

Another Livingston County Murder

Clarence Frechette Confesses Killing Robert Brown, Howell Fur Buyer, and Taking His Body to California in a Truck, Will Be Brought Back For Trial.

Sunday, Sheriff Claude Fawcett and Prosecutor Berriman left for Nevada City, California, to bring back Clarence Frechette, who is said to have confessed to killing Robert Brown, Howell fur buyer.

Brown, who is the son of Roy Brown, well-to-do Kalamazoo fur dealer had a fur buying station at Howell in the ten cent barn and another in South Lyon this year. Evidently this did not prove very successful for he seems to have engaged in the trucking business with Clarence Frechette. This also failed to prosper and they lost the truck. Brown claimed Frechette owed him $250 and borrowing the car of his mother, Mrs. Mabel Brown of Kalamazoo, in company with Frechette, started for Oxbow Lake, Oakland county, to get the money of Frechette's father. This seems to about the last time Brown was seen alive. This was on Tuesday, January 29, Frechette arrived at Kalamazoo alone in the car Thursday and tried to borrow $200 of Mrs. Brown, saying Robert, who was at Hastings with a girl, wanted it. She refused to let him have it. He was seen in Kalamazoo Friday but seems to have left for California Saturday. Nothing was heard from him until a telegram was received from Elko, Nevada, by Roy Brown, father of Robert, asking that $50 be wired to Sacramento, California for him. It was signed Robert Brown.

Suspicion had, however, been aroused and the police at the border station at Truckee, California, were wired to hold both boys. About midnight, Wednesday the car approached the station and was stopped. In the trunk on the back of the car the doubled-up body of Brown was found.

shot twice through the head and frozen stiff. Frechette surrendered without resistance. With him were John Rivas of Salt Lake City and Mrs. Victor Messenger and her 14 year-old son, Raymond. They claimed they

Home Coming Plans Are Being Made

A Meeting of All the Committee Chairmen Is Called for Next Week Monday At Which Time An Outline of the Program Will Be Submitted

Plans for the Pinckney Home Coming and Centennial are going forward and at a meeting at the local Board of Commerce rooms next Monday night at which all of the committee chairmen are asked to attend, an outline for a program will be submitted.

We have heard a few objections to this celebration on account of the cost. If the plans now under consideration go through there will be no cost entailed at all. At the Brighton Home Coming last year enough was taken in from the concessions and other enterprises to pay all expenses and reimburse the merchants for the $250 they raised for preliminary expenses. There is no reason why the same thing can not be done here.

In the selection of the reception committee we understand a number of people are feeling slighted because their names were left out. The duties of this committee are nominal and every person in Pinckney and vicinity, especially all of the old timers, should consider themselves members of it.

In connection with this we are naming a number of vice presidents in other towns and states. Their duties will be to get the old Pinckney boys and girls in the community to attend the Home Coming and Centennial.

Hoey Leaves $5,000 To Church In Will

St. Joseph's Church at Dexter Is Recipient. Document Is Now In Probate.

St. Joseph's Catholic church at Dexter is the recipient of a bequest of $5,000 from the estate of Daniel E. Hoey, according to the terms of Mr. Hoey's will, which has been admitted to probate.

Mr. Hoey, one of Dexter's most prominent citizens and for 35 years a business man of this community, died December 28, after a long illness. He left an estate valued at approximately $30,000, according to the terms of the will, $20,000 of which is in real estate.

A lifelong resident of Washington county, Mr. Hoey had been active in affairs of St. Joseph's church for a number of years. Father Charles Walsh is the present pastor.

That clause of the will dealing with the church bequest reads as follows: "I give, devise and bequeath to the St. Joseph church of Dexter, Michigan, five thousand dollars, that is, five one-thousand-dollar bonds of 'Boat Cadillac Hotel' or the certificate of deposit covering or representing said five bonds, or the proceeds thereof, in case I dispose of such five bonds before my decease, or $5,000 cash, to the church, my executors, Washington Tribune."

NO PRIMARY IN THIS COUNTY ON MARCH 4

The attorney general has handed down an opinion to the effect that H. D. Douglas failed to file an affidavit of eligibility within the prescribed time, he is not eligible to be a candidate for school commissioner at the March 4 primary. As this was the only contest on the ticket, there will be no primary in this county. The opinion further stated that this would not prevent Mr. Douglas from being a sticker candidate. This new eligibility law passed in 1931 seems to have caught many candidates napping. In Bay county four candidates were barred from the ballot for not complying with it.

Huge PWA Program Is Being Planned

Cities and Counties Ask $23,121,863 for Projects; State $52,000,000 For Public Parks.

Ninety-seven political units of this state have submitted plans to the state planning commission under the PWA for projects totalling over $23,000,000. The City of Lansing, with eight projects, asks the largest amount, $3,118,000. They want a new sewer system and disposal plant, new jail, new city garage, street improvements and garbage transfer building. Wexford county, $327,000 in road work and a $110,000 community building in Cadillac.

Sewers, paving, community buildings and municipal buildings are asked by most of the units. Ann Arbor will ask for a new school.

In the list of projects asked we do not see any from Livingston county but we understand that a number will be presented. Pinckney will again submit a school project. This time, we understand, for an $80,000 addition to the present school.

The State of Michigan, itself, will submit projects totalling over $52,000,000. These are mostly state conservation projects and areas follows: $22,631,850 for land purchases, $2,922,607 for the geological survey, $17,217,600 for state parks, $1,925,100 for the fish division, $17,336,130 for the forestry division, $806,732 for the land department, $191,340 for educational work, $5,718,659 for the game division and $5,939,000 for fire protection.

With this great number of projects submitted, some of the projects will undoubtedly be turned down and those first asked for may have to edge on the others.

South Lyon will submit a project for a sanitary sewer.

Current Comment

If the Hauptman trial in New Jersey lasts much longer, Bruno Hauptman is liable to be the most popular man in the country. At the beginning of the trial he was generally regarded as a monster of the lowest type. However, this is now all changed and he receives from 75 to 100 letters a day from his admirers. We regarded the Lindbergh kidnapping investigation as the worst managed affair of its kind in the history of the country and the trial of Hauptman is even worse. At the present time the state has failed to link him to the murder strongly enough to send him to the electric chair and the trial has been prolonged for some five weeks by allowing both prosecution and defense to drag in useless testimony which has nothing to do with the case. In fact, both sides seem desirous of prolonging the case as long as possible. In new trials taken in the court room and exhibited in theatres all over the country Hauptman is the hero. He is the fan mad. At the present time the trial carries more features of a successful long run Broadway success than a murder trial.

If the citizens of Jackson have their way that city will no longer be known as the prison city. The present prison is located outside the city limits in Blackman township and R. P. Nichols has introduced a bill in the legislature asking the name of the prison be designated. Now that the prison is removed from Jackson the citizens object to the stigma attached to it. It was not always thus. In 1910 the Jackson Elks Lodge in the parade at the national convention in Detroit marched all decked out in striped convict's suits and hats and chains.

