Pinckney Independents Win and Lose

Defeat Howell 18 to 16 But Lose to Lansing Team 51 to 59

In the most interesting game played on the local floor this year, the Pinckney Independents nosed out a victory over the Howell Presbyterian church team last Wednesday evening by a score of 18 to 16. The Howell team got the jump on Pinckney and had all the better of the going the first three quarters leading at the first period 8 to 3, at the half 10 to 7 and at the third period 10 to 11. Swarthout was closely guarded and only scored 2 points in the first three quarters. Lefty Reason had a good night & rang up 11 points which kept Pinckney in the running. In the last half Pinckney made a strong comeback and held Howell to 2 points. Reason sunk two baskets and as a result Pinckney went into the final stretch but a single point behind. Swarthout broke through the Howell defense and sunk a goal putting Pinckney in the lead. Harold Thompson goaled and again Howell was ahead. Reason got a field goal again putting Pinckney in the lead. A free throw which Reason made good increased this lead to 2 points. Harold Thompson made a goal for Howell and again the score was knotted. With but a few seconds to go Swarthout sunk a goal from the 40 foot line and the game ended. The game was fast and furious from start to finish and there was not a dull moment in it.

Pinckney — R. E. — H. Thompson
Reason — L. F. — D. Fournier
Swarthout — C. — Wiltze
Hall — R. G. — Cook
Bourbonnais — L. G. — F. Thompson

Field goals — Reason 5, Swarthout 3, H. Thompson 2, Fournier 4, Wiltze 1. Foul goals — Reason 1, Carr 1, Fournier 1, F. Thompson 1. Fouls — Pinckney 7, Howell 6. Referee — Doyle and Wood.

Saturday night Pinckney was defeated by the Lansing Baptist church team of Lansing in the highest scoring game ever played on the local floor. Pinckney scored 51 points but all to no avail as their opponents scored 59. Lansing owed their success chiefly to her husky forward, Bill Brokaw, who ran up 37 points himself and broke the local floor scoring record. He threw field goals from any and all angles and from any place on the floor. Swarthout and Reason also had a good night and scored 23 and 20 points respectively. Har Hall got four and Norm Miller 4. As a result Pinckney kept right up to them and only finished a few points behind. This was probably the fastest game ever played and the highest score ever attained by Pinckney.

Pinckney — R. E. — Rufus
Reason — L. P. — Brokaw
Carr — C. — Drake
Hall — R. G. — Wright
Bourbonnais — L. G. — Compson

Substitutions — Pinckney, N. Miller for Bourbonnais, Lansing, Hartley for Rufus, Wise for Compson. Field goals — Reason 8, Swarthout 11, Hall 2, Miller 2, Lansing — Brokaw 18, Hartley 5, Drake 6. Foul goals — Reason 4, Swarthout 1, Brokaw 1, F. Thompson 1, Lansing 5. Referee — Alexander.

Livingston County Boys Are Sentenced

Boeck and Massman Get Terms in Ionia, Van Buren Fined $50. Jacobs Turned Over To Juvenile Court.

Edward Boeck of Howell and Harry Massman of Pinckney pled guilty to larceny from a building before Judge Sample of Ann Arbor and were sentenced. Boeck was given 6 months to 1 year in Ionia and Massman one year to five in the same place. Harvey VanBuren of Howell pled guilty to the same charge and was placed on probation for five years and fined $50. Russell Jacobs, age 16 years, was turned over to the Juvenile court when he pled guilty to larceny.

These four boys have been staying with Mr. and Mrs. George Erymichuk who moved from the Sam Schultz farm near North Lake to the Jack Walsh house, three miles east of Pinckney about six weeks ago. New Years eve the car of Rex Harris broke down and he left it by the roadside when he returned next morning he found it had been stripped of tires and other parts. While Harris was at the oil station of Lee Lavey the following afternoon, a car drove in with the missing parts in it. Harris notified the sheriff and the two boys in the car who proved to be Boeck and Jacobs were captured after a three mile chase. They were held at the Livingston County jail for a time and both were released. Jacobs was placed on probation and Boeck has been on probation since last summer on a liquor violation charge. The Erymichuk home was searched and a large number of articles were found. A number of them were identified as having been taken from the Jacob Judson farm house in Dexter township. Judson swore out a warrant for Boeck and Jacobs and they were arrested and lodged in the Ann Arbor jail. As a result of information given by them Massman, VanBuren and Erymichuk were also arrested and their sentences followed. Once more in the case of the Straub bootlegging case, Livingston thanks Washenaw for assisting her to enforce the law.

The following telegram was received by the Livingston County Red Cross and the quota has been accepted by the officers:

Greatly increased demands during the last ten days have made imperative an immediate campaign for Red Cross relief fund to meet the emergency situation in parts of the twenty-one drought stricken areas.

A minimum of ten million dollars to prevent untold suffering and actual starvation of thousands of families. Pollution of water supply, caused by dying cattle added to the winters hardships in some sections. President Hoover in proclamation, tomorrow, will urge immediate and generous response.

We are confident that your people will not fail to meet their share in this humanitarian need but because of general conditions we desire to impress you of the necessity for a most vigorous campaign.

Success of our efforts will be regarded as a test of Red Cross by the President and the entire nation and we must not fail. Your Chapter quota is $400.00.

Contributions to each township may be sent to the Red Cross Chairman there. In Pinckney Miss Nellie Gardner will receive them.

