

WEEK OF FEBRUARY 8

The key weather word for this week seems to be "extreme." Storm influences will either be considerably erratic, jumping from one characteristic to another, showing numerous changes and many variations, or the extreme will show out in some one characteristic that will be marked by its general severity at the time.

The opening days of the week beginning February 8 will bring stormy conditions to most parts of Michigan. In sections we look for more or less heavy snowfall.

Temperatures will fall in the greater part of the state by Monday or Tuesday to readings that will be considerably below the seasonal average.

From the position of storm centers at this time we believe the middle days of this week will be generally fair and moderately cold.

By Thursday temperatures will be on the upward movement with increasing cloudiness and threatening weather. While we look for local snows and more or less wind during the passage of this storm center, we do not think precipitation generally throughout the state will be heavy.

Dinner Stories

And Casey Did

An Irish drill-sergeant was instructing some recruits in the mysteries of marching movements, and found great difficulty in getting a countryman of his to halt when the command was given. After explaining and illustrating several times, he approached the recruit, sized him up silently for a couple of minutes, and then demanded his name.

"Casey, sor," was the reply. "Well, Casey, did you ever drive a mule?"

"Yes, sor."

"An' what did ye say when ye wanted him to stop?"

"Whoa," replied Casey.

The sergeant turned away and immediately put his squad in motion. After they had advanced a dozen paces he bawled out at the top of his voice: "Squad halt! Whoa, Casey!"

Reward of Toil

Wife (sadly): "I am afraid, Oliver, that you do not love me any longer. At least not as much as you used to."

Husband: "Good Lord! Why not?"

Wife: "Because you always let me get up to fight the fire and start the coffee."

Husband (rummaging his book): "Nonsense, my dear. It makes me love you all the more."

Helpful Comfort

The guards grimly went about their task of affixing the electrodes to the body of the doomed man in the chair. The kindly chaplain bent over him.

"Any request, my poor mortal?" he inquired.

"Yes, parson," the wretch replied. "It'll comfort me a lot if you'll just hold my hands."

Those Lucky Pullens!

MALCOLM DUART

The doorbell rang. A man in overalls was there. "Piano here for family named Pullen," he said.

Mrs. Pullen emitted a small shriek. "A piano?"

"Yes—grand piano. Is this Pullen's?"

"It's Pullen's, all right," said the man of the house, coming forward.

"But, say—can you tell me who's sending us this furniture?"

"Don't know about any furniture," said the man. "Just the piano and bench to go with it. We're a music house. Sign here."

He held out his book, and Pullen inscribed his name. Then, with his wife, he followed the newcomer out to a third truck, which had arrived while they were inside.

On its edge in the vehicle lay a to have a wedding," she said. "I think it's principally the wedding that a woman likes, Fred—it isn't getting the man so much. But the veil, and dress, and all—it's wonderfully thrilling."

He laughed, and coming to her, pulled her ear. "Then you got cheated," he said. "Remember that preacher who married us—the one with the thin whiskers and the squeaky voice?"

He put on his hat and coat. "I'm dumfuzzled, but I've got to go back to work."

She followed him to the sidewalk. "Thank you, dear, for the writing desk," she said. "You're good to me, aren't you?"

He was climbing into his car when his attention was attracted to another truck, which stopped before the house. As it backed to the curb, he could see ed week since we got it, and took care of it. It's MINE."

He scratched his chin, thoughtfully. "Still, it's going to be hard to use the house with two sets of furniture in it, and a piano that's as big as a Pullman car."

"We'll manage some way," said she. "I'll look around and arrange the rooms differently."

She spent the remainder of the day in a laborious effort to carry out her promise. She dragged heavy chairs pieces to new locations; she staggered up and down the stairs, bearing heavy burdens in her arms; she collapsed now and then, only to gather herself together and go about the task with fresh resolution.

When Julia came home, rather earlier than was her custom, Mrs. Pullen was seated in the hallway, panting and surveying the result of her labors.

"My goodness!" cried the girl. "What's happened?"

