss Chatterton WILL like it!" Miss Herford's voice was gentle and sweet.

"Oh, horse feathers!" And Winnie Talcott gave a snort. "Nobody really likes the place where she works, Agnes! The only reason I keep at it is because I must have some new chokers and some silk undies once in a while. See you all of a sudden, girls!" And she was gone.

"Winnie Talcott is the office pet," Billie Langenau told Chatty as they stepped out of the Kinney building into the sunny, crowded streets, where vendors were selling violets and boys were dashing through the crowd with newspapers, and everybody and everything looked gay and cheerful and full of the job of life.

"Is she?" Chatty's voice was dreamy. She was wondering if the girl she had seen with the red-headed man on Saturday worked in Mr. Van Nuys' office.

"If she does, I haven't seen her yet," she said to herself. "But perhaps she works in some other office—and maybe she doesn't work at all. Maybe she's one of the girls who don't have to do anything but wait for some man to come along and marry them."

She wondered if the red-headed man was going to marry the girl he had bought those flowers for. She didn't even know his name, but she thought that he might be engaged to her somehow made Chatty blue.

"Who's the red-headed man up in our office?" she asked Billie, suddenly when they were finishing their lunch of creamed oyster stew and Waldorf salad.

Billie laid down her spoon and began to laugh. "Now, don't you do it," she cried.

"Do what?"

"Fall for him! Every girl who comes to work at Van Nuys falls for Dave Jordan like a shot and don't you do it. You'll just be letting yourself in for a lot of sorrow. I never heard of his taking anybody seriously. Once in a while he takes Agnes Herford out for lunch."

"I saw him buying flowers for a girl last Saturday," Chatty began.

And then all at once it came to her that she was talking too much again! Telling things that perhaps would be better untold—things that were none of her business.

"You saw him buying flowers for a girl?"

"What sort of a looking girl?" Billie Langenau asked quickly.

And Chatty had to pretend that she had bitten her tongue so that she would not have to answer her.

That afternoon at four o'clock Agnes Herford sent for Chatty.

She was sitting behind a large flat desk in the office just outside Mr. Van Nuys' private office, and she looked very dignified and business-like.

"Now, what can a peppy fellow like David Jordan see in a girl like her? To go to lunch with her must be like going to lunch with the Missionary Society, or something," thought Chatty, going mockly up to her.

"Mr. Van Nuys wants me to talk to you about your salary," Miss Herford began. "We have been in the habit of paying $15 a week for jobs like yours. Will that be satisfactory to you, Miss Chatterton?"

It was $3 less than Chatty had been making in Mrs. Mayberry's shop. But she said that it would be quite enough, and she thanked Miss Herford and went back to her files.

"I'd work here for a dollar a week!" she told herself. "At least long enough to become acquainted with that Jordan!"

It had cheered her up enormously to know that there was no girl with whom he went about steadily.

"There are ten bond salesmen out in the big office," Billie told her, when they were putting away their things for the night, "and only one of them is married. They're awfully nice boys. I want you to meet them in a day or two. I go around with George Mayhew. He's the tall one with blue eyes and light hair. Did you notice him?"

Chatty hadn't. But she fibbed and said she had. She hadn't noticed any of them but the red-headed Jordan.

She hoped the would say good night to her. But when she passed his desk he was reading the stock market reports and he did not look up.

Chatty walked part of the way home. The sun was still shining and the sky was blue above the tall, gray office buildings of the downtown district.

At the corner of Norris street and Folkstone court, where she waited for a street car, there was a drug store. Its big front window was brightly lighted, and in it stood dozens and dozens of bottles of French perfume and just as many boxes of the same brand of French face powder.

"Silly stuff!" sniffed Chatty.

leaving him alone to finish the dishes. She went into the room she shared with her mother. It was empty, for Mrs. Chatterton was sewing in the Front Room. She opened her handbag and took from it the powder and the nail polish. She went carefully to work.

CHAPTER V

Chatty never had tried to make herself pretty and alluring for some man's eyes before in her life.

She had been "plain Jane"—clean as wax and neat as a pin—and let it go at that. And so she was awkward and slow as she went to work to beautify herself that Monday night.

It took her a full hour to "do" her nails. But when they were finished they were almost as shiny and pink and pointed as Billie Langenau's lovely finger tips.

Then she fluffed some of the new perfumed powder over her face. She loved the creamy, velvety look it gave

"Oh, boy!" said Pud, "if that's the kind of a job it is—oh, boy!"

to her skin.

"It takes all the shine away—and it makes my eyes look bigger, somehow," she told herself, smiling at herself in the glass.

Next she went out into the kitchen and sponged her faded black working dress with cold tea to bring the color back. She carefully pressed it, and hung it up in the closet all ready for tomorrow morning.

It was ten o'clock, and she was brushing her hair before the old mahogany dresser when Mrs. Chatterton came into the bedroom.

"What in the world have you put on your face?" she asked, coming close.

"You've put powder on, and it'll make your pores big just as sure—and what on earth HAVE you done to your nails?"

"Polished them," answered Chatty, calmly. "Now, mother, don't pretend you've never seen liquid nail polish before. Most of your customers use it—and I know I look much better fixed up a little than I did two hours ago." She puffed her hair over her ears and drew it up in a loose knot at the back of her head.