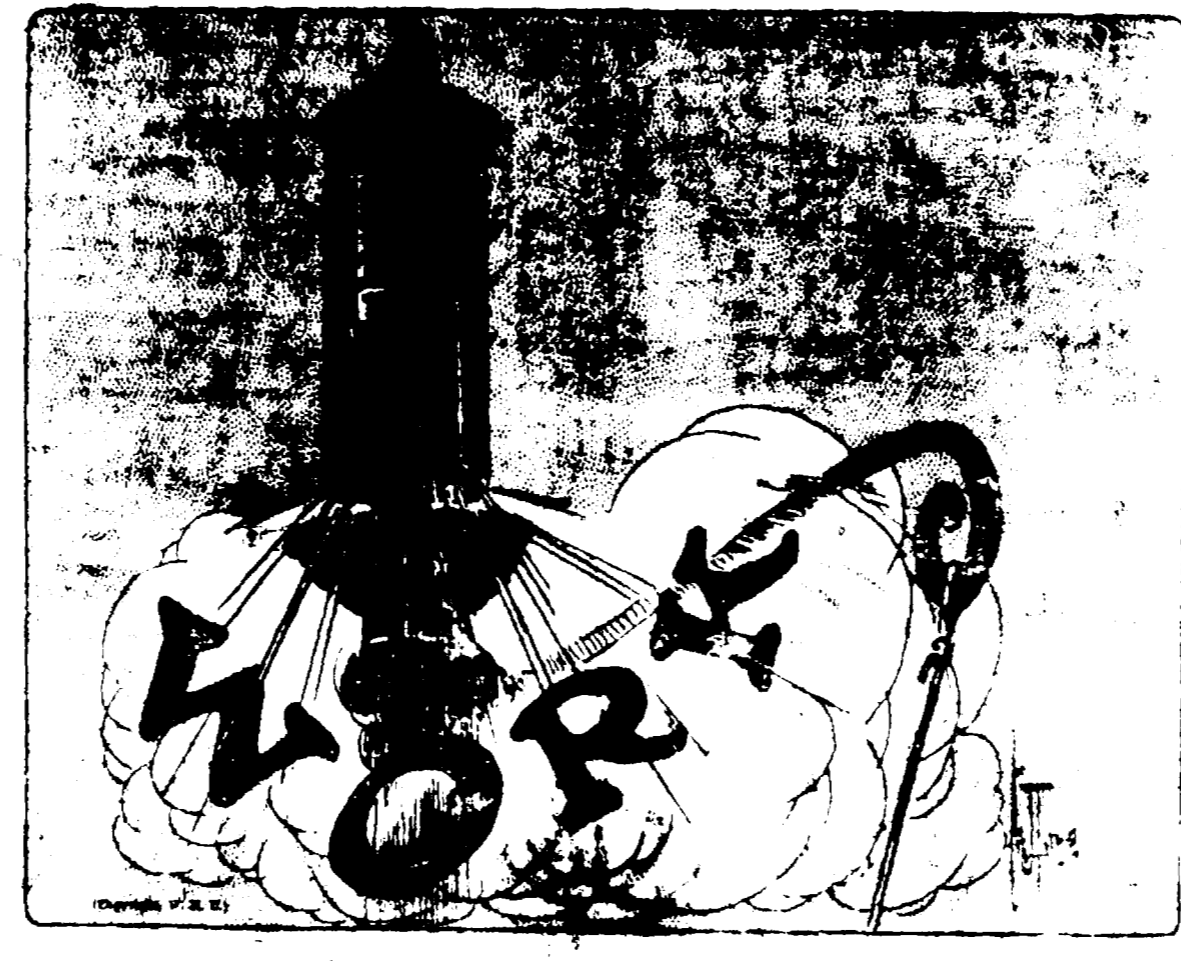

All churches are requested to take collections for this cause next Sunday.

The Key to Normalcy

Pinckney High School Loses Close One

First-Team Loses to Howell 17 to 14 Reserves Win Their Game 23 to 9. In 1st Home Game.

The Pinckney high school basketball team opened their 1931 basketball season with a double header before a packed house. The high school reserve team had little trouble with the Howell freshman team and were ahead all the way. Every man on the Pinckney reserve team scored 2 or more points. Adsch was high man with 6 points. The kids showed a lot of speed and pluck and will be heard from later.

Pinckney — R. E. — Ladouceur
Basydo — L. F. — Brayton
Miller — C. — Baldwin
Battie — R. G. — Martin
Haines — L. G. — VanWinkle
Adsch

Substitutions — Pinckney, Smith for Miller, Read for Haines, Clinton for Read, Howell, Parker for Ladouceur, Ludwig for Brayton. Field goals — Basydo 1, Miller 1, Smith 1, Haines 2, Adsch 2, Read 1, Clinton 1, Brayton 1, Baldwin 2, Ladouceur 1. Foul goals — Miller 2, Haines 1, Adsch 2, Martin 1, Fouls — Pinckney 7, Howell 4, Referees, Hooker and Olson.

In the final game the high school had hard opposition. They kept the visitors away from the basket but Howard, the Howell guard, sunk three baskets from the middle of the floor which gave Howell sufficient margin to win. Howell led at the quarter 6 to 2 and at the half 10 to 3. In the third quarter Howell added 7 points and Pinckney 2. The home team rallied in the final period and started a drive for victory. They fought hard and Howell was held to no points and Pinckney scored 6, coming within three points of tying the score. The game was fast and furious but Howells long distant shots saved the day for them. Pinckney was off on free throws only making good on 4 out of 10 attempts. They made a good fight of it and will undoubtedly develop an improved team work in coming contests.

PLAY TWO

GAMES THIS WEEK

The Pinckney Independent basketball team have two games scheduled this week. Tonight, Wednesday, Jan. 21 they meet Fowlerville and on Saturday evening, January 24, Webberville comes here. These are both strong teams and good games should result. The boys are playing a good game and have won six out of eight games played.

NEW FISH LICENSES

Non-resident angler licenses issued in 1930 expire December 31, and non-residents desiring to fish through the ice now must secure a 1931 license. These licenses are now being distributed by the department of conservation to all license dealers. The buttons of the new licenses are brown. While non-residents are permitted, under license, to fish with hook and line through the ice, they are not permitted to use a spear or any other means of catching fish.

NOTICE

There will be a Hard Time card party and dance at the Masonic Hall on Thursday eve, Jan. 29. Watch for announcement next week.

"ICEBOUND" AT STOCKBRIDGE THURSDAY, JANUARY 22

The Jackson Little Guild Theatre Players will put on the drama "Icebound" at the Stockbridge high school auditorium tomorrow evening, January 22. Dr. Norman Wilson of Jackson, a former Pinckney resident has a prominent part in the play. The Stockbridge Parent-Teachers Assoc. of which Mrs. Helen Monks Berry is president is sponsoring the play.

PUTNAM TAX NOTICE

I will be at the Pinckney State Bank every Wednesday commencing January 7, 1931 to receive taxes. Max Ledwidge, twp. treasurer.

SCHOOL NOTES

Semester tests will be given this week Thursday and Friday.

The teachers throughout the school attended the mid-year conference of teachers held at Ypsilanti last Friday. Interesting talks were given by Dr. Martin of New York, and Dr. Cooper, Commissioner of Education of the U. S.

Pinckney first team was defeated last Thursday while the second team won by a wide margin. Several of the boys on the 2nd team are learning the game and are about due to replace some of the first string men. Pinckney plays at Ypsilanti this week end.

Of the 280 members of the Michigan High School Debating League all but 85 have been eliminated. These will meet in debate Feb. 6. The schools in this section have not played very high this year. Howell will meet Mason at Mason, Walled Lake-Frazier at Frazier and Ann Arbor-Lincoln Park at Ann Arbor.

Pinckney has completed her season, her debate with Parma at that place having been cancelled.

STRAY DOGS RUIN MICHIGAN FLOCKS

Outlaw dogs which acquired a taste for mutton cost Michigan farmers a huge sum of money in 1930 as is shown by the $200,725 which was paid as indemnities but which did not repay the owners 67 animals which were injured and for which no settlement was made.

Some Michigan counties had to dip deeply into the general fund to pay losses when the sum collected as damages proved to be much too small to pay for all the damage suffered by the flocks of sheep in the county. The figures of losses were secured by members of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College in a search for reasons why the sheep industry is unpopular in some sections.

The Michigan dog law is quoted nationally as a model for other states to follow but this law is less than ideal when it is not rigidly enforced. The board of supervisors in one Michigan county authorized the sheriff to deputize men for the purpose of reducing the losses of sheep in the county. Seventeen stray dogs were shot and the loss of sheep from $3,920 in 1928 to $28,900 in 1929.

Some owners of sheep in certain counties formed committees which took over the work of exterminating and outlaw dogs. This work appears to be effective but is not a satisfactory way and it has the work done by officials who are charged with the maintenance of the law.

ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY

Harvey D. Douglas of Fowlerville has decided to run for the office of commissioner of schools of Livingston county for the coming term. This decision has been reached after repeated requests to enter the race. Mr. Douglas has had the necessary experience. He taught in the rural schools ten years. He has been an elementary teacher, a high school instructor, a high school principal, and superintendent of schools. During the past five years he has been superintendent at Fowlerville.

He has had also had the education necessary to give the county a good school system. He has held every grade of county teacher's certificate and a normal life certificate. He is a graduate of the two-year course of Central State Teachers' College at Mt. Pleasant. He is also a graduate of liberal arts department of Michigan State College. All credits are completed for a master of arts degree.

If elected to the position of commissioner of schools he pledges himself to inaugurate a definite plan of supervision of instruction. This work will be constructive and democratic. A co-operative plan for working with the various school boards will be started that they may be in touch with the school situation and the commissioner's office at all times. Close attention will be given to make school costs coincide with the economic situation. In fact a well organized plan of education will be carried out for our children.

His family consists of a wife and four children.

Your support is solicited. He marries March 2.

Current Comment

Rev. Bowerman of the Parma United church is getting considerable publicity about the state and during large crowds as a result of a series of sermons he is preaching on vice in Parma. He charges that a blind pig has been allowed to flourish for four years although the law enforcing officers are aware of its existence. One raid was made against it which he alleges was tipped off before hand. Rev. Bowerman advocates tar and feathers. Last Sunday night at the end of his services, he called for volunteers to form a Civic Purge League. About 50 signed including the president of the school board, the superintendent of schools and several councilmen. Mayor Cameron and the council failed to sign.

Shelby J. Jackson county in an interview stated he and the state police had investigated the place but could not get enough evidence against it for legal action.

Harry Cameron, mayor of Northville and his hall marked of Michigan was removed from office Monday by the Northville city commission because of charges filed against him in a political fight. He alleged he allowed police to enter his building owned by him and the room destroyed in a fire. He alleged a friend of his, who was a police officer, and punch him in the face and otherwise mistreat him. The commission's vote Monday was 4 to 1. Cameron is to be permitted to remain in the whole town. He is to be permitted to stay in the whole town.

Some of the number being the number of sportsmanship and the number of friends all of department at Michigan State College in a search for reasons why the sheep industry is unpopular in some sections.

WEEK OF JANUARY 25

Mild weather conditions will come to an end with the beginning of the week of January 25th in most parts of Michigan. With clearing skies and more northerly winds, we are expecting a rather decided drop in the temperature. Cold weather will remain in the state for two or three days.

Near the middle of the week the backbone of the cold will be broken and another period of rather pleasant, mild weather is expected to pass over this section.

About Thursday there may be unsettled, threatening conditions but we do not look for any general or severe storms, aside from some local wind storms. Weather may prove to be somewhat foggy about this period, greatly handicapping traffic.

There may be a sharp drop in the temperature near the end of the week, but on or before Saturday the mild conditions will again rally their forces with renewed strength and vigor. This warm weather will be the warning of approaching severe storminess. However, we do not anticipate this storm will get a chance to get in its work in Michigan before the early part of next week.

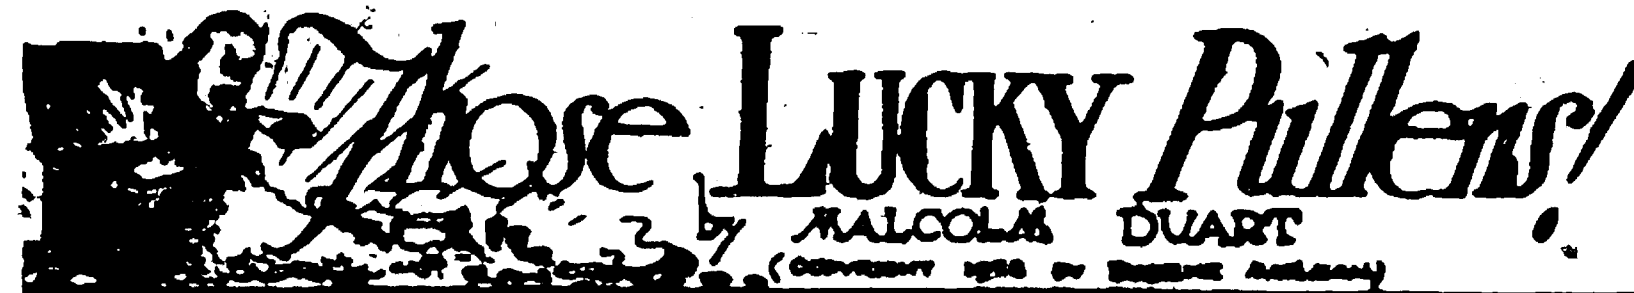

Taking the week as a whole we look for a great many extremes in the weather over most parts of the state. Such a condition will be very dangerous to fall sown crops where the snow has melted away, leaving the ground bare.

Homecoming Days Planned at U. of M.

University of Michigan students are planning a homecoming week-end similar to affairs staged by a number of other colleges and universities. Tentative dates for the week-end are May 8, 9 and 10.

On May 8 the annual Michigan Union father and son's banquet will be held, and later in the evening freshmen will celebrate cap night. Sunday, May 10, will be Mother's day.

Other events for the week-end will be arranged around the nucleus of those three events, and attempts will be made to have a number of athletic events as well and at last on varsity contest during the week-end.

"Will you quit yourself on this man question," he said, turning into Name street. "I won't butt in unless you want me to."

Night had fallen when they reached home. Pullen drew up to the curb, and they alighted.

"Funny there are no machines out in front," he said. "Why, Julia! The house is dark!"

He ran up the steps, the girl hurrying after him. He tried the doorknob, but it refused to turn. Producing his latch-key he fumbled at the lock. Julia was holding tightly to his arm.

"Elsie!" he called, as he entered the dark hall.

There was no answer. He turned on the light, and glanced into the living room. The chairs all were in or after a moment's thought. "We'd just be putting ourselves into her class." "Then there's only one thing to do," he said, decisively. "That's to move away—get into some other part of town. I can sell this house. By the way—we sold two houses today. I got a snare of the commission—couple of hundred dollars."

His daughter came to his side and smoothed his hair. "I'm so glad. I know you'd be a big man, papa, if you once get a chance."

"Big man?" He laughed a little. "I'm only small fry, Julia. But I think we're going to have lots of money—more than I ever thought I'd make. I can sell this place and get your mama a new house, and I think I ought to do it."

mean that at all. I'm sure you're not dumb." His mind returned to the gathering that he had found at home. "I went in there among those women, and I told 'em what I thought of 'em," he said. "I listened awhile, and then I told 'em that Julia was the purest and sweetest girl in town and I'd knock their husbands' heads if any of 'em denied it."

"My goodness!" exclaimed Julia. "I did!" he affirmed. "And then my mother got up and pushed me backwards out the door! I couldn't hit my own mother, you know. Aren't women fierce?"

"But, Sam," Pullen inquired, "had they said anything against Julia? You say you told about her being pure and good?"

"They hadn't mentioned Julia—not that I heard. They were talking about your wife, sir."

"I see—I see." Pullen lit his cigar reflectively.