She looked about her. The hall contained a flat table, one of the large arm-chairs, and in a row against the stairway four chairs of the old dining room set. The living room was completely filled by the piano, its bench, the couch, Pullen's own chair and one of the new ones. A floor-lamp had been crowded behind the piano.

Through the open door of the dining-room the girl could see the new sideboard against the wall. She stepped inside for a quick inspection. The old oak buffet was on the opposite side of the room, and pressing against its doors was the new serving table. The old dining table was visible, standing in the center of the kitchen floor, and the new one was blocked out with chairs.

"Mama," Julia said. "What is it? Why are all these things here?" She pointed before her.

"It's another gift," her mother said. "Somebody's given us a whole household of furniture, and a piano. Julia, run upstairs and look at your room!"

The girl obeyed, her mother toiling after her.

"How pretty!" Julia was looking at the black-and-red toilet table, and the low bed that matched it. Her old bed was against the wall, the new one occupying the remainder of the space as far as the door.

"A man came and wanted to take all our old things away," said Mrs. Pullen, dropping heavily into one of the chairs. "But I sent him off with a flea in his ear. I told him he couldn't have any of our things that we've lived with so long and liked so much. Julia still was looking about her, bright-eyed and with parted lips. "It's so lovely," she said. "Did they send you a bedroom set, too?"

Her mother got to her feet, and led the way to the middle room. The girl put her head in the door. Mrs. Pullen's chamber, like her own, now contained two beds, the old brass one next to the window, and the new ivory-enameled one alongside, without a space between. The old dresser and the new mirrored table were side by side.

"It's all wonderfully pretty," Julia said. "But isn't the house crowded, mama?"

"It is a bit close, here and there," her mother admitted. "But it would have been a crime to give up our nice old things. We'll get along somehow."

"Did the man give you any idea who sent all the new pieces?" Julia asked.

Mrs. Pullen was arranging her hair before the new triplicate mirror. "He didn't give us any idea," she said, "and your father has no idea, and I feel as if I'd stopped thinking a month ago. I don't know where all these presents come from and I don't care. But Julia, isn't it fine to get them?"

She looked at her room approvingly. "I'm so glad they sent mattresses for the new beds," she added. "I couldn't have borne to strip that old brass bed. Why, I've slept in it for nearly eighteen years!"

A sharp peal of the doorbell startled her. "You go, Julia—I'm not fit to be seen."

The girl ran downstairs. "Why, hello Sam," she said, as she opened the door.

Young Carlile entered and peered into the living room. "Thought I'd come over and peddle the news," he announced. "I heard about all your new furniture. Gosh, this place is jammed!"

He dropped his hat on a chair, and edging his way through the living room, perched himself upon the piano. Julia laughed, and leaned against the wall.

"Your old chum, Mrs. Hamilton, is over at our house now," he said. "She's been counting your furniture as it came in. She's got a complete list of it in her head, and is talking forty miles an hour."

"What does she say?" Julia asked.

He grinned. "She says it is disgraceful, and something ought to be done about it."

"Who says?" This was Mrs. Pullen, advancing down the steps.

"Mrs. Hamilton," answered the boy. "How are you, Mrs. Pullen?"

He slipped from the piano and moved the couch toward her, a few inches. She sat down, turning her body so she could look at him.

"Sam, you stay off my piano," she directed. "What did Mrs. Hamilton say?"

"She watched all your new things coming, and she's over talking to my mother—says it's mighty strange that you meet fat man and get a raft of stuff right away after."

Mrs. Pullen sighed. "I'm sorry she says that about me."

"My mother won't speak to me," Sam went on, cheerfully. "Ever since I gave those old hens a lecture the other night, she sets my meals on a separate table and won't say 'good morning' or 'go to the dickens' or anything. Goes around with her head up, very cold. Say, Julia, I'm going to work for your old man!"

"For papa?" the girl cried. "Isn't that wonderful!"

"Yep—gives me more than I got in the shoe store, and if I sell anything he gives me a commission. I saw him today, and I start tomorrow morning. Told the boss at the shoe store tonight that it ain't dignified for a young man, spending his life tickling old ladies' feet."

He chuckled and Julia laughed appreciatively.

