OIL STRUCK AT GENOA WELL SUNDAY MORNING

An oil pocket was struck at the oil well being drilled on the Elmer Larson farm in Genoa, three miles from Howell at 5 a. m. Sun. The oil which is said to be of a fairly good quality rose 120 feet in the pipe in one hour. Work was stopped at once and preparations made to receive oil if found in any great quantities. The depth of the Genoa well is 1120 feet. Work on the Glennbrook well 5 miles south of here which was stopped two weeks ago was resumed Monday noon. This well is now about 2000 feet deep and although several gas pockets have been struck no oil in paying quantities has been found.

MRS. WILLIAM H. PECK

Mrs. William H. Peck died at their home, 4147 Jackman Road, West Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 5th 1930 and was buried in St. Mary's cemetery, Pinckney, after Requiem High Mass at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Toledo, Aug. 8th.

Mary Elizabeth Kelly was the youngest of the nine children of the late Patrick Kelly, Clonmellon, Ireland, and Johannah Gorman, Mitchelstown, Ireland, and was born at their home near Pinckney, May 18th, 1878.

Mollie Kelly's life was passed near Pinckney and in Ann Arbor until her marriage to Mr. Peck, June 30th, 1913. She lived in Flint until 1921 and since then in Toledo. Her husband was employed as foreman varnish-maker in each city.

PLEASANT LAKE DANCE PAVILION DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire which is believed to have started from a cigarette tossed into an oil house completely destroyed the dance pavilion at Bartlett's beach, Pleasant lake, seven miles southeast of Jackson Sunday. It was discovered at 1:15 p. m. Saturday afternoon. The Leslie fire department and three companies from Jackson were called but could do little but prevent the spread of the flames. All equipment in the building including musical instruments owned by the orchestra were destroyed. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

THE SUMMER OF THE BIG DROUGHT

This has been the hottest and driest summer of the history of the state of Michigan. There has not been a single day in the last two months when the thermometer did not hit one hundred or better. No rain has fallen since May but brief sprinkles. Ohio and Indiana are in worse shape than Michigan as the date of the last rainfall there was March 15. Corn has burned up in the fields there, pasture has long since become a thing of the past. Milk cows are selling for $10.00 apiece and sheep are being given away. People there are able to pick baked apples from the trees, and dig baked potatoes from the ground, according to reports. Farmers with stock have been obliged to feed hay and grain for some time but at the present rate this will soon be exhausted.

Many reasons for this dry period have been given. Some say that the millions of radios tuning in set up atmospheric disturbances that stops rain. This is ridiculed by scientists who point out that in other sections where radio are just as numerous, there has been abundant rain.

It seems quite queer that only the central states are affected. Floods are reported from Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Murphy who have just returned from a trip through Canada and New England report an abundance of rain there. Quebec has experienced many heavy rains and the fields in Vermont and New Hampshire is as green as in early spring. According to the weather bureau this section is not liable to see much rain before next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Johnson and daughter of Brighton, Mrs. Harry Prindle and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Lantis of Webberville called at the Frank Johnson home Sunday evening.

PINCKNEY PLAYS HAMBURG HERE SUNDAY, AUGUST 17

Pinckney will meet the Hamburg team here Sunday, Aug. 17. Up to date Pinckney has won 2 games out of three from them. Two more games will be played. It is understood that Hamburg has engaged the services of a crack battery for the occasion and is coming prepared to win. In these two games the winner will take all. These Hamburg games are hard fought affairs and draw large crowds. They will start at 3:00 and Loren Bassett will umpire.

The following is the balance of Pinckney's schedule: Aug. 17, Hamburg here; Aug. 24, Hamburg there; Sept. 1, Dexter at St. Joseph's picnic at Dexter; Sept. 4, West Point Park at Howell Fair; Sept. 7, Plymouth here; Sept. 14, Potterville there; Sept. 21, Mich. Clay Products here; Sept. 28, Detroit House of Correction here; Oct. 2, Fowlerville Fair, opponent to be named later. Fifteen games have been played up-to-date of which 11 have been won 25 games were played last year and about the same number will be played this year.

ANN ARBOR POST OFFERS AID TO OBTAIN PENSIONS

On July 3, 1930, an amendment was made to the World War Veterans Act providing that any honorably discharged soldier who entered the service prior to November 11, 1918, and served ninety days or more during the World War, and who is or may hereafter be suffering from a twenty-five percent or more permanent disability shall be entitled to receive a disability allowance.

Graf-O'Hara post, Ann Arbor, Veterans of Foreign Wars, is assisting ex-service men in making applications for pensions.

Eligible veterans, whether or not they are members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post, are urged to apply immediately to William Pommerening, 601 Ann Arbor Trust Building, who has been appointed chairman by Harold Zulz, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Ann Arbor.

PINCKNEY BUSINESS MEN PLAY HOWELL THURSDAY

The Pinckney Business Men's baseball team will play Howell here Thursday at 6:00 p. m. Their game with Webberville there was postponed and will be played later. Although they lost their first two starts they determined to win and climb out of the cellar position. This will be a seven inning game and no admission will be charged. Next year Pinckney hopes to have a well organized team in this twilight league.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank Father Morning and all others who assisted in any way at the burial of Mrs. Mollie Kelly Peck. Your kindness is deeply appreciated.

WEEK OF AUGUST 17

Sunny days and star light nights will be the general rule for the first couple of days of the week beginning August 17th throughout most counties of Michigan.

About Tuesday we look for more or less decided storminess in the shape of sharp and severe electrical storms that will continue rather active throughout the middle of the week and up to about Thursday or Friday. With these storms we also are expecting some rather heavy summer rains.

The disturbing cause at the end of this week to stop a general period of fair weather will be a storm center that will probably come out of the southwest. We look for some heavy showers, but believe the big feature of this storm area will be strong winds of tornadoic characteristics.

Very shortly after the middle of the week the temperatures will backslide, resulting in some cool weather for a day or two. The last two days of the week should be more settled with fair weather in the greater part of the state, but there is a probability of this condition being upset.

May Build Own Bodies

Directors of the American Austin Car Company, Inc., are considering tentative plans for the erection of a plant in Butler, Pa., for the building of bodies. The proposed plant would employ 500 men. Bodies for the Austin cars are now being built by the Hayes Body Company of Grand Rapids.

The American Austin Automobile Company, Inc., built 1,388 cars at the Butler plant in June, according to C. A. Best, general sales manager. Schedule for July is expected to reach 3,000 cars and plans are being made to produce 5,000 in August. The daily production has reached an average of 125. The plant is using about 600 employees.

The Elephant Remembers

Best American Short Stories

By EDISON MARSHALL

One of O. Henry Memorial Award Selections

(Continued from Last Week) The night fire of a little band of elephant-catchers burned fitfully at the edge of the jungle. They were silent men, for they had lived long on the elephant trails. They smoked their cheroots, and waited for Ahmad Din to speak. "You have all heard?" he asked at last.

