

Man Burns to Death In Lake Cottage

The Charred Remains of Gus Christensen of Detroit Found in Smoldering Ruins of Patterson Lake Cottage.

Sunday night about 11:00 p. m. W. Long who owns a cottage in Orloff's subdivision at Patterson Lake discovered a cottage near his property in flames. It belonged to Rudolf Scherlen of 10921 Kercheval Ave., Detroit. The Scherlen family had spent the week end there with a party of friends but Mr. Long was under the impression all had returned to Detroit. The structure was too far gone when discovered to be saved. Next morning the charred body of a man was visible in the smoking ruins. Deputy Sheriff Irvin Kennedy of Pinckney was called and he notified Coroner Guy Grieve of Howell. Considerable difficulty was found in identifying the dead man at first. Mr. Long said that Mr. Scherlen had had two men staying at his cottage doing some repair work there for several weeks. He thought both had come back to Detroit Sunday night. He thought one of them had remained but he did not know which one it was.

Mr. Scherlen's address was not known and difficulty was experienced in locating him. In the meantime the remains were turned over to P. H. Swarthout, local undertaker. Mr. Scherlen arrived at Pinckney at about 2:00 p. m. Monday with several friends including William Hartman of 656 Macomb Ave., Detroit, who was the man who had spent the week at the lake with Christensen. He stated Christensen was a World War veteran and had formerly been employed as a tool and die maker by the Packard Motor Co. of Detroit but had been out of work for over a year. A little over a month ago he had brought him out to the lake and let him live there in return for repairing his dock and doing several other small jobs. Last week Hartman came out and spent the week. Scherlen, his family and a party of friends came out Saturday arriving at the lake about 5:00 p. m. That evening they had a party at the cottage and enjoyed themselves dancing etc. Sunday was spent in fishing and boat riding on Patterson and Half Moon Lakes. About 7:00 p. m. all of them with the exception of Christensen returned to Detroit.

He said the deceased was about 42 years old, a World War veteran and unmarried. The only known relative that he knew of was his father who was employed as a watchman by a Port Huron Salt Co. The deal man was born in Detroit and had lived there practically all of his life. His last known address was an apartment at Alfred and Orleans St. Detroit.

Mr. Scherlen has owned the cottage at Patterson Lake since 1923 when the Orloff plot was opened. He is employed as a butcher by the Ellwood Packing Co. at 2460 Riopelle, Eastern Market. He carried no insurance on the cottage. He can not understand how the fire started. A kerosene stove was used for cooking and a gasoline lamp was in the cottage. However he states Christensen never used the lamp and was not familiar with its operation. The deceased was an inveterate cigarette smoker and may have gone to bed without putting out his cigarette.

The Scherlen cottage is "Stagger Inn" this is the reason that the name of the cottage owner was first given as a Mr. Stagger.

Plans are rapidly being formulated for the 45th annual exhibit of the Fowlerville Agricultural society, which will be held on the fair grounds, just west of town, September 30, October 1, 2, and 3, with both a day and night fair. The department superintendents are Thomas Sharpe, cattle, horses; John Damman, sheep, swine; Clarence Stowe, poultry; S. C. Whitney, domestic manufacture; William Gage, culinary. ## Current Comment

Gov. Bruckers call to arms to rid the state of blind pigs which caused the Willis tragedy is received with varying comment by the state press but in the main all are for it and the speakeasy has no out and out defenders. The Brighton Argus remarks that if the metropolitan dailies will devote as much time to heartening the law enforcing agencies as they devote to disheartening them and to preaching faith and courage among the people instead of disseminating the seeds of doubt and discouragement, enforcement will become a fact.

The Ann Arbor Tribune remarks "that non-enforcement of the prohibition law is due to lack of public approval remains to be established. The money to be made or grafted in the business is more potent we believe."

The Lansing State Journal has a long editorial on the subject of which the following is a portion:

The conditions which obtained when various alcoholic drinks were to be had, under the legalized conditions and under well known brands, is too clearly remembered to permit any case being made against white mule to the exonerating of other alcohol. Alcohol whether called white mule or Old Bourbon whisky has produced too much of murder and of other crime to make it worth while to pause to discriminate whether alcohol shall be called white mule or something else. Some users of alcohol can use it with apparent satisfaction to themselves and with no very apparent social harm, but a very large element cannot. The type of person participating in the Washenaw murder was always just as deadly under the influence of alcohol from branded bottles as the three were some nights ago.