For many months the romantic lover of this country was regaled with the love affairs of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. One day they were reconciled. The next day they were not. Mary finally got bored with Douglas and went back to England. His titled admirer causing this situation to collapse like a packed balloon. Another romance had to be planned at any cost to feed the love bug. Apparently there are no sufficient romantic cases existing today and it was necessary to go back 100 years and dig up the romantic trials of Napoleon. So on a paper now carrying the love affairs of Napoleon and Josephine and another those of Napoleon and Marie Louise. Anything to satisfy the romantic is apparently the maxim.

During the Fitzgerald campaign the governor last fall it was proposed that his election would be the end of the state-owned liquor store and the distribution of hard liquor would be placed in the hands of the private stores. According to a statement issued by John McDonald, chairman of the liquor commission, last week this is not to be. He stated that because of the 102 state liquor stores will be closed. The reason given for this was that in case a store was closed a special distributor would have to be found at a salary of $1200 per year.

While the country is waiting for the supreme court to hand down a decision on the question of the gold content of the dollar, the Lansing State Journal goes back 60 years and points out where the supreme court once ruled a similar question and then reversed themselves. In 1868 congress made greenbacks legal tender. The question whether they could be used as such was carried to the supreme court and a 4 to 3 decision against their use was handed down. There were two vacancies in the court which President Grant filled on the day the decision was handed down. Four days later the court again met and handed down a decision reversing themselves and declaring greenbacks legal tender.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to smuggle out a letter which a confederate of Nance steals. Nance escapes, although shot, by swimming to a speed-boat manned by friends, and goes to Lanny's apartment. Lanny tells Chief McNamara, who orders her to bring Nance to his apartment.

"Those cops at your house will stick around, Lanny, and when you return they'll want to know where you've been. What are you going to tell them?"

"Tell them nothing. Let those two cops sit in their car in front of my house all night and watch it. What do I care? At least they'll keep burglars away. And when finally they do round me up and wait me down to central station to be questioned, you'll do the questioning, will you not?"

"Lanny," said Dan McNamara, "if you were a man and on the force I'd make you a detective sergeant. You're a bear-cat, that's what you are. But you smuggled that letter out of San Quentin for Nance and turned it over to Sapphire Susie!"

"Indeed! Well, let me tell you, Dan McNamara, that I'm a respectable woman and I never associate, if I know it, with ladies known to the police by such names."

"Maybe you didn't know it, but you gave Sapphire Susie a lift in your car from the main gate at San Quentin down to Greenbrae. The guard remembers seeing her hanging around the main gate, as if she was waiting for somebody; later she got into a coupe with a middle-aged lady, who looked so respectable he took another look at the pass she had just surrendered to him and remembers that the name on the pass was yours. The pass entitled you to visit Nance Belden. Guards may not remember such incidents until something happens. Then they're fast on their feet, Lanny."

"And who, if you please, is Sapphire Susie?"

"She's did a stretch at San Quentin for blackmail. She was discharged a week before you visited Nance, and before Susie left the Big House, Nance fixed it with her to lend a helping hand. Apparently Nance didn't want to confide the minute details of her plan of escape to Susie. Susie's a swell looker but a little bit dumb—she levied blackmail through the mail, understand, and signed her name, instead of hiring a smart shyster lawyer. So Nance decided to send her written instructions out by you, and Susie agreed to pick you up, pinch the letter and deliver it."

"Dan, I assure you I wasn't in any plot to effect a prison delivery. If I'd thought for an instant I was doing anything wrong—why, Nance told me to read her letter and if I disapproved of its contents to destroy it. I didn't see any harm in that."

"You violated the rules of the prison and you could be punished for it by a term in that same prison."

"I'm a respectable woman—"

"That gets you nowhere. I was a respectable chief of police once—and now look at me. If your part in this leaks out you can only be punished—and you can't be convicted unless you talk in your sleep. If my part in this should leak out I'll be punished and disgraced and thrown out of the best job I've ever had. However—" he raised his glass to her—"mud in your eye, Lanny."

"Happy days, Dan, you gorgeous sooty."

The doorbell rang. Dan opened it and Doctor Burt stepped in. He paused in amazement at sight of Lanny, glass in hand; she motioned him with it down the hall. "First door at the end, Stevie. You'll find your patient there."

"That girl with the dissociated personality, Nance Belden, escaped from San Quentin late this afternoon, Chief." Stephen began, and handed the latter a newspaper. "Big story. First woman to escape from San Quentin." He gazed severely upon Lanny. "What are you doing here, Lanny?"

"Ah! h—! to pay, Stevie dear, and no pitch hot. That Belden girl is here with a bullet hole in her shoulder; she's suffering from shock and submersion and chill and loss of blood and she's cold as a penguin's tail. I've given her a stiff noggin of Dan's terrible booze and a fourth of a grain of strychnin and an alcohol rub. She's sleeping. Did you bring those hot-water bottles?"

"Yes," he said humbly, indicating a bag he carried. Lanny fell upon the bag, and retired to the kitchen to fill the hot-water bottles and tuck them in alongside her child patient. "Lucky if she doesn't develop pneumonia, Stevie."

Doctor Burt stood looking down at the sleeping Nance. "Out of the warden's arms and straight into yours. You guessed she'd call on Lanny, eh. Dan, you're an old fox."

"No, Doc, I'm not. A fox has brains."

"He's a lamb, Stevie; just a big ram lamb."

While Lanny was assisting Doctor Burt in dressing Nance Belden's wound, Dan McNamara sat in his plain little living room and read the story of her escape from San Quentin. It appeared that throughout all of Sunday afternoon two men, in a motor boat, had been anchored in the cove off San Quentin apparently fishing for striped bass, which abound at this particular point in San Francisco bay. There were other boats anchored there also—eight in all. The guard at the entrance to the women's quarters had observed them, until, about four-thirty p. m., just before locking-up time a guard in one of the lookout towers on the hill had telephoned him that a boat had approached close to the shore.

The guard had thereupon stepped out of his kiosk and around to the rear of it, which faced toward the beach, less than thirty feet distant. He had shouted at the men in the boat and warned them to be off, that they were not permitted to approach that close, that they were within the dead-line. To this the men replied that they couldn't help it; that their motor had gone dead and that the tide had set them in; that they were trying to make repairs and would be off as soon as they could.

While the guard was in the rear of his station, engaged in this conversation, Nance Belden had approached the gate, kicked off her shoes and, digging her toes into the quarter-inch wire mesh of the sixteen-foot gate, had scrambled to the top with incredible rapidity. She was just climbing down the outside of the gate when the guard in the tower on the hill saw her and immediately telephoned to the guard at the main gate; also to the guard arguing with the men in the motor-boat. Upon hearing the telephone bell ringing in his station, that guard had walked back into it; at the same time, keeping the kiosk between her and the approaching guard, Nance Belden had dashed down to the beach and commenced swimming rapidly toward the motor-boat, the motor of which instantly started, and the boat commenced edging in to pick her up.

