Pinckney Merchants Lose Opener

Are Defeated in Close Contest at Fenton Sunday by Score of 6 to 0. They Play at Pinckney Next Sunday.

The Pinckney independent football team went over to Fenton last Sunday and dropped their opening game to that team by the margin of a single touchdown, 6 to 0. The Fenton team is backed by the American League and is composed of husky boys who outweighed Pinckney considerably. Fenton kicked off to Pinckney who made a first down in quick order with Swarhout carrying the ball most of the time. Then they were forced to punt. Then following a punting duel as both teams found ground gaining hard. Fenton had the better of the kicking and after a number of exchanges of punts got the ball on Pinckney's 30 yard line. On the fourth down they lacked a yard with 15 seconds to go to the quarter. Here Fowler, Fenton quarterback broke through the Pinckney line and ran twenty yards for a touchdown. Their attempt to placekick the extra point failed, Carr stopping it with his face. Neither side gained any worthwhile advantage during the remainder of the half. In the last half Pinckney had their best scoring chance. Harold Reason caught a forward pass for good gain. Several line plunges and end runs gave Pinckney the ball on the 20 yard line. Here the Fenton line held and Pinckney lost the ball on downs being unable to make the final yard needed on fourth down. After this neither team made any very serious scoring threats. Both lines failed to hold on offense and the ball carriers were thrown for loss after loss. Pinckney completed but one forward pass and Fenton three. Fenton tried a number of them but most of them were knocked down by the Pinckney linemen and Lefty Reason intercepted one. Swarhout was Pinckney's best ground gainer and Pete Gerycz excelled on defense making a majority of the Pinckney tackles. After the first quarter when he replaced Gerald Reason. Considering all things Pinckney made a creditable showing in their first-time out and should hit their stride next Sunday.

Indications of a Hard Long Winter

The Silver Lake Land Development Project

Christian Science Society in a Letter Denies That They are Connected with the Enterprise. Work Still Going on There

Several weeks ago we printed an article having to do with a land development project in the neighborhood of Big Silver, Little Silver and Pickeral Lakes, south of Pinckney. It was reported at the time that the Christian Science Society was desirous of the property, some 1800 acres of which was purchased on options. Work started there last week in grading the land for the golf course. The men who are pushing the project are from Chicago and the surveyors also hail from there. A number of signs have been erected on the land which read "This is the site of the Dexter Country Club Hotel". "This will be the Main Improved Road to the Dexter Country Club Hotel" etc.

No farming to speak of has been done on it in recent years and about the only building on it is a well built stone house erected on the Walsh farm about 12 years ago. A sign designates this building as headquarters of the Dexter Country Club Development Co.

The following is the letter received from the Christian Science Society:
Christian Science Committee of Publication for Michigan, 1214 Book Bldg., Detroit

Editor, Pinckney Dispatch:
Your September 23 number contains an account of a land development project near Silver Lake, in which you record that "the land is said to be desired by the Christian Science Society of this state for a country club, golf course and landing field."

Permit me to say that you have been misinformed. Christian Science churches in this state or elsewhere have nothing to do with this project, have not been consulted in regard to it and do not endorse it in any way. Also the statement as to the membership of the Christian Science church in Michigan is based on conjecture and is without authority or foundation as a by-law of the church prohibits publishing the number of its members.

I shall be glad if you will give space for this letter in your next issue, so that there may be no misunderstanding on the part of your readers.

Very sincerely,
Francis Lester Jandron
Christian Science Com. on Publication.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

The Fowlerville High School team will play at Pinckney this week. Fowlerville for many years has been the rival of Pinckney on the football field and great games have been the result. Fowlerville comes to Pinckney this year with an old and experienced team and claims they will trim the home boys by at least three touchdowns, however, Pinckney has always been a good defensive team and scoring three touchdowns against her is a fair afternoon's work for any team. In fact, the Pinckney lads are expecting to hold the big team from Fowlerville scoreless.
W. Merritt of the University of Michigan, considered one of the best officials in the state, will referee the game.

Fowlerville Fair Goes Over Big

Fine Weather and Stellar Attractions Help to Make Fowlerville Fair Break All Attendance Records

Despite the depression and the fact that many fairs in the state finished this year with red ink balances, the Fowlerville event went over with a bang. The paid attendance the first day was 6000 people which broke all attendance records for the past 45 years. The parking space for cars was filled and another field had to be rented for the purpose. If the receipts warrant it, the directors announce a new floral hall will be constructed. This will release more building space for live stock and race horses. There were 72 race horses at the Fair Thursday.

This year's fair has one of the biggest and best midways ever seen in some years and their exhibition space was well filled with life stock, farm produce, etc. Their free vaudeville attraction put on, on the stage in front of the grand stand were equally interesting. The grandstand was packed for each days program.

The Detroit Creamery 7 horse hitch attracted much attention. It consisted of 7 beautiful dapple grays equipped with a splendid harness and to have cost $2500. The entire team was driven by one man. They are said to be the most perfectly matched and beautifully formed of any team in the country.

In the sheep department W. C. W. C. Hendee and Sons of Pinckney exhibited their Blacktop sheep. They won all the firsts, seven in all and also 2 seconds and 2 thirds. At the Adrian fair the previous week they won 50 0 o of the prizes.

Both James Roche and Bert Roche had their race horses there as did also F. W. Carr of Gregory. Bert Roche won 2:19 trot with Diamond Dewey Thursday.

In the midway many old attractions were once more present. The Arabian with the live snakes selling (the snake oil was always the center of attraction as well as another peddling exhibiting beadwork. The death car of the Ypsilanti murder was present but actual views of the murder scene were on view in a side show. The monkey races, the fat lady and the four legged girl were likewise present.

Thursday's base ball game was a loosely played affair. Williamston imported most of the Royal Finance team of Detroit but were no match for the Pleasant Lake team who won in easy fashion 14 to 6. Friday's contest between West Point Park and Stockbridge was much better. Andy Messenger, former big league hurler, pitched for Stockbridge and Specks Hartner of Holly for West Point. No scores were made until the 5th when West Point hit three successive doubles off Messenger and scored twice. Stockbridge got their only run in the sixth off Goers who had relieved Hartner in the fifth when the latter split his finger. West Point added another run in the seventh and that ended the scoring. Stockbridge looked weak at bat against the West Point pitchers while West Point wasted many hits by failure to bunch them. Pleasant Lake won the title by taking West Point into camp Saturday 11 to 4. The latter team failed to get effective pitching.

