

St. Mary's Annual Picnic To Be Held August 1

To Be Held at Lapham's Grove Near Pinckney on Sat., August 1. Chicken Dinner, Amusements, Band, Ball Game and Dance in the Evening.

The annual picnic of St. Mary's parish of Pinckney will be held on Saturday, August 1, this year. This is the big day of the year in Pinckney and is the day we celebrate. It is known as "Old Timer's Day" as many former residents of this section select this auspicious occasion on which to visit the old home town and renew old acquaintances.

The out of town guests begin to arrive early in the morning and proceed to hunt up old friends. At 11:00 the big chicken dinner is served at Lapham's grove as only the ladies of the parish know how to serve it. Several hours is required to serve all of the people. While this is taking place the amusements and band concerts are on in full swing and the concessions on the grounds are liberally patronized.

At 4:00 an electric clock or a purse of money will be given away to the person guessing the correct time the clock stops.

The music for the day will be furnished by the 50 piece band of Fowlerville which has been giving weekly concerts there all summer.

The Finlan Sisters of Fowlerville will sing and as an added attraction Mae, the magician will give six 15 minute slight of hand and ledger-main acts at the grove.

Following this will come the base ball game. Pinckney will play Fowlerville this year. The local aggregation will present a strong lineup on this occasion and will be prepared to put on another such contest as that one staged at Howell last Fourth of July when Pinckney took a fourteen inning contest from Fowlerville 2 to 1.

A dance will be held in the Pinckney Community Hall in the evening. Jean Goldkettes orchestra of Detroit has been secured to furnish music for the evening and a big time is promised. Remember that all roads lead to Pinckney on Saturday, August 1.

PINCKNEY LOSES AT CHELSEA 5 TO 1

Pinckney played the Odd Fellow team at Chelsea last Friday night and lost 5 to 1. Sheiks started pitching for Pinckney but lacked control and was removed in the second inning after Chelsea had scored 4 runs on one hit and four bases on balls. Kinney relieved him and let Chelsea down with one run the remainder of the game. Pinckney out hit Chelsea 6 to 4 but were unable to bunch them. The locals only run came in the 7th inning. Andy Singer singled to left but was forced at second by R. Singer. Shehan grounded to pitcher. Shirey hit to center scoring R. Singer. This game makes the series even, Pinckney winning the first game 8 to 9.

Dairy Train To Visit County on August 15

Will Make All Day Stop at Howell Special Program for Women

Livingston County will be visited by the Dairy Profits-Alfalfa Train when it stops at Howell on August 15. This train is being operated over the Ann Arbor road on a cooperative project between the agricultural development department of that county and the Michigan State College Extension Service. The dairy, crops and soils departments of the state college will all be represented, according to A. F. Stephens, agricultural agent on the Ann Arbor.

This train will be the first step in a program to get more alfalfa started on the farms of this county. It is a part of the general plan developed by the delegates to the Dairy Profits Conference last spring. At this conference delegates urged that enough alfalfa be fed all the dairy cattle be grown on every farm. They pointed out that it ranks first among all hay crops in feeding value per acre.

On feature of the train will be a car-fitted as a soil testing laboratory. Every farmer in the county is encouraged to bring samples of soil from his farm and have it tested free of charge at the train. This is the first step in preparing to grow alfalfa.

It is planned to give specific recommendations to everyone having soil test made so as to eliminate the usual causes of failure to growing this crop. A brief speaking program is planned. The entire train, including the program, exhibits and soil will center around the dependence of dairy profits on growing the right feed crops.

Arrangements are being made for a special women's program to be held in connection with the men's meeting. Dairy dishes and new uses of milk and dairy products in the diet will feature the women's meeting.

FACES STIFF PENALTY

Recently a run was started on the Belding bank which forced that institution to close its doors. The bank officials traced the trouble to one person in particular and applied for a warrant for his arrest. The law covering this is Act 273 of 1909. It reads as follows:

"Any person who shall wilfully and maliciously make, circulate or transmit to another or others, any statement, rumor or suggestion, written, printed or by word of mouth, which is directly or by inference derogatory to the financial condition or effects the solvency or financial standing of any incorporated bank, savings bank, banking institution or trust company doing business in this state, or who shall counsel, aid, procure or induce another to start, transmit or circulate any such statement or rumor shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than five years, or both."

A bank failure or closing is about the worst calamity which can befall a community. It destroys public confidence in all things and it takes many years of patient effort to restore this. A report was widely circulated here one day last week concerning an institution in a near by town. It later proved to be absolutely without foundation. To circulate a false report about a bank's solvency is about as dangerous as crying fire in a packed assembly hall.

AGNES WATSON

Agnes Watson, aged 26, died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Claude Rose, in Unadilla, July 8, after a lingering illness of tuberculosis. The funeral was held from the home Saturday at 2:00 p. m. Rev. Rheingans of the Unadilla Presbyterian church officiating. Burial was in the Unadilla cemetery.

