Prints for the Princess Line

Prints again? Of course! But what prints they are these new ones that smart women will choose new, instead of in the Spring, when everyone will want them!

They have a new technique about them, to accentuate the molded silhouette of the Princess Line. Their patterns are deliberately smaller and more carefully spaced, to bring out the subtlety of the new silhouette. For daytime they are small and widely spaced.

And since there's nothing smarter under a dark Winter Coat than a gay print dress, and since nothing is so perfectly stimulating as a gay print dress in January, we urge you to see what wonders the new print designs achieve for the new silhouette. They're Here! The new spring prints are available now in both the dress goods section and the ready-to-wear floor. By the yard at $2.98 & $3.98 and ready-to-wear models from $16.75 and upwards.

COMMUNICATION

Chicago, Ill. Jan. 19, 1930

Editor of Dispatch:

The growth of the resort business in the lake region around Pinckney, during the last ten years has gone far toward making up for the decline in the agricultural population. Further development of the summer resort region is sure to come; and its importance to Pinckney is so great that it deserves the serious attention of every resident of the village.

Portage, Base, Whitewood, Gallagher, Strawberry, and Zukey lakes form one connected waterway. This statement is an obvious fact. It is not a new discovery. Years ago Charlie Teepla (and others then young, but now numbered among the Elder Statesmen) rowed and poled a boat from Portage to Lakeland. The connection of these lakes, one to another was recognized but in the days of row boats, none but an adventurous soul, with plenty of time on his hands, was likely to attempt the trip. Of course there were a few - a very few - motor launches which might make the journey once or twice in a season, but there was no real travel among the lakes and no practical means of such travel.

The coming of the outboard motor has changed all this. It is no trick to steer even a good row-boat, equipped with an out board motor, from Portage to Lakeland. On a hot day, in the summer, it is one of the most delightful water trips that can be had on inland waters in half of the United States. The Huron is a beautiful stream. In the reach between Base Lake and the lakes above, there are long stretches where the trees arch over the river, and the brilliant sunshine of the August day filters through the leaves in patches of gold on the sparkling waters beneath. From these cool recesses, it is a long way to the noise and dirt and heat of Detroit or Chicago. There are thousands of people in either of these cities, who never dream that Southern Michigan possesses lakes and hills and streams with the loveliness and charm of the Huron valley in Livingston county. The story never has been told. Few have attempted it. Those who tried were regarded as being a bit "soft." Lakes fed by sparkling springs; hills clothed in oaks and maples such as only Michigan grows; streams flowing over glittering gravel beds and fringed with noble elm trees; every barefooted boy in Livingston

THE PINCKNEY LIVERY BARN PASSES

One of the ancient institutions of village life is passing from Pinckney probably forever, in the razing of the old Pinckney livery barn. Mrs. Marion Pearson of Howell has purchased the building of its owner, Mrs. Amelia Wilcox and Monday workmen began the work of wrecking it. The material in it will be used in the construction of a barn on the Thos. Clark farm now owned by Mrs. Pearson.

A livery barn was always a place of much interest, especially to small boys, who loved to hang around there and listen to the yarns handed out by the motley personal who made that place their headquarters. In those days much of the travelling was done by horse and buggy and the livery barn was a busy place. Travelling salesmen of all kinds, race horse men and even thieves and robbers stopped there. It housed the bus that met all trains and was a meeting place of that vanishing gentry known as "horse swappers." Sunday was its big day as then the young swains rented the fancy rigs to take their best girls out. It was usually necessary to speak a week in advance in order to get one.

The development of the auto spelled the doom of the livery barn the local one having been out of business for past 10 years or more. It was getting in a bad state of repair and would soon have developed into a fire hazard. The present barn was built by the late James Wilcox who ran it for many years. Other proprietors were P. H. Swarthout, Horace Taylor, John Cadwell, Will Dunning, Letta Munsell and Wayne Bennett.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY

Already the political pot has begun to simmer for next fall's campaign. At a meeting held at the office of Tracy Crandall at Howell last Tuesday, Hon. Lynn Gardner, announced his candidacy for state senator from Ingham & Livingston counties to succeed Seymour Person. This according to the state press has its complications as Richard Scott, president of the Reo Motor Company is also said to be a candidate. There is an unwritten agreement that Ingham and Livingston and Ingham counties shall take turn about in filling this senatorial seat, so as Person has already served two terms, Livingston county wants a fling at it. Hon. Grant Hudson is said to have asked Gardner not to oppose Scott in the senatorial race according to the Detroit Press for the reason that Scott has some ideas of running for governor. Hudson expects to be a candidate for governor as does also Lt. Governor Dickens and three ardent drys contesting for the same office would hardly do. Senator Sink of Ann Arbor will run for Lt. Governor and Tracy Crandall of Howell is expected to compete for state representative. Of the county officers most of them will be candidates to succeed themselves. There is expected to be considerable contest for the office of sheriff as we understand Walter Mowers, Putnam, Robert Krause, Oak Grove, Claud Fawcett, Deerfield and George Sargison of Howell are planning to run in the primaries. On the Democrat side all is quiet, the only name being put forward being that of Horatio J. Abbott, former Ann Arbor postmaster for governor. Undoubtedly there are many more listening to hear the voices of their friends calling them. The big contest in the primaries of course will be the campaign for United States senator between Gov. Green and Senator Couzens.

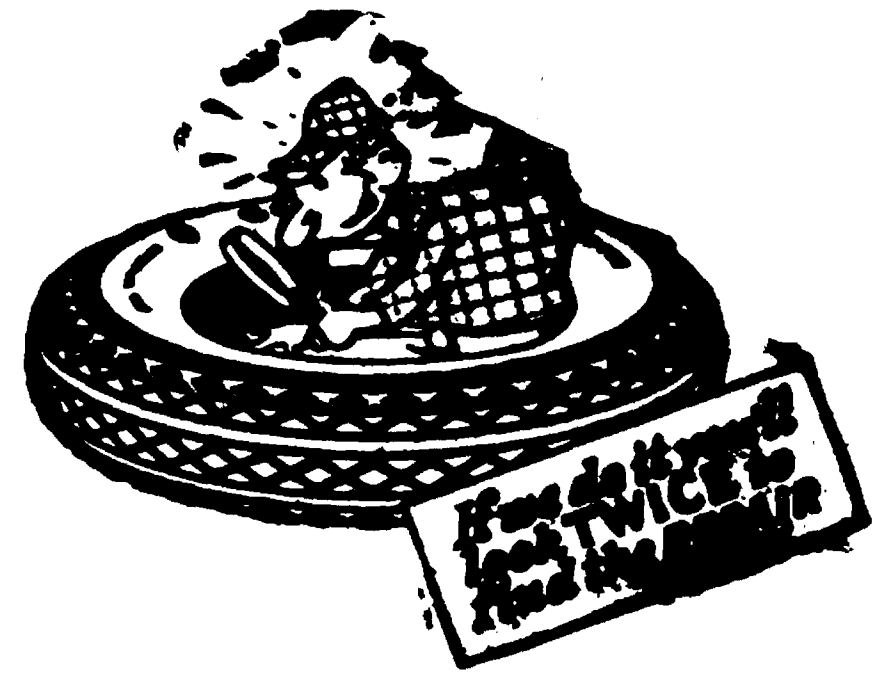

OIL CO. HOLDS COOKING SCHOOL

The Shell Petroleum Co. in conjunction with the Sutton Hardware Co. of Howell held a cooking school at the Pinckney Community Hall this afternoon. They demonstrate the new method of cooking by gas which is furnished by the Shell Co. in steel containers. Sutton Hardware has the county agency for this gas. The stoves are set up in the hall and a demonstration is given of cooking by gas by an expert lady cook. There is no obligation to buy whatever and other cooking classes will follow this one. Such classes have already been started at Hartland and Oak Grove and more will be formed in other parts of the county.