When the guard in the kiosk, apprised of what was taking place, ran out with a rifle in his hand and shouted to Nance Belden to come back or he would shoot her, a machine-gun in the motor-boat promptly came into action against him. He had not been hit, but a shower of bullets had splattered the ground around and in front of him and another burst had gone over his head and through the sentry box. The guard had fired once at the Belden woman and hit her, but immediately thereafter, fearful of being killed, he had thrown himself flat on the ground.

The guard in the watch-tower on the hill had then brought his machine-gun into action. His first burst had been short, and drew answering fire from the machine gunner in the boat. Although the range was four hundred yards, the first burst from the motor-boat tore through the wooden watch-tower, which rather distracted the aim of the guard there; nevertheless, the latter stuck to his gun and continued to fire, splattering bullets around the swimming girl and into the boat.

The men in the boat did not hesitate, but came on through the hail of bullets; the escaping prisoner had in the meanwhile either sunk or died; at any rate a widening tinge of red appeared on the water. She was down about thirty seconds, then her head emerged close to the boat, and she swam with one arm to the side of it; a man reached over and grasped her under both arms and jerked her into the boat, which instantly turned, put on full speed and raced away close past two other boats. Fearful of killing innocent people, the guard in the watch-tower held his fire until the escaping boat was in the clear; then he and the guard in another tower came into action again. But a target-moving at a speed of forty-five miles an hour is not easily hit; the fire was either over or short and the boat did not stop. When it was out of range, it turned, and in the rapidly fading light of the winter day, headed up into San Pablo bay, running close to the south shore to avoid the chop of the waves in this shallow expanse of water. They ran without lights.

While the course they had taken would seem to indicate a desire to run up Carquinez straits to the Sacramento or the San Joaquin rivers, land and escape in a waiting automobile into central California, the warden realized that his quarry was not lacking in intelligence; that, fast as they fled, they would realize that the telephone is faster; that the roar of their motor must betray them a mile away. He had, therefore, taken the precaution to notify the chiefs of police of Pittsburg, Martinez, Sausalito, Richmond, Berkeley, Oakland and San Francisco, leaving to these the task of notifying intermediate points. The warden had a suspicion the fugitives would double back to San Francisco—particularly since the girl was wounded and must be hidden in order to receive medical attention.

"And here she is," Dan McNamara muttered. "Cripes, what a woman! Lord, how I love a woman with brains and courage. Just a little simple matter of taking pains and taking risks. She didn't go in to the dining hall for dinner with the other prisoners. Smart! Knew she couldn't make a fast swim on a full stomach. Smart enough to notice the warden's oversight in failing to fill in with barbed wire topping that eighteen-inch space at the top of his gate. Of course they figured they needn't bother with that, because no woman could climb a sixteen-foot wire mesh fence anyhow, and if she did she'd only drop down into the waiting arms of the guard, who is never absent, night or day. But Nance Belden knew she could climb that fence barefoot; she knew she had thirty seconds to do it and a drop on the other side from the top of the gate. Her job was to induce the guard to turn his back—and her friends in the boat did that!"

"She knew she'd been seen from the watch-tower on the hill and the guard at the gates notified by telephone; as he returned from the edge of the beach, around the south side of his kiosk, Nance slipped by him on the north side and was in the water as the guard took up the 'phone. Smart! She knew no guard will stick under machine-gun fire at fifty yards, merely to stop a woman convict escaping from prison. Smart! Sank and swam under water—and then the zigzag course between the boats of the other fishermen, after they picked her up. Fine psychology—she engineered it all—and I know she's a nut! And then straight to Lanny for medical attention—straight to the one human being she knew she could trust—no, I'll not send her back. And I don't particularly want to catch her friends either. I'll say they're friends! Wish I had a couple of friends that'd come on through machine-gun fire for me! I had thought the world was selfish and cruel and thieving and lying—but there's nobility left in it after all."

Stephen Burt came out of the bedroom and sat down and stared at the chief of police with grave interest. "Well, my good Javert," he said presently.

"Your good what?"

"I called you Javert. Don't you know who Javert was?"

Dan McNamara shook his head. "I never picked him up, Doc."

"You wouldn't. He was a character in 'Les Misérables,' a novel by Victor Hugo. He was a fly-cop in Paris, and he pursued an ex-convict named Jean Valjean for twenty years, because he believed the man was a crook. Once a crook, always a crook, was Javert's philosophy. And when he discovered at last he had the goods on Jean Valjean and it was his duty to arrest him, he discovered simultaneously that Jean Valjean was also a good and noble man, which proved extremely embarrassing to Javert."

"I understand how that could be, all right, Doc. What did Javert do then?"

"He climbed up on the railing of a bridge over the Seine, unpinning his shield, threw it into the river and jumped in after it."

"He committed suicide in order to give his man the breaks."

"Exactly."

"Well," Dan McNamara decided after pondering this a half minute, "I wouldn't be boob enough to do that. He should have made a stool pigeon out of Jean Valjean and maybe he'd have gotten somewhere in his job."

Stephen smiled. He liked this heavy man, with the Celtic face as inscrutable as a Chinaman's. As a specialist in mental diseases he knew the part heredity plays in the formation of character, and one did not have to look at the chief twice to know that he came of courageous ancestry. No vague fears or anxieties in this fellow, Stephen thought. Courageous men are usually honest men; even when they are not honest they are sufficiently courageous to pay the price, no matter how high, for the things they do with their eyes open—to pay it cheerfully and refrain thereafter from whimpering.

"So you're going to protect this girl, are you, Chief?"

TRUE GHOST STORIES

By Famous People

Copyright by Public Ledger, Inc. WNU Service.

By RITA WEIMAN

Author.

"RITA WEIMAN is too strong-minded to have a ghost story," cautioned her husband.

"Beg your pardon," he added, "Come to think of it she does have a ghost story, a very real one. She has a knack of foreseeing things. Tell about your 'voltage story,' Rita."

Simultaneously, the author, her husband and I drew our chairs closer to the fireplace, above which burned dim lights from Chinese furniture, which she favors.

"Seven years ago," she began, "I read an obscure notice in the newspaper, about John Hubert, of Auburn, N. Y., an electrician, resigning as executioner at Sing Sing, because he was being ostracized from society. At the same time he justified his job, saying he was only fulfilling his work as a servant of the state."

"I thought this was a grand idea for a story. I wrote a story about an electrician, who was ostracized by his family and friends, because they found out he was serving as an executioner and who eventually killed himself because of their actions, by seizing a high-voltage electric wire. I sold the story to a magazine."

