

State of Michigan's Drive To Collect Taxes

Thousands of Home Owners Are Paying Up Back Taxes and Redeeming Their Homes

Michigan's thousands of homeowners, responding to the State's appeal to "pay back taxes and save your homes," are rushing to redeem their properties before September 1, deadline for payment of taxes for 1932 and prior years without penalties or interest.

Payments of delinquent taxes throughout the state are twice as heavy as they were a year ago, according to Gus T. Hartman, deputy Auditor General.

"Fifty-five counties show payments totaling $588,314 for the week ending August 10," Hartman reports. "In the same period last year, these counties collected only $296,451. The money is rolling in faster every day."

"Actual tax payments do not tell the real story," he said. "While a majority of property owners are paying their back taxes in full, many are taking advantage of the Moore-Holbeck plan, which permits payment of taxes for 1932 and prior years over a period of 10 years without penalty. More than $4,000,000 in delinquencies have been put back in the paying column under this plan in the first half of this month and the rush has just begun. This means that small homeowners are taking advantage of the easy payment plan and reclaiming properties which have long been threatened with sale by the Auditor General."

County treasurers all over Michigan report they have their forces working nights and Sundays to keep with the rush. Many of them have issued appeals to the public to mail payments to avoid long waits in line by paying at the offices.

LAKE DEVELOPMENT PROJECT STARTS

The shores of Little Portage Lake are marshy and for that account, although the lake has always been an excellent fishing place there has been no development.

The shores of this lake are owned by Paul Bock of Pinckney, John McNamara of Howell and Mrs. Eva Clark. McNamara did some grading and built a log cabin on the east side of the lake last year.

Paul Bock, who owns most of the north and west frontage, has started a big development project there. He has contracted with Closser Bros. of Detroit to dig a large canal 30 ft. wide and 117 ft. long. This will start at the west side, where Portage or Hell Creek empties into Little Portage and follow the north shore line of the marsh around to the lake. The dirt thrown up will be used in grading. The north shore has a fine grove and a first class subdivision will be laid out. Portage Creek will flow through the new channel with a good stiff current.

WILL BE HOST TO 300 PEOPLE

Michigan's state sanatorium at Howell is expected to play host to 300 or more tuberculosis fighters from all parts of the state when the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, the Michigan Trudeau Society and the Michigan Sanatorium Association hold their annual meeting there in late October or early November.

The executive committee of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association made the announcement this week that it had chosen the state sanatorium for the meeting. The date will be set soon, officials said.

Topics for discussion by the public health workers and laymen who will be present will include tuberculosis in industry and the need for tuberculosis testing and x-raying school employees. Dr. Bruce H. Douglas, president of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association declared.

"Last year, physicians, school authorities and laymen were welded together in an effort to halt tuberculosis deaths among young athletes, after discussion at our meeting showed the necessity for guarding their health by adequate examinations at the beginning of the playing season," he stated. "We hope to have the same success in urging teachers, school authorities and building engineers to make sure about tuberculosis with the tuberculin test and chest x-ray."

Dr. Douglas said that speakers for the one-day convention are now being approached and a program prepared. One of the featured side meetings will be the Seal Sale section, which will complete preparations for the 1935 sale of tuberculosis Christmas Seals.

Board Of Commerce Takes In Ball Game

Some Forty People From Here See
Detroit Lose To New York In The Crucial Series at Detroit Monday.

Not to outsiders by Lansing, Jackson, Oceana County or other localities which have organized excursions to Detroit to see the Tigers play, the Pinckney Board of Commerce also sponsored a junket there Monday in which some forty people participated.

Among those who made the trip were Mr. and Mrs. Claude Reason, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Dillaway, Mr. and Mrs. Ben White, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Swarthout, W. C. Miller and John Clare, Norman and Catherine Winston Baugan, Col. M. H. Craik, Lee Lauey, William Jefferson, Donald Swarthout, Dean Reason, C. H. Kennedy, Stanley Dinkel, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smoyer, Jack Dillaway, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Livermore, Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Thompson, R. E. Darrow, Miss Betty Clinton, Dan Darrow, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Allen, Mrs. Roy Clark, Miss Clara Leawig.

All went in their own cars and the trip there and back was without any serious incident. The tickets gave them good seats in the third base section. Everything was lovely throughout the game except that some of the delegation chafed to see big shots of the sporting world were kept quite busy for a time autographing base balls hit into the grandstand and captured by spectators.

The only catastrophe was that the Detroit team lost 7 to 9. Probably they should not have been for the Pinckney delegation was a person who has been going to see Detroit play for the past 30 years and never yet has been taken in. This undoubtedly was too much of a handicap for the Tigers to overcome and therefore to Col. Craik and not to Walter Brown, the New York pitcher, should be attributed the Detroit defeat.

We understand the taxi drivers failed to cash in on the Pinckney bunch this time.

WOULD ESTABLISH A NATIONAL CHARITY

Mount Clemens has proposed a program for the establishment of the Mount Clemens National Charity. The National Charity is a plan for the treatment of persons afflicted with rheumatism and arthritis who are unable to pay. The world of famous Mount Clemens mineral water will be applied in the treatment.

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald is going there on August 22 to participate in a civic celebration and inauguration of a national drive on funds. Every mayor, village president and City Manager in the State of Michigan has been invited to the city on that day, along with the Governor.

Mayor Donald R. Westendorf of Mount Clemens is expected to wear robe and light it with torch, will greet the Governor and visiting Mayors and Village Presidents from the State. Legend has it that an old white horse, hitched under a water tank, many years ago, soon became spry again through the curative powers of the mineral water which dropped onto him from the tank. The horse is credited with the discovery of the value of the mineral water.

