

Fred Woodworth Gets Appointment

Pinckney Man Is Appointed State Welfare Director by Governor Fitzgerald to Succeed Grover Dillman

Fred L. Woodworth of Pinckney has been appointed state welfare director by Gov. Fitzgerald to succeed Grover Dillman, who has resigned to accept the presidency of the College of Time, at Detroit.

Mr. Woodworth has been prominent in state affairs for years back. In 1916 he was appointed pure food commissioner by Gov. Albert Sleep. He represented the state at the National Pure Food Convention at Washington, D. C., August 21 to 23.

The delegation will be made up as follows: N. W. Squires, Dillman, Ivan Parker, Hartland, Leon Gannon and E. L. Briggs, Ypsilanti, group 2, Robert L. Horton, Ypsilanti, group 4, G. L. Fox, Ann Arbor, group 4, Warren B. Crandall, group 7, Ted McManis, Clark, group 7, Ted McManis, group 11, John Sivers, group 14, Roger Wiseloff, group 10, John T. Gannon, and Tommie Colvin, group 16, David Kahn, group 104, Don C. Martin, Scoutmaster, T. Bruce Rider and Don Palmer, assistant Scout Executive, Walter MacRae.

Mr. Woodworth was a political enemy of Grover Dillman and the latter at once boarded Woodworth's strongly for the job that he got it and served until 1931. Since that time he has been a public enemy of Dillman, chairman of Wayne county, and last year manager of Senator Van Dine's successful campaign for reelection.

During his tenure of the office of internal revenue collector he purchased the Norman Dixon farm on the Howell road near the House school and spends considerable time there.

GOVERNOR FITZGERALD TO CLEAN UP LIQUOR BUSINESS

Gov. Fitzgerald has announced that he will inaugurate a state-wide cleanup of the liquor business, even if it proves a money losing proposition for the state.

The governor's proposal is to reduce the pay roll of the liquor commission by 150 before August 15. The present pay roll is $97,000.

4. Do away with all painted windows and curtains which obstruct the view into drinking places from the street.

5. Appoint a liquor commission publicity man to handle the public relations and attempt to give the public a better view of what the commission is doing.

6. Place all enforcement of the liquor laws in the hands of the state police. The effect is 25 more state police would be added.

7. Rigid inspection of all licensees to reduce hole in the wall places and other undesirable establishments.

8. Appoint a business manager for the liquor control commission.

In this connection a number of new state police posts would be established. According to Commissioner Olander, one would be located in Brighton in this county. Others would be at Utica, Lake City, New Buffalo and in Wakefield and Baraga in the upper peninsula.

SLOT MACHINE WAR RAGES

The slot machine war is still on in Michigan with indifferent results. The battle on the Clare county front resulted in a victory for the slot machine operators when Justice McKinnon dismissed charges against 25 slot machine operators who were brought into court Monday.

He also ordered their slot machines returned to them. These machines were piled up in court as evidence. Whether the punch board operators and the preacher who was selling raffle tickets will be tried has not been decided.

In Monroe county 16 slot machines were seized by the sheriff and the owners ordered to appear in court.

In Jackson county the police came to the aid of a slot machine operator and arrested three men, Walter Henry and George Parker of Jackson and Ed. Worth Trowbridge of Jackson for stealing a slot machine from a beer parlor.

At the hearing of these men Tuesday it was indicated that they would be released as no case could be secured against them, owing to the fact that slot machines were illegal. It further stated that they would be questioned about a recent robbery at Island Lake in Livingston county where two armed men entered a resort and seized slot machines. This case does not seem to have received much publicity at the time.

In Ann Arbor the police at that place arrested two salaried men, Smith and Alfred Smith of Detroit who had 25 punch boards in their possession and also 25 clocks which were to be offered as prizes. They were taken to a Justice Payne and released on $1,000 bonds to appear for trial August 6.

Gov. Fitzgerald also announced that he intends to clean up vice conditions in Michigan and will start action against owners of tourist cabins who make a practice of renting cabins to unmarried parties.

13 Different Troops To Be Represented

PINCKNEY WINS SHUTOUT GAME

The Pinckney baseball team has won a shutout game against the Brighton team, a member of the Ann Arbor City League, Sunday at Highland Park, Ann Arbor.

Harold Huns was in the form, pitching for Pinckney, and really got away with a shutout game. As it was a shutout game, a drive was hit past him in the fifth on a bunt.

Hammond, Pinckney third base, was given an error. When he was out he did not touch the drive. It was scored as a hit. Anyhow, it was a shutout game.

Pinckney did not score until the third when Budd and Dinkler singled and scored on J. Dilloway's hit. They got three more runs in the fourth when the Ann Arbor team kicked in with a couple of errors and two more in the next inning on hits by the Dilloway Brothers and Farrell.

They scored their last two runs in the 7th on two Ann Arbor errors.

Soft Ball Games

PINCKNEY WINS AT FRESH AIR CAMP

The Pinckney soft ballers won their other game last week when they defeated the counselors at the U. of M. Fresh Air camp at Patterson Lake.

Thursday night, 8 to 5. Pinckney took the lead in the second inning when they scored three runs and held it throughout the game. Dinkler pitched the first five innings and allowed three runs and Swanson batted last two and was scored on three.

Most of the camp runs were due to errors as they only got five and the Pinckney pitchers. This was the second week in succession that Pinckney has won two games.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

by William Bruckart

National Press Building

Washington, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt knows and those close to him realize that sometimes something more than a laugh is required to kill off a rumor. That is one of the reasons why the President is planning if and when congress adjourns to make an extended tour of this country. He knows of rumors going about the land that his health is not up to par and he is taking this method of disclosing to the American people by action rather than word the answer that he is physically fit.

A Laugh

Whoever occupies the White House is continually subjected to whispered rumors as well as open assertions of one kind or another. Some, as in this instance, reflect on the health of the chief executive. Others, as happened within the last quarter of a century, reflected on the personal habits and practices of the President. Still others have related in times past to personal fortunes and financial dealings of the man in the White House. Usually these "whispering campaigns" are of a derogatory character. No one ever knows exactly how they start nor is it ever possible for observers to put a finger on the rumors as they float by. It is a condition that seems to be bred by prominence of the individual about whom the rumor mongers can operate because people are always interested in what a President of the United States is doing.