This rings down the curtain on the county fairs for this year and according to reports it has not been a very profitable season for them.

Current Comment

We were recently informed by William Whitacre of Howell, superintendent of the poor of this county for some time, that the poor farm at the present time has the greatest population it has had since he has held office. The total population now is 28. In comparing this with the thousands that are housed in some of the nearby county homes, Eloise for instance, we can be thankful that the poverty & wretchedness of the thickly populated districts seldom spreads to the rural districts to any great extent. While the average incomes in the farming communities are probably far below those in the great industrial centers yet the list of those "on the town" is always less in number.

For a number of years past the Fowlerville Fair has been held without the presence of its most famous son, Charles Gehringer, regular second baseman of the Detroit Tigers. This year when the fair was on in full swing he was playing the keystone sack for the Monroe Merchants many miles away. It was not always thus. About four years ago he played with the Fowlerville team in the annual fair classic in company with Earl Whitehill and Larry Woodall of the Tigers. However, Williamston with Andy Messenger, former Cleveland pitcher in the box, trimmed them by a score of 2 to 1 in a fast game. The next year Gehringer was again billed as a headliner but some misunderstanding arose and he failed to appear at all and since then the Fowlerville Fairs have been Gehringerless.

Last Saturday the University of Michigan staged its annual free game. That is all high school students are admitted free to this contest. There are several reasons for this. One is that this opening game is usually played against a much weaker opponent and is never rated as one of the big games. Consequently a great number of seats would be empty anyway. Then inviting all the high school boys and girls to the game helps to popularize football and increase the gate receipts at the big games on which the athletic program of the great colleges depend for their financial support.

The National Farm Grange holding their convention at Washington D. C. last week went on record as opposed to the beer amendment as a means of relieving unemployment. They stated that the money used to support the beer industry would be taken from the purchase of milk, bread and other necessities of life. If the vote of the American Legion at Detroit a short time ago reflected the views of a cross section of the population then that of the Grange must also reflect the views of another cross section of population as the Grange has a membership of 800,000.

PINCKNEY BULLDOGS LOSE

The Pinckney Bulldogs lost their football game at Whitmore Lake Wednesday by a score of 20 to 6. The boys claim the Lake team used a few ringers in this game. Whitmore plays a return game here tonight.

WEEK OF OCTOBER 4

For the week beginning October 4th we are looking for considerable warm weather. Temperatures during the most part of the period will range above the seasonal normal.

About Tuesday a severe storm is expected to break over the greater part of the state. There will be numerous thunder showers, some of severe proportions, and wind storms at this time will also be severe.

While the middle of the week may get a little respite from storm activity, there will be renewed rain storms and strong winds. These conditions will affect the greater part of Michigan during the last two days of the week.

Farm activities will be greatly hindered during the week due to rains and wind. Fall crops of most sections in the state will be adversely affected as far as the harvest is concerned.

Busy Month in Flower Garden

There is very little planting to be done in the vegetable garden during the month of October except for arranging perennial roots, but in the flower garden this is one of the busiest months of the entire year.

LOVE, PREFERRED

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

Copyright 1931, General Press Association

"Well, I could get her in here for private switchboard work and odd jobs in spare time. Do you think she would consider that?" The salary wouldn't tempt the governor to resign, but she could get a start and be ready to jump into something better later on.

"Not except at changing jobs," Mary laughed. "But she might like to try it."

"All right, then. Tell her to run in and see us tomorrow morning. She can ask for me and I'll vouch for her. She's a good kid."

Mary wondered when he was going to say something more personal. "I think Bonnie will be crazy to try it. Thank you, Dick, and I'll tell her."

"Glad to do anything I can. How are you—busy as a general?"

"As usual. You must be busy yourself. You haven't been in—or anything."

"That's right. I'll drop in tomorrow, sure."

her. Strangely, too, her renewed happiness at Dick's promise, contributed to her pleasure in the flowers. Everything was more beautiful to her when all was right with the world—that is, when things were right with her and Dick.

Masses of bronzo butterfly roses seemed to flutter their winged petals as she gathered them into her arms and hesitated a moment to look at the card that she found in their dewy depths.

It was so that Dick found her—her arms filled with a fortune in roses and her face all radiant with pleasure as she read on the back of Martin Frazier's handsomely engraved card, "In memory of memories."

She looked up with a humorous smile that quirked the corners of her lips, to see Dick gazing at her in utter amazement. He was almost gaping at her, and he hadn't closed the door.

"Oh, Dick—hello," she gasped, weak with the joy of seeing him again. The flowers were instantly forgotten

The roses scattered about her, like colorful hopes and dreams tossed from her life in a hopeless disarray.

She stared into space without seeing—only a vast, bleak, empty future; she felt pain without realizing it; she heard the droning of the translux and the clicking of the ticker in the adjoining rooms without being conscious of her surroundings.

After awhile, she aroused from her lethargy, vaguely wondering what had happened, remembered where she was and got to her feet. She seemed to have been gone somewhere for awhile—where, she just couldn't recall.

Mechanically, she picked up the ropes and set them haphazardly in a vase in which there was no water. The telephone jangled. The voice at the other end of the wire compelled her instant return to sanity. In a moment, Mary was her brisk, busy, normal self. A machine without a heart. Her heart had gone away with Dick.

Well, that was that. She would not let herself think of it again, she resolved fiercely. Life was easier, more simple without love, anyway. The alternate ecstacy and grief were too disturbing and exhausting.

Mary was just beaming to learn that "our sincerest laughter with some pain is fraught." That when a woman loves a man with the kind of love a woman gives who loves completely and generously, she may count on having for every hour of joy, two hours of pain. For, as the man she loves can afford her exquisite joy at the slightest effort to please, so can he inflict excruciating pain at the slightest intent or neglect.

Mary was grateful for having to work late again that night. For when she left the office, she would have to face the horrible monster that waited around the corner of her mind ready to spring out at her.

