Dairy Profit Meeting At Howell Mar 28

Dairy Profits Conference to Be Held at Howell, March 28. A Big Attendance Assured.

The Dairy Profits Conference to be held in Howell on March 28 will be one of the most comprehensive agricultural meetings ever held in this part of the state, in the opinion of A. C. Baltzer, dairy specialist of Michigan State College. Delegates are showing a keen interest in it and a full representation is expected.

The morning program will be taken up with the reports of the county-wide dairy survey now being completed and compiled and with brief discussions of this survey by specialists from Michigan State College at East Lansing. Among these will be A. C. Baltzer, dairy specialist, R. E. Decker, crops specialist and Paul Rood, soils specialist. They will bring out the relation of feeds to dairy profits and the soil requirements of the better dairy feed crops.

Also to appear on the program are A. F. Stephens and R. J. Silcott, agricultural agents of the Ann Arbor Railroad. They will serve as chairmen of the afternoon session which will be turned over to the delegates for a complete thrashing out of the dairy problems of the county and what can be done to bring the maximum profit to local dairymen.

It will be recalled, said Mr. Baltzer that the 1930 Livingston County Dairy Profits Conference went on as favoring the replacement of scrub dairy bull with quality purebreds, the raising of more legumes for roughage, the elimination of low profit cows, the feeding of a succulent roughage in winter, and the production of a higher quality of product. It was the opinion of the delegates that each of these practices would open the way to larger profit for every dairymen following them.

The first of these recommendations was the subject of a campaign during the summer of 1930 resulting in 107 high class purebred bulls being placed in the eleven counties co-operating.

They replaced 230 scrubs which were eliminated by being sent to market. It is expected that the recommendations made last year will be brought up for discussion developed in greater detail.

As was brought out at the 1930 conference there is need for improvement in the dairy business. The average annual production of all dairy cows in Michigan is only 5,194 pounds of milk and 198 pounds of butterfat which is scarcely enough to pay expenses under good market conditions according to government figures. Fewer and better cows fed better will help correct this situation according to A. C. Baltzer. This conference is expected to develop plans which will bring this about. The complete program of the conference follows:

- 9:45 a. m.—Registration of delegates
- 10:00 a. m.—Reading minutes 1930 conference.
- 10:20 a. m.—The Ann Arbor Railroad Company, and the local dairy industry.
- 10:30 a. m.—The influence of roughage and pasture on dairy products.
- 11:00 a. m.—The crops phase of dairy roughage and pasture by Roy Decker.
- 11:30 a. m.—The soils phase of dairy roughage and pasture by Paul Rood.
- 12:00 noon—Luncheon by local business organization.
- 1:00 p. m.—Drafting 1931 program of delegates.

Local Oil Station Changes to Dixie

Stabler Oil Co. and Hoff & Smith Consolidate, Will Handle Dixie Products Henceforth

Ten years ago or so Bert and Charles Hoff and Albert Smith of Howell secured the county Sinclair Agency and embarked in the oil business. Starting with a single station at Howell they built others at Pinckney, Brighton, Fowlerville and other points secured contracts with dealers until at the present time they supply 22 stations with oil and gas. Last fall they effected a consolidation with the Stabler Oil Co. of Ann Arbor which controls some 72 stations. This contract with Sinclair only recently ran out and the consolidation was not effected until Saturday, March 21 when the 22 stations in Livingston started selling Dixie products.

On this day 6 cut glass tumblers were given with every five gallons of gasoline and balloons to all children. Lee Lacey manager of the local station informs us that he gave out 108 dozen tumblers, and his supply of balloons was exhausted. He sold approximately 1000 gallons of gasoline. The pumps have all been repainted in the Dixie colors, blue and yellow, and the local station is prepared and ready to uphold the Dixie standard of service, courtesy, promptness and efficiency.

CRONE CASE POSTPONED

The case of William Crone of Putnam Lake charged with liquor possession has been put over until the next term of court. It was slated for trial at the March term of court. This is the outgrowth of a raid by Sheriff Finley last month on what was formerly Chalker's dance hall. It is alleged Crone did a bootlegging business there.

It is reported that Crone intends to plead guilty to the charge against him.

