DEXTER WOMAN ROBBED

Mrs. Russell Livermore was held up and robbed on the Dexter-Pinckney road about 10:30 P. M. last Friday night. She had attended the regular meeting of the Pinckney Eastern Star Chapter and started to drive to her home in Dexter at about 10:15 P. M. As she reached Newport Bathing Beach a Model A Ford roadster suddenly drove out of the parking grounds there in front of her, completely blocking the road. When she stopped her car, two men jumped out of the roadster. One flashed an electric flashlight in her face and the other grabbed her purse. They then departed in their car. Mrs. Livermore continued to Dexter where she gave the alarm. On account of the blinding light flashed in her face she was unable to give much of a description of the two robbers. Sheriff's officers came out from Ann Arbor and found the tire tracks of the robber's car but no other clues. About $4.00 was contained in the stolen purse which was later found empty on the road about one-half mile from the scene of the robbery.

Frechette Trial Is Set For March 18

Clarence Frechette was arraigned before Judge Collins in the circuit court at Howell Monday morning, charged with the murder of Robert Brown in the famous trunk murder case. He pled not guilty and was bound over for trial, without bail.

The trial date was set for March 18. Jay P. Sweeney, his attorney, made two motions for dismissal, one on grounds that Justice Yelland did not determine the crime and also on the grounds that no proof of the crime had been offered. These were similar to the motions made at the examination. Both were denied by the judge.

The jury men from this district, some of whom will undoubtedly be drawn on the jury are Bert Reason, John Hornshaw, Margaret Dunning, James Gibney, Ella Ellsworth and Frank Fisk.

Philathea Notes

This being the week of the class party at the home of Mrs. Herman Vander, and on the same Wednesday the Missionary meeting at Clinton, the ladies will be finding plenty of outlets for their activities.

It will be extremely helpful if many of our Philatheas can take advantage of the Teacher-Training class on Thursday nights. They are just about to enter on the study of the New Testament, and are fortunate in having Rev. Zuse as the leader.

Next Sunday we are to continue the lessons on Peter, with the subject, "The Power of United Prayer," Acts 12:5-17.

In the recent passing of Mrs. Graham our class loses one of its earlier loved members and our sympathy is extended to the family and friends.

AN APPEAL

Barred from the ballot at the primaries by a minor legal technicality I am punning on stickers as an independent Republican candidate for County Commissioner of Schools at the regular election, April 1. I must have the help of volunteer workers to hand my cards, with stickers attached, to the voters on election day, to elect me in opposition to the political ring. Former graduates, and any other persons who believe in clean politics, and in maintaining government by the people and not by a political ring, are invited. Will any such please see or write to H. D. Douglass, Fowlerville, Michigan?—Adv.

NOTICE

The Detroit Edison Co. will demonstrate their new cooker at the Cong'l church parlors Thursday at 2 o'clock. The demonstrator will cook a complete dinner and serve it to the ladies present. Nothing to sell and the dinner is free. All ladies of the community invited.

Current Comment

Although he made no campaign at all, Judge Lee Carr of Lansing, in the field of four candidates in the primaries in Ingham county last week for the nomination for circuit judge. The Lansing State Journal says the following to say about him:

Judge Carr has come through handsomely. Never at any time has there been the least question of his attaining to a nomination. Two years ago, or such a matter, there were those who did a great deal of hand shaking over Judge Carr because they considered him not sufficiently political in his attitude and habits to get out after the vote. Now we see that fear all unfounded. Some work brought the vote to him. The vote of Judge Carr for solid legal attainment and a fundamental grasp of the affairs in the Ingham circuit is most strongly in the ascendancy.

Judge Carr is well known to Pinckney people, being the son of the late Darwin Carr who lived about twenty miles west of town. He was graduated from the Pinckney high school in the class of 1900. He also graduated from the Michigan State Normal and taught school for a number of years before studying law.

That the Communist movement is taken very seriously by many people, except possibly the Boston papers [Detroit Free Press and the D. A. R.] was evident when a motion picture was introduced by E. P. Sweeney of Detroit at the request of the D. A. R. It is said it would have been the hallo! "any political party that advocates communism, socialism or any other form of international socialism, and which seeks to accomplish its purpose of force and violence by legislation of any other means." Communism is defined in any "time" "contrary to our government of the present form of the sovereignty of the United States."

The bill would forbid the circulation of every such tract, whether in speech or the printed word, and would require the withdrawal of State aid from any educational institution in which the ban was violated. Offenders would be subject to a fine of $5,000 and imprisonment for a year.

The legislators created the bill with laughter and later added a provision providing for the appointment of a committee of 51 Republicans and 49 Democrats to go to Russia to study Communism in that country. The entire membership of the House of Representatives.

