ISAIAK WALTON

LEAGUE ORGANIZED
At a banquet given by the Howell Board of Commerce at the Masonic dining rooms at Howell last Thursday evening, Claude Pemberton, president of the board introduced the first speaker who was O. A. Mitchell, president of the Flint Conservation Club. Elmer Glenn of Pinckney president of the Pinckney Isak Walton league was the next speaker. He told of the benefits derived from the league. He stated that a pond had been made and stocked with frogs at first near Half Moon Lake and that 29 cans of fish had been planted there this year. Also that another such pond may be built. Earl Doyle of Lansing secretary of the Mich. Division of the Isak Walton League was next. He stated that there were 1,400 chapters of the league in the state which had much to do with the building up a sentiment for conservation, enforcing the fishing laws and keeping up the fishing resources. R. J. Gillispie of Flint secretary of the Mich. league and Earl Westerman, the head of the Mich. Fisheries Dept. also talked and Walker Hastings showed several reels of wild life.

At the conclusion of the program the following officers were elected: Pres. Earl Baldwin, Vice Pres. Walter Hastings, Sec'y-Treas. Ray Holt, directors, Dr. Davis and E. J. Carr.

FRED L. WOODWORTH

APPOINTED AGAIN
Fred L. Woodworth who owns the Norman Reason farm on the Howell road near the House school house has become well known to many Pinckney people this past year as he has spent much time here this summer. He has been reappointed to the position of collector of internal revenue at Detroit by President Hoover. This is the best appointive office in the state and pays about $25,000 per year. The daily press has the following comment to make on it:

Fred L. Woodworth, collector of internal revenue, won the distinction of serving under three administrations when his appointment for a new four-year term by President Hoover was announced yesterday.

Louis J. Campbell, chief supervisor of the revenue service, came to Detroit to make the notification.

Woodworth was appointed to the post by the late President Harding in 1921. He was reappointed by President Coolidge.

Woodworth has held the post longer than any other collector in the history of the Detroit office, which was established in 1863.

A check-up of accounts yesterday showed he had handled $1,482,695-$806.16 for the government in the 8 years of service.

STEALS BICYCLE FROM GARAGE

Last Wednesday a strange youth about 16 years old was seen loitering about town. Towards night a bicycle belonging to Russel Read was discovered missing from the family garage. The stranger was suspected and found hanging about Meyer's garage. He denied the theft at first but later admitted it and said he had hidden the wheel back of the old Congregational Church as it had a flat tire which he was endeavoring to fix. The sheriff took the boy to Howell where he told a weird story of being kidnapped. Later he gave his name as Peter Slozki and said he was a Polish boy from Detroit and had hitch-hiked to Pinckney. He had appropriated the bicycle to ride back to the city but was balked in this by the flat tire. The sheriff sent him back to Detroit.

DOCUMENT IS UNIQUE

Register of Deeds Frank D. Bush of Howell, is in receipt of a rather unique document from Ireland the import of which is to give a Detroit attorney the power to dispose of heirship property in this county to which Patrick Dunne, a farmer of Raheenahone, Luggacurran, Stradbally company of the Leix, Queens County, Irish Free State, fell heir to by the death of John Dunne, of this place. The document bears the signature of Cornelius Forris, consul general at Dublin, Ireland and has the seal of Ireland attached.

This refers to the sale of the property of the late John Dunne of Putnam in particular the farm south of Pinckney known as the Mack Monks farm which was sold to Mr. and Mrs. Will Cooper.

SUNDAY HUNTING

An opinion from the office of George R. Hogarth, director of conservation, Lansing, is to the effect that Sunday hunting in Washtenaw county is absolutely prohibited unless hunters are land owners and hunt on their own property. The opinion says, "Only land owners may hunt on own property in Washtenaw county on Sunday and land owners cannot authorize others to hunt upon their property."

WEEK OF NOVEMBER 10

The early part of the week of November 10th in Michigan is expected to be generally fair. The temperatures at this time are expected to be rather low for the season as a high pressure area passes over the state.

About the middle of the week there will be a reaction to warmer weather with the temperatures rising rather steadily to high readings. With these warmer air currents will come increasing cloudiness and strong winds. There will also be some rather heavy rain or snow storms, at least locally.

Stormy conditions in Michigan will last over until about Thursday or Friday, at which time the temperatures will drop appreciably.

The week ends with cold and mostly fair weather.

War and Weather

The anniversary of Armistice day brings to mind that many battles and sometimes wars are won or lost through the effects of weather conditions. The celebrated "Battle Above the Clouds" fought on Lookout Mountain during the Civil war was won by the North when the soldiers took advantage of a heavy fog to cover up their movements of attack.

As far back as nine years after the birth of Christ heavy rains caused floods that led to the total destruction of the three Roman legions under Varus. On the other hand, steady rainfall fifteen hundred years later saved Vienna from the terrible Turk. Then in 1692 the flooded Mohaigne river prevented the English from saving the city of Namur which was besieged by the French.

Still More Millions TREAT COLDS DIRECT

Each year more and more people give up the old, indirect way of treating colds by "dosing" and turn to Vicks VapoRub.

Just rubbed on, Vicks medicated vapors are inhaled direct to the air-passages, and, at the same time, it acts direct through the skin like a plaster.