Capital Punishment Referendum Views

Letters Express the Views of Persons Favoring and Opposing the Law

Dexter, Michigan
March 22, 1931

Editor of Dispatch:

Incompetent as I am to discuss the merits of the capital punishment bill coming up for decision by the people yet I can not help but notice the unreasonable position so many are taking when they assert the execution of a criminal is "murder." This is so ridiculous it seems all the harder to refute, however, it may be enough to recall the common law definition of murder or part of it, "the unlawful killing of any reasonable creature." The sloppy way of comparing a wretched cold blooded killer with an officer of the law, as a sheriff, or with a soldier in time of war, each acting for the preservation of society and civilization, is enough to excite a wonder as to the kind of training such people have had or if ever they had the common sense that people are supposed to be endowed with.

As to the claim that capital punishment does not tend to reduce crime and is brutal, the fact remains that Canada with its numerous border cities where the death penalty has long been in force has no crime wave and there does not seem to be any big outcry there about the brutality of the law.

Yours truly,
M. T. Kelly

March 21, 1931

Editor of Dispatch:

I wonder if the good people when they cast their ballot April 6 will quite know just what they are doing. Not one in ten will read the amendment over as it is long and cumbersome and contains some 19 parts. If every Michigan voter takes the time to read it over it would take the state about 3 days to vote. The bill is one of the harshest ever drawn. First degree murder is defined as murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poison, lying in wait or any kind of willful, deliberate or premeditated killing or which shall be committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate any arson, rape, robbery, burglary, kidnapping for ransom or shall be committed in escaping or attempting to escape from any penal institution. All these murders are punishable by death.

Only two classes exempted of first degree murder are exempted from the death penalty. They are persons under the age of 17 years and pregnant women.

The sentence is mandatory that if a person convicted of first degree murder must be punished by death. The judge or jury has absolutely no say in the sentence. The only way to stay execution is to apply to the supreme court for a new trial.

Do the people realize that if this bill becomes a law it will undoubtedly be that they will themselves serve on juries that will be forced by the provisions of this law to condemn some unfortunate to the electric chair. No one should vote for this law who would not, when examined for jury duty, be willing to speed a murderer on his way to the electric chair thus placing him in the same category as the executioner who presses the button releasing the death dealing electric current.

A murderer on trial fighting for his life will become more or less of a heroic figure thus endangering the calm, dispassionate consideration of the facts of the crime. Such a trial will easily lend itself to sensationalism which panders to public curiosity in an unhealthy condition. It is a pity that the crime wave outside of Detroit is no less of a myth as regards murder. The murder rate in Detroit according to statistics of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. is 10.5 per hundred thousand. The rate for the state of Michigan is but 8.2, California which has long since abolished the death penalty has a rate of 15.3 per hundred thousand.

In this section three states have the death penalty and three have not. The three with the death penalty are Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Their murder rate for the last ten years is Ohio, 7.6, Indiana, 6.8, and Illinois, 9.6. The rate for the 3 states which have no death penalty are Mich., 6.9, Wisconsin, 2.1, and Minnesota, 2.9. This gives the three death penalty

Current Comment

The proposed Old Age Pension law will probably not be enacted at all now, at least not during the present session of the Michigan legislature. Gov. Brucker favors such a bill but the main difficulty is in devising a way to raise the funds with which to pay it. An increase in the property tax is out of the question and the various unions and fraternal organizations behind the bill are all opposed to the $2.00 head tax financing plan. A public hearing on the proposed bill was scheduled to be held at Lansing before the judiciary committee today at which delegates from 47 cities of the Fraternal order of Eagles, which organization is the principal backer of the bill are to attend. Another unsettled question is whether only paupers shall benefit by the pension bill or whether the object of the bill is to prevent people becoming paupers.

The Michigan Cow Tuberculosis Testing law is again being tested in Court by a suit started in Ionia by Herbert E. Powell, state agricultural Commissioner, against Edward S. Townsend, Ionia county drover.

The bill of complaint states that Townsend purchased cattle in Detroit last December and shipped them to Ionia on stipulation that he would have them tested on his arrival there. This he refused to do.

A reply bill drawn up counsel for Townsend says the defendant is willing to submit the cattle to a test at his own expense provided a clause in the Michigan statute can be found compelling him to do so. Townsend several months ago figured in an unsuccessful attempt there to have the cow testing law set aside as illegal.

MORE PHILATHEA ITEMS

As noted last week, Mrs. Meda Henry, our class secretary was hostess at a pleasant gathering of Philathea and friends on Wednesday afternoon at her home east of town. About twenty people were gathered for the social and business hour, which was opened by singing and followed by the devotionals conducted by Miss Clella Fish in the absence through illness of our chaplain, Mr. Berquist. Several items of ordinary business were presented and the flower and missionary committees reported. Special missionary work was suggested by the committee, who were given authority to carry this out according to their discretion.