"A few months later the editor called me to say that the owner of the magazine felt that my story was a plea against capital punishment and that he did not feel that his magazine should take issue on the subject. I should keep my check, but the story would not be published by them; I could resell it if I wished."

"I let the matter drift, although I felt that I wanted to see the story published."

"One morning, two years later, my secretary handed me a paper."

"Look," she cried, with amazement in her voice.

"Joins in death the 140 men he slew," said the headlines. "John Hubert, by suicide, answers the question all who knew him asked."

"How I rejoiced that my story had not been published! I would always have been haunted by the thought that Hubert had read my story and brooded over it, and had eventually committed suicide."

"In view of the strange finale of events, the magazine then published the story, and I rejoiced that I have been saved from that ghost."

By PERCY CROSBY

Cartoonist.

"I WAS born in a haunted house," related the comic artist, Percy Crosby.

"The first gleam of consciousness which I can remember in my life was seeing a colored mammy under the kitchen table, and hearing my mother say that the mammy was a ghost. All through my childhood I can remember my mother complaining to my father that our house was haunted, until, when I was three, we had to move from it."

"I can remember vividly that first experience—the only time I ever saw the ghost. It left an indelible impression on my mind."

"I had gone into the kitchen to get a cookie. Under the kitchen table I saw a negro mammy; a red bandanna was tied tightly around her head, her two hands were on the floor. She seemed to be backing away from me. I screamed in fright at the strange sight and ran to my mother."

"Mother grasped my hand, and took me back to the scene. The woman was still crouching there."

"I saw my mother slap at her, and her hand went right through her head and struck the wall; and the mammy disappeared."

"Ghost, ghost!" screamed my mother. I screamed also, not knowing what the word meant."

"Mother called witnesses who agreed that there was no sign or hide or hair of the mammy in the room. I was with her to testify that she had been there, and that when mother struck her she disappeared."

"After that experience my mother grew more nervous and timid; but, like all small boys, the experience only gave me more courage, and more ideas for adventure. But I have never found a ghost since that time. No doubt since I was born in a haunted house, I'll probably die in one."

Farmers War on Lark

Even if Shelley wrote an ode about it and Schubert was inspired by it to compose a beautiful melody, the lark is just a bird that damages wheat and other crops. So declare the farmers in the vicinity of Norfolk, England, and they have started a war on the songster. The Norfolk Agricultural committee has excluded the bird from the new order under the wild birds protection act.

PRETTY FOR THE SMALL DAUGHTER

Mothers who like to dress their small daughters after the simple smart English manner will love this design. At first glance, nice as it looks, there seems to be very little to it. But look again—Isn't that double yoke attractive, ending in two demure little scallops that button down in the front? And the side pleats, which make it such a pleasant frock in which to romp are also decorative in a charmingly discreet manner. The sleeves may be long or short, and a hidden charm is a pair of more than ordinarily well-cut bloomers. Make it of cotton or sheer wool.

Pattern 9826 may be ordered only in sizes 1, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2½ yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

STRONGER BUSINESS AND STRONGER BANKS

By F. M. LAW
President American Bankers
Association

DURING the crisis when confidence was shattered, bankers were properly concerned in liquidity. Their main thought was to prepare to meet any demand for withdrawal of funds. They were more interested therefore in collecting loans than in making them. For this they cannot be justly blamed. It was a proper procedure. Now that confidence has been so largely restored banks will naturally resume a more normal lending policy. This does not mean they will or should extend loose or unsound credit, but that in the utmost good faith bankers will perform their proper part in recovery by a sympathetic and constructive attitude in the making of sound loans. Nor should commercial banks make capital or long time loans, for the reason that their loans are made from funds derived from deposits payable for the most part on demand.

When the return of confidence is further on its way, business men will find need for credit in making their plans. Then good borrowers, who for the most part have been so conspicuously absent from the market, will return. They will be warmly welcomed by the banks.

Business Men's Fears

Business men have not yet laid all their fears. They worry about what Congress may or may not do. They concern themselves about a trend toward control of business by government. They fear taxes beyond their power to pay. These are real sources of worry and when they are reassured along these lines they will be more inclined to take a fresh look at the future and to make plans to go forward.

As a matter of fact there are tangible evidences of recovery. The Federal Reserve Board officially has stated that prices, wages, business activity and production were back to the highest peak since early in 1931. Commercial failures in the United States are being cut almost in half as compared with the same period last year. It has been reported that the decline in export and import trade was definitely checked in the middle of 1933 and replaced during the last half of the year by a substantial recovery movement.

Among favorable factors is the improved condition of the banks. It is doubtless true that the banking structure of the country has never been in a sounder, stronger and more liquid condition than it is today. My authority for that statement is the Comptroller of the Currency. No longer is there any fear or thought of bank runs. Depositors once more know that their money is safe and the banker, thrice armed in the knowledge of his own strength, is looking forward.

The Place of Advertising

"We feel that bank advertising has a special public duty to perform in this connection under existing conditions. The copy which will be supplied in the service we have developed will not only aid the individual bank in promoting the use of its own facilities but is also aimed to bring about with the aid of newspaper advertising a clearer public viewpoint regarding the essential part it occupies in the life of its community."

Mr. Hecht emphasized in regard to the new advertising facilities being offered to the members of the association that they are not a profit making venture and that there is no intention to disturb existing advertising arrangements. The idea being that these institutional services shall supplement rather than replace present plans, or that they will give assistance to member banks now lacking satisfactory arrangements.

SEEING NELLIE HOME

I wandered today by the mill, Maggie, where they turn corn and rye into booze, and after I'd tarried full long, Maggie, I lay down on the greensward to snooze and I dreamed of the days long ago, Maggie, when men demanded their liquor straight, and never was heard in the home, Maggie, about serving cocktails at eight. The old days have flown on wing, Maggie, for something new has taken their place, and now when he visits the tavern, he's liable to see wifie's sweet face; when at midnight the kiddies come running, to lead daddie home with his "stew," the darlings don't find it much harder, to lug mama along with them too.—Ex.

VOELKER FAVORS DIRECT STATE AID FOR TUITION

In considering various proposals for modification of the Thatcher-Sias act and the general state aid program for the public schools, Dr. Paul F. Voelker, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has definitely declared himself in favor of direct state aid for tuition for rural children.

The tuition problem has been critical for two years. Many rural boys and girls are not able to attend high school because of the inability of school districts to provide tuition. The limited amount of state aid available last year did not contribute significantly to the tuition problem. The present proposal would set the payment of tuition by the state at $65 per pupil. This payment would be made in the fall of the year, direct to the high school district.

In commenting on the tuition proposal, Dr. Voelker said: "No rural district under this amendment to the Thatcher-Sias measure should have to pay one cent for high school tuition. We believe the act, if amended as proposed, and backed with sufficient funds to assure its being carried out, can provide a high school education for every child in rural Michigan—and entirely without payment of tuition locally."

