Lays Out Work for Congress

Washington, — President Roosevelt has submitted to congress a list of the legislation he expects to have passed during the present session. The list is divided into two categories: "must" and "desirable." If congress passes only the list of "must" legislation and passes over the other group of bills which the President considers desirable, it is made to appear that the membership of the house and senate is due to suffer some of the fiercest temperatures and the uncomfortable humidity of a Washington summer. The President said he must have legislation extending the National Recovery Administration, providing social security, eliminating public utility holding companies, increasing the taxing power of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, extension of the so-called business taxes which expire by limitation of law on June 30, and revision of the banking laws.

In addition, the President "must" have legislation to take the profits out of war, whatever that may mean. He previously had sent a message asking enactment of a law providing for expansion of the American merchant marine through the use of ship subsidies, and he also desires to have enacted legislation setting up machinery for the settlement of labor disputes. This legislation is in the congressional hopper in the form of a bill by Senator Wagner of New York.

The President would like to have amendments to the agricultural adjustment act in order to eliminate some of the weaknesses which the AAA people admit exist. The annual Surtax situation is another matter with which Mr. Roosevelt has been concerned.

Several observers recognize that this list of "must" legislation, not to mention the desired legislation, is sufficient to keep congress grinding away far into the summer. They recognize likewise that if the desired legislation later becomes of such concern that the President wants to place it on the deferred list as well, the membership of congress must be prepared to forego summer trips of any kind.

Since a good many members of congress have grown tired of being called rubber stamps for the administration, they naturally have turned attention to legislation which they think will be helpful to their own backbones, to themselves personally or from a party standpoint. There have been proposed numerous pieces of legislation for which some individuals at least, entertain greater fervor than they do for measures that were drafted by President Roosevelt's official family and transmitted to congress as administration legislation. It is the general observation that an individual, representative, or senator frequently will go much further in fighting for legislation that is his own brain child than for legislation placed before him on a silver platter such as administration proposals have been. Consequently, individual or group measures are constantly coming up house and senate legislative calendars. This is a factor mounting delay for administration bills.

It is to be remembered, as has been reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt is unable to ward off criticism of some of his proposals. Indeed, there have been Democratic criticisms and Democratic opposition to a greater or lesser degree to all of the legislation he has proposed since congress convened last January. All of which is by way of saying that congress faces weeks of committee work and floor debate despite the fact that the house Democratic leaders still retain rather solid control of a sufficient majority in the lower house of congress to pass through any measure.

Included in the legislation being favored by individual members is the bill that would permit cabinet officers to appear on the floors of congress for questioning and explanation, such as occurs under the British and French parliamentary systems. The administration does not want this bill. It will have to exert some pressure to avoid passage. The reason is that the Roosevelt administration is no longer one in which the cabinet is dominant. Cabinet officers are only part of the scheme, and if congress wanted to inquire about the handling of relief money, which it probably will desire, it must talk with administrator Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins is not in the cabinet. The same is true of NEA and to some extent to the AAA, although Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture theoretically is a superior officer to administrator Davis. The administrator is definitely opposed to the passage of bonus legislation for the former soldiers, sailors and marines and it looks like a Presidential veto will be necessary there. The same is true of inflationary proposals of which there are many. The situation is one, therefore, in which Mr. Roosevelt must be constantly on his guard to prevent action which he does not want as well as being satisfied at all times with pressure to get through the legislation he has described as necessary. Thus it is seen that he is confronted with many complications which will not disappear in the first two sessions of the new congress and these complications must be dealt with during the current session.

Some "Must" Legislation

Let us examine the status of the legislation which the President said "must" be passed. The outlook is something like this:

The extension of the National Recovery Administration is still far off. Senate hearings are just ended and the house is still further behind. No action can be expected in either body for several weeks. The present law expires June 30.

Recently Mr. Roosevelt sent to congress a very brief message denouncing public utility holding companies and demanding legislation eliminating them from our economic structure. The house committee considering this legislation is just winding up its hearings and the senate committee which will have jurisdiction has taken no action at all. It must be said that a bill of this kind is in prospect if and when this legislation reaches the stage of debate because investors in these companies are not going to have their equities destroyed while they sit idly by. These investors are doing more now than just making faces at congress and the volume of letters which members are receiving in opposition to the holding companies legislation transcends anything that ever has happened in the history of this correspondence.

The banking legislation which Mr. Roosevelt has proposed, or which was proposed for him by Governor Hoopes, the New Deal, and national government of the Federal Reserve Board is faced with opposition equally as bitter and as well organized as that confronting the holding companies bill. Perhaps it can be said that opposition to the banking legislation is even stronger because in that fight the President will be opposed by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who must be regarded as the most potent of all the Democratic forces in the house. The house banking committee has about done its job with hearings on this bill, but the senate committee where the bill faces all of the Glass opposition will be not have even set a date for committee consideration.

The social security bill about which Mr. Roosevelt has done much talking because it is distinctly a reform measure, has finally been reported in the house while senate leadership is in no hurry to get together on any policy respecting it. Some senators want to split up this bill and pass the section providing for old age pensions, allowing the other parts of the bill to die a slow death.

The legislation to increase to $2,700,000,000 the taxing power of the Home Owners Loan Corporation probably will get through the senate without much more ado. The house passed the bill because it could not do otherwise with individual members realizing that there was a chance that some of this money would go into their particular pockets. Included in this bill is a line that promises a good many hard-fought jobs for politicians and it is not surprising that the party in power is not going to overlook this possibility.