Although the statement that unemployment is still increasing and recovery from the depression has not been made, this is not borne out by evidence. The United States Chamber of Commerce reports that in the first three months of 1934, 2.5 percent above the low point of 1932, and that 1,200,000 more were employed were on the pay roll of manufacturing plants than was the case two years ago. The normal recession is expected in January. It did not appear, and was not expected to appear, and was not expected to appear at a greater volume than in January since 1931, and the electric power was steadily climbing. Whether our recovery is coming because of or in spite of the administration's efforts may still be a moot point. The important fact is that it does, definitely, seem to be coming.

Strong Appeal in Braided Rag Rug

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Braided rugs appeal to many rug makers because the work is simple and requires no tools. They, however, are not as durable as the crocheted rug, owing to the fact that the braided strands are sewed together, and for this reason we advise to sew with a strong waxed thread.

The above "Pin Wheel" rug measures 35 inches and requires about 4 pounds of cotton rag rug material. The center section has a black background and the 3 section design is white. The outer circle and inner center are of hit-and-miss mixed colors.

Cut strips 1 1/2 inches wide. Fold edges under and then fold again to make a strip about one-half inch wide. Use three strips in braiding.

Start in the center and sew 8 rows of braid around, keeping work flat. Start next row on opposite side of where the previous row ended. Work around, changing colors for 9 rows, as illustrated. To change color sew strips of new color desired to the ones in use. Start again at different place for 8 outside rows, then sew on the last row separately. This rug has 28 rows.

If you are interested in making rag rugs, send 15c to our Rug Department for book No. 25, which contains 26 rugs in braiding and crocheting. Instructions are given with each rug, also directions for braiding and crocheting rugs and how to prepare your rugs into strips to get the best results.

FITTING NO OBJECT

An old negro recently approached a relief worker and asked for clothing. He particularly wanted a pair of pants.

"What size do you wear?" he was asked.

"A 38."

"I'm afraid I don't have your size," she informed him. "The smallest I have is a size 50."

"Well, that's all right. You see, Miss, we ain't so much for fittin' as for hidin'."

Once Was Enough

Two women were waiting for a bus, which was nearly full when it came along.

"But surely you wouldn't separate mother and daughter?"

"I did once," replied the conductor, as he rang the bell, "but never again."—London Tit-Bits.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment, from which, by McNamara's orders, she is removed to the chief's home. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heirless to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees Lanny finds her in her apartment, sound asleep. Several days later her partially restored memory leads her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France.

"We've been like two pups, chasing our tails," Angellotti complained when they met at their car. "The chief's up to his old tricks, babying a convict with the con, and that's the bird Doctor Burt is calling to treat."

"The girl's been there, just the same, Amadeo, my boy. There was a lipstick on the bureau and that's something old lady McNamara don't use. And I found a roll of adhesive, the heel of a roll of bandage and a soiled sheet with some bloodstains on it in the dirty clothes-basket in the bathroom."

Angellotti was convinced. "Where did she go?"

"She might have doubled back to that old nurse's house again, but I doubt that, because she knows that's risky."

"Well, let's give Miss Lanning's house a prow, anyhow."

Flynn was one of those hearty fellows who will try anything twice, so they went immediately to Lanny's house. The lights in front were out when they arrived, so Flynn pussy-footed around to the rear of the cottage to see if any lights were lighted there. Finding none, he listened for possible voices. Hearing none, he cautiously lifted the lid of Lanny's garbage can and bent his flashlight on it. He was rewarded for his courage by finding a stained bandage with clipped adhesive tape clinging to it. This tell-tale evidence he carried around to Angellotti; they entered their car, drove a block and inspected the clue in the light of the dash lamp. Then they silently shook hands.

"Nothing is ever lost if you know where it is," Flynn rejoiced. "I'm going to get my missus a winter coat with my half of the reward. We'll bone the district attorney for a search warrant tomorrow, and tomorrow night when the old lady gets home, we'll make the pinch."

"Shall we pinch her as an accessory?"

"Amadeo, my boy, unless you're looking hard for something, it's a mistake to see too much or know too much. This Lanning woman is a friend of the chief's. As far as the public ever need know we picked the girl up on the street."

Angellotti nodded his acquiescence; they got the search warrant on the strength of that soiled bandage, and at nine o'clock that night arrived in their car. Flynn went to the back door and posted himself there; and Angellotti rang the front doorbell. A light was switched on in the hall presently, and Lanny, dressed for the street, opened the door six inches. Angellotti had his foot in it in a flash.

"Detective Sergeant Angellotti of the central station, Miss Lanning. I have here a search warrant, giving me legal right to search your house and secure the person of Nance Belden, an escaped convict from San Quentin penitentiary. Read it an' weep!"