This better way of treating colds originated with Vicks a generation ago.

Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing," and there are "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

Now 26 Million jars used yearly

FOR QUICK, HARMLESS COMFORT Children Cry for It FOR CONSTIPATION, DIARRHEA, FEVERISHNESS

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination of senna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

CHATTY COPDESS OF CAB

HER MAN, "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PUBLISHING CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

CHAPTER VII

Chatty "set a watch" upon her lips as it says in the Bible.

She did not breathe a single word to anyone in the office about Agnes Herford's lunch "date" with Mr. Van. She did not drop a single hint about Billie Langenau and her marriage to a man named Brewster, who might be dead or else divorced from her.

The only person with whom she talked these things over was her mother. And that was just as safe as not talking about them at all.

"Billie's husband must have had just POKKS of money," she said to her. "Because all that solid silver and hand carved furniture cost real money and plenty of it! And she must be separated from him, because she's using her maiden name. If she were a regular widow she'd be Mrs. Brewster, wouldn't she? And you know, I don't believe George Mayhew knows a thing about it! Nobody at the office knows!"

"Well, if she wanted them to know it she'd tell it herself!" Mrs. Chatterton answered, sensibly, her voice rising above the buzzing of her sewing machine. "And don't you speak of it, Chatty, either to her or to anyone else. The least said, the sooner mended, you know."

She said much the same thing on the night when Chatty came home with the startling news that Mr. Van was running around with his private secretary, Agnes Herford.

"There's bound to be a good bit of talk about it in the office, Chatty," she said. "And you keep out of it. You owe Mr. Van Nuys a great deal of thanks for giving you a position in his office, and the less you have to say about him the better off you'll be! Now, promise me you will NOT talk about this affair of his—if it is an affair! It may not be. He may just have taken the girl to lunch as he'd have asked a man to go to lunch with him."

Chatty laughed at that. But she promised not to mention the thing to a living soul, and she even crossed her heart.

As the days went by she almost forgot Mr. Van and his lunch engagement with Agnes Herford.

She worked hour after hour beside Billie without even once thinking about the small mystery that was gathered around her like a cloud.

She did not care one way or the other about these things—for a while, at least.

For something bigger, deeper and far more important had come into her life.

She was in love with David Jordan. She was in love with him just as every girl falls in love once in her life. Every time she thought about him she sighed. When he came into the office it seemed to her that her heart skipped a beat.

At night she would lie awake, her arms crossed under her head, staring up at the ceiling of her room, and seeing Jordan's face—his engaging and friendly grin, his red hair, his deep eyes under straight brows—on the darkness.

She lost her healthy young appetite and three or four pounds along with it. She no longer had the patience to read love stories in the magazines.

She was too wrapped up in the one that she was living in herself.

One night, towards the end of April, when she had been working for the Van Nuys company for almost a month, she started away from the Kinney building in a pouring rain.

She had gone almost a block when someone halted her, and before she had time to turn around to see who it was, David Jordan came up behind her and caught her elbow in his bare hand.

"Want to ride home in the pouring rain?" he asked. "My little bus is parked behind the Kinney building. It isn't any top, but it goes like sixty! I can get you home before you know you've started."

Chatty would have gone with him in a wheelbarrow anywhere! "And I've seen your little open-faced car!" she told him as they dashed into the alley behind the building. "I saw it a long time ago!"

And then, as they got into the snub-nosed gray roadster, and turned east toward Lipton street, she began to tell him all about the morning she had seen him going into Tallman's flower shop with a girl—and how she had seen him again that same day, going into Mr. Van Nuys' big house on Wuthering Hill.

"And so when I saw you down in the office I felt as if we were friends, almost," she finished, and she couldn't keep her happiness out of her voice or out of the look she gave him.

"That's probably why I wasn't peeved when you told me not to wear make-up on my face. . . . But it wasn't make-up, really. It was nothing but some pink face powder. I stopped using it, though. See?"

She turned up her face that was all wet and bright colored from the chill brisk wind and the rain. Tiny drops were gathered like beads on the ends of the long black lashes that fringed her eyes and on the bright wisps of hair that were blown back from her hat brim.

"I don't care so much for those hard-boiled beauties," Dave Jordan said, simply. "I like—well, you look natural and—sweet."

"Sweet," said Chatty to herself when she had left him at her door and was climbing the stairs to the flat. . . . If a man thought that a girl was sweet, that meant that he liked her pretty well, didn't it? . . . Sweet. It was a lovely word.

Instead of turning into her own hallway, she crossed the second floor landing and knocked on the door of the Langenau's flat.

Billie, still in her damp street very, very interesting. . . . She leaned forward in her chair.

"I'm still married!" Billie startled her by saying, suddenly. "Now, what do you think of that?"

Chatty didn't know what to think. She sat back and looked at Billie with narrowed eyes.

What was Billie doing—running around with George Mayhew when she had a husband with whom she did not live? And why didn't she live with him? . . . And why was she working to make her own living? . . . With a husband who could buy her silver and baby grand pianos, surely Billie did not have to work.

"Where's your husband?" "In New York," Billie answered frankly. "I left him and thought he'd divorce me, perhaps—but he doesn't. And I haven't a thing in the world clothes, opened the door. "Hello! How did you get home so soon?" she wanted to know. She always came home, herself, with George Mayhew.

