Who The Various Candidates Are

The Dispatch Will Try As Far As Possible To Introduce Some of the Many Candidates for Office to Its Readers

With the great number of candidates out for office the majority of the people are confused and are apt to vote blindly. In order that our readers may know more about them, we will endeavor to inform you who some of them are and what line of business they are in. The state candidates are well enough known so we will merely mention the congressional and county candidates.

For congressman in the sixth district, Congressman Cady, the present holder of the office, formerly operated a candy factory in Lansing and was also mayor there.

Among his Republican opponents Wm. Blackney of Flint is a lawyer. He contested for the nomination once before, losing to Grant Hudson. Dr. Henry Cook of Flint is a physician, Dr. Cook was also member of the Flint school board and was noted for advocating more money for schools and higher salaries for teachers. William Carpenter previous to entering politics was an Episcopal clergyman, preaching in Flint and Lansing. Geo. Carr was formerly employed by the Ann Arbor railroad at Owosso. Of late years he has been a labor union organizer. C.Smith,Fenton,is a farmer Seymour Person of Lansing is a lawyer and was congressman in 1930-32. Peter Lennon of Lennon is a farmer

For state senator on the Republican ticket: Jay Sweeney is the present prosecutor in this county. Harry Hittle was prosecutor previous to Barnard Pierce in Ingham county John F. Brisben is in the auto storage business in Lansing. Lynn C. Gardner is a farmer in Iosco.

For prosecuting attorney Martin J. Lavan is city attorney of Brighton James Robb of Howell is a son of Wm. Robb, head of the Citizen's Auto Ins. Co. and president of the First State Bank, also a power in Democratic state circles. These are Democrats.

The Republican candidates are Glenn Yelland and Stanley Berriman of Howell and J. B. Mansell of Fowlerville. Yelland was former prosecutor and now is circuit court commissioner and city justice at Howell. Berriman came to Howell a year ago from the upper peninslua and is now a city justice. J. B. Mansell was circuit court commissioner for many years.

For the Democratic nomination for sheriff the aspirants are Lester Huff of Iosco and Pat Murningham of Howell. Huff is a farmer and is supervisor of Iosco. Murningham is in the grocery business and was formerly deputy under Sheriffs Charles Hoff and Henry Finley.

The Republican candidates are Claude Fawcett, George Sargison, James Morgan and Henry Groomes. Fawcett was undersheriff under Sheriffs Wimbles and Finley and was appointed to the place following Finley's death. He is a farmer when not in the sheriff's office. Sargison is chief of police and has served as deputy under Sheriffs W. C. Miller and George Wimbles. He formerly worked for the telephone company. James Morgan runs an auto sales at Brighton. Henry Groomes is employed at Groomes Bathing Beach at Whitmore lake. He is nephew of the owner and a former member of the state police.

Major Bravener of Fowlerville, Democrat candidate for clerk is in the county CWA department. For years he was a professional base ball player. pitching in the old Southern Michigan league.

Gets a Big Reception

Old Age Pension Law

Checks Are Now Being Mailed Out. Counties Paying The Greatest Head Tax To Receive Theirs First. All Must Pay Head Tax After August 15.

The first old age pension checks were mailed out last week. Those counties paying the greatest head tax will receive the first checks. They are Kalamazoo, Kent, Oakland, St. Clair, Bay, Saginaw, Sanilac, Oscoda and Chippewa. Four counties sent in no head tax at all. They are Alpena, Genesee, Lapeer, Roscommon and Tuscola. 16 sent in less than 3 per cent. In those which failed to send in any tax, considerable was collected but the county officers refused to turn any in unless it was agreed to return all collected to the county where the tax was paid.

On account of the large number of applications, (there were over 50,-000) only small pensions are being granted. These will average about $10 per month.

In regard to the collection of the tax from those who have not yet paid the government has the following to say:

The various tax collecting officers have, therefore, enforced no penalties under this law; and on August first, the tax payers will have had a four month's extension of time. At 50 cents per month this tax could have been paid by now. The people of the State of Michigan have had sufficient time to comply with the provisions of this law. It is now in effect, the Attorney General has ruled that this law is operative and constitutional, no court has ruled against this opinion. Pensions are now being paid, but a full tax collection must be made in order that the many needy aged citizens of the State of Michigan can receive the relief which is justly theirs under the provisions of this act.

All county clerks will be notified on August 16th to prepare delinquent lists of all persons, who have not paid this assessment by the 15th day of August 1934, and to proceed with the collection of the tax in accordance with the provisions of this act. This tax should be paid at once to the various treasurers in order that the applicants for old age assistance in all counties may receive just consideration.

The funeral was held from St. John's Church in Jackson, Tuesday, Rev. Fr. Wall officiating. Burial was in St. John's cemetery.

Miss Loretta Dillingham was a guest at a shower honoring Miss Anna Dillingham at the home of Mrs. Eugene Asher in Fowlerville Monday evening.

Local Diamond Ball Games

The Pinckney soft ball team won from Dexter in a return game played here last Friday night by a score of 10 to 2. Dexter was minus several of her stars and only succeeed in getting five hits off Dinkel and Swarthout who pitched for Pinckney. Pinckney collected some 14 hits including home runs by Joe Singer and Lee Clark. Don Swarthout hit two doubles and Livermore and Haines each one.

HUGHES PITCHES NO-HIT NO-RUN GAME

Red Hughes of Ann Arbor, pitching for Pinckney, held the Red Band Motor team of Howell to no hits and no runs Sunday. Only one Howell batter reached first. This was on an error made by Raymond, Pinckney third sacker.

Incidentally, this was the only misplay made by Pinckney. This was on a grounder hit by Max Wiltse. He was later thrown out stealing third. Fournier, pitching for Howell, held Pinckney scoreless for two innings. They scored three times in the third, six times in the fourth, twice in the fifth and six times in the sixth. Ferrell got four hits for Pinckney and Smith and Raymond each three. In a previous game Howell beat Pinckney 14 to 10.

This is far as known the first no-hit game ever pitched in Pinckney. Don Swarthout pitched one at Hartland in 1927.

Red Hughes pitched for the Ann Arbor Moose team last year when this team won the title in the Washtenaw county league. Late in the season his arm went bad and he finished the season playing second base. This year he started playing in the infield for Dexter and pitching occasionally. Now, apparently his arm is as good as ever.

