Democrat Ticket Wins By Huge Landslide

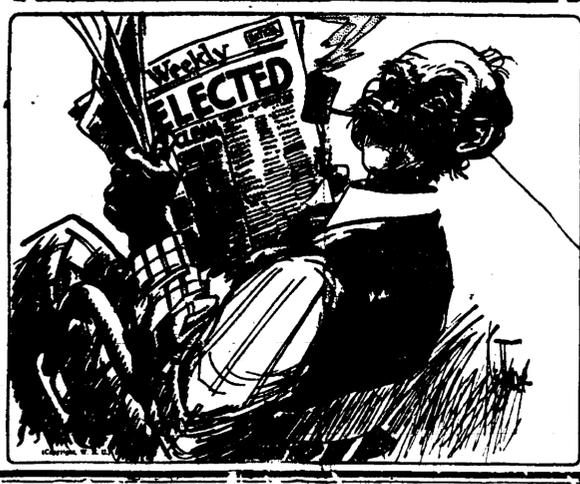

ROOSEVELT AND COMSTOCK SWEEP STATE CONGRESSMEN AND ELECTED

Cady Apparently Elected in 6th. In County Democrats Elect Howlett, Finley and Fay; Republicans, Foster, Lyons, Sweeney, Hagman and Bush

Voting started early here Tuesday morning and at noon about 250 ballots had been cast. This is about half of the usual vote. There were about 40 absent voters ballots cast. The Democrats were confident and the Republicans hopeful. There was considerable Roosevelt money being offered at 3 to 1 that Roosevelt would win but not much was taken, the Hoover supporters demanding 5 to 1. The Roosevelt banner did not fly from the hickory pole election day for the reason that some one stole

With nearly all returns in Gov. Franklin Roosevelt has apparently swept the nation, carrying all states but six. These six are Pennsylvania, Maine, Vermont, Delaware, New Hampshire and Idaho. In some of these the majority was close and complete returns may yet give them to Roosevelt. The New York governor showed surprising strength in unexpected quarters even carrying old rock-ribbed Republican Michigan. New York City alone gave him nearly

Community Play Is Success

A Well Filled House Greeted First Play of the Season Put on by the Pinckney Community Players Next One To Be in January

The Pinckney Community Players opened their season with the comedy-drama entitled "The Blue Bag". This play is an amusing comedy which centers around a smuggled necklace which eluded the customs officers in a blue bag. It finally reached a country hotel in which two other persons carrying identical blue bags are staying. Here they are traced by a customs officer, also by two crooks and a New York society man and his chauffeur who desire the bag to win a bet. Eventually the jewels are recovered and all ends well. C. W. Hooker and Mrs. Pauline Vedder portrayed the parts of the landlord and landlady in an exceptional manner, Ralph Carr and Mary Wilson made an excellent pair of giddy elopers and Henry Shirey and Irving Richardson carried the parts of the New York man about town and his chauffeur in fine style. H. C. Vedder handled the difficult part of the customs officer in good shape and Dorothy Carr was at her best in the part of the dumb servant girl. Glenn Slayton and Alice Stottlemire enacted the parts of the jewel thieves nicely and Irene Richardson made a very good impression in the role of the actress. The specialties were, two songs by Masters Rex Smith and Edsill Myers entitled the "All American Grit", and "When Mother Played the Organ and Daddy Sang the Hymn", an acrobatic act by Billy Martin and two songs by the Community Quartette composed of Henry Shirey, Irving Richardson, Irene Richardson and Dorothy Carr. The Isler orchestra furnished music.

Following the play the pictures of the cast were taken by an Ann Arbor photographer and also that of the orchestra.

SCOUTS WILL BE ADMITTED FREE TO CHICAGO TILT

A slowly mounting pile of orders for tickets to the Michigan-Chicago game, in which Michigan will honor Amos Alonzo Stagg, retiring athletic director of the Wolverine's oldest football rival, is being received at the business offices. The day has been designated as "Stagg Day" by the Board in Control of Athletics at the suggestion of Director Fielding H. Yost, a close friend of the Chicago leader over a long period of years.

The most desirable seats in the stadium continue at the regular price, but 40,000 seats have been placed on sale at $1.00 plus government tax each. This price, the lowest ever set for seats in the big stadium, is expected to draw thousands who would not otherwise attend.

The game also will be attended by many Boy Scouts of Michigan and nearby cities in other states, the athletic control board having made admission free to all Scouts in uniform who apply at the gates.

The contest itself, the last on the Michigan schedule at home, will see Michigan opposed by one of the best teams that Chicago has turned out in a number of years.

KING'S DAUGHTERS

About 25 members and guests of the Pinckney Circle of King's Daughters met for a noon luncheon at the pleasant farm home of Mrs. M. Hoisel at Chubb's Corners. At the business meeting reports were given on the state convention at Howell, Miss Carmen Leland and Mrs. W. AtLee had the honor of joining the order at the State convention. The members assisted in the sewing for the hospital and enjoyed an interesting entertainment provided by Virginia Hoisel and Hazel Chambers as committee. Watch for Dec. 2 as a big date for the order.

MAKE SECOND REQUISITION

Livingston County Chapter, American Red Cross has made a second requisition of government cotton in yardage.

The willingness of the township Red Cross representatives to make the garments and deliver them to the beneficiaries is very encouraging and more yard goods will be available if the request is endorsed by Central Division.