When she reached home, she found Bonnie dashing around in great excitement. Bonnie had had a finger-wave and a manicure in New York that day and her mother was still occupied with pressing and mending all her clothes at 10 o'clock, as if Bonnie were going to wear them all at once.

"What's Foster doing, starting a greenhouse, or is this some special celebration? Who is to be congratulated, may I ask?"

She laughed shaken, principally from seeing him suddenly. "Oh, no—they're mine—that is—Mr. Frazier—his face flushed miserably and she stopped rather foolishly.

"Oh, —" he said, "I see," as if he had suddenly been endowed with a superior vision.

"Oh, no—Dick—"

"Is Foster in?" he interrupted coldly. "I like to see him for a minute."

Her face went white. Desperately, she said, "Dick, don't treat me like that. I—let me explain, please."

"What is there to explain?" he demanded with a careless lifting of his eyebrows and shoulders.

"I know you've been going out with Martin Frazier. Bonnie told me. You have time for him; but when I ask you to go with me, you have to work."

"Dick, that isn't true—I was so sorry—I did have to work Friday night—"

"Oh, sure, but you didn't tell me about stepping out with Frazier, just the same. I thought you—oh, well, what's the use to argue? What's the use of anything? I can't compete with a fellow that spends more in a week for flowers for you than I can make. Swing high, wide and handsome, Mary, I'll not interfere. Good luck to you," he laughed ironically, bitterly.

CHAPTER XXVII

The soft closing of the door on Dick's departure shattered through Mary's taut body and she crumpled into a little tortured heap on the floor.

laid out and waiting for him. Surely he couldn't say the words he had said, look the way he had looked at her and doo the things he had done—then let this little misunderstanding destroy it all! She ached for him with a continual, relentless ache.

For a week her heart beat with suffocating violence every time the telephone rang or the door opened. He would come to her—one day. Love would bring him, compel him.

And then—that hope left her. Bonnie began to stay in New York for the evening, and Mary learned that she was with Dick. Bonnie said, the first evening she came in late, "Oh, I had a date with one of the fellas in the office."

"Is he—nice?" Mary asked, with instant concern for protecting her little sister. "Be careful, honey, whom you go with in New York. It isn't wise to accept invitations too quickly. When you've been there longer, you can learn more about them all. You hear and see things that are pretty good indicators of the people with whom you work."

"Oh, sure, I'm no baby, Mary," Bonnie retorted, bending down and brushing her bright golden hair over her eyes.

The next time she stayed away, Mary happened to look down into the street when she went over to open the window before getting into bed. She swayed dizzily and gripped the window sill with both hands. A chill of pain shivered through her body, weak and limp.

The familiar Buick coupe was parked in the street below. In a flash Mary saw it all, then. As in a delirium, she left the window and crawled miserably to bed, where the cool sheets soothed her burning flesh. She lay there rigid and aching, her wide eyes staring up at the ceiling where the light from the street cast moving shadows of tree branches that drew fantastic handwriting on the wall. There was no longer a mystery to decipher, though. It was all too plain in Mary's mind. Her romance was dead, and her mind gyrate with a ceaseless, merciless threnody of grief.

Finally, when Bonnie came in, Mary pretended to be asleep. It cost her no little effort. One part of her wanted to rise up and shout out her accusations to Bonnie—to denounce her deception and cruelty. No wonder Bonnie suddenly wanted to get work in New York, that she accidentally met Dick that day for lunch and that he managed to find her a place to work in his office!

But her reason argued: If she had to fight with her own sister for Dick's love—did she want it? If Dick didn't want to recognize her love when she had already given it to him, did she want to force it upon him? Never!

As the days added to weeks, she even thought that Dick might soon tire of Bonnie and return to her. Would she forgive him and accept him, even yet? She thought she would—then.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Mary's employer noted the sudden change in her. It was too obvious to ignore. Those who had seen her with Dick and now saw her with him no more, understood, and pitied her. Those who knew little about her affairs, thought she was ill, and even ventured kindly advice about her working too hard.

Foster noted, too, that Dick Baldwin stayed away from the office. Any transactions with his house were made through other mediums. He added two and two and made four—it was simple.

It was really quite a tragic drama that unfolded itself there before his eyes. He knew nothing about the force that set it in action. But the pathos of it gripped him strangely.

Twice each week there were great jars of fresh flowers in Mary's office. They became a familiar fixture. He never knew that Mary used them for an object of discipline to her rebellious soul. They became an emblem to her. At first, she had thought to return them, destroy them or send them to some hospital. Then, it occurred to her that they might serve a purpose.

For awhile, every time she looked at Frazier's flowers, scorn and rebellion gripped her. Later the sly, magic balm of their message soothed her. She almost began to hate Dick. The flowers became significant of what she had been spared later by having the real man she loved revealed to her before it was too late.

She began to arrange the flowers and care for them with a faithful interest. She saw that they had fresh water twice each day so that often one bouquet was yet fresh when another arrived, and she would have two bouquets in the room.

Not that she suffered less. The days were a constant torment and the nights no less than torture periods. She never stayed in the city for the evenings except when she worked late.

Her mother understood and sympathized, but had no philosophy to offer in so strange a problem.

"He's not worth your grief, Mary. I can see it's hurting you. Still, what can I say to Bonnie? I don't know as I want either of you to risk your happiness with Dick, if he can be that changeable. I never would have thought of it, that's a fact."

"Just because I love him is no reason he should love me, I suppose," Mary defended him bravely. "No. Still, it should be, naturally." "I don't think so. I believe there are more people loving the wrong one than there are matched up right," thoughtfully.

"Oh, phaw! Just because there's a scandalous lot of divorces going on all the time—"

"No," Mary explained sagely, "I don't think most of the people who get divorces love anyone but themselves. The motive is usually selfishness or greed or unrestrained passion. I think that most of the people who love the wrong persons, suffer in silence and try to make the best of things. Even when their love is reciprocated, they hesitate and usually refrain from degrading their love with scandal, gossip and the unhappiness of others involved. People who love completely are never selfish—their love for another is protective."