"What's more," he continued, "when I get my first batch of salary I'm going to move out of my house—leave 'em flat. If they won't speak to me, I won't give 'em the honor of my company."

"Sam, I wouldn't do that," said Mrs. Pullen, seriously. "They're your father and mother, you know."

"They've got a right to treat me decently, if they want me to stay," he said, "and to talk decently about Julia's mother." He scowled briefly.

"If my father had any sense, it'd be all right—but all he does around home is try to keep out of trouble—and when she came in he pretended to be wailing for changing my job. But he don't know where I'm going to work."

He slid across the couch and seated himself beside Mrs. Pullen.

"Say, by the way," he went on, "either of you people know a Mr. Murty or Motty or something like that?"

"Mr. Murty?" said Julia. "Why, that's my boss."

"Young Carlile whistled. "The heck he is! Well, just as I came out I heard Mrs. Hamilton say she was going to see him, and tell him a thing or two."

CHAPTER XXXII

Julia compressed her lips, and her dark eyes flashed. "The miserable mean old thing!" she exclaimed.

Mrs. Pullen's mouth drooped, and tired lines showed in her cheeks, giving her a sudden look of age. "My poor little girl!" she said. "You may lose your job!"

Carlile looked at them both in deep concern. "Criminy!" He doubted his hard fists. "If Mrs. Hamilton loses your job, I'll knock her husband's block off!"

"I'll talk to Mr. Murty first," the girl said, biting her under lip and tapping her foot upon the floor. "He's a lawyer, and knows about women like that. Mrs. Hamilton—the old wretch!"

"You look great when you're mad," commented Carlile. "Say, I'm glad I told you—almost forgot about her saying she'd see Murty. I didn't know who he was. Gosh, I'm glad I came over."

"I'm glad you came, too, Sam," Julia told him.

"Sam," Mrs. Pullen said, blinking away a tear, "I'm going to have a terrible dinner tonight—I've been moving furniture all day and haven't got a thing ready. But won't you stay and eat with us?" She laid her hand on his wrist. "You're the only friend we've got left among our old neighbors—and I'm so sorry I treated you so mean that time!"

"Oh, gee," he said, embarrassed. "I'd forgotten all about that. Sure I'll stay and eat. Let me help you—I can fry beefsteak."

GROUP BANKING WIDESPREAD

Over 13 Billion Dollars of Bank Assets in Affiliated Systems

Over 1,800 banks with more than $13 billion dollars in resources are shown to be associated with chain group banking systems in the United States...

The commission's facts comprise chain and group banking affiliations in the broadest sense of the term, the report said. They included those groups in which the controlling element was a particular bank...

The total was over $13,275,000,000 in aggregate resources. Some of the systems comprised 50 to 100 banks each.

"We have not included in these figures," the report says, "banking groups in which a commercial bank, a trust company and an investment house, and sometimes a savings bank, are tied together by some form of stock holdings and operated as complementary elements in an organization rendering complete financial services."

"For purposes of the present report we define chain or group banks as systems in which centralized control, whether corporate or personal and either rigid or informal, directs the operations of two or more complete banks, not functionally complementary, each working on its own capital and under its own personnel and located in one or more cities or states."

Commenting on the question whether the rapid development of chain banking was in the nature of a reaction against restrictions imposed on branch banking by the banking laws in many states the report says that observation does not wholly confirm this theory since chain banking is prevalent in some states where virtually no restriction is imposed on branch banking, as well as in those where the establishment of branch banks is prohibited. It adds:

"The question of branch banking. However, the facts do show that anti-branch banking laws have been a factor in some cases, and probably in some sections, in the spread of chain banking. Instances have come to our attention where expansion along chain bank lines has been carried out by state banks whose expansion along branch bank lines was stopped by the passing of state laws prohibiting further branching. Yet whether expansion would have been along branch bank lines if the laws had imposed no barriers, it is impossible to say. There is obviously a well developed banking opinion in some sections that the chain bank method brings to existing banks the strength and efficiency of a big organization without depriving them of their local individuality and sympathy."

"The report," says the association, "is not intended to advocate or in opposition to this new method of conducting banking resources through a number of banks into groups and is not to be taken as a factor in the legislative process. It is the absolute neutral picture of this banking movement."