The deceased was well known here. She graduated from the Stockbridge High school and attended the Normal College, following which she taught country school for several years. Her untimely death is a matter of deep regret to her many friends in this section. Surviving is her mother, Mrs. Claude Rose, her father, A. C. Watson and one sister, Ruth, of Howell. A brother preceded her to the great beyond several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meyers and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts near Gregory.

The Call of the Great Outdoors

County Motor Boat Ordinance Ruled Void

Attorney General Voorhies Rules That It Conflicts With State Laws Regarding Same.

Last winter the Livingston county board of supervisors passed a resolution or law, licensing all motor boats operating upon the lakes and streams of Livingston county. A speed limit was also fixed and certain hours for operating the boats. We were under the impression that the law had been approved by the governor but such seems not to be the case. A similar law enacted by Lapeer county has been declared unconstitutional by Attorney General Voorhies. The following is his opinion:

County ordinances attempting to place stringent regulations upon motorboat operators in inland streams and lakes were declared invalid by Paul W. Voorhies, attorney general, today. He held that local regulations must be consistent with the state law or they are void.

The ruling was made in connection with a question as to the validity of a Lapeer county ordinance, which among other things, attempts to fix a speed limit for boats and to prohibit the use of motorboats Sundays prior to 9 a. m. Voorhies held that these regulations and similar ones in ordinances in other counties are void because they are contrary to the state law.

He held that streams and lakes are public highways subject to the laws of the state and when counties attempt to enlarge upon the state acts, they are attempting to set up independent laws for themselves.

The matter of charging a license fee for the boats seems not to have been passed on by the attorney general. The ordinance has been enforced in this county for the past month or more.

PINCKNEY SCHOOL MEETING

The annual meeting of Pinckney school district No. 2 was held in the school building, Monday evening. A very small attendance was present, only 20 votes being cast. Mrs. Alta Meyers, present of the board acted as chairman. M. J. Reason and R. J. Carr were nominated for trustees. Each received 10 votes. Mr. Reason then withdrew and R. J. Carr was declared elected. For the other trustee Mrs. Alta Meyers received 16 votes, M. J. Reason 3 and one was blank. Mrs. Alta Meyers was declared elected. The annual report was read and adopted. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

Boy Scout Activities At Camp Newkirk

Final Two Week Period to Open Sunday, July 19. Eight Pinckney Boys Now at Camp Newkirk.

The final two week period of Camp Newkirk will open Sunday afternoon July 19th, with cubs and scouts from both Livingston and counties in attendance. Pinckney scouts in camp include Arnold Berquist, Pat Dillon, Bill Dillon, Billy Meyer, Hugh Sorenson, Ambrose Kennedy, Howard Read and Robert Read.

At a court of honor held at Camp Newkirk Sunday, Floyd Haines and Gerald Clinton and Bill Dillon passed the tests and were given second class certificates.

One of the strongest features of Camp Newkirk this season has been the swimming and life-saving instruction program, under the direction of Russell H. Moore, who has developed during the past four years a most efficient corps of instructors and life guards. The "buddy" system is used at all times, no boy being allowed to enter or leave the water alone. The boys are divided into five groups for swimming, according to their proficiency, each grade wearing a distinctive bathing cap.

Summer camp offers a great opportunity for advancement in scoutcraft by each individual boy. This season has witnessed an unusually large number of awards for scout advancement, without undue urging on the part of the staff.

Among the special features which will be offered during the last two weeks of camp will be work in archery under Lee Yen Ten, of Ypsilanti, who is popular with the scouts on account of his skill in archery, athletic ability and story telling at campfire. Map making, surveying and electrical work are under the direction of Prof. Paul Kolachov, graduate student of electrical engineering of the University of Michigan. Prof. Kolachov was formerly in charge of all radio communication for the Siberian expeditions during the world war. Airmen and bugle corps has been organized by Powell Aubrey, and has enabled beginners to give a creditable performance at recent camp ceremonies. This work will be offered during the last period of camp.

Campfires prove a constant source of enjoyment to every person in camp. A most fascinating feature has been the series of accounts given by Bob Shaw of the senior staff, concerning his vagabond trip around the world, frequently in costume. Mr. Shaw will continue these talks throughout the remainder of the season. Another feature has been the degree to which campers themselves have participated in furnishing special features, such as songs, clever stunts and other specialties.

Cubs, boys under scout age, are in camp under separate staff, and having their own program. The boys are under the direction of Rev. John Shilling, assisted by four junior officers who are experienced in work with younger boys. Approximately 20 cubs are in camp at the present time and others are expected for the last two week period. Cub activities have included overnight hikes, cooking, boating, swimming and other phases of campcraft.