"You look just like a Zulu belle—only you're blonde!" Mrs. Chatterton declared, shaking her head. "No, I thought you looked sweeter and younger the old way, Chatty! And this stuff is positively injurious!" She peached for the wonderful face powder.

But Chatty was too quick for her. She snatched the box up, and held it behind her back. She faced her mother defiantly.

"Now, look here!" she said, almost in a shout, "if you throw this powder away I'll just buy more. I'm tired of looking like Bessie Backwoods, and if I want to have my nails shiny and my hair wavy and the shine off my nose—why, it's my own business. I'm going to have some pep and look like the rest of the girls in the world or KNOW THE REASON WHY! And I don't care who knows it!"

That was lucky, for she was talking at the top of her voice by this time and the window beside her was open.

Mrs. Chatterton laid one hand across her mouth.

"Hush!" she said quietly. "You don't have to yell at me like that. But it's my duty to tell you what you ought to do, and I'm going to do it. After that, it's up to you if you obey me or not. I know you're a grown woman, Chatty. But the truth is that you don't need powder. Some people who have freckles or blotches may need it, but your skin is so lovely just as it is—and you look like a nice girl. A nice, quiet girl."

"I don't want to look like a nice, quiet girl! I've looked like a nice, quiet girl too long!" Chatty brought the flat of her small hand down upon the dresser top with a bang. "The men never look at a girl these days unless she's all lit up like the Northern Lights—and that's the truth, whether you believe it or not!"

Her mother raised her eyebrows.

"Well, what if it is?" she wanted to know. "It's time I began to notice a few men, isn't it? I'm twenty! Oh, mother, why don't you let me grow up? Why, Pud, at his age, has a lot more freedom than I have. He can stay out as late as he pleases—"

"Oh, so that's it? The men?" she was beginning, but Chatty cut her words short.

FRANKLIN DEAHL

Stately palms, yellow white, and Franze chrysanthemums, and cathedral tapers formed the effective setting for the wedding of Miss Marian Grace Hendrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myron W. Hendrick of Winans Lake Hills, Hamburg, Michigan, and Mr. Albert Franklin Deahl son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Deahl of Goshen, Indiana.

The nuptials were performed at 12 o'clock, noon, Tuesday, October 15, before the altar in the chapel of the Woman's league building in Ann Arbor, with the Rev. A. L. Shrock, rector of the First Episcopal Church of Goshen, Indiana, officiating. The bride being given in marriage.

Miss Hendrick was lovely in her bridal gown of ivory satin, fashioned on princess lines. She wore a veil of ivory tulle held in place by two hands of pearls, which were caught just behind the ears in clusters of orange blossoms. Her flowers were white lillies.

Miss Helen E. Crandall of Howell, Michigan who attended Miss Hendrick as maid of honor was attired in a gown, very long, of yellow taffata and tulle, with a wide chartrreuse taffata sash, closing in the back with decorative puffs, the ends sweeping the floor. She carried a shower bouquet of yellow and white roses.

Mr. Cearlyie Mutschler of Nappanee, Indiana, cousin of the groom, attended Mr. Deahl as best man. The ushers were Mr. Charles C. Burnett of Jackson, Michigan, cousin of the bride and Mr. LaMar Mutschler of Nappanee, Indiana, cousin of the groom.

Preceding the ceremony, while the guests were assembling, Mrs. Emily Mutter Adams of Brighton, Michigan, pianist rendered a number of selections: "Liebstrain," selections by Kreisler and "Barcarole" from Tales of Hoffman. The bridal party proceeded to the altar to the strains of Lohengrin wedding march, leaving the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, both played by Mrs. Adams and Miss Gillette.

Following the marriage ceremony a reception was held in the reception room of the league building in which the color scheme of the chapel was repeated, with large bowls and urns of chrysanthemums, palms were around the piano.

CURRENT COMMENT

As was expected all the prohibition violation cases in this county have been postponed until the supreme court hands down a decision in regard to the action of Judge Dunham of Grand Rapids who dismissed all the prohibition violation cases on the grounds that there was no savings clause in the Cuthbertson law, consequently all offenders arrested before that law went into effect are free. The attorney general denies this and says a savings clause is not necessary. Oddly enough James Crumbaugh, late of Lakeland is one of those getting postponement. Life for Jim is getting to be just one postponement after another.

Detroit by snowing under Mayor Lodge for renomination has laid itself liable to an old time campaign featured by religious hatred, mud slinging and all the other features of thirty years ago which have gone into the discard pretty generally. Mayor Lodge gave the city an efficient and dignified business administration and his defeat was caused partly by his disinclination to wage an aggressive campaign and certain unfortunate happenings such as the Study Club disaster and the many unsolved kidnappings and murders which the people there seem to think would have been checked if he had given the city a more vigorous administration. The two victors in the primaries, John Smith and Charles Bowles are about on a par except as to religion. It has even been asserted that Bowles was merely in the game to split the Lodge vote and has not the ghost of a show of election. Smith is chiefly known for his bitter opposition to the Windward bridge while serving a previous term as mayor and Bowles was formerly the candidate of the Klu Klux Klan.