"You take your big flat foot out of my door and stay outside until I've read this purported search warrant or I'll shoot your foot off," Lanny informed him coldly. Angellotti withdrew his foot promptly. Lanny closed the door, and he could see her faintly through the curtained glass, reading.

"Come in," she invited—and at that moment the electric light bulb tossed out the upper window by Nance exploded with a loud report. "What's that?" Angellotti cried, instantly alert. A still louder explosion reverberated in the back yard; then the voice of Flynn crying: "Hey, stop, or I'll shoot."

"Tried slippin' her out the back door, eh?" Angellotti exclaimed, and dashed through the house, with Lanny at his heels. As he went out the kitchen door, Lanny started and bolted it behind him, and then, even as Dan McNamara had predicted, nature took her course. Nance dropped the remainder of the bombs and came dashing down the stairs. "Good-by, Lanny, darling," she cried happily. "We'll meet again." Lanny switched on the hall light, and Nance was through the front door and gone. Across the street two coupes stood at the curb, the motors of both turning over slowly.

Alternately the girl's finger was pointed at each car. "My mother—told-me-to—take—this—one," she murmured, and when, through the aid of this childhood formula, she had made her decision, she leaped into the Coupe of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti and went rapidly away. Lanny, watching her from the darkened doorway, saw that she had taken the wrong car, but was afraid to cry out and warn her. So she did the next best thing. She locked her front door behind her, climbed into the other car and drove down town to a late motion picture show. She carried the search warrant with her and while enjoying the show tore it into little bits.

Of the weeping, the groaning, the burning sensations in the eyelids, the bewilderment, the groping, vomiting, cursing and despair of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti, nothing need be said. Suffice that Angellotti felt his way out of the gassed area and about two minutes after Lanny's departure, stationed himself on her front steps, while the valiant Flynn, dying a thousand deaths, struck manfully at his post, leaning up against the kitchen door, enduring for duty's sake. Convinced they had Nance Belden cornered, they waited for the night wind to dissipate the gas. Angellotti ceased to weep about half an hour after escaping from the gassed area, but continued to gaze for an hour. About ten-thirty he was able to see, so he rang Lanny's bell repeatedly, but received no answer. Then he noticed that their car was missing, so he summoned the martyred Flynn around front and told him the worst.

"Don't speak to me," Flynn commanded passionately. "I'm dead. Hunt up an all-night drug store an' phone for a taxi."

"This," Angellotti hissed, "is Dan McNamara's work. Where would they get the bombs if he didn't swipe 'em out of the police arsenal?"

"What's That?" Angellotti Cried, Instantly Alert.

Flynn commenced to sob as he considered the barren fruits of his enormous sacrifice.

"Amadeo, swear to me, by our common faith, that, come what will, blow high, blow low, come sickness or sorrow, happiness or health, you'll never lay off this job until we've landed that—that huzzy."

"Right! I swear," Angellotti's voice trembled with the sincerity of his purpose.

The respective wives of the worthy pair telephoned down to the chief of the detectives next morning and informed him that their husbands were confined to bed with influenza. It might not be amiss, also, to state that Lanny came home in a taxi about twelve-thirty, and finding the front door free of Angellotti, and the neighborhood ozone quite restored to normalcy, retired to her bed and passed almost at once into dreamless and untroubled sleep.

It was not a police car in which Nance had escaped, but the private vehicle of Detective Sergeant Flynn, and its loss troubled him until the car was found, abandoned, out in the Mission, about twenty-four hours later. A glance at the speedometer comforted Flynn. The car had been driven six miles. In company with Angellotti (both now happily recovered from their terrible experience) he drove in the same car from Lanny's house, via the most direct route, to the point where a patrolman had picked up the car, thence via the route followed by the patrolman when he came off duty and drove the car to the central station and reported it. The mileage was six and two-tenths miles!

"She's holed up within a block or two of where she left the car," Flynn decided.

"Not such a cold trail, after all," Angellotti exclaimed. "We'll just have to patrol the neighborhood in our off moments. I'm sure the girl doesn't know she swiped your car, and that she gave us a clue to follow her."

"If crooks didn't make mistakes and give us the breaks, my boy, you and I wouldn't be where we are," Flynn reminded him. "I think it might be a good idea to interview the druggist in the neighborhood and see if she's been in to buy a new lipstick."

ters claiming their attention, forced to abandon the search.

Ian McNamara was much diligent to make inquiries of the district attorney who had the search warrant, but when that Flynn and Angellotti were with flu he called up Stephen's office, and received a report. "You say the car my dicks arrived at?" "That's terrible. A car of the car must have been cast to all outlying police and rounding county stations immediately by Flynn and Angellotti, and Nance be picked up somewhere down town."

"We've done our damndest, replied cheerfully. "Angels came more. I borrowed the car you front. It's in a garage. I'll see the claim check."