Julia had succeeded in releasing her hand, and had moved a little farther from Carlile. Her face had brightened, however, in the course of the conversation, and she bent a smile on the youth that was both der, as Mrs. Pullen had placed them the evening before. The man and girl happened to the dining room.

Carlile got up and came to the couch where the girl sat. I'll tell you what we'll do. You and I'll get married, Julia, and I'll take care of you, and they'll fix these old hens." He sat down beside her and took her hand.

As Pullen pressed the switch, and the lamps flashed on, Julia gave a gasping cry.

Mrs. Pullen was sitting alone at the table, her hands folded on the cloth, her head erect, her eyes staring at the wall. Before her were the heaps of sandwiches and little cakes and candies that she had so lovingly arranged. The candies were wholly burned out.

She did not move as Pullen ran to her, and dropping to his knees took her in his arms.

CHAPTER XXVII

"Poor mama!" breathed Julia, touching the little heap of napkins at the side of the table. None of them had been unfolded.

Pullen drew his wife's head to his shoulder, and stroked her cheek. She moved her lips, stiffly, but her throat refused to act. Her eyes maintained their dull, unseeing stare.

"Poor old girl!" Pullen said, brushing back the hair from her forehead. "Don't let it worry you."

Julia dipped one of the napkins into the tall water pitcher, and bathed her mouth's for food. Then she sat down, and taking one of Mrs. Pullen's hands, stroked it gently, while Pullen laid his best as comfort on the other.

When Mrs. Pullen spoke at last, her voice was very and lifeless. "Nobody came," she said, bringing out the words with difficulty.

"I know—I know," soothed her husband. "We don't care, do we, Elsie? We don't want people like that in our house."

His wife did not say anything more until she had led her upstairs, and fastening her new dress laid her on the bed. Then she turned her head away, wearily.

"My pretty party!" she whispered. Pullen and Julia made their dinner on the sandwiches and cakes that heaped the dining table. They took turn about, one of them remaining upstairs while the other ate.

Finally Mrs. Pullen seemed to fall asleep. At least she lay with her eyes closed, and her arms limp and motionless. Julia, who was with her, stole down the steps.

"By George, this is ghastly," said the father, who was huddled in his chair. "It makes no difference to these people around here speak or not, but it's going to break my heart."

ed, soberly. "She just to people, and if they come to her house, we've got to do papa."

and chewed it. Mrs. Hamilton her up that daughter, door.

A tall young man came into the hall, and as he turned, exposed a white shirt front between the lapels of an evening coat. Carlile glared with instant hostility as Julia led the stranger forward.

"Father, this is Mr. Parks. And this is my friend, Mr. Carlile," said the girl.

"I've seen the face before, I think," said the newcomer in a rich, deliberate voice, as he shook hands with Sam. "A professional man, Mr. Carlile?"

"A shoe clerk," snapped Sam venomously. "And I've got to be going. Good night."

He stamped into the hall, seized his hat, and hastened out the door, ignoring Julia, who followed after him.

When she returned the new young man was speaking to Pullen. "My associates," he said, "inform me that you are an extensive dealer in real estate."

"Yes," said Pullen, who had not resumed his seat. "And now if you'll excuse me, I'm going to run after that young fellow who just left."

CHAPTER XXVIII

Pullen returned to the house half an hour later, still hatless and without his overcoat. He entered the hall, and stood in the doorway of the living room.

Parks was sitting in a corner of the couch, his long, slim legs crossed, exposing delicately figured socks.

Julia looked at her father quickly. He nodded at her and smiled. "Sam's all right now," he said. "One of Julia's boy friends who was upset about something," he added to Parks. "I wanted to advise him not to do anything rash."

"An excellent thing for you to do, sir," said the young man. "Boys are very impulsive. I have found. A lawyer sees a great deal of the inner life of his clients."

Pullen rubbed a forefinger along the side of his nose. "Have you been practicing long, Mr. Parks?"

Julia's caller glanced at her, and cleared his throat. "Not," he said, "as long as many other members of the bar. I am—ha, ha!—young yet."

The father excused himself, and tiptoed up the stairs.

"My mother isn't well," the girl explained. "He walks that way to keep from waking her up."

"Very thoughtful," he said. "Very thoughtful, indeed." He was looking at the diamond that flashed upon her right hand. "A beautiful ring." Rising, he came to her side and lifted her fingers. "An excellent stone."

Still holding her hand he reached behind him, and drew up a chair. Julia pulled away.

"May I look at the ring?" he pursued.

She took it off and handed it to him. He turned it over and over, and finally slipped it on his little finger. "A perfect fit," he said, and added, archly, "May I wear it a while?"

Julia hesitated. This was the first formal call she had received in all her life, but she knew other girls, and had heard them talk about young men's ways.

"Better give it back," she advised, cupping her palm to receive it.

Parks was sitting very close, and he laid his hand upon hers.

"Please, don't," she said. "I wish you'd give me my ring." She put her arm behind her, and moving her chair, increased the distance between them.

He tried to change the subject. "I've always admired that little curl at the nape of your neck since I first saw you."

"Mr. Parks, I want my ring," insisted Julia.

Something in her tone caused him to act promptly. He slipped the diamond from his finger and laid it in her lap. "I was just fooling," he said. "You know, if you weren't wearing it on your right hand, I'd think it was an engagement ring."

"Well, it isn't," she said, briefly.

He felt the black bow of his tie, and smoothed down his shirt bosom where it bulged. "Shall we go out some place and dance?" he asked.

"I'd like to, but mama isn't feeling well, and—"

A familiar voice sounded from the stair landing. It was Mrs. Pullen's. "Just you go and dance, Julia!" she called.

The girl's face grew bright-red. "Oh!" she said, helplessly, and looked at Parks to see how he received this evidence that her mother had been eaves-dropping.

The young man produced his eyeglasses and put them on. "If that is your mother," he said, "I'd be charmed to meet her."

"I'll be right down," reported Mrs. Pullen from above.

A few moments of busy thumping on the floor told that she was preparing for company, and then she appeared in the new dress which she had bought for her tea.

She was pale, and her face was rather drawn, but she mustered up a fairly cheerful smile as Julia introduced young Parks.

"It's so hard for me to keep track of all the young men," she said, artfully, "but I'm sure I haven't met you before, have I, Mr. Parks?"

"I'm sorry to say you have not," he assured her, drawing forward a chair, and holding it until she was seated.

Julia bit her lip, and retreated to the couch.

"Though goodness knows that with keeping track of Julia's social engagements and mine, too—" she wiped at her own phrase, but smiled at once and continued—I'm apt to forget, sometimes."

"Mama," inquired Julia, "isn't it too much for you to be sitting up so soon?" You look ill."

"I'd rather be down here," said her mother. "I just hate it lying up there on my back, and you father is making some figures and won't talk."

Parks cleared his throat loudly, to draw their attention back to him. "I was admiring your daughter's beautiful diamond," said he. "I think it is a blue-white Natal stone, isn't it? I am a great lover of diamonds, Mrs. Pullen."

"A which kind of a stone?" she asked.

"A blue-white diamond from Natal—Natal in South Africa, you know. Though, of course," he added, "it might be a Kimberley stone. I did not examine it closely."

Mrs. Pullen looked at him with respect. "So you're an expert on diamonds, Mr. Parks," she said. "Isn't that nice? Do you know, I've always wondered what that diamond was worth. What do you think it is worth?"