In the current instance the "whispering campaign" was largely unknown to Washington until summer resort residents began returning to the city. They brought back all sorts of stories that were being circulated in distant places concerning Mr. Roosevelt's health. The gossip, for that is what it appears to be, spread like wild-fire in Washington and became of so much concern that it crept into one of the White House press conferences.

"Mr. President," one of the 200 correspondents present asked, "are you in a little bad health?"

The chief executive's answer was the laugh which has endeared him to many people. He was just back from a short cruise aboard a yacht in Chesapeake bay. His face was sun-tanned. He leaned back in his chair and demanded to know what the correspondents thought about it. I think that the news dispatches from Washington that night indicated rather clearly what the correspondents thought about the state of the President's health, for surely none of these dispatches indicated any particular alarm.

Nevertheless, the rumors continued to go on and a good many thousand people apparently believed that Mr.

Let People See
for Themselves

Roosevelt had broken under the strain of his New Deal presidency. So, before the summer is over millions of Americans probably will have an opportunity to see for themselves just as the correspondents saw at the press conference that the President still has his smile; that his hair is no more gray than when he took office in 1933, and that his countenance shows no earmarks of the strain which every President of the United States finds an inherent part of that job.

One trip upon which Mr. Roosevelt has set his heart is a tour to the Pacific coast and return. It will provide an opportunity for several millions of Americans to see him and a lesser number to hear him speak. It will carry him through territory which contains probably about half of the nation's population.

It is well recognized in Washington that no amount of denials by informed persons or any amount of second-hand testimony is sufficient to squelch malicious stories of the kind that have been circulated about the President. The eye witness is the only one who is prepared to discredit such stories and, unless present plans are revised, the eye witnesses will be many this summer. The President probably will make other trips during the late fall and early winter as well. Plans for these are still in the making and their length and number depends somewhat upon the date of congressional adjournment.

The program fits well into the Roosevelt methods. In the 28 months of his tenure the President has done a considerable amount of travel. He has made three cruises on the yacht owned by Vincent Astor, two of which lasted more than two weeks each. He traveled to the east coast of Canada in June, 1933, aboard the craft, Amberjack, and returned two weeks later aboard a navy ship. Last year, it will be remembered, he visited Haiti, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Colombia, the Panama canal, Clipperton Island, and Hawaii. On his return from that cruise he crossed the Northwest, making several speeches before reaching Washington.

In 1933 and in 1934 he visited Warm Springs, Georgia, the colony where victims of infantile paralysis are nursed back to health and with which the President, because of his own affliction, has had much personal connection. In returning from the 1934 visit to Warm Springs, Mr. Roosevelt stopped at Muscle Shoals, Norris dam, and Birmingham for personal visits to points and things which interested him. All of these trips have been in addition to periodical visits to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., and, apparently, all that he needs to add to his mileage this summer is a period of comparative calmness in Washington.

To Reduce Deficit

If superficial appearances count for anything, the administration is actually making moves designed to reduce the federal treasury's deficit. It is yet too early to tell definitely what the plans are and administration spokesmen are strangely quiet about them but there are certain signs and portents which may be examined in the effort to determine which way the government is headed in respect of the gigantic expenditures for public works, relief, and general government costs.

While congressional committees continue to examine tax questions with a view to enactment of legislation that will increase federal revenue, the President and his advisers have taken steps to cut down the drain on the treasury.

The first and probably the most important of these moves is the announcement that on November 1 federal aid to those people unable to work will cease definitely. Relief Administrator Hopkins announced after a conference with the President that the relief policy will be changed on November 1 and that the various states, counties, and municipalities will be expected after that date to look after that segment of the population known as the unemployed. These are people who for one reason or another cannot earn their own living by work.

Previously Mr. Roosevelt had directed his fiscal advisers to make a thorough study of relief requirements for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936. While this is almost 11 months away, the President told newspaper correspondents that he desired to know as early as possible what the burden of relief would be in the future. His announcement was interpreted as having a connection with budget requirements and prospective revenue under the proposed new tax legislation.

Earlier, Public Works Administrator Ickes had made known that the program of public works expenditures for improvement of the Mississippi valley and its rivers had been abandoned. It will be recalled that the National Resources board had recommended extensive improvements to be carried out from public works funds in the hands of the public works administrator. These involve vast sums. Now, it is made to appear that the PWA and the administration have in mind some restraint on expenditures of that character and that hereafter gigantic allotments of a public works or improvement character may be expected to be fewer in number.

The result of this will be, of course, to hold in the treasury some of the total of the $5,000,000,000 public works appropriation.

Reduction of the outgo for direct relief necessarily will be reflected in the remainder of the public works-relief fund and it is reported that other plans are in the making which will have as their prospective end a restoration to private employment of greater numbers of idle workers than heretofore have been contemplated.

Then, as another indication of administration intention to restore funds to the treasury and thus reduce the difference between income and expenses was an announcement by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Mr. Jones made known that hereafter the RFC will not make loans to banks. He declared that the banking structure was in an excellent condition and that further aid was not required.

The fact which Mr. Jones did not mention in his announcement is, however, that the banks are exhibiting no particular desire to borrow from the federal government. The RFC already holds preferred stock in almost half of the banks in the country and these banks, according to RFC records, are liquidating their obligations as rapidly as they can do so. This is significant.

Works-Relief
Plans Drag

I have reported to you previously how slowly the administration plans for spending the $5,000,000,000 works-relief fund were progressing. In connection with the Hopkins' announcement on relief and the President's relief survey order, it was disclosed that only approximately fifteen thousand persons have been given jobs since the money was made available. This figure does not include the additional list of recruits for the Civilian Conservation corps whose numbers have grown from 300,000 to 403,000. It will be recalled that provision was made in the $5,000,000,000 appropriation resolution for an increase of the CCC from 300,000 to 600,000. Thus, in two months, the CCC has had only about one-third of the total increase which was expected. Frankly, CCC enlistments have been so disappointing that the responsible authorities have changed the age limit in order to permit the maximum of entries into that service. Those in a position to know and who will speak candidly about conditions entertain some fear that the total ever will approach the 600,000 to which enlistments are restricted.

Knit Outfits Are Ideal for Vacation

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHETHER you spend your summer in town or in country, on the golf course, or at the beach you will find it the better part of wisdom and good taste to have at hand one or several of the prettily colorful, porous, airy knitted outfits that have been developed in wide variety to keep you cool as the mercury mounts. They'll keep you fashionable at the same time because of their graceful, silhouetting lines, smart tailoring and casual appearance.