For a week, the chief waited news of Nance Belden, but came through beyond some around the central station that had been driven but three miles then abandoned—for which the Almighty was still on the side the worthy fellow was grateful.

So Nance was still in the city McNamara's mind worked so automatically he did not even have to tell that, undoubtedly, she had taken tuary within a short distance spot where she had abandoned car, nor did he have to remind self that Flynn and Angellotti come to the same conclusion. No difficulty in ascertaining where the car had been recovered.

Folsom street and Sixteenth he reflected. "Residential—flats and cheap apartment cheap rooming houses and men's hotels. No, she wouldn't be one of those. Not what she is—class—and she has two hundred dollars in her possession. She's with a friend. What friend? Ella Cates, of course."

He had already secured Ella's address from the banker in San Francisco. However, he realized it would be wise to call upon her and run of having Flynn or Angellotti rummaging Ella Cates' house. The thing, therefore, was to cast a job in another part of the city to see that both detectives were out of it. If he sent them out of the city for a day or two they might have some other purpose and have some other friend of theirs shadow him in their absence.

While he was considering what he could dispose of them, the president of the Security Trust company Jose rang up.

"Miss Penelope Gatlin has just in the bank, Chief," he told McNamara. "She has purchased a letter of credit for ten thousand dollars and has drawn in cash the remainder of the funds on deposit to the credit checking account, amounting to hundred dollars."

"Is she in the bank now?"

"Yes."

"Have one of your clerks follow her. Give him some expense money responsible for its repayment when you get his report please phone me."

At three-thirty the banker telephoned again. "She purchased a ticket for San Francisco on one of the buses here at three-fifteen. She spent hours shopping."

The buses, McNamara knew, ran the city via Mission street, the bus was at Fifth and Mission street. Cates lived on Howard street, Fifteenth and Sixteenth. The street runs between Mission and Sixteenth and Flynn's car had been abandoned at Sixteenth and Nance was smart. She had her car a block from Ella Cates' house. McNamara reasoned that the incoming bus would drop the girl at Sixteenth and Mission streets. He stopped—and she would then her way to the Cates woman's house.

He glanced at his watch. It was an hour and a half to intercept for that hour and a half he must have Flynn and Angellotti in another section of the city. To his annoyance he discovered they were out on a detail, so he decided he would have to risk it, called a taxi and drove to Ella Cates' address. He discovered it to be a cheap wooden apartment house, but the directory in the vestibule gave him no information as to which apartment Ella Cates lived in, so he rang the landlady's bell and the door opened to admit him. To his inquiry regarding Mrs. Cates, he was informed that she had moved to parts unknown a week before, nor could his informant give him any clue to aid him in discovering her.

As he came out of the apartment house he glanced warily around and was amused to observe Detective Angellotti leaning against a cigar stand across the street. He was certain the detective had recognized him, for Angellotti immediately turned his back. The chief walked up to Mission street, boarded a street car and was at the bus terminus two minutes before the bus on which Nance had left San Jose rolled in. But Nance was not among the passengers that alighted.

Ancient Festival Goes On At Aix en Provence, France, was instituted the first Roman garrison in Gaul. The church of Monte Sante Victoire perpetuates a victory of Marius. Every April, 24 there is a procession from Bauvenargues to the mountain to light a bonfire. This, the festival of Marius, is one of the oldest still existing.

Crisis, everywhere crisis, whether it be fish or amphibian, reptile or mammal. With man it is the same—one of the most unstable creatures ever evolved. In a state of something like fermentation, he has always been in a critical turmoil. Unlike the ant or the bee, he is not highly specialized. If he ever does settle down, his history will be like that of most social creatures—a repetition over hundreds of millions of years of the same biological events and facts. He will cease to evolve.

CONSTIPATION Can be Helped!

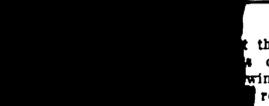

(Use what Doctors do)

Why do the bowels usually move regularly and thoroughly, long after a physician has given you treatment for constipation?

Because the doctor gives a liquid laxative that can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Your druggist has it; ask for—

TIME SALES OF CARS SHOWING IMPROVEMENT

Percentage of time or contract sales of passenger automobiles throughout the state, is rapidly creeping up on the cash sales, records of the Department of State show. Contrary to the general belief, when the percentage of time sales shows a gain, more cars are being sold, record show. This is because, in times of stress, most of the cars sold are to those able to pay cash; as men return to work, they buy cars, generally on a contract basis, automobile dealers' experience shows.

In some areas of the state, cash sales showing gains in percentage, are sometimes explained by the fact that some banks are beginning to handle automobile loans for preferred risks without taking chattel mortgages, which transactions are reflected as cash sales, auto dealers point out. Selection of 100 sales of new cars throughout the state for each of the past four months, indicates that time sales have composed from 44 to 50 percent of the total volume of this trade.