The request for made garments has been accepted and we are informed that delivery will be made as soon as the garments are manufactured.

Miss Stewart, Field Representative for Eastern Michigan, was in Howell for consultation with the Red Cross Board, Monday, October 31. She informed us that some of the Red Cross Chapters who had made large requisitions had them cut in two.

It must be remembered that the amount of cotton available is not sufficient to supply all of the welfare needs but is only enough to supplement the regular amounts given by welfare agencies and is based upon the entire number of families who have been receiving such help from agencies within the chapter area. Frances I. Huntington, Secretary.

Pinckney Wins 6th Straight Game

Pinckney Takes Sixth Straight Game By Trouncing Stockbridge 32 to 6. Kennedy Scores Four Touchdowns

Stockbridge high school came down here some two hundred strong accompanied by a brass band to clean up on Pinckney last Friday but miscalculated to the extent of an adverse 32 to 6 score. They were completely outclassed and did not make a single first down the first half. The Stockbridge line proved to be a paper one and Kennedy and Battle who played in the backfield in place of Dinkel crashed through it in all directions. Murray Kennedy outdid himself in this game and carried the ball three-fourths of the game. On end runs he did not do so well as the Pinckney line showed a tendency to buckle but on plays through tackle and guard he averaged about 10 yards on every attempt. Through the entire first half Pinckney relied on nothing but line plays and did not attempt a single forward pass. Dinkel is the only reliable pass receiver on the team and as he did not play they did not risk any. Late in the last quarter several were tried but only one was completed. This was caught by Bob Smith and on the next play Kennedy made his fourth touchdown. Pinckney got three touchdowns in the first half, two by Kennedy and one by Battle. Smith kicked goal for one extra point and forward passed to Kennedy for the other. In the third quarter Pinckney let down a little and Stockbridge scored one touchdown and came close to scoring another. Pinckney made several fumbles in this quarter. B. Boice of Stockbridge caught one in mid-air and eluded the entire Pinckney team finally being tackled by Read on the Pinckney 8 yard line after running 50 yards. Here Pinckney held and on the fourth attempt Stockbridge lacked about six inches of making a touchdown. The Stockbridge fans yelled loudly on this claiming the ball was over but Referee Cushi did not allow it. Later in this period Stockbridge completed a pass and carried the ball to the Pinckney 30 yard line. Here Bird, the fastest man on the visiting team went around Pinckney's left end for a touchdown. The attempt to drop kick the extra point failed. In the last period Pinckney started again and Murray Kennedy scored two more touchdowns. Both attempts for extra points failed. Stockbridge evidently shot their bolt for their attempts at gain were negligible. Pinckney put up a great game, considering the fact that Dinkel, one of the main cogs in their offensive plays was out with him in they would undoubtedly have scored a couple more touchdowns. His interference was also needed in making end runs.

Next Saturday morning at ten o'clock Pinckney will play St. Thomas first team at Wine's field, Ann Arbor. Pinckney has a victory to their credit over the St. Thomas second team and are confident they can take the first team into camp. This team has won every game up to date, beating St. Johns of Jackson recently 20 to 0.

Current Comment

Well, the people have spoken in no uncertain manner and by a great tidal wave the Democratic party has been swept into power with a huge majority. The result was not entirely unexpected although the vanquished party made astonishing claims up to the last. Some of these backfired, notably that of State Chairman Lawrence on the morning of election when he issued a statement claiming Michigan by 216,000 majority. The Democrats must make good use of the power placed in their hands by the voters and bear in mind that in four years they will be the defensive party the Republicans the attackers. Conditions favored the Democrats this year. The depression proved to be their big asset and also President Hoover did not have a united party behind him. The leading Republican orators refused to talk for him and he was forced to do his own speech-making. The numerous sticker candidates also split the Republican vote. His campaign was placed in the hands of inexperienced men and blunders were many. When Hoover visited Detroit several thousand out-state Republicans with tickets were denied admittance to the place where he spoke. In the state the Democrats were twice as active as their opponents. In this county they held nine rallies. The G. O. P. had but four and two of these were in Howell. The voters rewarded Judge Lyons, Clerk Hagman, Register Bush and Prosecutor Sweeney for service by re-electing them despite the Democrat landslide. Well the old saying is that a new broom sweeps clean and we hope it holds true in this case.

The political campaign as is usual in cases where the decision is liable to be close got a little torrid in the last few days and charges and counter charges were hurled right and left. To hear the outpourings of the two parties one would suppose that the country was headed for sure perdition and utter chaos. The statement issued by the leading banking paper in New York is of interest and refreshing in this regard. This publication states that no matter which party won in the election the future of the country is safe, and that no fears or anxieties are needed in regard to this. There have been Democratic and Republican victories in the past and still the wheels of progress moved forward. The national political campaign which comes once in every four years is in other words merely a show like the Roman circus and gladiatorial combats to amuse the people. The utterances of the past campaign will be in the junk pile inside of a week for political platforms and slogans are very perishable.

The apparent closeness of this campaign is as it should be. A party which gets too strong is apt to become top heavy and get dry rot. If the two great political parties could keep evenly balanced in every direction much better government would result as a party does its best work against strong opposition. However this seems impossible to attain for for the political pendulum always seems to swing from one side to the other. The voters seem to be stampeded at the polls and the great political landslides are the result where one party sweeps everything before it. This was manifested here in Michigan some years ago when not a single Democrat was elected to the state legislature. This kind of thing does not tend toward good government.