Current Comment

There have been many explanations of the drought of the presnt spring and summer. For some reason or other, the rain clouds failed to form and release the rain. Just why has not been definitely established. During the World War there was much rain, especially in the battle area. This lead to the conclusion that the constant setting off of explosives tended to cause rain. Scientists, however, doubt the idea and point out that this method has been tried time and again and failed as often as it has succeded. Years ago, a gang used to operate in the southwest, known as rain-makers. For a certain sum, they would agree to cause rain. They prooved to be a bunch of fakers and were finally run out of the country. About 1912 C. W. Post, the Battle Creek breakfast food king, conceived the idea of causing rain by exploding immense amount of dynamite. The rain came after the explosion but according to weather men it would have come anyway. Now there is an entirely new reason given for the drought. Olaf Jensen, forrester for the Grand Trunk Western Railway, claims that radio broadcasting prevents rain, in that it prevents the rain clouds from forming and advocates a two weeks vacation from all radio broadcasting. In this he is supported by Prof. Wm. Hobbs of the University of Michigan. The idea may seem fantastic but it should be worth a two weeks trial radio vacation.

Well, the Mason grand jury investigation has ended because it ran out of funds and neither the state or Ingham county would advance any more funds to continue it after the $10,-000 voted to it was exhausted. Like most grand jury investigations, it accomplished nothing. From the first this fact was evident to anyone who read its proceedings. It was called for the purpose of investigating the attempts of certain trucking companies to get advantages from the state by the use of money. However, it went far afield and delved into the affairs of beauty parlors, gambling in Macomb County, the liquor commission, CWA and about everything on the calender. As it could only ask indictments for offenses committed in Ingham county, just why it should tackle the problems of other counties is not clear. Anyway, it has folded up without any noticeable results.

The present campaign has as yet failed to reveal any great party solidarity or unity of purpose. So-called gentlemen's agreements are broken right and left and political trickery is everywhere evident. In this state senatorial district, Jay Sweeney was given to understand that if Livingston would concentrate on a single candidate, Ingham county would place no candidates in the field. Ingham broke this agreement by circulating petitions for Hon. Lynn Gardner of Iosco who is not a candidate, thus opening the way for the entrance of two Ingham county men, Harry Hittle and John Brisban. In the 6th congressional district the same thing happened. Genesee county was supposed to get the Republican nomination this year by means of a gentlemen's agreement. Yet three Lansing men, Seymour Person, William Carpenter and George Carr have entered.

The biggest political trick has been pulled in the gubernatorial race where John Smith, Ex-Mayor of Detroit, has been entered. He hasn't a ghost of a chance of winning the nomination but is figured to have enough strength in Wayne County to cut Alex Grosbeck's majority so that Frank Fitzgerald can win the nomination with his out state majority. The same trick was pulled four years ago to defeat Grosbeck, except that Judge Jeffreys was used then and took enough votes away from Grosbeck to nominate Wilbur Brucker. The hand of Fred Green of Ionia is seen in this and many of the Smith petitions were circulated in Ionia and filed by him. No more uniformity of party is discernable on the Democratic side where both Governor Comstock and Lt. Gov. Stebbins are opposed for renomination. Even on the two county tickets there are charges of double crossing being made. Anything seems to be fair in politics and the different county committees seem to specialize in making promises to which candidates pay absolutely no attention. In other words it is every man for himself.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Congress did a lot of wrestling, in its closing hours, with new legislation designed to encourage the building of more homes by individuals, and in connection with this debate there developed what I believe to be one of the outstanding questions of the times. The housing bill, as it was called, would make borrowing easier for those who want to own their own homes. In other words, it is a program that will put more people into debt if they take advantage of the bill's provisions. And that is the question: After the conditions that have obtained through the last four years, is it or is it not sound economy to encourage individuals to contract new debts?

Fear Too Much New Debt

Debate on the housing bill, therefore, centered attention on one phase of the whole New Deal program that has caused concern in the back of many heads. Up to this time, however, apparently few of the legislators had paused to think of the trend of the course upon which the administration had embarked.

I noted in the committee hearings in the house that a number of the representatives exhibited a fear of too much new debt. Such stolid men as Luce of Massachusetts, Busby of Mississippi, and Hollister of Ohio, and some who are inclined to the inflationary side, like Goldsborough of Maryland, questioned whether the proposal was sound. Mr. Luce, for example, called attention to the old-time theory about debts, and the horror in which debt used to be held. Mr. Luce, of course, reflected the wholesome New England feeling and the attitude of New Englanders on savings. Mr. Busby, a southern Democrat, however, made observations that were of much the same tenor. To them, he added that a recent visit to his home bailiwick had indicated to him the need of watching the government's step in encouraging debt. He suggested further that where the government had extended help in the South, things continued to hum until that aid was eliminated. Thereafter, there was another tailspin insofar as recovery was concerned.

Whatever one's conclusion about going into debt may be, the fact is unchanged that the federal government has put out approximately $7,000,000,000 in the last year in various types of loans. The individuals or the corporations to which that money was loaned are in debt to Uncle Sam, therefore, in a corresponding amount. President Roosevelt and his associates and advisers defend their course with the argument that by making the loans they have enabled all of those folks to weather the storm. He argues that the economic casualty list would have been much higher had the loans not been made. He holds that those who borrowed from the federal government were actually unable to get money elsewhere and that the government was merely looking after its own folks. To those who criticize the use of taxpayers' money in this manner, Mr. Roosevelt has said repeatedly that these loans will be repaid and that the government will suffer no loss in the end.

But, after all, there are the debts, debts on top of debts. They must either be repaid or repudiated. If they are paid, the borrowers must pay them out of future earnings. That condition, according to the latest line of argument that developed under the housing bill debate, means the borrowers can create little or no reserve for the future.

Debts on Top of Debts

It is being said that the recovery program and the New Deal generally contemplates planning for the future in such a manner as to ward off a recurrence of the calamity of depression. But I have asked in a good many places; what if the theories of economic planning fail to work at all, or work only in part? The answers I obtained depended somewhat on the slant of the person questioned. If they are following the professors blindly, they said to me that the plans could not fail because they were sound by every theory under which they are drawn. If the person to whom the inquiry was directed examined the problem on a practical basis and studied it with the background of history in mind, I believe without exception the answer was: "Well, it will be just too bad."

My own feeling coincides with the latter view. If the New Deal program for economic planning, for adjusting production to consumption, for controlling crop planting and distribution, and the other items that enter into the plan fail to operate according to the theories upon which they are based, there can be no doubt of the result. It will be just too bad. There will be millions of persons more debt ridden than now, and there will be no way out. The government will be holding the bag.

On this question of debt, there is that troublesome international phase. The United States loaned something like eleven billion dollars to foreign governments to aid in prosecution of the World war against Germany. For a long time after the money was loaned, the United States got nothing at all. In the meanwhile, there was a terrific bombardment of propaganda from the borrowing nations and from some of the misguided folks in our own country calling for absolute cancellation. But cancellation could not win. It was impossible. So there followed a lot of negotiations in which commissions from foreign governments came here and conferred at length with our debt funding commission.