"Want to ride home in the pouring rain?"

Two or three times she had asked Chatty to ride with them. But Chatty had always refused, hoping every night that, by some miracle, Dave Jordan would bring her home.

And now the miracle had happened!

"Dave Jordan drove me home!" Her tone was somewhere between a sigh and a groan of happiness, and the whole story of her feeling for him was written on her face.

Billie gave her a long and thoughtful look.

"Chat," she said, "I told you not to do it, and you've done it anyway. You've fallen for Dave Jordan, haven't you?"

Some girls never tell any other girl or woman how much they may happen to care for a man. They keep all their love folded in their hearts.

But Chatty was not made that way. It was a relief to her to tell Billie all about it.

"I'm crazy about him," she said. "And why shouldn't I be? Why should you tell me not to be, Billie? You're crazy about George Mayhew."

"Yes, but that's different," Billie answered quietly.

"How is it different?" Billie walked over to the door that led out on to the landing, and closed it. She kicked off the heeled rubbers she wore, and dropped them into the old-fashioned China umbrella stand that stood in the little hall.

"Sara isn't coming home for dinner. This is the night she takes her swimming lesson," she said. "Tell your mother you're going to eat in here with me, Chat. We'll have some cinnamon toast and stuffed tomatoes and tea—and we'll take her in a tray so she won't have to get her own dinner."

against him except that I don't love him."

She dropped a lump of sugar into her cup.

"I told you this because you told me I was in love with George Mayhew," she said slowly. "But I'm not. . . . and it wouldn't do me any good if I were. And George trots around with me because he thinks I'm good company, and Sara is always here when he comes to see me. That's why he's not here tonight—because it's her swimming night."

"Why did you tell me all this? What has it to do with me and Dave Jordan?" asked Chatty.

"Because you're expecting to fall in love and get married, like most girls," Billie told her, in her grave, matter-of-fact way. "You're not like me. A man to you is someone you might marry later on—and Dave Jordan won't get married for a long time, any more than George Mayhew will—unless he marries a girl with a lot of money of her own."

"Why not?"

GAME WARDENS THING OF THE PAST IN THIS STATE

Officials Known As Conservation Officers

Michigan has no "game wardens." That name was relegated when law enforcement division of the department of conservation was reorganized and today the scores of men in every county of the state and who represent the interests of the department are "conservation officers."

"The name 'game warden' is still frequently applied to conservation officers," Hugh Green, head of the law enforcement division said.

"This is a misnomer. A conservation officer can in no way be termed a 'game warden.' While he represents the law in that he enforces it in his particular district or county, he represents the entire department with its ten divisions. It is his duty to look after the interests of the fish, forestry, parks, lands, pollution, fire fighting, and other divisions in his district just as much as it is his duty to enforce all conservation laws."

The state is divided into 10 conservation districts, with a conservation officer in charge of each. In 14 of these districts there is an assistance conservation officer who is immediately in charge of fire fighting in that district as a primary duty.

Under the district officers are county conservation officers, with one or two in each county of the state.

In addition to these, other conservation officers devote their time entirely to commercial fishing work.

DR. MERRITT BECOMES PROFESSOR AT MICH.

Illustrating its intention to retain its faculty members rather than allow them to accept offers from other universities, the executive committee of the University of Michigan board of regents announces that it has elevated Dr. Benjamin D. Merritt from the rank of associate professor to a full professorship.

Dr. Merritt came to Michigan in 1928 as an associate professor. With the promotion, he is the youngest man on the Michigan faculty to attain the rank of professor, being but 30 years of age.

He was born in Durham, N. C., earned his bachelor's degree at Hamilton College in 1920, studied at the American School for Classical Studies at Athens from 1920 to 1922, took his master's degree at Princeton in 1923 and his Ph. D. degree there the following year. He has served on the faculties of Vermont, Brown and Princeton Universities and has been assistant director of the American school of Athens, in which he was formerly a student.

This is the fourth year Oceana county women have carried the extension work. Many of those enrolled in nutrition classes this year have completed three years in the clothing project.

Since that time the amounts increased steadily. Total receipts for the past year reached $606,572, the highest in the history of the church. The highest previous total for any single year was recorded in 1921 when the amount reached $593,942.88.

Poems That Live

RONDEL

Kissing her hair, I sat against her feet,
Wove and unwove it, wound and found it sweet;
Made fast therewith her hands, drew down her eyes,
Deep as deep flowers and dreamy like dim skies;
With her own tresses bound and found her fair,
Kissing her hair.

Sleep were no sweeter than her face to me,
Sleep of cold sea-blooms under the cold sea;
What pain could get between my face and hers?
What new sweet thing would love not relish worse?

Unless, perhaps, white death had kissed me there,
Kissing her hair.

—A. Charles Swinburne (1837-1909)

Posture Is Important in New Frocks

By LUCY CLAIRE

One of the good things about the silhouette is that it is going to make us more alert to posture. The fitted and semi-fitted lines permit of no slouching. We will not have the heavily boned stays of the eighties and nineties to hold us erect, but we will have a fitted foundation garment, call it corset or corselet, as you will, that is slightly more fitted at the waistline, and comes down long and smooth, closely hugging the hips. If the girder corselet is preferred, a bandeau that holds the bust easily in place will be necessary.