Jennie Vaughn studied her elder daughter, amazed at her clear, calm philosophy. More than anything else, it convinced her of Mary's love for Dick. No person could so analyze love who had never known it. With the maternal instinct, she wished sadly that she might help Mary. But there was nothing she could do. Denying Bonnie to Dick would not give him back to Mary. Neither would she want him that way. Mary would adjust her life and find happiness, somehow. She could depend upon Mary.

But no one knew the struggle that Mary was having to make that adjustment. Life seemed so empty. What was the use? Sometimes, she would stop abruptly at her work, arrested by some thought or memory that haunted her. She would stare bleakly into space for minutes, or the tears would flood her eyes and she would have to escape to the rest room to dash cold water on her face and get herself in hand.

The nights were even worse. Through most of them her thoughts could have echoed:

"While you're out having fun I hear the clock striking one, And I'm crying myself to sleep. Wondering who's kissing you I hear the clock striking two And I'm crying myself to sleep. I try to close my eyes and make believe we've never been apart, And in my dreams it seems you're calling me sweetheart!"

Wondering where you can be I hear the clock striking three, And I'm crying myself to sleep. Mary had said very little to Bonnie.

The younger sister had evaded and avoided Mary at first. But when she discovered that Mary was not going to accuse and denounce her, she affected a neutral cheerfulness during the little time they were together.

After Mary learned that Bonnie had been out with Dick on several occasions, she managed to say, calmly enough, "You and Dick hit it off pretty well, don't you?"

Bonnie looked at her with quick suspicion and bristling defense. "We get along all right. Always did, didn't we?"

"So I noticed. Don't think I mind, Bonnie. I am glad if you can be happy together. If you took anything away from me, it was something I didn't have," origmatically.

Bonnie was puzzled. "Well, if you want to know it, he burns me up; and he's crazy about me, too."

The president of the local gas company was making a stirring address. "Think of the good the gas company has done," he said. "If I were permitted a pun, I should say, 'Honor the Light Brigade.'"

And a customer immediately shouted, "Oh, what a charge they made!"

Prosecuting Attorney Rapp and Sheriff Andres of Washtenaw county are all het up about the story of 26 unsolved crimes printed in a Detroit paper recently. They claim the crime situation in Washtenaw is well under control and that the number of unsolved cases is small. This reason was given for the transfer of the state police post from Wayne to Ypsilanti.

The contract to build the new barn at the Washtenaw county farm to replace the one which recently burned was let for $3,595. As $5,007.00 was received in insurance this will mean considerable saving.

Walter Hauk arrested for violation of the prohibition law in Washtenaw county was placed on probation for five years and ordered to pay $100 fine and $100 costs or serve six months in Jackson prison. He formerly lived at Hiland Lake near Pinckney.

WOULD DISBAR ACCUSER

Senator Joe Foster in a long article in last week's papers stated that he would take steps to have Charles Culver of Detroit disbarred from the practice of law. He claims that he was threatened with disbarment proceedings as a result of the holding for trial of Peter Miller of Detroit for perjury in connection with the Federal Bond and Mortgage Co. investigation. The threat Senator Foster claims was made to him by John Gillispie, prominent politician of Wayne county. Senator Culver who is attorney for Peter Miller started disbarment proceedings against Senator Foster on the grounds that he had divulged information to Prosecuting Attorney Bird when he was acting as attorney for Mr. Miller.

STATE FINANCES

A semblance of harmony has been restored to the State Administrative Board by a resolution, offered by Treasurer Lawrence, and passed without opposition, pledging the release of legislative appropriations only to the extent of the amounts left available after the governor's partial vetoes, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

There will, therefore, be released only the amounts the governor decreed should be released. Which means that, as far as direct bearing on the financial arrangements for the biennium is concerned, the Supreme Court's finding has been concealed.

IT WILL BE A LONG ROAD YET

The Springfield Republican gives several reasons why beer will not be legalized at the coming session of Congress.

One is that the Wickersham Commission is against it and the President is in favor of that part of the commission's report. Another is that the Congress will have a dry majority in both branches. A third is that real beer can not be legalized without violating the constitution. For real beer is intoxicating. The treasury department can not desire to have revenue based so shaky a foundation as "real beer" would offer.

The president would do better to declare for real repeal than to listen to the advocates of legalized beer. If he should favor the latter the whole prohibitory system would go down.

The distributing system that real beer would require would most certainly in the eastern states bring back the old open saloon of which beer was the mainstay in the old days. This is not the way to establish a system better than prohibition.

RAID BLIND PIG NEAR BRIGHTON

On Monday night of last week the Livingston county sheriff's force raided a blind pig at Wordon Lake near Brighton, said to be conducted by one Charles Wilson. He was absent when they arrived but later approached in a car with some companions. He did not obey the command of the officers to halt but stepped on the gas. The Livingston deputies opened fire on him and after a chase Wilson and party abandoned their car and escaped on foot. The car which was towed to the Howell jail was found to be perforated with bullets in a dozen or more places. A cargo of liquor was found in it. Next morning Charles Barlow of Plymouth picked up a man walking near there along the highway with a bullet in his shoulder and brought him to Detroit. Here Wilson was held by Detroit police on suspicion of being a companion of Harry Sorenson of Port Huron who was shot and killed by police officers Monday night. Wilson claimed he and his brother, Willard, were attacked by an auto load of armed men near Brighton Monday night but that he escaped by leaping from the car. He was held for Howell officers.

CONSUMED IN 1930

Motorists of Michigan and outstate visitors used more than 792,000,000 gallons of gasoline, it is pointed out by the Automobile Club of Michigan. Michigan ranked seventh in total among the states of the Union in gasoline consumption. For the country as a whole, there were 15,761,400,000 gallons of gasoline consumed by motorists last year, compared with a consumption of 13,962,120,000 gallons in 1929. This was an increase of 5.3 per cent. The states to lead Michigan in gasoline consumption were New York, which was first with a total of 1,511,997,000 gallons; California, second with 1,335,556,000, and Illinois third with 973,208,000. Nevada motorists were the smallest users of gasoline, their state total being only 64,000,000 gallons. The club declared that the annual consumption of gasoline is four times as much as in 1910, when only 2,714,000,000 gallons were used.