All but one of them nodded. Of course this did not count the most despised one of them all—old Langur Dass—who sat at the very edge of the shadow. His long hair was grey, and his youth had gone where the sun goes at evening. They scarcely addressed a word to him, or he to them. True, he knew the elephants, but was he not possessed of evil spirits?

Khusru had failed to catch White-Skin, but he has lived to tell many lies about it. He comes tonight. It was noticeable that Langur Dass, at the edge of the circle, pricked up his ears.

"It is right for pigs with the hearts of pigs to break their backs in labor. But you, my Muztagh! Jewel among elephants! King of the jungle! Thou art of the true breed! Moreover I am minded that thy heart and mine are one!" "Am I to desert my brother in his hour of need? Am I to see these brown pigs put chains around him, in the moment of his power? A king, falling to the place of a slave? Muztagh, we will see what can be done! Muztagh, my king, my pear, my pink baby, for whom I dug grass in the long ago! Thy Langur Dass is old, and his whole strength is not that of thy trunk, and men look at him as a worm in the grass. But hail! perhaps thou wilt find him an ally not to be despised!"

The night had just fallen, moist and heavy over the jungle, when Muztagh caught up with his herd. He found them in an open grassy glade, encircled by hills, and they were all wait-thing that reassured the old bulls as to his craft and wisdom. Just as a pugilist will invite a blow to draw his opponent within range, Muztagh pretended to leave his great shoulder exposed. The old bull failed to see the plot. He bore down, and Muztagh was ready with flashing tusk.

What happened thereafter occurred too quickly for the eyes of the elephants to follow. They saw the great bull go down and Muztagh stand lunging above him. And the battle was over.

The great leader, seriously hurt, backed away into the shadowed jungle. Three times the elephant salute crashed out into the jungle silence—the full-voiced salaam to a new king. Muztagh had come into his birthright. The keddah was built at last. It was a strong stockade, opening with great wings spreading out one hundred yards, and equipped with the great gate that lowered like a port-descent squarely toward the mouth of the keddah.

Firebrands waved, rifles cracked, the wild shout of beaters increased in volume. The men closed in, driving the beasts before them.

But there was one man that did not raise his voice. Through all the turmoil and pandemonium he crouched at the end of the stockade wing, tense and silent and alone. It was just old Langur Dass, named for a monkey and despised of men.

He was waiting for the instant that the herd would come thundering down the hill, in order to pass lighted firebrands to the bold men who held that corner. He was not certain that he could do the thing he had set out to do. Perhaps the herd would sweep past him, through the gates. If he did win, he would have to face alone the screaming, infuriated hillmen, whose knives were always ready to draw. But knives did not matter now. Langur Dass had only his own faith and his own creed, and no fear could make him betray them.

"Will I win, jungle gods?" a little gray man at the keddah wing was whispering to the forests. "Will I save you, great one that I knew in babyhood? Will you go down into chains before the night is done? Ah! I hear the thunder of your feet! The moment is almost here. And now—your last chance, Muztagh!"

"Close down, close down!" Ahmad Din was shouting to his beaters. "The thing is done in another moment. Hasten, pigs of the hills! Raise your voice! Now! Aihai!"

The herd was at the very wings of the stockade. They had halted an instant, milling, and the beaters increased their shouts. Only one of all the herd seemed to know the danger—Muztagh himself, and he had dropped from the front rank to the very rear. He stood with uplifted trunk, facing the approaching rows of beaters. And there seemed to be no break in the whole line. He turned, too, toward the mouth of the keddah.

But even as he turned, a brown figure darted toward him from the end of the wing. A voice known long ago was calling to him—a voice that penetrated high and clear above the babble of the beaters. "Muztagh!" it was crying. "Muztagh!"

But it was not the words that turned Muztagh. An elephant cannot understand words, except a few elemental sounds such as a horse or dog can learn. Rather it was the smell of the man, remembered from long ago, and the sound of his voice, never quite forgotten. For an elephant never forgets.

"More firebrands!" yelled the men who held that corner of the wing. "Firebrands! Where is Langur Dass?" But instead of firebrands that would have frightened beast and aided men, Langur Dass stepped out from behind a tree and beat at the heads of the right-wing guards with a bamboo cane that whistled and whacked and scattered them into panic—yelling all the while—"Muztagh! Oh my Muztagh! Here is an opening! Muztagh, come!"

And Muztagh did come—trumpeting—crashing like an avalanche, with Langur Dass hard after him, afraid, now that he had done the trick. And not on the trail of Langur Dass ran Ahmad Din, with his knife drawn, not meaning to let that prize be lost to him at less than the cost of the trickster's life.

But it was not written that the knife should ever enter the flesh of Langur Dass.

The elephant never forgets, and Muztagh was monarch of his breed. He turned back two paces, and struck with his trunk. Ahmad Din was knocked aside as the wind whips a straw.

For an instant elephant and man stood front to front. To the left of them the gates of the stockade dropped shut behind the herd. The elephant stood with trunk slightly lifted, for the moment motionless. The long-haired man who had saved him stood lifting upstretched arms.

It was such a scene as one might remember in an old legend, wherein beasts and men were brothers.

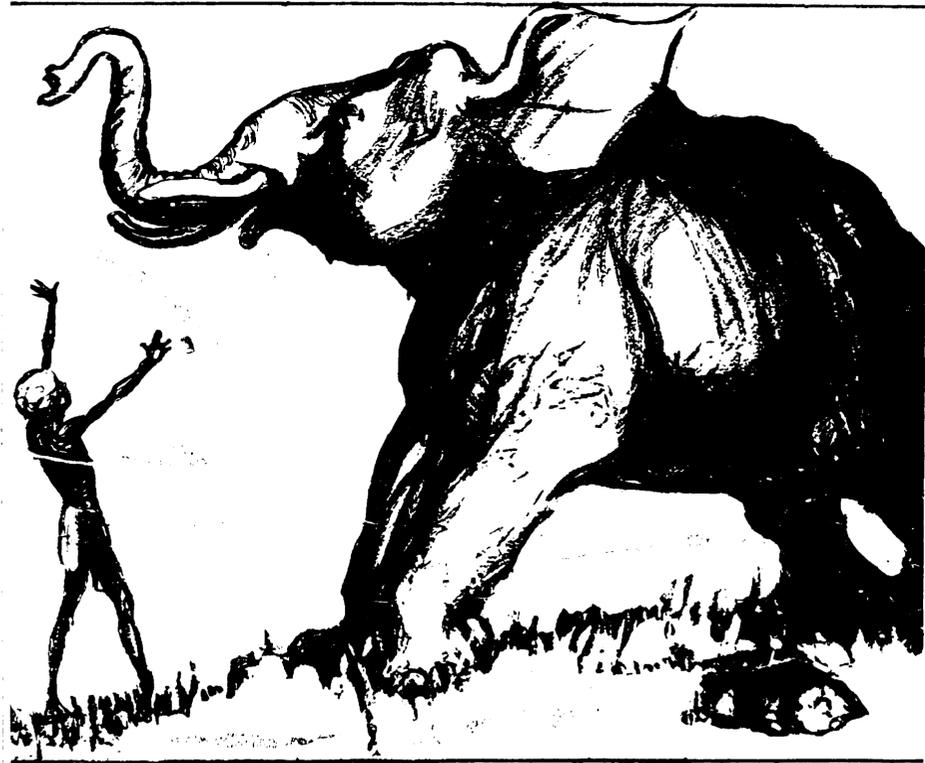

For Langur Dass was speaking to my lord the elephant: "Take me with thee, Muztagh! Monarch of the hills! Thou and I are not of the world of men, but of the jungle and the rain, the silence, and the cold touch of rivers. We are brothers, Muztagh. O beloved, wilt thou leave me here to die?"