Mrs. Edna Campbell extended an invitation to meet with her for the April meeting. One new member, Mrs. Phillip Sprunt, was welcomed into the class. A resolution by Mrs. Jean Clark was the first program number, followed by a reading, "St. Patrick's Day" by Mrs. Fish. A pleasing contribution to the program was a solo "Dixie" by Mrs. Lola Rogers, followed by an amusing and well rendered parody on "Carole must not sing tonight" by Miss Bessie Swarthout. The wonderful skill of our ladies was ably demonstrated as we joined in the game next put on by Mrs. Rogers and in which side no. 2 came off victorious. The free will offering and the hot luck supper were other features in a pleasurable afternoon.

In connection with our own committee work, it is to be hoped that as many ladies as possible will avail themselves of the special invitation from our church missionary society to be present at their regular meeting on this Wednesday afternoon. Also that the Philathea will note the suggestion of our superintendent that in the absence of the usual program of singing, we make a special effort to attend prayer meetings one of the best meetings of our church.

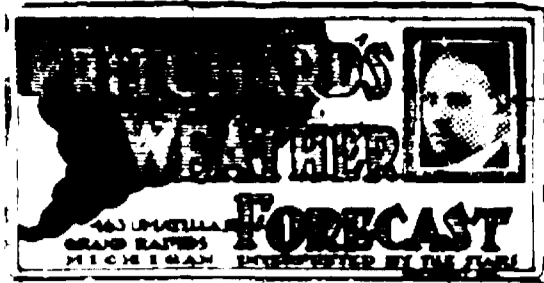

It is our hope that we will understand and appreciate the value of the volunteer pleasant fellowship group, the Ladies Bible Class and the Philathea. We will not resume their separate lesson periods. The Philathea have sincerely appreciated the generous co-operation of the past weeks and it is with real regret that we thus lose them.

Next Sunday will be our quarterly review "Jesus the World's Saviour, Preparation and Popularity." Devotional reading, Isaiah 25:1-10. Come early for church, special Palm Sunday services, special music.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank the King's Daughters, the Philathea Class, Rev. Berquist and my many friends, neighbors and relatives for the beautiful flowers, fruit, and cards sent me during my long illness.

WEEK OF MARCH 29

The week of March 29th begins with cloudy and unsettled weather over most parts of Michigan. Temperatures will be rising during Sunday and storms of rain or snow may be expected on this day and Monday.

There may be a lull in storminess, if no actual clearing up about Tuesday, but more storminess may be expected immediately following.

The month of April opens with temperatures becoming much warmer in a rather energetic storm area coming from the west. Early thunder storms are probable together with high winds. Heavy showers and rains at this time are apt to change to sleet in those sections where the temperatures range close to freezing.

The greater part of this storm will show most of its activity in Michigan during the first three days of the new month. By Saturday the winds will have veered to the west and the sky will be clearing. Temperatures will be falling rapidly during Friday and Saturday, so that readings below the normal for the season will be registered as the week ends.

Snow Saves State

The snow and wind storms in Michigan around March 7 and 8, as predicted in this column, did much to help the farmer in his work this spring and summer. This storm was the result of several combined astronomical causes that greatly increased the electrical potential.

Contrary to general belief that snow storms come from the north, this particular storm center came from near the Gulf of Mexico loaded with water vapor evaporated from the Gulf of Mexico. Besides putting much needed moisture into the soil this snow brought several tons of nitrogen fertilizer to Michigan.

Those Lucky Pullens!

Julia stood a moment in indecision. She moved swiftly after him. He was already on the pavement when she reached the porch.

"Sam!" she called. He lowered his head and broke into a run. She watched, after him, her arms clasped on her bosom, until he was out of sight. Then she returned to the hall and dropped into the armchair, her hands limp in her lap.

She sat for a long time, the murmur of her father's voice coming steadily through the closed door of the kitchen, as he read.

At last the door swung open. "Julia," said Mrs. Pullen, appearing in the doorway. "I've been thinking about this house we can't build. I'd like to have a fine big house—I'll be glad, and it'll simply shrivel those old crows around here, but what's the matter?"

Advancing, she had drawn near Julia, and now discovered the girl's listless pose, and the white lines that showed around her mouth.

