ARE DOWN OVER 1000 FEET

The oil well on the Glennbrook farm south of town has now been drilled to a depth of over 1000 feet. At 11:00 P. M. Monday the measurement of the depth was 1020 feet. It is expected that the Dundee sand will be struck most any time now. The drill is now going through a species of earth that resembles red paint in appearance. Interest here is still great and it is not uncommon to find 50 people there at one time during the day. Drilling is continued day and night but owing to the large crowds which flocked there on Sunday no more drilling is being done on that day.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER BANQUET

The Congregational church was the scene of a most enjoyable affair last Wednesday evening, the occasion being the Mother and Daughter banquet which the King's Daughters sponsor annually. The dinner hall was beautifully decorated in pink and white, pink tulips and white lilies being used in profusion to carry out the color scheme suggestive of Mother's Day and the pink tapers were tied with white tulle. Following congregational singing of the Doxology led by Mrs. Earl Baughn. One hundred and fifteen mothers and daughters were served a sumptuous repast by fathers and sons who excelled as waiters. The guests then repaired to the auditorium where the president of the King's Daughters, Mrs. Phillip Sprout, graciously welcomed them and introduced the toastmaster, Mrs. Roy Smollett, who in an impressive way and delightful manner presented the program: Instrumental music, Mrs. Earl Baughn, the Mises Elly, Rita, and Charlotte Iseler; toast to mothers, Evelyn Graves; solo, Mrs. L. C. Rogers; solo "Daughter of Mine" Mrs. Earl Baughn, toast to the daughters, Mrs. M. E. Darrow; solo, Mrs. Clifford Van Horn; musical reading, Mrs. W. H. Meyer; impromptu remarks, Mrs. E. J. Berquist, Mrs. M. Lavey, and Mrs. H. H. Swarthout; violin solo, Miss Charlotte Iseler accompanied by Miss Elly Iseler; Mother's Day sketches, characters, Mother Green back, Miss Elly Iseler; her daughter, Virginia Baughn, Meagan Meyer; Mrs. Greenback's mother, Mrs. Earl Baughn.

The King's Daughters wish to express their sincere thanks to all who helped in any way to make the banquet a success.

WEEK OF MAY 25

The weather conditions at the end of last week and during the first part of this on the Pacific coast leads us to predict more or less quiet weather in Michigan for the very early part of the week of May 25th. However, this condition will not hold good by Tuesday, for these western activities will have reached the Great Lakes region at that time.

We do not look for a general warming up for any great length of time, at least, nor do we expect any great amount of rain or snow. Temperatures during the middle part of the week will be low for the season, so there is a probability that some of the rain will turn to snow, even at this late date.

Cold, disagreeable weather will continue in most parts of Michigan during the balance of the week, making farm conditions very unsatisfactory for putting in crops or taking care of those already planted.

June to Be a Dry Month

Fruit men with orchards of apples, pears, peaches, cherries and plums will want to cultivate the ground about the trees during the month of June in order to preserve the moisture which we believe will come during April and May. The month of June is expected to be dry, that is, precipitation will range below the seasonal normal.

The average range of the temperature for the month of June in Michigan is expected to be normal to somewhat below. On the whole, we believe the farmer will fare well for the month of the "flowering moon."

Plan "Detention House" For Federal Prisoners

Having all of the jails filled to capacity the federal government is now planning to erect in Detroit a "Detention House," which is a new name for a prison. Here would be housed all persons arrested by any governmental agency pending trial and also short term prisoners that are now being assigned to the Detroit house of correction or some Michigan county jail. The government is also planning a permanent penitentiary located at some point in Michigan.

CHATTY OF CAB

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "MONEY LOVE," "CALLY'S SHOULDER," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE SCENES," etc.

CHAPTER 57

Chatty's new position, she soon found, was a very responsible one, and demanded much more attention than did the phones in Mr. Van Nuys' office.

The firm was larger, to begin with. Three phone girls instead of one were required to do much more than merely make connections.

"You must learn the names of all the customers," her instructor told her, "and be able to say 'Yes, Mr. Jones,' or 'I'll find out for you, Mr. Smith.' Be pleasant to you, Mr. Smith is a great asset to you, and helps the office. Customers like to be recognized. It makes them feel important."

Chatty found herself occupied in a new way; learning to listen instead of talk; listening, not to see what she could find out to tell, but to memorize and be useful.

"It isn't enough just to tell Mr. Smith that whoever he wants isn't here. You must make an effort to find him." "Tell the customer you will try to locate the man he wants. Never leave his line more than thirty seconds without speaking to him; say 'I'm trying to locate Mr. Tolson, Mr. Smith.' Be pleasant. Have a smile in your voice. A good telephone girl makes friends for the firm. And if you are good at it, they'll pay you well!"

Chatty discovered that the senior girl on the telephone desk was paid eighteen hundred a year; not because she was any better operator than any other girl, but because of her tact, sympathy, understanding memory for names and attractive way of speaking.

Chatty made up her mind that she, too, would learn to be worth eighteen hundred a year.

It was not done without effort. Old habits are not broken off short without a protest.

A broken habit can ache like a broken bone. There was plenty of opportunity to gossip. Over the phone came all sorts of news; friendly news, gossipy news, scandalous news. Chatty had the impulse to discuss it with the other girls, to tell the interesting things she overheard.