The new models have a very easy fitting line at the waist, achieved through the princess and slenderizing narrow belt effects. The raised waistline, except in extreme cases, is placed about two inches above the hip bone. This makes the skirt seem longer than it actually is, as the eye is focused on the long skirt from waist to hem. The skirt line for daytime wear is only three or four inches below the knee cap, though the skirts of dresses for formal wear are longer, and bodice lines of the frocks more snugly fitted. Evening silhouettes are sometimes extreme.

Spanish Tones Influence Colors

Colors are distinctly influenced by the Spanish tones, the sun tan mode which makes the pure colors popular, and trimmed necklines which achieve greater becomingness in the deeper dress colors. Brown is one of these, and it is interesting to note that its popularity is so great, and shades so numerous, that the glazed thread color range takes in 40 numbers.

The glazed thread, as I mentioned before in these articles, is now being used in matching colors on the picoted, turned under edges or hemlines of frocks, with the stitching on the right side, in place of rolled or narrow hems. Red is another important color in which the thread range is in 30 numbers. It ranges through the deep reds, the Spanish and the brown reds to the French nude.

The ensemble idea is a necessary part of the mode. Coats and frocks must belong, and accessories must match or contrast in a harmonizing color, as, for instance, black with green. Stockings are slightly darker in color, and shoes are simpler in design. Illustrating the harmonizing contrast is a tailored suit of oxford covert with collarless jacket, the raised belted waistline and longer skirt worn with wine red kid shoes, hat, bag and belt of the same color.

In the center of the sketch is shown an afternoon frock of black broadcloth, by Patou, showing the high waistline in a tailored model. This is worn with black dull kid shoes, black felt hat, and a black handbag, illustrating the matching accessories. The little tweed suit at the right, with its petal detail on the skirt tying up with the scalloped edge of the jacket, is worn with blue shoes, hat and belt, repeating the blue in the tweed.

The Parent Problem

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

ASSIGN CHILD REGULAR JOBS ABOUT HOUSE

By Dr. Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

"Yes, Lulu is growing up just as you say, but she does not always want to help her mother as she should." "There's no better boy in all the world than Lawrence when he wants to help about the house; but sometimes he wants to play or read the comic pages of the newspaper just when I need him most." Such are the frequent comments of almost any parent about her boy or girl.

There are not many children over eight years old whose parents boast about their helping in the house. Why do so few children please their parents in these matters?

A child who does not want to help her mother, or who helps unwillingly, does not so act because of any peculiar badness in her. She just has never learned to be helpful in the house. She has not been well taught. No use to scold and lecture her. It may make you feel better to do so, but it will not improve the conduct of the child.

In the first place, any parent who expects a child of eight or ten willingly to help for days and weeks and months, and to hang around for the privilege always to do more about the house, is expecting the impossible from the normal child. But it is surprising what a large number of parents seem to have such expectations. Those who do are pretty sure to be displeased with the child who does not so measure up, and they inform the child of their displeasure many times a day. Furthermore, as if to play safe, they tell their neighbors and their friends, in the child's presence, of her failure to be helpful.

Be reasonable with the child. See that she has time for play, time she can call her own, time when she can do as she likes so long as she annoys no one. Let her have some regular jobs, which can be done at regular intervals, jobs such as setting the table, or clearing it. To make such jobs easy for the child she must always do them, and do them without being told.

There must be no doubt. Uncertainty brings to children all sorts of unpleasantness, and it trains in disobedience. Aside from these regular jobs there arise emergencies when the child may be called upon. But unless some one is suffering, or in danger, there is no emergency. If, every few minutes, you call upon the child to do a turn which you had not thought of till that moment, and if she must just hang around so she can be ready to help whenever she is needed, she will soon grow impatient and will not help you willingly, unless she is feeble-minded.

Respect the child's right and feelings. Treat her as you would like to be treated yourself. Let her be responsible for doing things about the house, of course. But don't make a dog out of her, to be called and sent upon an errand any moment, never knowing when, but expected to be ready always. Have no arguments. Make the child responsible for her definite assignments.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

EXAGGERATIONS

A devilish got hold of a large motorboat in Texas waters and hauled it far out to sea, but I don't believe a word of it. My favorite hero, Charles Lindbergh, "accomplished twenty-five years' work in fifty-five hours, in exploring the Mayan jungles." But that is the sort of exaggeration that has always been used in relating the exploits of gods and mythical characters. Hercules did some wonderful things; I do not doubt, but his biographers and the reporters who followed him about rather made him ridiculous with those stories about his strangling a big serpent to death when the hero was only five days old, and about his cleaning out those terrible barns belonging to King Augeas, at Elis. Hercules undoubtedly did get a job of cleaning up somebody's farm, but the reporters, in order to make it a wow, said the stables hadn't been cleaned for thirty years, although three thousand oxen had been kept there continually. The giant did the work in one day, without overtime, by turning two rivers into the stable yard. I am informed that the story is unsound from an engineer's point of view.

Mrs. Gann comes from my home state, and probably she's a homey person, just the kind to sit about the fireplace with and spin yarns of the days of the prairie pioneers.