"What's wrong, child?" asked the mother, with concern. "Nothing," said Julia, looking away. "Not a word," she said, and Mrs. Pullen, who had been talking about her, said, "Julia, push her mother's arm away. He didn't—she didn't talk about blouses," she said. "It was my fault! I'm so mean! Mama, I'm so awfully mean!"

Suddenly she was in tears, her face upon her mother's breast. The older woman embraced her, stroking the dark hair. "There, there! Mama's baby," she said, recalling the language of the girl's infancy. "Mama'll fix it! Don't cry, darling."

She frowned at Pullen, over Julia's head. "Look what you did!" she whispered, fiercely. "You and your Sam!"

The father retreated, and stood in the rear doorway, looking anxiously at his wife and the crying girl. It was ten minutes before Mrs. Pullen, still exclaiming tender maternal phrases, was able to lead her daughter up the stairs, and put her to bed. She remained, sitting with Julia's hand in hers, until the clicking of the door closed, and the girl was asleep.

When she tiptoed to the lower floor, Pullen was wandering around disconsolately. "How is she?" he asked. "What in the heck is happened?"

His wife faced him, in the attitude of a woman who, kneeling on her knees, had been sharply rebuking upward.

"It was you and your talk about blouses did it," said she, with hostile emphasis. "You and your blouses!"

"Did she say so?" he asked. "She couldn't say anything, poor dear," Mrs. Pullen was proceeding to give her husband details as to her opinion of him, when her attention was attracted by sounds on the front porch.

"Go see what that is," she said, sharply. Pullen obeyed, opening the door with caution and squinting his eyes to penetrate the gloom.

"Why, it's Sam," he said. "Come in, son!" Mrs. Pullen hastened to the front. "Is that you, Sam Carlie?" she demanded.

The youth appeared in the rectangle of light from the hall lamp. "Yes, it's me," he said.

Sam looked at the inner band of his hat. "Wanted-to-tell-her-I-loved-her," he said, rapidly, as if the sentence were all one word.

"Oh—was that all?" asked his hostess, in disappointment. Pullen, who had remained in the background, emitted a sound that closely resembled a snicker. Sam did not look up from his hat, but Mrs. Pullen glared.

"Fred," she said, "you quit acting that way!" Then, turning a shoulder to her husband, she drew the little hall chair close to Carlie. "I've been suspecting something like that, Sam," she continued. "It's hard to fool a girl's mother. I've had an idea right along that you were shining up to Julia."

"Some detective," observed Pullen. His wife tossed a sharp command to him. Fred, you go back in the kitchen. I want to talk to Sam."

Pullen obeyed, but catching Carlie's eye as the boy shifted his gaze from the hat band, he gave Sam an elaborate wink.

"Now, Sam," Mrs. Pullen went on, "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but I'm Julia's mother, and I have to help her when I can. She doesn't want to marry you."

"I'm sorry about Sam," he said, when he and Julia were safely away from the curb. "I'm not so sorry," she said. "He was trying to give me orders. It's a kind of punishment."

"But, Julia—don't you want to marry him?" She made a mark on the glass beside her with her glove. "I don't look of getting married," she said. "Probably I shan't ever marry."

"He was silent for another block. Then he observed, with resignation: "God didn't put the same wheels in a woman's head that he put in a man's. I suppose what you really mean is, you'll marry him or perish in the attempt."

The subject was dropped, but once, as they were nearing the building where she worked, Julia reached up and pinched her father's chin, tenderly.

Though the coming of Sam and Mrs. Pullen's advice to him, had obscured the mandarin's diamonds for the moment, these costly jewels were uppermost in the thoughts of all three Pullens that day.

"They confessed as much when they passed in the evening. 'I could hardly work, I was so excited,'" said Julia at dinner. "I made more mistakes than I ever did in my life, and Mr. Murty called me down, he said—'that if he were only pretending to work, I'd better try some other office!'"

"He might discharge you," warned Mrs. Pullen. "But goodness! I was that way myself. My fingers were all thumbs—I kept thinking about that chest and all the diamonds in it, every blessed minute."

"Did you talk to Murty?" Pullen asked his daughter. "Yes, I told him all about it. So he said to leave it to him—he'll write to the consul in Canton, and tell what we know."

"My, oh, me!" sighed Mrs. Pullen. "If we had those diamonds now! We could build our house, and take a vacation at some neighboring resort and just roll high!"

Her husband shook his head, sadly. "It's too bad. A million today and nothing tomorrow! Elsie, I really believe those diamonds were in our Chinese chests—one of 'em, anyway."