But she did not. Nor did she commit the sin of "listening in" except for business purposes. It was very difficult, sometimes, not to do so, when Mr. Tolson called a woman on the phone, for instance. Chatty wanted very much to know whether it was business or not business. Mr. Tolson was married.

But she sternly repressed the desire. "I got into all the trouble I'm ever going to get in," she told herself. "I do no more listening, talking, chattering."

When the girls in the office came to her for information they received a smile and an "I'm sorry, I don't know, really."

They soon learned that the "new girl" was "not a talker." "You'll get small change out of Chatty," she heard one girl say to another. "She just doesn't—or won't—do anything!"

Chatty smiled, well pleased. It was not the reputation she had had, before.

Chatty was lonely. Billie married, was Billie extra sweet and kind—but George demanded much time and attention. Instead of seeing her almost every day, Chatty saw her once a week.

Winnie married, had gone to another city to live. Agnes called her up once a week to ask her how she was getting along. But Agnes, too, had her own interests, and there was no reason, reflected Chatty, why Agnes, who had been forgiving and kind, should make an intimate friend of her.

Her mother—oh, well, mothers are mothers! Dear and kind and sweet, but belonging to another generation, and not wholly understanding this one. Chatty could not open all her heart to her mother, as she might to heart full of the business of being a bride and establishing a new home.

Billie was full of news—of furniture and wall paper, rugs and wedding presents, George's manifold perfections. She was not—at least to Chatty's lonely heart—approachable with sorrowful, hungry for something she could not have.

It was not an easy time for Chatty. Had she not, deep down in her heart, possessed real character and real courage, she might easily have fallen a prey to some skillful wooer of the Bryant Dunning type.

She had many chances to "go out on a party." The bond salesmen here were no different from those elsewhere; many of them young, good looking, unattached, anxious for a good time, and with plenty of money to buy it.

But Chatty turned her back on all such offers. She saw more among those whose image could compare to that enshrined in black in her heart. And she would not again cheapen herself by trading kisses for dances, petting parties for a wild time, necking for liquor.

"No, thank you, I don't think I will," was her invariable answer to those who begged her to go on a joy ride, or an expedition to the Lollypop Inn.

She hated the very thought of the Lollypop. When George bought Billie a little car, and Billie in the kindness of her heart, asked Chatty if she would like to drive it, Chatty shuddered away from the idea.

"I never, never, never want to sit at the wheel again!" she cried. "Oh, Billie, suppose, suppose those had not been!"

She pointed to the scars on Billie's face—the scars that soon would no longer be scars.

"But they did! They won't show, after a while!" crowed Billie. "Chatty, don't get morbid!"

Chatty tried not to get morbid. But there was that in her heart which made it very difficult not to be.

Continual thinking of one subject, one unattainable desire, is apt to make anyone morbid.

David was never long out of Chatty's thoughts. She found his name, now and then, in the paper; he was elected president of the local chapter of bank clerks; he was elected a director of the bank; he was talked of as vice president of the Civic Association.

All these she clipped out and pasted in a secret little scrap book. One day, walking away the remains of her lunch hour, she saw his picture in a photographer's show window!

She looked guiltily, both ways, then stopped to examine it, her heart in her eyes. If she could only have one for her own!

But she did not try to buy one. She knew that the photographer might ask questions. To have David know that she had tried to buy his picture—that would, indeed, be the uttermost shame.

Ever day for nine days thereafter she went to the show case, to look at his picture.

After the ninth day it was gone. Another man's face was in its place. Chatty felt as if something lovely had been taken from her life.

Chatty's dress and facial make up underwent as drastic a change as her mental outlook. She used but a tiny bit of rouge, a little powder. The mascara she threw away. Her skirts were no longer shorter than the style. She bought quieter things.

"I'll be as much as I can what he used to like," she told herself. "It's all I can do for him."

Somehow, dressing to suit David made it a little easier to bear.

But then came a voice over the telephone which made it harder to bear; David's voice!

Chatty could have recognized it among a million. Habit is strong; having been taught to answer phone calls by names when possible she said, "Yes, Mr. Jordan, I'll find him for you," when he asked for Mr. Tolson.

"How do you know my name?" he shot back over the phone. Evidently he had not recognized her voice.

"Did I make a mistake?" she apologized. "I was quite sure—I'm sorry."

"No mistake. I'm Jordan. But I don't understand—" "This is Chatty," she answered, simply. "Here is Mr. Tolson now—"

Chatty cut out her key so she could not hear that tormenting, lovely, desired voice. Her hands trembled so that it was hard to make the next phone connection.

David now knew where she worked. And he had found it out without her meaning to tell him—it just happened that way. Would anything else happen? Inside of Chatty a queer little half hope formed. If he called up, might he not sometimes come to the office—on business?

As the slow days went by—they were slow, as lonely, heart aching days always are—Chatty became more slowly conscious of something happening around her that she didn't understand.

Her mother smiled a great deal, without any apparent cause. Once she laughed out loud over her sewing, and had no explanation to give when Chatty asked her what she found so funny.

Billie Mayhew—Billie Langenau that was—wore an odd look on her face, now and then. Chatty noted that she often brought David into the conversation.