The football crowds have been pretty slim this year at the big college stadiums. Most of the pictures taken of the big games show a background of empty seats. The colleges refused to lower their admission prices this year and as a result saw a shrunken attendance. Next Saturday for the final home game with Chicago the admission has been dropped from $3.30 to $1.10. Boy Scouts who obtain tickets, we hear, may get in free. As Chicago is not rated overly high this move was made to prevent the game from being an utter financial failure.

impossible to put up a new one without taking down the pole. The Democrats have had trouble keeping it up as the first week some one stole the Roosevelt banner and destroyed it which necessitated the making of another. Of course this vandalism is laid to the Republicans.

This year there were 482 votes cast in Putnam township. Of these 191 were Democrat straight and 58 Republican straight. There were 233 split ballots. In 1928 the total ballot cast in Putnam was 363. Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate got ten votes here and Upshaw, Prohibition candidate 4.

In Putnam township all candidates on the Democrat ticket were given majorities. They are as follows:

a million majority. Governor Roosevelt in his sweeping victory carried many Democrat candidates to victory with him and both senate and house will be overwhelmingly Democratic. Michigan gave a Democratic majority for the first time in 80 years. Roosevelt and Comstock being far ahead in outstate returns. With Wayne county going Democratic 3 to 1, their victory in this state is apparently assured.

Claude Cady for Congress

On the face of early returns many Democrat congressmen were elected in this state. Claude Cady was ahead in this district and John Lehr in the second. Wayne county was giving all Democrat candidates big majorities.

In Livingston county Roosevelt received 130 majority, Comstock 652; Person 104; Knapp 1000; Howlett 594; Lyons 841; Hagman 209; Sweeney 652; Finley 451; Fay 147; Bush 421; Itsell 124; Mackenzie 61.

WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 11

The early days of the week beginning September 11th will bring stormy weather to most parts of Michigan. Rainy and windy weather are almost certain during the first part of the week with a consequential result of bringing much cooler temperatures on or before Wednesday.

Probably the coolest weather of the week will occur immediately after the middle part, at which time many counties may experience visits from frost. However, if frosts escape Michigan at this time, they may be considered more or less certain during the early part of next week.

We look for more or less fair weather during the 48 hours centering on Thursday, but during the two last days of the week there will be increasing storminess. Some of the storms at the end of this week and the beginning of next will be very severe and may cause property damage if not actual loss of life. This may come from either wind or rain or both. Indications point to a rather cold, wet period over the week-end.

Storms and Eclipses

Severe or active storms occurring at this time of year often evoke the declaration such atmospheric conditions are the result of the sun's near approach to the crossing of the equator. Whether this is so or not, there are still other things to which one may blame unusual occurrences.

The recent solar eclipse, over which so much excitement has been caused, especially among scientists, and also the lunar eclipse this week, which this state will just miss seeing by a few hours, may also be contributing causes.

Ancients believed eclipses coming as did the last solar spectacle would "injure the crops and the products and the fruit of the earth" with the probability of drought following.

Landholder Who Bars Public Cannot Take Fish

If the owner of property on either side of a stream that is not navigable and which has been planted with fish by the state forbids the public to fish in the waters included in his property he does not himself have the right to fish there, according to the department of conservation.

The owner of the property may fence across the water and forbid anyone from trespassing. However, if he excludes the public when fish have been planted at public expense, he does not have a right to take fish there, the department says, citing an act adopted by the legislature in 1923.

If the property owner permits the public to fish there he also may fish, and if he resides on the property he does not need a license to take trout from the stream.

The term "navigability" never has been definitely determined by law, but supreme court decisions have ruled that it includes those waters which in their original state were able to support any kind of water craft. This was taken to include the floating of logs.

There are only a few streams in Michigan which might not be termed "navigable" under this definition, the department said.

Along "navigable" streams the public has a right of use a boat or to wade and fish without trespassing on the property along the shore.

One night after school he came home with wet hair and his mother accused him of going swimming. After a second or two of thinking, Sam said, "Mother, I did it to save Tommy Jones."

"Oh! my noble boy," his mother cried, "did you jump in after him?" "No, mother," was the answer. "I jumped in first so as to be there when Tommy fell in."

It's tough when your wife finds a letter in your pocket you forgot to mail—but man, when she finds one you forgot to burn!

"The Wife & Co."

By Lyle Hamilton

"I didn't mean he should do that," said Molly, weakly. Talking with this square-faced, keen-eyed, vigorous man was a different matter than a conference with Sticks.

"Neither does a brat who tinkers with its father's automobile and starts the engine and sends the car plunging down hill mean to cause a wreck—but it does so, nevertheless," he said icily. "You've done more damage in this office today, my good young woman, than I can correct in three months."

"But he kept me late Saturday, and it wasn't right the way he jumped onto me," she cried. "It wasn't fair!"

"The man has his weaknesses. So have you, I might add," said he. "I managed to hurt his feelings by hiring you without consulting him. He's small in some ways—I know that. He likes what authority he has, and wants more. Poor chap! He'll never get it in this life. His wife has bullyragged him until he isn't fit to exercise authority, any more than I've given him. He's timid—afraid to do things at the right time."

"Now then." He got up and stood facing her. "You came to him, and publicly, in the face of the whole office, humiliated him—shamed him. You did it to get even for the scolding he gave you. Didn't you?"

"Yes," she said, thrusting out her lower lip, stubbornly.