Settlements were eventually worked out. The debts were funded. That is, the debtor nations were given a long time in which to pay. They were given enormous concessions by our debt commission in order to get some agreement for repayment of the various loans. I know whereof I speak regarding those concessions because it happens that I am the only newspaper correspondent in Washington who reported everyone of the debt conferences, and I say unequivocally that those funding settlements represented on the average a reduction of more than one-third in the total amount which the debtors contracted originally to pay.

Now, again we are in the midst of new efforts to get something done in the way of repayments. The foreign nations are not going to pay if it can be avoided. They put up the very natural argument that obtains with everyone who is in debt and who has been hit on the chin by depression conditions. They cannot raise the money, so they say. To avoid defaults, some of the foreign nations made what they called token payments a year ago at this time. Some of them have offered token payments again. But token payments amount to about the same thing as when your friend eats the apple and hands you the core. It was a nice apple to begin with, and the funding settlements were nice settlements when they were signed.

Dodges Repayment

Frankly, I suspect that the United States is never going to get more than about 10 per cent of the total now due. There will be plenty of arguments, propositions and counter propositions, negotiations and hauling and filling, and after awhile some of the foreign governments will have succeeded in creating enough public sentiment among their home people to cause a national action of the same character as that taken by France a year ago.

The condition as regards the foreign debts owing the United States, I am afraid, will be paralleled right here at home by individual and corporation and bank debts owing the federal government. Many borrowers will run into hard luck, as they always have done, and they will appeal to the politicians to save them.

When those debts become a political issue, it will be an issue too strong for politicians to withstand. They will arise on the floors of congress and weep about the plight of "those poor people."

The special senate committee is getting under way with its inquiry into the various industries that manufacture materials for war, and it appears now that it is headed into an investigation that will disclose plenty of things that will cause a stink to arise when the investigators have laid their findings before the committee headed by Senator Bye of North Dakota. I spent a couple of hours the other day with one of the wheelhorses commanding the investigating force and it was certainly his opinion that there are things awaiting revelation that will surprise the populace. He is confident, as he said, that the country will sit up and take notice of what the committee is preparing to bring to light.

May Stir Up a Stink

The evening I was in the chief investigator's office eight men were receiving their credentials and money with which to start out on the trail. They were headed for what amounts to a raid on the files and books of some factory which the investigators believed had been engaged in the manufacture of war materials and which they thought also had been engaged in propagating information that would cause a couple of foreign nations to look with suspicion upon each other. Suspicion between two nations is obviously a prelude to more serious differences, and eventually war is the result. The committee has started out to expose such conditions, if they exist, and the investigators are convinced that things of that sort are being practiced by some of the makers of munitions.

I have no way of knowing where the investigators are going in their continuing effort, but from all indications they have orders to dig deep into files and records to see what they can find. They will come back to Washington, eventually, with great bales of letters and records that they think shed light on the various suspected activities, and, of course, when the committee begins taking testimony those things will be brought out. There is just no way out of it; a good many corporations whether they have engaged in war-provoking activities or not are going to be smeared.

Summer of Wide Brims Is Message

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S breathtaking the way millinery has burst into a blaze of glory before our enchanted eyes this season. Everything from flowers to feathers, fruit trimmings, ribbons and brims of startling dimension seems to be conspiring to bring "real millinery" back into the picture once more.

Now that brims have definitely "arrived" you may wear them as huge as you care to wear them. Fashion places no limit to their dimensions. Not for season upon season have brims been so wide, so versatile, so everywhere present, so chic and so picturesque.

In the circle leghorn and roses tell a summery tale of hats-beautiful such as will be worn with frocks of exotic print, with gowns of lace, or of net, pastel chiffons or organdies.

In the other large circle is a huge black panama with the new fruit trimming which is considered quite the last word this season. You must have at least one hat trimmed with a wee apple or so, or a trio of plums and green leaves, or a cluster of cherries or berries of some sort—anything just so it is tempting looking artificial fruit. By the way, the fruit motif in dress prints is also very good this season.

The hat up in the left corner of the group has one of those wee semi-wreathes about the front of its crown which is decorative yet conservative enough to permit this wide-brimmed chapeau to be worn with simple daytime costumes.

Just below, centered to the left, is a hat of rough cire straw, for cire and cellulose black straws, you must know, are the rage. So, also, are all-black fabrics of cired luster. A perky multicolored quill imparts a dash and a go to this simple tailored hat which is just what is needed in a headpiece which is to top one's cloth or linen suit.

Brims that turn up in the back are excellent style, and are a pleasing change from the conventional cartwheel of the merry widow type. The model shown in the lower left corner is indicative of this trend. Its simple ribbon trim tunes it to wear with the daytime tailleur.

Transparent brims are important millinery news. Huge capelines sheer as can be add an exquisite touch to the summer picture. Illustrated at the top, to the right, is a charming transparent brim. The bouquet of flowers together with a simple ribbon band trim this chapeau effectively.

Comes next, below to the right, a coolie beach hat. It has a cunning buckle fastening under the chin. Not only beach hats reflect the Chinese influence, for many of the smartest dress models carry pointed crowns which are so shallow they almost glide right into their large drooping-all-around brims in true coolie fashion.

Last in the picture is an immense cartwheel which is strictly tailored. Of course the new exceedingly shallow crowns, posed at so perilous an angle as most of them are, would never in the world stay on themselves and so here is a final message—old-style, now new style, elastic or hatpins!

SHEER RAYON DOT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Rayon has won its way to the top. Upon it leading designers have set their seal of approval. Dotted sheers in self color is the last word in summer materials. Raised rayon dots on a mousseline de rayon background describes the handsome all-black fabric which fashions the gown illustrated. This model is making a very prideful showing in the collection of man-made materials which the Fashion Group of America have been exhibiting in New York. They are smart for dinner and evening gowns but the big news concerning them is that the swankiest of daytime jacket suits and enesembles are being made of them, a tailleur of net being the newest of the new.

PASTEL WOOL NOW POPULAR FAVORITE

Every season sees some new fashion development which springs up mushroom fashion, overnight. This year it is short, loose or belted swagger coats of white or pastel wool over town frocks of plain or printed crepe.

These coats are sold separately. They are quite inexpensive. And they give a decidedly fresh and summery air to a dark ensemble. They may take the place of the black or navy redingote with which you started out the spring season.

String color is very smart with black or navy. Other popular shades are a deep dusty yellow, linen blue, and a soft leaf green. In many instances the color of the coat is accented in the print of the frock, or in some detail of belt, scarf or other trimming.

Evening Tailleurs Seen in Various Novel Fabrics

New evening tailleurs, combining a tailored jacket and instep-length skirt ready for restaurant dining, are fashioned of novel fabrics along striking lines. One suit of silver lame with a trim tailored jacket is finished with a black satin blouse and a facing of the same sable fabric inside the skirt hem. Black faille or taffeta suits cut on the same lines appear with either long-sleeved or sleeveless blouses of white organdie or flame red crepe.