"Of course they were!" said she. "Who said they weren't?" "Nobody," he answered. After dinner, they talked about the proposed new house. But cutting down its size Pullen said he could manage to meet the cost.

Without observing the change in her daughter's attitude, Mrs. Pullen drained the cream-pitcher into her cup, filling the remaining space with coffee. "Indeed, I did," she said, "and he went, too. He had the impertinence to say he had a secret to tell you—"

The tenseness in Julia's arms relaxed a trifle. "—and I made him tell me what it was," Mrs. Pullen's lips curled with amusement. "He said he wanted to tell you he loved you!"

"The girl's hands dropped into her lap, and a pleased smile lifted the corners of her mouth. "Go on!" she said, softly.

"I told him just to forget all about it," the mother continued, sipping her coffee. "I said you had a lot of rich suitors, and he could never support you the way you're used to. I showed him our fine furniture, and mentioned your ring and the necklace—what did you say is the name of those beads?"

"Cornelian," said the girl, absently. "Cornelian," repeated the mother. "It's so hard to remember. So I told him you didn't want to hurt his feelings, but never would marry him. A faint look of injury came to her face for a moment. 'I think you ought to attend to those things for yourself, Julia. You make me do all the talking for you!'"

She moved her chair and rising, started for the hall. Returning presently, with her coat and hat, she added: "But I guess it didn't do so awfully much harm this time. Coming, daddy?"

Pullen had been showing signs of acute unamusement, and now he left the table, his eggs and bacon unfinished. He hurried into the garage next door to his car, and waved goodbye to Mrs. Pullen from the street.

"I'm sorry about Sam," he said, when he and Julia were safely away from the curb. "I'm not so sorry," she said. "He was trying to give me orders. It's a kind of punishment."

"But, Julia—don't you want to marry him?" She made a mark on the glass beside her with her glove. "I don't look of getting married," she said. "Probably I shan't ever marry."

CHAPTER XLVI

"I think it's so nice, Mr. Parks, for a young man to be respectful to ladies," said Mrs. Pullen, sinking into the chair the young man offered.

"Julia, you sit down, too. Why do you look so cross, child?" The girl said nothing, but came and took her seat on one of the discarded dining-room chairs, beside her mother.

"What did you want to see me about?" Pullen asked, leaning against the stair rail. Parks sat on the couch, and lifted his nose-glasses. "The thought is this," he said. "I am an attorney-at-law, as you know. I have no private practice since I am employed in the same office."

He bowed to Julia—"as your charming daughter. I desire to open an office of my own to become, in short, independent."

"Well?" said Pullen, rather impatiently. The young man put on his glasses and continued. "You have a business, Mr. Pullen, a growing business. You will need the services of a counselor. I would think it a privilege to have you as a client. I would defend you in lawsuits, take action against persons who have defrauded you, collect moneys due you, be your legal agent, guide and confidant. He took off the glasses and waved them to and fro.

"I've got a lawyer," said Pullen. "Follow who goes out and collects rent money. He doesn't make much."

"But," said Parks—"pardon me if I mention it—I can't choose but know you are becoming a man of consequence in this city. In fact, report has it that you are becoming one of the city's prosperous men. Your household—"

"In brief, Mr. Pullen, it would be an honor to me to ally myself with a coming wealthy citizen."

"I don't give a cuss who you ally yourself with," returned the host, rudely. Pullen's dislike of the young man on the couch had plainly been rising, and now overflowed with vigor.

"I don't think you've got sense enough to be anybody's lawyer. Stay here and talk to Julia if you want to. I'm going upstairs."

"Why, Fred!" cried Mrs. Pullen. Her husband, however, stolidly tramped up the steps, and in a moment the door of his bedroom slammed behind him.

"We certainly apologize," said Pullen's wife, aghast. "Julia and I apologize for what he said, Mr. Parks."

The attorney, disconcerted, was trying to attach his glasses to the top button of his waistcoat, against the handicap of a shaking hand. "Why," said he, "Good gracious!"

He passed nervous fingers over his hair. "Thank you for your good words, Mrs. Pullen. I don't deny that I am—in short, I am hurt! My feelings are wounded."

She got up, crossed the narrow space between them, and sat beside him on the couch. "Julia and I wouldn't have had this happen for worlds," she said. "Julia is so fond of you."

"Ah," he said. His eyes rolled toward the girl. "Yes," Mrs. Pullen went on, "she's spoken of you so often. I think Mr. Pullen is out of sorts. I know he is. It was—it was something that upset him."