There remains on the "must" list, then, only the proposal to extend the business taxes which expire at the end of June. It is probable that the bulk of these laws will be accepted by congress as necessary.

One cannot fail in remarking around Washington these days, to note the frequent expressions of concern concerning the outlook for the New Deal and for these: President Roosevelt's personal position; the future of the Democratic party; and the future of the nation.

About the Future

Several days have been passed since Mr. Roosevelt is suffering from too much publicity. He was put up on a pedestal that made of him the eyes of many persons something of a superman. He himself is regarded as having contributed to this condition by his many campaign promises, some of which he has found absolutely impractical as remedies in leading the country out of the depression and on to a more satisfactory economic plain. In truth, the President's own political colleagues have continued to depict him as an individual capable of things which no human can accomplish and this combination of circumstances is increased by being kept in mind persons are likely to bring it forward; it has not already brought a definitely bad political reaction from the President's standpoint.

It is still fresh in the minds of men and women throughout the country how President Hoover was once described as a superman in an administrative way. Mr. Hoover suffered from too much publicity in an even greater degree than any other man who has served as President with the possible exception of Woodrow Wilson. When the depression came and the current turned against Mr. Hoover he was utterly powerless. With a magnificent congress on his hands and a disaffected people, Mr. Hoover met the fact that he had been expected.

Wins Wide Distinction as Collector of Violins

Milwaukee Man Is Expert on Rare Old Fiddles

Milwaukee, Wis. — Stradivarius to Henry Stern of this city is something that has not only passed as an interesting hobby throughout many years, but has also become for him the title of a profession. Not less than twenty-four examples of the famous Stradivarius have passed through Mr. Stern's hands during the course of six years, which is really only a slight dent in the history of his own grand collection.

Mr. Stern, whose vocation is finance and accounting, has shown a genuine interest in the violin since he was seven years old. This interest, however, never for once entered the professional realm, nor was Mr. Stern ever a dealer in violins. He played the violin and played it well. Even now he is heard at a string quartet which began long back in the '80s, but he is not a member of this little group any longer for his own pleasure.

Just an amateur.

Yet, though but an amateur in all the realities, he has ever had with the violin. Mr. Stern today is recognized throughout the world as an authority on the instrument, and because of his abundant knowledge in this field, owners of rare old violins often seek his advice, according to the Milwaukee Journal. "It has been the supreme joy of my life that I have been able to make the acquaintance of some of the greatest violins of all time," said Mr. Stern.

At one time he had in his home close to $50,000 worth of violins, which included two genuine Stradivarius and many famous violins of other makers. All of these, however, were disposed of recently and the sole remainder of his once famous collection is a Caspari de Sola, once owned by the Bull, eminent Norwegian violinist.

The Caspari de Sola is the violin Mr. Stern plays in the quartet. It was made about the time of Martin Luther's death, Mr. Stern believes, and came into his possession through the widow of a friend named Rosens, who had acquired it from the Bull himself.

Had it Collection.

Inside the Caspari de Sola, when Mr. Stern, this acquired it, was the name Villanueva, written in pencil, together with six or seven other signatures. It having it destroyed a few years ago.

Miss Thorne Will Study Beginnings of Eskimo Race

Albany, N.Y. — Mr. Thorne's study of the origin of the Eskimo tribes in Canada's northern Arctic territories will be undertaken next summer by Miss Sara Thorne, graduate in anthropology at the University of California. Miss Thorne is at present in Albany being plans for an extended stay in the Arctic.

The Eskimo languages, anthropology, customs and folklore will be studied by the young California scientist with a view to getting on to the discovery that the Eskimo race originally came from the Orient via the Bering Straits. She plans to go north to Kilauea, in the Hawaiian Islands, early in the summer.

Although this is her first trip north, Miss Thorne has spent considerable time studying Eskimo life, language and customs, and is confident she will have little difficulty in facing the rigors of the Arctic.

After spending some time in Kilauea, "becoming acclimated," she plans to journey west to Alaska, where in cooperation with and possibly go on to Greenland if she can obtain permission from the Danish government.

Gen. Randolph Crockett, who commands the United States expeditionary force against Ethiopia, is shown here in his regular fighting uniform.

the names were in some way rubbed out, an incident which he regrets, because Jean Baptiste Villanueva is revered by violin lovers in much the same manner as they think of Stradivarius.

In addition to his private collection of noted instruments, Mr. Stern has had under his roof more Stradivarius violins at one time than any other person or museum in the world. At various times collectors, dealers and famous violinists have left genuine Stradivarius in his home. Among these "guest" instruments are the Emil Sauer and Hupinski Strads. He, himself, has owned the Hummer Stradivarius, one of the two Stradivarius violins that has never been cracked or tampered with.

Although for more than a century and a half Stern's forefathers lived in

He Learns to Fly in 35 Minutes

After 35 minutes of instruction, Herbert Sargent, twenty-two, of Jersey City, made his first solo flight in a plane at the Jersey City airport and after completing the prescribed maneuvers set his plane down for a three-point landing. Eddie A. Schneider, twenty-three, Sargent's youthful instructor, holder of the Junior Transcontinental flying record, said he allowed Sargent to go up alone because he handled a plane perfectly. Taking the air on such short instruction is believed to have brought to Sargent a new record.