The elephant seemed to know what and looked scornfully at the group of beaters bearing down on Langur Dass, murder shining no less from their knives than from their lighted eyes. "Take me," the old man pleaded; "thy herd is gone."

The elephant seemed to know what he was asking. He had lifted him to his great shoulders many times, in the last days of his captivity. And besides, his old love for Langur Dass had never been forgotten. It all returned, full and strong as ever. For an elephant never can forget.

It was not one of the man-herd that stood pleading before him. It was one of his own jungle people, just as deep in his heart, he had always known. So with one motion light as air, he swung him gently to his shoulder. The jungle, vast and mysterious and still, closed its gates behind them. (The End)

Anxious Wife: "Abie, have you done anything about that Black Hand letter?" Abie: "Oh, ain't I though. I turned it over to my insurance company. They got $20,000 tied up in market them worry."

For an instant elephant and man stood front to front

"Do you mean the white elephant of which the Manipur people tell so many lies?" he asked. "Do you, skilled catchers that you are, believe that such an elephant is still wild in the jungle?"

Ahmad Din scowled. "The Manipur people tell of him, but for once they tell the truth," was the reply. He is the greatest elephant, the richest prize, in all of Burma. Too many people have seen him to doubt it. I add my word to theirs, thou son of immorality!"

Langur Dass's face lit suddenly. "Then it could be none but Muztagh, escaped from Dugan Sahib fifteen years ago. That calf was also white. He was also overgrown for his years."

One of the trackers suddenly gasped. "Then that is why he spared Khusru!" he cried. "He remembered men."

The others nodded gravely. "They never forget," said Langur Dass.

"Tomorrow we will break camp. There can be no mistake this time. There must be no points overlooked. The chase will cost much, but it will return a hundredfold. Khusru says that at last the white one has started back toward his herd, so that all can be taken in the same keddah. And the white sahib that holds the license is not to know that White-Coat is in the herd at all."

The circle nodded again, and contracted toward the speaker. "We will hire beaters and drivers, the best that can be found. Tomorrow we will take the elephants and go."

"I have gone hungry many days," Langur Dass said. "If the drive is on, perhaps you will give your servant a place among the beaters."

The circle turned and started at him. It was one of the stories of Langur Dass that he never partook in the elephant hunts. Evidently poor living had broken his resolutions.

"You shall have your wish, if you know how to keep a closed mouth," Ahmad Din replied. "There are other hunting parties in the hills."

Langur Dass nodded. He was very adept indeed at keeping a closed mouth. It is one of the first lessons living had broken his resolutions.

For another long hour they sat and perfected their plans. Then they lay down by the fire together, and sleep dropped over them one by one. At last Langur Dass was left alone with his thoughts. Soon he got up and stole out into the velvet darkness. The mists were over the hills as always.

"Have I followed the tales of your greatness all these years for this?" he ing, silent, as he sped down the hills toward them. They had heard him coming a long way.

The old bull that led the herd, 70 years of age and at the pride of his wisdom and strength, scarred, yellow-tusked and noble past any elephant patriarch in the jungle, curled up his trunk when he saw him come. He knew very well what would happen. And because no one knows better than the jungle people what a good thing it is to take the offensive in all battles, and because it was fitting his place and dignity, he uttered the challenge himself.

The herd stood like heroic figures in stone for a long moment—until Muztagh had replied to the challenge.

Then the herd began to shift. The cows dug back with their calves, the bulls surged forward, and slowly they made a hollow ring, not greatly different from the pugilistic ring known to fight-fans. The calves began to squeal. Very slowly and grandly, with infinite dignity, Muztagh stamped into the circle. His tusks gleamed. His eyes glowed red. And those appraising old bulls in the ring knew that such an elephant had not been born since the time of their grandfathers. And knowing this, they threw their trunks in the air till they touched their foreheads and blared their full-voiced salute.

They gave it the same instant—as musicians strike the same note at their leader's signal. It was a perfect explosion of sound, a terrible blast that crashed out through the jungles and awakened every sleeping thing. The grand old leader stamped in the circle, seeming unconscious of the eyes upon him, battle scarred and old. Even if this fight were his last, he meant to preserve his dignity.

Again the salute sounded—shattering out like a thunderclap over the jungle. Then challenger and challenged closed.

The two bulls were quite evenly matched. The patriarch knew more of fighting, had learned more wiles, but he had neither the strength nor the agility of Muztagh.

All at once Muztagh went to his knees. But as might a tiger, he sprang aside in time to avoid a terrible tusk blow to his shoulder.

As the night drew to morning, the bulls began to see that the tide of the battle had turned. Youth was conquering—too mighty and agile to resist. The rushes of the patriarch were ever weaker. He still could inflict punishment, and the hides of both of them were terrible to see, but he was no longer able to take advantage of his openings. Then Muztagh did a

MRS. FRANK E. MONTAGUE

Death came to Lillian Jane Bullis Montague Friday evening, August 8, at her old home in Marion where she had lived forty-eight years. It brought relief from suffering that passed the bounds of human endurance. Internal cancer had ravaged her body for three years, and it had culminated in a condition of bodily weakness and emaciation so extreme as to appal family and friends. There are only a few times when the silent visitor brings relief from burdens that overwhelm the individual; but this was one of them.

Born in a log cabin, in Unadilla, May 7th, 1859, the final chapter of this significant life was written 71 years, 3 months and 1 day later, within fifteen miles of her birthplace. The Bullis homestead, where she first saw light, was carved out of the Michigan wilderness by her father, Charles Edward Bullis and her mother, Jane Carr Bullis. The farm was deeded to them over the signature of Martin VanBuren, and still remains in the family. In that pioneer home a family of seven children were born, six of whom grew to maturity, and played their parts in the building of the new neighborhoods that contributed their parts to the development of a new state. Lillian Jane Bullis was fourth in this line of sisters and brothers. The oldest sister, Sarah Bullis Wilson died more than a year ago. Charles E. Bullis and George D. Bullis, the two brothers; and Carlin Bullis Wasson and Mary Bullis Montague, the two sisters, still live within easy distance of one another.