Young Ikes Set 5,000 Pine Trees

More than 5,000 Norway pines have been planted as a reforestation project this year by junior members of the Cadillac chapter of the Izaak Walton League. The project was carried out under the supervision of Harold Kanaga, high school instructor and chairman of the educational committee of the chapter, who supervised the buying and planting of the trees on an 80-acre portion of the 13,200-acre Izaak Walton League forest. The tract was a gift of W. L. Saunders, Cadillac capitalist, for reforestation purposes. It is located 10 miles northwest of the city. During the five years the project has been in progress senior members of the league have set out 10,000 Norways. These together with the hardwood and other pine makes a grand total to date of 93,000 trees which now range in size from seven feet down to six inches. Fortunately 600 acres of the forest is naturally reforesting itself. The league members have planted approximately 100 acres to date and are optimistic about the outlook for the future.

Dr. E. V. Jotter, assistant professor of the school of forestry and conservation at the University of Michigan, states that the forest is the outstanding piece of work of its kind in the state today.

Hardest Things to Get Off Those Dirty Dishes

It probably will surprise the housewife to learn that dried egg after all, is not the hardest thing to get off a plate. Scientists of a large electric company's laboratories have discovered that a mixture of castor oil and lampblack is more resistant than egg, but the highest standard of dirtiness in dishes is achieved by allowing tomato soup to drop on plates from a height of 6 feet and then dry, according to Popular Mechanics magazine. This covers the dishes with interlocking fibres of about 1,500 circular tomato-soup splatters. The investigations were made in order to find how electric dish-washing machines should be constructed, and various designs are rated according to the number of tomato-soup splatters they can remove in a given time.

Reformed Church Shows Net Gain

Despite a loss of 171,028 members by dismissal and death covering a period of 80 years, the Reformed Church in America shows a net gain of 25,000 communicants, which for year 1931 approximates 159,000. Total contributions in 30 years have increased from $1,544,652 for 1901 to $5,180,537 for 1931, a gain of $3,635,885. Official statistics show a Sunday school enrollment of 144,344, the largest number ever reported, despite a decrease in the number of schools by 153 since 1901. Exclusive of the collegiate church in New York city, which groups several congregations in its membership of 3,343, there are six churches with more than 1,000 members this year: Central, Grand Rapids, 1,030; Third, Holland, 1,024; Bethany, Chicago, 1,007; Trinity, Plainfield, N. J., 1,107; Bellevue, Schenectady, N. Y., 1,043.

LISBETH
What woman isn't interested in jewelry? She may think, in her mind, that it is barbaric, but the sight of a flashing gem set in precious metal will make her blood quicken. Women are made that way. They have inherited the love of bright colored stones, and precious metals from their ancestors of so far back that the date is lost in antiquity. Not only do the stones and their settings intrigue us with their beauty, the workmanship also wins our admiration. It is often so delicate, so lace-like, so exquisite. The flare-back to the feminine fashions of a decade and more ago has enhanced the importance of jewelry in the mode, and the makers and designers are put to it to fashion pieces to supplement millady's more elaborate gowns, as the pieces here sketched and which are direct from London craftsmen, show. Contrast may be used in jewelry as in the accompanying costume, as shown in the sketch numbered 1. This is a new necklace made of half light and half dark stones which is worn fitted closely around the throat and can be worn with either the dark or the light stones in the front. The necklace can be separated into two contrasting bracelets, as seen in the sketch. Unusually large gem stones are favored by the designers this season. Two and three show how the artist-craftsman adapts the same large brandy-colored topaz as a setting for a ring, necklace and bandeau.

Breakfast in All Its Charm

In this age of hurry, even the most sensible neglect their own personal needs. One of these offenses is committed when they fail to eat a good nourishing breakfast. By good nourishing breakfast I do not mean a slice of toast and a cup of coffee. No housewife would think of serving such a meager bit of food for lunch or dinner.

Between those two meals there has been only a period of four or five hours elapse, while the period between dinner and breakfast is 12 hours and sometimes more. Even so, some individuals extend this period for four or five hours more.

So often the appetite is not hungry so we are led to think that the body is not hungry. But, this is a false assumption. To tempt this dormant appetite, we must make the meal so attractive that it cannot be resisted. A simple breakfast may be served on an attractive breakfast cloth with a pretty colored centerpiece of flowers or fruit. The surroundings add to the charm of the food. The neatness and cleanliness of the breakfast table is very important.

Since there are so many different types of breads, breakfast foods, and fruits, there is no need for monotony in food. If oranges are to be served there is an infinite number of ways to serve them. In the half-shell, sliced, sectioned, sugared, as juice, with other fruit, and in many more ways depending upon the imagination and ingenuity of the one serving.

Either cooked or uncooked cereals may be served. The kind depends upon several things. The hot cereals furnish more calories so are best for children and people doing manual labor.

Toast is very nice to be served for breakfast, but it becomes monotonous if served daily. If you do not have time to prepare hot breads in the morning mix biscuits, or muffins, the night before, place them in the pans and they can be baked very quickly the following morning.

One Minute Pulpit

And Jesus said, for judgment I am come into this world, that they which see might be made blind.—St. John, ix, 39.

The Harvest

The harvest is here both in your life and mine. When "spirit" is needed to strengthen the line; For it's only a fool who will scoff at a man Who keeps valiantly doing the best that he can. There is greatness profound in the folk who will see. It's the "spirit" we show as we plod on our way. This life has a penchant for bringing to task Another's grave problem, perhaps misery; The selfish and weak who would much "quarter" ask. It's the manner in which we pitch into the fray; By which we progress on this interesting earth; It's the lilt of our talk and the strength of our word; It's the silencing damaging words we have heard; It's diverting our minds from detours labeled "Brood"; It's refusing to nurture the seed of a mood. It is seeing God's spirit in all that we do; It is living a life that is useful and true. F. K. Glew Grand Rapids, Mich.

As far as the man of the house is concerned there usually isn't any meat to compare with steak. Broiled sirloin is the high spot of this tasty menu.

Recipes
Maple Sponge—Soak two level tablespoons of gelatin in one and one-half cups of cold water about five minutes. Put two cups of brown or maple sugar and one-half cup of hot water in a saucepan, bring to the boiling point and let boil ten minutes. Pour the hot syrup gradually on the soaked gelatin. Cool and when nearly set, add the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff and one cup of chopped nut meats. Turn into a wet mold and chill. Unmold, and serve with a custard made from the yolks of eggs, sugar, salt and milk. Flavor as you like.