But the effort to arouse the whole state and the leaders of sentiment in the state against white mule is sound. The effort ought to succeed out over the whole state. For one official and public sentiment and doubters of all shades ought to turn in and give this state such a cleaning from all beverage alcohol as it has never seen. Prohibition has not succeeded anything like it might for the reason it has never been tried. If it were tried once, in as thorough a way as can be imagined, and then bad social effects arose under such trial, from lack of alcohol, there would be reason to ask for a change, but scarcely before.

White mule is merely beverage alcohol, narcotic poison.

Labor Day will mark the end of the resort season in the state as the schools are billed to re-open that week. Notwithstanding the depression this has been a very profitable resort season. Of course there was no great activity in the sale of lake lots, comparable to the big boom which followed the world war nor was there a great deal of cottage building done. Still all of the lake resorts were constantly occupied the entire summer and record crowds visited the resorts over the week ends. We will admit that the expansion of the nearby lake resorts has stopped for the time being but think it is but a temporary pause to allow the people to catch up with the over expansion which followed the lake frontage boom of a few years back.

HOWELL ORDINANCE IS RULED VOID

Some time ago Fred Teeple and wife started suit against the city of Howell for the purpose of voiding a city ordinance. It was alleged that they had the opportunity to sell a certain piece of real estate in the City of Howell to be used as a site for an oil station. They were unable to put the deal through on account of a city ordinance which forbid the establishing of such a station on the street where said property is located unless the consent of 50 per cent of the property owners living with 500 feet of the proposed station is obtained in writing and also the consent of the city council.

Judge Kelly S. Searl of St. Johns is setting in the circuit court in place of Judge Collins and handed down his decision Friday which was in favor of the plaintiff. He ruled the clause in the ordinance which required that the consent of the city council is necessary voided the ordinance. He further held that nowhere in the statutes is any such power conferred on the city council.

Miss Grace Young of Detroit was a Sunday guest of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Sigler.

WEEK OF AUGUST 23

During the first half of the week of August 23rd we are expecting the weather in Michigan to be warm for the season. This condition will be brought about by the appearance of a more or less intensive storm center.

Accompanying the low pressure as it travels eastward across the United States will be severe electrical storms and high winds. Gales and rain will visit many parts of Michigan as the storm travels over.

Such weather as this will not be good for harvesting or threshing and at the same time it will not be good for grain standing in shock, not only because of the moisture but because of the strong winds. During this storm period the winds may also be destructive to fruit and fruit trees.

During the last half of the week temperatures will average much lower than first part. In fact, in sections of some counties there will be reports of frost before the week is ended. While this is apparently an early date to be predicting frosts, it is not the earliest that has occurred in Michigan.

The expression "three days rain and then a frost" may work out at this time. This saying is based on general atmospheric facts—an area of low barometric pressure with overcast skies and rain, nearly always precedes the area of high pressure.

During the passage of a well defined area of low barometer the radiation from the sun is more or less completely cut off by heavy clouds and the ground is not warmed much during the day. If rain has fallen, the evaporation from the wet ground uses up a great deal of heat and this also tends to keep the temperature low during the day.

On the first clear night after a rain the temperature at sunset is likely to be within 15 or 20 degrees of the freezing point and not much cooling by radiation is necessary to form frost. However, winds sometimes prevent this formation on the first day.

The Refrigeration Menace

A policeman was walking his beat in a residential district when a badly battered up house-to-house salesman rushed up to him.

"Say, officer," he panted, pointing to a red-haired iceman who had just climbed onto his wagon. "I want that man arrested. Just look what he did to me!"

Stalking out majestically into the street, the policeman waved the ice wagon to a halt, and demanded: "Did you hit this man?"

"Oh did," was the shameless reply. "What for?"

"Alienation of affections," replied the iceman. "He sold Bridget Nolan's missus wan av thim electric ice boxes."