During each two week period scout meetings are held with the Adrian and Jackson scout camps. Events include water-boiling, first aid, semaphore and Morse signalling, knot-tying, archery, baseball and swimming. The fee is $8.00 per week and cubs and scouts may register at scout headquarters, 324 E. Huron St., or directly at camp. A number of local boys are expected to enroll for the last period of camp, according to Scout Executive Wallace F. Watt, director of the camp.

MICHIGAMME OIL TEAM PLAYS HERE SUNDAY

Next Sunday, July 19, the Michigamme Oil base ball team of Ann Arbor will play the Pinckney Independents at Pinckney. These two teams were scheduled to play here last month but the contest was called off on account of rain. Pinckney will have a revised lineup for this game and will be prepared to win. The game will start at 3:00 p. m.

NOTICE

The next Junior King's Daughters meeting will be held at Percy Swarthout's cottage at Portage Lake Saturday July 18. Every member please bring something to eat and furnish your own plates.

Current Comment

A couple of weeks ago Justice N. O. Frye offered to marry the first couple coming before him, after he assumed office on July 4, for nothing. This offer of his seems to have started the ball rolling and numerous other justice have become imitators of our local justice and have even amplified the offer. A Wayne justice states that he will marry all couples free for the next year and a Kansas justice also agrees to do likewise. Judge Frye refuses to change his offer any. However, he says that all marriages performed by him are warranted for one year and that his marriage knots are of the double loop variety guaranteed not to slip.

An interesting dispatch dated in Philadelphia was printed on the front pages of the daily papers last week. Wm. Dugan was believed drowned in Laurel Lake, New Jersey. His heart had stopped and body was blue and cold. He was wrapped in blankets lined with hot water bottles given frequent hypodermics and inhalators were used. After nine hours of hard work he regained consciousness. He calls death by drowning a delightful sensation.

We have always thought that the safeguards against drowning in this county were woefully inadequate.

There is no pulmotor owned in this county. Washtenaw county on the other hand has three, one being kept at the Ann Arbor Fire Dept., another at the U. of M. hospital and one at Whitmore Lake. We believe that Washtenaw county has a rule that they cannot be taken outside their county. Several movements have been started to have the board of supervisors purchase a pulmotor for use in Livingston county but none of them ever succeeded. Here when a drowning occurs, the first move is to call a doctor. One is not always obtainable. Last Sunday Dr. Huntington had to drive 17 miles to get to the Patterson Lake drowning. Failing to get a doctor, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls or some other such organizations familiar with first aid methods are usually secured, providing there are any of them camped near the place of the drowning. Livingston county is one of the big resort centers of the state and the number of drownings here each season are a shame and a tragedy and most of them are preventable.

The wet organizations are urging the repeal of the dry laws for a new reason now. They claim that if wines and beer are legalized they can be taxed and then the general property tax will be lowered. This line of reasoning seems far fetched to us. The money to pay the taxes will never come from but one source and that is the drink paid. No matter what plan is contrived or worked out the people will foot the bill. This new plan is like giving the baby a dose of medicine with a little sugar in the spoon to take the taste away.

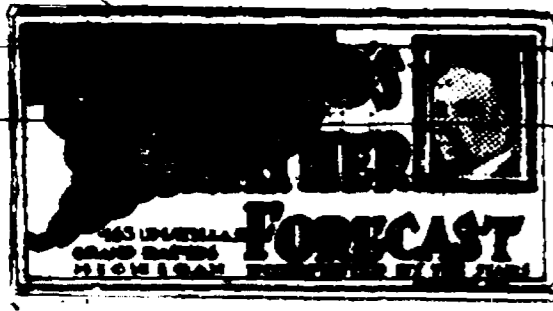

MUST UNDERSTAND ENGLISH

Motorists who cannot read or write the English language sufficiently well to determine the meaning of road warning and direction signs, cannot obtain driver's licenses under the new 1931 law. Records of the department of state show that since the new law has been effective, 70 licenses have been refused for one cause or another, six of these have appealed and that there are 200 applications now being held for further investigation before final rejection. Five drivers in Detroit, who appealed after being denied licenses on the ground that they could not read or write, were ordered by the license board, consisting of Secretary of State, Frank D. Fitzgerald, chairman, Attorney General Paul W. Voorhies, and Safety Commissioner Oscar Olander, to attend the Detroit police drivers school for three days. Then they were given 30 days in which to acquire a sufficient knowledge of English to read any road sign instantly. At the end of the 30 day period, they will be granted licenses if they pass an examination to be given by the Detroit police department.

DANCE AT PATTERSON LAKE

There will be a dance at Patterson Lake every Saturday evening. Good music, good floor and good time promised. Dances part old, part new. Bill 75c.

WEEK OF JULY 19

A more settled period of the weather will start in about the beginning of the week of July 19th in most parts of Michigan.