Parks had regained his composure, and he looked at his hostess with polite inquiry. "It was about a fortune—a large fortune," she explained.

"Mama!" said Julia, warningly. "Well, it was about a fortune," insisted her mother. "You know it was."

GIANT AZTEC BEAN

The above illustration was reproduced from an actual photograph, to show the comparative size of the Giant Aztec Bean with that of the common field or navy bean.

LARGEST OF ALL BEANS It is a real bean; looks like a field or navy bean except that it is 8 or 9 times as large. 18 or 20 Giant Aztec beans usually weigh an ounce, while it takes from 160 to 170 of the common field beans to weigh an ounce. It is a bush bean; will stand more drought than most varieties; very hardy; and probably the most productive bean grown. One plant, 257 days old, in two years ago he secured four beans, the product of which he replanted last spring, and in the fall harvested 240 pounds of dry beans. The quality of the Giant Aztec Bean is such that it can be used as a green and dry shell bean. Our supply of seed is limited, and the price is high, but now is the time to get started with this wonderful bean. 8 bushels, $20. 40 bushels, $100. One-fourth lb., $2.00, postpaid.

A study of one thousand families using the ELECTROCHEF electric range showed a cooking cost of less than one cent a meal a person.

"One of the nicest things about my ELECTROCHEF electric range is its snowy spotlessness. So many of my friends remark that here is a stove you want to keep clean! . . . The ELECTROCHEF was designed with this thought in mind. Simply wiping with a damp cloth keeps the white enamel surfaces immaculate. Cleaning the smooth porcelain is as easy as cleaning a china dish. The range itself is so strikingly modern that it helps to modernize my kitchen. . . . Best of all, there are no cracks or crevices to collect dirt. All corners are rounded, even inside the oven, and the metal parts of the stove are finished in never-rust Chromeplate. All my friends admire my splendid ELECTROCHEF."

ELECTROCHEF'S CASH PRICE IS $105 INSTALLED including all necessary wiring. $10 down, $6 a month, small carrying charge. Sales under these conditions to Detroit Edison customers only.

This Investment Will Pay 8 Per Cent

Such rich returns on your money are very tempting and each year thousands of people invest their hard earned savings in "gold bricks."

To all appearances these investments are perfectly sound. Some very wise business heads have been fooled.

But the man who offers you "get rich schemes" is thinking only of himself—he will be the one to profit, not you.

Good advice is this: "If you can't afford to lose—don't take any chances. If you really wish to invest there are many safe ways and we will be glad to help you. Our experience is at your service.

But the soundest investment of all is to put your money in the bank where the principal is safe—and good interest certain!

NO REST FOR HARRY
Harry German, mayor of Northville, still has his troubles. Former City Commissioner Perrin has gone into court to get Harry out of office. The ground for his complaint is that German resigned from office when charges of incompetency and misconduct were made against him without disapproving the charges. Perrin claims this disqualifies Harry from holding office. German and all the village commissioners resigned. German became a candidate for re-election and was victorious getting 110 majority.

Why Risk It?

Woodrow Wilson, playing golf one day with three friends, followed a particularly slow foursome with a habit of holding long and intimate discussions on every green. Coming to a short hole, the confab lasted for a full ten minutes, and the Wilson group reached the last stages of nervous exasperation.

"I wouldn't," advised the President. "You might miss them."—Collier's Weekly.

Double Duty Tree

In the garden of Stanley bay, Auckland, New Zealand, there stands an old lemon tree that produces not only its rightful fruit throughout the year but, in season, fine sweet oranges as well. At times the tree has a good crop of both fruits. Neither is tainted with the peculiarities of the other. A close examination of the tree gives one no explanation of the freak. The secret is that an orange root has been grafted to that of a lemon and the stem of the orange has grown into that of the lemon, forming what appears to be one tree.

Mother Nature Provides Protection for Insects

Many animals, birds, fish and insects are shaped and colored by nature in such a way as to protect them from their enemies. This marvelous provision is seen at its best in some new groups of stick insects and leaf insects which recently arrived at the zoo. The stick insects have come from the East Indies, and they are of a light greenish brownish color, measuring from 2 inches to 4 or 5 inches in length. They are very thin, indeed, and they are so much like tiny twigs or sticks that it is almost impossible to distinguish them from their surroundings. They imitate the twigs exactly, folding their slender legs close to their bodies, and hanging from the smaller branches just like leafless stalks. Leaf insects are of a bright green tint, and are shaped exactly like leaves, their wings being folded over one another and marked with veins. Even their six legs are shaped like smaller leaves; and as they hunt among the foliage of trees for the smaller insects they feed upon, they are quite safe from the birds, which think they are merely leaves.—London Answers.