Refreshing Colors Now Feature Newest Fashions

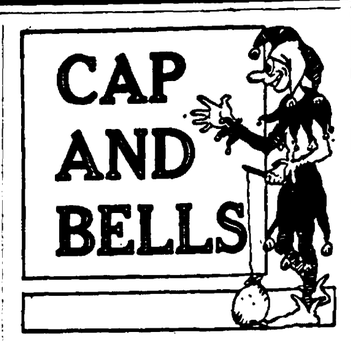
Colors this season are amazingly refreshing. There's a "Flagship" blue with all of the light in it of a sky from a sailing vessel. Russet is swapped from fall shades for spring and competes with the new clay some people object to.

Pale blue with a lavender tinge is lovely in knitted wear and for evening, with deeper blue trim. And brown comes in more different tinges than ever before.

Back Fullness

Black fullness in evening dresses continues to be their most noteworthy feature. It is achieved by ruffles, cascades of flounces, bustles and other devices.

CAP AND BELLS



LIKES THE THRILL

"Why does your husband drive downtown every Sunday morning—he doesn't have his office open, does he?" she was asked by the curious neighbor.

"Oh," replied the wife, "he does it just to get the thrill of seeing a parking place no other driver is backing into just as he reaches it."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wealth

Primo Carnera told a story in Miami.

"A powerful speed boat," he began, "shot out of the harbor the other morning and a young lady said to me:

"'That boat belongs to Mr. Van Gold. He has made an enormous fortune.'

"'Good for him!' I said. 'Is he rich enough to have his name in the Blue Book?'

"'Blue Book!' said the young lady. 'Why, he's rich enough to be called before the senate investigating committee.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Natural Assumption

The young mistress sent her maid, newly hired, for a number of toilet articles.

"Mandy," said the mistress a few days later, "where is that tar soap you got for me the other day?"

"Lawsee, Miss," exclaimed Mandy, "what all's a blond baby like you to do with tar soap? Ah thought you ordered it for mah own pussonal use."—Boston Transcript.

Up-to-Date Budgeting

A film magnate said on his return from Europe:

"Budget balancing nowadays reminds me of a little story.

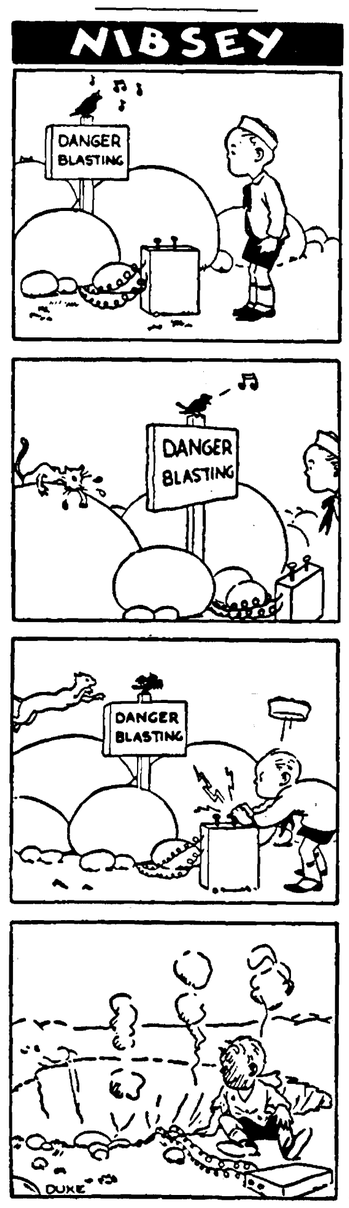
"A boy went into a shop and looked the stock over, then he said:

"'A nickel's worth of chewin' gum and a nickel back, and I'll be along with the dime next month er so.'"

Bad for Both

Major (telling of big-game hunting)—There we stood, the tiger and I, in the thick of the jungle, face to face!

Dumb Dora—Oh, Major, how perfectly frightful it must have been for both of you!



PRINT FROCK THAT IS WORTHY PLACE IN ANY WARDROBE

PATTERN 1776

There's nothing like a print frock to suggest spring—to brighten up our wardrobe—and our spirits! We'd love the model sketched here in one of the colorful all-over designs so popular this season. It has truly flattering, feminine lines—the gracefully flared sleeves, the slim semi-belted waistline and length-giving skirt panel. With the neckline worn open, artificial flowers posed at the neckline add a chic note. For added interest, tiny buttons trim the back bodice. Sleeves may be omitted or may be made of contrast.

Pattern 1776 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 4 yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

LOOKED IMPRESSIVE

Don't feel too highly flattered when some one asks for your John Hancock. A movie actress reports that one day she was solicited for her autograph by two small boys.

"Do you know who I am?" she asked them.

"No'm," the older boy answered, "but we thought we could find out this way."—Boston Transcript.

Obeying Orders

When supper was served Helen refused a second helping of ice cream with a polite but wistful, "No, thank you!"

"Do have some more, dear," her hostess urged.

"Mother told me to say, 'No, thank you,'" Helen explained naively, "but I don't think she could have known how small the first helping was going to be!"—Toronto Globe.

Getting Skeptical

Antique Dealer (to American)—Now, sir, if you'll step this way, I've a very fine specimen of a Queen Anne sideboard I would like to show you.

American—Say, that old queen of yours must have had a big dining room. This'll be the eighth sideboard of hers I've been shown this week. —London Answers.

Too Slow for Him

The real estate agent, having shown the prospective customer around all day until well into the evening, inquired: "Well, now, what do you think of our little city?"

"I'll tell you, brother," replied the tough westerner. "This is the first cemetery I've ever seen with lights." —Exchange.

Men Are Like That

First Wife—My husband lies awake so much at night.

Second Ditto—Huh! Mine talks in his sleep and lies even then.

Philathea Notes

W had another well attended and inspiring session of the class on Sunday, with a fine biography of Elijah and the covering of the regular lesson topic, "Courageois Truth-telling" Perhaps the point to be most emphasized is the verse from Ephesians (4:15), wherein we are enjoined to speak the truth "in love" as well as fearlessly.

The president reminded us of the Philathea picnic, which is to be enjoyed on Wednesday, August 8, on the northeast shore of Rush Lake. Pot luck eats and a jolly fellowship.

Remember Mrs. Decker's request to read the chapters between the fourthe and fifth lessons, to find what King Ahab refused Ben Hadad. Also the chapters up to lesson six, for August 5, "Elijah Helps the Needy." 2 Kings 4: 1-44.

CHOOSE MICHIGAN FOR YOUR VACATION

Michigan offers both the natural and man-made facilities for almost any kind of vacation one can desire. The vigorous follower of land and water sports . . . the lover of beauty in nature . . . the student of history or modern commerce . . . or the person interested only in doing a good job of resting . . . all can satisfy their longing in Michigan, at surprisingly moderate cost.