Other Changes Proposed

An increase in the basic allowance to schools from $40 to $48 per elementary child annually, an additional allowance of $50 for every ungraded school, and increased flexibility in local taxation machinery by decreasing from three mills to two mills the amount of tax money used as a base for equalization purposes, are features of a measure suggested for introduction to the Legislature to amend the Thatcher-Sias school aid distribution act of 1933.

"There are other features to the proposal also," Dr. E. B. Elliott, Director of Research of the State Department of Public Instruction, stated. "Such changes in the method of disbursement of funds, and increased allowances for equalization, but these merely supplement the major points."

$25,000,000 Needed

In order for this bill or any other to make possible a sound minimum program for public education, however, Dr. Voelker maintains, it must be backed with a sufficient sum of money to assure its provisions of being carried out effectively. To this end he cites the need for immediate appropriation of $25,000,000 in state aid, in addition to the Primary School Interest Fund.

Your eyes won't tell you!

MOST of us choose lamps because they are attractive and ornamental, or because they fit in with the decorative scheme of a room. We take it for granted that our lamps are furnishing good lighting when frequently our eyes are being strained by poor lighting and do not complain until it is too late. There are four essentials of good lighting that you may quickly and easily follow in your own home: (1) Use correct size lamp bulbs—"WATTS." In table and floor lamps with three sockets, use 40 watts in each socket; with two sockets, 60 watts; with one socket, 100 watts. (2) Have at least one-tenth as much light in the rest of the room as you have on your book, newspaper, sewing, etc. (3) Use SHADES on all lamp bulbs to prevent GLARE. (4) Use shades with light-colored linings to get the most light.

TO OPEN NEW FAIR MAY 26

Lower Cost to Visitors; 84 Miles of Free Exhibits.

Chicago.—A new World's Fair will open here May 26. It is not simply an encore of the 1933 Century of Progress Exposition. In addition to many startling new features it recalls all those of last year's Fair that were too important and popular to leave out—but even they have been enlarged, changed and improved. This summer's Fair will cost little to see and little to get to. There are 84 miles of interesting free exhibits. The Exposition will look after the visitors' comfort, hospitality, efficiently and hospitably. Last year the average visitor spent only $1.17 a day inside the grounds.

World's Greatest Fountain.—Water will have been turned on more than 100 of the old buildings. New ones have replaced them. The entire physical appearance is different, with new color and new landscaping everywhere. New lighting effects at night, even more dramatic than those of the 1933 Fair, surpass anything of the kind ever attempted anywhere. Scores of new exhibits have been added. One of them the largest ever built. Virtually every exhibit hall over has undergone complete change.

Compared to the terrific wheel of the 1933 Fair and the sky ride of 1933, the outstanding single feature is the largest fountain ever built. It has a flow of water sufficient to serve a city of 1,000,000 population, and its spectacular lighting in five colors, changes as much current as an average city of 1,000,000.

Victory "Tour World."—Eighteen "village" twelve of them new, all of them patterned after the best of the world's villages of the 1933 Fair, make the Exposition more truly world-wide than the name "World's Fair" implies. Each village is a unique opportunity of making, in effect, a tour of the world in a single day.

Those of the villages are on a street of their own, where the Midway stood last year. The old Midway has disappeared and a new and more thrilling one has been built on the Northern Island beach.

On the street of foreign villages are reproductions of the old scenes in North Africa, England, the German Black Forest, Colonial America, Ireland, Italy, Tunis, Belgium, Paris and Spain; there is also a village peopled entirely by robots. Elsewhere on the Fair grounds are a Dutch village, a Swiss village, a Mexican village and the Streets of Shanghai.

Ford, Packard New.—New to the Fair is the exhibit of the Ford Motor company, with its $1,500,000 expenditure of the drama and progress of transportation, spread over eleven acres. Not the least important among its exhibits will be that of Henry Ford's own solution to the farmer's problem; he will show the farmer exactly how he can bring his product to market by raising and processing his own.

The great packing companies, represented last year, have come in separately, and in a big way. Swift and Company has the entire 23rd street bridge for exhibits, and has built a huge band shell and amphitheater for free concerts. For ten weeks, beginning July 1, the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play there twice a day. Armour and Company tells the story of the progress of the industry in its large new building in operation. A packing plant actually in operation.

Standard Oil (Indiana) will present daily, in a new arena, a daring animal act with thirty-three lions and tigers performing in the same cage at the same time. Science will be made to perform amazing miracles every day in a scientific revue in the court of the Hall of Science. There will be plenty of free entertainment elsewhere on the grounds.

Railroad Rates Lower.—The new Fair has more restaurants, better equipped to serve tremendous crowds. Meals will be lower in price; in fact it will be possible to buy a meal on the Fair grounds for as little as fifteen cents.

Rates for buses, lagoon boats, rich-ness and roller chairs have been reduced; in some cases they have been cut in half. Twenty per cent of all the tickets will be free.

Eastern, western and central railroad lines have announced that rates, in general, are now lower this year than last, in many cases with special-rate tickets honored in Pullmans as well as in day-coaches. Bus lines have announced special low rates and so have air lines.

When the creamery pays and it is doubtful whether this will compensate for more than 50 per cent of the additional costs of producing market milk. Here's how to figure it out. "Further, when skum milk is used on the farm it permits a different type of farming to be developed. It is difficult, indeed, to say how much more a farmer can earn if he raises his cows, some hogs and chickens. This depends upon the management of the farm, but it is a factor of no small consequence and should be considered by those who would leave their cream- and cheese factories in order to get back to the farm."

25 YEARS OF SCOUTING IN AMERICA

1935—Scouting's Silver Jubilee
Six and one-half million boys in America have enjoyed Scouting Adventure and Achievement since Scouting's organization on Feb. 8, 1910.

Training for Leadership

In the first 20 years of Scouting while only 1 out of every 7 boys became Scouts—yet that one-seventh provided: 65 percent of the college students, 60 percent of the captains of football teams, 8 members of the All-American Eleven, 68 percent of Rhodes Scholars.

Code of Ethics.—A Code of Ethics, the Scout Oath and Law, leads to right qualities and right habits of conduct.

933 Scouts today, in Washtenaw, Livingston Council carry on in 52 Scout troops, trying always to be "good Scouts".

WILL BANISH SO-CALLED ASPIRIN

The indiscriminate sale of so-called aspirin tablets was ruled illegal Wednesday by Attorney General Harry S. Toy to settle an issue that had bothered three previous administrations.

Toy said the original request for the opinion had been filed when Justice William W. Potter was attorney general and had been renewed during the administrations of Wilbur C. Brucker and Patrick H. O'Brien, other predecessors in the office.