"You had no intention of going to see this wife." He stated this as a fact, not as a question.

"No," she said.

"You wanted to make him crawl," he went on.

"Yes," she said.

"So, to that extent, you tried to take charge of this office; to disorganize it for the sake of your injured vanity. Isn't that true?"

Molly's obstinate lower lip drew in a little. "I didn't think of it that way."

"Confound it, you ought to have thought! Don't you suppose I know what I'm doing when I keep him in that job? Don't you suppose he does work that is valuable—that is needed by the firm? You'd have liked to have forced him to quit, wouldn't you?"

She nodded, slowly.

"Who gave you the idea that you were qualified to run this business—to discharge old and faithful employees?"

Falling back on the age-old defense of females, Molly prepared to cry.

"Go ahead and weep, if you want to," he said. "You took advantage of the tragedy in that man's life to injure him. You were trying to fire him, indirectly, by making it impossible for him to stay—or fix him so he would be worthless if he did stay. Shame on you!"

Molly was crying in earnest now.

"You knew I didn't give a continental hang what office appliances you use. You knew all I asked was careful work. You knew he couldn't do any more than make you uncomfortable while he was talking to you. You knew that if you'd asked me, I'd have told you to suit yourself even about working Saturday afternoons. You knew all that, didn't you?"

The girl bobbed her head, keeping her red and tear-streaked face covered with her hands.

"But you preferred to hurt him—and hurt me by doing it." He banged on the desk with his fist. "I didn't accept his resignation. I told him I would not permit him to quit. I asked him to take a week's rest, for faithful service. Are you disappointed? Would you like to see him walking the pavement, patiently hunting for a job—a man past fifty, begging for work? Would you?"

She shook her head. Her throat was so swollen and her chest was heaving so violently that she could not speak.

"I ought to fire you, but I won't. He made the first wrong move; to that extent you've got a defense. Now clear out of here, and if I hear of any more malicious mischief in the office—look out."

He sat down, and Molly, scarcely seeing where she went, passed through the dead silence of the main office to the washroom. There she bathed her eyes in cold water, and with much effort gained sufficient control of herself to return to her desk.

Ten minutes later Mr. Frazier, as if nothing had happened, was dictating to her his daily memoranda to the staff.

When noontime came, the girls clustered around her to hear the end of the Sticks affair.

"Has he quit? Was he fired?" they demanded.

Molly only shook her head. "I don't want to talk about it," she said, her voice dull and expressionless. "I've had an awful morning." She took her hat and jammed it on her head.

"There's one thing I know—I'm going to quit!"

Banging her typewriter into its cubbyhole, she walked down the aisle and out the door, Mary Holmquist running after her.

CHAPTER XVI

"I want to be alone," said Molly, as the other girl caught up with her in the street.

"Oh, all right." The pretty blonde's temper was not ruffled. "But when you're over your grouch, Molly, I wish you'd spill the story—I'm dying to hear what happened to Sticks!"

"What happened to ME, you'd better say," returned Molly, stepping from the curb.

Instead of going to "The Greasy Spoon," where the girls would gather in a minute or two, she turned the corner and went up street to another restaurant. There, over a thin sandwich and a cup of tea, she brooded long over her trouble.

She had not seen Mr. Frazier before in the mood he had shown that morning. No girl in her reasonable senses would want to see him in that mood again.

She looked at the clock. There was just time to get back to work. If she should leave her employment now, without notice, it might be days before she found another job.

She seized her check, paid as she went out the door, and ran all the way to the office into which the last stragglers were hurrying. Mr. Frazier's buzzer rang just as she reached her desk.

He glanced up from a newspaper when she reached his desk.

"Have you decided when you'll present your resignation?" he inquired, idly.

"Did Mary Holmquist tell you?" she demanded.

"Nobody told me." He turned over a sheet of his paper and examined a portrait of the newest movie star.

"Then how—" Molly began—"if nobody told you—"

"Oh, piffel," he responded. "I've been hiring girls and men for a good many years. I bawled you out. Therefore, you've been wondering whether to quit me cold—walk right out on me—or leave at the end of the week. Isn't that right?" He didn't seem much interested. He was looking at the sporting page now. "Isn't that right?" he repeated, after a moment's wait.

"Yes," she said, almost in a whisper.

"Well, make up your mind some time today," he said. "I'm going out of town tomorrow for a couple of days. Think it over—and try not to be any more of an idiot than is necessary. That's all."

He lifted his feet to the top of his desk and settled himself to read an article that attracted his interest.

The afternoon was poor and dismal so far as Molly was concerned. She was rearranging Mr. Frazier's personal files—the letters that were outside the regular office routine.

Ordinarily this work would have been interesting. Handling another person's private mail can even be fascinating, at times. But Molly was in no mood to enjoy herself. Mr. Frazier had practically dared her to quit; the pleasure of her brief triumph over Sticks had all been taken away; the matter of Bob Brownell and his money had not been settled.

So she took the correspondence that had been gathered in the long steel drawer, glanced at the names of those to whom Mr. Frazier had written, and those who had written to him, and divided the letters in new manila folders, without once reading a single piece of mail.

She was still at work at 5:30, small heaps of letters ranged before her on top of the row of filing cases.

"Going?" asked Mary Holmquist's voice behind her.

"Not yet," said Molly, without turning. "What's the big idea?"

"I'm blue as the dickens," Molly said, swinging her body so she could see the blonde girl over her shoulder. "I might as well work as go home and grouch around, all by myself."