All Explained

The minister called at the Jones home on Sunday afternoon, and little Willie answered the bell.

"Pa ain't home," he announced. "He went over to the golf club."

The minister's brow darkened, and Willie hastened to explain: "Oh, he ain't gonna play any golf, not on Sunday. He just went over for a few highballs and a little stud poker."

Almost

Overheard on the boat: "I went west in '89," said the New Yorker.

"How far did ye git?" queried the miner.

"Buffalo," said the New Yorker.

"I went east th' same year," replied the miner. "Went as fur's Butte, Mont. Nearly ran into each other, didn't we?"

Embarrassing

A college professor and his wife were entertained at dinner a few weeks ago. In the midst of the gaiety at the table, a child's voice was heard coming from the floor above.

"Mother!"

"What is it, Archie?" she asked.

"There's only clean towels in the bathroom. Shall I start one?"

LOVE, PREFERRED

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Copyright 1931, General Press Association

At last she found the very thing—a sea-green and silver lame, cut on simple, flaring lines that gave her distinction. There was a short bolero jacket wrap with just a touch of fine fur on the cape-like flares that suggested sleeves, and a deep, massed cluster of green velvet gardenias on one shoulder.

Silver slippers and a choker necklace of tiny sparkling brilliants completed the costume. Looking at herself in the triple pier mirror, Mary did not feel the covetous, appraising eyes of Martin Frazier upon her; rather the kind, admiring eyes of Dick Baldwin. Since she had known Dick, she ate situation with diplomacy. Was she capable? Half of the time Mary assured herself that she was, and the other half she experienced a sensation of panic. She was tempted to see whether Jenks could turn around and drive her back home, or if he were automatically set so that he just had to arrive at a given place at a given time. Her hands were cold and her face burned annoyingly. Mary hoped that it wasn't as crimson as it felt. She leaned forward and peered timidly into the mirrored panel beside her. No, she looked normal enough. She must get herself together, she decided. "Know just what she would

"Anchovies," she smiled, and hadn't the least idea whether she wanted them or not.

When he had finished the order with breast of chicken under glass, chickory salad and marrons, he leaned forward and clasped his hands together upon the table. A huge diamond in his ring finger flashed blue and red and green fire into Mary's eyes.

"You know, Mary, I can't believe this is true—you sitting across the table from me, looking so wonderful. You're a stunning woman when you give yourself a chance. You have style, plus."

"Thank you," she murmured, wondering desperately what to say to change the subject. When she was with Dick, it was so pleasant just to let him do most of the talking, to relax and listen to his garrulous rambling. It was quite different with Frazier. She felt stupid and ill-at-ease and anxious to turn the conversation from herself. What could she say? They had no common interest except the market, and it would be very dull to talk shop with Frazier. Market prices usually concerned him little, except in case of a sharp decline or a sensational advance. A few points either way were nothing to him. She floundered for words.

Now Bonnie could have chattered away to Martin with utmost unconcern, and probably to his delight, she thought. Why hadn't he brought such a girl as Bonnie with him tonight? There were plenty of girls like her sister who would be delighted to entertain men like Martin—in return for being entertained by him in such places as this.

He yet was talking about her. "What still puzzles me is your sudden change of health. But never mind, ma chere, it is enough for me that you have changed. Let us be gay. What shall we have to celebrate? 'Build yourself a nice one' for tonight, Mary. What do you like?"

"Not a thing to drink, Martin, thank you."

"Oh, come now, just a little cocktail."

The lights went out and the effulgent spotlight focused upon the sunken stage in the center of the room. Ballet dancers and a glittering ensemble appeared.

"They always have a good floor show here," Martin observed, vastly satisfied with himself and his surroundings. Everything complete now—even Mary Vaughn sitting there with him. He watched her more than he did the act, of which Mary was acutely conscious.

As the lights flashed on again, he said, in a voice strangely reverent for Martin Frazier, "Do you know, Mary, that you are awfully sweet—and superb? I'm just beginning to know you, after all these months."

"It's nice to be getting acquainted," she smiled. "But let's not talk about me. There are much nicer subjects to discuss."