I liked the way Prime Minister MacDonald said, "Oh, don't mind my daughter Ishbel! She doesn't mind where she sits at the table." And Ishbel added, "Wherever I can reach the food is a good enough seat for me. I'm used to sitting just anywhere."

And the MacDonalds are somebodies indeed in that country noted for its snobbishness and its insistence upon ancient prerogatives.

I don't like to have foreigners get the idea that we Kansans are more snobbish than the English "governing class."

A fight started between two girls in a Brooklyn dance hall, over which was the more beautiful. Others joined in, and two hours later more than one thousand men and women were at it with fists, knives and blackjacks, out in the street. At a safe distance I venture the guess that neither of the Venuses was quite up to that standard of beauty. The Helen of Troy legend grew out of just such a battle, and Helen was about as beautiful as Harry Lauder.

With the Women of Today

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

Miss Ellamarye Failor, the first woman assistant federal attorney in New York, has recently been placed in charge of important bankruptcy cases.

Since 1925, when she was appointed to the office, when she was 27, her cases have been mostly those where the defendant pleaded guilty. This past summer, however, she actively prosecuted on charges of conspiring to conceal bankruptcy assets.

Almost half a hundred criminals have been convicted and sent to Atlanta prison by Miss Failor through the three years of her service.

Women Protest

Mrs. William H. Good of Brooklyn, N. Y., is temporary president of the newly formed Women's Non-Partisan Fair Tariff Committee, an organization which is bent on protesting the new Hawley-Smoot tariff bill before the law makers at Washington. Gertrude Duncan, Ph. D., is secretary and Mrs. William Swan is treasurer.

Prof. Elizabeth Collier of Hunter college, leading Republican of Brooklyn; Miss Ida Harbell, Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard college, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Miss Caroline F. Leow, president of the Women's University club of New York; Miss Annie Matthews, register of New York county; Magistrate Jeannette Brill, Miss Mary R. Towle, assistant United States attorney general; Miss Helen

Miss Ellamarye Failor

McKeon, president of the International Association of Women Teachers, which has a membership of 30,000; Dr. Gertrude M. Duncan, expert tariff analyst; Miss Rose Schneidermann, president of the Women's Trade Union League, are other prominent women interested in the movement.

It is the hope that a goodly delegation of women will be sent to Washington to make protest against the passage of the bill, which would add considerable to the present cost of living. Headquarters have been opened at Hotel Shelton, New York.

"Once A Scout, Always A Scout"—And Successful

Parents, attention.

If your youngster is a Boy Scout, you may nurse an inner hope of seeing him some day in the realms of leadership—whether it be in the civic, scientific, business or athletic world. And we can prove it.

Young men from the forty-eight states in our Union were summoned recently by Thomas A. Edison in an endeavor to select one boy, properly endowed with the earmarks of a genius, to follow in the footsteps of the inventor, when age will prohibit him from active participation in the scientific world. Of the 48 candidates 34 were Scouts.

Or, if you prefer athletics, consider this—out of 145 captains of football teams, representing leading colleges in America, 86 received early Scout training. Pilots of gliders from Harvard, Princeton, Army, Navy, Georgia Tech. and the Universities of Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Chicago, North Dakota, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, and Michigan State College are one and all, graduates of Boy Scout training. Or figuratively speaking, one out of seven boys in America wears the Scout insignia, and four out of seven football captains in the United States are former Scouts.

Pearls were the most prominent jewels worn in London at the recent garden party of the king and queen. Unless you bear with the faults of a friend, you betray your own.—Sydney.

EXTENSION WORK ENLARGES CAMPUS

The Central State Teachers' college, expanded at Mt. Pleasant has been expanded until it now covers several score miles.

Kalkaska marks the northernmost point, Standish is on the northeast boundary, Bay City marks the eastern edge and Ithaca the southern line.

This expansion was brought about by the innovation of the extension department in granting teachers in the field an opportunity to enroll as students, receiving residence credits for work completed in the extension department.

The majority of the students are from Bay City. A bus and five private cars furnish the means of transportation from there.

A group of courses has been offered this fall. The courses follow: Experimental psychology, Miss Anna B. Herrig; music, Prof. J. Harold Powers; professional grammar, Dr. E. C. Beck; English composition, Miss Karolena Fox; landscape gardening, Myron A. Cobb; American history, Roland H. Maybee; world history, VanLieu Minor; organic chemistry, Dr. E. J. Merrill, and home economics, Miss Mildred Robinson.

Western State Plans 66 Extension Classes

Under direction of John C. Hoekje 66 extension classes have been organized by Western Teachers college. Twenty-seven towns will be visited weekly by members of Western State faculty who will conduct classes.

Ex-Greenville Pastor Publishes New Work

Rev. James F. Halliday, pastor of First Congregational church, West Hartford, Conn., has written a book, "Robbing Youth of Its Religion."

Mr. Halliday was pastor of the Greenville Congregational church for several years. He was much in demand in western Michigan as a lecturer.

Seated on the bench with Judge Franklin Chase Hoyt in Children's court, New York, Miss Ishbel MacDonald, daughter of British prime minister, gets close-up of American social problems.

OFFER HEALTH AID TO CLINTON COUNTY

An unusual offer, proposing the establishment of a Clinton county health department, has been received by the board of supervisors from the state health department and from a representative of the Senator James Couzens fund.