At this moment she caught sight of Bob Brownell, who was standing at the door. He was evidently on his way out, but had halted with his hand upon the knob.

Mary Holmquist laughed, and with a brisk "good night" to Molly hurried to the door. While Molly stared, her lips parted, the pretty blonde linked her arm in Brownell's and together they passed out of sight.

Molly collapsed into a chair.

Bob Brownell—with little Swedie! Bob, who said that Mary was "a good kid" Mary, who said she didn't like poor boys!

Molly pressed her palm against her forehead. Evidently something was going on that she did not understand. Bob had been so humble about the money the night before, and now here he was, arm in arm with red-lipped, careless, pretty Mary Holmquist!

She glanced at the diamond on her finger. It sparkled bravely under the ceiling lamp which somebody had just touched on.

If Molly resigned now, she couldn't keep watch of Mary and Bob. Keep watch. Just when she had decided that Mary was so utterly and entirely safe!

Mr. Frazier came strolling from his office, a fawn-colored hat perched askew on his grey hair, a cold half-smoked cigar between his teeth, jauntily tilting upward.

Molly arose. "I'm not going to leave, Mr. Frazier," she said. "That is, unless you want me to."

"When I want you to, I'll tell you,"

he observed. "Going to stay, eh? All right." He seemed to approve. "By the way, how are you and that young man of yours coming along?"

"Why—why—first rate, I guess," said Molly.

"Glad of it," he returned. "I've been worrying about Brownell. His work's irregular—sales away down one day; first rate the next. Thought you might have been quarreling with him."

Mr. Frazier nodded and continued on his way. Molly began gathering the letters together for the night. Since her employer was going on a trip, she would have plenty of time to finish her task.

So Bob's work was "irregular." And Mr. Frazier thought she might have been quarreling with him. She slammed shut the steel drawers, fastened them by a pressure of her finger upon the spring lock, and hurriedly sought her hat and coat.

Four blocks away was a restaurant where she and Bob had dined, frequently, when he was feeling prosperous. She turned her steps toward this place, and walked fast through the homegoing crowds that pressed against her.

"I'm not going to eat," she explained to the cashier, who stood guard at the restaurant door. "I'm just looking for somebody."

She went down the aisle, looked into the side room at the rear, and then scanned the tables on each side. Bob was not there, and neither was pretty Swedie.

Another restaurant was near by—he had taken her there, once, when they first met. But he was not there now—with her face close to the big front window, she could see the occupants of all the tables.

She stopped, her finger to her lip. Mary Holmquist lived with another girl, about a mile from the office. Molly remembered that sometimes there was talk of little dinner parties, where Mary and her chum prepared the food over a hot plate in their room.

Molly took a street car.

The Swedish girl's room was in a large apartment house, where a brass plate (inside the glass of the front door) announced that housekeeping suites of one and two rooms were for rent within. Molly inspected the sign, and then turned to look at the row of push-button, with mail boxes beneath, and little slits where tenants could put their cards.

There was a difficulty. Neatly engraved cards were visible, and old, yellowed printed ones; cards with names scrawled with pen and ink and others scrawled in pencil. But Mary Holmquist's name was not there.

Molly tried a bell beneath which there was no card, and listened for an answering click of the lock. She was disappointed. After an instant, she tried another. Still there was no response.

Come to think of it, the apartment might be in the other girl's name.

There were plenty of cards with women's names on them.

Molly pushed the janitor's bell. After a long wait, the door clicked, and Molly turned the knob. A woman came to the door of suite 2.

"I'm looking for Mary Holmquist," said Molly.

The woman looked at her impassively.

Her name isn't in the lobby. What room is she in?" Molly tried again.

"I don't know," said the woman, and closed the door.

There seemed to be nothing else to do. Molly went out to the sidewalk and stood uncertainly balanced on the curb. She might go home, and leave Bob in the clutches of Mary Holmquist. She might eat—it was time for dinner.

Swinging thoughtfully in the direction from which she had come, she started to walk. Night had fallen, and she went slowly, for the way was unfamiliar.

As she reached an illuminated street corner a young man and a young woman appeared from the other side, laughing and chatting. Molly stood stock still.

The folk across the street were Bob and the blonde girl, walking home—to Mary's home!

CHAPTER XVII

They met, the three of them, on the curb where Molly waited.

"Well, look who's here!" cried the blonde girl. If she was embarrassed she did not show it. "I'm just taking your sheik to my house to feed him. Want to come along?"

"I was just over at your place," said Molly. She cast a sidewise glance at Bob. He had drawn his arm away from Mary's clinging hand, and was standing a step or two apart from the girls. "Do you really want me?" she asked.

"Sure—the more the hungrier," said the blonde. She swung to the other side of Brownell and they started along the route that Molly had just covered.

Mary was holding Brownell's arm again, but Molly kept her hands beside her. The young man walked stiffly between the two.

"I saw this pet lizard of yours," chattered little Swedie to Molly, across Brownell's chest, "hanging around the office with an upper lip a yard long. I thought he needed cheering up."

"She asked me to have something to eat," stated Brownell.

Molly stole an upward glance at him, but he was looking straight forward.

The blonde girl laughed. "Yes," said she, "that's what I meant when I asked him to dinner. It's all right with you, isn't it, Molly?"

"Of course," said Molly, untruthfully. "And I'd love to see your room."

"You won't see much," Mary said.