"I've never found them. Come, let us dance. I know you dance well, from the way you walk."

He had expected the nearness of his embrace to be repellent, but discovered with pleasure that he did not stress his advantage by holding her too close and that he was a charming partner. He seemed actually to be more aware of the pleasure of dancing with her than of the fact that he held her in his arms. Mary was vaguely puzzled by his impersonal attitude. She had anticipated that he would be ardent, possessive, exulting. Instead, he was obsequious, amiable, altogether charming. Her liking for him increased.

Even when the room grew warm and hazy with smoke and some of the guests ribald, Martin retained his suavity and solicitous attention to her. Altogether, Mary had a most enjoyable evening, to the very moment when he left her at her own door and gallantly bent over her hand with his customary manner of farewell.

On the way out to her home he had said, "This has been the most enjoyable evening in years for me, Mary. Will you be nice to me often?" He was sitting close beside her and he laid his hand over her cheek as he bent closer, at the same time that she grew rigid with that indigenous instinct for defense in his presence.

"That depends—upon you," she attempted to speak lightly. "It has been nice to know you better, Martin. But you must remember that a business girl can't keep these hours many nights and keep her job. I wonder why you don't prefer the girls who have nothing to do except play. Surely, you know many of them."

"I surely do. But you see, I happen to prefer you to any of them."

"Not at all."

"Why?" She was naively curious.

"For more reasons than I can tell you or you would understand, dear."

He added the word of affection naturally and fondly as if they had been long intimate. Mary wondered if that was because he called every girl "dear." Probably. She hadn't had much time for conjecture about men like Martin. Dick had never called her "dear," yet sitting there beside Frazier in the deep upholstery of his luxurious motor car, had none of the friendly security of driving with Dick in the little coupe.

All the time she was with him that evening and even when he had gone, Martin puzzled her. She had gone to him armored and armed for a joust with an enemy; and had received the hand-clasp of a friend. And yet, she sensed in him a strained reserve of forces held in leash. Would he always control those forces in her presence?

CHAPTER XV

How different was the next evening with Dick. Instead of apprehension, indecision and final bewilderment, Mary experienced only joyous anticipation, confidence and content.

She wore the new sea-green and silver lame frock again and accepted with deep gratitude Dick's very evident admiration.

He lifted his winged eyebrows with unconcealed surprise. "Say, Mary, you look like the Queen of Sheba herself. What any Solomon would need with a thousand wives if he had one like you, I can't tell you. Just wait until that crowd sees my new party."

His ardent eyes burned down into hers and his hands clasped her shoulders for an instant when he held her wrap.

The evening was quite another revelation to Mary. Studio parties in Greenwich Village with "arty" cliques had always implied to her something risqué and bizarre. Perhaps there were that kind, too. But she was delightfully surprised at the group to which Dick introduced her. The party was in one of the artists' apartments on the south side of Washington Square. It belonged to Ramon and Willa Duchon. Ramon was the famous creator of the comic strip,

"Peppy Patsy," and his wife did illustrations for children's pages. Mary like them both, instantly. Ramon was a tall, rather slender youth, with copper hair and humorous eyes, who looked more like a mining engineer than an artist; and Willa was little and black-eyed and vivacious. Not vivacious like Bonnie, who employed her vivacity to attract attention to herself. Willa just seemed to be everywhere at once, doing everything, helping everyone to do something. She talked and laughed with everyone at the same time about most anything, without seeming at all flippant, without seeming at all flippant. The apartment consisted of one very long high-ceilinged room having three long windows at each end and an open staircase up the middle of one side wall. This led to a bath and bedrooms above. There was nothing garish or bawdy about it. The bedroom in which Mary left her wrap, had twin beds, dressing table and chest of soft green enamel with triangular touches of black as to corners and knobs. There were sheer, cool green hangings at the windows with silver and black brocade pull curtains. Glittering cut glass toilet articles on the dressing table reflected and returned the lights in the mirror—the whole an atmosphere of fresh, clear, sparkling loveliness.

The room downstairs was a study of comfortable harmony without being studied at all. Every color seemed to be represented when one looked about, but the predominating note was a warm maroon red that rambled over the somewhat worn rug—which had always known hospitality—leaped up to rest in several of the deep armchairs and glowed down from soft chenille hangings over the windows.