For vacation purposes knits are ideal. Throw them into your valise at home and take them out ready to wear when you reach your destination, as crinkles and wrinkles disappear with a shake. Their sporty appearance, too, tunes them to practically all daytime requirements whether your program calls for active recreation or just lazing about.

The vast majority of these creations for warm weather wear are two piece dresses coming in linen, feather-weight zephyr, silky and cotton knits. Sweater blouses in openwork effects, many with self belts and novelty tie girdles, are undeniably in the lead. These are generally set off by skirts in plain stitches. A new touch, which is seen with increasing frequency is a match of sleeves with front blouse panels. Sleeves, by the way, are usually short and of the puffed type.

Ideal for bridges and teas on sultry afternoons and suited as well to spectator sports is the two-piece ensemble, knitted of a silk knit, shown to the right in the picture. Hand fashioned throughout, it is marked by a lacy knit bosom which matches split umbrella sleeves. A novel touch is provided by a braided neckline running into a tie effect, with two crystal clips for adjustment purposes. The neckline theme is carried out in a braided cable cord ending in a long graceful tassel. Other details of interest include the rib bottom of the blouse and the novelty rack hemline of the skirt. Dusty pink is a becoming color for this smart, serviceable costume and it is also definitely modish in bijou blue, wheat gold, antique mauve and white, also other summery shades.

Simplicity is the keynote of the two-piece cotton knit, shown to the left, rendering it perfect for golf and tennis and just as good for morning shopping on these cloying summer days. It is an almost imperceptible bird's eye knit with a unique straight collar line developed in a rib effect, similar to the treatment of the brief puff sleeves and the bottom of the blouse. Ample freedom of action is permitted by semi-concealed pleats, front and back, which make walking no battle against skirt restrictions. At the same time the skirt is fashioned so as to retain its trim effect. A decorative touch is introduced by a self-belt which may be casually and even negligently, tied at either side in accordance with your whim.

As a pert addition to your beach wardrobe you will find that a knit pajama outfit, as centered in the illustration, will give you endless comfort and satisfaction. The garment, which is in a corduroy stitch, is distinguished by the wide knit rib waistline which assures close fit. The contrasting stripes of the waist are carried out in the wide opening club collar, which is also in a rib knit. Interesting details are the button closing in the now-so-voguish shirtwaist effect, the pocket monogram, the wide pants and the backless treatment. Gray is an unusually effective shade for this pajama, the contrasting stripes being red and blue.

LACE AND CHIFFON

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lace and chiffon make a charming combination and one that is most fashionable at the present moment. For the model pictured silk lace goes partner with navy silk chiffon, the matching jacket being entirely of the lace. The V-decolletage in front can be adjusted high or low.

SUMMER PARTY TOGS
NOW HOLD INTEREST

Summer party dresses are absorbing the attention of the younger set these days. Sleek sophistication is out for summer evenings, so far as the youngsters are concerned, and fluffy ruffles are the rule of the day. Sheer confections of lace and net and organdie are blossoming in shop windows, with plenty of frills and furbelows.

Consider, for instance, an evening gown made entirely of diagonal ruffles of Chantilly net lace, mounted on tulle. In petal pink or baby blue it is about as fetching a costume as ever was donned by a dewy debutante.

White also is on the up and up for summer evenings, what with the new epidemic of organdies and organzas and such. Ruffled white net is a sure-fire summer dance frock number, with a black net jacket, if you must be sophisticated.

"Something Different" Is Slogan for Accessories

"Something different" is the slogan for the accessories which accent the new clothes. Almost every one has changed its shape and design a bit.

Gloves are shorter, bags are deeper, belts are wider, handkerchiefs larger and all marked by new touches and trims. Short gloves of pigskin, do-skin or suede are the last word in chic accessories to the new tailleur. They extend only about one inch higher than the wristbone, sometimes slashed briefly up the back and buttoning on the back of the hand.

Button Trim

Tiny buttons of crochet or pearl are part of the dainty detail of sheer lingerie blouses. Rows of them range down front frills or along the sides of cuffs.

WISE IS HE WHO PICKS HIS STEPS
ON LIFE'S PATH

From his place at the side of the road the Philosopher sees the world go by. One man, with strained face and clenched hands, dashes on, without regard to the rights of others; on the road, trying vainly to overtake the happiness that will always elude him.

Another, plodding wearily, stooped with the burden of his possessions, looks neither to the right nor the left, seeks only for firm ground under his feet. He is unable to see that the way is pleasant; that the sky is blue overhead, and that from the side of the road friendly hands are outstretched toward him. His journey is a lonely one.

The Philosopher, in his resting place, sighs that so many persons, in their blind search for the Holy Grail of happiness, in their frantic struggle for the great joy that they foolishly imagine is to be found in the great things, fail to grasp the happiness that is to be found all along the way.

Some, heedless and careless, dance and sing along the road, and the flowers they pick from the roadside fade and die. In their friendships is little of friendliness. When night comes they have no place to lay their heads and no one to comfort them.

And finally the wise man passes. He neither hurries nor lingers, but in leisurely fashion makes sure passage; finding time for work, play, and true friendships among those who line the highway. He finds warmth in the sun and coolness in the rain; the flowers and the songs of birds assuage his thirst for beauty. His hardships, being shared by others, become less burdensome, his joys greater because others may find part in them, and the Holy Grail of happiness is always at his hand.

The old Philosopher sighs with regret that it is late, and that he may not join this wise man in his journey.—Detroit News.

Swords Made History

Two historic swords have been made national treasures in Japan. The first is that worn by the late Fleet Admiral Togo at the Battle of the Japan sea, originally the gift of the late Emperor Taisho when his majesty was crown prince. The second is a samurai sword called "Bizen Fukuoka Ichimonji," which was presented to Viscount Chokei Okabe, former feudal lord of Kishiwada, by the city of Kishiwada. Both will be displayed in museums in Tokyo.

JAMBOREE SCOUT TROOP TO MEET
The twenty scouts and leaders of Washtenaw-Livingston Council, who are to attend the National Scout Jamboree to be held at Washington from August 21 to 30th, will hold an organization meeting at Scout headquarters, 324 E. Huron St., Ann Arbor, on Thursday evening, August 1st, according to announcement made today by Fielding H. Yost, Scout Commissioner and chairman of the Jamboree committee.

The group will be organized into patrols and will join with the delegation from the Wolverine Council to make up one of the 900 troops of the Jamboree.