BENEFIT BRIDGE PARTY

Friday eve, Jan. 31, the O. E. S. will give a benefit Bridge party at their hall at 8 o'clock.

Each Star and Mason is requested to invite a friend. Refreshments will be served.

WEEK OF JANUARY 26

During the opening days of the week beginning January 26 in Michigan we are expecting that temperatures will generally be sub-normal. Should there be any reaction to warm weather at this time, it will not be for a very long period.

Weather conditions all through the first half of this week will prove to be unsettled and rather unreliable for steadiness in action. Storm movements themselves will, even at this time of year, prove more or less sluggish, resulting in poor weather forecasts from the weather bureau.

Shortly after the middle of the week the weather is expected to become more settled, with less cloudiness and lower temperatures.

About Friday there will be a more decided change in weather conditions. Temperatures will show a marked increase towards warmth as the storm center approaches nearer to Michigan.

Upon arrival of this storm center there will probably be more or less electrical manifestation in the air. Winter thunder storms will be probable in Michigan at the end of this week or very beginning of next week. The winds will also be strong, if not actually the force of a tornado. Precipitation will be in the form of rain, sleet or snow and plenty of it in local sections. Blizzards and snow drifts are quite probable and to be expected during opening days of February.

February Cold
The month of February is expected to average rather winter-like as far as the temperature is concerned. There may be some thawing conditions, but with the cold that is sure to follow this will form ice coverings, dangerous in the cities and damaging on the farms. On top of this, we are not expecting the precipitation to be very heavy this coming month, probably no more than normal and perhaps below.

Still More Millions Treat Colds Direct

Round-About Method of "Dosing" Gives Way To Modern Vaporizing Salve

More and more people each year are giving up the slow, indirect way of treating colds by "dosing" with internal medicines, and are adopting the modern direct treatment—Vicks VapoRub.

Vicks goes direct to the affected parts and checks the cold in two ways—its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages; at the same time it acts direct through the skin like a poultice and soresness.

Vicks is especially appreciated by mothers because it is just rubbed on, and therefore, cannot upset children's delicate stomachs as "dosing" is so apt to do. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

To keep pace with the ever-growing demand, the famous salve, "17 Million Jars Used Yearly," was raised to "21 Million" a short time ago. This figure too has been outgrown, as there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly"—a jar for every family in the United States.

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination ofenna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And so you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Suffering people and all kind of drug users, the generous, the kind, or with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, for free trial bottle.

CHATTY GODDESS OF GAB

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE SCENE," etc.

Under it, flat on his back, lay a long-legged, red-headed man, who was tinkering with something that evidently had gone wrong with its mechanism.

"Hello—that's Jordan, isn't it?" Bryant Dunning asked Chatty, looking at the shock of red hair that was visible at one end of the car. "Perhaps I ought to see if I can help him."

"Suit yourself," Chatty's tone was flat.

"Well, I guess I won't then," Bryant decided. "There's no reason why I should. . . . He and I never did get along very well, and he probably wouldn't give me a hand if I needed one."

"Have you known him a long time?"

Bryant nodded. "Went to school with him years ago. Known him ever since. . . . But let's talk about you and me. How many engagements have you for this week?"

said aloud, looking at her reflection in the glass with doubtful eyes.

Winnie gave a laugh. "I wish you knew him the way I do—and that wouldn't worry you," she answered. "All the girls I've ever seen him with were fifty steppers—all dressed up like Zulu hand cars. He says, himself, you're the first Flat Heel he ever fell for."

"Flat Heel?" asked Chatty, who never could keep up with Winnie's ever-changing slang.

"Yeah—Flat Heel," Winnie repeated. "You know—a girl who won't take a drink or smoke a cigarette, or do any petting. Bum sports, in other words."

Even before she saw him, Chatty knew it would be Pud.

He grinned when he saw her. His wide, boyish grin, that did its best to call her attention from the startled, guilty look in his eyes.

"Yeah, it's me," he said, and came into the kitchen.

He was carrying a large, square parcel covered with heavy, brown paper in his arms, and he laid it down upon the sink.

"This is good, finding you here," he said, his grin fading from his thin, freckled face, and a too-old look coming into it. "You preach to me like a dry agent, about selling gin—but I notice you ain't too nasty-nice to drink it!" He wagged his head at her accusingly.

"I haven't drank any of it yet—and I'm not going to," Chatty told him, lifting her chin and looking him squarely in the eyes. "You know I never touch anything like that, and if

He stopped beside her.

Chatty giggled happily. "None—except for Friday night, Winnie's having a birthday party—"

"And you're going to it with me," he finished the sentence for her. "And you're going to see me every night this week, besides."

Chatty giggled again, excitedly. This sort of thing was new to her, and it went to her head like wine.

"How lovely," she said, blinking up at him, the sunset in her eyes. "How lovely to see you every night!—I mean it. I think you're wonderful!"

She had almost forgotten about Dave Jordan, lying under the Pride of America, tinkering with its 1924 motor. . . . The dull ache that had been in her heart for a week was gone. Completely gone.

When Bryant Dunning put out his right hand and took hers in it, she did not take it away. All the way out to Lipton street, he held it, stroked it, patted it.

that this was to be a "wild" one and no mistake!

The tiny kitchen, when she went into it to get a drink of water, was filled with all the signs of one.

There was a big pail of orange juice, covered with a dish towel, standing under the sink.

The sink itself was covered with ginger-ale bottles and dozens and dozens of glasses—tall, high-ball glasses, dainty little cocktail glasses, and some middle-sized glasses with thick green stems.

There was a huge cake of ice in a galvanized iron washtub on the kitchen table.

"We always do some of our dancing out here," Winnie told her, brightly, when she followed her into the little room. "So we just stick these chairs out on the back porch so there'll be no room. The darned flat is so little that you can hardly find room to shake a hoof in it, what I mean."

She picked up the two kitchen chairs and shoved them into the outer darkness of the back porch.

"Get the chairs out of the breakfast nook, too, Chatty," she ordered. "We won't need them. Nobody ever sits down at my party. . . . When they aren't having something to drink they're too busy scuffling to sit down."

"Scuffling?" asked Chatty.

"Well, dancing, then, if you insist on being so refined," Winnie sounded sarcastic.

"What are you going to have to eat?" Chatty wanted to know next.

"Not a thing!" answered Winnie. "Food, my girl, is the curse of the drinking race. Nobody wants to eat at a party. Everyone wants to dance and drink and go hay-wire!"

Chatty began to feel ashamed of herself because she knew so little about really peppy parties. . . . She remembered Billie's Sunday night party. Billie had served food, good food, and plenty of it. And no one but Winnie and a couple of the boys had drank anything. . . . Certainly no one had gone hay-wire."

I were you I'd rather beg nickels on the street than help Ben Tomlinson sell it!"

Afterward Chatty looked back on that talk with Pud in Winnie Talcott's kitchen as the dividing line between the life she had always led and the life she led for months from that point on.

Until that night, Charlotte Chatterton had been the nicest kind of a girl, "nasty nice," as Pud had called her.

She had not smoked or drank. She had not painted her face or done any promiscuous "necking."

The only person she had ever kissed was Dave Jordan, and she had kissed him, not for the thrill or the "kick" there was in it, but because she loved him with all her heart—and he had thrown her over, and made her deeply unhappy.

Unhappiness can, and does, do queer things to people.