The room had two open fireplaces, in both of which a wood fire snapped cheerfully on this crisp autumn night. The two mantels seemed to divide the room into its component parts. In one end a grand piano faced the long windows and a pillowed couch stood at a angle before the fire. A buffet flanked the middle wall opposite the staircase, with a long, refectory table between. At the other end of the room and about its fireplace were easels, drawing boards, stained palettes, and all the varied accoutrements of artists. A typewriter was pushed back on a paper-strewn desk. There were steel files in one corner, chairs and smoking tables here and there and one wall was filled with book-shelves. The walls and tables were gay with the varied assortment that adventurers collect, mellowed tapestries, Anatolian mats, pottery of every genus and description, from the rich deep shades of a Cariton bowl to primitive, unglazed earthenware. There were deep red dahlias in a vase of pigeon-blood cloisonne, several pieces of delicately carved ivory, bronze bowls on teakwood bases, and two lovely oil canvases, probably done by the artists, themselves, Mary guessed.

Not all of this could be seen at a glance. The whole charming effect had to be absorbed, collectively and piece-meal. At the same time, the guests were quite as charming and interesting as the room. Slender, dark, olive-skinned Ghetia Daciti—the young sculptress whom the critics had already acclaimed—was as reticent, demure and quiet as her Latin beauty was poignant, startling and attractive. Noreen Bennett was a columnist on the Manhattan News, Startling Clark was a copywriter for a big advertising firm, Sheila King specialized in graphology, Seymour Ashley was an astrologer—Mary's head whirled with a giddy delight at so many bewildering names, celebrities and "ologies," as she called them. There were others present, less prominent in the confusion of names. She felt like a mere atom of inferiority among them. Then she remembered that Dick's world was only finance, and was comforted.

If he could deal with cold figures and hard cash and mingle with the scintillating brilliancy of this group—so would she. But she would have to be a retiring spectator for awhile.

No sooner were her resolutions made than they were shattered by Willa Duchon. She caught Mary's hand affectionately and drew her arm about her waist.

"So this is Dick's latest find? Well, you've scored a touchdown this time that decides the game. At least we hope it will, you charming Don Quixote. I think you've met us all, now, haven't you? That initiates you. And now, I'll wager you are a marvelous cook—I can guess. And am I glad? These girls are absolute novices when it comes to chafing dishes and grilles. So I have to do it all! My maid takes Sundays off and they all troupe in her for supper. Whoopee, Willa can cook, so what's the grief? I know you'll help me."

"Wait a minute, you don't have to guess if she is a good cook," someone interrupted. "How about it, Ash?"

They all turned toward a lanky, dark-haired youngish-old man who sat with one foot swinging over the arm of his chair. He looked at Mary and smiled friendly.

"It all depends upon your sign," he said. "When were you born?"

"June 27th," Mary replied, wondering what it was all about.

"You're right, Willa," Seymour Ashley declared, clapping his large hand on his swinging knee. "She's a Cancer woman, best homemakers and cooks on this earth. Dick, you've picked yourself a nice one, no gettin' by that. Well, a big financier battling with the monetary elements needs a good, comfortable home to retire to. Now, we temperamental people can take a snack anywhere, any time, and thrive."

"But I notice you like to gang in here or Sunday suppers and eat until you don't leave me so much as a black cup of coffee for Monday breakfast," Ramon observed with jolly sarcasm and a twinkle in his eye. "Remember, I picked me a Cancer woman? If I am an artist, well, what's wrong? How about a little tune?"

From somewhere, there appeared magically a couple of banjos, a mandolin and a ukulele. Click the copywriter, slid onto the piano bench and struck a few tentative chords. And before Mary could wink an eye, the room was filled with rollicking melody, gliding dancers and hilarious mirth.