In the spring of 1882 - May 3rd - Lillian Jane Bullis was married to Frank Edward Montague, a son of Alexander S. Montague, of Unadilla, and a brother of Judge Arthur A. Montague, Luke S. Montague, Louise Montague VanSyckel and Clara A. Chipman and Fitch Montague. Luke S. Montague, long distinguished attorney in Howell died years ago, and Fitch Montague, an older brother died more recently in his Unadilla home.

The union of these two pioneer families was thus made doubly close. Arthur A. Montague had married Mary Bullis several years earlier; thus two brothers were united to two sisters. The unique relationship which developed later from the two marriages attracted widespread attention. Dating from about 4 years after the wedding of Frank S. Montague and Lillian Jane Bullis the two young families began living in the same house, eating at the same board, attending the same church, welcoming the same friends, and tilling the fields. This striking example of concord continued unbroken for twenty-two years, at which time Arthur A. Montague became Judge of Probate and his duties took him and his family from the farm.

The wedding of Lillian Bullis at her childhood home was typical of the times and the country. Her young husband had bought a farm in Marion and early in the spring of 1882 he went there to put in the crops and prepare for the great event that was to come. Like other young couples, these two people shouldered a load of debt unflinchingly and fought their way through. Always their eyes were on the distant day when economic stresses would be over. They had been trained in a school of thinking which held that industry, intelligence and thrift were the bounden duties of men and women. They dared to look this rigorous philosophy of life squarely in the face and play the great game according to the rules set down. They were willing to pay whatever price might be demanded, provided they could maintain their integrity and self-respect. For a little more than forty-eight years this husband and wife together saw the winters pass into spring; the springs glow into summer; and the golden summers ripen into autumns.

In these full years they tasted the joys of accomplishment; of unbroken and perfect wedded happiness. To them one child was born, Mabel who is the wife of Reginald Shafer. This marriage, instead of separating the small family, brought it more closely together. The daughter and husband have been an unfailing source of comfort and strength with the passing years. Their son Charles Edward, is the only grandson of the deceased.

It would be impossible to sum up the life of any person in a few lines if it were not that every one must undergo many experiences common to all. Lillian Jane Bullis Montague lived in an era when men and women believed absolutely and completely in the homely virtues and wholesome maxims of a half-century ago. Her life is a fine example of those virtues, made human by a delightful disposition, and lightened by an optimism and courage that is given to few. She was extraordinarily blessed with the art of maintaining a vigilant interest in the affairs of youth. Age mellowed her sympathies, but never lessened her ready appreciation of the whimsicalities and exuberance of healthy-minded boys and girls. As a natural result she retained an influence over young people of which she was unconscious. Boys, now grown to maturity and girls that have reached womanhood, bring stories of times she mothered them and fed them and encouraged them, when the horizons of childish worlds looked cloudy. Through those she influenced, she will live and serve. The final spiritual qualities she radiated are not lost. She carried the torch and has passed it on. The life that Lillian Montague laid down, perhaps has only begun.

The interment was in the family lot in the Pinckney cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. J. Berquist, pastor of the Community Congregational church at Pinckney.

Advertisement for Senator Seymour H. Person. Text: 'Farmers Will You Vote for Fair Treatment for Yourselves? Vote for THE condition of farmers has grown steadily worse. Why? Because they have not had the same type of representation that other and better organized interests have had. In the Sixth Congressional District, farmers for years have returned a man to Congress who has been the tool of only one organization. This man has a one track mind, and the interests of the farmers have not even had a side-track. Grant Hudson has neglected the interests of the farmers because he has been the representative in Congress not of the welfare of his district but of a great political machine that cares nothing for the prosperity of the people so long as its paid votaries can live off the people who support it. Farmers, you have yourselves to blame for this condition. But you have it in your power to correct it. Send Senator Seymour H. Person to Congress in place of Grant Hudson. Senator Person has served you well and intelligently in the State House of Representatives and in the State Senate. You need his services where they will help on a national scale. Senator Person was born and raised on a farm a few miles north of Howell. He still owns a farm. He is a farmer who knows by his own experience the burdens the farmers are bearing. It is time you retired from Congress a representative who has only one idea and sent one of your own able representatives in his place. With the depression and condition of the country, you need a strong man who will devote his best efforts toward helping bring about a more prosperous period. Grant Hudson tells you that it is only in your minds. If you believe that then you should vote for him. But you farmers know better. Therefore, you should vote accordingly and send as your representative to Congress one who recognizes that you do need help. Will you help yourselves by voting for a man who has always helped you and only awaits your vote to help you again? Your answer - your only intelligent course - is to vote for Senator Person to replace Grant Hudson in Congress. The University of Michigan received $24,000 recently as part payment of two gifts to be used in carrying on educational projects. The full amount came from the general education board in New York City.

Of the total received, $20,000 will go toward work in compiling the early modern English dictionary, being done under the direction of Professor Charles Fries of the English department.

The remaining $14,000 represents the first of a series of payments which are to total $95,000 for the university's new elementary school. It will be used for research work in child development.

Poems That Live

THE INGLE-SIDE
It's rare to see the morning breeze
Like a bonfire frae the sea,
It's fair to see the burnie kiss
The lip o' the flowery lea;
An' fine it is on green hillsides,
Where hums the bonnie bee,
But rarer, fairer, finer, far,
Is the ingle-side for me.

Glens may be gilt wi' gowan's hair,
The birds may fill the trees;
An' laugh's hae a' the scented wa'rs,
The simmer-growth can gie;
But the canty hearth where crones
meet,
An' the darling o' our e'e,
That makes to us a warl' complete,
Oh, the ingle-side for me!

1930 Marks Passing of Jazz Age

By LUCY CLAIRE

This year of our Lord 1930, marks the passing of the jazz age. We have had to get accustomed to a big change, not only in our clothes, but in our habits, our thoughts, our amusements, our very postures. No longer can we "cute" or attractive sitting with one leg curled up under us, or with our feet twisted around the chair rungs; if we have adopted the new silhouette, as who has not? Dignity and grace go with the new clothes. There must be nothing careless or sloppy about them. Every part of the costume must be carefully co-ordinated; every line studied; every posture right; for our new silhouette is making very femininely particular ladies of us.

We learn there is a tendency toward trains on evening frocks, gowns; they will have to be called when they take to trains. These are not the long train, or anything quite so voluminous, but nevertheless a train that lies with grace and dignity on the floor, or is as gracefully and dignifiedly held up by the wearer. The most popular evening dresses, however, just touch or clear the floor. One can scarcely imagine the jazz-step dance in these costumes.

Express Dignity, Elegance

Simple, but expressing dignity and elegance is the evening costume sketched at the center. This is the type of gown chosen by debutantes for the London season in Santa Barbara. It is here shown in a pale pink satin, posed under a three-quarters coat of black lace, and worn with pastel pink kid shoes.