Chicago — A million miles of flying in United States service since he piloted the first mail plane between Chicago and the Southwest in 1926 was the record scored by Richard L. Poole, who, awarded his eighth service star, signifying completion of his eighth thousandth hour of company flying. He is a pilot on the New York-Cleveland-Chicago Division. Poole is said to be the first pilot in the world to fly a million miles for a commercial airline.

Prior to joining United's staff, Poole had 2,500 hours of flying time. This gives him a total of 10,500 hours and approximately 1,200,000 miles—equal to 30 trips around the world at the equator.

Poole is said to be in the same line as the late one shot down at the church and shot. When Norfolk was rebuilt after the reconstruction war St. Paul's Episcopal church, still in use today.

Montreal. — The Montreal metropolitan commission has hired a "Tormen" to bring order to the bankrupt village of St. Michel. Seeking an inexpensive method of keeping the wilder villagers from creating trouble while they tried to straighten out the village's financial affairs, the commission hired ex-Capt. Z. PATTERN 2159

In spite of its very definite air of chic, this is the sort of dress that an experienced seamstress can run up in an hour or so—and even a beginner really should take no longer than a day to finish it. Just to show you how very simple it is, we've given you a little sketch of how the frock will look before you sew up the side seams. See—there are only four pieces to the whole body of the dress, and the sleeves and shoulders are cut in one, which does away with the setting-in of sleeves! Make it of any pretty inexpensive cotton material—use gay buttons—you'll be sure to put yourself on the back when you see the result!

Pattern 2159 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 takes 8 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included. ## New Needle Threading Champion Is Proclaimed

Albany, Ont. — Step up, folks, and meet Walter J. Serrell—the new needle-threading champion of Canada and the United States.

Serrell defeated Mrs. Jeanne Cloutier, Simsbury, N. H., housewife, in a stringing international contest, 220 to 224.

The contest started when Mrs. Cloutier read of how Serrell thought nothing of threading a needle with a couple hundred strands of cotton, and set out to beat his record. She jammed a standard threading needle with 224 strands of white cotton thread and sent it to Serrell. Serrell sat down, jammed another 26 strands into it and returned it.

PINCKNEY SPLITS EVEN

The Pinckney Independents played a double header here Sunday in order to give some of the players who have not been getting into the games a chance to see what they could do.

They lost to Hartland in the first game, a seven inning affair, by a score of 4 to 2. Lefty Reason pitched and only allowed seven hits. Pinckney only got 5 off Conklin, the Hartland left hander. Errors figured in most of the Hartland scoring.

In the final game, which went nine innings, Dr. Howell, pitching for Pinckney held the Blazing Arrows team of Ann Arbor to 5 hits and won 6 to 2. Pinckney got nine hits off Raymont, the Ann Arbor pitcher and also gave Howell good support.

MEASURES PROPOSE HIGH SCHOOL TUITION CHANGE

Under the provisions of the Thatcher-Saur school aid measure the state will pay the tuition costs of all non-resident pupils in approved high schools. While the first payment of tuition by the state will be for the school year 1935-36, the total amount of tuition aid will be computed on the number of non-resident children enrolled during the school year 1934-35. The act proposes that the state will pay tuition costs to the receiving high schools at the rate of $65 per child.

Corollary with the state aid measure, House Bill 563 passed by the Legislature, now before the Governor for approval, repeals the mandatory requirement that boards of education must pay tuition up to $60 for all children within the district eligible to go to an approved high school and who have made application before the fourth Monday in July. In view of this provision, tuition blanks will not be sent to county commissioners and superintendents of schools. Special blanks for reporting non-resident high school pupils for the current year are being sent to high school districts.

In cases where the tuition is more than $65 per child, the new proposal provides that parents or guardians must make written application on or before the second Monday in July to the board of education, upon vote of the board, pay such tuition in excess of $65 from the general fund to an approved high school. While this requirement provides that written application must be made, wherever districts vote to pay high school tuition in excess of $65, special blanks will not be provided for the purpose by the Department.

Retirement Fund Collectable on Salary Bonus

School districts paying a salary bonus to teachers should include the amount of the bonus in the total salary when determining the amount due the Retirement Fund, according to information received from the Michigan Teacher's Retirement Fund Board. This requirement is in accordance with a ruling furnished by the Attorney General's office. Whenever the salary and bonus exceeds on any one dollar, the usual $10, $20, and $30 maximum payment governs the deduction.

HOME-MAKER'S CORNER

Home Economics Specialists
Michigan State College

A thorough dry-cleaning or exposure to sunlight and air before storing is the most effective way to prevent moths from damaging clothing or blankets, according to home management specialists of Michigan State College. Clothing in closets can be freed of such infestation with carbon tetrachloride. Since the gas formed by evaporation of the liquid is heavier than air it should be placed in a shallow dish on the shelf of the closet. For a closet 2 by 5 by 7 feet use about 1 and one-half cups of carbon tetrachloride. As soon as the liquid has been poured into the dish, shut the door and seal the cracks with tanned paper or paste on strips of paper using a flour paste.