Millers Do Not Cost More

There are several good makes of tires on the market, but some are better than others. Among these better tires Millers hold an undisputed high place. Millers have always been built to give service. That is what has given them their reputation. This reputation has created an impression that Millers cost more than the so-called "standard makes." As a matter of fact they don't. You can buy a Miller for the same price you would pay elsewhere for a tire with a lesser reputation. Give us a call the next time you need a tire; you won't regret it. The Millers of today are the toughest longest wearing and easiest-riding tires that ever came out of the Miller plant—and the prices are the lowest in Miller history.

This community was very much grieved to learn Friday afternoon that Richard Kuchar, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kuchar had passed away at St. Joseph's Mercy hospital in Ann Arbor, Richard was born in Chicago, Ill., January 29, 1886. Besides his parents he is survived by a brother, Bennie, and a sister, Betty. He graduated in the eighth grade from Hamburg village school last May, and was a freshman at University High school, Ann Arbor. He was a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal church and the Boy Scouts of Hamburg. Funeral services were held at his late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. William F. Taps were sounded by trumpeters, Orland McKinley of troop 2, Howell and Eagle Scout, Albert Schrader of troop 4 of Ypsilanti. About 40 uniformed scouts attended in a body, from Howell, Brighton, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Whitmore Lake and Hamburg, accompanied by Scout executives Wallace Watt of Ann Arbor, Mr. Stanton of Howell and Mr. Weeks of Brighton. Among those from away who attended the funeral were Mr. Kuchar's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Snider of Wisconsin and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hurska of Chicago, Ill., Mr. Kuchar's brother, Mr. Kuchar of Chicago, Mrs. Kuchar's sister and niece of Chicago, Arlain Taylor of Detroit, lay reader of St. Stephen's representatives from University High school and Ann Arbor Daily News, members of Brighton Masons, O. Wednesday evening was a "Red Letter" day in the annals of the Boy Scout troop of Hamburg, when the court of honor of Livingston county was entertained by Hamburg troop at I. O. O. F. hall. About two hundred Boy Scouts from Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Howell, Fowlerville, Hartland, Brighton, Pinckney, Whitmore Lake and Hamburg were in attendance with about fifty visitors from the same places. The meeting was in charge of Dr. Homer Mitchell Noble, pastor of First Presbyterian church of Howell, president of Livingston County Scout Council, who made some fine remarks. The speaker of the evening was Prof. E. V. Jotter of the Forestry department of the University of Michigan. Ralph Holmes was admitted to Hamburg troop. All the other members of Hamburg troop and many others received their badges and pins as second class scouts, others received badges and pins as third class scouts, while John Rane of Whitmore Lake and Benjamin Clark of Brighton were made Star scouts. The council from Ypsilanti built the golden arch which was lit with electricity, the fixtures for same having been made by boys of the council. Washtenaw council of Ann Arbor presented moving pictures of the World War. The next court of honor will be held at Howell. The date will be announced later. Dr. Noble pronounced it the finest meeting he had ever attended. God speed the organization and may many new recruits be enrolled.

The card party given by Hamburg and Whitmore Lake troops of Boy Scouts at I. O. O. F. hall Thursday evening was a decided success. Twenty-four tables of progressive euchre were in play, with many not playing. First prizes were won by Miss Ruth Fisher of Whitmore Lake and Dr. Alec H. Pearson; consolation by Miss Olive Walsh of Whitmore Lake and E. Wray Hinckley. The prizes were donated by Wayne G. Jury, William Dillway and James W. Featherly of Hamburg. The net proceeds were $36.35 to be divided 50 - 50 between the two troops.

Not Quite the Same
A maid in the home of a well known Springfield individual caused a sensation in the kitchen recently when she announced that the head of the house had just informed her that "he wanted beer for dinner."

Since the man was known to be an ardent total abstainer, before the order was complied with a cautious inquiry was instituted. This disclosed that what was really said by the man was: "I won't be here for dinner," Springfield Union.

GARDEN HINTS

PLANTING PLAN, FIRST STEP IN GARDEN SUCCESS

A Planting Chart for the Garden is the first step toward success. Secure a large piece of heavy paper that will become a permanent record of results during the whole season. Lay off the boundaries of your garden to a pre-determined scale (1/4 inch to the foot is a convenient scale). List all the vegetables and flowers you wish to plant. Then note opposite the name of each plant the distances between rows and between plants in the row.