He wet his lips, uncertainly. "Er—I'll tell you. Most of the jewelers are very honest. I think they charged you the correct price—with the duty added, of course. The customs duty is very heavy on diamonds."

"Oh, we didn't buy it," she told him. "It was a gift."

He adjusted his glasses, and turned to examine the ring on Julia's finger, a half dozen feet away. "I should judge, Mrs. Pullen," he said, frowning with a judicial air, "that this stone—that it—well, at a rough estimate, it cost about three thousand dollars."

"What?" Mrs. Pullen half rose to her feet, and the girl gazed at him in astonishment.

"More or less," he hastened to say. "A few hundred more or less. But it is a very fine diamond. From some relative, I presume?"

The older woman settled back in her chair, and gazed at her daughter's gem. "I never thought, Mr. Parks, that we'd have anything worth three thousand dollars in this house! I've wondered and wondered what it cost, but I never met anybody who was acquainted with diamonds before, who could tell me. You have a good many diamonds yourself, I suppose?" There was deference in her tone.

He took off his glasses, and swung them by their ribbon. "A man unfortunately cannot wear diamonds," he informed her. "A curious quirk of fashion. But to anyone of experience, it is not hard to tell a good stone from a bad. This was a gift from a relative?" he tried again.

"Why, no," Mrs. Pullen told him. "Ah." He turned his eyes toward the girl.

"It was—just a gift," Julia's mother said. "Mr. Pullen has rich friends."

"Ah?" This time there was a questioning note in his voice.

"And, of course," she hastened to tell him, "Mr. Pullen himself is in a very large way of business—very large."

"I have understood so. So I have heard," said Parks. "He is a dealer in lands, I believe?"

"Real estate," she said, with pride. "He buys houses and sells them. He just got into that business lately. He got into it through one of his wealthy acquaintances."

Julia had been sitting silent, watching her mother and the young man beneath lowered lids. Now she arose, and moved deliberately across the room.

"I think I'll run upstairs and see how papa is," said she.

Mrs. Pullen made a commanding gesture. "You sit down," said she. "You know there isn't anything the matter with your father. You mustn't go away and leave Mr. Parks here alone."

ARE DAILIES SUBSIDIZED

BY THE LIQUOR ELEMENTS

The Detroit Free Press appears to be. In Monday's edition, front page, appears a black scare heading "Want Repeal in 24 states." The article purporting to quote Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, names those 24 states as follows: Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Louisiana, Montana and Washington. Count 'em. Do you make 24? Neither do we.

He goes on to say that in "five of these states—Maryland, Ohio, Louisiana, Montana and Washington, they have elected one wet senator and one dry senator." So the result is there are 7 wet states and 5 half wet in the total of 48 states. Not very encouraging for those who wish to repeal the Volstead act, is it?

The heading of that article was the work of the Detroit Free Press. All newspapers write their own headings. It was not only misleading but a plain and unvarnished falsehood written to catch the thousands of people who are too busy, or think they are, to read anything more than the heads of the newspapers. Those who read only the heads would be led to believe that these United States are just on the verge of repealing the prohibition law when nothing is farther from the truth. We wonder whether it is a good rule for large newspapers to publish news that is manifestly misleading. —Fowlerville Review.

No longer expensive is this healthful ELECTRIC COOKING

It costs little more than the method you are now using

Now you can enjoy modern electric cooking at a cost differing little from that of your present cooking. Electric cooking has been brought well within the reach of the average family income. There is no longer any reason why you cannot enjoy the superiority of modern electric cooking in your kitchen.

Electric cooking is healthful. Very little water is needed to cook meats and vegetables; they cook in their own juices. All the nourishing elements lost in the form of steam in an ordinary stove, are sealed in with an electric range. Even the cheaper cuts of roasts cook to melting tenderness.

Baking is simplified by means of automatic oven heat control. Pastry is flaky and cakes are light and fine-grained. You will be delighted with the convenience and cleanliness of electric cooking.

THE DETROIT EDISON CO.

HAMBURG

Paul J. McClear, a resident of Hamburg village for the past 17 years, where he has run the elevator during that time, died at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor early Saturday morning, where he had been a patient the past three weeks.

Mr. McClear was born in Unadilla township 60 years ago. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. E. A. Kuhn of Gregory and Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald of Detroit; six brothers, Eugene McClear of Whitmore Lake who had been associated with Mr. McClear at the elevator here the past 15 years, Terrance and Louis McClear of Detroit, John McClear of Jackson and Ernest and Leo McClear of Royal Oak, 30 nieces and nephews and a number of great nieces and nephews. Two sisters and one brother are deceased, Mrs. Janey Stackable who died at Gregory a number of years ago, James McClear who died in Idaho about three years ago and Miss Sarah McClear who lived with Mr. McClear here and died about a year ago. Mr. McClear was supervisor of Hamburg township several years. Funeral services were held at St. Mary's Catholic church in Pinckney Monday forenoon; interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

Hamburg lodge, No. 438, I. O. O. F. gave another of its enjoyable card parties at their hall Thursday evening. Twenty-five tables of progressive euchre were in play. First prize was won by Mrs. William Leese of Harbor Springs; second by T. Kahal of Ypsilanti and third prize by Mrs. Edward Ross of Webster. Guests were present from Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Harbor Springs, Brighton, Whitmore Lake, Webster and Hamburg. Supper was served after which many tripped the light fantastic toe for a while. The next party will be held Thursday evening.

January 20.

Edward F. Fitzgerald had the misfortune to break one of his legs Sunday evening, when he fell while walking from his home to the home of Harold Gilbert. It is a spiral break a little below the knee. He was taken to the Pinckney Sanitarium where he is doing as well as can be expected. Mrs. Fitzgerald's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Jarrett of Whitmore Lake are staying with her.

Claudine Featherly had the bad luck to fall Thursday evening, dislocating her right wrist.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gilbert entertained at dinner recently, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Jarrett of Whitmore Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Meyer of Ann Arbor, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Featherly and son, Jimmie, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Ruth Roberts and Wayne G. Jury.

Mrs. Alfred Vanderseal of Detroit came Friday to visit her aunt, Mrs. John Humphrey and Mr. Humphrey.

Mrs. John Cooper who has been ill the past few months is not improving. Her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Curtis, of Detroit is with her.

Ernestine Musson of Howell was the guest of Marjorie Allison a part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dinkel spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Gardner of Detroit, attending a party at the Masonic Hall.

Marjorie Allison entertained Wednesday evening five young men of Howell.

Mrs. Ernie (Hause) Chadwick died recently in Dewitt, Michigan. She was a former resident of Livingston county, having been born Putnam twp.

Mr. and Mrs. John Meyer and Paul, of Ypsilanti spent Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. John Martin.

Helping the Cause

Two men attended a village church tea for which the tickets were six-pence each. The profits were to go toward providing comforts for the aged poor of the village.

Bilson, after accounting for ten cups of tea, eight sandwiches, three plates of bread and butter, five jam tarts, and four small buns, was passing his cup for the eleventh time when he turned to his companion and said: "I think every one should encourage a thing of this sort, as it's for a good cause." — London Humorist.