With the upholding by the state supreme court, of the constitutionality of the state's chain store tax act of 1933, intensive plans for collection of this tax from firms liable for it, which have neither paid their tax nor formally protested it by court action, are on foot. Information as to the firms in this classification will be secured by inspection of the records of the board of tax administration, which have the collection of the sales tax. Claims totaling $16,435 for chain store taxes unpaid for 1933 and 1934 have already been placed in the hands of the attorney general for collection of the claims having been based on sales tax reports of chain store firms not parties to the litigation, from which no payments have been received. Indications are that the annual revenue from this act will be between $850,000 and $900,000, when enforcement is perfected.

Automobile drivers of the state continuing to be placed under the financial responsibility act, which requires mandatory revocation of a driver's license for three years, unless financial responsibility to meet damage claims up to $11,000, is proven by deposit of cash, securities or insurance policies. One of the most interesting trends developed thus far is that of the some 5,000 drivers who have run afoul of the act, about 4,000 are drunk drivers, who generally have their insurance cancelled as the result of their conviction. These drivers are often unable to get further insurance, and relatively few of them can show financial responsibility in any other form.

HOMEMAKER'S CORNER

This is the time of year when woodwork, and furniture need a grimy look of winter taken off. Soap and water is not effective in removing the greasy film, but the home economics extension home management specialists of Michigan State College suggest a cleaning solution which will clean dirt and minimize the amount of muscular effort necessary.

The solution, which is made of one cup sal soda, one cup ammonia, one cup vinegar, and one gallon of water can be used for cleaning oil paint on enamel walls, varnished, or enamel woodwork, and furniture. Like all effective cleaners, it must be used carefully to avoid damaging the surface.

Cleaning any enameled surface repeatedly with a strong solution will remove the gloss. A simple method of preventing the dulling of the surface is suggested. Heat one-fourth cup powdered glue until melted. Add one cup of the solution to one quart of warm water. Wash the woodwork with this solution and do not rinse when it is dry. It leaves a slight film of glue on the surface which gives a gloss. When the woodwork or wall is dirty again, wash off the first film of glue with another solution of glue. This will very easily remove the dirt which has collected on the surface and leaves a fresh film. This is also satisfactorily used on varnished woodwork.

Wax sometimes proves as satisfactory as furniture polish in polishing the furniture. Wax on the window sills will also make them easier to dust. It does prevent the varnish from drying out so it is a real protection for it.

A home-prepared wall paper cleaner which will give good results may be made from two cups sifted flour, one cup warm water, two tablespoons of kerosene, four tablespoons ammonia, and two tablespoons salt. Cook as long as it can be stirred, then cool and work into balls with the hand. This amount will clean a small bedroom.

A larger room will require twice the recipe. Do not use the cleaner until it becomes black and too laden with dust and soil because the soil is thus rubbed back into the paper and may ruin it.

Another method of cleaning wallpaper which is reported as satisfactory is soaking a number of cloths about three by four feet in kerosene for five or six hours. The cloths are then allowed to dry 24 hours or until they are no longer greasy. One advantage of this method is that it is not as messy as other cleaners, and if used carefully, there is no danger of breaking. These cloths should not be allowed to lay around for any length of time on account of danger of spontaneous combustion.

Strong Appeal in Braided Rag Rug

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Braided rugs appeal to many rug makers because the work is simple and requires no tools. They, however, are not as durable as the crocheted rug, owing to the fact that the braided strands are sewed together, and for this reason we advise to sew with a strong waxed thread.

The above "Pin Wheel" rug measures 35 inches and requires about 4 pounds of cotton rag rug material. The center section has a black background and the 3 section design is white. The outer circle and inner center are of hit-and-miss mixed colors.

Cut strips 1 1/2 inches wide. Fold edges under and then fold again to make a strip about one-half inch wide. Use three strips in braiding.

Start in the center and sew 3 rows of braid around, keeping work flat. Start next row on opposite side of where the previous row ended. Work around, changing colors for 9 rows, as illustrated. To change color sew strips of new color desired to the ones in use. Start again at different place for 8 outside rows, then sew on the last row separately. This rug has 28 rows.

If you are interested in making rag rugs, send 15c to our Rug Department for book No. 25, which contains 38 rugs in braiding and crochet. Instructions are given with each rug, also directions for braiding and crocheting rugs and how to prepare your rags into strips to get the best results.

FITTING NO OBJECT

An old negro recently approached a relief worker and asked for clothing. He particularly wanted a pair of pants.

"What size do you wear?" he was asked.

"A 38."

"I'm afraid I don't have your size," she informed him. "The smallest I have is a size 50."

"Well, that's all right. You see, Miss, we ain't so much for fittin' as for hidin'."