Materials which are to be either wrapped or to packages or placed in trunks or chests, must first be thoroughly examined for moth larvae. Such items should be brushed and pockets and seams thoroughly inspected. On dry wrapping paper is satisfactory for wrapping if there are no breaks in the paper being used. Newspaper is not satisfactory as they are easily torn and easily damaged. Care must be exercised to bind the folds of the paper upon themselves at the ends of the bundles so that the moths cannot crawl in at the ends. If the articles are placed in boxes, the extra precaution of wrapping in paper should be taken since the moths might crawl in under the cover.

Carbon tetrachloride may be used in a closet or trunk because of its non-inflammability, and it will keep the articles practically odorless when removed. For a trunk about 21 by 20 by 42 inches, pour about 16 to 20 tablespoons of liquid into a shallow place at the top of the trunk, close and seal. The liquid evaporates, forming a gas that sinks down into the clothing, killing clothes moths and other insects.

NEW LAW AFFECTS BORDER CAR SALES

Citizens of Michigan who planned to buy automobiles outside the state will, in the future, be compelled to pay a $25 investigation fee before they can secure a Michigan certificate of title and Michigan license plates for any automobile so purchased and brought over the state's border line, unless they secure a certificate of registration or title in the state of purchase. This certificate is rarely issued to a non-resident purchaser, however.

The recent legislature's action in amending the state's automobile title law has been signed by the governor, which made the change effective immediately. Officials of the Department of State are prepared to take official cognizance of this new law.

The object of the law is, of course, to confine purchases by Michigan residents to Michigan automobile dealers. Whether border states may interpret this law as discrimination, is a development which will be watched by Michigan State officials.

UNLICENSED SLEUTH SNARED BY OLD ACT

Relatively few people know that all private detective agencies of the state must be licensed by the Department of State. While the law was passed by the 1927 legislature, the first person to be prosecuted for doing business without such a license, was recently convicted in Detroit. The offender was placed on six months' probation and restrained from applying for a license within that period.

FIRESIDE happiness depends very much on the kind of lamps provided for those hours of reading, sewing or just plain ease.

In many a spacious living room, and small ones also, the davenport is placed alongside the hearth, as in the accompanying sketch. Where there is no fireplace the lamp appropriate for the away-from-the-wall location is the same.

Just one lamp stands by the davenport in the living room illustrated. But you can bank on that one! It knows all the tricks of good lighting, having been built according to specifications of the Illuminating Engineering Society, a national group of lighting scientists.

You'll note first that the lamp is placed at the back of the davenport. This balanced arrangement is possible because of the height of the lamp and the width of the shade which allows sufficient spread of light for the entire length of the davenport.

This is also an approved I. E. S. Study and Reading Lamp, a multitude of lovely designs for which have been made by many manufacturers. It is higher than table lamps you've been using no doubt. But that's a new style note!—In the interest of eyesight preservation.

The place bowl between the candles throws light up as well as down, thus eliminating glare and providing light as restful to the eyes as an eider down mattress would be to the body. Within the bowl is another bit of magic, an electric lamp, newly developed, which because of two filament gives three different intensities of light at the turn of a switch. For sewing and the reading of fine print for long periods, the lights of the auxiliary candles, holding bulbs of from 40 to 60-watts, are added to that of the central bulb.

How about using a single lamp at the end of the davenport, rather than at the back? I hear someone ask. Well, that depends on your davenport. If it is too long the lamp standard would have to be excessively and awkwardly high to shed its light the entire length.

End table lamps can of course be used, but are not always practical for the away-from-the-wall location in a smaller room where space must be conserved.

If the davenport is of the Love Seat type, a lamp similar to the smaller one sketched, and using a 100-watt lamp, may be placed on a table behind it. This is also an approved I. E. S. Study and Reading Lamp, a multitude of lovely designs for which have been made by many manufacturers.

It is higher than table lamps you've been using no doubt. But that's a new style note!—In the interest of eyesight preservation.

THAT

ELECTRICALLY COOKED MEALS ARE

BETTER MEALS

There is actually a difference in flavor between ordinary cooking and electric cooking. Until you have tasted a meal prepared on an electric range, you will not believe that this difference is possible. But the fact remains: ELECTRICALLY COOKED MEALS ARE BETTER MEALS, and you can find it out for yourself.

To begin with, you cook vegetables in only half-a-cup of water. By this method, vegetables are STEAM-COOKED, and their precious minerals and important food values are retained. Not only are they more healthful, prepared in this manner, but they taste better. They have a delicious NATURAL flavor that is unsurpassed. You do not boil away vital elements. When the cooking is finished, there is no surplus of flavor-laden and mineral-laden water to be poured down the sink, thereby wasting the very things you pay for.

Roasts of meat, too, cook to melting tenderness in their own juices, with a delicious natural flavor SEALED-IN. And broiling electrically imparts a flavor that no other claim is the nearest approach to the flavor of meat which has been broiled over charcoal. Steaks are crisp, succulent, tender, unbelievably delicious! Cakes baked in an electric oven are light and fine-grained—pastries flaky, and always uniformly good. An electric oven takes the guesswork out of baking.

You can own a modern electric range for $29.50—completely installed and ready to cook. See the latest models on display at your dealer's or the Detroit Edison office.

Relatively few people know that all private detective agencies of the state must be licensed by the Department of State. While the law was passed by the 1927 legislature, the first person to be prosecuted for doing business without such a license, was recently convicted in Detroit. The offender was placed on six month's probation and restrained from applying for a license within that period.