Temperatures will begin rising just before the middle of this week in Michigan and be followed by threatening and showery weather.

On the last day of the week temperatures will again be on the upward trend with the sky generally clear.

We Beat the Weather Bureau Nearly three months after this column predicted the drought was about ended in the United States as a whole, the weather bureau has dared to come out with the statement "there is no indication now of a repetition of last year's drought."

In our forecast we stated that Michigan would still see a shortage of rain for several months and the first five months of this year have already proved this.

The precipitation in Michigan has been below the normal now for one complete year and for the eight months previous to this the average moisture was also below the seasonal normal.

Dinner Stories

Heinie: "Mother, that cheese you put in my sandwich yesterday was great. Give me lots of it today."

Mother: "I'm sorry, dear, but it's all gone."

Heinie: "Gee, that's a shame. You know, teacher said if I came back with any more like that she would not let me in the school building."

A girl about to travel alone was warned not to talk to strange men. At the station, the conductor asked, "Where are you going?"

"To Detroit," she answered, so he put her on the Detroit train.

As the train pulled out she looked back and said, "Ha, ha, I fooled him that time. I'm going to Chicago."

There's no use trying to joke with a woman. The other day Jones heard a pretty good conundrum and decided to try it on his wife.

"Do you know why I am like a mule?" he asked her when he went home.

"No," she replied promptly. "I know you are, but I don't know why."

Huck: "We'll be friends to the end."

Buck: "Lend me five dollars, will you?"

Huck: "That's the end."

LOVE, PREFERRED

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Copyright 1931, Central Press Association

"Oh, he works in 'the street.' He's just out of Princeton and starting as wholesale man for Jameson-Blair. He is going to save his money to buy a seat on the exchange and start his own business."

"Well, he will probably go far and wide and land feet first. He won't need engraved cards with that face and figure. I suppose he played football."

"Why, yes—fullback. Don't you remember seeing his picture on the sport pages a lot last year?"

Bonnie's eyes rounded incredulously. "Not that Dick Baldwin? Why I never thought of making the connection. You would take it that way, now wouldn't you? Well, Mary Vaughn, you've done yourself proud. Um! Um! Ain't that something! Well, after all, the girl must have sex appeal, or something. First date with him? Gee, kid, I'm sorry about the dress. No wonder you wanted to look like the big parade!"

"Well, I'll be seeing you on Saturday. Have to run down to Washington tonight. Be good to yourself."

At two o'clock the operator announced Mr. Frazier. Martin Frazier was one of the few really big customers of Foster's, who came to the office in person, and more than quite often. Mary knew why. So did Foster; but Frazier was worth humoring, whatever he chose to do.

Very often he did not see Foster at all. He merely got as far as Mary's office, and there he stayed until she was obliged to dismiss him. If she knew in advance that he was coming, she always arranged an important appointment to follow discreetly soon after his arrival.

He always began with business—but ended with his personal interest in Mary. When Mary bewailed the fact that she was plain, she never stopped to ask herself why she had so many admirers; because few of them ever had interested her and telephone just then, for it was Foster asking Frazier to come in.

Mary shrugged relief when he had gone and closed the door. She turned briskly to her work. So much to do and so little time to do it. Incessant ringing of the telephone; customers asking prices on stocks, more as market closing time approached—three o'clock. Usually, the last hour of the day was the only one left for concentrated and uninterrupted office work.

Appointments, letters, telephone calls—all a tense and hectic confusion. Every broker's office was a part of the axis on which the big business of the world revolved, and you were caught in the strenuous vortex every minute of the working hours. This business of seeing people frantically lost fortunes or jubilantly make them in split seconds, was no tranquil life. But Mary loved it. Vaguely remote in her mind were plans for the future—perhaps her own office, a woman's broker; at least, manager of a woman's department with some firm. She might even suggest it to Foster some day when she knew all the ropes well enough to be confident.

That is, if she didn't get the home and babies. She thought of Dick—coming home evenings to them, and then reprimanded herself for daring such thoughts. After all, she must not let imagination carry her too far. She had known Dick for only a month, she thought ruefully, a trifle shamefacedly. Where had all her conservatism gone, anyway? What was that maxim about when love flew in at the window—well, she supposed that common sense flew out.

Her thoughts had been running thus in a sort of light and joyous obligation to the heavier chords of her duties as she worked. Both were suddenly interrupted by Frazier's entrance from the inner office. He startled her by coming directly to her and, placing one hand on the back of her chair, bent over her with an intimate air.

"That was a great tip, little girl. I'm taking a thousand at fifty. It ought to double in a month. Are you going in, too?"

Mary drew away from his nearness, rigidly, and laughed with embarrassment. "Oh, no, Mr. Frazier. I haven't the cash to invest and employees can't buy on margin, you know."

"Sure. I know. That's just what I had in mind. Let me buy you a block in my name, and you can pay me from the profits. That's what friends are for, isn't it?"

