Just Consider This:

There's More Savings Bank "Luck" than any any other Kind.

And the best of it is that YOU can make it for yourself, by opening an account here, and adding to it REGULARLY as your earnings will permit.

It's easy to save—just merely a matter of spending LESS than you earn. It will soon become a HABIT and get easier as the years go by, until almost before you know it, you are on "EASY STREET." It may not be easy at first, because with your money in the Bank, instead of in your pocket, the many, many little useless expenditures will have to cease. But you'll be all the better for it. There's PROTECTION, ENCOURAGEMENT, and SATISFACTION in a good Bank Account—and it's easily within your reach if you form the HABIT of systematic saving.

'U' EXCURSION SHOW ATTENDANCE GAIN

Keeping step with the record enrollment of the University of Michigan Summer Session, attendance on the nine special excursions conducted by the University totalled more than 1,000, an increase of one-third over 1930, according to Carlton F. Wells, secretary of the Summer Session. These tours are voluntary and are offered as educational and entertaining glimpses of industrial, sociological and scenic points of interest.

Niagara Falls and Put-in-Bay are the longest trips made, scenic and geological features being studied in both places. Due to interest in past years two trips were scheduled to the Ford River Rouge plant. Only one was planned for Greenfield Village, Ford's town of antiques, but a second one was found necessary. Here the students were also given a special inspection of the recently completed Dearborn Inn, a stately Georgian building recognized as one of the finest hotels of its type in the world. The "Day in Detroit" trip, when Belle Isle, the Institute of Arts, the Detroit News plant, and radio station WJR in the Fisher Building were visited, was enlivened when interrupted by police who mistook the student conveyance for a rubberneck bus operating without a license. The case was settled out of court, however. At the General Motors Proving Ground, engineers took the students over the roads and laboratories where 135 performance tests are made.

The great new Michigan State Prison at Jackson was visited last Housing 5,600 inmates, and covering 57 acres, the prison was constructed with inmate labor. Guard Captain M. S. Hatch conducted the students and lectured on prison problems. "In many cases a short severe sentence would give far better results than a long one, because after a man has served a certain time in prison, prolonging of the time only tends to turn him into an enemy of society," he said. "If indeterminate sentences could be imposed and a board consisting of experts in the fields of law, medicine, psychiatry, education and industry could decide with the advice of the warden when a man was equipped to make a successful return to society, the purposes of justice and society would be well served." Over 700 of the inmates are between 15 and 20 years of age, and the largest age group is between 21 and 25.

Hope College Hall, Old Pillar Church Still Defying Time

Van Vleck hall on Hope college campus and the old pillar church at Ninth street and College avenue are landmarks which have weathered 75 years in Holland's history.

Van Vleck hall was built through funds collected by Dr. A. C. Van Raalte, founder of the Holland colony, on five acres donated by him as a site for an academy and named after Rev. John Van Vleck, then principal of the academy, who directed the work of construction. In pioneer days the brick structure served manifold purposes, including the library, recitation rooms, students' rooms and was the home of Rev. Philip Phelps, Hope's first president. The building now is a dormitory for men.

The old pillar church was erected in 1856, nine years after Dr. A. C. Van Raalte and his bond of colonists founded Holland. The steeple, weather vane and bell are the same and the copper rooster has been veering with the wind for 75 years. The bell still rings for all the services of the church. In pioneer days the bell was rung for fires, the time of day, and tolled the age of the dead three times in succession as the funeral procession moved to the cemetery.

Velvet Dominates the Fall-Winter Mode

By Mrs. Lisbeth
Velvet dominates the fall-winter mode, says dispatches from Paris. It is used for street and dress coats, for suits and evening frocks, and it stars in the boudoir where velvet pajamas and negligees make soft, rich lounging garments.

The screen stars of Hollywood, as usual, go in for whatever is the mode in a big way. Lilyan Tashman, who wears a regal dinner dress of black velvet with full elbow sleeves and short train. The high neckline and the belt are accented by jeweled clips, the only trimming touches.

A lovely long evening cloak of red velvet sets off the dark beauty of Conchita Montenegro. It follows a high empire theme with interesting sleeves, very full gathered into narrow ermine cuffs. Ermine also edging the softly draped collar which ends in a tie below the bust.

The shorter type of evening wrap is prettily illustrated by Bebe Daniels, in chenille dotted velvet in dolman effect and a white fox fur border. Dull white velvet is one of the novelties of the season, and is very effective in fashioning evening gowns. Paris couturiers are using this fabric in their creations in very simple styles, which are particularly suited to its richness.

Over 50 per cent of the homes in Michigan include a radio set as part of their furnishings, according to figures of the United States Census Bureau, based on the 1930 compilation. Michigan, with 51 per cent of its homes so supplied, is exceeded only by Rhode Island with 57 per cent, and Connecticut with 55 per cent. Wisconsin has practically the same percentage as Michigan.

These figures were revealed in a recent radio address by Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. He declared that it was estimated that the American radio industry in the first 10 years of its existence had retailed more than $3,000,000 worth of receiving sets, tubes and parts.

Preliminary figures on the 1930 census count show that about 10,000,000 homes, only one-third of all those in the country, have been equipped for radio reception. This would indicate, according to Dr. Klein, that the industry is just beginning its growth and that future years hold much promise for its expansion. Despite the fact that it is generally believed in this section of the country that the use of radio is very widespread, and the percentages bear out that belief to a marked degree, in some states not more than 5 or 6 per cent of the homes are radio-equipped.

Dr. Klein points out that there are 1,000,000,000 people in the world within the range of broadcasting stations now established. On the basis of five listeners to every set, it would require 200,000,000 sets to provide facilities for all of them to tune in the programs available. That is about eight times the present supply.