The local Jamboree group are leaving on the afternoon of August 19th, following a three-day encampment here. They will have lunch at Harper's Ferry, West Virginia, arriving in Washington on the afternoon of August 20th. The grand opening will be held on the following day with President Roosevelt presentation.

The local delegation will include scouts from Milan, Dixboro, Hartland, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor.

MAY USE LOANS FOR HARVEST & THRESHING
Farmers whose small grain crops are subject to late securing emergency crop loans may use up to one-half of the sale proceeds of the grain to pay necessary harvesting and threshing costs, according to an announcement today from the Farm Credit Administration. Heretofore, these advances were limited to specified amounts per bushel.

Where a farmer sells a part of his small grain crop he may not use more than one-half of the proceeds to pay harvesting and threshing costs; at least 50 per cent of the proceeds must be applied to the payment of the loan, the announcement states.

Since the beginning of the small grain harvesting season the emergency crop and feed loan offices have been assisting borrowers to harvest their grain crops by releasing a part of the grain sale proceeds to pay harvesting and threshing expenses. Borrowers from the fund gave first a loan on their crops; and those needing funds to pay the cash cost of harvesting and threshing are permitted to retain out of the proceeds of the sale of their grain the necessary amount to pay such expenses.

Harvesting and threshing costs may include such items as the threshing and purchase of twine and sacks, oil and fuel for tractors, feed for workstock, and actual hired labor; but not labor performed by the borrower himself or members of his family. The borrower must present bona fide bills for all harvesting expenses allowed under the plan.

"Even if he lives too far from a scout troop to attend meetings, a boy can still get the benefits of the Boy Scouts of America as a Lone Scout," Walter MacPeck, Scout Executive of Washtenaw-Livingston county, said yesterday in discussing the fuller use of the Scout Program in the county. Any boy who wants to be a scout can secure a man, his father or other man of the county, to be his adult friend or counselor. Occasional rallies of Lone Scouting are contemplated.

"The Home Patrol too is a practical plan whereby 3 or 4 or 5 boys may carry on Scouting in the home of one of the group with a man of the community serving as the leader of the group," he said.

LAW'S SPONSOR AIDS AUTO TAX COLLECTION

When the 83 counties of the state recently received their second quarterly installment of weight tax refunds, few people stopped to realize that the official second in charge of the Department of State, which collects all automobile taxes, was the personal sponsor of the law under which the refunds are made. Few people evoke proposed vital legislation and later have the opportunity to aid in its administration after it is placed on the statute books by the legislature.

Possibly unique in the respect is Dr. Louis Webber, deputy to Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State. With those familiar with actions of legislatures of the past few years recall that most others have lost sight of the fact that counties have returned to them the entire weight (or license) tax, because the 1931-32 legislature enacted the then widely publicized "Webber plan" into law.

Dr. Webber, then executive secretary of the Michigan Real Estate Association, evolved the plan as a means of lowering excessive local property taxes levied for highway purposes by action of local voters themselves. Prior to the present plan the counties received an amount equal to half the weight tax collected. The weight tax refund is returned to the county for the purpose of paying bonds and the cost of road maintenance not met by the state. The refund is distributed by the State Highway Department.

Of the four alternate plans submitted to former Gov. William C. C. Bricker by a group appointed by him late in 1931, it was the "Webber plan" around which the governor's message to the first special session of 1932, was built. The measure, now introduced by the late Senator Norman B. Horton of Fruitland, then administration spokesman in the senate. The special session has been called to frame additional bills to counties facing bankruptcy because of local highway tax burden.

Interesting in this same connection is the fact that Phil C. Horton, member of the legislature, who passed the Horton act, was one of the inspectors of the Department of State, and thus in charge of the act which he had a voice in passing.

Manifold Ways in Which the Banks Are Serving the Nation

Handling Millions of Transactions Daily for Individuals, Corporations and State and National Governments—The Structure Strengthened and Deserving of Public Faith

By FRANCIS MARION LAW,
President American Bankers Association

THE banks of the nation provide the machinery through which pass daily many millions of checks and drafts, amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars.

The banks are the backbone of the nation's financial system. They are the medium through which the government and the people conduct their financial transactions. They are the repository of the nation's savings and the source of the funds which are loaned to the business and industry of the country.

The banks are also the custodians of the nation's money. They are the only institutions which are authorized to issue currency and to hold the government's funds. They are the backbone of the nation's financial system.

Banks Rapidly Reduce Debt

Although the sum of $1,500,000,000 has been advanced to banks and trust companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since it began operations in February, 1932, down to April 30, 1935, these institutions have repaid no less than $1,200,000,000, or more than 75%. This rate of repayment is reported as being considerably in excess of that made by any other type of borrower.

Simplification of Bank Checks

New York.—In a bulletin issued by the Bank Management Commission of the American Bankers Association, plans are described for carrying on the simplification of bank checks, notes, drafts and similar instruments in respect to size and uniformity of arrangement of subject matter.

Detailed recommendations for this end were formulated by the association about ten years ago, the bulletin says, and promulgated by the United States Department of Commerce among banks, business houses using large numbers of checks, commercial stationers and lithographers. As a result about 85 per cent adherence to the recommendations was brought about. The present bulletin, which describes the standard specifications in full, is issued to maintain this high level of adherence to the recommendations.

BOOM HINTED

Elsewhere in this issue reviews are published showing the continued increase of bank deposits. The conclusion is drawn that sooner or later this money is going to work for business.

Mounting bank deposits indicate the approach of a credit and business boom. A mild form of industrial activity is already here, but economic forces are making inevitable a strong commotion in the fall or early winter.

In addition to bank deposits there are such business indicators as mounting surplus reserves, record-breaking low interest rates, a huge accumulation of capital seeking employment; the force of accumulated obsolescence in factories, machines and dwellings. There is also the Government program of borrowing and spending.

With so much cash available, the time is ripe for a change in the policy of Federal bank examiners to one more in harmony with the aims of the Government's loaning agencies. The banks have attained the liquidity they wanted; the confidence of depositors has been restored. With the funds available through Government agencies there is no likelihood that a relaxing of the rigid policy will undermine the banks.

The Federal Reserve banks have been authorized by law to make loans to industry, but to date the results have been highly unsatisfactory. It has been suggested that board should appoint to the Federal Reserve District Industrial Advisory Committee men who are in fact representative of industry and grant loan on a reasonable and sound basis, including in this judgment not alone present ability to repay loans but character and credit standing as normally applied in the analysis of credit risks.