You've got to get up before daylight to beat the modern American grafter. Yet it seems from press reports out of Washington that agents of the Department of Justice have been doing that very thing. No sooner had congress authorized the construction of Boulder Dam than smooth individuals began offering land in the vicinity of the Boulder Dam at a few dollars an acre, and advertising that as soon as the dam was finished the valley would bloom like a new Garden of Eden. It sounded good and it might have been good only the acres of sand and alkali and caucuses they were offering will still be a long way from water even when the dam is a completed job. So Uncle Sam reached out and got several of the grafters, and fixed it so it won't be safe for others to try the same game. We don't know whether anyone around Pinckney bit or not; we hope they didn't. But if there's anyone contemplating such a purchase this would be pretty good time for them to investigate before they invest.

Mrs. Edna Spears, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Spears and daughter, Mary, visited Ypsilanti friends Sunday.

"Thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have"

Deuteronomy

At 3 p. m. on Monday, September 4, 1882, the Pearl Street Station in the City of New York started in commercial operation with a load of 400 lamps, supplying current for lighting to a district nearly one square mile in area. Mr. Edison did not begin charging customers for lighting until the system was working smoothly and satisfactorily in every respect. The first bill for lighting presented to a customer amounted to $50.40 and was collected January 18, 1883. It was based on the reading of an Edison electrolytic meter, one of which was installed on each customer's premises.

"Let There Be Light"

The Edison electrolytic meter, or chemical meter as it was called, recorded the amount of energy consumed by the customer by measuring the change in weight of two zinc plates. Two strips of zinc were attached to the terminals of a German silver shunt which diverted a fixed portion of the total current used on the premises. The plates were immersed in a solution of zinc sulphate, and when electricity passed through the meter, zinc was removed from the positive plate and transferred to the negative. Both plates were then brought in to be weighed, and the difference in weight in either, since the previous measurement, indicated the amount of current that had been used. One plate thus served as a check against the other. The deposit of metal was calculated into "lamp-hours." Due to improvements in the lamp and reductions in rates, a dollar buys 30 times more light today than in the early days.

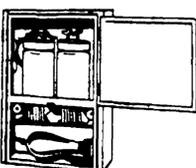

The chemical meter was quite widely used for some years. Later, Mr. Edison greatly simplified and improved electric metering, and the principle of his dial-indicating meter of the household type—the first of what are known as the "motor type meters"—is still in use with modifications.

WHEN Mr. Edison had demonstrated the commercial possibilities of his system by establishing electric light service in New York City, he proceeded to license central station companies in large cities, the parent company accepting a percentage of their capital securities as payment of license fees under the Edison patents, and contracting also for the supply of lamps, apparatus, etc. This left the rest of the United States and Europe open for the cash sale of plants whenever requested.

The modern Edison electric service companies in Detroit, Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Chicago and other cities are original Edison licensees. Mr. Edison long ago disposed of his financial interests in these companies, and the present Edison companies are financially independent of each other. In 1884 an "Association of Edison Illuminating Companies" was formed to provide a central organization for the discussion of mutual problems, both technical and commercial, and to provide a focal point for Mr. Edison's expert advice and assistance. For example, in the early days Mr. Edison observed that some of the Edison companies prospered while others did not. He suggested that the Association undertake to devise a uniform system of accounts for analysis in locating the cause of success or failure. The accounting system which evolved from that suggestion is a very useful tool in the management of the various companies, even to the present day.

It is necessary in recalling the causes which led to the commercial success of the Edison companies to recognize the effect of the establishment among them almost from the beginning of a uniform system of accounts and reports and of arrangements for the confidential distribution and exchange of practical information. The system of accounts, although far from complete, served for the making of intelligent comparisons. The correspondence between different companies and the meetings held for educational purposes built up a community of interest—of personal and technical, not financial interest—which has been and continues to be very great in its value to the public served by these companies.

THE SEED CORN SUPPLY

The supply of good seed corn for next year is going to be limited unless farmers take advantage of the opportunity now and save every bit possible.

A large number of farmers have put all their corn in the silo with only a few saving any for seed. Indications are that this practice is quite general throughout Michigan.

Most corn in the shock is now in fine condition for husking. With a few rains and some heavy frosts the germination is spoiled. By sorting it now and placing it in a good place to dry, a good source of seed will be assured for next spring. Drying in a well ventilated room, such as an attic with some heat is a very good place. The windmill and porch is better than not at all but with damp weather the crop absorbs moisture quickly, with the result the corn may be spoiled entirely.

Music Enrollment Increase Expected

Belief that the enrollment in the University of Michigan School of Music this year will exceed that of last year greatly, due to the affiliation of the school with the university, has been expressed by Charles A. Sink, president of the school.

As the result of the affiliation, the music school offers its students the same privileges accorded students in other schools on the campus. Last year's total enrollment of full time and special students was 854. This number excluded several hundred literary college students, who elected subjects taught by members of the music faculty. It also excluded 350 who were members of the band and as many who were in each of several other organizations, among them the orchestra and three glee clubs.

Crew of State Tax Agents Collect Data

A crew of five field men for the Michigan tax commission is working in Shiawassee county securing data on which to re-evaluate its assessed valuation. The move is the result of an appeal made by Supervisor C. C. Lockwood, of Perry township, from the equalization approved by the board of supervisors last June. He claimed that his township was discriminated against.