Once Was Enough

Two women were waiting for a bus, which was nearly full when it came along.

"Room for one inside and one on top," said the conductor.

"But surely you wouldn't separate mother and daughter."

"I did once," replied the conductor, as he rang the bell, "but never again."—London Tit-Bits.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Martin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a divorcee game a girl strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Martin splits the child to Elmer. Martin will be Penelope's father, and she is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends the story for many years. In San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young playwright, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Beiden, a girl with a dual personality for whom her "double" lives as in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, also won over Nance's former lover, playwright Elmer Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment from which, by McNamara's orders, she is removed to the chief's home. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $10,000. Fearful of McNamara in his official capacity, Nance flees Lanny Burt's in her apartment, sound asleep. Several days later her partially restored memory leads her to tell Lanny of her wretched father, Theodore Gatin, and of her childhood in France.

"We've been like two pups, chasing our tails," Angelotti complained when they met at their car. "The chief's up to his old tricks, babying a convict with the con, and that's the bird Doctor Burt is calling to treat."

"The girl's been there, just the same, Amadeo, my boy. There was a lipstick on the bureau and that's something old lady McNamara don't use. And I found a roll of adhesive, the heel of a roll of bandage and a soiled sheet with some bloodstains on it in the dirty clothes basket in the bathroom."

Angelotti was convinced. "Where did she go?"

"She might have doubled back to that old nurse's house again, but I doubt that, because she knows that's risky."

"Well, let's give Miss Lanning's house a prow, anyhow."

Flynn was one of those hearty fellows who will try anything twice, so they went immediately to Lanny's house. The lights in front were out when they arrived, so Flynn pussy-footed around to the rear of the cottage to see if any lights were lighted there. Finding none, he listened for possible voices. Hearing none, he cautiously lifted the lid of Lanny's garbage can and bent his flashlight on it. He was rewarded for his courage by finding a small bandage with clipped adhesive tape clinging to it. This tentative evidence he carried around to Angelotti; they entered their car, drove a block and inspected the clue in the light of the dash lamp. Then they silently shook hands.

"Nothing is ever lost if you know where it is," Flynn rejoiced. "I'm going to get my missus a winter coat with my half of the reward. We'll bone the district attorney for a search warrant tomorrow, and tomorrow night when the old lady gets home, we'll make the pinch."

"Shall we pinch her as an accessory?"

"Amadeo, my boy, unless you're looking hard for something, it's a mistake to see too much or know too much. This Lanning woman is a friend of the chief's. As far as the public ever need know we picked the girl up on the street."

Angelotti nodded his acquiescence; they got the search warrant on the strength of that soiled bandage, and at nine o'clock that night arrived in their car. Flynn went to the back door and posted himself there; and Angelotti rang the front doorbell. A light was switched on in the hall presently, and Lanny, dressed for the street, opened the door six inches. Angelotti had his foot in it in a dash.

"Detective Sergeant Angelotti of the central station, Miss Lanning. I have here a search warrant, giving me legal right to search your house and secure the person of Nance Beiden, an escaped convict from San Quentin penitentiary. Read it an' weep!"

"You take your big fat foot out of my door and stay outside until I've read this purported search warrant or I'll shoot your foot off," Lanny informed him coldly. Angelotti withdrew his foot promptly, Lanny closed the door, and he could see her faintly through the curtained glass, reading.

"Come in," she invited—and at that moment the electric light bulb possessed out the upper window by Nance exploded with a loud report. "What's that?" Angelotti cried, instantly alert. A still louder explosion reverberated in the back yard; then the voice of Flynn crying: "Hey, stop, or I'll shoot."

"Tried slippin' her out the back door, eh?" Angelotti exclaimed, and dashed through the house, with Lanny at his heels. As he went out the kitchen door, Lanny slammed and bolted it behind him, and then, even as Dan McNamara had predicted, nature took her course. Nance dropped the remainder of the bombs and came dashing down the stairs, "wood-by, Lanny, darling," she cried happily. "We'll meet again," Lanny switched off the hall light, and Nance was through the front door and gone. Across the street two coupes stood at the curb, the motors of both turning over slowly.

Alternately the girl's finger was pointed at each car. "My mother—said—me—to—take—this—one," she murmured, and when, through the air of this childhood formula, she had made her decision, she leaped into the coupe of Messrs. Flynn and Angelotti and went rapidly away. Lanny, watching her from the darkened doorway, saw that she had taken the wrong car, but was afraid to cry out and warn her. So she did the next best thing. She locked her front door behind her, climbed into the other car and drove down town to a late motion picture show. She carried the search warrant with her and while enjoying the show tore it into little bits.