When the Winds of Adversity Blow

Man never personalizes calamity or death. It is human nature not to do so. It may happen to others—but never to him—until "it does happen." Then, of course, it is too late. In love and devotion, man oftentimes shuts his eyes to facts—his wife's or dependent's ability to look after the estate he may leave to them. Many men have gone to their grave, believing that through insurance, savings or investment—he has made ample provision for those dependents he has left behind him.

You—who are reading this—know from observation that quite often widows and dependents are preyed upon by sharpers—and they lose all. That is why "Trust Departments" in well established banks are every day growing more and more in popular favor. Let us explain how we can serve you.

MINNOW SALE BIG BUSINESS

Michigan has 471 men engaged in the taking and selling of minnows.

There is also a larger number of boys under 18 years old engaged in the same business, but their number cannot be determined since they are not required by the state to secure a license.

In 1929 the state legislature adopted a law requiring a license of all persons over 18 years of age taking minnows for commercial purposes. The law did not go into effect until August, 1929. The year 1930 was the first full year in which the law operated and was the first year to give an accurate figure as to the extent of the commercial minnow industry in the state.

All minnow licenses expired on December 31. At that time the Department of Conservation showed a total sale of these licenses for the year of 471. All licenses must be renewed for 1931.

The license fee is $10. Each license holder must display a sign saying—"Licensed Minnow Dealer" at his place of business.

Lash Used on Six Michigan Youths

Summary punishment with whips was administered to six youth with the approval of the circuit judge before whom they were charged with a series of thefts.

The whippings were administered by or under the personal supervision of the parents of the youths, who ranged in age from 17 to 19. Five of the boys had confessed and had implicated the sixth. After the corporal punishment, Judge Henry J. Smith, who was to have pronounced sentence, suspended action until June.

The five who confessed were William Irwin, John and Harold Bennett, Bernard Torr and Dorland Stoneburg, all sons of farmers living near Lapeer. They admitted robberies of farms and stores over a period of several months.

About an hour before they were to have been sentenced the parents appeared at the jail and asked permission to take the boys one at a time to a nearby garage for "consultations." Irwin went first, and his father, Alfred, wielded the whip. The Bennett boys were whipped by an older brother to whom the father delegated the task, and the older Bennett also attended to Torr. Tony Shutz, awaiting arraignment after being implicated by the others, also was punished at the request of his parents. The boys' mothers stood by while the whip was applied.

Judge Smith later placed his approval on the course of action, and let the boys go home after they promised to make restitution.

New Courthouse Is Urged for Bay City

In a letter to Bay county supervisors Circuit Judge Samuel G. Houghton recommended an immediate start to the building of a new county courthouse at Bay City.

Judge Houghton pointed out that the present county building is 62 years old and that a sinking fund being accumulated for the purpose of replacing it has asked a start now, to provide employment and obtain building money at a low rate of interest, as well as minimizing risk of destruction of official papers through fire.

Offers Plane Trophy

A scholarship for junior engineering students at the University of Detroit is announced by Continental Motors. A trophy and a $200 scholarship will be awarded for the best design of a plane with a Continental motor.

Judges in the contest are Peter Altman of the U. of D.; Robert Insley, engineer of Continental; M. R. Dornoy of Buhl; Fred Verville of Verville Aircraft and Ray Cooper of the board of commerce aircraft bureau.

CARNIVOROUS ANIMALS ALLOWED TO BE KILLED

While the owners of property or their authorized agents have the right to take or kill carnivorous animals without permit at any time of the year, if these animals are doing damage to their property, they can dispose of these animals only on instructions from the director of conservation.

Disposition of the carcasses and pelts of all bears and other animals caught in the act of destroying property is entirely in the hands of the department, according to the law enforcement division, and instructions for disposition are given when the case is reported to the local conservation officer.