THE OLD CUST HOME

During the year of 1837 Edwin M. Cust, a wealthy Englishman, appeared in Detroit looking for a place to chase wild game. He came to the place now occupied by Clayton Carpenter where he built a French villa in the form of a letter H, calling it Oak Lodge.

In 1838 their complete furnishings were shipped from England and Mrs. Cust's French home and they took up their home in the country where they entertained in lavish fashion. Among those who were entertained were Alphonse Felch, Lewis Cass, John J. Bagley, William M. Howard and many other prominent men and women from New York, Washington, New Orleans and other leading cities.

During the 1840's Mr. Cust was elected to the State Senate when the seat of Michigan was Detroit. Their daughter was born in 1820 and was kept in luxury until soon before his death, when financial losses curtailed the lavish entertainments. His wife's death was soon after his, thus leaving the daughter, Mary J., who in 1870 married Adolph Buck, a neighbor's son who was 20 years her junior. She lavishly spent what little money there was left on him. Taking a trip through Europe, visiting her relatives in France and England. He died in 1891, leaving her penniless and alone.

As she needed money she sold different pieces of furniture for little of their value. The once beautiful grounds became a tangled mess of weeds and vines.

Mary J. Cust died May 10, 1901, and was buried in Detroit.

Thus ended one of the earliest families, who came to this community merely for pleasure, living a life entirely different that that of our sturdy pioneers.

Soon after her death Clarence Carpenter purchased the property and about 12 years ago tore down the old house, replacing it with a modern home.

New Diesel Oil Burning Train Goes into Service in New England

By LATTIMER SHAW

A complete revolution in fast, safe railroad transportation in the eastern United States is predicted as a result of the successful debut of the "Flying Yankee" this month on the lines of the Boston and Maine and Maine Central Railroads.

Made of stainless steel, gracefully streamlined into a three-car articulated unit on four trucks and weighing only 25%, as much as an ordinary three-car steam driven train, the new silver flyer easily and safely has attained a speed of more than 100 miles an hour.

On account of its great speed and flexibility, the daily 700 mile itinerary of the "Flying Yankee" will enable it to replace at least two regular steam trains each weighing approximately 800,000 pounds against a mere 214,000 pounds for the "Yankee". In operating costs the difference is equally sharp—the "Yankee's" 35 cents a mile forecasting enormous savings over the 65 to 80 cents a mile for steam train operation.

More than 200 outstanding companies cooperated in the "Flying Yankee"—General Motors, Tide Water Oil Company, General Electric, Winston Engine Corporation,

Hyatt Roller Bearing Company, Frigidaire, Sterling Products Company and others. General Motors, through its Winton division, provided the specially designed 600 horsepower Diesel engine which gives the "Yankee" its smooth 100-mile-an-hour speed. Tide Water is supplying the Voodol lubricants which help its engine to function so sweetly and silently at terrific speed.

The "Flying Yankee" is proclaimed by railroad experts and automotive men as a forerunner of great fleets of similar trains which are expected to appear in the next few years to change completely the already romantic picture of American railroading and, in fact, human transportation itself.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees Lanny's home in her apartment, asleep. Then she disappears, and McNamara learns that she is living in Paris. He also discovers he is in love with Lanny.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

"The instructions are fine, but why commit forgery by signing Dan's name? If the original is traced—"

"I have signed it Mac, and the world is filled with Macs. When Dan has reached his office, telephone him and tell him to do something that will prove in any court he was in his office when I filed this cablegram."

Lanny relented. "You might make a detective, at that."

Twenty minutes later Dan McNamara was listening to Lanny reading Stephen's cablegram over his private line. "Excellent," was his sole comment, "but print it in block letters. Even a typewriter can betray one. When Steve files this telegram have him pay for it with a hundred-dollar bill, and have him wear large black goggles and the rim of his hat pulled down all the way round. The girl who receives it will think one crook is cabling another. If she's ever asked what sort of man filed it, her description of the sender, plus my own perfect alibi, will put me in the clear."

"How are we to manage after she has eluded the Paris police?"

McNamara sighed gustily. "Flynn will be in touch with her bank, and every time she cashes a draft on her letter of credit, Flynn will have a line on her address."

"You're no help," Lanny snapped, and hung up. Half an hour later, from the cable company's main office, Stephen dispatched the cablegram.

With Dan McNamara definitely out of the fight, Stephen felt lonely and apprehensive. He wondered why the girl had fled to Paris in the face of Dan McNamara's instructions to flee to Lower California, to enter which no passport is required. He asked Lanny. "Oh, that's no mystery, Steve. I brought home from the office, intending to show it to Dan, an article by a celebrated plastic surgeon of Paris. Penelope read it with great interest. She went to Paris to consult this French plastic surgeon and also to have samples of her new nose drawn by a competent artist."

"So that's how the Paris police informed Dan she was having her portrait done by an American artist, eh? I suppose it will be her luck to be in a hospital undergoing the operation when the Paris police receive word to deport her."

"I'm afraid she's bailed everything up, Stephen. Flynn will have the number of her passport and Dan will have no time to fix a new passport photograph on it. They'll not trust to the photo to identify her if she tries to land. They'll check up on the passport number also."

"Will you never cease discussing this miserable business, Lanny? Stephen burst out irritably. "If it hadn't been for you we wouldn't be in this wretched predicament."