Again, take the costume at the left, which is a semi-formal afternoon frock—that is, it is not as formal as the Sunday night frock—yet it could easily go through the evening for informal evening affairs. It is in a brown and yellow design, and is worn with a natural straw-colored, transparent hat and beige clair kid shoes.

Less formal, yet with the same feeling of elegance and dignity, is the afternoon frock sketched at the right. This is in a tweed silk print, with brown and yellow on a beige ground, and is worn with the beige clair shoes and a small close-fitting beige hat. Note the circular borders pressed into flat pleats at the hemlines of skirt and peplum-like effect. Note, also, that the skirt hemline is even. The uneven hemline is passing with the lengthened skirt, though those watching fashion trends saw in it the forerunner of the long skirt some time ago, before skirts otherwise dropped down below the knee.

'M' EXPEDITION PREPARES FOR TRIP TO NORTH

The fourth University Greenland expedition, made possible by a grant of $5,000 by the Carnegie Foundation in Washington, is preparing to leave Ann Arbor within a month.

William S. Carlson, assistant aerologist of the third expedition, assisted by Max Demerest, sailed July 30 for northern Greenland, 7 degrees north of the Arctic circle, where he will spend a year maintaining a weather station at Upernivik. Carlson and Demerest sailed from North Sidney, Nova Scotia.

A second expedition, led by Evans S. Schmeling, will sail Aug. 13 from Philadelphia for southern Greenland where another weather station will be established.

Other balloon stations making weather observations will do similar work in Greenland. A party from the Norwegian Meteorological Institute at Oslo will co-operate with the University of Michigan scientists. Three balloon stations are being established by a party of 20 German scientists led by Dr. Alfred Wegener, and the British Air Route expedition led by Col. Watkins is also leaving for Greenland.

Editors from Abroad Pay Visit to U. of M.

Twenty of the European editors and publishers who have been guests in Detroit during the last few days visited the University of Michigan and expressed surprise at the size and completeness of the plant. They commented especially on the facilities provided for sports. The group, coming to Ann Arbor after visiting the Ford plant at Dearborn, were welcomed by Regent Junius F. Beal and were conducted through the Clemens library, the Lawyers club, the Michigan Union and the athletic plant.

Italian Beauty Wears Braids

One of the most beautiful girls in Italy, Signorina Fiamma del Greco, sailed from Los Angeles recently to join her father in Shanghai, China, where he is commanding Mussolini's naval forces in Chinese waters. The signorina wears her hair in waist-long braids, which made her an object of interest to her bobbed American sisters wherever she went.

CHILDREN SHOULD HELP WITH DISH WASHING

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

The girl of three or four begs you for the opportunity to stand on a chair and wash dishes. At the age of ten or twelve this same child will beg, weep big tears, or fly into a rage to keep from washing dishes. Why the difference?

The little child wishes to express herself. She wants to be big like her mother. She can best do so by performing some of the things her mother or other adults often do. When she is permitted to do so some of her longings have been satisfied.

The girl of ten or twelve also wishes to grow up but she has changed her notion about what a grown-up enjoys. She discovers that dish-washing is not considered by adults as a diversion, that dishes must be washed following meal after meal, day after day, and that dish-washing time is no respecter of a child's urge to play and do other things of greater momentary interest. She, moreover, comes to the conclusion that it requires no great amount of skill to wash and wipe dishes, and that her mother seems to set the child to washing them just to free herself to engage in other undertakings which call for more dexterity and wisdom and which her daughter is not contented able to perform.

Merely to wash dishes after every meal becomes to the girl no worthwhile achievement. She longs to be employed at things that count. Other girls tell her, too, of their dislike for dish-washing and the older members of the family often drop remarks which suggest this chore a drudgery.

But it is good for the education of this girl to do such jobs as she can do well; and, if her mother has no help, it would harm the child's growth of character not to share in some of these home duties.

Nevertheless, except in emergencies, it does not as a rule seem reasonable to assign all dish-washing to the child. Let her help or, better still, let her do them alone, say, in the evening. At any rate, there should be a regular time when she will always do them without being told. If there are other children let each also take his turn. Fights and quarrels will be fewer if each works alone. Group dish-washing by children does not insure "domestic tranquility," although it may help "provide for the common defense."

Gladys Glad on BEAUTY

America's Foremost Beauty

DO NOT USE FACE BRUSH, SAYS EXPERT

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

"Dear Miss Glad: I have a very oily skin. Some of my friends advise me to use a cream to cleanse my face. Others tell me that hot water, soap, and a complexion brush are more effective in cleansing an oily skin. Which cleansing method would you advise me to use?" ALMA D.

Blackheads accumulate more quickly on an excessively oily skin. Therefore, it is necessary that you employ a vigorous cleansing method, in order to remove the fatty obstructions that distend and clog the pores. Bland soap and water are generally the most effective in removing the grease and dust from an oily skin. The alkalinity of the soap is an advantage, as it helps to check the oiliness of the skin. The use of a complexion brush is too harsh a measure for the sensitive skin of the face. If the skin is abused and treated roughly, it grows thick and calloused to protect itself. A complexion brush should not be used on the face except when prescribed by a dermatologist. Hot water also is too harsh a treatment for the face. If you steam and scald the muscle fibres of your face with hot water, they will grow relaxed and flabby. Soft, tepid water, a rough face cloth, and a fine, bland soap are most beneficial in cleansing your type of skin.

"Dear Miss Glad: I have put into practice the instructions on make-up contained in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet, and am glad to say that my appearance has improved immensely. However, are there any rules to be followed in choosing the shade of lipstick one should use? I can't seem to find a shade that looks natural on my lips." DORA JAY'S

The most artistic make-up in the world can be ruined by the use of the wrong shade of lip rouge. There are several suggestions that may profitably be borne in mind when the tint for the lips is selected. The present trend in make-up is toward naturalness. Always select the most normal colorings, and avoid deep purples, brilliant reds, and mandarin shades. Your lipstick should blend with the shade of rouge you use. The light, yellowish reds are best, because they are the youthful tones, the reds of exuberant health. The dark, purplish shades are the tones which appear in an aging face, and should, therefore, be banned by any woman under 50.

"Dear Miss Glad: My fingernails are very brittle, and break off continually. For this reason, I find it very difficult to make my hands appear well groomed. How can I strengthen my nails?" MRS. FERBER.

Dry, brittle nails that crack and break off easily should be bathed in warmed olive oil. Massage the oil into the base of the nails nightly. This treatment will not only alleviate the brittleness of the nails, but will also do away with the necessity of cutting cuticles, and will mitigate any ridges on the nails.

The World and All

By CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

"EAT YOUR SPINACH!"

Yes, I have a small daughter who doesn't want to eat spinach, too. There are many other things she doesn't want to eat. In fact, it often seems that she doesn't care for anything that we are able to get for her dinners. But she is strong and healthy and rosy-cheeked. Watching her day in and day out, one finds that she eats plenty of almost everything.