The room proved to be a narrow apartment with a wall bed, the face of which was adorned with a desk. When the bed was lifted into its niche, the desk became visible. When the bed was let down for use the desk disappeared.

The desk was not in sight when the two girls and the youth came into the room.

"Well, the old lazy!" cried Mary Holmquist, bustling forward.

The bed, with its covers tumbled, was resting on the floor.

"My chum gets through work at four o'clock and comes back here and takes a nap," reported little Swedie, hastily smothering the sheets and coverlet, "and then leaves me to make her bed while she's out to dinner!"

She started to lift the bed, but Brownell pushed her to one side and himself shoved the structure into place.

"Now I'll dig up something to eat," said Mary, tossing her hat into the closet. "Can you cook, Molly?"

"A little," said her friend.

"Well, you start heating a pan on the hot-plate, and I'll find the ham and eggs—don't remember where I put 'em, but they're here."

Brownell was standing with his back to them, while he stared through the window into the perfect darkness outside. The window opened upon an ell of the same building, and not even a ray from the street lamps could be seen.

Mary Holmquist explored the closet floor, throwing aside the bits of lingerie, the soiled pillowcases and sheets, and the shoes that lay there.

"No grub here," she said, rising. "Maybe—" She transferred her attention to the chiffonier that stood opposite the bed.

The top of this chiffonier was in much the same state as the closet floor. Torn hair nets, a solitary glove, some wadded handkerchiefs, two nail files, a torn piece of ribbon, boxes and bottles of toilet preparations and an unmistakable garter adorned the dingy cover.

"Ain't it a fright as a housekeeper?" inquired the blonde, laughing. She pulled open one of the drawers.

"Here we are—I guess she dumped this stuff in there to get it out of the way of her things."

She produced a bag of eggs and a paper containing a slice of ham, and closed the drawer again.

"Drag up that table, Molly, and I'll get the dishes."

Molly had touched a match to the gas under the little stove that rested on a shelf in the corner. A frying pan hung above it, and somewhat to her relief she found that this was clean.

While the pan was heating she brought out the table. Brownell did not stir.

"Aren't girls a fright when it comes to keeping neat?" little Swedie said as she brought a bowl of sugar and a can of condensed milk. "Honestly, sometimes we can hardly push our way through this place, we've thrown so much junk around! Then we take a Sunday and clean the darn room up—and two days later it's back again, dirty as ever. I hate housekeeping."

She knelt down, and peering under the chiffonier, brought out a hot beer from which she drew three plates, two cups and a saucer.

"Two of us'll have to use the same cup," she said, "unless we can use the glass. Do you want a glass, Brownell?"

Brownell apparently understood that she meant him. At any rate he nodded, silently.

"I haven't got any hooch, but I've got ginger ale. Do you like that?" Mary went on.

Again Brownell nodded.

"Then you've got to open the bottle," the blonde pursued. "We've lost the opener."

Michigan does not want Compulsory insurance such as the state of Massachusetts adopted to the regret of motorists. Compulsory insurance raises insurance rates, increases accidents, and burdens the motorist. Michigan should have a safety responsibility law which forces those who are proven negligent to carry protection for those whom they injure. After a driver has been proved responsible for damage under the latter plan, he is required by law to pay for his damage and then provide some protection for the other party whom he is likely to injure in the future. This is the reason 32 other states and five Canadian provinces have adopted the model safety responsibility bill as prepared by the American Automobile Association after years of world-wide study.

MACOMB BANKS SUSPEND SAVINGS INTEREST PROJECTS

Eleven Macomb county state and national banks have agreed to suspend interest payments on savings deposits as of Aug. 1 as a means of conserving liquid assets in the face of adverse economic conditions and for the protection of depositors as well.

The banks united on this plan include Farmers State Bank of Armada, Center Line State Savings Bank of Center Line, State Bank of Fraser, Citizens Savings Bank of Mt. Clemens, Macomb County Savings Bank of Richmond, Citizens State Savings Bank of New Baltimore, Citizens National Bank of Romeo, Utica State Bank of Utica, Washington Savings Bank of Washington, and State Bank of Warren.

The bankers in general, believe that ultimate safety of principal is vastly more important than the present payment of interest. A number of large depositors who desire to co-operate with their bankers have said that they would be willing to forego interest under the present circumstances if assured that their principal would be paid in full within a reasonable time.

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"

These peculiar plants are found among the pines and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaves, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open up to handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up, turns brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and re-awaken directly upon being placed in water. It is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves, of very agreeable fragrance. If you want a "table fern" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone.

Can Sink Emergency Well in 2 Minutes

Possibilities of utilizing effectively northern Michigan's underground water supply to fight forest fires are growing as a preliminary survey now under way continues its investigations.

The Survey party conducted by the Field Administration and Geological Survey divisions of the Department of Conservation is mapping several townships in the sand plains region of the state to determine depths of water beneath the surface. Water found within about 25 feet of the surface may be used to fight forest fires through drilling of temporary wells.

Apparently a large portion of the sand plains areas of the state, where a high percentage of the forest fires occur, have water sufficiently near the surface to be utilized in fire control work, the survey party believes basing the assertion on the result of preliminary investigations.

At the Forest Fire Experimental Station at Roscommon, Gilbert Stewart, supervisor, has developed a tank truck to be used in "washing in" temporary wells. It has been proved possible to sink a well 13 feet deep within two minutes. Through the use of an improved screen one such well can now produce all of the water that may be handled by one pump which can throw a stream of water at the rate of 40 gallons a minute 75 feet from a hose 1,000 feet or more in length.