Dr. Guy L. Kiefer, state health commissioner, explained to the board what Michigan is willing to do and Dr. Carey of the Couzens fund explained how much further he was willing to go. The following is summary of the offer:

A full time physician; full time nurses; a dairy and food inspector; a dental hygienist; a full time secretary. Dr. Carey assured the board if it was found necessary to add to the above personnel the money would be forthcoming from the Couzens fund.

The first year this is put into effect the expense would be as follows: State of Michigan, 3,000; Rockefeller Foundation, $2,500; Couzens fund, $5,500; Clinton county, $6,500. This totals $17,500, which would be spent in establishing what would be one of the finest and most effective rural county health units in Michigan.

To Erect Memorial At Saugatuck for Faithful Ferryman

The J. D. Myers Memorial Association is to erect a memorial in honor of Jay, the faithful ferryman, who for 22 years hauled citizens and tourists back and forth across the Kalamazoo river. Three artists, F. F. Fursman, Carl Hoerman and Thomas Talmadge, have given of their services.

The memorial will stand near the ferry on the west side of the river and is to be in the form of a stone seat, seven feet long, bearing a brass plate. The seat will be placed on a concrete base. The city council will place a drinking fountain nearby. Mr. Hoerman will landscape the ground surrounding the memorial.

THE NEW OCTOPUS

Gar Wood Moves Boat Plant to Marysville

Plant of Gar Wood, Inc., Arizona, famous manufacturer of speedboats, will be moved to Marysville, it was announced recently. Negotiations for the transfer were carried on through the industrial committee of the Port Huron Chamber of Commerce, of which C. C. Peck, president of the United States Savings Bank of Port Huron, is chairman. Members of the chamber and of the Port Huron Business Men's Association agreed to underwrite $85,000 for ten years.

A new plant with floor space of 60,000 square feet will be constructed on the St. Clair river front, just south of the property now owned by Allied Motor Industries, Inc., which now occupies the old Wills Sainte Claire plant. Under terms of agreement between the Port Huron interests and Gar Wood, two factory buildings, one 550 feet long and 70 feet wide, and another 350 feet long and 70 feet wide, will be built and completed before February 1, 1930. In addition there also will be an office building for the company.

The site of the new factory will occupy about six acres, including 650 feet on the river front. About 200 men will be employed immediately and this number will be increased as production grows. Wood has taken an option on 15 acres of additional land to the west of the site on the river front.

Bear Goes After Pork, Gets Bullet

Partiality to fresh pork cost a large black bear his life recently at one of the Cadillac-Soo camps near Hulbert.

It has always been the custom to have one or two pigs around the camp so that there would be a supply of fresh pork for the winter. The porkers have been allowed to roam the camp at liberty. A large black bear, which has been in the vicinity of the camp for some time, evidently thought he would beat the camp cook to the fresh meat.

The cook, startled by shrill noises coming from the rear of the camp, rushed out the back door to see Mr. Bear departing down the road, walking on his hind legs and carrying a pig in his forepaws. The pig protested violently in his own language. The cook summoned the lumberjacks who were lounging in the mess room. One of the men seized a rifle and rushed to the door, but too late.

The bear, worried by cries of the pig, started eating with the pig still alive and yelling louder than ever. The man emptied his rifle in the offending brute. This fall instead of fresh pork the men in the camp will be eating fresh bear.

Electrical Relics Presented to Ford

George Cotton, electrical inspector at Grand Rapids, has turned his 30-year-old collection of electrical equipment relics over to Henry Ford to be placed in Ford's Dearborn museum. An old oaken bracket and insulator used in 1854, a two-way desk socket formerly used in Sweet's hotel, a three-way wooden cutout which was used in the old Morton House, a niggerhead insulator and a prescription bottle socket found years ago in a drug store, are among the antiques.

BEAVER ESTABLISH HOME NEAR DETROIT

Seemingly isolated from all of their kind, and within 5 miles of Michigan's largest city, a colony of beaver, believed to be eight in number, has constructed a dam across a creek, built a home and has established themselves.

To protect this colony 40 acres surrounding their dam and home have been dedicated by Howard J. Inwood, of Romeo, Macomb county, as a wild life sanctuary.

The beaver dam is on Stony Creek about three miles from Romeo. The beaver just showed up last fall and since have grown in number. Their dam has backed up the creek until they have a miniature lake.

The 40 acre area was accepted as dedicated territory by the conservation commission at its last regular meeting. Now the residents and land owners of the vicinity are attempting to influence owners of adjoining territory to dedicate their land to offer still further protection.

In Washington township, Macomb county, is an area comprising about 1,000 acres of land. Stony Creek runs directly through the area which does not contain a single road. Pheasants, partridge, squirrels and other wild life abound. In the center of the area is the 40 acre dedicated sanctuary in which the beaver are working.

So attractive are the beaver to nearby residents that a well defined path has been worn to their dam and home.

Will Cut Own Lumber

The Lansing Company, whose production activities are confined in a large part to woodworking, plans to cut considerable hardwood in the vicinity of Lansing during the winter season. Lumbering operations will be started early in November, Harry E. Moore, general manager, said. Five mills will be operated in central Michigan on a number of timber tracts bought up by the company. The company cut over 3,000,000 feet of sawed material to its Lansing plant last year.