When the captain of detectives called to Detective Sergeant P. Flynn and related to him the tale told to him by Mrs. Rudolph Merton, Flynn gave no sign of being particularly interested. Carefully and methodically he arranged in his mind the facts as stated, and when he left the presence of his superior, all he knew was that he was to strive to recover a lost heiress by name Penelope Gatlin, and that she had a nose that should make her recognizable anywhere.

After nine hours of refreshing slumber, Flynn proceeded to ponder the case of Penelope Gatlin of the saddle nose. "I seem to be getting my fill of girls with saddle noses who disappear mysteriously," he decided lazily—and instantly something clicked in his brain and he knew he was on the trail of Nance Belden again. An heiress, eh? McNamara had hinted at powerful influences back of Nance Belden, and she certainly must have hired the expert help she had had in her escape from San Quentin penitentiary.

"McNamara knows who she is," Flynn decided. "He's getting his—in chunks—for helping her. I'll bet it's the same girl."

He decided not to take Angellotti into his confidence. For two hundred and fifty dollars, Angellotti had agreed to abandon his interest in Nance Belden; whereas P. Flynn had scorned to quit. He would pick up the trail again alone, and when he had Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin on his hook—well, she had to pay somebody to keep out of San Quentin, and that somebody should be P. Flynn.

He went to San Jose that day and interviewed the officials of the bank, who, when he flashed his shield, gave him all the information they possessed. Dan McNamara had artfully destroyed all the girl's police photographs, but if she had secured a passport, Flynn argued to himself, she had left two of her passport photographs with the passport office, and Flynn knew he could borrow one of them.

Flynn's shield was an open sesame to the man in charge of the passport office. Two minutes after his arrival he knew Nance Belden had secured a passport.

Employing identically the same means McNamara had employed, he traced Penelope Gatlin to Paris within three days. But he had now to prove that Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same person, so he interviewed the United States marshal, who secured for him one of the girl's passport photographs. Armed with this, Flynn crossed the bay to San Quentin.

"Is that Nance Belden?" he asked the matron.

"That is Nance Belden," was the reply.

From the ferry he went at once to the home of Mrs. Rudolph Merton. He struck the photograph under her nose and asked gruffly: "Is that Penelope Gatlin?"

A tremor ran over Mrs. Merton's face. It seemed to Flynn that she was frightened, disturbed.

"Well?" he demanded. "You can't expect the police to find your missing daughter if you don't help. Is this her picture or isn't it?"

"I—I don't know. I have never heard of her before."

"Never heard of her? Why, she's your daughter!"

"I haven't any daughter."

"Why, you called on the captain of detectives and asked him to find your daughter. What do you mean by telling me you've never heard of her?"

"I can't remember. I don't know. Oh, please, please don't ask me! Something terrible will happen. I—I—"

"You refuse to identify this photo as that of Penelope Gatlin?" Flynn was growing irritated.

Finally she had hysterics and a maid came in and asked P. Flynn to leave the house.

Flynn was profoundly irritated. He knew Penelope Gatlin was at 27 Rue Instantly Something Clicked in His Brain and He Knew He Was on the Trail of Nance Belden Again.

St. Honore, Paris, but he did not know that Nance Belden was! Back at central office, he compared the passport photograph with the substitute photograph Dan McNamara had pasted on Nance Belden's fake police record card—and knew it for a fake.

Suddenly it occurred to Flynn that he had had an official interview with everybody connected with this mysterious case, except Dr. Stephen Burt.

"You're a long time getting around to see me, Sergeant," Stephen charged, and indicated a large, comfortable armchair.

"I called on you once, Doctor, but you didn't know it. That was the night after Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin. Me an' my partner trailed you to the chief's house."

"I've always thought you and the excellent Angellotti didn't make the best of your opportunities," Stephen murmured. "Still, I suppose you were playing with dynamite."

"We were," said Flynn, "but no more. The chief's one of the biggest-hearted men in the world, but a picnic egg if you rub him the wrong way. So we pussy-footed."

"No fair man could deny the excellence of your pussy-footing. I know all about it. How about a wee Dock an' Doris?" Stephen suggested.

"There's an idea for you, Doctor."

Stephen summoned the butler and ordered the drink. Flynn, with great deliberation, produced Penelope's photograph.

"Do you know the lady?" he queried.

"I think I do, Sergeant."

"Who is she?"

"Is there any reason why I should express an opinion?"

"Not unless you choose to be good-natured. I suppose you know you're in Dutch for aiding and abetting an escaped convict."

"Well?"

"Naturally we don't want to make the going hard for a man of your standing," Flynn continued.

"My dear sergeant, you would have started the fireworks long ago if you had anything tangible to proceed upon."

Flynn slipped his highball. "You're being well paid for shielding this girl, of course. I don't blame you a bit, but—you're too big a figure in your profession to get into trouble with the police."

"Dan McNamara is my friend."

"Well, Mac is out of it. He can't protect you because he must protect himself. It might interest you to know that Nance Belden and a lost heiress, Penelope Gatlin, are the same person, and I have the Paris police watching her right now."

"Are you quite certain the girl is still at that Paris address?" asked Stephen.

"I know it."

"I know she isn't—and the Paris police do not know where she is."

"Do you?"

"No, but if I did I wouldn't tell you."