"Have you seen Dave?" "I wonder what's become of Dave?" "I would like to see Dave again!" "Chatty had not seen him. She did not know what had become of him. That was all, but there was that curious look on Billie's face; a look as if she were listening; as if she expected something.

One day she met Agnes on the street. Agnes' first question was, "Have you seen David Jordan lately?"

"No," answered Chatty. "I never see him."

"Oh," said Agnes, and changed the subject. Chatty wondered.

But she stifled any curiosity with a heavy hand. Curiosity had been her undoing—that, and the desire to provoke curiosity on the part of others, and then satisfy it. It had cost her her lover, her happiness. It had almost cost her her life—Billie's life. She had lost her position through talk. She had been miserably unhappy through talk. Talk and chatter led her into a life in which, once thoroughly sunk, a girl never emerges—Chatty shuddered. She did, whenever she thought of Bryant Dunning.

Well, she wouldn't be curious now. But it was funny—mother's smiles, and Billie's look and Agnes' question—

Then, one day, Mr. David Jordan did come into the offices! He did not speak to her as he went in. Chatty's heart sank—he must have seen her. But on his way out, he stopped.

"I hope you are well," he began. His voice smiled, and his eyes were not unkind, but the mobile mouth was stern.

"Yes, thank you—" Suddenly, Chatty resolved to ask David something. She rose from her chair and left the desk. "I've just a second," she said, softly. "Please, Mr. Jordan. They know about me here. I'm not here under false pretenses. But don't—don't talk about me any more than you can help—"

"Why, Chatty?" The name apparently slipped out, for he bit his lip. "Do you think I would do anything to hurt you? Anyway, all that is as dead and forgotten as yesterday's newspaper. People don't remember things like that—I mean—"

"Thank you. I didn't think you'd talk—but I'm trying to make good. And so I thought I'd ask you—"

With a nod, Chatty went back to her ear phones. She made three wrong connections in as many minutes and her hands shook as if she had the ague.

He had spoken to her! He had called her "Chatty!" His eyes had smiled, if not his lips.

He had appeared hurt that she should imagine he would spill any of her past to her present employers.

He hadn't, then, utterly forgotten her—

Chatty got up again to look out of the window, just in time to see him enter a very smart car, and drive away.

Chatty sighed. "The old Pride of America is gone, of course." She thought, wistfully. "That's a much newer, prettier car. But I liked the old Pride of America—"

A mist of tears hid the street from view—tears for the days that were, and came not back; the most hopeless, painful of all tears. The tears of "it might have been."

That night she had another shock—and this not a pleasant one. It was her custom to walk home. Walking saved car fare, and the exercise was good for her. Besides, she didn't like to walk, and Chatty, these days, did many things she didn't like to do, largely because she didn't like to do them; it was part of her self-imposed penance.

Hardly was she out of the congested section and into quieter streets when a car swung into the curb ahead and a man jumped out and planted himself in front of her.

"Chatty!" cried Bryant Dunning. "Of all good luck! My girl of the wild parties! Gosh, I'm glad to see you! I'd kiss you right here if it wasn't so public! Jump in and we'll go for a spin and have a drink and eat up at the old place—who you say, eh, Chatty?"

Chatty looked at him in wonder. The handsome face was drawn, lined, dark circles under the eyes. His nose was pinched, was looking. Was this the handsome man she had been so crazy over? Could she ever have fallen for that slick hair, those made up cheeks, those loud clothes, that general air of sportiness?

"You look ill, Bryant," she answered. "What has happened?" "Ill, ill? Nonsense! I'm perfectly well. Too much booze, too much late hours—nothing else. Got a good job in Chi! Lots of money—"

He hauled out a big roll of bills. "Blow this all on you tonight." Chatty sighed, a sigh of relief that there was no temptation in his words. "Jump in, can't you? I want a drink and cats and a kiss—"

"But I do not!" answered Chatty. "I do not drink at all, any more. I do not go to the Lollypop, or other such places. And I do not want to be kissed!"

"Oho! Sets the wind in that quarter! The boy friend won't let you, eh?"

"There is no boy friend, Bryant," answered Chatty. "I've just—changed!"

"Well, I'll tell the world you have! However, there are plenty girls! If I can't find you, I know a lot I can. Guess Winnie will go..."

He lifted his hat, gave her a contemptuous look and left. Chatty was sensible enough to regard his contempt as a compliment.

She did not tell him Winnie was married. Chatty was not telling anything, these days—not anything at all.

"Let 'em find it out for themselves," was her motto. But she walked home with her feet on air; Bryant's looks and her repulsion were both milestones in her life.

"I've come a long way, since he kissed me," she thought, and there was much joy in it.

"You are late, Chatty!" accused her mother as she came in. But the words came with a smile.

"Mother, what are you smiling about so much, lately? Has anyone left you a fortune, or something?"

"No, but I just feel as if something pleasant was going to happen!"

"That's nice—" Chatty was vague. What pleasant could happen? She had a job. She was at peace with the world. But happy? Ah, no. There was no happiness for her—happiness was for the girl who married Dave—doubtless the girl she had been jealous of. Odd, she was so jealous now. The girl deserved him, of course. She hadn't lied and talked and gossiped and gotten into the newspapers—

Chatty was hardly seated at her phone board the next morning when a well-loved voice came over the wire. "Yes, Mr. Jordan?"