She just likes to pretend that she doesn't like things. She gets more attention that way than she would get by setting down to matter-of-fact eating.

And that's the case with thousands of children. There is so much talk about the necessity of eating spinach and cereals and what-not, that the children see a chance to get a whole lot of attention out of refusing to eat these things. Thus they make themselves feel important. And we all like to feel important. We start early.

We had long suspected that our daughter was being spoiled by our too close and constant attention to her spinach. But now we know it. We have found it in a book. "Cultivating the Child's Appetite" is the title of a new book by Dr.

Charles Anderson Aldrich, of Chicago.

Dr. Aldrich puts the weight of long and scientific observation and experiment behind his statements and conclusions. What we had only surmised, he has proved.

And Dr. Aldrich makes the startling recommendation that parents quit badgering their children about the food they eat or do not eat. He even recommends that children be not compelled to eat food that they have a decided aversion for.

When you come to think about it, Dr. Aldrich may be right.

This wise physician has observed and recorded many cases of children who have been starved by parents who have been too solicitous about the calories and the vitamins, and have scolded the children at meals until meals become horrors to the children.

For many children, meal-time is a terrible time to look forward to. They know they'll be scolded, cajoled, coaxed and beaten, by way of making them eat plenty of the things that are good for them. And so the children get sick of meals and of food.

Well, Dr. Aldrich, our Patricia thanks you for writing that book. She eats her spinach now—if she wants to.

How to Use Glassware To Beautify the Home

With modern science restoring at last much of the beauty of the glassware of centuries ago when its manufacture was a precious art, a housewife can add to the loveliness of her home by buying inexpensive and lovely glassware, according to a writer in the current issue of Successful Farming.

An entire dinner table can be set in colorful shining glass of a clear cool green, rich amber, azure blue, golden topaz, and a delicate rose, advises the writer. Blue and green are particularly refreshing colors for summer tables, rose suggests apple blossoms, sweet peas and roses.

Amber and golden topaz blend well with any setting and reflect either sunshine or candlelight. This glass may be had with a delicate tracery of design or perfectly plain, and plates, for instance, may be round or square, or even eight-sided. One may buy a complete luncheon or dinner set, or better yet, it may be bought in open stock fashion. A handsome new ebony glass, plain or trimmed with fine gold line, is effective when combined with colored china or other glass in color or crystal. To combine crystal glass with black glass is the height of smartness. Interesting stemware of the moment are the square-footed glasses with amber, green, crystal or black bases, chubby, roundish tops, and etched. Of floral design, one of the most attractive is called the "mille-feuille" pattern. These designs in glass and goblet are always matched in the crystal glass tableware.

It isn't so much what you say. It's the number of people you can get to believe you.

STATE TO FIX UP 50 MILES OF ROAD

Improvement of about 50 miles of trunk line highway and construction of three bridges were authorized by the administrative board road committee. Contracts for 10 miles of concrete and one of the bridges were approved immediately.

The projects to be started at once are 3.2 miles of pavement on M-189 from U. S.-31 north of Benton Harbor in Berrien county and 6.8 miles on M-26 from Dollar bay to Lake Linden in Houghton county. The bridge for which contracts have been signed will span the Grand river at Grandville in Kent county. It will cost $145,000.

The committee also authorized grading and drainage work on M-69 in Iron county at a cost of $92,485.

Projects on which bids are asked include 6.7 miles of pavement on M-34 from U. S.-127 west in Lenawee county; 6.5 miles of gravel reconstruction on M-45 in Dickinson county; 5.5 miles of gravel reconstruction on M-28 near Kenton in Houghton county; 7 miles of grading and drainage work on U. S.-31 from Benzonia to Honor; 3.5 miles of reconstruction on M-28 in Chippewa county; a bridge crossing the Flint river, one mile north of Lapeer; a bridge crossing Hog creek two and a half miles west of Girard in Branch county; grading and drainage work for relocation of M-50 from Lake Odessa to U. S.-16, and grading and drainage work on M-43 from Sheridan south for nine miles.

Ludington Eagles Make Recreation Hall Award

Contract for construction of the new recreational center for members of Ludington aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, has been awarded to Frank Boerner of Ludington. Boerner's bid was $22,000.

Plans call for remodeling the present two-story building in the heart of the city and construction of an addition. Total outlay is expected to be near $30,000. New fixtures, furniture, plumbing and heating plant are to be provided.

The local aerie boasts the largest membership of any town of Ludington's size in Michigan and one of the largest in its class in the country. It is more than 500.

Makes Life Sweeter

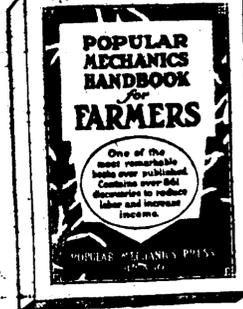

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should involve its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher laxatives often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

URGES PURCHASE OF LAKE FRONTAGE

Millions of dollars can be added annually to the tourist and resort income of Michigan by obtaining numerous strips of frontage for public use on many lakes and streams throughout the state, believes H. F. Harper, president of the Michigan division of thezaak Walton league. County supervisors would select the sites under the Harper plan.

Under this plan the public would gain legal access to many of the 5,000 lakes of the state through purchase of riparian holdings connected with public highways. Purchase of trout stream frontage in connection with consolidation of public hunting grounds in wild land territories is included in the plan.

State to Receive $40,000 Fire Fund from U. S.

Through helping itself in giving increased protection to its forests from fire, Michigan has gained an additional $40,000 from the federal government.

The Forest Fire Division of the Department of Conservation has been notified by the United States Forestry Service that an additional $40,000 has been granted this state for the year 1931, from the Clark-McNary forest fire protection fund. With the $80,000 already received annually from the federal government Michigan will receive $120,000 next year as a subsidy to the fund used to prevent and fight forest fires.

Crosby Hoar and A. G. Hamel, federal inspectors, examined conditions in Michigan this spring and at the same time surveyed the work and organization of the Forest Fire Division. Notification of the decision to increase Michigan's subsidy was the first notice the state received indicating the nature of their report to Washington headquarters.

Money granted by the federal government to states under the Clark-McNary act, is in proportion to the amount each state spends itself on forest fire prevention and control. In awarding money from this fund the federal authorities consider not only the money being spent by a particular state in protecting its own forests, but also the efficiency of the forest fire organization in that state.

The money allowed by the federal government may only be spent in preventative work, such as the building of fire lines, buying of equipment, forest fire prevention propaganda, etc.

Air Travel Gaining

Air transportation business is good according to officials of Stout Air Lines. Three of the largest cities in the middle west—Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago, are linked by passenger air service operated by Stout Lines, a division of United Aircraft and Transport Corporation, which have served this territory for more than three years. Stout planes not only have been well filled, but second sections are often required to take care of increasing demands for this type of transportation, according to Stanley E. Knausa, general manager.