The RFC was authorized nearly a year ago to make loans to small industries which constitute 46 per cent of the industry of the country, yet few of these have been made. It has been suggested that the RFC simplify its machinery by which applications for loans to industry are considered and eliminate some of the red-tape as reflected by the size of the application and the number and variety of documents to reduce the cost of filing. At the same time reduce the collateral and other requirements to a minimum commensurate with reasonable safety. There is not the shadow of a doubt that a liberalization of policy and cutting of red tape would aid business and injure no one.—The Michigan Investor.

BOONDOGLING

The Dispatch may now be distinguished with the first local use of a NEW WORD, and a new word is an important fact in any language.

This term seems to arise out of the depression and the resulting government relief; the work being provided being often of little practical value, some person of genius fastened upon it the new word, boondoggling.

Senator Copeland sanctioned its use when, at the late Dexter school board meeting, he replied to a question, "I don't think the PWA funds will be used for Boondoggling." No one can better know its use than Senator Copeland for it is in New York City that there are the most of these genteel people, "Too proud to beg, too honest to steal" who are receiving this form of relief.

Making The Home More Livable

Lamps Must Qualify For Seeing As Well As Decoration

By Jean Prentice

THE living room needs dressing up! This is the decision of many a home maker who, at this time of the year, casts a long critical glance at the center of family life for the longer evenings—the living room—and decides that something must be done. She does well to give particular attention to the selection of floor and table lamps, because here at her finger tips is a chance to enlist the magic of lovely and adequate light.

Not with just ANY lamp of course! Big strides have been made in the style and lighting qualities of lamps, and the one that Aunt Sue gave to Mary on her wedding day may be wholly inadequate now.

The lamps pictured here have scientific sanction for several reasons.

The one beside the chair boasts a brand new feature straight from the research laboratories. In its upper portion it has one single bulb that, by a twist of one's wrist, can be made to give three different amounts of light.

A white glass bowl within the shade sheds a big cone of cheerful light downward. The lamp is not an oasis of light in a desert of darkness in your room, however, for the bowl reflects light upwards also. The three-candle unit showing beneath the shade is mainly for decoration, but can be used for additional reading light.

Points to remember are that a floor lamp should be 54 to 64 inches high, conforming with the decorative scheme. It should radiate light on the rest of the room as well as your book. If it has a light-colored shade, that "certain something" called "tone" will be added. To get the most out of a floor lamp, bulbs totaling at least 120 watts should be used.

Other arrangements of living room furniture call for different types of lamps.

The two bridge lamps at top left illustrate important points. A shade that must be tilted causes glare which is harmful to eyes. These bridge lamp shades make tilting unnecessary. Both can be adjusted by moving up or down. Each takes a 60 or 75-watt bulb.

And you'll want to hear about the floor lamp, below at right. It is the new Reading and Study Lamp approved by the Illuminating Engineering Society. Using a 100 or 150-watt bulb, it not only gives marvelous light to read by, but provides excellent general illumination.

Does the table lamp at bottom left seem a little larger than those generally used? It is—and should be if wanted for reading. Standing 18 to 22 inches high, it gives a sufficiently wide circle of light for your book or paper. With two 60-watt bulbs placed well within the shade it offers flexible light, using one or both bulbs.

Regardless of what lamps you finally decide upon, remember that the prime requisite is that they give adequate glareless light for seeing. Otherwise they have no place in an up-to-date living room.

WINTER RANGE

By ALAN LE MAY

Copyright by Alan LeMay
WNU Service.

But though he crossed many a horse track, he accepted none of them as the trail of the horse he sought. All afternoon he worked through the long loneliness, covering many a weary mile. Twenty riders besides himself might be working the West Cuts for all Kentucky knew; the West Cuts could have hidden a thousand more. Their illimitable emptiness made a man on a horse seem to crawl like an ant, descending deep hour-long declivities, only to climb again eternally.

He was a long way from home by the time that he decided he must have overshot. Once he had seen two riders, whom he recognized as 88 men, working 88 stock; but Bill McCord was neither one of them. Lee Bishop continued to elude him, lost in the maze.

The sun was setting; above Wolf Bench the wrinkled peaks of the Maricopas seemed to float detached from the earth, vast delicate traceries of pale blue shadow, set off with crooked red-gold tracings where the western sun poured golden light upon the snow. Across Wolf Bench, already in the shadow, a dark bitter-cold breeze began to blow, smelling of frost and blown snow. Kentucky Jones sat his horse upon a high point, and wondered if Lee Bishop were dead.

The frozen wind, forecasting the night, always brought to his mind the things to which a range rider has a right to look forward at that hour: the gleam of a little golden light at a cook-house window, far across the snowy reaches, twinkling and almost lost in the twilight purple; and the things that the light, seen far off, meant to the rider coming in on his tired horse—the warmth of stove heat, friendly yellow lamp light, the crowding in of red-faced hungry riders, very merry over being done with work; the smell of frying meat and hot fresh bread, and the steam of coffee; and afterward an hour or two of drowsy loafing in the warmth, wise-cracking the day's work, spinning lies—maybe a game of seven-up, and somebody making music for a little while with banjo, mouth organ, or Jew's harp.

And at the Bar Hook the cold long twilight, which always made the simple realities of food and snug warmth seem so good, and so well worth living—at the Bar Hook these things should also have meant seeing Jean Ragland again, this girl who, even in adversity, was like no other girl. As Kentucky Jones sat his horse, letting it blow a little from a long climb before putting it upon the long roundabout trail home, he was thinking that this range could have been a great range for cattle, and a great range for men, and that maybe having ridden it he never would have wanted to ride another, had things broken as they should. It was a hidden malignance, working under-handedly in the dark, that spoiled this range.

He put the zebra run into a canyon and out again, and to the rim of another; and there, long after he had let all hope slide, he sighted Bishop at last. He put his pony down into the canyon, then upward through the canyon's notch; and a furlong into the widening valley halted Lee Bishop across the snow.

"Lee," he demanded as they came up to the upper end, where that little drift of timber is."

"Kentucky, I've been to the upper end, and they're not up there, nor any place between. And if they'd gone up them side trails I'd have seen them. You can see a rider two miles as he goes up them long slants."

"Seems kind of peculiar," said Kentucky.

"You're d-n tootin' it's peculiar," said Lee Bishop. "I'm plumb confused. And likewise I'm disgusted, and likewise I'm sore. Let's get home."