SEES 100-MILE SAFE SPEED

Automobiles have to be made out of date as fast as possible, it seems, if the business is to continue good. In an article in the October number of the S. A. E. Journal, issued by the Society of Automotive Engineers, Paul G. Hoffman, vice president of the Studebaker Corporation of America, states that in the field of motor cars above $800 in price, 25 per cent of the business must come through the process of speeding obsolescence.

The business would go into a serious decline if customers decided to keep their present cars until they were worn out; and this will happen unless their appetites are sharpened by offering more safety, more speed, more luxury, more convenience and more beauty and smartness of line and color.

Fortunately, remarks Mr. Hoffman, perfection is far ahead. By 1950 we shall have motor cars capable of transporting passengers safely and comfortably at speeds of 100 miles per hour or more. It is true that we shall need roads engineered for such speeds, but they will come.

20,000,000 Acres of Forest Land Needs Planting

Every year that the 20,000,000 acres of unproductive forest land in the three Lake States remain idle means a loss to the region of $20,000,000, according to Joseph Kittredge, Jr., of the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture.

"The present rate of planting these lands to trees will not reforest them within any reasonable period," Kittredge says. "Neither the region as a whole nor the individuals directly concerned can afford to accept this enormous annual loss merely for the lack of an adequate forest policy to prevent it."

The essentials of an adequate planting policy for Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, in Kittredge's opinion, are: (1) A survey of lands in need of planting to determine area, location, ownership, condition and value for planting; (2) effective fire protection for lands to be planted; (3) the planting of publicly owned lands by public agencies; (4) the expansion of public planting programs, including the acquisition of additional lands to be planted; (5) encouragement of counties, towns and private agencies in forest planting by the Federal and State governments, through advice to owners, the distribution of planting stock, possible modification of taxes on land devoted to the growing of forests, provision of cheap, long-time credit, and co-operative arrangements between owners and the States.

The reforestation of 20,000,000 acres in the Lake States is declared to be too big a job for any one agency to handle. Four classes of agencies may logically get together on the work—the State, the counties and local communities, the Federal government and the private owners. Up to 1926 only one-third of 1 per cent of the total nonproductive area had been planted under existing programs. With the annual planting speeded up to some 100,000 acres for each State, it is estimated that the product of each year's planting, when it becomes merchantable, would have a gross stumpage value of at least $15,000,000. Timber production on this scale would support 200 small saw mills or other wood-using industries in each State permanently, and would support an equal number of prosperous communities.

Kittredge recently completed a study of about 400 different forest plantations, most of them between five and twenty years old. The results just published by the Forest Service bring out much practical information on the kinds of lands that should be planted, the kinds of trees most likely to succeed on different soils, the time and methods of planting, and the prospective profits. Copies of the booklet—Department Bulletin 1497-D, Forest Planting in the Lake States—may be procured free of charge while the supply lasts from the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

METHODS ARE STUDIED TO EXPEDITE DELIVERY OF AIR MAIL TO CITIES

The post office department is doing everything possible to expedite the delivery of the air mail to cities after its delivery at airports, according to the superintendent of Air Mail Service, Earl Wadsworth.

In most cities the municipal government aids delivery by giving trucks, which are delivering the air mail the right of way and letting them disregard the speed limits. In many towns, he added, policemen are notified of the coming of the trucks and give them the right of way and see that no traffic obstructions bar the way.

Tests have been authorized of air mail catching devices, but the feasibility of placing them on top of post office buildings is not yet determined because of the fact that regulations provide that airplanes must not fly lower than 500 feet over cities. The planes have to be flown as low as 75 feet above the building to use the device, he stated. It is possible that regulations may be changed to make the use of the device possible, but even then tall buildings in many cases would cause unfavorable air currents dangerous to planes, he continued.

The possibility of the use of pneumatic tubes between airports and cities is being considered at the present time, he said. Such tubes are in use in several cities today to expedite delivery between different points within the city, but their use in carrying mail between the airport and the city would be limited by their inability to handle other than letter mail. The expense involved in installing them over long distances would also be a limiting factor in their use, he said.

Future developments in aviation may possibly make it possible for the airplane to land in smaller areas, thus allowing them to land nearer the post office.

6,258 Men Employed in Mines in Houghton Co.

The mines of Houghton county employed 6,258 men last year, according to the annual report of Mine Inspector Matt Ollilo, filed with the Houghton county board of supervisors. Of this number 3,180 were employed underground and 3,708 in mills and on the surface.

In submitting his report Mr. Ollilo said that "it is gratifying to be able to report a striking change for the better in general conditions among several of the mines of Houghton county." He also expressed his appreciation "for the uniform courtesy that has been extended by the various mine officials to the mine inspector and his assistants during the year."

The number of fatalities resulting from mine accidents in the county last year was 10 as compared with 21 for the preceding year. This represents a percentage of .0031 for the number of men engaged in mining.

MICHIGAN Girl Gains Weight Amazingly

NATURE controls all the functions of our digestive organs. We control that; and a lot of trouble it causes.

Children suffer when they don't observe regular bowel habits. Breath becomes fetid; tongue coated; eyes dull. A host of ailments; biliousness, feverishness, lack of appetite, follow if we neglect this warning that a child's bowels need help.