"Good morning, Chatty!" Her heart leaped. "Is—er—Mr. Tolson in?" "Not yet, Mr. Jordan."

"Thanks. Tell him to call me when he comes, please—" That was all. But it made Chatty happy for the whole morning. When she came back from lunch, a little box lay on her desk, marked with her name. Opening it, she found a small bunch of violets.

No card was in the box. It was like the flowers in the hospital, anonymous.

"Now, who can be sending me flowers?" wondered Chatty. "And—why?"

Tells How Russians Live Since the Revolution

How life is actually being lived in the new capital of Russia, Moscow, twelve years after the revolution, is told by William C. White in the May issue of "The Forum," in the first of a series of articles recording his observations over a period of three years spent in that great enigma to the outside world, the U. S. S. R.

According to Mr. White the greatest problem in the Russia capital today is overcrowding. From all over Russia people are gravitating to Moscow which has doubled its population in twelve years. Few families have more than one room to live in. However, despite the crowding and the short rations, he found that the workers, whether Bolsheviks or not, much prefer the new regime to the old.

Mr. White lived for some time in what had been one of the finest apartment houses in the city, housing some five hundred people. "Do you live like this in America?" Martousha, his cleaning woman asked when he moved in. "In your apartment there are six families besides your roommate. Counting the two children, there are six in my room. The Bogolubovs—husband, wife and mother—they have the best room, and new furniture. Next to you are the Krasovs. He had a wife, but he chased her out four months ago. He's a former White officer—the scamp! Then the Blitzmans. He's a Jew. In every apartment there's always a Jew and their dirty children. But he's rich. His wife always fights in the kitchen—says we take her kerosene or her soap or her hot water. Next to them are Adamov and his wife. He's a railroad conductor. And what his wife does when he's away is a shame! He belongs to the Party and works hard. Then beyond the kitchen are the Laptevs. He works in a factory. They have four children and the worst room. With you it makes twenty-five in the apartment."

And then the servants. Three of these families each have one. If you have a family, you must have a servant to look out for the children and to stand in line at the stores. They are pretty lucky—get fifteen rubles a month, and their Trade Union says they must have a month's holiday each year with pay. They sleep out in the corridor here."

And so, says the writer in "The Forum," lives most of Moscow—a family to a room; two thousand people finding shelter in a house which formerly held five hundred; each of the seven hundred rooms of this warren harboring one family. At four in the afternoon, seven housewives or their servants crowd in each kitchen, preparing seven kinds of soup with seven conflicting odors, while fourteen small children—or so it seems—clutter up the free space. On the stove, itself unheated, seven little "primus" kerosene stoves roar in flaming discord. Seven families in one apartment—seven families to fight over their turn at the bath.

The usual breakfast of the working classes, he found, consists of tea and black bread. At four after work they have soup, cabbage, potatoes and carrots. And tea again the evening. Any meat is usually put in the soup. However, occasionally someone has a party and everyone feasts. A distinct improvement over the old life is in rents which are very low, especially for factory workers. Also, the government is encouraging co-operative building, it runs free medical clinics, and, according to Marfousha, has a good divorce law.

THE STRUGGLING GOOSEBERRY "Do gooseberries have legs, grandma?" asked Johnny. "No, dear, of course not. But why do you ask me that?" "Well," said Johnny, looking with a troubled expression toward the gooseberry bush in grandmother's garden, "if they don't, I think I've swallowed a caterpillar."

COLLECT MORE THAN IS SPENT IN PROHIBITION

Some weeks ago a prohibition speaker gave some figures in regard to the cost of prohibition enforcement and the collections of fines and penalties, showing that approximately 3 dollars had been collected for every dollar expended. Some discussion was held as to the accuracy of the figures especially in the light of some figures in a pamphlet issued by the association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Rev. R. E. Sayles of the Baptist church decided to look into the matter and has received a copy of a letter written by Commissioner J. M. Doran in May 1929 in which he answered the question and from which the following extract is taken.

"During the nine years since the effective date of prohibition the expenditures for the prohibition bureau Coast Guard and Customs incident to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment total $141,178,485.00. The collections from fines and penalties and the revenue from taxes on distilled spirits and fermented liquors total $460,502,792.76. It is apparent that the collections by far overbalance the expenditures. Even if the $72,000,000 estimated in the pamphlet as the cost to the Department of Justice for the enforcement of prohibition should be added, there would still be a balance of $247,324,307.76 over and above the total expenditures accredited to the enforcement of the prohibition laws. During the fiscal year 1928 the expenditures amounted to $27,437,209.91; the collections $21,872,072.17, leaving the cost of enforcement $5,565,137.74. If the $9,000,000 estimated in the pamphlet as the cost to the Department of Justice for the enforcement of Prohibition be added the net cost would be $14,615,137.74."

BUYS KEARNEY PROPERTY

The property on Howell street which has been owned by the Kearney family for the past 60 years or more has been sold and Bernard Lynch, one of Pinckney's leading citizens, is its new owner. Mr. Lynch own considerable property surrounding it and this will give him a sizable tract. John Kearney lived there for many years and purchased it from the late Samuel Sykes in 1866. After his death his widow, Mrs. Margaret Kearney, continued to reside there until failing health forced her to make her home with her children in Iowa and Nebraska. Of late years it has been rented and is now in a bad state of repair. Its new owner says he intends to fix it up and rent it if he can find suitable tenants.