"Oh, I couldn't think of letting you do that, though it is very kind of you and I do appreciate the offer a lot, Mr. Frazier. You see, I can't afford to play the market, even on a good chance like this. What if I should lose?"

He made an airy gesture. "What of it? Buy again. You're certain to win some time. Besides, if I lose the fifty thousand, I can afford to drop a few more thousand, just as well. What do you say? Think it over until the issue comes out. I'll be in often. Might as well get in on the big money and stop the grind, Mary. Now is your chance. Think it over."

He pressed her hand that gripped the edge of her desk in her unconscious attitude of defense. Martin moved away and began to button his coat, as if he had just closed a most satisfactory deal.

"I couldn't think of it," Mary repeated firmly.

"I suppose you like to wrestle with the snarling wolf, eh, Mary?" with an amused smile.

Mary flushed. "I prefer the struggle means. If I buy stock on margin in your name, just to sidestep the rules of the business, that wouldn't be honest with Mr. Foster?"

"What's Foster got to do with it? He would never know it from me. I'll give you my word to keep it absolutely quiet."

"That still wouldn't make it honest. Besides, as I said, I can't afford to risk a dollar in stock now."

"Let me advance you the down payment. You now yourself that you would be sure to win. I don't know how you can turn down an offer like that."

"No, you wouldn't know, Mr. Frazier," she said quietly, meeting his eyes squarely.

"Well," he shrugged, drawing on his immaculate gloves and shifting his gaze to his hands. "The offer stands—now or any time. Good-bye, Mary."

CHAPTER V

Mary walked briskly the three blocks from the station that were the last lap of her daily journey home. The air was cold and crisp, acrid with smoke of burning leaves and autumn haze. Some of the trees already stretched gaunt, naked arms to the aloof, dull sky as if asking why they had been shorn of their beauty. They moaned and sighed and clashed their limbs together as in anguish, when the chill wind stirred. Ted dead leaves swirled and rustled beneath them as if in mockery. It was not a pleasant autumn evening.

Mary was tired. She thought, as she hurried along, that it would be so luxurious to slip off alone to a room or apartment of her own where she could relax in quiet and comfort. Which thought was instantly submerged when she entered the Vaughn section of the house on East 25th street.

The rest of the family seldom got over to New York, except Bonnie, when she went for shopping or her own pleasure, so they always expected Mary to bring home a bit of the city to them: news, gossip, incidents, jokes. They never could realize that she hadn't been on a lark and that it was a relief to her to get away from shop and talking shop.

She tried to be obliging and entertaining, especially for Mom's sake. Her mother's world was so small and her happiness had been so very limited. The house and the cooking, the boys and the sewing she could do, kept her hands well from idleness and Satan's designs.

Mary browsed around the shops whenever she could spare any time and brought her mother little new ideas in styles and designs. She subscribed for all the fashion magazines for her, from which Mrs. Vaughn derived quite as much pleasure as anything in her life. Jennie Vaughn really was clever, but she never had had an opportunity to capitalize her ability beyond catering to a few Paterson matrons who still maintained that you could not buy as good a ready-to-wear dress for the price as you could have made—fortunately for the Vaughns.

The fact was that half of Mom's ingenious creations were lavished on Bonnie, as well as a good share of her limited time for work. Ever since Bonnie was a wee tot with sun-gold curls, her mother's one delight had been designing and making clothes for Bonnie. And Bonnie made the most of it, even yet. Every time she could get her hands on any money, she would go to New York and purchase lengths of shimmering materials, get an idea from some Paris model in an exclusive modiste shop and Mrs. Vaughn would sit up all hours of the night, stitching with deft fingers on the seams that could well have been worn inside out, they were so perfectly done.

But when Mary needed a dress, her mother always seemed to have too much to do for other people; besides, store clothes were well enough for plain Mary and more suitable for business wear. Smart apparel wasn't necessary in an office. Somehow, Mary never resented little things like that. It had always been that way, and the whole family accepted it as a fact that Mary didn't care much about clothes or anything else, so long as she could make the family budget balance the urgent needs. She was like the man of a family that looks to dad for sustenance and considers him little more than a mechanical cash register that rings cheerfully when it is punched.

In other respects it was much the same way. The family awaited Mary's arrival for dinner and greeted her much as a man of the house.

The spicy odor of baked ham welcomed her this night when she came in from the cold bleakness of the night. "Hello, everyone," she called in a muffled voice from the depths of the coat closet, hanging up her coat and hat. The hall was dark, but the light streamed across the floor from the kitchen door.

Mrs. Vaughn stepped around the stove and peered into the hall.

"That you, Mary? Well, for once you're home on time. Colder out, isn't it?"