Michigan's tourist and resort business brings large sums of money to the state each year. It provides employment for thousands, and greater prosperity for all of us. We can increase that business further by telling out-of-state friends about Michigan's vacation advantages and by spending our own vacations here.

And, no matter which part of Michigan you visit this summer, banish worry by telephoning home and office frequently. Call ahead for reservations, or to tell friends you are coming. Long Distance calls will add but little to the cost and much to the enjoyment of your vacation.

I Repair All Makes of Cars

Just because you drive a certain make of car there is no reason why you should go to a neighboring city to get your repair work done just because your kind of car happens to be sold and serviced there. I can do just as good work on a Packard as on a Ford and have probably had as much experience as most of the mechanics in the city garages and my prices are reasonable and my service prompt. I expect to make my home here and will support local institutions whenever possible. Turn about is fair play so give me a chance at your next repair job.

DANCER ESTATE WINS TAX SUIT AGAINST U. S.

The suit of the government against Edith Dancer Estate has finally been settled in favor of the estate. Mrs. Dancer was the wife of W. J. Dancer of Stockbridge but lived over the line in Livingston county, near the Ed Farmer farm. At the time of her death several years ago, the government claimed that the sum of $97,326.00 was owing to it from her estate in taxes. Her heirs refused to pay it and court action has since been in progress. The board of tax appeals at Washington D. C. has just handed down a decision in favor of the estate.

Electric Hot Water AT A NEW LOW RATE!

★ To the modern home conveniences now operated by electricity—the electric washer, refrigerator, vacuum cleaner, radio, toaster, percolator, range, iron, fan, and electric lights—there has been added Electric HOT WATER at a low flat rate. Under the terms of this new service offered by The Detroit Edison Company to its customers, 10c a day provides 60 gallons of hot water, and 12c a day 80 gallons. This low rate is made possible by heating the water electrically during the night, at a time when the demand for electricity for other uses is lowest. The water thus heated is stored in a well-insulated tank, where it is available for use during the next twenty-four hours.

Should more hot water be wanted than the tankful heated each night, a separate electric element is located in the top of the tank, which automatically turns on to heat additional water. The electricity used to heat this additional water is registered by the electric meter and charged for at the usual rate. An electric water heater may be either bought or rented. Rental rates for heaters are low, and if you prefer to buy the heater, convenient monthly terms may be arranged. Customers who wish electric hot water in the summer months only, when the furnace is off, may get this service at a slightly higher rate—about 13c a day for 60 gallons, and 16c a day for 80 gallons.

A supply of hot water is indispensable for countless daily household uses. In summer especially, it is in demand for cooling and refreshing baths and for invigorating showers. Let us install an electric hot water heater in your home today. Telephone or bring your order to any Detroit Edison office.

Country Banks Reflect Improvement

"The liquidation of indebtedness by these banks reflects in part improvement in business condition and the consequent ability of customers to repay bank loans which long had been frozen. It constitutes a strengthening of the banking position."

The board pointed out that the reduction of member bank indebtedness has been continuous since the beginning of 1932 except for a brief period during the banking crisis in the Spring of 1933. The review continued:

"In 1932 liquidation of indebtedness of member banks to the reserve banks was accompanied by an increase of their borrowings from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. In the past year and a half, however, indebtedness of member banks to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has also been reduced."

FAIR PLANS BIG FARM PROGRAM

Barn Dance, Rural Events Featured at Chicago Aug. 11 to 18.

Chicago.—Four million persons have entered the gates of the new World's Fair since it opened here May 26. Most of the throngs that have thrilled to the new spectacle, the new "foreign villages," which offer in themselves a "tour of the world," the new showt and the new free entertainment projects, are city dwellers. Chicagoans, visitors from other cities all over the United States and visitors from foreign countries have poured in, in large numbers.

But the real farmer-visitors' invasion of A Century of Progress has not yet begun. It will reach its peak when the Fair celebrates Farm Week, from August 11 to August 18, inclusive.

Last year Farm Week accounted for the largest single week's attendance of the entire Fair. Plans to make the celebration interesting and important to farmers are even more elaborate now than last year, according to the events division of the exposition.

WLS Barn Dance at Fair.

Saturday, August 11, will lead off the program with a massive farm parade, including bands, farm implements, machinery and equipment and farm animals. Depicting the modernization of agriculture, it will be one of the longest and most comprehensive pageants of the entire exposition.

Sunday, August 12, will see special music and farm programs interlinked with the observance of Chicago Incorporation day, with Chicago acting as host to the out-of-town multitudes.

Rexford Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, has been invited to be the principal speaker of the Farm Organization day program Monday. Tuesday will be Farm Radio day, with the entire WLS "Barn Dance" presenting a program in the Court of States; 40,000 persons saw this event in 1933.

Aerial Sham Battle Planned.

The farmer's wife will have her day Wednesday, August 15, which has been named Farm Women's day, with special programs arranged to pay tribute to the women who battled to carve a nation out of the wilderness. Farm Youth day, Thursday, will be full of recognition of the future farmers of the land, with emphasis on 4-H club work.

Programs of interest to rural newspapers and magazines will feature Farm Press day, Friday. Saturday, August 18, will be farm music day, with its high spot the gigantic Chicagoland Music festival in Soldier Field, adjoining the Fair grounds. This annual event has attracted more than a half million persons in the four years of its existence. This day will also see many special contests, such as milk-maid, husband-calling and hog-calling contests.

Saturday is also Illinois day. There will be a review of 10,000 troops and demonstrations by anti-aircraft artillery units, shooting with tracer bullets at balloon targets towed by airplanes.

Farm Exhibits Are Many.

During Farm Week parties of farmers will be taken on free guided tours of the Fair grounds. Farm visitors, with only a limited time to spend, will in this way be able to see everything of vital interest to them.

Henry Ford's industrialized barn, where he shows how the farmer may, at low cost, raise soy beans, obtain the residue and process it himself, making industrial products for which he can obtain a profitable revenue, is one of the new exhibits. Another is the International Harvester company's radio controlled tractor, which demonstrates how farming may be done from an easy chair on the veranda. Model farm homes will attract many rural sightseers, as will the exhibits of the great packing plants and the automobile manufacturers.

The Brook Hill Dairy farm, with its model farm of 1950, shows the last word in modern milk production, from cow to bottle. The International Egg Laying contest is a huge laboratory where the farmer may study the latest egg-production methods first-hand. Scores of commercial exhibitors will have displays of prime interest to Farm-Week visitors.

SEES TURNING POINT IN BANKING HISTORY

NEW YORK. — The American Bankers Association Journal in its July issue presents the following review of banking and business conditions:

"It is an almost universal opinion among bankers that June has been the turning point in banking history in the matter of recovery. Reasons for the optimism are twofold—the condition of the banks and the prospects of of better banking business.