DOCTOR'S Prescription gives Bowels Real Help

Train your bowels to be regular to move at the same time every day; to be so thorough that they get rid of all the waste. Syrup Pepsin a doctor's prescription will help you do this. When you take this compound of laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, you are helping the bowels to help themselves.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the sensible thing to take whenever you are headachy, bilious, half-sick from constipation. When you have no appetite, and a bad taste or bad breath shows you're full of poisonous matter or sour bile.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for 17 years. His prescription always works quickly, thoroughly, can never do you any harm. It just cleans you out and sweetens the whole digestive tract. It gives those overworked bowels the help they need.

Take some Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin today, and see how fine you feel tomorrow—and for days to come. Give it to the kiddies when they're sickly or feverish; they'll like the taste! Your grocer has big bottles of it, all ready or use.

Lone Moose Pair Grows to Herd of 200 in 15 Years

Two venerable moose who sought refuge 15 years ago near an abandoned mine on Rock Creek, Montana, seem to have resolved to repopulate their neighborhood.

When the original pair were first noticed near the old mine in 1915, they were the only pair known to exist on the west fork of the river. But a recent census of the moose population there by Forest Ranger Stanley Lukens showed more than 200 head, according to a report of the American Game Protective association.

This increase of 10,000 per cent in 15 years was accomplished under the protection of a year-round closed season in that state.

FORD COMPANY PURCHASES LAND

One of the biggest land deals in the upper peninsula in recent years was the announcement recently of the purchase of 1,000 acres of ore land in Dickinson county by the Ford Motor company.

The tract includes parcels in Norway, Iron Mountain and Metropolitan, according to E. G. King-ford of Iron Mountain, representing the company. The transaction also includes the transfer of the interest of John March of Chicago, in the Millie mine, which includes what is known as that part of Iron Mountain located the top of East Ludington street, adjoining the Walpole Mining property, which was purchased several weeks ago by the Ford company. The Millie property contains 80 acres.

The remainder of the purchase comprises the property owned years ago by the Beaver Iron company.

How soon the company will begin to develop the new mining property has not yet been revealed.

"M" Professor Reports Finds Near Tel Umar

This year has revealed more articles of archaeological importance than were found during the two preceding seasons combined, in work at Tel Umar in Palestine, according to word received here from Prof. Leroy Waterman who is in charge of the Toledo-Michigan-Cleveland expedition.

Recent discoveries which are considered of great importance are a tablet of cuneiform writing, probably from the reign of Mithradates II, about 112 B. C., and a gold coin covered with Cufic or Arabic writing, which mentions the name of Mohammed the Prophet, according to Prof. Waterman. The cuneiform tablet is probably of a religious rather than business nature, it is said, and is therefore of considerably more importance and rarity. The gold coin is said to be of the Abasside period.

Other discoveries include a vaulted tomb, "but alas, cleared by the ancients themselves," according to Prof. Waterman. Other discoveries at the site include examples of concrete paving some 2,000 years old, as well as street drainage and brick conduits.

Grand Haven Is Called to Sewage Disposal Meeting

Indications that the state may force the hand of Grand Haven in arriving at some conclusions in the matter of sewage disposal have come with the invitation from the stream control commission to city officials to appear at the next regular meeting of the commission in February.

Proposal to bond the city for $250,000 for construction of a sewage disposal plant once was voted down by 100 votes and a second time by 7 votes, a three-fifths majority being required. The city has plans for a disposal plant and a trunkline system already prepared.

Mecosta Sympathetic Toward Northern San

Mecosta county will co-operate in the movement to obtain hospital facilities for tuberculosis patients in the northern part of the lower peninsula according to plans discussed by the board of supervisors. Local delegates have been chosen from the board to attend the conferences where sanatorium proposals are to be developed.

at the Vernon Parish Fair

"These were the only culinary entries I made, so I feel highly pleased at my success—due not altogether to my skill, but equally to the superior quality of the Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' Flour used. This was my first experience with Gold Medal and I had to go up against some mighty stiff competition as there are some fine pastry cooks in Leesville."

A Flour That's Virtually Mistake-Proof—Because It's
"Kitchen-tested" in Advance

TODAY more women are using GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour than any other brand. Chiefly because they find this all-purpose flour always gives uniform good results, whenever and however they use it. It will bring this same success in your baking, because all GOLD MEDAL Flour is "Kitchen-tested" before it comes to you. Breads, cakes, biscuits, pastries are baked from every batch—in a home oven just like your own. And only the flour that successfully passes this "Kitchen-test" is allowed to go out to you. You get only the flour that has been tested for baking success in advance.