To Chatty it did this. It made her afraid of being hurt and unhappy again, as she had been for the past two weeks. It made her want to forget her pain, and Dave Jordan along with it.

And so she was looking forward to tonight's party as people in bodily pain look forward to a sleeping powder or a drug to dull their agony. . . . and in the same way she was waiting impatiently to see Bryant Dunning once more.

For she had almost forgotten Dave Jordan, and what he had done to her during that ride home with him the other night.

She knew that that was why she had said that she would come to Winnie's party tonight—because he was going to be there. Just as once upon a time she had gone to Billie's Sunday night supper party to meet Dave Jordan—Dave!

"Off with the old love
And on with the new.
Forget eyes of brown
In these sweet eyes of blue—" sang the radio in Winnie's little living room.

Go and tell Miss Talcott I'm waiting for my money," said Pud sulkily. "She knows doggone well she has to pay for this stuff right on the dot. But she always tries to get out of it. Women are fierce to do business with." He shifted impatiently from one foot to the other.

Chatty gave him one last, pleading, anxious look, and went to get Winnie. She found the front room filled with a group of the noisiest, gayest people she ever had seen or heard. Their voices, as they congratulated Winnie on her birthday, fairly drowned out the noise of the radio!

"Many happy returns, Winnie!" "This isn't much of a gift, Win, but it shows I was thinking of you—"
"Don't bother to open this now, Win. It's just a bottle of bath salts—"
"Now about opening a little bottle!" asked Winnie, shooting at the top of her voice, to make herself heard. "Bootlegger's in the kitchen. What Grand Egg will go out and pay him!"

Jim Bowen said he would, and he dashed out to do it.

"Come here, and meet my gang," called Winnie, and Chatty smiled and nodded and repeated their names.

But her heart, that had been so light, was like stone all at once. She felt actually sick with shame, that swept over her, nauseating her.

"Bootlegger's in the kitchen," Winnie had said.

Bootlegger! A shameful name for a shameful trade. A law breaker, a criminal who had not yet been caught and punished by the law.

Bootlegger. . . . That was Pud! Her little brother.

That night Chatty took her first drink.

She took not only one. She took four of them.

It was hard not to drink at Winnie's parties, for drinking was the main event of the evening.

If you didn't "spit" at Winnie's parties you never were asked there again, it seemed. "No dry agents around here!" Winnie told her, severely, pressing a glassful of gin and orange juice upon her. "You just gotta take one glass, Chatty, to be a good sport. Just enough to get a little edge on."

So Chatty took the glassful of liquor, and drank it at one gulp, because she hated the raw, bitter taste of it.

"It's just like taking medicine," she said to Jim Bowen, who was patting her on the back and saying: "That's a good girl!" over and over in a very silly way.

By the time Bryant Dunning arrived at ten o'clock Chatty was the life of the party. . . . She had had another bitter cocktail, and she had discovered that she could say funny things that made the others laugh, and that the men all wanted to dance with her, and that life was suddenly just the rosiest, wildest thing. Well, it just was, that was all.

"Oh, boy! I'm on top of the world, and the crest of the wave is carrying me straight to Mahoola!" she told Bryant, running up to him when she saw him come in.

He laughed in a puzzled way. "That's fine," he said. "Glad to hear it. I'll go right along with you—but I thought you never drank."

"Who tol' you a story like that?" Chatty demanded to know, hanging on to him because she was feeling a bit dizzy by that time—but very gay and peppy, nevertheless.

"I told him that, Chat," said Winnie, coming up to them with two glasses in her hands. "But I was all wrong, Bryant, the kid's reformed." Chatty drank her third cocktail, standing there with Bryant, holding on to him with one hand while she tipped the glass to her lips with the other.

Five minutes later he poured another one for her, and another for himself, and they drank them, sitting on the kitchen table, side by side.

The kitchen was brightly lighted, but after a few minutes the lights began to look purple to Chatty. She scowled at them.

"Very peculiar!" she said aloud to Bryant, who didn't know what she was talking about. "And I am feeling—perfectly—elegantly—groggy—"
It was hard for her to form the words with her lips, all at once. It was hard for her to think of what she wanted to say.

"Better not have any more of these things, Sweet," she heard Bryant's voice, as if it came from miles away, low and faint. "You aren't used to them."

Sweet. . . . who was it used to call her Sweet. . . . Oh, sure, it was Dave Jordan. . . . Dave!

"Well, he doesn't think I'm sweet now! Not on 'y life!" she told Bryant Dunning, solemnly. She peered at him, trying to see him through the purple mist that seemed to be gathering about her. "He thinks I'm—absolutely—unspeakable—"
And without any warning she suddenly fainted dead away in his arms.

"Dressed out!" shouted Jim Bowen, coming in for a drink.

"Your friend's blotto, Win!" called someone else, just behind him. "And HOW!"

"And did you speak to Chatty about it?"

Billie opened her handbag, and took from it a small tissue paper package. In it was a bag made of cut-steel mesh. Every expensive looking one, with a little tag on it that said it had been made in France.

Winnie and I thought it would be nice to give this to Aggie on her last day here—sort of a farewell gift," she said to Chatty. "It was fifteen dollars. Winnie and I are each giving five towards the price, and we thought you might like to go in on it."

Feeling like the biggest hypocrite who ever lived, Chatty said slowly that she would be glad to "chip in" on the gift.

"It was I who got Agnes out of her job," she thought, when she went to get her pay envelope, "and here I am, pretending I'm sorry she's going, and helping to give her a farewell present, to boot!"

She had nothing at all to say five minutes later, when Agnes came out into the big office and Billie gave her the bag.

"It's from me and Winnie and Chatty," she said. "We're all so sorry that you're going, Agnes, and we hope you'll be happy in the new job you're going to."

"We sure are going to miss you, Aggie," Winnie said, as if she meant it. "But I'll do my best to take care of Mr. Van for you."

Agnes' white face seemed to go a shade whiter.

"That's the thing that kills you, isn't it, Agnes?" Chatty asked. "Having someone else in the office with him—while you're out of it for good?"

The instant she said it she was sorry.

For Agnes turned on her the look of a person who has been stricken to the heart. Her lips trembled, and her eyes dilated. She put one hand up, as if she were warding off a blow.

"Oh, Chatty, how could you say such a thing?" It was Billie who spoke, and every line in her face bespoke indignation and disgust.

"Well, I didn't mean to. It just slipped out," Chatty said quickly, looking down at her hands. "But, at that, all I said was just what the rest of you were thinking. We all know that Agnes worshipped His Nibs. Lots of girls who work for a man do come to think a lot of him. And lots of men fall in love with their office girls, too—"

The more she said, the worse it sounded.

She knew that Bryant Dunning and Dave Jordan were listening to her, too.

"What a cat they'll think I am," she thought. But then, Dave thought that about her, anyway—

"Well, anyway, good-bye and good luck, Agnes," she said, suddenly, and feeling like a female Judas, she held out her hand and shook Agnes' limp, damp one.

PINCKNEY HIGH SCHOOL AGAIN BREAKS EVEN

Pinckney High School got another even break in two basket ball games played at the Pinckney Community Hall last Friday evening. The reserve team lost the opening game to Dexter 16 to 5. The Dexter bunch proved to be too fast and experienced for the reserves who were helpless with the exception of Dinkel who scored all of Pinckney's five points. The reserve team is made up almost wholly of green material and their ignorance of the finer points of the game is responsible for most of their losses.