"The reorganization of the banking system after the holiday of sixteen months ago is now practically complete. The comparatively few banks yet to be reorganized and reopened are no longer a serious factor in the situation. The year's preparatory period for the enforcement of major provisions of the Banking Act of 1933 has passed, and banks now have a definite idea of where they stand."

Few Travelers Forget Fragrance of Zanzibar

The sight of lovely Zanzibar, nestling in the placid waters of that ocean which Kipling called "so bloomin' blue," is enough to gladden the most jaded traveler. For here, Ernest D. Moore writes, in Asia Magazine, are beauty, color, freshness, such as few spots have. All along the island shore, for miles and miles, blue and white waves break gently on pink coral sand; green fronds of 100,000 palms sway, line one line, as far inland as the eye can reach; and far ahead, off the ship's bow, the soft pastel colors of the town look like a rainbow's end. Then, as you draw near the town, you sniff the perfume-laden air of Zanzibar. Other places on your journey out, you then recall, had their auras, too; Aden, the gaunt old man of old Araby, smelled of his camels, and Mombasa reeked with malodorous mangrove roots and rotting copra; but Zanzibar, the cunning profligate, scents herself with spices to attract her callers, not repel them. Perhaps this little whimsy came first from the age-old Arab trait of smothering a bad smell with a good one; for in the old days the elephant and slave blood on the ivory tusks stank mightily, actually as well as figuratively, and the refuse-strewn beach along the town fouled the very winds of heaven.

Now the cruel ivory and slave traffic is no more, and the beach has been swept of all its dirtiness, but the fragrance of the clove remains. I have an Arab chest I filled with cloves at Zanzibar full twenty years ago. The cloves are still as pungent, as biting, as they were that sunny day I put them in. That is the attar of Zanzibar, the clove.

"Tums" Builds a Home

St. Louis, Mo.—The palatial new building being erected by A. H. Lewis Medicine Co., is a fitting exemplification of the enthusiastic sentiment of millions of users of Tums.

It will present a striking appearance in its contrast of blue-black terra cotta base with mottled cream above the second floor and glittering gold finish on high vertical mullions. Upper windows, fifty feet high, will have gold effect strips between them and furnish abundant light, while lower portion will have etched windows and stainless steel decorations.

The building, machinery and equipment will cost between $100,000 and $150,000 and is to be used exclusively for the manufacture of Tums.—Adv.

Giant Beans

Florida points with pride to beans weighing eight pounds each, grown in the rich everglades soil by Gilbert Taylor of Felda. The Tasmania variety beans resemble a squash in appearance, but taste exactly like beans. The vine on which the record beans grew was so large it broke down a fence on which it had been trained.—Exchange.

Silently, as before, he moved around the table, anxious once more to reach the partial security of the wall. He rounded the table, his left hand extended before him, his right at his side, clutching the revolver.

He was warned. He did not know how. It might have been the faintest whisper of breath—a slight rustle of movement. Or that even more vague instinct of danger which he had often felt before. Whatever it was, he sensed his peril and whirled, swiftly, to face the room.

The blow caught Peter on the back of the jaw, near the ear, just as he was turning. It was a terrific smash, that would have ended the struggle right then, had he not turned when he did. As it was, it glanced off, but its force knocked him off balance and sent him sprawling to the floor on all fours.

The novelist's quarry had used the same strategy that Peter had adopted. He had been standing, back to the wall, waiting to catch his enemy between himself and the vague light of the windows. As Peter rounded the table he came into the position for which the man had been waiting.

At the impact of the blow, Peter's revolver clattered to the floor. Partly dazed, the novelist lost a precious moment in groping for the weapon in the darkness. In that instant, his enemy was upon him. The accuracy of a second blow was spoiled by the darkness. It caught Peter on the shoulder, but it served to acquaint his assailant with his whereabouts. The man was on his back, raining blows down upon him, terrific, flail-like blows, that bruised and stunned, but still could find no vital spot. Unless he could reverse the tables, and quickly, Peter realized that he was through.

He drew his right leg up under him, and then kicked out with all his strength. His lashing foot caught the other man on the ankle and sent him spinning against the table. Peter kicked again, but the second effort missed. However, he was free of those crushing blows. Once more he groped for his weapon, but could not find it. He could hear the scrape of his enemy's heels as he struggled to his feet. Again he had wasted a precious second in vain search for the revolver. Too late now. Peter rolled to the right quickly, to avoid the other's rush. Only one blow caught him, and he was half-way to his feet before they came to grips.

Once more the blows rained on him, fierce hammers of rage, any one of which might end the struggle if it landed in a vital spot. Peter was thankful for the darkness which prevented accuracy. Nor was he helpless now. With all his strength, he hurled his fists at his invisible foe, and found an uncertain exultation at the hard impact of his knuckles which told him they had found a target.

A random shot caught him on the check and sent him reeling backward into a chair. It was too frail to support him, and he careened across it. The chair splintered and Peter caromed into the wall. But his fall had been broken. Panting, he struggled to his feet. Now, for the first time, his opponent was between him and the light. Peter could see him there, crouched over the chair, groping frenziedly into the blackness to find him. Choking back his sobbing breath. Peter advanced cautiously. Now was his chance!

The man straightened up just as Peter hurled himself through the air in a flying tackle. He struck his antagonist just above the knees, the impact numbing his shoulder. But Peter did not care. The man was down. Peter was confident of his ability to fight on more than even terms, once he came to grips with the fellow. Peter Cardigan was more than six feet tall, with a lean flanked hardness that did not belie the power of his well-trained muscularity. Releasing his grip on the fellow's legs, Peter aimed a vicious blow to the abdomen, intent on ending the struggle as promptly as possible. The blow missed its mark, glancing off, too high, against the ribs. He drew back his arm for another blow, but there was no time. His antagonist gripped him about the body, crushing him down. There was no room for a blow now. Locked in each other's arms, they rolled, panting, across the floor. Each was seeking for an opening that the other was too cautious to grant.

They crashed into the table. There was a tinkle of broken glass. Once Peter got the palm of his hand under his antagonist's chin. He gritted his teeth and put all his strength into the effort as he forced the other's head back. His breath was whistling, painfully, through his nostrils. There was an indescribable agony in his chest, as though some tremendous weight were crushing out his breath. Still he forced back that head. It would soon be over now. He was only vaguely conscious of the blows which battered at his face. The fellow must give in soon. He tried to force new energy into his flagging muscles, drained of much of their strength by the punishment he had absorbed during the struggle.

Somehow his hold had been broken. For the first time a feeling of hopelessness engulfed Peter. He was very tired. How long they had struggled, he did not know. He did know that it could not last much longer. He was almost at the end of his strength. His opponent must be tired, too. With the energy of despair he flung himself into a renewed attack. His arms seemed light, like cushions that he was pushing forward with tremendous effort. Of what use were blows like that? He must hit harder! Harder! Harder!