Each month since November, 1929, the Stout lines have shown an increase over the preceding month in passengers carried and miles flown. For example, 869 passengers were carried the last week of June this year as compared to 726 passengers carried during the entire month of June, 1929. Mileage flown by pilots of the Stout Air Lines during the first six months of 1930 totaled 333,497 miles, which more than doubled the 157,999 miles flown the first six months of 1929.

Leads in Reforestation

Michigan, for many years the premier lumber producing state in the Union, in 1929 led all states in total acreage planted to forests. It restored 27,820 acres of denuded land to tree growth.

New York was second to Michigan in tree planting with 21,135 acres, and Louisiana third with 10,583 acres.

NEW SCIENTIFIC BULLETIN WILL AID INDUSTRIES

Another contribution to scientific literature, ultimately destined to be of great service to industry, has just been made public in the form of a research bulletin on "Formation and Properties of Boiler Scale," by Everett P. Partridge, assistant investigator in the department of engineering research at the University of Michigan and published by that department.

"Boiler Scale" is a term which means little to the average citizen but much to the engineer or industrial worker. As the term indicates, it is a formation on the water side of boiler tubes, consisting mainly of calcium and magnesium salts, and tends to lower the efficiency of boilers through loss of heat utilization and to render operation unsafe through overheating of boiler material. The formation of boiler scale, as the bulletin points out, has become an engineering problem of increasing importance with the enormous increase of pressures in modern boilers. James Watt's engine at the time of the American Revolution worked at a steam pressure of five or six pounds; by 1900 boiler pressures had risen to 200 pounds, while today, particularly in Europe, boilers are being installed which will operate at the pressure of 3,200 pounds per square inch.

Mr. Partridge's report, as is emphasized in the pages of the bulletin itself, does not pretend to offer a sure cure for this recognized evil. It discusses first the thermal effects of boiler scale, second, the constituents of the scales, third, its formation, and, finally, the various existing methods of preventing scale formation in boilers.

The bulletin is an outgrowth of research begun by Mr. Partridge in 1925 while holder of the Detroit Edison Fellowship in chemical engineering at the university.

University scientists believe that the bulletin is bound to have a distinct industrial as well as scientific value because it is perhaps the most exhaustive presentation of the entire subject which has yet been made, including as it does, both the results of Mr. Partridge's several years of research and an examination of both the theoretical and practical researches in the field which have been made by others.

Locks Serve 75 Years

This year marks the diamond anniversary of the commercial wedding of the lakes of Superior and Huron, the formal opening of the government-operated locks to conquer the rapids of St. Mary's river.

Three-quarters of a century ago the first state-operated lock was opened in the Sault, and since then 2,125,630,780 tons of freight have passed through the marine elevator from and to Lake Superior. Daily during the shipping season huge 600-foot steamers pass through the locks carrying fortunes in their holds. In 1855 some 14,000 tons of freight went through the locks. Last year the total was more than 92,000,000 tons.

Seek Oil in New Area North of Bay City Field

Actual work on the hunt for petroleum has started in the district north of Bay City. During the last week Pinconning business men have provided funds for leases and the erection of a derrick for oil drilling operations, which are vaguely described as being for "Saginaw parties" and which began this week.

The site is on the Michigan Central railroad just north of the village. Another derrick has been completed a mile and a half east of Pinconning, upon which drilling operations are to begin soon.

Petroleum prospecting inside the city limits of Lansing will be started soon by Dr. Samuel H. Watley if the city council approves the project. It was disclosed when petition for a permit was filed with the council. Dr. Watley, a former alderman, lives in the northern section of the city and he informed the council that geologists of three oil companies have surveyed the property and pronounced the prospects for locating of them as favorable.

The Muskegon firm of Gibson, Johnson & Borden, Inc., brought in the second well in the new Michigan pool on July 14 on the Lucius Cole basin, near the village of Leaton, about six miles north of Mt. Pleasant. The well flowed at the rate of 300 barrels a day from the Dundee formation at 3,650 feet.

Radio Industry Stalled

Following the recent period of price cutting and curtailed production in the radio industry, set manufacturers are now in a sounder position than at any time in the past twelve months, says a current survey of the Standard Statistics Company of New York. The survey continues in part:

"Prospects for the coming season are only moderately favorable, however, owing to the probability of a more restricted demand than prevailed during recent months under the stimulus of low prices. Producers who have maintained their position throughout the period of readjustment should, nevertheless, enjoy moderate profits from operations during the balance of 1930, and the outlook for 1931 indicates a resumption of the rapid growth witnessed immediately prior to the current recession in general business."

Autos Use More Metal

American Bureau of Metal Statistics estimates the use in 1929 of the principal non-ferrous metals in the automobile industry, and especially in automobile manufacture, at 35,000 tons of copper, 40,000 tons of zinc, 19,000 tons of tin, 18,000 tons of lead and 38,000 tons of aluminum, a total of 250,000 short tons.

This compares with 125,000 tons of copper used in 1928, 31,500 tons of zinc, 20,000 tons of tin, 17,000 tons of lead and 34,000 tons of aluminum, a total in 1928 of 227,500 short tons.

MOTOR BOATS ON INLAND LAKES MAY BE REGULATED

Following a ruling from the attorney general that the department of conservation has no authority to regulate in any way the operation of motor boats on inland lakes, the Oakland county board of supervisors has taken action on complaints of county residents by adopting an ordinance placing severe restrictions on the operation of motor boats on the inland lakes of that county. The signature of Governor Fred W. Green will be necessary to make the ordinance effective.

The department is constantly receiving complaints from property owners along these lakes, but according to the ruling only the county boards of supervisors because of the absence of state legislation, have authority to make regulations.

A week later he will attend a similar congress of botanists at Manchester, and he also expects to visit experiment stations in England, Scotland, France and Holland before returning to this country.

What Tire Economy Really Means

"Economy" doesn't mean buying cheap tires. True, you may save a dollar or two on first cost, but suppose a dealer does offer you tires at less than the price of the standard makes? It stands to reason that's all they are worth.

You can come in here, pay a fair price for a Staroline (no more than you would pay for any other reputable make) and get the quality product of the tire industry. When the "price buyer's" second set of tires is wearing out, you are still turning in cost cutting miles on your Starolines. Which buy is real economy?

If you are not already using Starolines, get acquainted with us; we can show you what "tire economy" really means.