For Your Recipe Book
Chocolate Cupcakes—One and one-third cups pastry flour, one and one-half or three teaspoons baking powder, depending on kind used. One-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup butter or substitute, one cup sugar, two eggs, three squares bitter chocolate, melted; three-fourths cup nut meats, broken; three-fourths cup raisins, one-half cup milk, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Sift flour with baking powder and salt three times. Cream shortening, add sugar and cream together. Add eggs, melted chocolate, nuts, raisins and beat well. Add flour mixture alternately with milk, beating well with each addition. Add vanilla, drop into small cupcake pans, lined with wax paper cups. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for ten minutes, or until done.

Shirred Eggs Dijon—Four eggs, two cups mashed potatoes, one-half cup midget onions, one-half cup mushrooms, three tablespoons butter, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-half teaspoon salt. On platter prepare a border of mashed potatoes. In the meantime brown the onions and mushrooms in butter. Put browned mushrooms and onions in cavity in center of platter, break eggs on top, season, dot with butter and bake in moderate oven (37 degrees F.) until egg yolk looks as if it were covered with a thin veil.

Tulip Salad—One-half cup diced apples, one-half cup grated carrots, one tablespoon mayonnaise, salt. Garnish the salad plate with watercress. Make a tulip cup from half an orange, cutting the sides like a tulip. Fill with diced apples and grated carrots mixed with mayonnaise. Garnish with chopped green peppers.

Suggestions
Burn orange peel on the stove instead of coffee for disagreeable odors—the effect is more pleasant.

When water comes in contact with silk fabrics, a ring is left. The spot may be removed by gently rubbing the spot with tissue paper.

To keep china and glass from cracking in hot water, put the article in cold water, bring to a boil and boil for four hours. Let it cool in the water.

The Parent Problem

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

BABY GIRL GETS ACTION BY TANTRUMS

A mother writes: Dear Dr. Myers: My husband and I are both former teachers. At the present time he is principal of a large elementary school, and so we are fairly well educated along scholastic lines. I taught for nearly eight years, but for all that our one little babe brings to us problems which we never knew existed.

"She is just 16 months old. She has been given the best possible care, however, and now is fully normal, and enjoys regular habits of eating, sleeping, etc. She always has cried a great deal simply because it has brought results—at first we walked the floor night after night, did anything to prevent the crying, because the doctor said she could not stand the exhaustion of crying for long periods. Now she has learned that her displeasures makes her world take action. From crying it has developed into scolding and screaming. She can enact a temper tantrum to perfection, until she really seems to be developing a disagreeable disposition and we surely do not want that to happen.

"If company comes and they speak to her she scolds and slaps at them—here we try to have people not notice her as a preventative. If daddy attempts to kiss or love her she always resents it terribly.

"We both are subject to nervous excitability, but we know that tempers are not inherited we know, too, that the scolding is not due to baby's being over-tired, nor of a scolding unhappy environment, for we surely are a happy family. Can you help us, Dr. Myers?"

Answer: It is easy to see how the trouble you described developed, but it is not so easy for you to correct the difficulty. I think, however, that you have no need to worry about the problem, if you can maintain your present intelligent attitude of calm about the matter. As for getting angry when dad wants to kiss her, he will get the best results if he does not ask her to kiss him. If he is indifferent about such matters she will win his expression of affection.

Never tell her, at this age, or prior to the age of three or four, to do anything. There will be a few times when you should tell her not to do a few specific things. Make requests, and if she does not accede to them, try to honor her choice just as you would that of an adult.

Do your utmost to see that she never by whining or having a tantrum gets what she wants. When she raves at like a wooden post. If injures herself or strikes you, or injures property in her tantrum, pull down her clothes and give her a good vigorous spank low on her bare fat thighs and make it hurt. When she gets angry at your guests just go on diverting their attention away from her.

Gladys Glad on Beauty

AMERICA'S FOREMOST BEAUTY

NATURALLY CURLY HAIR POSSIBLE, SAYS GLADYS

"Dear Miss Glad: Do you honestly think that it is really possible to train hair to be naturally curly? I'd like to have wavy hair, and I'm willing to devote any amount of time to training my tresses. But I want to be sure first that I won't be wasting my time, and that I'll eventually get some results. Can you advise me?"

"Mary Agrena." I do, indeed, believe that it is possible to train a lovely, natural wave in a healthy head of hair. I've already seen quite a number of successful cases, as a matter of fact. It is said that the great majority of women have a tendency to curly hair, and that in such instances only a little training is necessary to bring out the normal wave. But it's even possible to train absolutely straight-hair so that it will fall in natural waves. The process requires a good deal of time and attention. But with proper brushing, and frequent steam or finger waves, almost any head of hair can be trained to retain a lovely, natural wave.

"Dear Miss Glad: About two months ago I started the reducing course in your booklet on 'The New Figure,' and—well, here I am, 25 pounds lighter, and ever so much happier

Too bad more females don't get wise to how much your booklet can do for a poorly shaped figure. However, that's beside the point. You say that among other things, a girl should consume 8 to 10 glasses of water a day, to keep her weight normal. And what I want to know is whether there are any precautions to observe in the daily consumption of this amount of water.

I'm glad to know that you've found my reducing course so effective. Yes, there are several precautions to observe in the daily consumption of those 8 or 10 glasses of water. In the first place, you should drink at least one of them, preferably warm, as soon as you arise in the morning. In the second place, you should do most of your water drinking between meals. You shouldn't drink more than one glass of water with each meal. For too much water with your meals will dilute the gastric juices in your stomach, and thus retard the digestion of the food you eat. Moreover, you should never "wash down" a mouthful of food with a drink of water, for then the food will reach the stomach without having been adequately chewed. The last precaution to observe is not to drink large quantities of ice-cold water. For the icy temperature of the water will chill your stomach, and interfere with proper digestion.

Are Modern Children Spoiled? Old Folks Remember How Can Parents Decide?