Mary came into the warm, clean kitchen and sniffed the delicious aroma of the dinner. "Yes, feels like it might snow. And it is good to be home for a real dinner, once!" looking around to see what there was to eat. Her mother was a splendid cook when there was plenty to cook. Mary slipped an arm about her broad waist and gave her an affectionate little squeeze, gave her an affectionate little squeeze, for love. She had adored Tim Vaughn and never ceased to grieve for him. She was the kind of a woman who is not demonstrative, but responds to overtures of affection, timidly. Mary kissed the warm, soft cheek. Mrs. Vaughn was still young with years, but they had been difficult years and her hair was streaked with gray, as if time had dealt it broad, cruel strokes and then retreated for a space between. She was industrious, but somewhat improvident. For the past five years she had leaned heavily upon Mary.

There was a sudden clatter on the stairs and then a final thud that shook the very timbers of the house. Tim and Ted hurtled into the kitchen. Their mutual objective was Mary. Ted reached her first and almost knocked her off her feet with his vehement greeting.

"Say, Mary—gee! I'm glad you came home tonight. I just gotta have a dollar and Mom hasn't got any money." Confidently, his merry blue eyes looked up to her from beneath the cowl of hair that straggled on his forehead.

Mary put her arm around his shoulder and laughed. "You should say, 'Mom has no money,' Ted. And for what is the dollar?"

"I gotta have one, too," Tim chimed in. "Why, at school we're makin' book ends in manual training and we gotta buy the wood and stuff. Say, Mary, you oughta see the purty design I made for mine!"

"It's no better'n mine," Ted snorted. "And I'm going to give mine to Mary for Christmas, so there."

"Aw, say—well, then I'll give mine to Mom," Tim changed with a tone of reluctance.

"All right, go wash your hands and faces and brush your hair ready for dinner, and I'll give you each a dollar," Mary promised.

"That's a lot to do for a dollar," Ted grinned.

Mary smiled. "I wish dollars were that easy to earn, hoga!"

"What's all the row?" Bonnie asked, coming from the living room with a book in her hand. "Half yawning, she said, 'Hello, old girl. Foster must have had a sudden change of heart. What's new?'"

Mary was leading the gravy into a bowl while her mother whisked the mashed potatoes to snowy whiteness. "Oh, not much. Except that Dick has asked me to go to the game at Yale on Saturday with his crowd."

"Are you going?"

"Going? Well, rather. Why not?" Bonnie grimaced. "Oh, I've known you to turn down games before. You go for Dick in a big way, don't you? I never knew you to leave your work for a date before."

Mary bustled into the dining room with the potatoes and gravy. "He's all right. Something to him," she replied laconically.

Bonnie followed her and took her place at the table. "Well, I happen to have a bid to the game, myself," she announced rather more defiantly than the news warranted.

Mary raised her eyes in surprise. "Oh, yeah. Who?"

"Walter Hyme. I wasn't gaga about going in his shabby old flivver, but I did want to see the game, so I said 'yes.' Ge! but stickin' around this place is dull. Even a fliv can carry you away from here." She rested her elbow on the table and her chin on her palm. "What kind of a car does Dick drive?"

"Buick."

"Coupe?"

"Yes, with a rumble."

"Oh, say, get him to take us along."

"Why—?" Mary's heart sank. She wanted Dick all to herself. Such a little time they had together, with his leaving town so much and her working evenings. "I don't like to ask him just yet. I really don't know him very well."

"All right, selfish," Bonnie retorted. "If we start and get stranded half way, I won't walk home."

"Haw!" Tim scoffed. "That flivver would never get half way to New Haven. You wouldn't have to walk far."

"Better give 'em our scooters," Ted offered with a snicker.

"Boys, that will do," Mrs. Vaughn reprimanded. "I don't see why you couldn't take Bonnie and Walter," she turned to Mary. "It would save expense to drive one car instead of two."

Resentment smothered Mary for a moment. When had she ever imposed upon Bonnie with her dates? "For Walter, yes. And if he would go to work he could afford a better car."

A story is told of a man, sick and blind from drinking too much moonshine, who wandered out in the garden and was bitten by a rattle snake. He got back in the house and his frightened family called the doctor. By the time the M. D. arrived, however, there was nothing for him to do, as the man was O. K., and even his sight restored. Then they all went out to see if they could find the snake. They found him, very easily, and right where the man had been bitten and the ground gave every evidence that he had died in horrible agony.

There is rapid improvement in the unemployment situation in Ann Arbor, according to the Washtenaw Tribune, more than 200 men finding work in connection with city and university projects.

Scio township, Washtenaw county had a lot of excitement all its own the other day. C. M. Short a Misses Sophia C. and Jane Murray Galatian of Detroit are visiting their cousin, Mrs. William H. Keedle and family.

WILLARD W. HENDRICK
Willard W. Hendrick was born Sept. 11, 1939, in the town of Mumford, Livingston County, New York and departed this life July 9th, 1931.