- Pinckney L. F. Dexter
L. Meabon L. F. Devine
M. Meabon R. F. Chase
J. Hall C. Smith
Dinkel R. G. Herrick
Henry L. G. Zeigler

Substitutions—Basydlo for Henry. Field goals—Dinkel 2, Chase 1, Devine 3, Smith 2, Herrick 2. Foul goals—Dinkel 1. Fouls—Dexter 6, Pinckney 5. Referee—Weddige. Umpire VanHorn.

In the second game the high school took the Ypsilanti Central Reserves into camp by a score of 18 to 6. The visitors found the going hard and never seriously threatened the lead which Pinckney ran up in the first quarter. The local team put up an air tight defense and Ypsi was forced to make all of their points by means of long shots. The scoring was evenly distributed. Hall leading with 6 points. Gerycz getting 4, Kennedy 4, Basydlo 2, and L. Meabon 2.

- Pinckney R. F. Ypsilanti
H. Hall L. F. Scheffler
Gerycz L. F. Dundon
Kennedy C. McCann
Basydlo R. G. Mohler
Read L. G. Stitt

Substitutions—Dinkel for Basydlo, M. Meabon for Dinkel, L. Meabon for M. Meabon, Dinkel for Read, Yohn for Dundon, Gaiter for McCann, Perdue for Gaiter, Courtney for Mohler. Field goals—H. Hall 1, Gerycz 2, Kennedy 2, Basydlo 1, L. Meabon 1. Foul goals—Hall 4, Fouls—Pinckney 3, Ypsi 4. Referee—Hooker. Umpire VanHorn.

county saw these things as commonplace parts of the home landscape and innocently supposed that every other state in the Union had the forests, lakes and rolling hills. Families bred contempt. To speak of beautiful things as being worth anything just because they were beautiful, never seemed necessary.

If the waterway from Portage to Lakeland was opened up to power boating, so that it could be navigated at any time in the months of June, July, August or September it would attract people from a quarter of America. Ultimately it would get its own story told to the nation, because men and women would come there; would be charmed by the lakes and the river; would go away and put the picture into words. Pinckney would become known in a thousand places. The "crop" of summer people would increase.

The kind of people who would be attracted by the natural beauty of the Livingston county portion of the Huron Valley, would be the most desirable sort. Compare them, if you will, with the kind that are attracted to a resort by a hot game or a wet time. Good cottages and good families have a way of keeping together.

But the key to this growth, in the Pinckney region, is the opening up of the Huron. In the summer, at the one season when people want to use the waterway, the water is low and the shallows in the river interfere with the pleasure of power boating. Above Base Lake there is a stretch of shallows that could be cleared by a dredge in a few days. A the entrance of Strawberry Lake is another bit of difficult going. At other spots in the river channel old posts, driven in the river bottom (probably) as anchorages for fishermen, menace the propeller of a passing boat. But the one most troublesome and annoying part of the whole trip is right in the canal from Portage Lake to the Huron river.

This canal, it is said, was originally excavated by the Portage Lake Land Company. It has been cleaned out and widened by cottage owners in more recent years. An effort was made, last season, to interest the present owners of the Portage Lake Land Company in joining forces with other Portage Lake residents, and making the canal deep enough to accommodate outboard motor boats during the low water of July and August. Nothing came of it. Motor boats, so it was said by the Portage Lake Land Company, through its spokesman, were a grade deal a nuisance. They were noisy, spit oil and kicked up the water. A small child, once upon a time, had been frightened by a motor boat, and had cried, (the child, not the boat, and the motor was distressed. Motor boats, in passing through the canal, caused waves, which rocked boats. If the canal should be deepened and made really accommodating, there would be a great many people who would go through it in motor boats. On this latter point there is no room for argument. If the canal were made deep enough to allow motor boats to navigate it pleasantly, there would be hundreds of people who would avail themselves of the opportunity to come down to Portage from the upper lakes. Some of them might buy lots from the Portage Lake Land Company. To the best of my knowledge, there is no law to prevent it.

There are some objections raised by residents of the Strawberry Lake region, but these have to do with the possibility of lowering the water level. These objections can be met with good engineering. Where the channel is deepened it can be narrowed by wing dams, and thus the discharge of water can be accurately controlled. In fact the control of the flow by wing dams, built in accordance with good engineering practise would guarantee the upper lakes a much more certain level than they now enjoy. This is so elementary that reasonable men will readily fall in line.

The opening of the entire channel from Portage to Lakeland, the building of wing dams where needed, and the ultimate lighting of the channel at night through the season, is the one big thing to be done in the resort region around Pinckney. It will require organized effort, and will demand the best leadership available. Men like Ross and Fred Read must be enlisted to tackle the job. Norman Reason, Earl Baughn and others who have valuable property on Portage, or who are interested in the development of subdivisions clear through to Lakeland, should take a hand. Pinckney merchants who enjoy some of the trade of the lake region could help to spread the idea. It should not be difficult to finance the improvement of the entire channel, as soon as men can be brought to an understanding of the important results that would come from it.

The growth which has come to the Pinckney lake region in the past is nothing compared with what would come in the next ten years if the entire river group of lakes, in the Huron River Valley are brought into motor boat communication. America grows richer, year by year. The number of people who can afford to leave the cities and build cottages for summer use, increases steadily. These people go where they can find the rest and pleasure they seek.

The improvement of the Huron chain of lakes, and the river stretches between, in Livingston county, will result in the finest stretch of power-boating in the central part of the United States. This is the time to start agitating for it. And Pinckney has the opportunity to lead.

Copper Deposits in Michigan Are Unexplored

Idea of the unexplored Michigan's copper country gained from recent reports U. S. Geological survey. It is that the exploratory work conducted by the Calumet & Copper Range and other companies in the Michigan field is being on in one of the world's unexplored areas. Over 8,000 pounds of copper has been mined from less than 10 per cent of the copper-bearing area. The early days of the district, were located on outcrops where there was evidence, or under pits dug by prehistoric man. Identity is wrapped in mystery less than 10 per cent of the copper-bearing area was thus explored. Over 90 per cent was covered overburden of varying thickness. This has increased the difficulty of finding new deposits, combined with irregular distribution of the lodes.

Survey estimates capital expenditures in the district at $150,000. Twice as much has been in dividends as the capital.

COUSINS ASK INVESTIGATION

Senator James Cousins, chairman of the senate interstate commerce commission, has asked that body for a thorough investigation of the possible influence exerted on railroad management by holding and investment companies as a preliminary to "intelligent legislation" on railroad consolidations. Cousins said that members of his committee probably would confer with members of the interstate commerce commission soon on railroad consolidation.

The I. C. Which of These Types Fits Your Store?

THREE general kinds of lighting provide adequate illumination for almost every commercial purpose. The first type, and probably the most common, is a soft, comfortable light of good intensity and distribution: It is well-adapted to the following stores—Automobile Supply, Bake Shop, Book Store, Cigar Store, Confectionery, Florist, Grocery, Hardware, Notions, Shoe Store, and Sporting Goods.

The second type is a light which makes merchandise sparkle, and is especially suitable for displaying Jewelry and China. The third type is designed to bring out the color values of merchandise, and is much in use in Art Stores, Clothing and Dry Goods Stores, Millinery and Tailor Shops, and Furriers.

Without charge, our illuminating engineers will gladly study and discuss with you the lighting of your store.