"Wait a minute!" said Kentucky. He held his voice low. "In G-d's name, Lee—stop your horse."

"What's the matter?"

"Do what I say," said Kentucky without raising his voice. "And don't ask why. Turn your horse and come back to me." Kentucky Jones turned his own horse so that it was headed back the way Lee Bishop had come.

"Now bring your horse alongside of mine, easy," he said. "Walk your horse slow alongside of me."

"Where the devil we going?" Lee Bishop demanded.

"You see that coulee up ahead of us there, about fifty yards? Lee, how deep is that coulee?"

The drainage feature which Kentucky indicated was a shallow twisting cut that wound its way across the floor of the mile-wide canyon, a creek during the rains, a dry wash in time of drouth.

"Maybe five or six foot deep," said Bishop. "Why?"

"Walk with me slow and easy until we get to the edge of that coulee," Kentucky said. "Then slap hooks to your horse and jump him into it. Soon

Still keeping constant lookout, he prepared for the night. Bishop appeared to be too seriously hurt to be moved without aid.

Already the light was uncertain; the molten gold of the last sun still touched the upper peaks of the Maricopas, but the wide reaches of Trap canyon were pooled in blue dark. Dragging Bishop's rifle with him, Kentucky Jones went out to his dead horse and got his saddle blanket, and the saddle itself to prop Lee's head. He snuck off his sheepskin coat and used it with the blanket to make Bishop a bed in a snow-drifted angle.

Working along the lip of the coulee he collected greasewood and broken drift, and with this built a tiny fire to warm the wounded man's feet, and another fire at Bishop's side.

Lee Bishop opened his eyes long enough to say faintly, "That'll only be a mark for gunfire, Kentucky."

"I'll take care of that, Lee. It's near dark enough to fire at the flash of the guns."

When these things were done there was nothing more to do but wait, keep watch, and maintain their store of fuel. He built a third fire—a signal fire on the edge of the coulee, a hundred yards from their forlorn bivouac.

When Campo Ragland and Harry Wilson returned to the Bar Hook it was reasonable to suppose that they would make some effort to find Bishop, who had gone out looking for trouble with every probability of finding it. If they came to look, the signal fire would be visible a long way off. If they did not come to look, Kentucky Jones had a long wait ahead, a wait perhaps equal to the remainder of Lee Bishop's life.

Slowly the hours passed, cold with a bone-piercing cold, and marked only by the imperceptible turn of the stars. After an hour or two Lee Bishop began to mumble from the depths of a delicious stupor.

THE STORY FROM THE OPENING CHAPTER

At the inquest into the death of John Mason, banker, Jean, daughter of Campo Ragland, owner of the Bar Hook ranch, where Mason met death, surreptitiously passes to Kentucky Jones the bullet which had killed Mason. Kentucky goes to work on the Bar Hook ranch. The Masons' death is accidental, says Bob Elliot, owner of the adjoining range, drives his cattle on the Bar Hook land. Lee Bishop, Ragland's ranch boss, expostulates, and Bill McCord, Elliot's foreman, insults him. Bishop and Jones are astounded at Ragland's indifference to Elliot's action. Bishop urges Kentucky to try to influence Jean to arouse her father. He does so, unwillingly, and her reaction mystifies him. Zack Sanders, Bar Hook cook, is found dead, murdered. Sheriff Hopper announces his knowledge that Mason also was murdered. Jones seeks to trace the ownership of a gun found on Zack Sanders, as having a bearing on the mystery. Jean sells him her share in the Bar Hook ranch, thus giving him a free hand with Elliot. In a gun fight with riders of the "88" ranch Jim Humphreys, Bar Hook cowboy, is killed, and his partner wounded. Jones sends for fighting cowmen, but Ragland countermands the order. Jones finds proof that Jean has concealed evidence connected with Mason's death. A gunsmith whom he had engaged to trace Sanders' gun says he sold the weapon to a Bar Hook cowboy, Joe St. Marie. Jones questions St. Marie, but he can throw no light on the mystery.

as he's in, duck out of the saddle and get down."

Lee Bishop half drew up his horse as if he would stop. "What's got into you, Kentucky?"

"Come on, you fool!"

"See something?"

"I'm not dead sure I did. But, Lee, I'm not going to bet your life I didn't see."

Lee Bishop brought his horse along reluctantly. "Then what the devil was it?" he demanded irritably.

"Don't look back," said Kentucky. "I'm not right sure, Lee, but what I saw a tied horse up there; and if it is a horse, he's got his head snaked low to the ground, such as will stop the average horse from whinnying when another one comes along."

Lee Bishop swung in his saddle to stare back at the canyon wall three hundred yards away. Kentucky snarled at him. "Don't turn, you—"

Suddenly Bishop gave a queer gagging cry and snatched at his saddle scabbard. A rifle had spoken from the upper rocks.

The gun above spoke a second time, and a third; Bishop's horse started abruptly. The rider, his gun clutched across his breast with both hands, toppled sideways and pitched headlong into the snow.

Kentucky Jones dropped out of the saddle, lifted Lee Bishop, and got the foreman over his shoulders. Running diagonally to keep the pony between himself and the ambushed rifle, he tried for the lip of the coulee.

A fourth time the rifle in the rocks spoke, and this time Kentucky's horse plunged, jerking free the reins, and went to its knees. Bishop's rifle fell to the snow and Kentucky turned back two paces to snatch it up. The edge of the coulee was ten paces beyond. As he ran, chest to the ground, the rifle chopped at them once more from the ledges of the notch, and Kentucky felt Lee Bishop's body jerk. Then he lowered Bishop over the edge by the arms, and leaped in after him.

"Lee! Lee, where are you hit?"

Lee Bishop's eyes were squinted shut, and he groaned through set teeth as Kentucky tried to straighten him out upon the bottom of the arroyo. "They got me, Kentucky," he managed to get out at last.

"The h—l they have! You going to please that bunch by making a die?"

But when he had examined Lee Bishop he did not know. The first shot Lee Bishop had received had been an angling one, in the back; he could not tell whether the bullet had lodged at the bottom of the lung or some place else.

Catching up Bishop's rifle, Kentucky threw a shot into the general vicinity of the ambush, and instantly drew fire in return. Apparently their attackers were not attempting to close.

Kentucky immediately set about the improvisation of bandages. Twice a minute he interrupted his work to sight across the valley floor for sign of approach.

gan to mumble from the depths of a delicious stupor.