GREGORY

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Arnold visited his brother, Charles Arnold, who lives near Perry Monday.

The King's Daughters held their annual meeting and election of officers at the home of Mrs. Ida Ovitt Wednesday. At 1 o'clock luncheon was served by the members of the first division. The election of officers resulted as follows: president, Jessie Lavey, vice president, Ella Stackable, treasurer, Inez Bowdish, secretary, Ruth Bollinger. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Grace Poole.

The Gregory school band had a 2 1/2 hour band practise under the direction of their instructor, Leo Metcalf, Wednesday afternoon. There are now 17 members in the band.

Mr. Comstock of Ann Arbor was in town on business Wednesday afternoon.

The school board, Ladies Aid Society, and King's Daughters have assumed the financial responsibility of having the township hall redecorated.

Mrs. Lois Watson of Ann Arbor visited her sister, Mrs. C. F. Bollinger Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Ruth Bollinger gave a bridge party for the entertainment of a group of friends Friday evening.

Katherine Crossman and Blanche and Charlotte Howlett were home over the week end.

Mrs. Hill and son, Faye, visited Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Berry and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Merrill of Fowlerville Sunday.

The high school held a party at the St. Charles home Friday evening. Edward Gillmore slipped on the ice and broke his ankle Monday forenoon.

Leo Naegle of Detroit spent the week end with relatives here.

Mrs. Mae Naegle is on the sick list.

Mrs. Marsh is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Foster of Lansing were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chipman.

The Ladies Aid Society will give a chicken pie supper at the hall Tuesday Feb. 10. They will begin to serve at 6:30 and continue until 8:40. A program will be given in the evening including a farce and music by the Gregory school band and many other features. The price is 25 cents for school children and 40 cents for adults.

The Young Peoples' class of the Sunday school held a party at the hall Thursday evening.

Earl Watson was in Ann Arbor Monday and Tuesday.

BOX SOCIAL AND FELLOWSHIP NIGHT

Friday evening February 6 is the date set for the box social and fellowship night which is being sponsored by the young people of the Congregational church.

This fellowship night has been given special attention and the young people are prepared to give you a most enjoyable time. The following committees have been appointed: program, G. M. Ness, Audrey Strively and Walter Mall; publicity, Misses Bessie Swarthout, Lucille Kennedy, Janet Felder, Margaret Meador, Myrtle Campbell and Dan VanShamrook have secured the services of Mr. Geo. Sively for auctioneer and Alonzo VanShamrook as clerk.

The program consists of a skit "A Pair of Lunatics" which will be presented by Walter Mall and Mildred Jack. Since it is the Golden Anniversary of Christian Endeavor a very impressive ceremony will be performed in which Dan VanShamrook as Rev. John Crusade will consecrate "Lion" Christmas and Knight Endeavor to the service of Christ and the church. Miss Hazel Chambers and Mr. Alonzo VanShamrook take the parts of Lady Christian and Knight Endeavor. Other people in the play are Marjorie Hendee, Midge Jack, Mervieve Meadon, Ralph Hall, Stanley Dinkel, and Merwin Campbell. Following the ceremony the group join in singing "Follow the Leader" accompanied by Eloyse Bergquist at the piano. A large birthday cake in honor of the Golden Anniversary will be cut and served during the evening.

Of course everyone young and old is invited and all are no doubt anxious to take part in the games, stunt relay races, and pop songs. You are urged to come and share in the fun and laughter of the evening but don't forget about the box social. All ladies, all ages, please bring boxes. All men and boys come prepared to buy. Coffee will be served free.

The proceeds of the social go to buy song books for use in Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, etc., so come and lend your aid. Friday evening February 6 at 8 o'clock.

After the Funeral

Our service does not end with the funeral. We assist the family in making proper acknowledgment of floral offerings and expressions of sympathy. For this purpose we supply a wide choice of cards and other stationery in correct styles. Our advice in this matter, where good taste is so essential, is based on long experience and careful study.