They were Albin Pfau of Howell, Michigan and Albert Pfau of Mountain St., this city. Albin Pfau now 62 years of age came to this country when a young man and located in the west. But his parents never came to America so he knew little about his relatives although he heard that an uncle had located in the east with his family. He came to this city on Tuesday however and paid a visit to Gustave Friedrich, local jeweler, and while there inquired if the latter knew of a family by name of Pfau around these parts. Mr. Friedrich told him that there was such a family and that across the street lived the daughter of Albert Pfau, Mrs. Walter Backofen. She was called into consultation and it was soon found that Albert Pfau was a first cousin to Albin Pfau, their fathers being brothers. The telephone wires to Glastonburg became busy and soon three other cousins, Max Armo and William Pfau were informed of the arrival of the now-found relative and they came to this city Tuesday night where a happy reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Friedrich at 17 Franklin St. with Albin Pfau was Mrs. Pfau and their son, Herbert Pfau, and also Miss Jane of Buffalo, N. ## A Mark of a Good Bank

One mark of a bank's all-around dependability is the business-like way in which it makes loans.

Patrons appreciate the wisdom of our practice of obtaining financial statements before making substantial loans. This is the procedure now followed universally by the better banks of the country.

No worthy borrower is inconvenienced and depositors are thus given an additional safeguard.

MICHIGAN FULL OF FOREIGN CARS

When you observe the California, Ohio, New York, Kentucky, Illinois and other state license plates on the roads these days the question arises as to what brings these visitors to Michigan.

Perhaps it was a recently illustrated story about the Bay City state park in the Detroit Times; or the two-page story of East Michigan in the Standard Record, a magazine for Standard Oil employees in ten middle western states; or the tales of Mackinac Island in the Detroit Free Press and the Cincinnati Times-Star; or the legend of the Sacred Rock near Rogers City in the Detroit News; the tale of the Ocqueoc River as an Indian shrine in the Cincinnati Times-Star; or the yarn about an Au Sable trip in the Columbus Dispatch. Every story an east Michigan lure sent out from E. M. T. A. to bring those out-state cars with their visitors that leave money in the state, and the Rainbow Trail attractive advertising is reaching thousands of tourists.

Sees Cadillac All Free of Debt Soon

Mayor Felix H. H. Flynn in an address before the Cadillac Rotary club, stated that the city's bonded indebtedness will be all paid in 1934 and the school bonds in 1936. The total debt is $116,000, which is a per capita of $12.12 compared with the national per capita of $102, he added.

It was shown there is a balance of $94,000 in all funds, or $6,000 more than a year ago, all obligations being paid in full and all major improvements, including a sewage disposal plant, completed. The city has about $50,000 due from the state highway department and primary school money. The mayor told the Rotarians about 75 per cent of the city taxes were paid when due this year.

Bans "If" Advertising

Advertisements designed to induce investors to buy investment trust shares by pointing out how wealthy they would be had they bought certain stocks a few years ago, have been banned by the Michigan Securities Commission. A resolution was adopted directing fixed investment trust companies to limit their advertising to facts and avoid comparisons.

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"
These peculiar plants are found among the sand dunes and ledges of Palestine. When the plant is in its dormant state it is a ball of tightly folded leaves. When it is placed in water it will gradually unroll and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up again, brown and dead. Put it in water again and it will revive and begin to grow again. It is an interesting curiosity and most beautiful house plant with the fern-like leaves of very agreeable fragrance. It is a "miracle plant" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions. Don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is rarely admitted by anyone.

PERMIT TO SELL NON-GAME FISH NOT NECESSARY

No license is now required to sell non-game fish taken from inland waters of the state.

The provision requiring a license was eliminated from the inland fish law by the 1931 legislature. The new law does not change the provisions necessitating a commercial fishing license for selling fish taken from the Great Lakes.

Persons taking fish to sell from any of the inland waters must comply with all of the regulations for taking of non-game fish.

Perch and pike-perch, which may be sold by persons licensed for commercial fishing, when taken from the Great Lakes, are classed as game fish in inland waters and may not be sold when taken from the inland waters.

Smelt taken through the ice or from the smelt runs next spring and which may be taken in unlimited quantities, may be sold without a license.

The list of non-game fish which may be taken and sold from inland waters without a license are: Grass pike, calico bass, strawberry bass, rock bass, crappies, bullheads, carp, catfish, ciscoes, dogfish, garfish, mullet, pilot fish (Menominee whitefish), whitefish (Menominee whitefish), white-suckers and lake trout.