"Look here," said Flynn. "What's it worth to your young girl friend to have me lay off the case?"

"I'll give you twenty dollars in Confederate currency. You were offered real money once and refused it."

They looked at each other searchingly, then both laughed. "I see there ain't much use pumpin' you, Doc," Flynn admitted. "Well, a fellow can't be ruled off for tryin'."

"When were you to see a doctor last?"

"At the age of twenty-two. Why?"

"How old are you?"

"Forty-two."

"Well, just to prove I'm friendly I'll give you a quick physical examination. It may save you a fee later from some other physician. Mind if I give you a quick look-see?"

"Go to it," said Flynn.

Stephen tested Flynn's heart action and lungs and took his blood pressure.

"You're up thirty-six points," he told him.

Flynn was distinctly perturbed.

"What does that mean?"

"It means that you have a fairly well developed case of hardening of the arteries. If you were to be re-examined physically, for promotion, you might be retired on pension."

"I couldn't afford that," cried Flynn.

"I've got a wife and five children."

"Nevertheless, I would suggest you apply for a six months' leave of absence and have me treat you. How's your eyesight?"

"Grand," P. Flynn mumbled.

"I doubt it, Sergeant. I'll bet you a hundred dollars you cannot look into this little mirror fifteen minutes without averting your gaze. Want to earn the hundred?"

"I can't afford that much of a bet, Doc."

"Well, then, we'll not bet, but if you can I'll give you a hundred dollars."

Stephen produced a hand mirror and held it two feet in front of Flynn and about six inches above the level of his glance. He took out his watch.

"Go!" he said. "And remember I'm watching you. If you get through this test successfully there's hope for your arteriosclerosis."

P. Flynn grinned and gazed. In three minutes the effort oppressed him. Stephen's voice reached him as from a distance.

"You are going to sleep, Sergeant."

Then, "You can't stand it, Sergeant. You're going to sleep, I tell you—to sleep."

"I'm not," Flynn protested drowsily, just as his eyes closed and his head fell forward on his breast.

Stephen's soft hands stroked the detective's brow. "Why did you call to see me?"

"To get you to identify the photograph," Flynn's voice was faint.

"Why was that necessary?"

Flynn hesitated, struggled a little, but lay back quietly again as Stephen's facile hands resumed their light massaging. "Are you going to oppose me, Sergeant?"

"No, Doctor."

"Will you answer questions truthfully?"

"Yes, Doctor." The tones were dead and lifeless, for Flynn slept a hypnotic sleep.

"Why was it necessary that I should identify the photograph?"

"I've got to know before I act, Doctor. The matron at San Quentin says it's Nance Belden, but the photograph is on the passport of Penelope Gatlin."

"Why do you want this girl?"

"She's made a fool out of me—and she can pay well to be let alone."

"You're not interested in seeing her returned to prison?"

"Not a d—n bit, Doctor. Why should I?"

"That name, Penelope Gatlin, is bad luck," Stephen warned. "Never repeat it to a human soul. If you do it may mean your death. And your oldest child will be kidnapped, tortured and killed."

"Oh, God, no!" Flynn cried out in agony.

"You must forget Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden. Will you?"

"Yes, Doctor."

In Case of Emergency

Even the optimist carries a spare tire.

WHAT'S smarter, if you please, for this spring, than a good looking black, navy or tweed suit or frock "set off" with fetching accessories to a nicety down to the slightest detail? We confess we do not know the answer, unless it would be "more accessories." However, this we do know, that fashion has gone so unmistakably accessory-conscious, this season, the very fate of your costume depends on the chic and the charm and the correctness of the accessory items worn with it.

Which leads us to predict that you will be tempted to spend as you have never spent before on the dainty lovely neck fixings which are simply lavished on the new spring frocks and suits. Neither will you be able to resist the appeal of the intriguing costume jewelry together with ingenious little gadgets of every description.

Speaking of accessory ensembles, a veritable chamolis spring fever has broken out both among fashion-alert Americans and chic Parisiennes. To demonstrate how utterly swank from headtop to fingertip yellow chamolis accessories on navy are proving to be, we are illustrating a stunning ensemble to the right in the group. The pert V-back beret and classic pull-over gloves are of this soft butter colored chamolis leather. The tailored scarf with hand-stitched chamolis is real news. The four-inch belt with circle buckle and the new flat bag with braided handle are also of the fashionable chamolis. Yes, we agree with you that these new chamolis sets are outstanding and greatly to be coveted by those who appreciate the air of distinction they impart.

The costume worn by the girl seated has about it that note of sophisticated simplicity which is high-style convincing.

CHIC SPRING FURS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Dainty furs and fur trimmings tuned to spring are conspicuously in the limelight at present. For sportswear or for early springtime this cunning snow-flecked weasel jacket is an excellent choice for a young woman of fashion. Shading from a yellowish beige to a soft brown it harmonizes with browns or the new pastels which are so popular this spring.

Turquoise Jewelry

Turquoise jewelry is enjoying quite a vogue at present. Long strands of small beads are worn, twisted several times around the neck or the arm, with one detachable clip to match holding the different springs in place.

ing. Her navy novelty silk frock bespeaks discriminating taste. The wide patent leather belt is according to latest dictate of the mode. The jaunty hat is a smooth ballbunt for which Paris fashionables are expressing a decided preference this spring. The real sensation about this costume is the novel gold jewelry worn with it—looks as if it were a frilled collar and cuff set. It is, however, of gold metal which is light as a feather. It would be difficult to find anything in the way of a neckline and wrist adornment that will impart a finer finesse to a simple navy or black afternoon dress, than these very unusual jewelry sets.