By MARSALL MASLIN

I've heard that modern children are spoiled. I've heard that they are undisciplined, arrogant and impudent. I've heard that they know too much, that they speak their little opinions too loudly, that the yare "showoffs," and that the children of today are the worst the world has ever known. Well, are they? A man in his seventies told me that when he was a boy the children in his home had very little fun. They could not speak unless they were spoken to. They were forced to sit through long, dull hours in church, at prayer-meetings. They had to eat what was set before them and they could not ask for more. When company was at the house they ate after their elders did or they ate in the kitchen.

This man remembers the day they had strawberry shortcake for dinner, and he and his brother pecked through the crack in the kitchen door and saw his mother offering the LAST piece to a guest, and he whispered in agony to his brother, "He's TAKING IT! He's TAKING IT!" And they burst into tears and ran away. He remembers long walks to school in the snow and he remembers only a few months of school; he remembers hard work when he should have been at play; he remembers very little fun at all.

Another man of 60-odd years remembered a harder childhood on a Maine farm, working long hours, doing a man's work when he was 14 years old, working early and late when he was barely 8 years old, having little schooling, either. He remembered that though he earned a little money, he never had a cent of his own until he was 21 years old, and that when he left the farm his father would not let him take away the jigsaw that was his only toy. And his little sister, when she wanted a doll, had to earn it by following the plough and collecting grubs. It took her three hard summers to earn a dollar before she could have her precious doll.

And as I think of those young lives and the children who endured them, I can't get excited when people say that modern children are "spoiled." Some of them, I know, get too much and do not appreciate what they have.

But many of their grandfathers and grandmothers had too little and were "spoiled" in that direction. The elders sincerely believed that child's spirit must be broken before it can be ready for life. Now we believe that its spirit must be enlarged and enriched and beautified. We don't know everything—we don't know enough—and we make many mistakes. But we are trying to make life worth while for them, and to make them worthwhile for life. And after all, ours seems the better way.

Medium: "I have called the spirit three times. He moves and makes a sign, but will not come!"
Voice from Audience: "Maybe he's a waiter."

BEAVERS AT HOME ON BEAVER ISLAND

The three black beaver brought to Beaver Island by state conservation officers several weeks ago, in an effort to establish a colony of this rare and valuable strain, are busy building their dam on a small stream near the lighthouse at the south end of the island.

They are the first beaver to live on the island named for their kind since the present generation can remember. It so happens, however, that all are males and state trappers now are on the lookout for female beavers of the black variety which may be brought over before winter. Beavers have long been extinct on the island, but it is believed the new colony has every chance of success.

The island is rapidly becoming a game paradise since the introduction of both deer and pheasants, both of which enjoy complete protection. Some 14 deer were brought over four years ago and it is now estimated that the island deer herd numbers about 70. The deer are protected against hunting and the islanders are so well pleased with the whitetails as a tourist asset that they now are planning to keep the season permanently closed on them.

Pheasants were planted here a number of years ago and in spite of the deep snows of winter seem to be multiplying. There is no open season on them. This summer has seen an unusual increase in the number of varying hares. In fact, they have become so numerous that some of the island farmers suffered damages from them.

Rabbits are hunted by only a few people here and as a result the bunnies increase rapidly. Needless to say, this fall will see one of the best rabbit hunting seasons in many years.

New Corporations Varied

A wide diversity of commercial activity is shown by the new corporations which recently have been granted the right to transact business by the Michigan Department of State.

A $50,000,000 heating corporation, a fire alarm manufacturing company, a $3,000,000 drug store merger, a finance company and a securities company have been given permission to operate with their main offices in Detroit. A new hotel in Ann Arbor was incorporated while a $150,000 farm products company in Pontiac and a $20,000 nursery corporation in Zeeland were authorized to transact business.

Resurrection Plant
The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"
These peculiar plants are found among the pines and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaves, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open up for handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up, turns brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and re-awakened after being placed in water. It is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very agreeable fragrance. If you want a "table fern" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grow and thrive in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone.

FIND SCHOOL FUND LARGER

This year's primary school fund is slightly larger than that of last year, but, because of a 26,341 increase in school population, the per capita rate of distribution will be only $17.70, against $17.92 in 1930. A total of $24,136,785 will be apportioned among the school districts, representing the per capita rate on 1,363,359 children. Last year's school population was 1,337,018, and $23,939,525 was distributed.

Wayne county, in 1930, had a school population of 386,962. It received $8,726,359. This year its school population is up to 401,381, an increase of 14,419, and its share of the primary school fund is $8,874,444.

Hope of Rich Find Beckons Clammers On State's Rivers

Michigan's pearl fisheries have never been noted for their wealth, but there are scores of men working along the streams of the southern peninsula who have a constant hope of making the "big catch."

According to the department of conservation, which has supervision over the mussel industry of the state, scores of persons who purchase licenses to take clams do so primarily with the hope of obtaining pearl. Some clammers have the same hope of a "big find" that a gold miner has when he pans a stream.

No pearls of any great importance are known ever to have been taken in Michigan waters, although numerous small pearls are taken every year. It recently was reported that one clammer received $100 for a pearl taken from a river on the western side of the state. This probably is a record for recent years.

Slugs, formless pearl formations, are taken in fair quantities. Clammers receive from $2 to $4 an ounce for slugs, but few report more than 20 ounces for a season.

Ludington to Charge For Rural Fire Runs

Ludington's fire department has been ordered not to make runs to fires outside the city limits without pay. An extra charge of $10 a mile for every more than five miles and $25 an hour for each hour after the first hour in which the department is engaged on rural runs. Each member of the department gets $1 an hour, under the plan, while engaged in fighting rural fires.

HERE'S THE DOPE ON FISHING RULES

Although the new fishing regulations, under which the size limit has been removed on several kinds of panfish, have been published frequently, there is still considerable confusion in the minds of fishermen concerning these regulations, to judge from the number of inquiries.

The law passed by the last legislature and now in effect removes the size limit from perch, rock bass, calico bass, strawberry bass and crappies. It is now legal to keep these fish regardless of their size.

However, the size limit has not been removed from bluegills, sunfish, white bass, large and small-mouth black bass, pike and wall-eyes. You may not take black bass under 10 inches, pike under 14, wall-eyes under 14, white bass under 7 or bluegills and sunfish under 6.