This is the fourth time in a few years that the tax commission has been brought here on an appeal from a supervisor and each time the county's valuation has been increased considerably.

US-16 Sink Hole Is Being Repaired

An attempt is being made by the county highway department to prevent the sinking, each spring, of a section of U. S. highway 16, a short distance west of the M-43 intersection.

Excavation of much soil, 22 feet in depth, for a distance of 450 feet, will be necessary to reach a solid foundation, according to Allen Williams, county engineer. Half of the pavement, which must be raised more than a foot, is being repaired at a time.

Each spring, for several years, motorists along the highway have been compelled for several weeks to drive through a pool of water often several feet deep.

Poems That Live

THE SONNET

A sonnet is a moment's monument—
Memorial for the Soul's eternity
To one dead deathless hour. Look that it be,
Whether for lustful rite or dire portent,
Of its own orduous fulness reverent;
Carve it in ivory or in ebony,
As Day or Night may rule; and let
Time see
Its flowering crest imperiled and orient.
A sonnet is a coin: its face reveals
The soul—its converse, to what Power
"tis due:
Whether for tribute to the august appeals
Of Life, or dower in Love's high retinue,
It serves; or, 'mid the dark wharf's
cavernous breath,
In Charon's palm it pay the toll to Death.
—Dante G. Rossetti (1828-1882)

Back Drapes Mark New Millinery

By LUCY CLAIRE

The vogue for matching hat, shoes and handbag has, if anything, increased in importance. Hat, shoes and bag need not necessarily match the costume, but they should, at least, match the accessories or trim. While brown is the leading color for fall, at the same time black has lost none of its prestige. The proportion of black as against all other colors is at least 50 per cent. Dark green is forging to the front, and dark blue is also important, retaining its place at an even rating for the past six months. Dark red in the wine tones is gaining. I speak of the colors that are staples or nearly staples for daytime wear. Of course there are the dahlias, the lighter blues, lighter greens and any number of other high style colors that are in the mode, but they are scarcely the colors the women of limited wardrobe would care to wear for her street ensemble.

In handbags the envelope type is preferable with the tailored fall costume, as is the oxford, step-in or one-strap model in shoes, although the great popularity of the pump has made it equally important as a daytime shoe with all but the truly sports attire.

Formal, Informal Hats Similar

In hats there is little distinction between those for informal and formal wear, unless we go into the very formal. Of the three hat, shoe and bag combinations illustrated, the first, or that at the upper left, is in black. The hat is of felt with the lifted over the eye and long draped back effect. The oxfords are of black kid with lizard trim, and the envelope bag is of the same leathers.

The combination in the upper right corner is in browns. The hat is of a reddish brown velvet, framing the face closely with the off the forehead in a bonnet cut, and with the long back held in place by rows of shirtings. The shoe is of brown kid with saddle, tip and inset on quarter of deeper brown lizard, in an open vamp oxford model. The bag is of brown leather trimmed with brown lizard.

In the third grouping, at the lower center, is shown a more dressy type of hat for afternoon wear, in a turban of blue felt and satin ribbon with a long drape over one ear which is reported to be very successful. With this is shown a matching blue pouch bag of blue kid without arm strap, on an amber frame. The shoe is a favorite T strap model of blue kid in sandal effect.

You will note in all these hats that the eyes still have it with the forehead exposed, and the pushed to the back of the head movement is emphasized by the long backs. Not all fall hats are long in the back. It would be rather rough on our long-haired, fur-trimmed coats if they were, but the long back hat is the newest thing just now, and can readily be worn without damage with the flat fur trimmings so fashionable this season.

Expert Finds New Points On Cancer

Successful treatment of cancer lies more in the direction of eliminating the toxins or poisons causing the dread disease than in the application of surgery, X-rays or radium. Dr. William F. Koch, M. D., nationally known biological chemist and holder of several degrees from the University of Michigan, declares in his latest book on "Cancer and Its Allied Diseases." Dr. Koch is head of the Koch Cancer Foundation, which devotes itself to research and treatment of cancer and co-operates with some 4,000 physicians in all parts of the country in the treatment of the disease.

Early treatment is absolutely vital to success, Dr. Koch states.

Declaring that cancer growths are the result of an attempt by the body to combat certain poisons, or toxins, which develop following the impairment of circulation due to injuries, surgical operations, or diseases which attack the body tissues or improper disposal of body waste, Dr. Koch urges the early elimination of these poisons and treatment to counteract their effects.

Cancer can be prevented and cured.

he says, by removing the cause, but he does not advocate elimination of the growth by surgical means or by the use of X-rays or radium. On the contrary, he declares radiant mediums destroy only the weaker cancer cells, while they stimulate the growth of the stronger ones. If the X-ray or radium treatment is powerful enough to completely destroy a cancer in a vital part of the body, the treatment itself is likely to cause the death of the patient.

Prevention as well as cure, Dr. Koch declares, can be accomplished by means of introducing an antitoxin into the body which will destroy the effects of these toxins, or poisons, which cause cancer to develop. This treatment, he adds, must be accompanied by proper diet, exercise and personal hygiene, as well as external and internal cleanliness, and all chronic infections which may exist in the teeth or tonsils should be eliminated.