In such cases, California Fig Syrup never fails to help by the prompt opening of clogged intestines. The first spoonful does that; and relieves the common symptoms of constipation. Successive doses help tone and strengthen weak stomach and bowels; improve appetite; encourage digestion and assimilation. In a few days, a child is well, happy and bright again.

The way children improve when California Fig Syrup is used is the best proof of its merit. Here's an example: Mrs. Annie McFadden, 6087 Avery Avenue, Detroit, says: "Annie was bothered with constipation several years ago and I decided to give her California Fig Syrup. It's made such a difference in her that I have used it since then for every little upset. It helps her digestion; regulates her bowels; keeps her strong and energetic. I am sure it is one thing that helped her gain weight so wonderfully after a recent attack of scarlet fever."

The pure vegetable product, endorsed by doctors for 40 years, always bears the word California.

ST. THOMAS WINS FROM PINCKNEY

St. Thomas High School of Ann Arbor won from Pinckney in a football game played here last Friday by a score of 6 to 0. The visitors worked the old ancient dead man play twice in succession and following this up with a third successive forward pass scored a touchdown in the first two minutes of play. In the dead man play one of the players goes nearly to the side lines and kneels on one knee until the ball is snapped when a forward pass is thrown to him. In both plays the St. Thomas player playing out near the sidelines was left uncovered and had easy sailing after receiving the pass. This play like the hidden ball trick works about once a year. After scoring six points the Ann Arbor boys worked to protect their lead, trying few passes and were successful in this as the ball remained in the center of the field the balance of the game neither team getting closer to the goal lines than the thirty yard line. Pinckney's line failed to hold on offense and the ball carriers were thrown behind their line for loss after loss. Murray Kennedy made a number of gains through tackle and Frank Smaka made one good for ten yards but invariably they were forced to punt on the fourth down. Pinckney was unable to penetrate the Ann Arbor line or circle the ends. They did not throw any forward passes until the last quarter when two were attempted. Both failed as Ann Arbor knocked down one and caught the other one. On defense the Pinckney line held Ann Arbor to no gains and broke through the opposing line throwing their opponents for repeated losses. The Pinckney team put up one of the best defensive games of the year but relied too much on straight football and did not have enough deceptive plays to advance the ball. St. Thomas on the other hand opened up with all their stuff at the first few minutes of play and after gaining a lead contented themselves with playing safe. This has been their system in all games played this year as the scores by which they won from Ann Arbor Reserves, Lincoln Park and Melvindale were also 6 to 0. In each case the six points were scored by means of a forward pass.

Pinckney will play the Ann Arbor High School reserve team at Ann Arbor on Friday, November 8. St. Thomas won from this team several weeks ago by a score of 6 to 0. This game will be doubly interesting on account of the fact that Ronald Tupper former Pinckney boy is the star left half back on the Ann Arbor team.

Many Pinckney alumni now living in Ann Arbor will also attend the game.

NOTES OF THE GAME

Lefty Reason was the hardest worked man on the entire Pinckney team. He was a tower of strength backing up the Pinckney line when their opponents had the ball and was obliged to punt on nearly every fourth down. His team mates were too slow recovering punts to suit him and he endeavored to show them how it should be done by running down the field and recovering one of his own punts.

The game was played in a slight drizzle of rain which fell until the last quarter. This slowed the teams up and neither side did much on end runs or line plunges.

Pinckney like the U. of M. has a fine defensive team and is able to hold their opponents to low scores. However their offense fails to click for some reason and consequently when they meet a team whose line they are unable to penetrate they are unable to score. Poor interference and bad blocking are responsible for this.

Many wondered why Pinckney did not use the forward pass more when it became apparent that they would not be able to score by playing straight football. The answer to this is that their backfield is composed of green men this year and they have not used the forward pass enough to perfect it. On the two tries they failed to afford their receiver protection and both were intercepted by Ann Arbor.

Pinckney has but two more scheduled games to play, one at Ann Arbor November 8 and one at Byron Nov. 22. Both of these will be hard contests. Ann Arbor has a heavy team and Byron also is good having lost but two games both to Brighton who by the way has the best team in their history. They have won six straight games this year.

There was much unnecessary roughness in the game. The Irish were the biggest offenders in this, drawing a 15 yard penalty when Weissmeyer roughed Gerald Kennedy.

Frank Smaka playing his first game with the regulars handled himself well and made one of Pinckney's longest gains.

The Right Lamp in the Right Socket

Fourteen types of electric lamp bulbs are carried in stock by The Detroit Edison Company—an ample variety to fit almost any need. Standard inside-frosted lamps are available in five sizes: 15 watts, 25, 40, 60, and 100. In addition to these, the Company supplies a 25-watt tubular lamp (for use in show cases), clear lamps in five sizes (150 watts, 200, 300, and 1000), and white-bowl lamps (sizes 150 watts, 200 and 300).

The useful life of the modern, high-efficiency electric lamp is approximately 1,000 hours of illumination. After this period the glass bulb rapidly becomes blackened, and the lamp should be replaced. Blackened and burnt-out lamps (in the ordinary sizes) are exchanged for new lamps without charge at any Detroit Edison office.