Still his blows seemed only to float through space. From somewhere, far off, something was beating at him, steadily. Was it the throb in his head? Or were they blows? They no longer seemed to hurt. He seemed to be sinking, sinking—now he could just drift away, comfortably, into forgetfulness. He tried to remember dazedly, why he should keep on struggling. There was some reason for it, but it kept eluding him. Then a blow in the abdomen hurt.

Once more he remembered. He was fighting—fighting for his life with Jim Franklin's murderer. They were on their feet again. He could not remember getting up. But here they were.

The Blow Caught Peter on the Back of the Jaw.

That blurred weaving shadow was the man he had come here to get. He knew he must end it soon, or he would lack the strength to end it, ever.

Once more Peter dove at his opponent, putting all his ebbing power into the tackle. Together they tottered backward, but the wall broke their fall. Dimly Peter heard the crash of breaking glass. It seemed far away. A rush of cooler air cleared the mists from his mind. His enemy's shoulder had shattered the window pane.

One last effort now. Peter lunged again, almost missed. His fingers clutched at the fellow's coat. But he was falling. He tried to catch himself, but his fingers lacked strength to grip the rough wool of his antagonist's clothing. Falling—falling! The air was crisp and cool.

Then he remembered the broken window. In his last desperate effort to tackle the murderer, he had missed, and lunged through the window. If only he could have clung to the fellow's coat, he might have saved himself.

Rough wool. Tweed. Curious how the texture of the garment should have impressed itself on his mind in that last instant.

When people are dying, they were supposed to think of their past lives. Writers always used that. All the misdeeds of a lifetime were supposed to flit through the final seconds of a dying man's consciousness. Yet he was dying and all he could think of was rough tweed. Curious!

Then he was struck one last terrific blow.

Even then, right at the end, he was thinking of tweed.

CHAPTER XII

Another Arrest

Sergeant Kilday discovered that both Callis Shipley and Rylie Carmody were missing, at about the time Peter was struggling in Franklin's darkened office with his unknown assailant. Rylie's disappearance was reported by the angry detective whom he had given the slip, in the country.

The disappearance of the girl was discovered when Kilday sent for her in the hope that Daniel Bullis might identify her as the woman in blue he had seen in the rector's study with Franklin. Aside from the fact that she had a week-end bag and left word not to expect her back for several days, nothing was known of her whereabout.

"Has she gone with young Carmody or is she afraid that Bullis might identify her?" pondered the detective. He quickly abandoned the latter theory, as he realized she had not known he intended confronting her with the politician. He was more than ever anxious to find the missing couple when he learned what had happened to Peter Cardigan. The novelist had been found unconscious, on the sidewalk in front of the Greer building. Nevertheless, it was the following morning before Rylie Carmody was located at his home, to which he had returned during the night. Kilday was resolved to place the young man under arrest, convinced that his flight had had some connection with Cardigan's injury.

Of course, this meant that Spears was innocent. How else account for what obviously had occurred at Franklin's office? Who but the murderer would have hurled Cardigan through the window? Certainly that was not Webster Spears, who had been under arrest at the time. Callis Shipley lacked the strength for such a feat. But Rylie Carmody— He had not been entirely wrong in his surmises, then. If Rylie Carmody had not given his shadow the slip, things would have worked out differently, surely.

The sergeant was a determined man when he presented himself at the Carmody residence after being informed that his quarry had returned.

"I'm sorry," the butler declared. "Mr. Carmody is ill. He can seen no one."

"He'll see me," declared Kilday dourly. In his extended palm he exhibited his badge. "Take me to his room."

Rylie was sitting up in bed, several pillows propped behind his back. His left eye was discolored and swollen. One arm was bandaged above the wrist and the knuckles of the other hand were taped.

"Good morning, Sergeant. What brings you here so early in the morning?"

"I guess you know," was the laconic rejoinder. "You look as though you'd run into a buzz-saw."

Rylie raised his arm, the better to exhibit the bandage. "Had an accident," he explained.

"Oh, yeah?" The sergeant grinned mirthlessly. "An accident, eh? Automobile, I suppose?"

"Yes, I skidded on some loose gravel, and—"

"This was while you were trying to give my man the slip yesterday afternoon?"

The young man pretended not to understand.

The sergeant settled himself in a comfortable chair beside the bed and lighted a cigar. "So you gave us the slip did you?" He puffed a time or two. "Well, I won't deny you kept half a dozen men busy last night, trying to find you. Caused us a lot of trouble. But I won't complain. You've helped us a lot in the solution of the murder."

"Helped you?" Rylie raised himself on one elbow. "Do you mean to say you've caught the murderer?"

"I can lay my hands on him, any time I please," Kilday asserted. "I know who he is, where he is and what he did last night. It isn't a mystery any more."

Young Carmody relaxed against the pillows.

"I suppose it's time to cheer," he said. "But what has last night got to do with it?"

"You ought to know." Kilday's eyes never left the young man's face.

"Me?"

"You killed Jim Franklin."

At first Rylie smiled. "You have a queer idea of humor," he said. Then he sat up straight. "Say, are you serious? Do you think I—why, man, you're out of your head!"

"You think so?" The sergeant was elaborately casual. "Crazy idea, eh?

"Listen, it isn't half as crazy as that story you just told me about an auto accident. I know where you got that black eye. I know where those bruises came from. And you weren't even in an automobile, young fellow.

"I can tell you why you were so anxious to give my detective the slip yesterday afternoon. I can tell you a great many things that you don't think I know. And the things I know are going to send you to the chair."

Kilday's cigar was forgotten and cold now. He edged forward, the hard lines of his face no harder than the bleak stare of his eyes. "I was on to you from the first. If Cardigan had listened to me, then, he'd be here with me today, instead of where he is. But you're not going to pull the wool over our eyes any more.

"You killed Jim Franklin. Whether you did it to prevent him from marrying your sister, after everything else had failed, or for another reason. We'll discuss that later. We know you quarreled with him in the study of the church, within a half-hour of the time he was murdered. We know that Webster Spears told you about Choo Choo Train that very afternoon, at lunch. Spears is under arrest. He admits he told you, in the hope that you would stop the wedding. He even admitted, this morning, that he was the author of that anonymous message your father received. He admits everything, except the murder itself, and the phone call to Choo Choo Train. Perhaps that was your work. Oh, Spears has tried to protect you, but he won't any longer. Spears has talked, and he'll keep on talking."

"Webster Spears?" Rylie's tone was incredulous. "Did he say that?"