The author blames modern living conditions, which are responsible for lack of outdoor exercise and unwholesome foods, for the tendency toward cancer development in early life. This malady was once considered a disease of old age.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

WALKING-STICK CAPERS

But I didn't finish the sad-sweet tale of my adventures with a French walking stick in the Irish Free State. Perhaps I have recited to you how I lost the stick, while going through customs examination, after a tough voyage across the Irish sea, landing in Cork.

You may be sure I was pretty much distressed when I discovered my loss. I had acquired this shiny malacca at great expense on the Champs Elysees, in Paris, and I had been practicing with it for three weeks. In Paris, practically all men carry sticks, so I didn't feel as conspicuous as I would have felt if I had had to learn to operate the thing in Wichita or St. Paul. In Ireland, too, I learned, sticks are the rule, even among men who are not very well dressed. The Irish learned to carry sticks for offensive and defensive purposes, long ago, when Ireland was wild, and the habit of carrying some sort of cane or stick has persisted. The humblest citizen in the remotest Irish village carries a stick without being suspected of putting on side.

I stated my loss to the customs men, and they said they had seen somebody walk off with my stick.

I went to the nearest police station and reported the loss. I was politely received and requested to write a description of the stolen article. Then the sergeant in charge said he would do his best.

Within three hours there was a call from the police station to my hotel, but I was out. The same evening, two policemen in civilian clothes called and informed me that the stick had been recovered, and awaited me at the station. They refused to accept any kind of reward, but admitted that they were Sergeant Thomas Barrett and Garda Stephen Heffernan, which aroused my curiosity. Garda, it seems, is the Free State equivalent for our title of Patrolman. The police are called Civic Guards. I asked questions.

Next evening the same two policemen delivered my stick to the hotel, and I had further conversation about the business of policing cities in Ireland.

Irish policemen carry no arms, Sergeant Barrett informed me. They do not feel the lack of arms, and wouldn't know what to do with them if they had them. They reason that an Irishman who isn't able to take care of any situation in the police line with his bare hands always has the privilege of calling his fists into play. The guards are carefully drilled in politeness and, so far as I can observe, they are right up to the standard of the London bobbie in politeness and service, and no higher praise is possible.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

CORRECTION OF DEFECTS NECESSARY

By Madame Rubinstein

The medieval period is one of mystery and adventure to most of us; a time when humanity just began to find its way out of the dark ages into a period of enlightenment. These times are charged with interest for those who are interested in the evolution of modern beauty culture. The Byzantines, the Hindus and the Hebrews all added their offering on the altar of beauty. The Arabs advanced further than the others, saying that one must not merely try to hide defects, but that one must correct faults.

It was amusing to me to find that the philosophy of beauty, which I have been preaching for years, had its place in this old Arabian philosophy. During these times great men came to the fore, and it is important to note that all the great beauty specialists of the time were men, and that they devoted as much time to beautifying members of their own sex as members of the fair sex.

Men like Paul of Aegina, Rhazes of the East, with their research in the uses of salves, plaster and therapeutics, left an impression that lasted long after the Renaissance. Even the Koran of Mohammed (about 570 A. D.) refers repeatedly to aromatics and to means of darkening the eyes for decorative purposes.

From this time on, men began to turn their attention to correctives. Men with medical knowledge devoted themselves to curing itchings of the skin, and separated this field entirely from the one of cosmetics. Under the field of cosmetics came hair dressing, hair curling, wig making, the creation of dyes, powders and pastes. There is much on record of this period. It reads like the story of a people trying to free themselves from the bondage of ceaseless fighting and struggle for existence to devote themselves to the more aesthetic things of life. And what is of the most vital importance is the fact that there came of the experimentation during this time many correctives and cures. Cleanliness began to take on special significance in relation to beauty, and our modern statement, "Health is the first essential to beauty," seems to have rooted itself—as amazing as this may seem—in medieval times.

SUGGESTIONS

Mashing Potatoes
To mash potatoes properly the milk, butter, salt and pepper should be heated before adding to the potatoes. Then the strong armed squad is needed, for it is the beating which makes light, fluffy, mashed potatoes. (The egg beater is a help for this process.) A potato ricer will eliminate all the lumps.

Thousand Island Dressing

One-half cup olive oil, the juice of one-half orange, the juice of one-half lemon, one teaspoon grated onion, three teaspoons chopped parsley, one-fourth teaspoon mustard, six olives, sliced, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one-half cup mayonnaise, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Put in all the ingredients into a jar, having first mixed the dry ingredients and dissolved them in the fruit juices. Cover the jar tightly, using a rubber between cover and jar and shake until the mixture is smooth. Set in the refrigerator until time to serve. It is well to shake the mixture again just before serving. This dressing is delicious with romaine or plain lettuce.

Mangoes for Decoration

Don't forget to can just a few pint cans of mangoes. Mix the colors, red, green and yellow. This winter, when you want a very attractive as well as a delicious salad, cut crisp cabbage and mix with fluffy, whipped cream and put in a large, low dish. Then decorate the top with a large pineapple. Cut the flower petals from red mangoes, cutting the yellow very fine with a little bit of the green for the center and the leaves and stem from the green mangoes.