The program is being completed for the annual Mecosta county Parent-Teachers institute which opens here Sept. 14. Among the speakers engaged are Miss Alice Sowers of the National Parent-Teachers association, Dr. H. M. Crooks, president of Alma college and Dr. Catherine Green and Dr. G. E. Cabrothers of the University of Michigan.

This is a menu for a day. Recipes will serve six.

Recipes
Meat Loaf—Two pounds beef, two cups bread crumbs, one-third cup tomato catsup, two eggs, one small chopped onion or onion juice, one-half cup hot water, one pound fresh pork, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon salt, pepper, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, six slices salt pork. Grind meat, add salt, pepper, eggs slightly beaten, and onion, if desired. Then add bread crumbs moistened with milk. Add tomato catsup. Shape into a loaf, place in a roasting pan and lay salt pork across top. Roast in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for one and a half hours, basting frequently with one-half cup hot water. Make a sauce to serve over the meat, using the liquid in the roasting pan.
Sea Dream Salad
One package lime-flavored gelatin, one cup boiling water, one cup grated cucumber, one tablespoon vinegar, one teaspoon onion juice, dash of cayenne pepper, one-half teaspoon salt. Dissolve gelatin in water, add grated cucumber, vinegar, onion juice, cayenne and salt. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise.
Boiled Fish
Select a dry-meated fish, such as halibut, as it will not fall apart and go to pieces. To boil a fish whole cover it with boiling water to which the little vinegar has been added, and cook at the simmering point only. When cooked, the meat of a white fish should be a flaky white all the way through instead of a watery-looking white. The fish may be cut in servings and cooked in a shallow pan using one quart of boiling water, three tablespoons of vinegar or one lemon sliced, and one tablespoon oil. Lift the cooked fish carefully to a hot platter and serve with egg sauce.

Suggestions To Wash Rag Rugs
Soak your rag rugs for five minutes in cold water. Next spread on the floor and sprinkle heavily with a good washing powder. Scrub the rugs with a clean broom dipped in hot water. Rinse thoroughly and hang on the line to dry.
Tea and Coffee Stains
Spread the stained part over a bowl and pour boiling water over it until the stain disappears.

RURAL HOME NOT ALWAYS BEAUTIFUL

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

Having grown up on a farm and having passed my childhood there, I am greatly interested in the homes in which farmers live. The little Pennsylvania valley where I grew up was not productive, though virtually every one living there owned his home and managed to eke out a fairly comfortable existence, as measured by their standards. It was the custom of that neighborhood to have a little while ago I motored through northeastern New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire with my fifteen-year-old daughter on her way to a summer camp. All the way we saw beautiful farm houses, shaky ladder while whitewashing my father's barn, eighty feet in length. When at about sixteen I traveled as far as sixty miles to my first country teachers' institute, I found that other farm homes and barns were well built and painted, too. I had often heard of the wonderful rich farms of the middle and far west. As I used to plow the old state fields on our farm, and feel my spirit wilt as I beheld the corn crop parching under the burning summer sun and when there had been little rain, I used to picture the fields and plains where water lingered longer in the soil. Together with that picture would come vivid ones of the spacious, beautiful farm homes in that fertile land of the "far west."

By and by I took a trip by train over some of this oft-dreamed of country. The expansive fields of crops, impressed me wonderfully. But the farm buildings, excepting a few regions, sadly disappointed me. From this disappointment I have not yet recovered, having traveled through most of the richest agricultural areas of our country. There seems to be no relationship between richness of soil and beauty of country homes. More often than not, it seems that the poorest farm home sits on the richest soil.

Several trips through New England have impressed me with the beauty of the Yankee farm house. Only a little while ago I motored through northeastern New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire with my fifteen-year-old daughter on her way to a summer camp. All the way we saw beautiful farm houses, nearly all were painted white, and seemed to have just been painted. Of course, they are free from smoke. It was not the mountains and the hills that appealed most to me, but the attractive farm homes, attractive places for children to grow up in. These houses (as a rule, do not represent wealth but industry, frugality and interest in a beautiful place to live. Not just a few of these houses, but one after another, literally thousands of them.

If our New England neighbors had the "gift of publicity" we should have been hearing more about these handsome rural homes. Nevertheless thousands of farm and city families from the plains who indirectly help New England build and maintain her roads and farm houses, will by and by, have farm houses several hundred or a couple thousand miles away just as beautiful, or more so.

Gladys Glad on Beauty

AMERICA'S FOREMOST BEAUTY

"Dear Miss Glad: My face has become unpleasantly red of late, and several dark purplish-red lumps have appeared on the skin. There are also a number of blackheads and pimples, and I am quite worried about the condition. What would you advise me to do?"
"Mrs. K. F."
I would advise you to consult a competent skin specialist or physician about your skin as soon as possible. The condition you describe is probably Acne Rosacea. This skin disease should be treated as soon as it appears. If it is allowed to become chronic, the blood vessels usually become congested, and sometimes stand out prominently on the nose and cheeks. Also, the tissues tend to grow in an exaggerated manner, and the nose and face swell. Through diet and local treatment, the condition can be cured. But the assistance of a man skilled in the treatment of the disease should be enlisted.

"Dear Miss Glad: That reducing course contained in your booklet on 'The New Figure' sure is effective! About two months ago I was a good 27 pounds overweight. But now—all sorts of compliments on my figure, the boy friend's been paying me

Do "Kids" Get an Even Break? I Saw an Accident And This Happened

By Marshall Maslin
I was standing right there when the accident happened. Two cars going in the same direction came together with a crash. One had a front fender dented and a running board broken; the other had a smashed radiator and lights. A boy was in one car, a skinny kid with a pale face and an impudent nose. A middle-aged man was the other driver; he had a red face and a stick-out jaw.

The man got out of the car and