Glowing, hot as fire, with none of the objections of fire, electric heat comes to your kitchen as clean as sunlight. There is no burning fuel in the stove itself. All the dirt and soot are removed in the power house. There is no combustion in the kitchen. Therefore, there can be no products of combustion, no fumes or vapors to form deposits on walls and curtains—or to tarnish silver. Blackened, soot-laden pots and pans become a thing of the past. There are no flames, no matches!

Count these advantages that ELECTROCHEF brings: electric heat, as clean as sunlight; an all-white porcelain range, as easily cleaned as a piece of china; cooking speed, with focused radiant heat—snap the switch and start to cook!

Electric cooking retains a delicious flavor in foods—meats and vegetables cook to melting tenderness in their own juices—with all their natural flavors sealed in. To cook vegetables, the addition of very little water is necessary. Consistent baking of light, fine-grained cakes and flaky pastries with ELECTROCHEF will delight you! IT WORKS THE SAME WAY

Would you be content to drive a car without a gas guage and without a speedometer? Probably not. You would never be SURE about your gas supply, nor the progress you were making.

Financially, a Checking Account is the same to your money as a gas guage and same to your car. A glance at at your check book will tell you your exact financial condition at any time—and just what sort of progress you are making.

And don't you think it would be a good plan to equip yourself with this important accessory today.

SOLOMON TO HIS SON

"My son, never speak unkindly of chain stores.

"Never knock them, for God made them the same as He made fleas, lice, lugs, wasps, snakes, skunks, gossipers, egotists and all other unpleasant things.

"In His inscrutable wisdom He made them.

"Why He made them only He knows.

"Some day he may enlighten us.

"So, my son, speak not ill of chain stores, treat them as thou wouldst treat, fleas, lice, bugs, wasps, snakes, lunks, gossipers and egotists."

You'll Be Miles Ahead When You Equip with Firestone

Firestone Tires wear longer because every fibre of every cord is insulated with rubber, as a result of Gum-Dipping process.

This practically eliminates internal friction, the greatest enemy of long tire-life in ordinary tires.

Gum-Dipping, exclusively Firestone, increases the strength and flexibility of the tire.

Nevertheless, Firestone prices are the lowest in tire history.

That's why you'll be "Miles Ahead" when you equip your car with these wonderful tires. Come in today.

Work of Early Farmers Recognized

Styles in greatly increased fertilizer country, the type of nitrate United States service Bureau.

THE credit of the South is due to the programs which have been successful in raising our farm production. This is the Southern age, when about the soda in planters continually and one farm reports that he has been back to 1875.

As part of the 100th anniversary of the use of nitrate of soda in this country, recognition in the form of a distinctive award is to be conferred upon the farmer in each state who has used this fertilizer for the longest period of ize the practices which could be depended upon to assure the most economic production. At present, thousands of farmers are doing daily what only a few of the most enterprising did a half century ago."

Peggy O'Neill, Dainty Danseuse, Makes Favorite Spring Dessert

This charming young actress is the star of her culinary triumphs as of her success in "Follow Through." This is an orange tapioca cream she has just made for which recipe is given below.

THE flagging appetites of spring and early summer crave food with freshness and tang. And with plentiful supplies of delicious, healthful citrus fruits on hand there are a number of appetizing desserts which can be prepared quickly and economically. All these desserts supply the family with the tonic, refreshing citrus fruits. They have the wholesome, easily digested quick cooking tapioca as well as the eggs, milk or cream to make them as good for the three-year old as for the grown-ups. These desserts may be served in a large dish. An added touch of daintiness is given by service in individual sherbet glasses, garnished with sections of fresh fruit.

PROPOSE CONSTRUCTION OF NEW STATE HIGHWAY

M-92 Will Be Turned Over to County For Improvement If Recommendations Are Okayed.

The proposition of turning the stretch of M-92 trunk line highway running from the Washtenaw county line to the junction of that highway with the North Lake road about two miles northwest of Chelsea over to the county has been submitted to the state administrative board by the highway committee of that body.

This will probably result in the construction of a state road from the junction of the two highways northwest of Chelsea to Unadilla, an estimated distance of about 9 miles. The county in turn will improve M-92, $10,000 having been appropriated to start on the work of improving either the North Lake road or M-92 this year.

The recommendation of the highway committee to the administrative board clarifies the situation and will permit the county road commission to proceed with the improvement of M-92. At the hearing which the county road commission and a committee of local business men expect to have with the administrative board during the next few days, it is expected that they will give the information as to their plans in connection with the construction of the new highway to Unadilla.

Although the amount at the disposal of the road commission for expenditure on M-92 this year will not be adequate for improvement of a very long stretch of road, it is expected that enough money will be appropriated to finish the project within the next year or two.

It is the intention of the county authorities to preserve the natural beauty of M-92 through the hills northwest of Chelsea as much as possible in their construction work. However, the worst curves will be straightened to make the highway safer for travel, and motorists in this vicinity as well as through traffic will benefit by the improvement.—Chelsea Standard.