He was the great grandson of a Revolutionary hero, John de Castor, and the son of Peter S. Hendrick and Abigail Hendrick, the former served in the War of 1812.

He was brought to Michigan by his parents when six weeks old, the overland trip from Detroit being made by ox teams. Nearly all his life was spent on the farm to which he was brought, in Hamburg township of this county.

He served his country in the Eleventh Michigan Cavalry, Co. G. during the Civil War.

He was a member of the North Hamburg Congregational church. He was united in marriage to Marjory Jones of Brighton, Michigan, Nov. 12, 1866, who departed this life Nov. 5, 1905. Five children were born to them, of whom four survive, Mrs. Wm. C. Teller, of Leming, Texas, Mrs. Lewis S. Winans, of Seattle, Washington, Dr. Rhoda Grace Hendrick of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Myron W. Hendrick of Brighton, Michigan. One son, Elroy A. Hendrick, died Nov. 3, 1898. Besides the four children, five grandchildren and five great grandchildren survive.

The services were held in the Community Congregational church, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Rev. E. J. Berquist officiating. Burial was in the Hamburg cemetery.

RUSH LAKE NEWS

The residents of Rush Lake are much enthused over their recent catches, some small, some large, of unbelievable dimensions, but the prize goes to Fred Teeple who caught a medium sized bass, with the following inscription: on one side was, U. S. 1861, on the other was G. A. R. Fred said he did not know whether the fish belonged to the Grand Army of the Republic, or not, but it was a dandy.

Mr. and Mrs. VanWade of Grand River, Howell, the popular restaurant proprietor were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Teeple at cottage "Rush Inn" over the week end.

The Rev. E. J. Berquist of the Congregational church of Pinckney, was trying to furnish the multitude with fish from Rush Lake last week, but he failed in his catch by not observing that scripture injunction "Cast thy net on the other side."

Mrs. S. E. Ferry and family of Pittsburg, have returned to their home after spending their vacation at Rush Lake at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. McKelvey.

PHILATHEAS IN ACTION

The past week has been a busy one for the active members of the Philathea Bible Class. As advertised in the Dispatch and otherwise, ice cream was served on the village square Saturday evening, and the proceeds will help materially towards the class treasury. There are many activities of an organized Sunday-school class that require funds and the class is grateful for the patronage, even on the cold evening, for all committee work and to all who assisted and contributed in any way.

An enjoyable class party was an event of last Wednesday P. M. when Mrs. Harry Lee of Lakeland was hostess to the Philathea class and several guests. Items of ordinary business followed the opening song and devotional services. Business in connection with the ice cream social was discussed and communications read, including an invitation from the Howell W. C. T. U. to a meeting at the home of R. C. Reed on last Tuesday, to the Pinckney Ladies Aid of which organization our Philatheas are members.

The President, Mrs. Erma Lewis, introduced the subject of initiation of members and it was decided we should use the regular form approved by the World Wide Baraca Philathea Union.

The entertainment committee for the meeting was Mrs. Edna Baker and Mrs. Lota Rogers, who presented an interesting program including readings by Mrs. Lydia Carr, Mrs. Rogers, Miss Marilda Rogers and Miss Stella Fish.

Several amusing contests were held, in which Mrs. Edna Campbell, Mrs. Edna Campbell, Mrs. Millie Bowman and Group 2 were the fortunate contestants.

An invitation to meet with Miss Marilda Rogers in August was accepted by the class. The Philathea Benediction closed the meeting.

On Sunday last, the discussion period was taken up by the consideration of the subject "The preaching of the Apostles." Preceding this, by request, our pastor gave a short interesting talk on "Why I became a preacher."

Next Sunday we will discuss "Social service in the early church. Acts 4:32-35. Acts 6:1-4 and 2 Cor. 9:1-7."

BANISHING INSECT PESTS

Warm weather and dampness have a tendency to encourage cockroaches, water bugs, ants, etc. Roaches have a faculty of disappearing in daylight, behind baseboards, cracks, nooks and corners. If nothing is done to eliminate them, they will soon overrun their haven. They come out of their places of security in droves as soon as the house is in darkness and are attracted by the slightest trace of food and food particles.

A bulletin distributed by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture suggests the effective use of common borax to banish roaches.

Powered Borax enters into the composition of many of the so called roach powders. Borax may be used either pure as a repellent, or mixed with some other substance to make it attractive to the insects.

While borax is effective in repelling roaches, water bugs, ants, etc. it is also non-poisonous and safe to use.

Although it isn't necessary, there are various ingredients used to bait the insects, such as sugar and cocoa mixed with the pure powered borax. The simplest method is to wash the cupboards, woodwork, and likely haunts, with a solution of warm water and common borax (about two tablespoons of Borax to a quart of water); to sprinkle the dry powered borax in the back of pantry shelves, behind baseboards and around the kitchen sink. A few applications is all that is necessary to immediately drive away the pests.