Of the weeping, the groaning, the burning sensations in the eyelids, the howling, the groping, vomiting, cursing and despair of Messrs. Flynn and Angelotti nothing need be said. Suffice that Angelotti, left by way out of the clogged area and about two minutes after Lanny's departure, stationed himself on her front steps, while the valiant Flynn, dying a thousand deaths, struck manfully at his post, leaning up against the kitchen door, enduring for duty's sake. Convinced they had Nance Beiden cornered, they waited for the night wind to dissipate the gas. Angelotti ceased to weep about half an hour after escaping from the clogged area, but continued to gaze for an hour. About ten-thirty he was able to see, so he rang Lanny's bell repeatedly, but received no answer. Then he noticed that their car was missing, so he summoned the martyred Flynn around front and told him the worst.

"Don't speak to me," Flynn exclaimed passionately. "I'm dead! Hunt up an all-night drug store and phone for a taxi."

"This," Angelotti hissed, "is Dan McNamara's work. Where would they get the bombs if he didn't swipe 'em out of the police arsenal?"

Flynn commenced to sob as he considered the barren fruits of his enormous sacrifice.

"Amadeo, swear to me, by our common faith, that, come what will, blow high, blow low, come sickness or sorrow, happiness or health, you'll never lay off this job until we've landed that—that huzzy."

"Right! I swear," Angelotti's voice trembled with the sincerity of his purpose.

The respective wives of the worthy pair telephoned down to the chief of the detectives next morning and informed him that their husbands were confined to bed with influenza. It might not be amiss, also, to state that Lanny came home in a taxi about twelve-thirty, and finding the front door free of Angelotti, and the neighborhood ozone quite restored to normalcy, retired to her bed and passed almost at once into dreamless and untroubled sleep.

It was not a police car in which Nance had escaped, but the private vehicle of Detective Sergeant Flynn, and its loss troubled him until the car was found abandoned, out in the Mission, about twenty-four hours later. A glance at the speedometer comforted Flynn. The car had been driven six miles. In company with Angelotti (who now happily recovered from their terrible experience) he drove in the same direct route to the point where a patrolman had picked up the car; thence via the route followed by the patrolman when he came off duty and drove the car to the central station and reported it. The mileage was six and two-tenths miles.

"She's holed up within a block or two of where she left the car," Flynn decided.

"Not such a cold trail, after all," Angelotti exclaimed. "We'll just have to patrol the neighborhood in burr of moments. I'm sure the girl doesn't know she swiped your car, and that she gave us a clue to follow her."

"If crooks didn't make mistakes and give us the breaks, my boy, you and I wouldn't be where we are," Flynn reminded him. "I think it might be a good idea to interview the druggist in the neighborhood and see if she's been in to buy a new lipstick."

A round of the neighboring drug stores, however, proved barren of a new lead, and as they had other matters claiming their attention, they were forced to abandon the search.

Dan McNamara was much obliged to make inquiries of the district attorney who had the search warrant, but when that Flynn and Angelotti were with him he called up Lanny in Stephen's office, and received Lanny's report. "You say the car was my dress armoire?"

"That's terrible. The car must have been cast to all outgoing police and surrounding country stations, by Flynn and Angelotti, and Nance picked up somewhere down town."

"We've done our damndest, replied obediently. "Angels can move. I borrowed the car out front. It's in a garage. It's the claim check."

For a week, the chief waited for Nance Beiden, but she came through beyond some around the central station that had been driven but three miles and abandoned—for which the Amnistry was still on the worthy fellow was grateful.

So Nance was still in the city. Nance's mind worked so actively she did not even have to tell that, unobtrusively, she had this many within a short distance spot where she had abandoned her car, nor did he have to confess that Flynn and Angelotti came to the same conclusion, no difficulty in ascertaining where the car had been recovered.

"Folsom street and Sixteenth he reflected. "Residential—flats and cheap apartment—cheap rooming houses and men's hotels. No, she wouldn't be there. Not what she is—class—and she has two hundred dollars in her possession. She's with a friend. What friend? Ella Cates, of course."

He had already secured Ella's address from the banker in the neighborhood or seeing Ella Cates' house. The thing, therefore, was to cast a job in another part of the city. If he sent them out for a day or two they might have his purpose and have some other friend of theirs shadow him their absence.

While he was considering he could dispose of them, the partner of the Security Trust company Jose rang up.

"Miss Penelope Gatin has been in the bank, Chief," he said. "She has purchased a letter of credit for ten thousand dollars and withdrawn in cash the remainder of funds on deposit to the credit checking account, amounting to hundred dollars."

"Is she in the bank now?"

"Yes."

"Have one of your clerks give him some expense money responsible for its repayment when you get his report please phone me."

At three-thirty the banker telephoned again. "She purchased a ticket for San Francisco on one of the buses here at three-fifteen. She spent hours shopping."