CALORY COUNT NOW EXTENDS TO CAR FUEL

Chicago—Since America discovered calories, the average citizen's habit of checking up the foods that go into his stomach has been extended to scrutinizing the gasoline and oil he feeds the family automobile, according to the American Research Foundation.

"The calory is a measure of heat value, whether you are consuming food or fuel, because one of the most important functions of heat is to provide heat or energy for the body," said the report. Que not bo not so perame ditionin takes p upon th fessor L delivere igan ed The shifting emotion terminer as a fo growing unchang mined d relied upon the only hope of change or ment in conduct must come through the imparting of knowledge, which is essentially the work of the school. This idea of character development stresses the school as the important element in education, and leaves the home relatively in the background.

Only in recent years have we realized, however, that the child's education begins on the emotional side long before he can profit by instruction of the intellect, Professor Marston said. The emotional or temperamental aspects of a personality are the variables of mental development, the most modifiable and plastic, and are conditioned for better or for worse by the earliest experiences of the infant. If early home surroundings and care are not well and properly ordered, a warped temperament which will carry its influence throughout life may develop. Thus when emotions are understood as early and significant determiners of conduct, the home at once becomes the most important agency in the formation of character.

Two main types of children, each needing somewhat different guidance were described by Dr. Marston: The extroverted child is one in whom emotionally aroused energy finds ready and direct discharge into the outside world, perhaps as lively movement or play. The introverted child finds the easy discharge of energy inhibited or blocked, and the energy is either dissipated within the child's organism or finds sudden, explosive outlet. Characteristics of the extroverted child include social boldness, exaggerated activity, impulsiveness, talkativeness, aggressive self-reliance, and keen interest in the environment. The introverted tends to the contrary traits of social timidity, depressed activity, caution, secretiveness, self-deprecation and detachment from environment.

Extreme differences in such personality traits which may be noticeable as early as three years, according to Dr. Marston's studies, urge the understanding and right treatment of these differences if later emotional and social life is to be directed properly.

Donate Model School

A "school of the future," designed to advance rural education, would be located at Hartland, Mich., near Howell, under a plan proposed to Webster H. Pearce, state superintendent of public instruction, by H. A. Tremain, Hartland, and a nephew, Robert Crouse, Cleveland manufacturer and philanthropist. Sponsors of the experiment agree to pay all expenses of building and maintaining the school, but they insist that it must be a model one, embodying ideas which, they believe, would place it 40 years ahead of existing rural schools.

J. B. Crouse and his son, Robert Crouse, founded the National Lamp Works at Cleveland in 1901. Crouse's philanthropies include the Hartland public library and the Waldenwoods retreat for clergy men, located at Hartland.

Models for the School Days

By LUCY CLAIRE

August as usual! Time to begin to think of getting the youngsters ready for school! A few weeks and the school bells will chime a commandatory welcome.

The main thing to consider in buying or making clothes for little daughter's schooldays is durability or wearability, in conjunction with price, without sacrificing style. It is better, with these factors in mind, to consider the building of the school costumes around one color scheme. This should consist of a hat and coat that can be worn with a number of dresses without disco-ordinating the color scheme. The staple colors, such as brown, blue, green and red, that will go with darker-toned hats and coats, will be the best bet for the frocks.

The sketch shows a group of five frocks suitable for school wear for girls six to twelve years of age. At the left is shown a two-piece suit of blue jersey, with Roman stripes in a colorful combination introduced into the blouse, simple enough to be tubed. As an early fall suit for the first schooldays, blue kid slippers, and a blue felt hat would co-ordinate beautifully with the frock. A navy blue coat for cooler days would be the thing, and could be worn with almost any of the staple colors for other frocks.

Brown Tweed Serviceable

Next to this is a frock for the girl of 10 to 12 years. This is a brown tweed with nubs of yellow, in a one-piece model, with eggshell linen collar and cuffs, and a brown leather belt posed at the normal waistline. This could later be worn under a dark brown coat, and with brown shoes.

The little jumper frock, always a favorite for children, is seen at the center. This is of navy blue serge, posed over a white blouse, and trimmed with silver metal buttons. This is in a much abbreviated model suitable for a child of six or seven. In the fourth model we again have the Roman stripes introduced in the bodice section. The bolero jacket is separate, and matches the skirt of dark wool crepe.

At the extreme right is shown the regulation sailor frock, one of the most suitable models for a school frock. This may be of linen, poplin or French serge, and in any suitable color, though, of course, in the wool material, it always looks more in keeping with the design in navy blue. It looks well with the golf hose and oxford shoes and blue felt vagsbond hat, as shown in the sketch.

STATE CONDEMNS OLIVET'S CHAPEL

Olivet college chapel, the last of the buildings connected with Olivet's early history now standing, has been condemned by the state department of public safety as unsafe for holding of public meetings, though its use for classrooms is permissible.

For many years the building was used as the college church but since the building of the large stone church in 1893, owned jointly by the college and village, the chapel has been devoted to classrooms on the first floor, while the second floor was used for mass meetings and college and high school dramatic events.

The chapel stands in the oak grove where the new dormitory for young women is to be built. According to present plans the chapel will be moved to another site where it will be preserved for its historic interest and traditions connected with the founding of the college.

New Hospital Head Chosen in Jackson

Announcement was made recently by City Manager W. B. Hodges of Jackson of the appointment of Miss Antoinette Light as acting manager of Foote hospital to succeed Miss Margaret Spiers, whose resignation became effective Aug. 15. Miss Light has been superintendent of nurses since September, 1927. The city manager said that 20 applications have been filed for the position as hospital manager by physicians from outside the city and that Miss Light will head the hospital unit until a selection is made.

Olivet Is Willed Fund For Deserving Students

According to the will of the late William H. Hill, former Detroit resident and millionaire druggist, Olivet college will be one of three colleges to receive income from one-half of his estate, valued at $2,500,000. First reports were to the effect that the college was to receive one-third of the income of the estate. The money will be used for scholarships for deserving students.

Talley May Return to Opera

Tired of farming because she said the drought ruined her corn crop, Marion Talley, former Metropolitan Opera star, who gave up her career for a farm in Kansas, is seen here, seated, at Chicago, en route to New York, where, she says, she may return to her first love—grand opera. With her is her sister, Florence.

HELP CHILD TO ACCEPT FINAL "NO"

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

You and I learn quickly to adjust ourselves to the inevitable; so does the child.

At 2 or at 10 he finds it relatively easy to accept "no" if there is no doubt about it. But the smallest shade of uncertainty will cause him to argue, beg, whine, sob or throw a fit of rage.

You and I know how hard it is not to wobble; how inclined we are to shift our decisions in accordance with the way the child responds to them.

We often say "no" only to discover immediately the foolishness of our forbidding. Then if we wish to be just and fair we reverse ourselves, of course. Doing so makes the child doubtful about our stand later on. Sometimes following a pronouncement we are overwhelmed by the grief it caused the child, when in our weakness we repent giving an excuse which is not the correct reason, but a subtle means of justifying our reversal. We may fool ourselves but we rarely fool the child. To him it was his tears or temper or his argument which has caused us to come to his way. With a few successes to his credit he has acquired a habit of hoping always for a modification of our dictum. So the habit grows in him of putting up a protest when our wishes don't agree with his.