LAKELAND JUNIOR KING'S DAUGHTERS

The regular meeting of the Junior King's Daughters of Lakeland was held at our leaders home, Mrs. H. A. Lee.

The meeting was called to order by the vice president, Mildred Jack, followed by the secretary and treasurer reports were read and approved.

We have received a letter from the second vice president, Mrs. Rupright that Madge Jack has won the state contest in having the most points to her credit. She will spend a week at Camp Missaukee starting July 16. She will also receive the King's Daughters scarf. We are glad that she has won this prize and we all hope she will have a good time there.

This was also the day for our bake sale so the afternoon was spent mostly in selling baked goods. The returns amounted to $18.75.

The meeting was called with the song of the order.

With Tire Prices so low why not buy a SET?

HERE'S SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Every man, woman and child should have some outdoor recreation every day, especially during the summer months. But it's hard to find something that will satisfy all of them. It must not be too expensive. It must not require a great deal of strength. And it must have a quality that will hold the interest of everyone.

We know a place where it is always cool and refreshing in the evening and where there's always a breeze if there's one anywhere; where a man and wife can laugh and enjoy themselves after a hard day's work, where there's a game of judgment and skill that will take their minds off their worries, where they can enjoy themselves for an hour or two for only a few cents. And you men who like to pick out a game that will display your strength and are afraid your wives will win once in awhile had better duck this paper right now because the cheapest as well as the best amusement in the country is Bonnie Wee golf. Your wife will trim you and trim you right her share of the time if she will put her best into it. It isn't the biggest and strongest who win at Bonnie Wee, it's judgement and cleverness and skill and the ability to take advantage of the breaks strategy.

Don't sit down every evening and read about the murders, suicides, bank failures and airplane crashes in Timbuctu or the Sheba Islands, if you do you will always have a dark brown taste in your mouth in the morning.

Drop in at Bonnie Wee. You'll soon forget there ever was a depression, and you'll go home and have the first dreamless, unbroken sleep you've had in weeks.

Wishing you many pleasant evenings,
Bonnie Wee Golf,
Howell, Mich.

THE FINAL CARE

The final care of the ones so well loved, so dear and so close to our hearts, should be as tender, thoughtful and thorough as in the days when they were with us. It is more than appropriate, more than a custom and a duty. It is a sacred privilege. The final care should be placed in careful hands, where sympathy and understanding are combined with every high quality of the profession and the services conducted with impressive solemnity.

JULY MILK PRICE

UNDETERMINED

A difference of opinion regarding the proper time to fix the producers price for milk during July developed at a Sales Conference between the Producers Association and the dealers, which was held in the Book Cadillac, Tuesday, July 7th.

Several members believed the price should be determined, if possible, without delay. Most of the dealers preferred to have the question settled so they would know what they were paying.

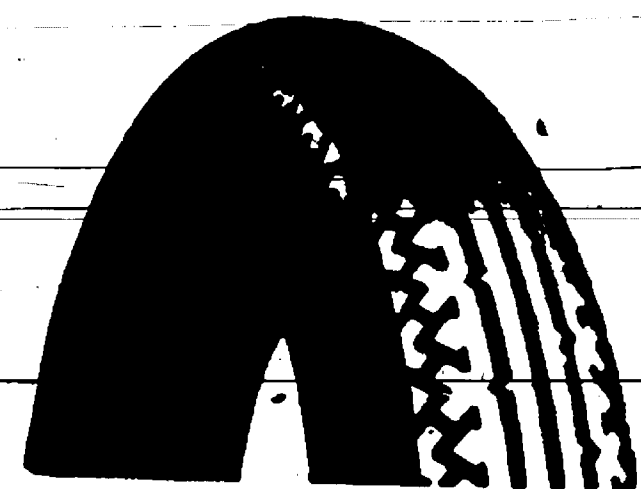

Late in the afternoon the dealers went into a closed conference to discuss an offer. Upon their return no offer was made for the group. The Ebling Company through its manager, Wesley Ebling, made an offer of $1.80 per cwt. delivered in Detroit for its fluid requirements. No action was taken relative to this offer.

One resolution offered by W. J. Witte of Howell was adopted. This endorsed the efforts of the Citizens Price Commission headed by Judge Tuttle and urged its full report at the earliest possible time.

Later, L. W. McKillip of North Branch moved that the July price determination be deferred until July 25th and that the Price Commission be respectfully requested to furnish specific cost data on distribution and production by that date. This motion carried and the meeting adjourned.

The June price as announced at this meeting is $2.11 for fluid sales with sufficient of the base milk delivered as fluid to bring the price of base milk to $1.99. Producers receive some advantage in this figure inasmuch as the price of milk before the cut was ordered by the Commission is used for the first 9 days of June and one-half of the