The buses, McNamara knew, ran the city via Mission street, the bus was at Fifth and Mission street. Cates lived on Howard street, Fifteenth and Sixteenth. Street runs between Mission street and Flynn's car had been abandoned at Sixteenth and Nance was smart. She had car a block from Ella Cates' house, walked there, McNamara was in a hurry to get to the bus stop—and she would the her way to the Cates woman's house.

He glanced at his watch. An hour and a half to inner for that hour and a half he must have Flynn and Angelotti in another section of the city. To his amazement he discovered they were out on a detail, so he decided he would have to risk it, called a taxi and drove to Ella Cates' address. He discovered it to be a cheap wooden apartment house, but the discovery in the neighborhood gave him no information as to which apartment Ella Cates lived in, so he rang the family's bell and the door opened to admit him. To his inquiry regarding Mrs. Cates, he was informed that she had moved to parts unknown a week before, nor could his informant give him any clue to aid him in discovering her.

As he came out of the apartment house he glanced warily around and was amused to observe Detective Angelotti leaning against a sign stand across the street. He was certain the detective had recognized him, but Angelotti immediately turned his back. The chief walked up to Mission street, boarded a street car and was at the bus terminus two minutes before the bus on which Nance had left San Jose rolled in. But Nance was not among the passengers that alighted.

In the Star's dressing room LIGHTS circle the mirror!

OVER the theater star's dressing table there is a magic circle of light that mercilessly reveals every flaw in make-up. The amount of light used is eloquent testimony to the need of plenty of light for a critical seeing task such as this. Your vanity table, too, requires a definite amount of light—just as there is a definite amount needed for reading, writing, sewing and other visual tasks. You can apply four simple rules to your home lighting that will assure good general quality of illumination throughout the house: (1) Use SHADES on all lamp bulbs to prevent GLARE. (2) Use shades with light-colored linings to get the most light. Wide shades, open at the top, are best. (3) Use correct-size lamp bulbs—"WATTS". In table and floor lamps with 3 sockets, use 40 watts in each socket; two sockets, 60 watts; one socket, 100 watts. (4) Have at least one-tenth as much light in the rest of the room as you have on your book, newspaper, sewing, etc.

JUDGE COLLINS EXTENDS MORATORIUM
Judge Joseph H. Collins in circuit court here Wednesday gave an order which was entered into the court records extending all injunctions under the moratorium act until March 1, 1937, therefore all foreclosures made under the moratorium act of 1937 will be automatically extended for two years.
This applies to all injunctions or orders whether filed or not, the judge said. This order, it is said, was necessary because the legislature failed in passing the 1935 act to put in a saving clause. This order, however, is contingent on the compliance of the law. The rental fixed by the court must continue to be paid, and in which the county clerk deducts the taxes, but rent and mortgage, and the balance over to the holder of the mortgage.

Sec. 4. In all cases of the vote or contested election for any state office, except a member of the legislature, any recount or other determination thereof may be conducted by the board of state canvassers under the laws as the legislature may prescribe. The section of the Constitution which would have to be amended or re-enacted in the event of the adoption of this proposed amendment is as follows:
Sec. 4. In case two or more persons have an equal and the highest number of votes for any office, as canvassed by the board of state canvassers, the legislature in joint convention shall choose one of said persons to fill such office. When the determination of the board of state canvassers is contested the legislature in joint convention shall decide which person is elected.
Under the present Constitution, recounts in contests for state offices are conducted by the legislature. This amendment, if adopted, will permit the board of state canvassers to conduct any recount in all cases of the vote or contested election for any state office, except a member of the legislature.

The Homes of a Michigan Citizen

Let us examine him on several points that distinguish a good citizen from a bad one:
Does he pay his taxes? ... During the past ten years he has paid a total of $32,332,175.31 taxes into State and Federal funds. Last year he paid $2,670,373 to Michigan.
Is his home an eyesore? ... He has 356 homes distributed over the great State of Michigan. Many of these he built himself and owns—substantial buildings in good taste, each an asset to the neighborhood and standing on grounds that he always keeps neat. Where less space is required, he rents a home. Large or small, it is always adequate to the needs of the community it serves.
What sort of customer is he? ... Each year he buys huge quantities of Michigan products—copper and furniture, poles, automobiles, iron, stone, labor.
How does he treat his employees? ... With fairness and consideration. There are seventy-three hundred of them, both men and women, and they all say that he is a good man to work for. He pays them $12,000,000 in wages annually; this month he is paying them one million dollars, most of which will be spent and circulated throughout Michigan.
What does this Michigan citizen supply to his community? ... Telephone service. And in supplying that service, it is his aim that the improvements of the past shall continue; that the service shall be rendered with efficiency, economy and courtesy; that always there shall be available for his fellow-citizens of Michigan a telephone service that is as fine as any in the world.