PINCKNEY TRIMS FOWLERVILLE SUNDAY 14 TO 4

Pinckney took Fowlerville into camp Sunday by a score of 14 to 4. The visitors presented the same lineup they used at Howell Centennial July 4 with two exceptions, Proctor did not pitch and they had another shortstop, McCallum who beat Pinckney in the first game of the season 3 to 2 was no puzzle Sunday and was pounded for 17 hits. Moran breezed along and was found for ten scattered hits but at that two of the Fowlerville runs were scored on errors. Rayment got 4 hits for Pinckney and Cox and Vedder each 3. Fowlerville scored two runs in the first when Hart singled and scored on Atkin's triple, Atkins scored when Brown dropped Miller's throw. Pinckney batted in six runs in the second when Cox started it off with a long drive to right, Rayment hit over second base, Mulvaney took Brown's foul, Miller hit over short filling the bases. Tomion fled to center Hollis popped to short but Mulvaney ran into Rabbie and Cox scored, Beeman hit to the pond in deep center scoring 3 runs. Vedder singled to left scoring Beeman, Moran was safe on an error, Cox got his second hit of the inning but Moran was out when he overslid third. Result, 6 runs all scored after two men were out. Another came in the 3rd on hits by Rayment and Tomion and 4 in the 5th when Rayment was safe on a wild throw, Beeman and Miller singled, Rayment scoring. Brown scored on Tomion's sacrifice fly, Galligan was safe on an error. Beeman fouled out and Vedder cleaned the bases with a double. Fowlerville's last 2 runs came in the 6th on Hollis' error and singles by Hart and Mulvaney. These two teams will meet again at the Howell fair if Pinckney is lucky enough to get in the finals.

LIVINGSTON THE DAIRY COUNTY

The present status of the dairy industry is worth every dairy farmer's attention, as in every other business there are periods when changes take place. Many times these changes stand for improvements while occasionally it does not.

There are no comparable figures available, but as a result of the dairy survey made in the county this past spring, with the help of the dairy delegates and the rural school dairy census takers, most of them eighth grade students, some very startling figures have been secured.

Livingston county for years has been long known as a center for the purebred Holstein industry. Because of the change of markets and the decreased demand for purebreds the number now being bred no doubt is considerable less. If the dairy farmers of the county will continue to use good purebred sires, this condition will not become so serious. The bull survey last spring shows that 44.3 per cent of the sires being used in the county were either grade or scrubs. Allowing that a number of these are purebreds but not registered, there still will be too many "scrubs" used in order to keep up the high quality of dairy cattle that Livingston county has had a reputation of producing and should continue to produce.

This survey showed also that 75.6 per cent of all heifers and cows on the farms were grades. If they are good grades and mated with good record sires production records will be improved, otherwise there will be rapid degeneration.

Through the cooperation of the Dairy Dept. Michigan State College, the Ann Arbor K. R.; and the County Extension Service, a better sires train will be run through Livingston county this fall. A supply of good record sires reasonably priced will be available on this train. All farmers who are using grade bulls it is hoped will sell them before then and avail themselves of the opportunity of purchasing a purebred.

There are also a number of well bred sires in the county for sale that are available at reasonable prices. Farmers interested should get in touch with the County Agent's office.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT?

Some twenty-five years ago Anderson had a great base ball team. It was managed by Mike Roche and swept the country and up to Labor Day had not lost a game. Among the teams who had fallen before it was Chelsea. Chelsea at that time was red hot base ball team. A game was secured by them with Anderson and played at the Labor Day picnic at Dexter. The Central League of which Fort Wayne, Ind. was a member broke up about that time and several Chelsea fans among whom were Tom Mack, D. C. McClaren and Frank Leach hired the entire Fort Wayne team to replace the Chelsea team against Anderson. Doggy Miller, of Pittsburg pitcher, was the Fort Wayne mgr. The team came on the field at the last minute wearing Fort Wayne uniforms and to add a touch of comedy each sported a cheap cap given away by the Chelsea Stove works. Then followed a great game finally won by Fort Wayne 7 to 4. The Anderson lineup was as follows: Tom Dolan, c; Bill Monks, p; Cas Culhane, 1b; Malachi Roche, 2b; Gene Berry, 3b; Andy Roche, ss; Will Roche, lf; Mike Roche, cf; John McClear, rf; of these Dolan, Monks and Malachi Roche are dead, Culhane is in Colorado and Berry is a Detroit attorney. Is this 25 year ago incident about to be repeated in the Hamburg-Pinckney game Sunday.

IS SUPERVISOR OF DISTRICT NO. 7

The following article taken from a Holland paper is reprinted as it concerns Raymond McIntyre, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McIntyre of Howell, former Pinckney residents:

Holland is headquarters for the quarantine officers working on the corn borer quarantine on district No. 7, under the supervision of R. J. McIntyre, Government agent.

The U. S. department of Agriculture, Plant Quarantine and Administration control is stationing men at every port along Lake Michigan for the purpose of intercepting all corn thus preventing any infested corn from being carried interstate to destinations outside quarantine area. This entire state of Michigan is quarantined. Every effort is being made to keep the infestation from being carried into Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and controlling same in Michigan.

R. J. McIntyre, government representative for district 7, will use Holland as his headquarters and his area extends to Benton Harbor, south and Whitehall, north.

The inspector who is stationed at the Holland dock will be Estle White, of Lansing. The inspectors are courteous while performing their duties and would appreciate all cooperation.

CURRENT COMMENT

We note that many prospective candidates for office are advocating pensions. These come in two classes. Soldier's pensions and old age pensions. We have had soldier's pensions from time immemorial and probably always will have them. The government is still paying pensions to the widows of veterans of 1812. The prospects of reducing the pensions lists were bright until the advent of the World War. This filled the lists to overflowing again. Many pension offices that had been closed up for lack of business were reopened. The old age pension is a new issue here, although it has been in effect in England for some time. It means paying a man past 60 years who is penniless, sufficient for him to live on. It has been advocated for some time and has been made a part of the platform of Senator Seymour Person who is opposing Hon. Grant Hudson in the primaries. It is a safe bet that it will be some time before this issue becomes a law as big business is against all pension bills and will be able to bear enough pressure to bring about a presidential veto as was the case in the bills passed during the Coolidge and Hoover administrations. Enough enthusiasm may develop to pass it over the presidents veto but all bills so passed up-to-date have been compromises. So this issue will probably be a political football for some time.

During the past six months there has been a tremendous increase in crime. This has caused extra effort on the part of law enforcement officers in some counties. It is interesting to compare the reports of the law enforcing officers of Washtenaw county where a drive has been made on crime during the last six months with reports from Livingston county. This is taken from the reports of the prosecutors of Washtenaw and Livingston counties. Of course the comparison is unequal as Washtenaw has about 3 times the population of Livingston. The following is the Washtenaw report. This is from Jan. 1, 1930 to June 30, 1930:

No. of prosecutions	738
Convictions	641
This is an increase of 481 over a year ago.
Sentenced to prison	87
Drunkness	16
Disorderly	44
Motor Vehicle Violation	202
Prohibition law violation	87
The rest of the offences cover a wide range and are from bribery to selling cigarettes to minors.
The Livingston county report is as follows:
Prosecutions	195
Motor Vehicle Violations	104
Game law violations	7
Drunk and disorderly	30
Violation of Prohibition law	14
Of these 14, 9 were convicted and 5 nolle prossed under the Cuthbertson law.
Sentenced to prison	4