Petticoats May Be Coming Back

By LUCY CLAIRE

Soft fabrics that drape gracefully with slenderizing effect still interpret the mode. There is a feeling among stylists that with the softly corseted figure and the fitted lines woman will go back to petticoats, but these will not be the petticoats of yesteryear to give the bouffant effect. They will be soft little affairs hung from fitted yokes, or at least a yoke in front, with gathers at the back, to be used merely as a shadow skirt in place of the princess slips we are now wearing. Though the willowy silhouette is becoming a little more billowy with the aid of ruffles, pleated flounces and godets, it has not yet reached the bouffant except in the period of styles. The change is not so radical as one might be led to suppose. In fact, many of the models are still almost straight in line. Take the frock by Schiaparelli, for instance, sketched at the left. It is a printed silk with a brown background and a yellow scatter design. The waistline is raised and the skirt, with its side pleats set well below the hips, is hung from a yoke. The bodice blouses over the normal waistline, and is finished with a draped collar terminating in a tie at the front. With it are worn brown kid shoes of the one-strap type, and Spanish-Cuban or medium high heels. The Spanish influence is strong in present day fashions, which is not likely to bring down the height of heels.

For Town Wear More distinctly fitted are the lines of the second frock, sketched at the center. This is a smart Paris model suitable for town and informal afternoon wear. It is of black satin in tailored effect, with double belt and a set-in pleated godet achieving a graceful added flare to the ripplink skirt. This is worn with black kid T strap shoes and a black felt hat that fits the head like a skull cap and comes down in a long flare at one side.

Even more fitted are the lines of the distinctive frock of bemberg brown moire, sketched at the right. Interesting features are the shirring at the fitted normal waistline forming a wide girde effect, and the flared, tiered skirt with its overlapping panels dropped several inches below the neckline in the back. Brown pumps accompany this costume. With these dropped-in-the-back skirts one must be particularly careful to get just the right shade of hosiery to harmonize with the color of the frock, as the long back silhouettes the legs conspicuously. One of the slightly darker shades of sunburn, with brown in it, is a good bet with the brown costume.

The Parent Problem

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

GIVE CHILD EVERY AID WHEN ASKED

Our children in school are engaged in very serious business. For them it has as much importance, or it ought to have, as your work and mine. The future welfare of our children hangs pretty heavily upon their school successes now. Any reasonable thing we can do at home to help them get along a little better in school, we should want to do.

We ought to do our best to provide them with good learning tools. Besides their text books, paper, pencils and the like, they need reference books. The average child above the third or fourth grade, attending a modern school today, frequently has need of such help at home.

Perhaps the most practical home equipment for the school child is an unabridged dictionary and a good encyclopedia. There are several outstanding ones. Each has its peculiar merits. If you have doubts about your choice, examine several of them or consult with your teacher or librarian. Let no high pressure salesman make decision for you.

Little children are continually asking us about things we do not know. If we are good parents we honestly go with them, even long before they can read, to find such information. How wonderful it is for them to see us in search of knowledge and to know that they have caused us to search. Such an experience does not make the child lose faith in us; it makes his faith grow stronger to set a good example of honest eagerness to learn. Out of such experience grows a richer comradeship.

Older children like to look up things with us in the encyclopedia. We inspire greater learning zeal in them also, as we join with them in these efforts. We learn new things of common interest, and conversation. In preparation of their school work they continually have need of an encyclopedia.

Of course they could go to the library, but it often is not convenient to do so. We like to have them learn to study at home, anyway. For some children just the trouble of going to a library means that they will often neglect lesson preparation.

There are some parents for whom the purchase of an encyclopedia would be too great a hardship. But there are thousands of other homes with none, where the purchase would mean little or no financial sacrifice. In order to provide our children with such needed help, most of us could afford to get along without other things and books, much less important. Most good popular books are available at libraries. No reason why we should invest much in these unnecessary luxuries until our children are provided for. Think, too, of the scores of homes with de luxe sets of books which usually serve no purpose but for decoration.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

VIRGINIA LEE EXPLAINS REASONS FOR DISCOURAGING "PUPPY LOVE"

Odd, isn't it, the tricks Fate plays on us? The woman who loves books, art and music is often mated to a man who is the go-getter type and prefers burlesque in entertainment.

The man who loves his home and quiet amusements is wed to a jazz hound—or houndess, if you prefer.

Mother Nature, in her haste to mate in the spring of life, creates an attraction between such opposite natures, and causes them to wed, to their everlasting undoing.

And that is why, young folks, we oldesters discourage what we term "puppy love," although I know you hate the term and discard it. We know that in nine cases out of ten the mate you choose when you are 16 or 18 would not be at all the one you would pick at 25 or 26, or even 22 or 23.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: Some time ago a letter was published in your column signed 'Curly,' a girl in her teens in love with a married man whose wife did not love him, and evidently was unfaithful to him.

"Virginia, my case is a replica of 'Curly's,' only I am the man in this case. I am only 24 years of age. My wife is two years younger. Her idea of life is, 'Enjoy life at any price, even to extremities.' Needless to say there is little love between us.

"I have taken my wife to shows and dances, but she prefers her own companions, which she terms as fast and not 'soda drinking preachers' like my friends or myself.

"Through a friend of mine I met the 'Curly' of the case, a girl in her teens with a sincere and serious aspect in life. Virginia, I love this girl and she loves me. It seems she was meant for me and I for her. Our thoughts and views are identical, our friendship is clean and upright.

"My wife came home very late one night in an intoxicated condition. This was not the first time. I upbraided her for her actions. She has asked me to forgive her, threatening to kill herself if I divorce her.

"Now, Virginia, here is the problem. My answer you will give me will be appreciated to the utmost.

"REALIST."

No need to ask you why you married a girl with whom you had so few interests. Realist. Just another case of physical attraction that wore off quickly, leaving nothing to build on.

You say there is no love between you. Either she does love you or she needs you. You are her balance wheel, or she wouldn't beg you to stay by her and plead with you not to divorce her.

How much should we give up for others, for their good and ours? It's a hard question to answer. You cannot have a real home or be your best self with such a companion. Yet how would you feel if you left her and she went all the way down? How much responsibility should you feel for her? In marrying a person you DO assume a certain amount of responsibility for them, you know.

Sometimes we have to look on our life companions as sick children that we cannot desert, even though we get no pleasure or comradeship out of the relationship. Try to look on her as such, and do what you can for her, and if you fail to win her to your way of life, try a trial separation.

It is only right that, having married her, you should do your best to make the union a success. Loving this other girl complicates matters, I know, and I wish I could say divorce your wife immediately and marry this girl you love and who loves you. But I cannot. We cannot treat marriage as lightly as that. Do your best for your wife, and, if you cannot help her and you find you are better off apart, agree to a divorce and marry your "Curly." And may you win happiness, my dear boy.

WAITING: The boy friend may like you very well and still not write very often. I do not think he is in love with you. Write him the usual friendly letter and ask him if he can't write oftener? And if he doesn't, why don't wait, or even ask for your handkerchiefs at first. Let him wait for his answers and interest yourself in boys nearer home.

The World and All

LOOKING AROUND

University of Chicago never misses a chance to do something interesting that will get into print. Now it installs a new president, only 30 years old. Duke university is scratching its learned head, and may trump this latest Chicago play by electing a child evangelist to the chair of biology.

A friend of mine in Michigan tells me there is a movement on in that state to provide adequately for the insane. A great new building, with the very latest equipment and furnishings, is being erected by the state, to house 3,000 of the state's 10,000 insane. "As things now stand," remarks Miss Helen Whittemore of the school of journalism of the University of Michigan, "there is such a large waiting list that it's necessary to register your children at birth if you expect to have them accommodated in these institutions by the time they're of a suitable age for entrance."