Survey to Show State's Use of Main Highways

The most elaborate study of highway conditions ever attempted will be completed in Michigan this summer by the United States Bureau of Public Roads. The bureau is engaged in taking a county of traffic on all country roads, including 8,000 miles of state highways, 25,000 miles of county highways and 50,000 miles of township highways.

When this count is completed similar counts will be made in seven leading cities of the state, including Grand Rapids, Flint, Jackson, Ann Arbor, Detroit, Lansing and Niles. In addition to the number of passing cars, the survey, by means of a region grouping of license numbers, will describe the origin of cars traveling on each of the roads, thus showing the use that is being made by city people of the country roads and vice versa, the use which the farmers make of the city streets.

The proportion of road use as between passenger cars and trucks also will be shown, the whole giving a comprehensive picture of the state's vehicular service. Surveys have been made in a number of states previously, but these have embraced only the state roads, to the construction of which the federal government has contributed.

Michigan is the only state in which the broader examination so far has been attempted. The survey is under the direction of Leroy H. Peabody, economist of the Bureau of Roads, and is under the direct supervision of H. E. Cunningham, with headquarters in Lansing.

Crude Oil Price Boosted in State

A 20-cent per barrel boost in the price of crude oil posted at Mt. Pleasant by the Pure Oil Pipe Line Co., largest buyers in the field, brought the most optimistic news to oil field operators and royalty owners in the last 12 months.

The increase placed the price of crude at 57 cents a barrel. It had sunk to 37 cents only a few weeks ago, the lowest price in the history of the local field.

Production in the Isabella-Midland field is estimated at about 10,000 barrels daily from the 205 producing wells.

The Struble No. 1 wildcat well, 13 miles east of Mt. Pleasant, is flowing at the rate of about 800 barrels daily. The well figured in a gas and oil blast explosion on July 18 that cost nine lives and severely injured several persons.

The well is producing from the first "pay." It is located only a short distance from the Hornick No. 1 which nearly doubled its flow when it was drilled into the second "pay." Oil men believe the Struble likewise will increase its present production if it is drilled into the second "pay."

Dozens of new wells will be put down in the new "east field" where the Hornick and Struble are located if the price of oil should rise to $1 a barrel or more, oil operators believe.

Radio Sets Fall Short of Claim in U. S. Census

With nearly two-thirds of the states already accounted for, it appears that the "radio population" of the country, taken as a part of the decennial census last year, will fall far short of the industry's estimate of 15,000,000 sets.

The analysis of the United States census discloses that 34 states thus far tabulated had only 4,168,519 sets on April 1 of last year. They had an aggregate of 12,941,653 families, of whom 32.2 per cent reported sets. Since last year, of course, the number of sets in use has increased considerably, but so has the number of families.

The final count, however, still remains highly speculative. Numbered among the states which have not yet been tabulated are many densely populated areas, known to be well advanced in radio. These include New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Illinois, California, Ohio and Missouri.

It is estimated officially on the basis of returns thus far received, together with the "expectancy" in those states unaccounted for that between 40 and 50 per cent of the families have radio sets. It is difficult for these officials to see how the number of sets will exceed 10,000,000 or so, as compared with the present industrial estimate of about 15,000,000 and the estimate of 13,500,000 made last year.

ARCHITECTS AT U. OF M. SEEK INDEPENDENCE

Architectural students and faculty, a part of the engineering college at the university since its establishment in 1906, are renewing their efforts to obtain an organization independent from the engineers.

Their demands for independence have been voiced for a number of years, with events now pointing to the probability that their requests will be granted in the near future. University authorities, however, are said to be pondering whether to make the division when school opens in the fall, or postpone the action for a time.

The division, it is said, would be mutually acceptable to both the engineering and architecture schools, despite the common interests which the two schools have.

Both schools have been growing rapidly, and both have added numerous new subjects in recent years, the architectural division having made great strides in the instruction offered in painting, drawing and sculpture, with many of the faculty members becoming widely known for their work in the art world.