CHAPTER X

It must have been nearly midnight when the wounded man's mind cleared. "Kentucky," he said.

"I don't know but what I've got my comeuppance, Kentucky. I got something I got to tell you."

"You better wait until—"

"Shut up! I ought to have told somebody this before; I don't know as it'll do you much good, telling you now. But you ought to know it."

Bishop's voice was very faint, but he seemed to speak with little effort, as long as he did not try to raise his tone.

"Lee," said Kentucky. "I don't want to encourage you to talk, but if you can tell me why Bill McCord wants to kill you, it sure might help in what's going to come after this."

"Kentucky, I ain't got any more idea than you," Lee said. "I don't know as I care a whole darn. What I'm worrying about is the way you're getting dragged into this killing of Mason. What time did you leave the Bar Hook the day Mason was killed?"

"I can prove I was in Waterman by half past one."

"Then," said Bishop, "you couldn't possibly have killed John Mason."

"I never claimed I did, Lee."

"There's others will claim you did," Bishop mumbled. "You couldn't have killed Mason," he repeated, "because Mason was still alive when you got back to Waterman. I know he was alive because I saw him alive. He was sitting his horse just below a knob, about a quarter mile from the Bar Hook ranch house. I saw him plain."

"But when you found him," Kentucky pointed out, "there was no snow under him; proving he was killed before the snow began to fall."

"I can't account for that. Maybe the snow under him melted, or something."

This seemed unlikely to Kentucky, but he did not interrupt.

"I was a couple furlongs away," Bishop admitted, continuing. "But don't you tell me I made a mistake. I mind how John Mason used to sit, kind of half crooked in the saddle; and I mind the round of his shoulders as he sat his horse, and the tilt of his hat. I'd know him any distance, out of a thousand men."

There was something peculiarly familiar about Lee Bishop's claim or recognition. Suddenly Kentucky knew why. He had heard Joe St. Marie use almost the same words in explaining to Jean Ragland, the night they found Zack Sanders, that he had seen a ghost.

"It isn't hardly likely," Kentucky offered speculatively, "that you'd mistake that pinto horse Mason rode that day."

"That was wrong about that," Bishop said promptly. "Mason wasn't riding no pinto horse. He was riding a little blood bay pony—an 88 pony they call Three Spot."

"Tell me one more thing," Kentucky said. "Did this—did Mason see you?"

"He ought to have seen me. I was in plain sight. But he didn't answer to my wave."

Kentucky rose and went about his work of keeping up the fires. By the signal fire he stood listening for a long time, suspicious of small sounds far away; but he could make certain of no indication of nearby human life. He went back to Lee Bishop.

"Are you there, Kentucky?"

"Kentucky, I'm sorry I never told that. If only I'd told some people about it, it would clear you. But—use it any way you can."

"You never told anybody at all?"

"Just one person in the world, Kentucky; and that isn't liable to do you much good."

"Who was that?"

"Jean Ragland. . . . She'll back up your word if you tell 'em what I said. But I don't know as it will carry much weight. Anybody can see that she's dead gone on you, Kentucky. Most likely they'll discount what she says in your favor, on that account."

Kentucky Jones said gently, "You're wrong there, Lee."

"You're a fool if you think I am. I told her about seeing Mason, and she made me promise not to tell anybody else. I remember what I thought was her reason for that; it seemed a reasonable thing to ask, at the time."

Kentucky Jones sucked in his breath through his teeth. "Lee," he said slowly, "you sure you got this straight?"

"Sure, Kentucky. I wouldn't disrepute Old Iron—"

"I don't mean that, Lee. I mean—you told Jean about seeing this, and she told you not to tell anyone?"

"You beat me, Kentucky. How the h—l would a man get a thing like that mixed up?"

"All right, Lee."

"What's the matter with you, Kentucky?"

"There's a link or two missing yet, Lee," Kentucky said. "But I'm dead sure in my own mind, now."

"What are you talking about?"

"You've got me the killer of Mason," Kentucky said.

Lee Bishop started, winced, and settled back again, more limp and more still than before. "You mean," he said at last, "you know who killed Mason?"

"Don't you?"

"I—Listen!"

They were silent for a long moment while Lee Bishop lay with closed eyes, as if the life had gone out of him once and for all.

"There's a horse coming," Bishop said at last.

Kentucky listened, but could hear nothing; it seemed to him that the small purr and hiss of the fire over which he crouched was preventing him from distinguishing far off, fainter sounds. He got up and walked down the gully, past the signal fire, to a place from which he could sight across the flat snow to the canyon narrows. Here the firelight was no longer in his eyes, and the small whisper of the embers could not confuse his ears; and presently he was certain that he distinguished the slow trample of a walking horse. He listened for what seemed a long time, while the sound came sometimes distinct and unmistakable, and again died away until he was half convinced that the rider had turned and dawned off.

Then the sound of the walking hoofs suddenly became sharp and close at hand. Three hundred yards away Kentucky made out the movement of a shadow in shadows, and knew that the rider was sitting his horse in the mouth of the notch. Kentucky Jones freed his rifle's safety catch, carefully, without any click of metal.

For nearly five minutes the rider in the notch sat motionless, and Jones knew that their visitor was watching the signal fire, trying to make out figures near it, or other sign of what the builders of the fire intended.

The rider moved out of the mouth of the notch at last, turned uncertainly to the right, and began to skirt the foot of the canyon wall so slowly that for a little while Kentucky Jones was inclined to think that there was no rider there at all, but only an unriden horse wandering about in search of its bunch. Moving slow it circled the signal fire, as if trying to pass at the greatest possible distance. Then the pony passed before a drift of gullied snow which stood like a panel of white set into the gray rock; and against this Kentucky Jones saw the unmistakable silhouette of the figure in the saddle.

The rider turned now, cutting back to circle the signal fire more closely; and at last, as if suddenly impatient, turned directly toward the fire itself and rode to the edge of its circle of light. At a distance of no more than fifty feet, Kentucky Jones slid his rifle over the lip of the coulee and brought it to bear upon the mounted figure.

Then the rider turned; and the firelight showed him Jean Ragland's face.

"Hello, Jean," he said.

Her horse jerked as if it would shy, but its rider sat steady, leaning down to peer into the shadows.