New York has gone height mad again. In a grand battle of the architects for the honor of building the highest structure in the world, William Van Alen has won a temporary decision with his Chrysler building. He and H. Craig Severance, a former partner, each got a commission to build the highest building in the world. Severance designed the Bank of Manhattan company building, and made it 925 feet high, with the aid of a flagpole 50 feet tall. Van Alen waited until the Manhattan building was all covered at the top, and then sprung a surprise by hauling up a lattice thing-a-ma-jig, one hundred feet high, that he had had secretly fabricated out of steel bars and straps, down inside the tower of the still incomplete Chrysler building. This contraption shoves the Chrysler flagpole top 1,035 feet above the sidewalk, making it higher than the top of the Eiffel tower. Now Al Smith, head of the company that is tearing down the old Waldorf-Astoria hotel, announces that the new building to be erected on his site will go up 85 stories, to a record height of 1,100 feet, and not a word said about any fancy flagpole that may be rigged on top of that if necessary.

"Well," says my daughter, Mary, thoughtfully, "I'd know how to beat him, if I were Chrysler. I'd tie a toy balloon to a long string and fasten it to the top of my big, tall flagstaff!" And I'd like to know whether that isn't just as good architecture as some that people are getting paid for!

If those experts who are searching for 24 broken cable ends in mid-Atlantic succeed, they ought to be given a permanent job in New York finding the man who killed Arnold Rothstein.

Michigan Author's First Novel Much in Demand

On the same day her first novel appeared on the shelves of bookstores Miss Florence E. McClinchey of Central State Teachers college, author of "Joe Pete," received word from the publishers, Henry Holt & Co., that because of the demand for the book the second edition already had been started.

"Joe Pete" was written by Miss McClinchey over a period of three years. While writing the book the author spent some time at the University of Michigan, where she was a member of the Authors League.

Miss McClinchey's home is at Baile de Weasi on Sugar Island. The population of the island includes 500 Indians and about 20 white people.

Poems That Live

AN OLD TUNE

(After Gerard de Nerval)

There is an air for which I would die—
Mozart's, Rossini's, Weber's melodies—
A sweet sad air that languishes and sighs,
And keeps its secret charm for me alone.

When'er I hear that music vague and old,
Two hundred years are mist that rolls away;
The thirteenth Louis reigns, and I behold
A green land golden in the dying day.

An old red castle, strong with stony towers,
And windows gay with many-colored glass;
Wide plains, and rivers flowing among flowers,
That bathe the castle basement as they pass.

In antique weed, with dark eyes and gold hair,
A lady looks forth from her window high;
It may be that I knew and found her fair,
In some forgotten life, long time gone by.
—Andrew Long (1844-1912)

Band Music Plentiful In Zealand District

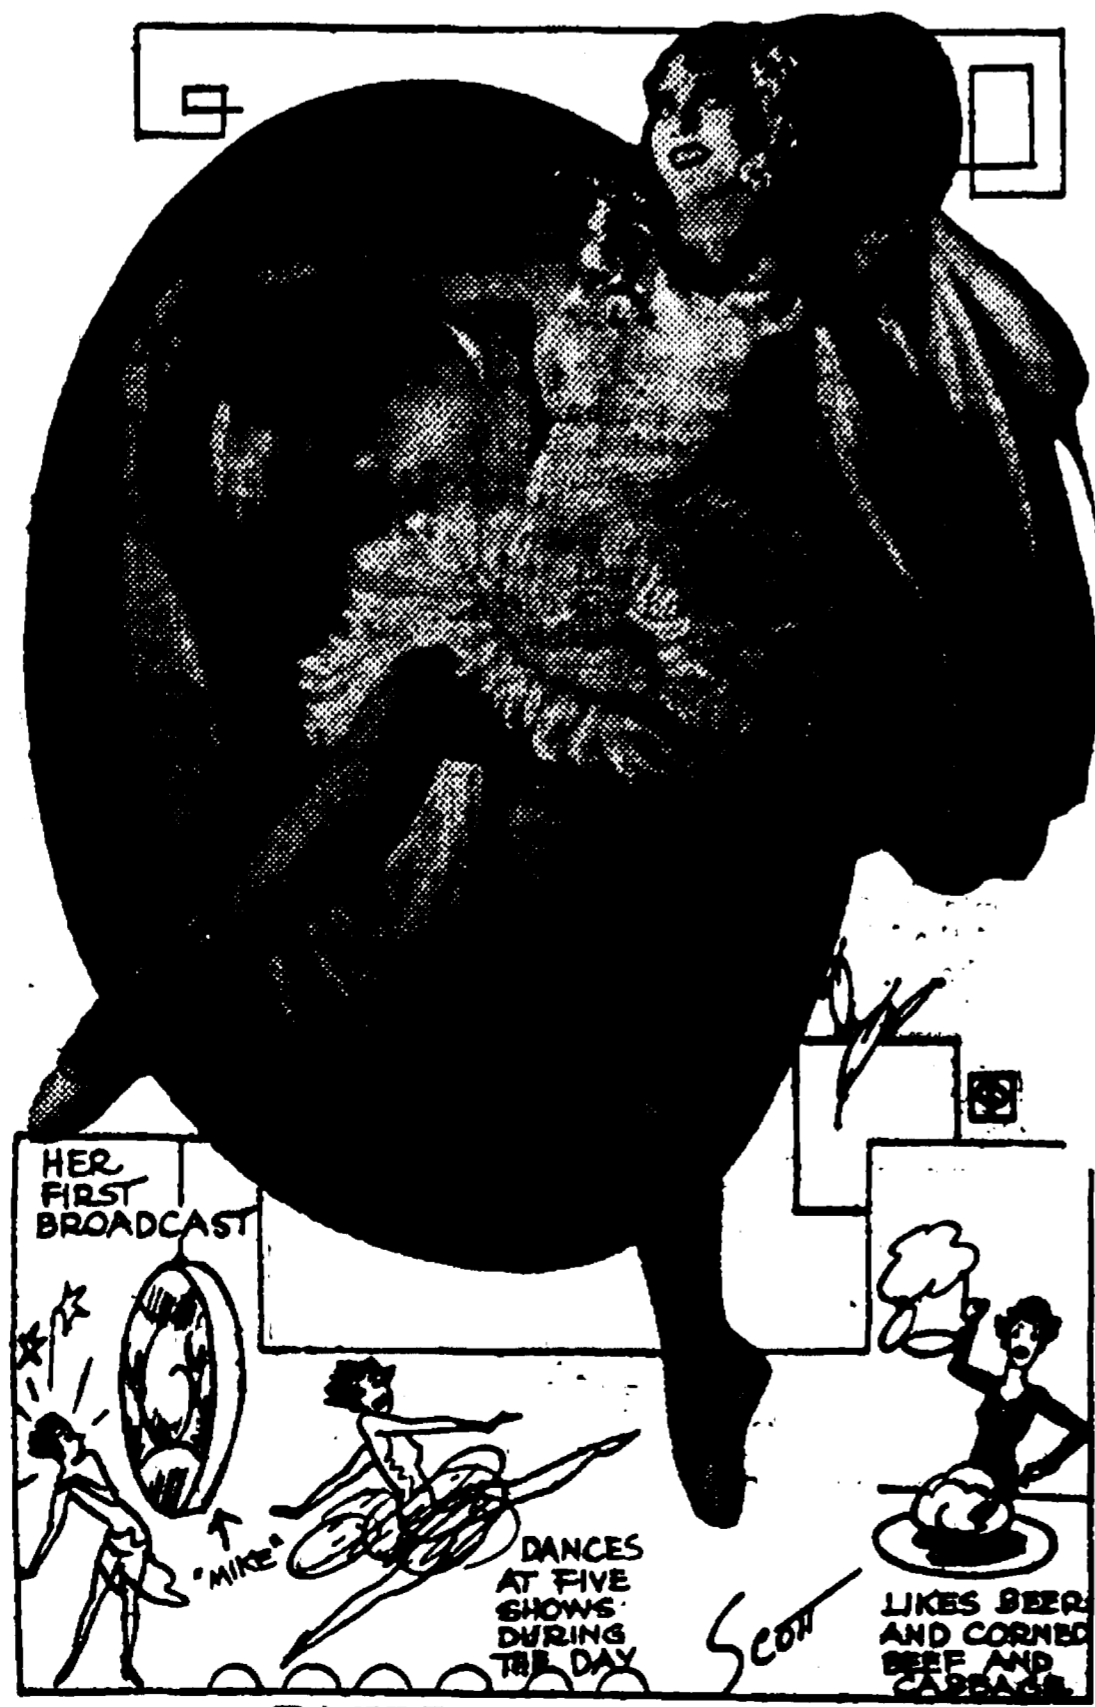

Zealand will have the privilege of calling for a band at nearly any time it needs in the near future, as organizations are being formed in Zealand and within a radius of five miles.