"It doesn't really matter what Spears says." Kilday brushed aside the interruption with an impatient wave of the hand. "We've got the goods on you, anyway. After your quarrel with Franklin you returned to the study, entering by the rear door, so that you wouldn't be observed. He was standing in the sacristy door, with his back toward you. You seized the knife that was hanging on the wall and stabbed him twice. Then you locked that door, wiped the blade off on the curtain and replaced the knife in its sheath, first being careful to obliterate your finger-prints on the handle.

Emphasizes Value of Meats

New York Doctor Cites Medical Association in Denial of Belief That Many Diseases Were Traceable to Their Use in the Diet.

Anyone who has been a member of a thresher crew and who has acquired the appetite characteristic of a thresher can appreciate the extreme of food fads mentioned by R. B. Hinman of the New York state college of agriculture.

The cook caused dismay when she told the threshing crew that they would have no potatoes since they could get enough nourishment from nuts; she placed five peanuts at each plate. It is possible, Professor Hinman admits, to arrange an edible and complete meal of unusual foods, but it is seldom done. The normal person is likely to get all of the real necessities from a diet in which meat, milk, eggs, and the ordinary vegetables are included.

The American Medical association, he says, maintains that the talk about rheumatism, gout, lumbago, and many similar diseases being caused or even aggravated by meat is not backed by known facts. "Red meats," they say, "have nothing whatever to do with uric acid. Nor have they anything to do with causing gout or rheumatism, because neither of these diseases is due to food or drinks of any sort, but solely to focal infections: small pockets of pus around the roots of the teeth, in the tonsils, nasal passages and sinuses, in ulcers of the stomach and bowels, around an inflamed appendix or bladder, or even an inflamed ingrowing toenail, a bunion or a corn. The present belief is: no pockets of pus, no rheumatism or gout.

"Even in chronic inflammations of the kidneys such as the various forms of bright's disease, moderate amounts of meat do no harm whatever. The worst cases on record in all medical history of hardening and turning to lime of the arteries all over the body, and in the kidneys and intestines particularly, have been found in certain orders of oriental monks, who live almost exclusively upon starch and seeds such as peas, beans, and lentils. They abstain entirely from meat."

With present knowledge of the value of meats disproving many past illusions, Professor Hinman urges families to restore meat in the diet; not the finest cuts available, but the nutritious soups and stews, varied with boiling pieces. When two pounds of boiling meat can be bought for a dime, the cheap cuts are too healthful and appetizing in the diet to be displaced by any other food.

Farmers can have more meat and avoid the surplus at killing time by curing parts of the carcass that is not sold. City residents who are able to buy a quantity of meat can save money by buying enough to get a lower price and home-cure a portion.

Find New "South Pole" in Northern Patagonia

Discovery of another "South pole" is announced by the United States weather bureau.

It is the south pole of cold, the second most frigid spot on earth. There the thermometer sometimes goes as low as 70 below zero, comparable to the record of the Arctic cold pole in northern Siberia.

Neither the North pole nor the South pole are very cold in relation to these two spots. The southern cold pole, described by Director Navarrete of the Chilean weather bureau, is an area about 80 miles wide in the Andes mountains of northern Patagonia, along the Chilean-Argentine frontier. It is a place of deep valleys with high mountain walls—an ideal repository for the cold, heavy Antarctic air that descends from above at this latitude. Cold waves radiate from this pole to the central valleys of Chile and the pampas of Argentina.

Hatch Pheasant Chicks by Artificial Methods

The state of Pennsylvania, which probably turns out more pheasants than any other state, discarded its hen-hatching system last spring and made a complete change over to artificial hatching and rearing, with the result that out of 27,263 eggs set 20,164 chicks were hatched and 16,660 pheasants were raised. Chicks are hatched in electrically heated machines at 103 degrees and after hatching are kept in the incubator hatcher compartment at 100 degrees for 24 hours.

They are then transferred to the brooder house under hover at 98 degrees. The second week they are given access to a sun porch. The third week they are given access to a ground runway and the hover temperature is reduced gradually until by the fifth week the artificial heat is turned off completely. The sixth and seventh week the chicks are transferred to a holding field and are released during the eighth to the tenth weeks.

SIXTH DISTRICT LEGION CONVENTION

George Long of Pinckney was the delegate to the Sixth District American Legion Convention held at the Veterans War Memorial Building on South Capitol St. in Lansing Saturday. He represented the J. Ray Kendy Post. At the meeting a committee of six was appointed to study the spread of communism in the state and make recommendations.

A motion was made to hold the Sixth District meeting on Sundays instead of week days hereafter. This was introduced by the Fowlerville Post. Mr. Long took the floor and made a speech against the resolution. He said that the Sabbath was being used for entirely too many other things besides the worship of God and asked that the resolution be defeated. However when the vote was called for it, it carried.

Following the meeting a banquet was held with Chaplain Bill Carpenter as toastmaster. The speakers were Charles Pratt, Dist. Com. and Lester Moody, Fin. Chairman.

HON. LYNN GARDNER MAKES STATEMENT

Hon. Lynn C. Gardner, who declined to be a candidate this year, explains his withdrawal as a candidate for State Senator on the Republican ticket as follows:

'Because of the fact that many erroneous reports are being circulated regarding the above matter, I feel it my duty to my friends to make a brief statement concerning the same.

This movement was promoted to an entirety by voters possessing free minds to do as they desired, not one having been approached by myself regarding the matter. Soon after it became known that petitions had been filed in my behalf, and before I had been given the opportunity to investigate the matter, I was approached by the chairman of the Livingston County Republican Committee who pleaded with me to withdraw my candidacy and thus leave a clear field for Mr. Sweeney, the Howell candidate.

At that time I withheld my decision until I had become better acquainted with the circumstances in connection with the same, and it was because of the urgent requests of the Chairman of our County Committee linked with my desire to preserve party harmony that prompted to withdraw my candidacy for the above mentioned office, making no recommendations or suggestions whatever, leaving my friends free to vote as their conscience dictates, believing this to be the only fair and impartial manner of making a withdrawal of my candidacy.

Thanking my friends for their interest taken in my behalf I remain,"

SCIENCE AND SENTIMENT

The work of the funeral director presents an unusual blending of science and sentiment. In his technical capacity he must be skillful and efficient; in his ministry to the bereaved he is called upon to show rare qualities of tact and sympathy. We have always endeavored to keep fully abreast of technical advancement, without sacrificing the personal characteristics which are equally important.

Build a Reserve In the Bank

We are satisfied that one who has a growing bank account is more free from worry and has a more contented life.

We cannot urge you too strongly, if you do not already have a bank account, to start one now.

To illustrate one of our saving accounts:

Mr. X opened an account in our bank in 1925 making periodic deposits which deposits continued without interuption until October 1931 with only an occasional withdrawal. After this time deposits stopped and withdrawals were frequent and continued until January 1934, since which time occasional deposits have been made. During the lean years he has had a reserve which has been of great value.

Deposits up to $5,000.00 insured by our membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Your business always appreciated.