Early Substitutes for the Modern Toothbrush

Toothbrushes are quite a modern invention. In the Vernal Memoirs we are told that in 1649, Sir Ralph Verney was asked by a friend to inquire in Paris "for the little brushes for making cleane of the teeth, most covered with sylver, and some few with gold and sryver Twiste, together with some Pettits Bouettes (? Boltes) to put them in." There is another reference to these in a later volume of the Memoirs, as "teeth brushes."

"Turkish toothbrush" occurs in a list of "utensils" in the Museum Trade Catalogue in 1858. This was probably a stick of dragou root, which, in common with other roots, was used for that purpose down to the seventeenth century or even later. Not only the Romans, 2,000 years ago, but also our own Queen Elizabeth, used a rough cloth, wrapped round a stick or a finger for her teeth.—Weekly Scotsman.

Pioneer Fertilizer Mined on Barren Lands in Chile

Introduction to United States in 1830 Marked First Use of Commercial Fertilizer.

THE first hundred years in the use of commercial fertilizers can now be recorded in the agricultural history of the United States. The practice of using commercial nitrogen as a fertilizer was started in 1830 when the first shipment of nitrate of soda was brought to this country. Up to that time only lime and marl of the inorganic substances now commonly used for agricultural purposes were known to the early farmers. Used continuously since that time, nitrate of soda, or Chilean nitrate, as farmers commonly call it, is now recognized as the oldest of the present-day commercial fertilizers.

Although nitrate of soda has become a commonplace article on farms throughout the country, it is not generally known that one of the romances of modern civilization is woven around this fertilizer. It is a product of a barren desert, high in the Andes Mountains of northern Chile. There is no rain or vegetation in the entire nitrate zone, which occupies a region nearly as large as the combined area of New York and Pennsylvania. Not a blade of grass springs from the soil, beneath which is one of the most important fertilizing compounds known to Nature.

The nitrate ore is found at various depths below the surface, the average being about three feet. It varies in content from 5 to 70 per cent sodium nitrate. Open-cut mining is practiced in removing the ore, after which it is transported to a refining plant erected near by on the desert. The refining of the ore is an extremely technical process. The objective of the operations, however, is to remove the impurities from the ore and to concentrate the sodium nitrate so that when ready for shipment the fertilizer contains 98 to 99 per cent sodium nitrate and analyzes 15.5 per cent nitrogen. Iodine, which is also present in the ore, is a by-product of the refining process. Small quantities of this element are found in the fertilizer, as are also traces of boron and magnesium.

Conservative estimates by geologists and engineers in Chile indicate that the deposits are of sufficient size to supply the needs of the world for generations to come.

Red Letter Events Found in American Agriculture

1830—Nitrate of soda introduced into United States. In point of service, nitrate from Chile is exceeded only by lime and marl of the inorganic substances now used for farm purposes.

1842—Laves in England took out patent for making superphosphate. Since that time phosphate deposits have been discovered in our southern states and in Africa.

1860—Potash from German mines first utilized for farm purposes.

SINGLE SALE OF 102 OLDSMOBILES

A single retail sale of 102 Oldsmobiles involving a purchase price of more than $100,000 has just been received by Olds Motor Works. This is believed to be one of the largest single retail automobile transactions in the history of the automobile business.

The sale was made to the Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc., of New York City by the New York zone office of Olds Motor Works. It included 83 Oldsmobile two-door sedans, 15 standard coupes and four sport coupes. The check totalled $100,444, and a special train was used to ship this huge retail order to its destination.

The order for these 102 cars was obtained due to the exceptional record made by Oldsmobile in the exacting and grueling service of the Hertz Drivurself business, factory officials report. Automobiles in the "drive yourself" business are subjected to the hardest type of driving, being in the hands of different individuals whose one idea is to get where they want to go and return as quickly as possible. Cars to withstand this continuing usage must have unusual stamina and dependability and, in addition, must be comfortable and easy to drive in order to give satisfaction to the Hertz patrons.

This phase of the Oldsmobile performance record was amplified by D. G. Armstein, president of Hertz Drivurself Stations, Inc. of New York at the time of placing the order for the 102 Oldsmobiles. He said:

"You might be interested to know that this order is placed after a thorough test of your 1930 car in actual operation in our fleet. There are 2 factors entering into the placing of this additional order with you—i.e., the low operating cost and splendid performance, and, secondly, the satisfaction our patrons have expressed with the Oldsmobile. I am sure these two factors will lead to the placing of

MICHIGAN HAS 48 AIRPORTS, REPORT SHOWS

There is a total of 476 licensed and identified planes, 489 accredited pilots and 48 airports, intermediate and landing fields in Michigan, according to statistics just compiled by the Air Travel Division of the American Automobile club, with the aid of the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce.

"These figures," W. H. Bennett, head of the local branch of the automobile club, said, "clearly indicate the part Michigan is taking in the promotion of air travel, and show beyond a doubt that the state is on the air map of the nation."

The report also shows an increase in the number of miles flown by civil aeronautics. A total of 78,940,161 miles were flown by civil aircraft during the last six months of 1929 in air transport and miscellaneous operations, an increase of about twenty-five million miles over the same period in 1928.