Parents who before the child are always one, who, in his absence often iron out their differences in respect to all details about his guidance, will strive to be so just and sparing of commands, and so sure of standing by them once they have been made, that obedience in the child will be an easy matter.

When we are best as parents our children, from their early years, learn that there are certain things they dare not have and certain things they dare not do. They know, moreover, better than to ask for certain privileges. They know beforehand our answer to virtually every such request they wish to make. Accordingly, they learn never to make some at all, or are ready to adjust themselves when such privileges are denied. When children, by and by, weep and sob and go into tantrums over our decisions, they had learned before to find advantages in doing so. They argue only if they get rewarded.

On the other hand, they easily can acquire a most remarkable readiness to adjust themselves calmly to the inevitable.

I shall be glad to answer, in these columns, questions addressed to me in care of this paper, provided these questions seem to be of general interest.

If you have a question you would like to have answered personally, write me enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

America's Foremost Beauty.

ASK DOCTOR TO EXAMINE LARGE VEINS

By Gladys Glad

"America's Most Famous Beauty"
"Dear Miss Glad: I've always been rather proud of the shapeliness of my legs. Recently, however, the veins in my legs have become swollen. What causes this condition, and how can I reduce the veins to their normal size?"

"Ruth Roberts"

Swollen veins are often merely a temporary condition. If you live normally, dress your feet sensibly, and do not restrict in any way the blood circulation in the legs, the veins will not swell. If, however, the swollen condition persists despite such precautions, you probably have varicose veins. It is very dangerous to attempt to treat this condition without the aid of a physician. Varicose veins are caused by small clots of blood in the blood vessels. If, by incorrect treatment, these clots of blood are enabled to circulate in the blood stream, they may strike a vital part of the body, and prove very injurious. Don't try to experiment with such a condition. By all means, have it treated by a competent physician.

"Dear Miss Glad: I have practiced the neck exercises contained in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet faithfully, and thought it might interest you to know that my double chin has almost completely vanished. I have, however, one more problem. I am naturally very fair-skinned. Within the last month I have purposely acquired a deep coat of tan. However, when I will not swell. If, however, the swollen condition persists despite such precautions, you probably have varicose veins. It is very dangerous to attempt to treat this condition without the aid of a physician. Varicose veins are caused by small clots of blood in the blood vessels. If, by incorrect treatment, these clots of blood are enabled to circulate in the blood stream, they may strike a vital part of the body, and prove very injurious. Don't try to experiment with such a condition. By all means, have it treated by a competent physician.

"Dear Miss Glad: I have heard many varying opinions as to the reducing properties of Turkish baths. I personally believe that Turkish baths will eliminate excess weight. However, as a number of my friends decidedly disagree with me, I should be most grateful for your valued opinion on the matter."
"Mrs. Reed."

Turkish baths will reduce the body, as they sweat a lot of water out of the tissues. However, this loss of weight is not permanent. If you partake of any quantity of liquid food after the baths, you will almost immediately regain the weight you have lost. Moreover, unless you are in excellent health, the rigorosity of frequent Turkish baths may prove harmful. A Turkish bath taken once a month will do wonders in cleansing and beautifying the skin. But I think that the healthiest and most effective way of reducing is by dieting and exercising.

PREDICTS FUTURE CAR

By LILLIAN CAMPBELL

Helen Dryden, New York artist and designer, declares that the automobile of the future will be a work of art, as well as a medium of fast transportation.

Miss Dryden has probably had more experience in automobile design than any other woman in the United States. She has also designed hardware for several leading carrossiers and coach builders, furniture, silk and linen, automobile clocks and designed covers for some of the leading magazines.

Miss Dryden believes that at present the automobile has arrived at a critical stage in its history. From the engineering standpoint it has reached a very high stage of development, but hereafter more attention must be paid to its esthetic aspects.

"Ten years hence cars may have the same type of motor that runs those of today," she says, "but I predict that it will be a thing of beauty as well as a vehicle of necessity. It will be, in its own way, as graceful and as simple as the modern speedboat and airplane, and it will be done in the good taste that women demand in their clothing, and in the interior decoration of their homes.

"There isn't much question about the fact that women are responsible for the purchase of 90 per cent of our American-made cars," Miss Dryden declares. "Wives pick out their husbands' cars (even though many of them may not realize it) and usually there is a woman's influence behind

TUBERCULOSIS UNIT ADDED TO U. OF M. HOSPITAL

Construction will be started at once on a $278,000 two-story addition to the University of Michigan Hospital for the expansion of the work in the field of tuberculosis, it was announced by Shirley Smith, vice president and secretary of the University.

The added stories will be placed directly on the roof of the central portion of the hospital. Since when the building was originally planned such additions were expected, it will not be necessary to unroof the structure, and work will proceed with a minimum of disturbance to patients. This portion of the hospital will have a sub-basement, basement, ground floor and eight stories when completed. Contractors have agreed to maintain normal wage rates, and will use Michigan labor and building products wherever possible, University officials state.

Asks $50,000 Damages Of State Motor Lines

Damages of $50,000 are demanded of the Michigan Motor Freight Lines and Otto Hallock, driver for the concern, in an action begun in circuit court by Edward Hall as administrator of the estate of Milton DeView. Hall charges that DeView was killed at the 10-Mile and Lasher roads April 28, 1930, when a freight truck ran the red light and struck DeView's automobile.

Develop 125,000 Acres

Cooperative development of a block of more than 125,000 acres in Osceola county, about 40 miles northwest of the proven Mt. Pleasant oil field, is being considered by a group of large companies, which owns the greater portion of the leases in the territory. Joint testing of the crease by the drilling of five or six structure test holes has been proposed by the Pure Oil Company, largest leaseholder in the county.

Jackson Is Seeking Larger City Council

Submission to voters of charter amendments which would increase the membership from five to eight members, was asked in petitions signed by 1,700 persons, which were presented to the city commission of Jackson by Corey J. Spencer, representing a committee sponsoring the charter change movement. The petition asks that the commission members be nominated and elected by wards, and also that the offices of city clerk, city treasurer, assessor and attorney be made elective instead of appointive. The petition was referred to the way and means committee for study.

449 MILES OF ROADS BUILT DURING 1930

State Highway Commissioner Grover C. Dillman has just made a statement which shows that there has been a decline in state road building in 1930, which says that fewer miles of state trunkline highways were constructed during 1930 than the previous year by 137 miles.

This reduction in road building was due to several causes, according to the commissioner. One of the main reasons was that less money was available than for the preceding year. More repair work was done and the hard-surfaced roads constructed were of better and heavier construction, Mr. Dillman said.

As of December 11, the new mileage totaled 449, compared with 586 for 1929. This year's total consists of 246.7 miles of concrete, 29.8 miles of widening projects, 81 miles of gravel, 2.6 miles of asphalt on concrete, 18.5 miles of asphalt on gravel, and 19.5 miles of bituminous material.

In 1929 the records show the following construction: 361 miles of concrete, 126 miles of gravel, 36 miles of asphalt.

In commenting on the year's work, Mr. Dillman said about $7,000,000 of highway money was obligated by the administration for the 1929 program, which required a slowing up of the program in 1930 to pay for the work of the previous year.