Hollywood—Random shots along the movie battlefield:

D. W. Griffith has dictated 50,000 words of script for his epic, "Abraham Lincoln," though the picture won't be shot for months. . . . D. W. says he wants to make the film an authentic document. . . . Alexander Korda, director and husband of Maria Corda, is quoted saying silent films will become the highbrow movie fare of the future. . . . Wouldn't be surprised if he was right. . . . Connie Talmadge's "Her Sister From Paris" is to be made into a talkie, with Vilma Banky in title role. . . . Ronald Colman played opposite Connie in the silent version and may be teamed with Vilma to play the same role again. . . . A Hollywood actress and not a native Irish girl is to play opposite John McCormick in his first talkie. . . . Girl not yet selected. . . . George Bancroft is sailing for Europe. . . . Prize fight pictures are next in line as a movie craze. . . . As soon as Lon Chaney's throat ailment quits bothering him Lon will make the leap into the talkie business, leaving Charlie Chaplin just about the only silent star still in existence. . . . During his European tour George Bancroft hopes to visit London, Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, Berlin, Vienna, Lucerne, Rome and Naples. . . . After such a "restful" vacation he will hurry back to New York fresh for another go with the talkies. . . . "Milady's Dress," natural color fashion film, made by Hope Hampton in Paris (of course) is to be brought to America.

These very young persons are experts in the art of movie doubling. They are the Bustetter twins, Barbara Ann and Beverly Ann, and they doubled for each other in "Three Live Ghosts."

Frat Students Best At Michigan State

That students belonging to fraternities and sororities on Michigan State campus make higher grades than non-fraternity students, is indicated by scholarship reports for last school year. The all-society average exceeds the all-college average by one-half point. Twenty-one of the 30 societies on the campus averaged higher than the all-college mark. The highest society average was that of the local chapter of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority, 2,712.

Discovers Steel Process

George A. Code, Detroit chemist, claims to have discovered a process for producing stainless steel cheaply and without necessitating the use of other than types of furnaces now used by steel manufacturers. Applications for patents on the process have been made in the United States and several other countries. Mr. Code claims that by use of his process the cost of production can be reduced to the point where stainless steel can be used by automobile and other manufacturing companies in the making of all steel parts.

250,000 Dutch Tulip Bulbs Are on Way to Holland

The second consignment of Dutch tulip bulbs, numbering 250,000, is expected to reach Holland from The Netherlands some time this month. The bulbs were sent from Hillegom. These will be sold to owners of property who are falling in line with a movement inaugurated last year, when the first consignment was received, to launch tulip week in Holland.

With the planting of the second consignment this fall it is hoped the plans to give Holland a real tulip week next spring will be successful.

COST OF LICENSES REMAINS THE SAME

No changes have been made in the costs or obligations of various small game licenses, excepting that only citizens of the United States are eligible.

Small game licenses remain at $1.25; deer licenses, $2.50; muskrat trapping, $1 for 20 traps for residents, small game licenses, $10, and deer, $50 for non-residents. Resident citizens and their children and employees are exempt from purchase of small game licenses or muskrat trapping fees, while hunting or trapping on their own enclosed lands upon which they are regularly domiciled.

The digest of the game laws to be issued in about a month will contain a revised list of sections of the state in which special game laws will prevail.

Among the things which the conservation department wishes to impress upon the hunters this fall, is a note which is appended to a small card given to everyone who buys a license, and which reads:

"Know your game laws, both federal and state. Read them carefully and know what you are doing when you do it. Ignorance is no excuse for him to do so unknowingly."

CONFISCATED FISH ARE NOT WASTED

What happens to the thousands of pounds of fish and game that are confiscated every year by conservation officers from law violators?

A big gray book in the office of the law enforcement division of the conservation department holds the answer to this question.

In this book is written a complete history of every conservation law violation case. It lists the defendant's name, the officer who apprehended him and anything confiscated, together with the disposal of the confiscated property. The property most generally confiscated is fish and game.

During the first six months of this year conservation officers confiscated 21,545 pounds of fish held illegally. At the average retail price for fish this worth $4,309.

Confiscated fish are not permitted to spoil but are given to some charitable institution. County farms, orphan homes and hospitals have fed confiscated perch, trout and whitefish to their inmates, patients and charges. Prisoners at Jackson and Marquette prisons have feasted on fish caught by violators. Many needy families have tasted of the bounty provided indirectly by men who violated the fish law.

In the first six months of this year conservation officers confiscated 13,672 pounds of perch, 6,223 pounds of whitefish, 1,109 pounds of yellow pickerel, 235 pounds of trout, 92 pounds of grass pike, 115 pounds of catfish and 91 pounds of sunfish.

Fisher Body to Build Lansing Plant Additions

Plans for the immediate construction of two large additions to the Lansing plant of the Fisher Body corporation on Olds avenue have been announced by Ernest E. Leeder, Lansing plant manager. Contracts for the two buildings will be let immediately so that they can be rushed to completion and occupied not later than December 1, Leeder said. Cost of the two structures, one an addition to a present building and the other a new building in itself, will amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

The Fisher Body corporation has taken over a one-story building formerly used by the Olds Motor Works, 250 by 500 feet. It will build a one-story addition to this structure, 140 by 230 feet. The new building will be 70 by 450 feet and two stories high. It will connect the present main plant of the Fisher company with the new addition to the Olds building.