The attorney general held that aspirin is a drug and cannot legally be sold except by drug stores and other places licensed by the state board of pharmacy. The opinion was written for E. A. Kerr, superintendent of the news stand at the Michigan Central railroad terminal at Detroit.

The Detroit Evening News gives this notice of one of Washtenaw's most valuable citizens: "Thomas B. Bickell lives in Dexter township, Washtenaw county, and owns all the land even to the geese that quack along the roadside. He was born in England in 1838, came over in 1857, secured the truck that led to Michigan, and in 1859 was killed in the Dover mills, and next year had charge of the business. In 1861 he bought a half interest and in 1867 owned the whole establishment. He then invested in the Hudson mills, went into lumber business, but not very long, bought a 400 acre farm, raised shorthorn cattle and a fine herd of goats, loaned the goats to his brother grangers when they initiated new members, built a mansion west of Prospect hill, the highest one in the lower peninsula, finally built a church. Thomas is looked upon as a wise man, as wise as he is good, but he can't explain how he happened to strike such a steady streak of good luck."

GARDEN CLUB MEETING

Clarence S. Franke, of Hawlook Gardens, near Fowlerville, was the speaker at the Friday evening meeting of the Livingston County Garden Club, giving an illustrated talk on Art in the Small Door Yard with slides. Mr. Franke, who is president of the club, substituted for Mr. and Mrs. Bender of Gross Pointe, who were unable to come owing to illness, but will appear at a later meeting of the club. It was voted to sponsor the picture "Great Expectations" as a benefit movie in the Howell Theatre and several new members were received into the Club. Other features of entertainment were selections by the Little German Band of the Howell high school. At the close of the evening the Hoff's served ice cream and cake.

DR. PAUL F. VOELKER

"Every School Open"

"Every Child in School"

Dr. Paul F. Voelker was nominated for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction by the Democratic State Convention held in Cass Technical High School, Detroit, on Thursday, January 31st. His name will appear on the ballot at the Spring Election, April 1st.

Dr. Paul Voelker's nomination was unusual in that it was by acclamation from the floor—a spontaneous demand by the delegates that he continue his leadership in the duties of this important office in education.

Dr. Voelker began teaching in the rural schools of Michigan, also teaching in Iowa and Wisconsin.

After receiving his Doctorate in Character Education from Columbia University he returned to Michigan in 1917, serving as President of Olivet College and Battle Creek College until 1932 when he was elected Superintendent of Public Instruction for which office he was nominated.

Paul F. Voelker has taken an aggressive and courageous stand for Education the past trying two years. He has advocated changes in the laws of economy and efficiency but at the same time has demanded that education be considered one of the first duties of the state government and that sufficient funds be provided to keep "Every Child in School"; "Every School Open."

Because of the past leadership of Paul F. Voelker, "Education" was the major keynote of this convention. With the exception of the Justices of the Supreme Court, all the state officers to be filled in the April election are directly concerned with the educational system of Michigan. "This is an Educational Convention" was stated by the temporary chairman, John Doffin Jr. Statements of this address might well be considered the platform of this educational leader, Paul F. Voelker.

TO DISTRIBUTE BARLEY SEED

Distribution of high grade barley seed to Michigan farmers by numerous grain elevators throughout the state will be started in the near future. This announcement was made today by officials of the American Malting Co., who are nearing completion of their mammoth malting plant in Detroit. The malting plant, when completed, will have an output of 1,200,000 bushels a year. Agricultural experts, following a survey, indicated that the barley demand to meet this production of grain malt would exceed 1,000,000 bushels annually. This added to a present 900,000 bushels otherwise he did would total approximately 2,000,000 bushels which Michigan farmers could find a market for.

To insure an adequate supply of barley for operations the American Malting Co. last fall contracted a large number of grain elevators throughout the state. They requested the elevators to set aside their best barley, suitable for malting purposes, to be supplied for seed to Michigan farmers for 1935 planting. Through this method it is believed that the state will soon rank among the leading malting barley producers.

Commenting on the barley future, as far as the farmer is concerned, Frank B. Northwood, general manager of the American Malting Co., pointed out that making barley commands a higher price in the Detroit market than any other grain grown. A checkup verified this statement in as much as malting barley is quoted this week at Detroit from $1.18 to $1.20 a bushel. Another important factor is that the farmer can raise from between 30 to 40 bushels of malting barley per acre.

It will be recalled that during the 15 years prior to repeal the Michigan farmer had a very meager market for his malting barley in Detroit.

Philathea Notes

Not so many in class Sunday, because of the bad roads, illness in the families, or for other reasons. Our prayers are going out for the shut-ins of our community, to the all-powered Great Physician.

The helpful Pentecostal lesson of last Sunday, among other points, brought out the two steps to receiving of the Holy Ghost; namely, repentance and baptism. Note was made of the need of spiritual power today if we would be a power for good in our community.

Next Sunday we have a temperance lesson: "Peter Teaches Good Citizenship." Parts of 1 Peter 2 and 1 Peter 4 will give many points of similarity between good citizens of Peter's time and those of our own times.

This is the week for the Philathea business meeting at the home of Mrs. Dede Weeks, Wednesday afternoon, February 13.

A gratifying help for the Missionary cause is being given by the Centa-Meal boxes. Many are finding inspiration by placing in the boxes even a few pennies, as each one helps.

Paris Acclaims the Beauty of Lace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FOR sheer loveliness whenever, wherever, if ever has eye beheld a more entrancing array of lace evening gowns than those which are now gracing the midwinter social scene! When we say sheer loveliness we mean just that—sheer and lovely as the smart new laces and nets, chiffons and marquisettes can make the party frocks and evening formal now so voguish.

The importance of lace and net and various beautiful sheers of similar character cannot be over emphasized. Reports pour in from Paris in regard to the enthusiasm shown for gowns that are thin and fluttery and diaphanous they needs must be made over foundational slips of silk, or satin, crepe or lame.

In describing the group of distinguished lace fashions pictured, we are so enthusiastic about the superbly lovely lace frock to the right in the trio we are going to tell about it first. It is a wedding gown which is real style news, gives it an added touch of glamor and romance, too. More and more brides are intrigued with the idea of lace for the all-important nuptial event. One of the reasons, perhaps, is that lace is so luxurious and beautiful in itself, it needs no furbelows and intricate cutting to enhance it. Silver lace is particularly sumptuous and it makes a really thrilling wedding gown. Ardane of Paris, whose creations are ever strikingly original, creates this exquisite bridal costume of this silver lace. It has a square court train which may be draped as a wrap, as here shown, which makes it practical for the bride to wear as an evening gown later. A white satin bodice is inserted at the side-front. The same satin borders the train, also the long sleeves.