He also pointed out the anticipated revenues from the gas and weight taxes did not show the customary increase that had obtained previous to 1930. The revenues had stepped up about 10 per cent a year but 1930 will show approximately the same revenues of 1929, which totaled about $43,000,000. In 1929 the gas tax produced $21,309,000 and the weight tax $21,700,000.

Insanity's Link To Crime Studied

Dementia praecox, the commonest form of insanity, contributes to crime more than any other form of insanity, it is revealed by a study of the relation of insanity and crime, being made by Ellen Pitcher of the University of Michigan, under the direction of Professor A. E. Wood of the sociology department. The study is being made through a survey of crimes committed by inmates of five Michigan state hospitals.

In order of importance, other types of insanity contributing largely to crime are paranoia, alcoholic psychoses, psychopathic personality and manic depressive insanity, the study reveals.

Of crimes committed by insane persons, 41 per cent were against the person; 29 per cent were of a minor nature, 20 per cent were petty thefts; 9 per cent were sex offenses and 2 per cent were arson.

A high percentage of crimes of violence, including homicide, make recognition of abnormal conditions of great importance, Professor Wood asserted, so that treatment or institutionalization may be resorted to as a means of reducing crime.

Kalamazoo River Span Cost to Exceed $61,000

The new bridge to be built by the state across the Kalamazoo river will cost $61,652.22 besides the content and other material. The new cement bridge across Snauble brook on M89, five miles south of Allegan, will cost $32,000.

M89 paving between Allegan and Otsego will be done this year. The county road commission also will lay Tarmack paving from Hopkins north to the Kent county line. With the completion of these two projects Allegan residents can go to Grand Rapids or Kalamazoo on paved highways.

Highway Costs $2,227,000

The cost of the Stephenson Superhighway between the Six and One-half mile and Nine and One-half Mile roads will be $2,227,000, it was announced at a recent meeting in Hazel Park of the State Highway Commission with representatives of Wayne and Oakland counties, and of Oakland county municipalities. Harry Miles, division engineer for the department, announced that Wayne county would pay 50 per cent of the cost; Oakland county, 30 per cent; Royal Oak township, 7 per cent, and the assessment area, 13 per cent. Most of the money will be expended for actual construction, as a large percentage of the necessary land has been obtained.

merce has States Chamber of Commerce again claiming for Grand Rapids a record in prevention of fire in the past year, the record being 99 cents per capita. Losses for the year totaled $168,304.35, a reduction of $19,042.23. The former per capita record was $1.07.

If the record wins Grand Rapids a place among the leaders in class C cities it will make the fourth such record Grand Rapids has obtained, having won first place once and honorable mention twice.

LAKELAND CIRCLE OF KING'S DAUGHTERS

The first meeting of the Lakeland Circle of King's Daughters for the year 1931 was held at the home of Mrs. J. E. Mahler of Lakeland, Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. Mahler and Mrs. Edward G. Houghton acting as hostesses. Thirty-nine were in attendance, Mrs. D. Shields of Chicago, Ill. being a guest.

The president, Mrs. Harry Whitlock presided, the meeting being opened by singing "Abide with Me" and a prayer for the new year. "Each Me, O God to Think Straight," read by the president. Minutes of the last two meetings was read by the secretary, Mrs. Emil Kuchar, and approved. The treasurer, Miss Viola Petteys reported a balance in the checking account of $38.81. Mrs. Harry A. Lee reported $4.65 in the flower fund. Annual reports were given by Miss Petteys and Mrs. Lee; also by Mrs. Edward G. Houghton of the entertainment committee, Mrs. Clifford C. VanHorn, leader of the Junior Circle, and Mrs. Telephone Bombardis of the work committee, who reported 520 garments made for University hospital in Ann Arbor; also six quilts. Mrs. Albert Vogue was initiated into the order. Communications were read, including letters of thanks; one by the 24 inmates of the county home for Christmas remembrances.

One or two specific cases at University hospital were reported. This being the annual meeting of officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: president, Mrs. Edward G. Houghton; vice president, Mrs. Bert N. Haight; secretary, Mrs. Emil Kuchar; treasurer, Mrs. Henry M. Queal. An invitation from Mrs. E. Clyde Dunning to hold the next meeting, Tuesday afternoon at her home, was accepted. The meeting closed with prayer of the order. Mrs. Mahler and Mrs. Houghton served dainty refreshments.

PHILATHEA ACTIVITIES

There has been a gratifying gain in attendance each Sunday in our study hour period. Last Sunday a splendid proportion of both the Ladies' Bible class and the Philathea's joined in the consideration of the theme of the day. Next Sunday we will study "Conflicting Ideals" in the lesson "Jesus Tempted." Read Luke 3 and 4.

About thirty-five interested members and friends shared in the cordial hospitality of the parsonage on January fourteenth, the occasion being the first regular business and social meeting for the year. Mrs. Erma Lewis capably began work as class president. Mrs. Lola Rogers at the piano led in the singing of the opening song and Mrs. Berquist conducted the devotional services. The secretary, Mrs. Almada Henry, called the roll and read the reports of the December gathering and of the executive committee meeting the previous week. Other interesting reports were read concerning welfare and finances, also several communications among them one from our former vice president, Mrs. Edna Euler, now of Fairhope, Alabama.

The executive committee announced the following standing committees for the year, special ones to be appointed by the president as needed missionary, Mrs. Rose Hendec, Miss Viola Petteys, Miss Katherine Hoff, Mrs. Flossie Chambers. Volunteers or membership, Miss Blanche, Martin Mrs. Snively, Mrs. Minnie VanSlambrook, Mrs. Mae Daller. Suggestions were read showing some of the work which executive committee had in mind for the standing committees during the current year. The missionary committee were especially asked to co-operate with the general missionary work of the church. It is expected also that all our members will cheerfully join with the volunteer committee in their efforts to entice and help the old members, gain new ones, and stimulate the class to redoubled efforts of the new attendance. Cards are designed for that purpose and to help the committee to keep a business like record of our membership. We trust they will not prove burdensome. Any reason which we ourselves can conscientiously give to our Master, will no doubt be cheerfully accepted by the committee.

It was suggested that we all co-operate in the play being sponsored by the class, as otherwise noted, since we are looking forward to a furnace for the parsonage.

Mrs. Rose Hendec extended an invitation to the class for the February meeting, which was accepted, the president selecting Mrs. Nollie Frye and Miss Blanche Martin as entertainment committee. Wednesday's entertainment committee, Mrs. Gertrude Hicks and Mrs. Pauline Vedder were unusually fortunate in securing for the afternoon's pleasure two artists of undoubted southern ability. They put on several mirth provoking acts, which drew for the applause of the company, who greatly regretted the very singular absence of the committee themselves during the performance. We hope a little bird will tell them that the entertainment was much appreciated.

Personal Service

THE WORK of the modern funeral director includes much more than the sale of merchandise. Many small but important services are performed for the bereaved family—services which require thoughtfulness and experience.

From the moment the first call is received our entire organization is at the service of our clients. Every need is anticipated and we assume as many as possible of the small details, which prove so irksome at such a time. We consider it a sacred duty to protect at every turn the interests of those who have put their trust in us.