Avoided Word "Circus"

The first American circuses were wiser than our early theaters in overcoming the old religious prejudice against them as a form of entertainment. They avoided the words "circus" and "show" by using such a name as "Great Moral and Educational Exhibition." Realizing, too, that a show atmosphere would help to silence their enemies, they forced their troupes to attend church, made their harpists quote the Scriptures and painted their wagons with Biblical pictures. ## Joys and Duties of Holiday Time

Child Needs Adjustment to Home During Period of Vacation.

Now that vacation days are here, children feel a marvelous freedom from restraint, and from tasks. It is a period of readjustment, just as much as is the beginning of school in the fall. It is well for parents to appreciate this, for by so doing they will spare themselves and their offspring some difficult moments.

Many young children will be inclined to rely upon mother to direct their time by suggesting games, or little helpful tasks made attractive through the idea of relieving her of work. The rest will strain at the leash of any restraint, believing that as school was their expected and peculiar occupation, that vacation means all play and no work. They will be irked by requests to do minor jobs, quite within their ability, or to run errands, however few, or perhaps, even to have pleasant suggestions about recreational diversions.

It requires careful thought on the part of a mother to prevent the children from leaning on her too much, in the first instance, and from becoming a bit too aloof, in the second. It is well for the mother to have it definitely understood that she expects to be told when any one of the children goes out, and where the place is. Many adults believe it is a wise precaution to leave such word at home, since sometimes it is desirable or necessary to get in touch with them, and some one in the house should know their whereabouts.

It is well, also, to expect children to be home promptly for meals—which then should be served promptly. If the children find themselves unexpectedly invited to meals with their friends, then the telephone should be used to inform the home of their plans—and in younger children permission should be asked for and granted, if possible, or refused if necessary. Mothers' plans may have to be adjusted to suit such changes, or perhaps children have forgotten other engagements and can then be reminded of them.

Children can learn, in tender years, that the home is a circle made of different units, and while each unit has the right to individual freedom of wide latitude there remains the ties of the family, which should be respected. There must be co-operation, and vacation days can foster this, however old or young the members.

PAY TAXES NOW AND SAVE!

The Moore-Holbeck Law as amended removes all penalties and fees from taxes for 1932 and prior years until Sept. 1, 1935. There will be no extension from that date.

By waving the interest of  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent per month and the 4 per cent collection fee, there will be a saving to taxpayers of:

26 $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on 1932 Taxes
35 $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on 1931 Taxes
44 $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on 1930 Taxes
53 $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on 1929 Taxes etc.

Taxes for the above years may be paid to the County Treas. or Auditor General. Ask your County Treasurer about the 10 YEAR PLAN.

If you can pay only one-tenth of these back taxes it will keep your property from being sold in the tax sale of May, 1936.

NO FURTHER DEVELOPMENT DENIED AS RIDICULOUS

Theories held by engineers of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission that Michigan is likely to experience little further growth, and that there can be slight further development in the realm of telephone equipment and operating methods are denied as ridiculous, in a brief filed with the commission Tuesday by the Michigan Bell Telephone company.

The commission's engineers had advanced those theories while testifying in hearings in the 17-year old rate controversy, just concluded, in an effort to show that a lower rate of depreciation reserve for replacing worn telephone plant should be charged in the future and that telephone rates should be reduced accordingly. The brief contends that Michigan will continue to grow, both in industry and agriculture, as well as in population. The engineers had added the opinion that the saturation point had been reached in demand for telephone service, which also was denied in the brief.

The commission engineers' stand that the possibilities in telephone development have been practically exhausted is offset, the brief holds, by testimony given before the commission by Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories and one of the world's leading scientists. Dr. Jewett told the commission of many developments and refinements that even now are being tested, but which have not yet been given the public and which represent definite advancements in telephony. These developments, Dr. Jewett added, naturally lead to many more.

The commission engineers also attempted to compare the company's rate of return with the depression years' return made by 41 industrial firms, but the brief holds that such comparison is unfair when made for poor business years only. These firms it has been testified, averaged a return of 5.247 per cent in 1934. Their average return for 1928, however, was 13 per cent. Professor Riggis of the University of Michigan, called upon to testify for the commission, had said that the telephone company should be permitted to make a return of 6 per cent under present conditions. The brief shows that the company's return on the fair value of its properties in 1931 was only 2.7 per cent, which increased slightly to 3.22 per cent the first quarter of 1935. The fact that the telephone company is not permitted, during good years, to earn a return comparable to that earned in other lines, is held in the brief to be good reason why its return should not be reduced during poor years. Farther than the reduction suffered through loss of customers.

The Wagner appraisal, made for the commission in 1931 and brought into the case until the recent hearing, substantiated the company's conclusions as to the cost of reconstruction of the physical items of the telephone plant, the brief points out.

The company has contended that present rates are constitutionally inadequate to permit earning a fair return on the fair value of its properties, and the brief maintains that stand.

TELLS HOW BANKS AIDED PROGRESS

Economist Describes the Ways Banking Institutions Have Contributed to Development of United States

OMAHA, Neb.—Privately owned banking, despite its faults, has served America well, William A. Irwin, Professor of Economics, Washington College, Topeka, Kansas, declared in a recent address here on "Banking in a Changing World."

"Under the leadership of individuals banking has helped to bring this country to a foremost place in economic development among the nations of the world," he said. "The small community has been developed by the individual bank. The frontiers of America have been pushed forward by the help and counsel of the individual banker. The shocks of wars and depressions in a century and a half have been withstood with the assistance of the individual banker."

Change May Be Necessary

"It may be that we have reached a tide in the affairs of America when new methods are needed. It may be that we have come to a point where the individual should be submerged for the greatest good of the greatest number. It may even be that complete centralization of the banking system has become an economic necessity in our complicated social life. But the banker ought to be satisfied that these things are so before he should give up his fight for the system we have known. We came to greatness under that kind of banking; we should not give it up without unmistakable proof of the absolute necessity of such a change."

The American Pattern

Professor Irwin said that the proposal which has been advanced for coordinating banking operations in the national interest under "a Supreme Court" for banking is typically American and ought to have the most serious consideration of those elements which are clamoring for political control, which is typically un-American. It is not wise, he said, to oppose changes as such, but that bankers should "see to it that change, if and when it does come, shall preserve all that is good in the past and stick as closely as possible to the American pattern of banking."

"Banking is properly a conservative profession, he pointed out, and should cling to practices and principles of banking that are, and always have been, fundamentally sound."

"It is to its credit that so large a group of its members never flattered, even in boom times, in their allegiance to those sound principles," he declared. "We probably owe our salvation from chaos to that fact."