In scheduled air transport operations for the last half of 1929, the report shows there were 15,941,161 miles flown, and as there were 15 fatal accidents, the mileage flown for each fatal accident was therefore 1,062,677.

Plans World Flight

An attempt to establish a new round-the-world record will be made about June 1 by John Henry Mears, who will use a Lockheed Vega plane, manufactured by the Detroit Aircraft Corporation. Mears plans to take delivery on the plane at the Lockheed factory at Los Angeles this week.

The proposed flight, starting at New York, aims to lower the world record of 21 days set by the Graf Zeppelin. With a pilot to be selected soon, Mears will attempt on his trip to fly across both the Atlantic and Pacific.

The terminals of the proposed route are Detroit and Sault Ste Marie. Buses will leave for both points each morning and make the run in eleven hours. The fare will be $11 per passenger. The proposed route would be by way of Flint, Cheboygan, St. Ignace and Mackinaw City.

"Thar's gold in them thar bills," muttered the collector as he started on his usual rounds the first of the month.

Stout in Merged Air Lines to Span Nation

An agreement has been reached whereby National Air Transport, Inc., becomes a part of United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, thus assuring establishment of the first unified air mail and passenger route across the United States.

Among the companies controlled by United, which is a holding company, are the Boeing Airplane Company, the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Company, the Chance Voight Corporation, Boeing Air Transport, Inc., Sikorsky Aviation Corporation and Stout Air Service, the latter of Detroit.

National Air Transport operates between New York and Chicago and from Chicago to Dallas, Texas, and other points in the middle west, carrying air mail, and has announced that passenger service over all its lines will begin this year.

Boeing Air Transport, one of the United subsidiaries, carries air mail from Chicago to San Francisco and also transports passengers. The acquisition of N. A. T. by United, thus will unify the transcontinental air mail line immediately and will provide a coast-to-coast passenger route as soon as this type of service has been established between New York and Chicago.

The statement was issued by Frederick B. Rentschler, president of the United, and Charles L. Lawrence, senior vice president of N. A. T. C. M. Meys is chairman of the executive committee of United. Mr. Rentschler is to become chairman of the board and president of National Air Transport.

The choruses to be organized will consist of local residents.

Hamtramck Has 56,283

Hamtramck has a population of 56,283 as of April 1, an increase of nearly 16 per cent over the 1920 census, Hazen J. Payette, census supervisor of the Twenty-first Michigan district, has announced.

Ten years ago Hamtramck, then a village, numbered 48,615, while Hamtramck township as a whole had 49,287 inhabitants. The 1920 population showed an increase of 1,266 per cent over the 1910 figure. Hamtramck was incorporated as a city in 1922.

Wayne Gets $813,889

Checks for the first installment of the refund of auto weight tax funds to Wayne county were mailed out by Frank D. Fitzgerald, business manager of the highway department. Of the $2,000,000 total, Wayne county is entitled to $813,889. Two other similar installments will be paid later in the year.

385 GRADE CROSSING EXAMINATIONS MADE DURING PAST YEAR

During the year 1929, 385 railroad grade crossings were eliminated on the federal-aid system, according to a report just issued by the Public Roads of the United States.

Forty-eight crossings were eliminated by the construction of grade separating bridges carrying the highway over or under the railroad; and 337 by relocation of the highway to avoid the railroad. Since 1917, the records of the bureau show, a total of 4,678 grade crossings have been weeded out of the system, 995 by grade separations and 3,681 by relocations.

Georgia heads the list with 82 eliminations in 1929. Alabama is second with 40; Texas reported 34 eliminations; Montana 27, and Mississippi, 18. Kansas and Washington each reported 15; Arkansas, South Carolina and Wisconsin each 12; Florida, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Wyoming each 10, and Minnesota and Virginia each weeded out 9.

Texas headed the list of eliminations by grade separations with 9; Kentucky is second with 6; Wisconsin reported 5; Montana, New York, Oklahoma and Oregon each reported 4; Connecticut, Missouri, South Carolina, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia and Wyoming each reported 5.

In the list of eliminations by relocation Georgia leads with 94; Alabama is second with 43; Texas reported 25; Montana 23; Mississippi, 17; Washington, 14; Kansas, 13; Arkansas, 11; Florida, 10, and Nebraska and South Carolina each 9.

Elimination of the grade crossings is regarded by the Bureau of Public Roads as the only positive means of reducing the heavy toll of human life taken annually at points where highways and railways cross.

The various protective devices, including gates and watchmen, though necessary until eliminations can be effected, do not afford adequate protection on heavily traveled roads, and are objectionable also because of their obstruction of the free movement of traffic on the highways.

Road Bulletin Warns Of Dangerous Places

The Michigan state highway department at Lansing has just issued a bulletin on Michigan state trunk lines and Federal highways, warning motorists of certain stretches under construction and giving information as to length, location and traveling conditions, as reported to headquarters.

Those intending to travel through the upper peninsula are informed that seven miles of construction is under way on US-2, between Pickford and the Soo, going being rough at the bridges, but in passable condition. M-137 is practically impassable while going is chancy on M-135. Stretches on M35 and M94 are impassable.

Warning regarding the several roads in the lower peninsula that are traveled most by local motorists is given as follows:

US-27—Ten miles good gravel route near Tekonsha, Calhoun county. Shoulders under construction north of Girard. Drive carefully. Temporary relocation between Mt. Pleasant and Clare. Route follows M-20 and county road, gravel narrow in places.