Little if any added expense would be entailed in the "divorce" of the two schools, officials believe, with most of the architectural work being carried on in the new Architecture building at Haven and Monroe streets, while the engineering class rooms and offices are in the engineering buildings located on the southeastern corner of the campus.

FORD PLANNING CHANGES IN CAR

Present reduction of the Ford Motor Co. employment roster to 48,000 is necessitated by preparations for a September schedule of 100,000 units of an improved Model A, officials of the company said. They would not give any details of the improved model.

Not only is the reduction of employment temporary, but not less than 30,000 men will be continually employed during the current month, the officials said, with the daily payroll approximately at $500,000.

Rumors that Ford is preparing to offer an eight-cylinder car to the public were not supported by these Ford officials. On the contrary, they said that the September schedule starts off with four-cylinder cars exclusively, and that there are no plans for an eight-cylinder car in the immediate future.

On past performance of the Rouge plant, the 100,000 schedule for September will require an employment roster of approximately 70,000.

Five Sundays in Jail Added to Fine Given Van Buren Wet Driver

Fred Russell, Lawton, has his week ends for the coming season all planned for him. He will spend them in the Van Buren county jail.

Russell was arrested on the charge of driving while drunk and pleaded guilty before Justice William Prater. He was fined $50 and sentenced to five days in jail. Justice Prater decreed that Russell should report every Saturday night for the next five weeks at the county jail, where he will be confined each Sunday until his five-day sentence is completed.

Russell has a large family and Justice Prater felt that jailing the wage earner for a consecutive five-day period would work a hardship on innocent parties.

$63,000 Slashed From State College Budget

A $63,000 cut in the Michigan State College budget for operation and maintenance was announced by President Robert S. Shaw. Expenditures will be about 7 per cent below last year, he stated.

The reductions were made possible, it was said, by the installation of a new budget committee. President Shaw announced there will be no salary increases for faculty members.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Miss Betty Devereaux is spending a few days with Miss Audrita Blair in Fowlerville.

George Mann brought in an old zinc stencil to this office Monday. It contained the name of his grandfather, W. S. Mann. Patrick Dillon who recently bought the old Kearney house found it while he was tearing out one of the old rear foundations. It is estimated that it must have been concealed there for at least sixty years as Walter Mann died in 1877. The stencil is in a remarkable good state of preservation.

Miss Esther Rose Berquist is spending her summer vacation with the Rev. Horace Maycroft of Lakeview and her grandparents of Coopersville, Michigan. She is expected to return home in time for school.

PHILATHEA COLUMN

The summer months have shown little decrease in attendance in the Sunday school class. Last Sunday as often before, we noted old friends in our class room, which is always a pleasure to our members. A good interest was evident in the discussion of the passage in acts, from which we discussed the theme, "A Gospel for all Men," showing that the religion of Jesus Christ is a universal one and that man makes many distinctions which God does not recognize. The Golden Text next Sunday is from Romans 1:16 "I am not ashamed of the Gospel; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." Lesson "The Mission to Cyprus," acts 12:25-13:12 In a nutshell, "Be Strong! Have Courage! Christ lives!"

PINCKNEY WINS GAME AT BRIGHTON

Pinckney played at Brighton last Sunday and emerged victorious at the end of the contest. Brighton recently played Hamburg to a standstill, only losing by one run. The game was an even affair up to the 8th inning. The score then stood 8 to 7 in favor of Pinckney. Devine first up for Pinckney in this inning hit the first ball pitched for a home run over the left fielders head; Lefty Reason got a hit; Ward walked; Shicks was safe on a fielders choice, filling the bases, Kinney tripped to center, all three runs scoring. This seemed to take the fight out of the Brighton team and Pinckney scored five more runs in the ninth inning, mostly on infield hits. Some of Pinckney's regulars failed to show up and it was necessary to use a revised lineup. This did not work very smooth in the fore part of the game and was responsible for most of the Brighton runs. Lefty Reason was in the box for the locals. He allowed nine hits and struck out twelve men. However, they were scattered. Standliek and Berry collected three hits apiece for Brighton and Devine, Reason, Shicks and Kinney did the same for Pinckney.