Frilly, butterfly neckwear means everything to the new costumes. If your yearning leans to animated little lingerie pleatings and ruffings and frilled jabots and lace collars and cuffs which carry alluring feminine appeal now is the moment to see your fondest hopes realized, for fashion makes fanciful neckwear the center of attraction this season. The sheer white finely pleated jabot at the top to the left in the picture is typical of the new trend. The hat worn by this vitagraph star is excellent style since it is of quilted taffeta banded with shiny rough black straw. Milliners are making a feature of quilted fabrics for spring. Her little gaily knitted cape is also up-to-the-moment, for dainty fur separate pieces are very important in the current mode.

The lingerie blouse with a very frilly frill has come into its own this season. Note the attractive organdie and lace model to the left below in the picture. It has wee crocheted buttons—two dozen or more down the front. The nifty little pill-box turban is hand made of the new glass ribbon straw.

FEMINE CURVES COME INTO FAVOR

The perennial question of the great American figure is before us again, and this time the consensus is decided—we are to have feminine curves this year.

Not the Mae Westian curves of yesterday, nor yet the wasp waist of the Gibson girl, but a happy compromise—a return to natural contours.

Rosina McDowell Lynn, of the McDowell school of costume design says the new trend toward natural curves is all due to Mussolini and Hitler, and their policy of encouraging women to concentrate on the nursery.

She says the American figure follows the trend of the times, toward a more normal state of mind, and predicts that the spinach-and-grapefruit diets of the last few years are on the way out.

Flecked White Linens Are Popular for Spring Frocks

Heavy white linens splashed with multicolored flecks (achieved by sprinkling in small bright bits of cloth while the material is being woven) and cream linens embroidered in red and black figures are used for frocks. A new "blotting paper pink," flame and pastel tints are favorite colors for linen frocks this year; green, brown and gray are smart for suitings.

Linen corsets, lingerie, gloves, bags, hats and shoes are among the novelties launched this spring. Golf suits and tea gowns, evening frocks and flying suits, summer dresses and tennis shorts are also being fashioned in the new flax weaves.

Velvet Ensemble Favored

Velvet ensembles or velvet dresses with long narrow fitting caps of graceful line are being worn with matching gloves and hats in London.

This is another rug design that our readers will recognize as taken from the "Cubes and Stars" quilt design that is possibly a hundred years old. This rug measures thirty inches and requires about two pounds of material to crochet. It is made up of 12 diamonds and slip stitched together to form a star or blocks, depending on the way the color scheme is worked out. It is always an interesting rug to study (count the cubes) and well adapted for a child's room.

This is one of the twenty beautiful crocheted rugs shown in colors with directions in rug book No. 24. If this rug interests you send 15c to our Rug Department and get the instructions for making this rug and nineteen others.

City Still Spanish

Most travelers who have visited both Spain and South America assert that Cartagena, in Colombia, is more Spanish in atmosphere than the cities of old Spain. The oldest living city of South America is as medieval as ever in its narrow cobble streets winding about between old Moorish-Spanish houses, in its sixteenth century monasteries, old dungeons and moats, and the same grim fortresses which were attacked by Drake and Morgan and the buccaners of the Spanish main.

ALTHOUGH, as official studies of business conditions show, business is still far from having struck its full stride, nevertheless, I believe that it is undoubtedly true that the natural economic processes which have always brought the nation out of a slump are now and have been for some time steadily at work laying the foundations for more active and normal business conditions.

I believe that there is growing a broader public perception that the people of this country must make their own prosperity and not wait for the Government at Washington to make it for them. In other words, normal economic vigor and vitality of the United States is slowly but inevitably bringing a return of natural business recovery.

The Fundamental Cure

Like a doctor, the administration can help nature. But the fundamental healing processes will come from natural causes and not from political remedies. Despite the slackening of business now apparent, despite expressions of disappointment we hear from various quarters, nevertheless I am confident that these fundamental healing processes, if not spectacular, are none the less surely at work.

Gradually our business leaders are showing greater confidence in the future and are assuming a more forward looking position. I firmly believe that if we will make up our minds to replace fear psychology with confidence psychology the results will fully justify such a new attitude.

The Need for Independence

"That is the reason why we are so strongly in favor of making the Federal Reserve Board a body of such independence and prestige that it would be definitely removed from all political thought, influence and dictation. Its members should be free to study and to act in accordance with the needs and conditions of agriculture, industry and trade. The policies of the board should have no reference to the politics or the changes in politics of the national administration.

"In our studies of the bank bill, we have been strongly impressed with the fact that it would set up a situation under which the Federal Reserve Board and its policies might be subject to control from the political administration of the country. In saying this I do not charge that it is the intention of the present administration to bring about any undue control over the nation's banking mechanism. The point is that if the bill passed as now proposed, opportunity for control would be there for the use of the present or whatever future administration might be in power.

"Our criticisms of the bill are not aimed, therefore, at the motives of the present administration, but they are wholly impersonal and non-political and are aimed entirely at the basic principles involved."