Every well planned garden will have the following divisions:

1. A section for early maturing vegetables like lettuce, radishes, onions, which may be replaced after maturity early in the summer, by others.
2. A section for late maturing vegetables that will occupy the soil all season, as melons, cucumbers, cabbage.
3. A section for perennial plants and vegetables which grow from season to season without replanting, such as rhubarb, asparagus, horseradish, globe artichoke, and the like. These should be planted at one side of the garden plot where they will not interfere with work on the other portion.

Keeping in mind the advisability of grouping these three classes of vegetables, draw off the rows you propose to devote to each of the plants on your list, giving each kind the necessary room for best development. Several plantings of many kinds of vegetables are advisable in order to insure harvesting over a long period. For this reason, successive plantings of corn, tomatoes, peas, beans, lettuce and others should be marked clearly on the chart.

The planting chart serves as a picture of the garden-to-be even before spading and preparation of the soil are begun. It should show clearly what, where and when each vegetable is to be planted. It should be preserved as a record of the dates and amounts harvested so it can be used in following years as a guide to an even better garden. The mistakes in culture, scarcity or over-abundance of each kind of vegetable as recorded on the chart, are the best teachers of the proper procedure for the next season.

Summerless Year
The year 1916 is popularly known as "the year without a summer." Of course this term is a misnomer and is not to be taken literally. But in the northern states there were frosts in every month of the year, and similar adverse weather conditions prevailed in Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy, and other parts of Europe. Data collected by the weather bureau, however, show that the worst features of this Summer were exaggerated by writers, and only a few of the less hardy crops and plants suffered from the cold during the summer of 1916.

Lost!
The minister having failed to appear at the hour for service at a church in a Highland Glen, one of the elders, a shrewd farmer, entered the pulpit to conduct the service.
He got through the preliminary exercises without mishap, and then gave out the text: "I am the good shepherd." Three times he repeated the words: "I am the good shepherd," but could proceed no further.

Too Prolonged an Experiment
Somerset Maugham, playwright and novelist, says that the wittiest after-dinner speech he has ever heard was made by an American at a London dinner party. To the visitor had been allotted the toast of "The Ladies." He began by saying that a distinguished man of letters had suggested that marriage should be on the basis of a seven years' lease, renewable at the option of both parties.
Followed a pause. Then, with sad deliberation:
"Now, gentlemen, seven years is a very long time." Kansas City Times

Capital Punishment Referendum Views

states an average murder rate of 7.8 and the three states without death penalty an average murder rate of 3.9. These figures are from the report of Dr. Frederick Hoffman of the Prudential Life Ins. Co. and would tend to effectually dispute the widely advanced opinion that the death penalty reduces the murder rate.

Yours truly,

HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Robert Cooper, 34, of Howell and his brother, F. J. Cooper, 34, of Gladwin were badly injured Tuesday morning when their car struck a large truck and trailer near Williamston. They were rushed to Sparrow hospital.

Robert Cooper suffered a fractured skull and had his right arm broken in three places. F. J. was not so badly injured. The former is a member of the auto accessory firm of Cooper and Love of Howell.

TWO BILLS INTRODUCED

Two bills of interest to people of this section were introduced in the legislature by Rep. A. C. Pack of Ann Arbor, Tuesday. One provides that the board of county road commissioners be elected by a vote of the people. The other that universities may not take over fraternity houses, thus exempting them from taxation. The first would be subject to a referendum. This measure applies only to Washtenaw County. The road commissioners are now elected by the Board of Supervisors and Washtenaw county experienced considerable trouble with her road commissioners last year.

Livingston might follow suit also as the board of supervisors were unable to agree on a road commissioner here last year so one was not elected until after a delay of several months.

Regardless of Cost

IN FUNERAL service and the merchandise required for it, there are degrees of quality and price. It would be absurd to state that all caskets, for example, represent exactly the same value in materials, designs and workmanship. It would be equally foolish to fix an arbitrary price for the personal service involved, regardless of the demands made by the individual case.

Our display room offers a choice of merchandise in a price range to meet the needs of all; in the matter of personal service, we are prepared to make it as simple or as elaborate as it may be desired. But whatever the price, our merchandise represents the very best values obtainable for the money. And our personal service is unfailingly efficient, dependable and sympathetic.