The Fisher plant now has approximately 400,000 square feet of floor space and the expansion will furnish an additional 100,000 square feet, representing a 20 per cent increase in size.

"The prime object of the expansion is to center our operations which are now scattered and to keep pace with the progress being made by Olds Motor Works," Mr. Leeder said.

The Fisher plant has been taxed to capacity and the company has been using the huge warehouse of the Olds for some of its operations.

Cadillac Gas Co. Is Sold for Third Time in Three Years

The Cadillac Gas Co. again has been sold, this time to the American Commonwealth Power corporation. This is the third sale in three years.

The United Light and Railways owned the local plant for some time. Then after the Hulswit collapse it was sold to T. J. Weber of Grand Rapids. In 1928 he sold to the Michigan Light and Gas Co., which with the Wisconsin Light and Gas and Indiana Light and Gas constituted the Interstate Fuel and Light Co. The American Commonwealth gained control of the Interstate through purchase of the interests of C. A. Rynyan and R. C. Douglas. No change will be made in the management of the local plant.

May Drill Oil Well In Reed City Section

Drilling of an oil well west of Reed City may develop from a conference held at Reed City, when F. A. Brendel, who is putting down a well in Sweetwater township, Lake county, came to see Arthur Adamy and V. W. Montgomery. The Lake well is down 1,935 feet.

Adamy and Montgomery, who have considerable land leased, were interviewed by F. A. Smith and Mr. Haney of Luther regarding combining of acreage and putting down a well near Luther.

Taggart & Welch, who have oil connections with Adamy and Montgomery, brought in a producer last week in the Mt. Pleasant field.

MICHIGAN FIRST HURON SECOND

The commercial fishing industry has doubled in value in Michigan in the past six years. From an industry that marketed fish valued at $1,673,667.86 in 1923 an increase is noted each year until last year the value of fish taken from Michigan waters for commercial purposes has a total value of $3,397,428.88.

These figures, compiled by the fish division of the department of conservation, show a steady growth in the six years from which totals were taken. The figures show that in 1928, for which a summary has just been completed, 21,367,934 pounds of fish were taken from the four Great Lakes bordering the state and from Saginaw Bay, where commercial fishing is permitted.

While there was little or no increase in the number of pounds of fish caught, the rising value of fish is credited with the greatly increased value of the industry. Whitefish was the only species of commercial fish that was caught in increasing quantities last year. In 1927 commercial fishermen disposed of 4,180,751 pounds of whitefish. Last year that number reached 4,652,187 pounds.

Lake trout and whitefish continue to lead by a wide margin all other species in the commercial fishing industry. Lake trout was slightly in the lead with 5,702,174 pounds caught with a total value to the industry of $1,425,543.50. Lake trout brought an income to fishermen of $1,064,651.36 in 1927.

Lake Michigan, which has produced more commercial fish than any other body of water bordering the state in 1927 continued in the lead last year, but with Lake Huron creeping near in the final figures.

Figures show the total number of pounds of commercial fish caught in 1928 divided as follows: Erie 746,966; Huron 6,575,687; Michigan 7,941,525; Saginaw Bay 3,195,541; Superior 3,636,215. Lake Superior fishermen enjoyed an increase from 3,420,729 pounds caught in 1927.

Adrian Votes on Gas And Station, Nov. 5

A special election, to be held November 5, has been decided upon by the city commission of Adrian to pass upon a $50,000 bonding issue for the erection of a new fire station and upon the question of a 20-year franchise for the Citizens' Gas Fuel company. The bonds are to extend over a period not to exceed 30 years.

The rates specified in the gas franchise are those which have been in effect since July 1. A service charge of $1 per month is made to all domestic consumers, with a fixed rate of 13 cents per 100 cubic feet, up to 2,000 cubic feet. Above 2,000 cubic feet the rate is 10 cents for each 100 cubic feet.

The gas question is an old matter for Adrian voters. Seven different times during the past 10 years they have passed judgment upon a franchise or rate schedule, approving two propositions and rejecting five.

31 STATES TO CHANGE COLOR OF AUTO TAGS

Thirty-one states will change color combination for automobile license plates in 1930 and 16 different motifs will be used throughout the country, indicating that there is a tendency on the part of the states to standardize the color schemes, according to a survey of the American Automobile association.

There were thirty-nine states to change the color combination in 1929 and a total of twenty-three different color motifs were used. The national motoring body pointed out that 13 states and the District of Columbia will retain the 1929 color combinations, reversing them as to background and lettering. Only nine states and the District of Columbia retained the 1928 combinations last year. At the same time, the changes are marked by a desire for darker combinations.

The A.A.A. survey reveals that first rank will be divided between three color combinations, with black on orange, white on black and yellow on black each being adopted by six states. These color schemes will therefore predominate in 1930, dividing honors with yellow letters and numerals on a black background, which led last year. Second honor will go to the white on red and black on gray combinations, which will each be used in five states. Beyond these more standard schemes, will be found a variety of other hues represented in identifying the units in the nation's rubber-tired transportation system.