Borculo has organized a band under the leadership of Bert Brandt of Holland. Crisp already has a band that has passed the crucial period. Vriesland now is organizing a band under the leadership of R. Muller of Zealand.

The Zealand High School band is rapidly being developed by Muller. Zealand has two bands of its own, the Kids band, an organization composed of teen age boys, and the American Legion band. Both bands are under direction of Frank Rabbi, solo cornetist of the Elks band, Grand Rapids.

This menu is for six. Ordinary mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing may be used on the salad for luncheon if preferred.

Recipes

Cabbage and Apple Salad—Select good, tart eating apples, peel, cut into small cubes, and mix with finely chopped cabbage. You may use equal proportions of apple and cabbage, more apple, or more cabbage. The cream-salad dressing is made as follows: Beat one-half pint of thick whipping cream until stiff; add four and one-half tablespoons of lemon juice, two tablespoons of fresh-grated horseradish, a grating of onion, a few drops of tabasco, and salt to taste. These seasonings can be changed according to individual preference, but be sure there is enough dressing in proportion to the cabbage and apple. Just a dash of cayenne pepper may be used if you do not have tabasco. If the horseradish is in vinegar, use only two tablespoons of lemon. Half a pint of cream makes enough dressing for about three cups of apples and cabbage, which will serve six people. Mix the cream dressing with the apples and cabbage. Serve on lettuce.

Chocolate Pudding—Two-thirds cup light brown sugar, one-third cup flour, two squares chocolate, melted, three cups milk, one-eighth teaspoon salt, two eggs, well beaten, one teaspoon butter, one teaspoon vanilla, one-third cup nuts (these can be omitted). Thoroughly blend the sugar and flour. Add the chocolate and milk and cook in double boiler until thick and creamy. Stir frequently. Add the eggs and butter and cook for three minutes. Add the rest of the ingredients. Cool and chill.

SUGGESTIONS

Buttered Bread Crumbs
Dry bread should be used for buttered bread crumbs, ground not too fine in a food chopper. To each cup of crumbs allow one tablespoon of butter. Melt the butter over a slow flame and stir in the crumbs, stirring constantly until the fat is well distributed through the crumbs.

Cheese MASH

A little milk added to the water for making cornmeal mush is an improvement. After meal has been stirred in, add as much cheese as liked, cut up fine, and cook until done. This is good fried or eaten hot with butter.

WEXFORD PUTS BAN ON WARDS OF STATE

The Wexford county juvenile home will receive no more wards of the state until payment is received for those who are now at the home, Judge H. A. Snider of the probate and juvenile court, declared. He asserted the state had not paid since last August for the children for whom the county is now caring.

Because of the crowded condition of the state public school at Coldwater, the legislature appropriated $10,000 for the care of wards of the state in county homes. This act, according to Judge Snider, admitted the liability of the state for the care of all children committed to Coldwater, but not received because of lack of room.

The judge declared that it took many weeks to get children from the state public school after the state had approved the home where it was desired to take the child, and charged that managers of the home did not welcome an opportunity to place the state wards, even when the home had a waiting list.

Fly 2,646,966 Miles

Planes and pilots of National Air Transport flew a total of 2,646,966 miles in 1929, of which 1,270,668 miles, or approximately half the total, were flown at night. This is an increase of 400,000 miles over the 1928 mileage. National Air Transport is carrier of air mail and air express between New York, Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago, Kansas City and Oklahoma and Texas cities.

While N. A. T. planes were piling up this mileage during the last year they were carrying a cargo of 2,027,959 pounds of mail and 75,807 pounds of express, a total of 2,103,566 pounds. This is approximately 900,000 pounds more cargo than was carried by the company in 1928.

Vast Copper Deposits in Michigan Are Unexplored

Some idea of the unexplored regions of Michigan's copper country may be gained from recent reports of the U. S. Geological survey. It develops that the exploratory work being conducted by the Calumet & Hecla, Copper Range and other companies in the Michigan field is being carried on in one of the world's greatest unexplored areas. Over 8,000,000 pounds of copper has been mined from less than 10 per cent of the copper-bearing area.

In the early days of the district, mines were located on outcrops where copper was in evidence, or under ancient pits dug by prehistoric miners whose identity is wrapped in mystery. But less than 10 per cent of the copper-bearing area was thus exposed. Over 90 per cent was covered with overburden of varying depth. This has increased the difficulties of finding new deposits, complicated by irregular distribution of copper in the lodes.

The survey estimates capital expenditures in the district at $150,000,000. Twice as much has been paid out in dividends as the capital invested. Most of the capital expended has been put into developments which have paid nothing, the capital spent in developing profitable areas being comparatively small. Most of the deposits easy of discovery already have been found, but owing to the extent and depth of the ore-bearing beds, other ore shoots undoubtedly exist. One of the reasons more new mines have not been developed lies in the fact that none of the important amygdaloid veins is mineralized over more than a small part of the known extent. The copper is concentrated in shoots within the lodes.

The list of active mines in the district is small as compared with the number of idle properties. The latter, for the most part, were prospects or workings in process of development. Hope for the future, as far as these are concerned, lies largely in tendency toward consolidation and in the use of improved mining and metallurgical practice.

MOTORISTS WARNED OF NEW OHIO LAW

Warning Michigan motorists who are planning automobile trips into Ohio not to pass school busses stopped along the highway, Howard Brown, head of the legal department of the Detroit Automobile club, points out that a new law is in effect in Ohio requiring motorists to stop behind a school bus loading or discharging school children.

"Several Michigan tourists have been arrested for this," Mr. Brown said. "There is no such law in Michigan and the motorists of this state may be unaware of the existence of this new rule in Ohio. According to the law, an automobile must come to a stop within ten or more feet of the front or rear of any bus marked 'School Bus' that has stopped until the children have reached the side of the road safely.

Motorists violating this act are liable to fines not to exceed $100 or 30 days in jail, or both."

Salesmanship Class Instructs Agents to Sell P. R. R. Service

With the addition of air and motor coach service and the many advantages of the Pennsylvania railroad passenger service in general, salesmanship has become a subject of study and practice on the part of the St. Louis and Cincinnati division station agents.

The St. Louis division agents make the most of the opportunity afforded by the big T A T planes, which daily pass over the main line each way, to call attention to this feature. The regular stops on this division are St. Louis and Indianapolis, with a flag stop at Terre Haute.

Fast train service operating between New York, Cleveland and Chicago and Cincinnati is one of the talking points which impress prospective patrons. Realizing this, F. M. Ware, general passenger agent at Cincinnati, has organized a salesmanship class composed of ticket agents and clerks in that city.