Nor have the creel limits been removed on any of these panfish, even on those no longer protected by a length limit law. It is still illegal to catch more than five black bass, five wall-eyes, five pike and twenty-five calico bass, warmouth bass, rock bass, white bass, crappies, bluegills, sunfish and perch combined in one day.

Find Dole Is Cause of European Economic Ills

First hand knowledge of the government dole systems and unemployment insurance programs existing in England and Germany, obtained by John L. Lovett, general manager of the Michigan Manufacturers' Association, on a two month visit to these countries and Soviet Russia, has convinced him that they cannot be successful and are more apt to prove disastrous, he stated on his return to Detroit recently.

"The government dole system has failed wherever tried," said Mr. Lovett, "and it is the dole that is chargeable more than any other factor for the bringing of both England and Germany to the brink of ruin." He declared that no country could long survive the double ill effects of the financial drain on the taxpayers and the increasingly lower level of industry occasioned by the great number of unemployed, who have become accustomed to doing only the minimum amount of compulsory work and relying on the dole for their subsistence.

Mr. Lovett said that in Germany there are approximately 5,500,000 persons on the dole, and about 2,714,000 in England. Payment to these persons of billions of dollars, which sums eventually must be raised by taxation, means that ruin is just around the corner, he declared. Handicaps produced by the dole system raise the cost of production in industry to such a point that competition in the open markets is impossible, he pointed out.

"Some means must be found for taking care of unemployment due to low levels of business such as we seem to encounter periodically in cycles over a number of years," continued Mr. Lovett, "but a government dole is not the way to do it." It is Mr. Lovett's opinion that any given industry or well established concern can take some measures and adopt some plan to relieve unemployment during the seasonal low levels of business. He pointed out the fact that a number of industrial concerns in this country have adopted plans for unemployment insurance, and most of these concerns and their employees have weathered the present depression without serious effects.

STATE IS SEVENTH IN VOLUME OF GAS CONSUMED IN 1930

Motorists of Michigan and outstate visitors used more than 792,000,000 gallons of gasoline, it is pointed out by the Automobile Club of Michigan. Michigan ranked seventh in total among the states of the Union in gasoline consumption.

For the country as a whole, there were 13,761,400,000 gallons of gasoline consumed by motorists last year, compared with a consumption of 13,962,120,000 gallons in 1929. This was an increase of 5.3 per cent.

The states to lead Michigan in gasoline used were: New York, which was first with a total of 1,511,997,000 gallons; California, second with 1,335,556,000, and Illinois third with 973,208,000. Nevada motorists were the smallest users of gasoline, their state total being only 64,000,000 gallons.

The club declared that the annual consumption of gasoline is four times as much as it was in the 10-year period 1921-31, although the number of motor vehicles has increased only two and a half times.

PROWLER ATTACKS

FOWLerville WOMAN

Posse of 1000 People Search for Armed Prowler Who Assaults Mrs. C. R. Ward Monday Afternoon

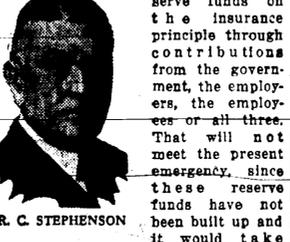

Mrs. C. R. Wood, 30, who lives on the Converse farm, 3 miles north and one and one miles east of Fowlerville was knocked unconscious by an unknown man with the butt end of a revolver Monday afternoon and left for dead. She had gone to cellar for potatoes when the man who had been hiding there sprang at her. The attack was witnessed by the women's six year old daughter, who ran screaming from the house to the farm of Ross Robb where her father was helping thresh. The alarm was given by blowing the Fowlerville fire whistle and soon a thousand people were searching the woods and swamps for the prowler. Up to noon today he had not been found. The man sought has been in the neighborhood for several days. He is said to be of medium build, wearing a blue suit and shirt He is dark complected, apparently a negro or foreigner. Sheriff Finley Tuesday secured blood hounds from Royal Oak to assist in tracking him.

Mrs. Ward was taken to the Star Hospital, Lansing with a possible fractured skull. The Wards moved from Muskegeon to the Converse to the Converse farm last spring.

PLANS TO BEAT UNEMPLOYMENT

By ROME C. STEPHENSON

President American Bankers Association SOME look upon unemployment as a social or political problem. For them the remedy is compulsory accumulation of reserve funds on the insurance principle through contributions from the government, the employers or all three.

R. C. STEPHENSON

That will not meet the present emergency, since these reserve funds have not been built up and it would take years to do so. At best this plan could only become effective at some indefinite time in the future as against the return of another catastrophe of general unemployment. Others look upon unemployment as purely an economic problem, holding that the only fundamental preventive is in business stability. It may well be asked whether either of these cures—namely, the creation of unemployment insurance funds on the one hand or the maintenance of everlasting business stability on the other—do not present in themselves bigger problems than the problems they seek to cure. However I am inclined to the belief that the more practical approach to the solution of such problems and the prevention of such situations as general unemployment presents is along the latter lines of economic foresight rather than along lines of social legislation.

National Foresight

Economic foresight is conceivable not only for the individual but for business as a whole. Millions of individuals and virtually all lines of industry failed to practice it during the last stages of the recent prosperity.

The public welfare of the United States demands that industry as a whole vigorously and sincerely devote itself to the development of plans of economic foresight, aimed to prevent repetitions of the present unemployment situation. The general outlines for such plans are clearly definable. They demand that industry adopt a long range viewpoint and lay out its production and distribution plans with the thought that it is far better to have a long period of good sound business activity than a short period of frantically over-competitive endeavor. This would tend to lessen over-production in various lines, to prevent over-expansion of plant capacity, to avoid over-stimulation of public buying and above all to avoid periods of slumps and stagnation following periods of over-stimulation with their disasters of unemployment.

For business, too, there is a part in such a conception of economic foresight. It should aim to cooperate with industry in its endeavor to avoid reckless over-production, over-stocking and over-selling the public.

In this picture of national economic prudence, banking and finance, too, have their place. Their effort should be to influence the use of credit and other financial facilities into channels of sound public economy consistent with the attitude I have already sketched for industry and trade. All finance, whether current commercial banking or industrial investment banking, should seek by their influence in granting or withholding credit to stimulate and build up a balanced economic situation.