Following are the 1930 color combinations for passenger cars for all states, with the exception of Missouri and Oregon, which have not yet selected new colors:

Alabama—White on Red.
Arizona—Black on Light Gray.
Arkansas—Gold on Bright Blue.
California—Black on Orange.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. B. B. Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it's always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

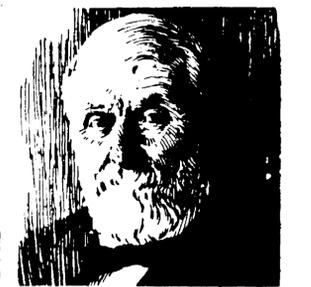

Resorters Swell Holland Coffers

Conservative estimates based upon figures tabulated by the Chamber of Commerce show the past resort season has benefited Holland to the extent of $177,184. About 25 per cent of the amount is represented in merchandise and about 43 per cent in meals and lodging. Close observers of traffic have spotted license plates on machines from virtually every state in the Union.

Exclusive structural and operative superiorities have definitely established Champion as the better spark plug. That is why Champion outsells all others throughout the world.

FOWLerville DEFEATS PINCKNEY

Fowlerville defeated Pinckney here last Friday by a score of 12 to 9. The game was a tame affair the first half neither side doing much but hitting the line. Pinckney started with a rush and made three first downs in quick order. The ball was sawed back and forth for a time and finally Pinckney got it on their 35 yard line. However they were unable to gain and elected to place kick on the fourth down this failed. This was the best scoring chance they had during the game. Late in the second quarter the Pinckney line began to weaken under the continuous Fowlerville assaults and Fowlerville began to gain ground rapidly. They also had all the better of the punting as Ketchum was able to get off long punts time after time while Capt. Kennedy's, who did the punting for Pinckney were blocked. The half ended with the ball in the possession of Fowlerville on the 15 yard line.

In the second half Fowlerville tore the Pinckney line to pieces and made first down after first down. These were somewhat nullified by the fact that they made a number of fumbles and tried many forward passes all of which failed but one. Pinckney's attempts at offensive were feeble in this half as they contented themselves with vain assault after assault on the Fowlerville line. Only two forward passes were tried both of which failed. One double pass was also tried which was intercepted by Fowlerville. Late in the third quarter Fowlerville smashed their way to the twenty yard line and Peckins went over for a touchdown. Their attempt to place kick the extra point failed. Ketchum made the 2nd Fowlerville touchdown in the last quarter after a succession of gains through the Pinckney line. Again the attempt to kick the extra point failed. Of course Fowlerville outweighed the Pinckney team considerably but Peckins held them on even terms the first half and had two scoring chances. However they failed for the reason that the Pinckney line were too tired out from the Fowlerville attacks to give them the needed support to make them successful. Fowlerville showed no great attack and won almost entirely on their ability to overwhelm the Pinckney line by means of superior weight. The Pinckney boys battled hard and are to be congratulated that Fowlerville was held to so low score.

FARM ELECTRIFICATION DEMONSTRATIONS

On Oct. 22-23-24, three electrical equipment demonstrations will be conducted in the county by the Agricultural Engineering Dept., Michigan State College, and the cooperation of the Detroit Edison Co. of Detroit. Prof. H. J. Gallagher will be in charge of each demonstration. C. Agent, C. L. Rolander has arranged demonstrations on three farms in the county, the meetings starts each day promptly at 1:45 p. m.

The meeting places have been scheduled for the following farms:
Ross Robb, Conway twp., Oct. 22.
Hilldale Poultry Farm, Brighton twp., Oct. 23.
Albin Pfau, Iosco twp., Oct. 24.

The demonstration truck is equipped with various types of farm conveniences such as feed grinders, simple pressure water systems, lighting equipments and etc.

On the Hilldale Poultry farm, the silo this fall was filled with an electric motor at a cost of only 65c. This poultry farm this past season brooded some of the day-old chicks with electric brooders which gave splendid results. They also ran a small electric incubator successfully.

Everyone interested in any type of farm conveniences should take advantage of the opportunity of attending one of these meetings.

Sheep Work for Living

There are not many parts of the world where the ordinary domestic sheep is used as a beast of burden, but in Tibet they are. The animals, loaded with packs of wool, are used between Tibet and the Rampur Fair, in India. The journey takes more than a month and several high passes are traversed that are inaccessible to other pack animals.

Once the wool has reached its destination the sheep remain on the plains for the winter, for the frontier passes then are impassable. They return later with loads of corn for border districts where grain is scarce.—Wide World Magazine.

"Flu" Not New Disease

Before the great influenza epidemic, shortly after the World War, few persons had ever heard of the "flu." But it is no new disease by any means. The United States public health service tells us that as early as 400 B. C. Hippocrates, "father of medicine," attributed influenza to changes in the wind. At various other times since then earthquakes, comets, volcanoes, floods and other natural phenomena have been suggested by medical men as causes. Even after 24 centuries science knows little about this malady and the almost unbelievable speed with which it spreads.—Capper's Weekly.

Illiterate Monarch

From slave to emperor might well be the title of a biography of Christophe, ruler of Hayti during the days of the "Black Republic." Because he came from such humble origin Christophe was poorly educated despite his collection of the books and rare art pieces in his palace, Sans Souci. The story is told that when he was made emperor, Christophe chose to call himself "Henry I" rather than Christophe because he could spell the former and was unable to write his real name.—Detroit News.