In the charming black lace dress centered in the picture, Patou has very ingeniously contrived to coax a youthful little peplum to circle the hips and go ruffling down the back. From the picture one might easily fancy that net of large open mesh fashioned this dress instead of lace. However, it is really a rather heavy lace, smartly patterned in a conventional design which is younger looking than the more formal and ornate orais. There is just enough sophistication about this dainty frock to appeal to the bud "just out" in society who aspires to poise and dignity.

Speaking of the new net frocks, likewise the now-so-voguish marquisettes, they are going in for color for all they are worth, unusual tones such as raspberry, violet (said to be the coming big color), Marina blue, rust and dark red.

In regard to the gown illustrated to the left in the group, color adds to the enchantment of the lace which fashions it. For this gown of classic simplicity Callot uses a gorgeous copper-colored lame lace, posing it over a white crepe silk slip. The collar of white coq feathers is a grand climax.

A word should be spoken in regard to the tendency this season to employ laces of a filmy texture both in colors and black. The newer black lace dresses hold one almost spellbound in their fragile beauty. Then, too, among recent showings are stunning lace modes which display a riot of fine knife pleatings which form wide ounces and bertha off-shoulder décolletés and shoulder capes and other captivating details.

CONTRAST SLEEVES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The idea of sleeves contrasting the rest of the dress is holding good in midseason styling. Advance spring fashions and resort modes also emphasize this feature. Not only are sleeves in direct contrast but the matter of cutting sleeves and yoke in one is important, according to reports in regard to advance fashions. The dinner dress pictured is of dull black velvet with cut-in-one sleeves and yoke of sheer ribbed velvet which makes this dress practical for late-into-the-spring wear. A delicate rhinestone necklace, just the right length for the neckline, adds formality. The wide rhinestone bracelet also sounds the glittering note which fashion demands for evening. In reality this dress is part of a suit, having a simple, fitted hip-length jacket fastened at the small turnover collar with two handsome silver fox tails.

Feathers on Gowns
Evening gowns trimmed with pheasant feathers are seen in London.

NEW WRINKLES IN SPRING SHOWINGS

Peplums and pleats are the new wrinkles in advance style showings for spring, and in last-word touches for mid-winter costumes.

Pleats are cropping out all over the place—in evening gowns and daytime frocks, used to give skirt fullness in back or front, or to add character to a peplum flare.

They are showing up even in hats, brims and in scarfs, in bustle effects on evening gowns and in whole skirts for formal costumes of the naughty nineties school.

The tiered cape in starched net gains distinction if the net is pleated. Sheer evening gowns are knockouts with voluminous skirts knife-pleated from waist to floor, with an additional pleated peplum flare on the fitted waist-length jacket.

Wide Belts and Princess Lines Are Now Emphasized

Two fashion specifications—wide belts and princess lines—are emphasized to a degree that makes it seem certain that there's to be no fooling about women keeping their waistlines well corseted and smooth.

In either case, it must be carefully and thoroughly digested that it is not a pulled-in or nipped waistline. Wide belts are now shaped so that they have a curved profile to coincide with the natural waistline, and thus putting a stop once and for all to the abrupt cut at top and bottom that has been the big drawback in wide belts in the past.

Turtle Neck Collar

The turtle neck collar is a feature of many sweaters and a novelty in the posing of this collar in a dark color on a light sweater, such as wine red on a creamy off-white.

Tucked Gloves

This season gloves entirely streaked with parallel lines of pin-tucking will be worn by the Parisienne with her pin-tucked kidskin shoes.

More About Origin of "O. K."

Ohio Writer Admits That His Great State Has Been Wrongly Credited With Giving Birth to This Most Popular Americanism.

Sad but true, out tumbles the bottom from one of the most romantic stories in our whole Ohioana.

For contrary to state-wide belief, the Whig rally in Urbana in the campaign of 1840 was not the occasion for the origin of O. K., probably our most popular Americanism. And as a result of evidence disproving this version, its origin is as definitely unknown and as open to speculation as ever, H. J. Carr writes, in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A unique expression, employed by every one from college presidents to illiterates (President Wilson used it on official documents) and understood the world over as denoting agreement or approval of something, O. K. has been traced back by authorities to various sources.

While the New Standard dictionary says it is the result of the misreading of O. R., "ordered recorded," Webster's New International tells us it probably comes from the Choctaw okeh. "It is so and not otherwise."

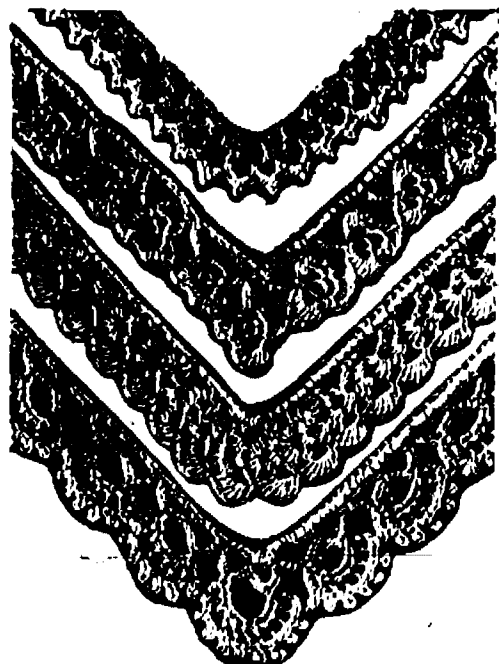

According to another version, it is a hangover from Gen. Andrew Jackson's use of these letters to indorse official papers as correct (Orl Kor rect)—which, as a stab at his illiteracy, was employed as a party cry in the campaign of 1832.

Moreover, while some attribute it to Josh Billings and fellow humorists, others contend that Jacob Astor voiced it to indicate the standing of traders about whom he was questioned. Another speculation attributes its origin to Old Keokuk, an Indian chief who is said to have signed treaties with the initials O. K.

In Colonial days the best tobacco and rum were imported from Aux Cayes, and from this fact Aux Cayes (pronounced O K), became a popular expression for excellence. Etc.

Crocheted Edges and Insertions

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

There are so many articles in the home that require an edging that needleworkers always want books on the subject so they can refer to them when looking for a dainty narrow edge for handkerchiefs or a wide edge for spreads, scarfs, etc. The edges shown here are narrow for handkerchiefs and give you an idea of the beauty in handsome edgings.

Book No. 26 on Crocheted Edgings and Insertions contains 72 patterns from which to select when an edging is wanted. A few motifs are also included for corners in napkins or tablecloths. The designs are old and new and illustrated in full size, with instructions.

era, etcetera—in fact, this expression that you say every day has been traced back to almost everything except as an incident in the fall of the Roman empire.

But the most popularly accepted version, because of its probability, has been the Urbana Whig rally of September 15, 1840, in which Ohio's Gen. W. H. Harrison was making a bid for the Presidency. The success of a political meeting in those days was judged by the attendance, the number of wagons drawn by the most horses, the number and blingness of banners and the catchy slogans painted on them.