It is an attempt to educate the men on Pennsylvania passenger service. Besides this, monthly instructions are sent out to the agents on the division emphasizing the points taken up in the class.

HOW FRANCE LOST UPPER PENINSULA

How France lost her upper peninsula empire and the lands around it is vividly recounted by Judge Charles H. Chapman of Sault Ste. Marie in the December National Republic of Washington.

Judge Chapman unfolds the way in which trivial things may influence the fate of a continent. In the latter decades of the 17th century, France was apparently the only European contender for the vast northwest, including the Great Lakes region. Then the governor of New France at Quebec confiscated the canoe cargoes of furs taken by two apparently insignificant Frenchmen in what is now the upper peninsula of Michigan and vicinity. It wasn't long before the English were dominant.

Radisson and Grosseliers, the despoiled fur traders, promptly went over to the English and aided materially in the founding of the Hudson Bay company. Their action changed the course of history, drove the French from their strongholds at Mackinac and Sault Ste. Marie, and paved the way for British domination in Canada.

The French government in Paris and Quebec tried to stave off the inevitable by the erection of a French post at Sault Ste. Marie. This structure referred to locally as the "old French fort" was erected on the banks of the St. Mary's river near the rapids in 1751 by the Chevalier de Repentigny and his soldiers and colonists. Some of the buildings were still standing when the upper peninsula had passed from British to American possession, and when General Hugh Brady came to Sault Ste. Marie in 1852 to build the fort since named for him.

The Sault Ste. Marie chamber of commerce and the Chippewa County Historical society, of which Judge Chapman is president, are in conjunction with the city of Sault Ste. Marie, placing a ten-ton boulder with a suitable bronze tablet on the site of de Repentigny's fort in Brady Field.

Schoolhouse 80 Years Old Is Now in Use

Loosened clapboards, shaken by the winter winds, offer monotonous freaks in the routine in the Beaver Dam school in Galien township as the pupils struggle through various interpretations of the "three R's," the same as the students of the pre-Civil war era did when the Beaver Dam school was referred to as "the new school" and was the pride of the community.

After more than 80 years of service, the school still stands as a relic of early education in Berrien county. Sixty years ago—back in the time when General Grant was President—the school was taught by Alvin T. Morley, sponsor of Michigan's optional free text book law and who is said to be the originator of the plan of grading pupils in Berrien county. Today, the school is taught by Morley's sister, Mrs. Eliza Kelley, Galien.

CURRENT COMMENT

The oil companies are still active here and are endeavoring to obtain leases on farms in this section. We understand that certain farmers have been offered as high as $80 per acre for leases. If the companies stick to their statement not to do any drilling until all the land is leased there is not much likelihood of any gunners being struck around here at least for there are many farmers who will not sign on the dotted line for various reasons of their own. Just what will eventually occur here is problematical.

Henderson, a Schreveport manufacturer, has been causing much commotion and publicity by his attacks on the chain stores broadcasted over the radio. His remarks drew only casual interest at first. As many regarded him as just another fanatic on account of the bitterness with which he attacked the chain stores. As his remarks began to soak in results followed, one of which is said to have been a falling off in volume of business done by chain stores. Big business which controls the chain store system began to take notice and a movement was started in the United States Senate to stop him from broadcasting not on the grounds that he was telling untruths but for the reason that he is said to have made use of profanity to emphasize his utterances. This is denied by many of those who tuned in as they claim the strongest oath he has used is "Gosh darn my buttons."

Governor Green has ordered the attorney general's office to find out why prosecuting attorneys and judges are not enforcing the Cuthbertson Act which provides that persons who sell liquor be given prison sentences. In a great many cases men who were arrested on charges on selling liquor were allowed to plead guilty to possession charges and escape with fines or short terms. Livingston county is not free of blame in this respect as

A STATEMENT OF OLDSMOBILE-VIKING POLICY for 1930

A message of interest to everyone who expects to buy a car this year.

AT THIS TIME, when the public is accustomed to look for changes in motor car design, it is only natural that Olds Motor Works should make an announcement concerning both its policy and its products for the coming year.

Olds Motor Works is pledged to a policy of progress—a policy that promises, in part . . . "Changes in design solely for the sake of progress—never for the sake of change alone."

This policy, as it applies to the two products of Olds Motor Works, is briefly . . .

. . . to give still greater value in the Oldsmobile Six, the Fine Car of Low Price . . .

. . . to provide, in the Viking, a modern 90-degree, V-type Eight of high quality, at medium price.

Certain changes have been made in Oldsmobile design. These changes are chiefly in the body of the car, although advancements have also been made in the chassis. In every case, the changes tend to add to Oldsmobile value, without affecting its fundamental design.

Naturally, no changes have been made in the great Viking Eight. The Viking is a new car—a thoroughly modern 90-degree V-type Eight, incorporating advancements in V-eight design that establish it as one of the outstanding engineering achievements of recent years.

Olds Motor Works is pledged in both Oldsmobile and Viking to four great responsibilities: to design progressively—to build faithfully—to sell honestly—to service sincerely.

Thus, while Olds Motor Works builds two cars, in two major price classes, each represents the most progressive engineering thought, the finest manufacturing practice, and the best value it is possible to give at the price.

Now is the time to see these cars . . . to compare them with the latest offerings of the industry . . . and to make your own decision on value.

STRIKE OIL IN INGHAM COUNTY

The first oil flow in Ingham county was struck shortly after midnight Thursday by a company operating on the Elmer Potter farm in Locke twp.

At a depth of 2,300 feet the drilling apparatus punctured a petroleum pocket and released a large amount of gas and oil. The oil came up with such great force that drilling tools were driven up more than 15 feet into the hole and the tiling around the curb was moved by the impact. The oil spouted three to four feet above the top of the casing.

Because drilling operators did not have sufficient equipment to care for the oil the flow was capped and message was sent to Muskegon for more apparatus with which to make extensive tests to determine the amount of this flow.

Land on which the well is located was leased from Mr. Potter by the Hillmur Oil Company of Lansing, headed by R. L. Hill as president, after Mr. Potter had discovered apparent oil indications on the farm.

Mr. Hill said Friday that he was not at all sure that his operators had struck an oil deposit, and that it would require two or three days of testing to reach a conclusion.

He said that he expected the apparatus would probably arrive Friday afternoon for the work. He pointed out that a central head would be installed and that water tests would be made.

The company has been working in the Potter farm since last October. Other officers of the company, in addition to Mr. Hill are Homer Murphy, vice president, and Fred L. Warner, sec'y-treas. The Potter farm is located five and a half miles northeast of Williamston.

Discovery of the oil in Ingham county came as no surprise to old timers in the locality. For many years coal mines operated at Williamston, and it is generally true that where there is coal there is oil. The Williamston mines were operated until a short time ago. Coal mines have also been operated in Grand Ledge, just west of Ingham county. Many farmers in this county have reported the discovery of oil traces on their land, and it is believed by many of the older residents that the county is rich in oil.

Three oil wells came in Thursday, January 16, in the Mt. Pleasant oil field on the holdings of the Pure Oil company. The records of the three wells are as follows: Gibson No. 6, reached the Dundee sand at 3,500 feet and reported a 250 barrel flow. Reems C-4 struck the Dundee at 3,490 feet and is producing a good flow, and the Destoop well drilled into the Dundee pay-sand at 3,535 feet with the unfinished well producing 150 barrels of oil.

Two wells, one the Thomas well south of the present Mt. Pleasant field, and the other Walker well, north of the proven territory, are both being watched closely by those interested in Central Michigan oil activities as the first reports a depth of 3,200 feet and the latter is said to be at a depth of 3,400 feet.