Great possibilities of fighting fire in the future through the use of these temporary wells and pumps that will force water for long distances are seen by the Conservation Department. Maps indicating depth of water supply would be available at each forest fire district headquarters, so that the most effective use might be made of wells and water.

The U. S. Geological Survey has agreed to cooperate on these groundwater investigations during the present fiscal year. It is hoped that the results of these studies and experiments may be sufficiently promising to warrant a complete inventory of the ground waters of the state.

Fresh Fish By Planes to Detroit

Lake trout and other desirable commercial species caught along the north shore of Lake Michigan are now being sold in the Detroit markets the same day through an airplane service inaugurated recently.

Freshly caught fish are being transported by airplane three times a week during the summer from Rexton to Detroit. The air trip between the two points required but three hours and fish taken from nets in the morning at Equifette and other fishing villages along the Lake Michigan shore in the upper peninsula may now be served on Detroit supper tables the same evening.

The fish-transport, piloted by R. Johnson of Muskegon, is a Stinson Senior and approximately 1,000 pounds of fish are being carried to a load.

The service was inaugurated by Morton Miller, commercial fish dealer of Rexton, who believes that the fast airplane service, insuring freshly caught fish at the market, will provide a greater outlet for the products of upper peninsula commercial fishermen.

The emergency air field at Rexton is being used temporarily as the northern terminus for the novel fish transportation route.

Saugatuck Airport Is Granted Permit

The Saugatuck airport has been issued a permit from the state department of aeronautics. This port has been made possible through the efforts of L. R. Brady, Ray Freeman, L. Lamb and E. E. Weed.

Among the first passengers carried was Frank Wade, 80, the oldest settler in Saugatuck.

STATE REVENUE TOTALS $132,000,000

State Treasurer Howard Lawrence has made his report for the year ending June 30. It is full of big figures, the biggest being that he accounts for the receipt of $132,000,000 during the year. He started off with a cash balance of $34,000,000 in 1931, and had written $900,000 of the same amount at the end of the last fiscal year. His collections were, therefore, the $132,000,000 indicated. Of this great sum nearly $21,000,000 came into the specific tax fund from various companies, insurance, express, car, railroad, telegraph and telephone companies, with $5,500,000 from inheritance taxes. Most of this went to educational institutions. He got $91,000,000 more from the various special funds, largely the weight and gasoline tax fund and the highway construction fund which included federal aid. The railroads and telephone and telegraph companies paid $2,846,000 of taxes. The life insurance companies paid $2,371,000 to the state. The general property tax levied on the counties was $29,000,000. They got $24,000,000 back out of the primary school fund. The figures show that the general taxpayers of the state contribute, net, only a small proportion of the state's expenses.

U. S. Has Largest Airline in World

Americans, who went abroad and returned boasting that Europe surpassed us in aviation, will be interested in the report of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce that the United States now has the largest air transport system in the world. United States Lines is flying three times as many miles monthly, carrying twice as many passengers and nine times as much mail as the largest European company, Deutch Luft Hansa, according to statistics.

During a 30 day period it flew 1,125,000 miles, contrasted with 320,000 miles for Luft Hansa, and carried 8,000 passengers against 4,700 on the European system.

Forest Fires Show Marked Decrease Up to Date

Indicating what is considered a remarkable drop under 1931, the division of field administration of the department of conservation has issued comparative figures showing the number of fires and acres burned over through Michigan for the period of preceding July 20 in the two years.

While by July 20, 1931, the state reported 2,281 forest fires that burned over 187,328 acres, to the same period this year, only 1,739 fires have been reported with but 32,382 acres burned over.

Unless the unexpected happens between now and the close of the forest fire season in November the 1932 season will show about half of the damage done that was recorded for the previous year.

Project to Cost $250,000

Negotiations have been started between the city of Dearborn and the receiver for the Eastern Michigan Railway at Jackson for removal of the car tracks and poles on Michigan avenue in order that the north lane of this super-highway may be widened from Schaefer road to Greenfield road. The paving program is part of a state, county and federal project which calls for the widening of Michigan avenue from Schaefer road to Brady avenue in West Dearborn, the construction of a modern bridge over the River Rouge, just east of Southfield road and the widening of Ford road from Chase road to the River Rouge. The cost of the whole project is estimated at $250,000.

Kellogg Plans Expansion Despite Current Conditions

Scorning at the current business depression and expressing an implicit confidence in the future, the Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, largest manufacturer of ready-to-eat cereals in the world, announces plans for the immediate construction of a major addition to its plants at Battle Creek to provide new manufacturing facilities. Including the new plant, which will cost $250,000, factory improvements and additions now under way at the Kellogg Company represent an investment of more than $500,000. Plans for the new structure are to be designed by Albert Kahn, Inc., Detroit architects.

"We have implicit confidence in the soundness of his country and the return to prosperity," declared W. K. Kellogg, president of the company. "Our business is good now and we expect it to get better steadily. Therefore, in order to help the present situation and to prepare for the brighter future that is sure to come, we are starting work right now on the additions to our plant."

"Our plans all through this period have been laid primarily to keep all of our people busy and to stimulate an active flow of our products through the trade by the expenditure of larger sums of money in advertising and sales promotion than ever before. The results have been satisfactory and we are convinced that once the tide has turned, we will need a greater capacity than we have at present to take care of the business."