For this tumultuous gathering, at which General Harrison spoke for two hours, twelve tables were set, each 200 feet long, from which the thousands and thousands of persons were stuffed with barbecued oxen, sheep, deer and other mammalia, and of course honest-to-godness hard cider, which was as necessary then as nickel cigs are now.

One enthusiastic Whig farmer, to make an ostentatious impression in the parade, rigged up a large wagon drawn by many horses with a platform to accommodate his neighbors. On a banner suspended over the platform was crudely painted the inscription: The People Is Oll Korrect.

Seizing upon the misspelling, Democratic papers exhibited it as evidence of the ignorance of the supporters of Harrison. Orators carried around handbills bearing the slogan and threw them out to the shouting hearers. Samuel Medary, famous for his zeal in attacking the Whigs in his paper, the Statesman, enjoyed himself devoting his columns to the farmer's illiteracy, which was supposed to be typical of everyone favoring Harrison.

This mounting ridicule, getting under their skin, continued to baffle all faithful Whigs—that is, all except one. He was Daniel Leffel, a typical tavern proprietor of the time, who thought it best to ward off the derision by making the most of the mistake. So he painted O K in large capital letters over the front door of his tavern in Springfield to convey the impression that his tavern was "Oll Korrect."

The "O. K." inn, as it was on the national highway, which led to the great West, was visited by numerous travelers; and this strange combination of letters lingered in their memory, especially since this hospitality, food and spirits were as "Oll Korrect" as advertised. And so these travelers began to jocularly recommend things as O. K.

Leffel's tavern was spared until 1901, when it was torn down to make room for the Ohio State Masonic home, into whose ownership the property had passed. The originally inscribed O K remained above the door for about 60 years until the bricks upon which it was painted were removed and scattered by the wrecking crew.

That the farmer of Champaign County displayed a banner bearing Oll Korrect and that these letters were painted on this wayside inn in Springfield are unquestionable facts.

But that the expression had its origin in this meeting is untrue, for the reason that Samuel Medary, who was supposed to have started the ball rolling in print, had used the expression in his paper several days before the rally took place.

Gentle Correction

Whistler, the famous artist, was noted for his bluntness of speech. At an exhibition a critic once said to him: "Your picture is not up to the mark; it is not good this time."

"You should not say it isn't good," quietly replied Whistler; "you should say you don't like it, and then, you know, you're perfectly safe."

However, it is the preparation of the foods which relegates them to the entire class, almost as much as the foods themselves. Sauces are of great importance, and fancy preparations of dishes. An unusual and yet a simple entree is sautéed fillet of fish with cabbage tartare.

Sole, flounder, or any filets, or even slices of fish such as halibut, salmon or cod, are lightly fried in a little butter or bacon fat. These are arranged around the outside of the platter or serving dish, which has in the center the cabbage tartare.

This is made by scooping out the heart of a young cabbage, chopping the heart fine, mixing it with tartare sauce and returning the cabbage preparation to the cabbage shell. This container is cut even around Prices received by farmers for main animal products during the month: dairy products were up 5 points; fruit up 2 points; grain down 1 point; chicken and eggs down 5 points. Hog prices averaged $6.87 per 100 pounds January 15 compared with $5.15 December 15 and $3.66 on January 15, 1934. The price upturn in the past month was more than ten times larger than the usual seasonal rise during this period.

Corn prices averaged 84.5 cents a bushel January 15, compared with 41.4 cents a bushel January 15, 1934. Wheat prices averaged 89.3 cents a bushel January 15, compared with 69.4 cents a bushel January 15, 1934. Cotton averaged 12.3 cents a pound January 15, compared with 10.9 cents a year ago. Butterfat prices averaged 30.5 cents a pound in mid-January, 1935, compared with 22.2 cents in mid-December and 16.1 cents January 15, 1934. Prices for fruit were up only 1 point during the year. The bureau announced that during 1934 prices received by farmers increased considerably more than prices paid.

ANOTHER LIVINGSTON

COUNTY MURDER

Stew nothing of the crime but had been in the car to ride with him from Salt Lake City. They were not in.

Frechette readily confessed to the crime and expressed no sorrow for the act. He blamed Brown. On the way back from Oxbow Lake they began to fight over Miss Grace Curran, a Kalamazoo laundry worker. She formerly went with Frechette but had also gone with Brown. One word led to another and finally Frechette shot Brown and placed his body in the trunk. This happened just east of Howell. Then he began an eight day journey with the body. He stopped in Howell, went to Kalamazoo and took the Grand rail on riding, went to avoid trouble and started for California. He stopped at Chicago, Salt Lake City and other places.

He also admitted two robberies on the trip to the coast. He planned to get rid of the body in California and to China.

Bob Frechette and Brown have criminal records in Michigan. Frechette was sentenced to 5 years from Oakland county in 1928 for assaulting Harry Anderson, airplane pilot, with whom he was learning to fly. He hit him over the head with a hammer, nearly wrecking the plane. He was examined for sanity but declared sane although Judge Doty, who sentenced him, stated he was on the border of insanity.

Brown was the central figure in the case known as the "Ten Cent Barn Scandal" at Howell last winter. He had a fur-buying station in the old ten cent barn there, where it was alleged wild parties were held.

Through an investigation conducted by George Sampson, Howell police chief, Brown, Louis Shank and Charles Simpson were arrested, charged with contributing to the delinquency of three minor girls. They were tried before Justice Yelland at Howell. Simpson, who was only 19, pleaded guilty and was probationed. Brown and Shank were convicted and sentenced to pay $100 fine and serve 90 days in jail. They served their sentence. The girls were expelled from school.

Rumors arose that prominent Howell citizens were implicated in the crime. To set these rumors straight, J. P. Sweney sat as a one man jury and examined a number of witnesses. His findings were that no one was implicated in the affair but the three named boys and the three girls.

The Brown family scouted the theory of the girl angle of the crime and the fact that the girl's skin was found in the trunk was able to repay Brown $200 for the loss of his car. According to Frechette's confession the murder took place on the north of Howell on the highway road, which would be the scene of the crime very close to Lemon's Corners. The Brown family are former Howell residents and are well known there. Mrs. Brown was formerly Mabel Townsend of Howell.

The sheriff and prosecutor were delayed somewhat in making their start for California Friday and did not leave until Sunday night. They had for $335 expense money. Clerk Bagman stated that he was without authority to draw up a voucher for that amount. The finance committee of the county board of supervisors was called into special meeting Saturday.

SCIENCE AND SENTIMENT

The work of the funeral director presents an unusual blending of science and sentiment. In his technical capacity he must be skillful and efficient; in his ministry to the bereaved he is called upon to show rare qualities of tact and sympathy. We have always endeavored to keep fully abreast of technical advancement, without sacrificing the personal characteristics which are equally important.