M-37—Under construction south of Hastings. Temporary route Hastings east five miles over M-79 then south to Bedford, all being over good gravel road.

M-43—Eleven and one-half miles temporary route around construction Sheridan to Stanton. Six miles under construction east of M-40. Can use US-12, Kalamazoo to Paw Paw, then M-40 to M-43.

M-60—Eleven miles fair earth temporary route between Union City and Mendon. Avoid if possible. Drive carefully through construction east of Concord in Jackson county.

M-78—Temporary route between Charlotte and Battle Creek via US-27 and county road, all good gravel, length 29 miles. Traffic for Bellevue should take county road west from Olivet. Temporary route Sturgis to Colon. East on US-112 for 5.7 miles, then north through Burr Oak to Colon over improved county road.

M-89—Drive carefully around construction west of Yorkville.

M-96—Shoulders under construction Galesburg to Calhoun county line. Drive carefully.

Baldwin Women Plant "Perpetual" Yule Tree

The Baldwin Woman's club, which joined with other civic organizations in sponsoring a community Christmas tree, took the lead in the planting of a live tree on the court house grounds. The action is a conservation measure, which will eliminate the cutting of a large evergreen each year.

Club leaders felt the organization was setting a poor example talking conservation and then cutting a tree each year to be illuminated a few nights and then be destroyed. R. J. Smith of the Lake County State bank furnished the seven-foot tree. The schools were closed and children marched in a body to the court house to take part in the program.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN PARK DIRECTING

The designation of 13 districts to facilitate the administration of Michigan's 65 state owned parks was announced recently by P. J. Hoffmaster, head of the parks division of the department of conservation at Lansing. The new district system became effective May 1.

Each district will be placed under the direct supervision of one of the park superintendents in that particular section of the state, who will be responsible to the headquarters offices at Lansing.

Districts 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 are in the west end of the upper peninsula, west of the Luce and Schoolcraft county lines. These districts are small, as there are few parks, and they are widely separated. The eastern end of the upper peninsula constitutes one district, and there are seven districts in the lower peninsula.

"Because of the rapidly increasing number of parks under our jurisdiction and the enormous annual increase in attendance our Lansing office has been swamped with detail work that can be more efficiently and effectively done by district separation," Mr. Hoffmaster said.

Cadillac Exchange Club Will Be Host At Soo Convention

The Cadillac Exchange club will be host to visiting clans from various parts of Michigan when the state convention meets in June at Sault Ste. Marie, which has no club.

Exchangeites of the state will take a boat ride from Detroit to the Soo in June and the local clubs will have charge of reception arrangements. Mayor Felix H. H. Flynn, W. L. Saunders and T. O. Huckle have been appointed a reception committee.

"And so," sighed the romantic one. "I suppose they lived happily ever after."
"Well, of course," the story teller resumed, "they eventually married."

PINCKNEY WINS GAME PLAYED IN FRIGID WEATHER

With winter weather conditions prevailing Pinckney won a ball game last Sunday on the Pinckney diamond from Dexter by a score of 11 to 2. Pinckney found Cushing who pitched for Dexter for 15 hits did not succeed in bunting them until the 6th. In this inning Kennedy, Brown, Miller and Richmond singled in succession and this combined with a base on balls and two Dexter errors gave the home team 5 runs. They got two more in the 7th when Brown and Miller hit safely and Cox scored both with a hit and another in the 8th on Moran's hit and Lee's double. Dexter's first run came in the 5th when Mulvaney was hit and scored on Newton's double. The second in the 7th on hits by Mulvaney and Newton and an error. The Pinckney team showed much improvement in fielding, only making 3 misplays. Despite the inclement weather a good crowd was present.

Mr. Collier was raised in Putnam township and enlisted when he was 20 years old. His elder brother died from war exposure. The family later lived in Pinckney and owned the residence now the property of E. B. Sorenson. For the past 30 years he has lived in Wayne. He built and drove the first automobile owned in Wayne and only ceased driving his own automobile 2 years ago. He was a familiar figure at Pinckney Home-Comings and usually was on the program for solos as he was an excellent singer.

Mrs. Harris died in 1895, during their residence in the village, and on July 31, 1905, Mr. Harris was united in marriage to Miss Maude Cottell. Faith bridges chasms wide
For resurrection's hope
Comes to the hearts of men
As empty was the place
In Joseph's garden tomb,
So in our hearts today
Faith occupies the room
Where doubt, and fear once ruled,
And death holds now no power;
Christ rose and we shall rise
In some sweet blessed hour.

PINCKNEY HIGH SCHOOL LOSSES TO HARTLAND 9 TO 8

In a game played here last Friday Pinckney High School lost to Hartland by a score of 9 to 8. Pinckney had all the better of it and led at the beginning of the 5th inning 6 to 2. In this inning the local team blew up and made 5 errors which together with two hits and a walk enabled Hartland to score 7 runs. Pinckney could not overcome this lead although they scored twice in their half of the 5th when J. Hall walked, Dinkel singled and Gorycz scored both with a hit. In the 7th Dinkel and Kennedy walked but were both out stealing second and Gorycz failed to hit.