Mr. Kellogg pointed out that the company is operating under a six-hour day system with four shifts working daily. This system was put into effect about 20 months ago and has proven satisfactory to both company and employees, despite the fact that wage scales were adjusted at the same time to offset largely the reduction in the individual employee's working time.

The sections involved include: Four miles of the Michigan branch, from a point near mile post 188 to Clowry; the Republic branch from Clowry to Republic, 12 miles; and the Champion branch, from Wabik to Champion, one mile.

Glad She Used Goitre Remedy

Mrs. Addie Sharpsteen, 109 Kalamazoo St., Battle Creek, Michigan, writes:

How glad I am that I went down to the Owl Drug Store to see you just four weeks ago last Saturday. I was so discouraged. I thought surely my time had come. I was so weak my husband had to help me, or nearly carry me so I could get there to see you. But just one bottle of the wonderful remedy has done wonders for me. I do not suffer so bad, and the spells are farther apart, and my stomach is so much better. I sleep good, and in fact I am getting better in every way, and will keep on with the medicine, until I am cured. I weighed 87, four weeks ago. Now I weigh 97 pounds, so you see I am gaining. If this will help some poor soul, just pass it around as I would like everybody who has a goitre to try your remedy. As you can see from my picture my goitre has gone.

HUNTING LICENSES TO BE DISTRIBUTED

About 1,800 license agents will be prepared, early in September to distribute more than a quarter million 1932 small game licenses and 90,000 deer licenses.

Under a new system inaugurated by the department of conservation licenses will be made available early this year and through truck transportation the cost of distribution will be considerably lowered.

Allotments of licenses to agents have been made at the Lansing office of the department. Trucks will carry these licenses to conservation officers in the counties and they will distribute them to agents.

All licenses will be accompanied by digests of the 1932-33 hunting laws which are now being printed.

License agents again will handle licenses without fee. The fee formerly permitted agents was removed by the 1931 legislature at a savings of approximately $60,000 a year to the state.

The 1932 small game licenses will be the first in years that will not be accompanied by a "button." The buttons were eliminated by the conservation department as an economy measure and this year the hunter will carry only the small printed slip of paper.

Goitre Remedy Gives Relief!
A survey taken by the Department of Public Health of Michigan shows an alarming percentage of persons affected with goitre. If you suffer from goitre in any of its forms, or if you suspect the presence of goitre, Gilbert Goitre Remedy will relieve you. Gilbert Goitre Remedy is not a new product. It has been used for over twenty-five years with remarkable results by hundreds and thousands of men, women and children affected with every kind of the dread malady. Of the thousands of unsolicited letters received over the period of twenty-five years from all over the country, less than 1/2 of 1% claim no relief. Gilbert Goitre Remedy is a harmless yet highly effective preparation of an old formula, comprised of twenty-one different herbs and roots, nature's own medicine.
Glad She Used Goitre Remedy
Mrs. Addie Sharpsteen, 109 Kalamazoo St., Battle Creek, Michigan, writes:
How glad I am that I went down to the Owl Drug Store to see you just four weeks ago last Saturday. I was so discouraged. I thought surely my time had come. I was so weak my husband had to help me, or nearly carry me so I could get there to see you. But just one bottle of the wonderful remedy has done wonders for me. I do not suffer so bad, and the spells are farther apart, and my stomach is so much better. I sleep good, and in fact I am getting better in every way, and will keep on with the medicine, until I am cured. I weighed 87, four weeks ago. Now I weigh 97 pounds, so you see I am gaining. If this will help some poor soul, just pass it around as I would like everybody who has a goitre to try your remedy. As you can see from my picture my goitre has gone.

SMOOTH tires don't hold on wet pavement. Punctures are more dangerous when it's slippery. Changing tires is also dangerous and disagreeable. Better put on new Goodyears now—they'll protect you, save you money on repairs and delays.

HAS MADE GOOD RECORD
The Pinckney high school team has made a good record this year, having won all six games played up to date. In these games they have scored 184 points to their opponents 12. Murray Kennedy leads all the scorers with a total of 86 points. Stanley Dinkel has scored 60 points, Bob Read 17, Lyman Battle 12 and Bob Smith 9. This is a better record than last year when Pinckney won five games and lost three and scored 153 points to their opponents 86.

In 1926, the last year in which they won the class "D" championship Pinckney played ten games and won nine of them. They scored 382 points to their opponents 18. Don Swarthout who was given a place on the all-high school team that year by Coach Remington scored 207 points. The team that year was probably the heaviest that ever represented Pinckney and only carried two or three substitutes and these seldom saw action. This year an entire second team is carried and in all but two games almost every one of them has been in the line-up. This practise does not tend to run up large scores.

This team this year has been a big surprise. When Coach Doyle started the season he had but three of last year's regulars to begin with. These were Capt. Murray Kennedy, Stanley Dinkel and Lyman Battle. Taking Bob Read, John Wylie, Lucius Wilson and Clifford Miller who were on last year's second team, he added Bob Smith, Fritz Gardner, John Amoroso and Lorraine Drown who had never played before and in fact had never even been in uniform. From this green aggregation he rounded out this year's successful team. Too much credit can not be given to Messrs. Gardner, Amoroso and Drown who have made the Pinckney line into one of the best in the state. Kennedy, Dinkel, Smith and Miller are seniors and will graduate next June. Their loss will be felt keenly as all have been good athletes, having also starred in basket ball and base ball.