Mayor Westendorf, in his bath robe, will head the bath robe parade of business men. This will be the second appearance of the famous bath robe parade which gained national prominence last year.

BLACKTOPPING OF PINCKNEY ROAD TO START

We are informed by William Slavin county engineer, that the work of blacktopping the remainder of the Howell-Pinckney road from Chubb's Corners to the north Pinckney village limits will, in all probability, be started this week. The road to be finished is about 3 1/2 miles long.

BARRETT SERVICE DEFEATS PINCKNEY

Pinckney lost to the Barrett Service, a fast colored team from Jackson, in a game played at Pinckney last Sunday by a score of 5 to 1. Jackson got only 8 hits off Howell, the same number as Pinckney got off the colored pitcher, but Jackson succeeded in bunching them. Dinkel scored Pinckney's only run in the 8th when he batted for Bud Dillaway and singled.

IS SELECTED AS OUTSTANDING STUDENT BY WHO'S WHO

The University of Alabama has selected a publication called "Who's Who." This magazine lists the outstanding students in the different colleges in the United States. At the University of Michigan, Russell Read, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Read of Pinckney, was selected as the outstanding student.

He graduated from the Pinckney high school in 1931 as valedictorian and enrolled in the University of Michigan that fall. He has been publication and business manager of the Michigan Daily and a member of the highest honor society of the University and also a member of the honor guard of the senior class. He is also president of the Sigma Chi at the University.

In being selected by Who's Who, he is given an honor for which only about one-half of one percent of the students of each institution are selected. The students are selected for this honor not because of scholarship alone, but also on the basis of leadership, service, extra-curricular activities and characteristics pointing to future usefulness to society and the business world.

BIDS ARE ASKED

Bids have been asked by the federal government on sites for the new postoffice buildings to be built at Chelsea and Howell. We understand that locations in the heart of the business section are not especially desired.

IS BURNED TO DEATH IN TRUCK FIRE

Wilbur Basing was burned to death on Gratiot Ave., three miles south of Port Huron Monday night when his truck caught fire. He was enroute to Port Huron when he was struck by a brewery truck. Both trucks caught fire but Basing and Gus Williams, the truck driver, were pulled from the wreckage. Basing died from his injuries. It is claimed that Williams was asleep when the trucks collided. Basing's truck was empty but Williams was loaded and had to be outoured for a time. Basing was well known here as he was employed by W. C. Miller when the latter lived on the Albert Jackson farm.

Basing drove a Greyhound passenger bus on the Detroit to Lansing and Detroit to Ann Arbor routes for several years. His wife was formerly Miss Etta VanBuren of Unadilla.

Fr. Coughlin To Address Farmers

Noted Speakers Secured for Farmers
Union Meeting at Owosso on September 24, 25.

State leaders of the youngest and oldest farm organizations in Michigan began making preparations today for their annual conventions this fall.

The Michigan Farmers Union, the junior farm group, has set Sept. 24 and 25 as the dates for its second annual meeting in Owosso. The organization's birth took place a year ago in Owosso where delegates from about 200 locals met and received the state charter from the officers of the National Farmers Union.

The Michigan State Grange, the oldest farm organization in the state, is preparing to celebrate its sixtieth anniversary in Big Rapids on Sept. 25 to 27. It is planning a business and entertainment program which is expected to draw the largest attendance of patrons in many years.

Seek Protestant Orators, Too

The 2-day Farmers Union program at Owosso is expected to be full of speaking and debating on the farm and monetary problems. Nationally known authorities on these subjects, will be the speakers.

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin of Royal Oak, Catholic priest famed for his social program, has promised to address the union's convention. He will discuss monetary problems, in announcing Fr. Coughlin's acceptance of an invitation to speak, John W. Lantz of Bay City, president of the state union, said a prominent Protestant orator was also being sought to discuss economic and moral questions of the day.

Lenike and Crawford to Talk

Other speakers for the meeting include Congressman William Lenike, of Fargo, N. D., author of the Frasier Lenike farm mortgage bill; Congressman Fred L. Crawford of Saginaw, farm union sympathizer; Edward H. Everson of St. Charles, S. D., president of the National Farmers Union and E. E. Kennedy of Kankakee, Ill., secretary of the national union.

Among the speakers proposed for the State Grange convention are Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, advocate of William Jennings Bryan's old 16 to 1 silver coinage plan, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, critic of the New Deal.

TWO DIE OF INJURIES RECEIVED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. Wilton Wilson, 70, of Munith, are dead as a result of an auto accident, one mile west of Munith on M-106 Saturday afternoon when their auto struck a truck load of cattle belonging to M. J. Reiss of Pinckney which was being driven from Hillsdale to Pinckney by Nelson, Gerald, who was the owner of the truck.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were on a cross road and are said to have been a left turn when they reached M-106. The car was badly wrecked and the front end of the truck, both the Wilsons were taken to the Rowe Memorial Hospital at Stockbridge by Vera Flynth, who came along about the time of the accident.

Mrs. Wilson died of internal injuries soon after arriving there and Mr. Wilson died at 10:30 P. M. Sunday night. The couple are survived by seven children.

DEXTER SCHOOL BOND ISSUE CARRIES

At the election held at the Dexter high school last Thursday night, the proposition to bond the school district for $22,000 for an addition to the present school, carried by an 8 to 1 ratio. There were 168 votes cast for it and but 21 votes against it. The new addition provides for a gymnasium 75 by 81 feet and two classrooms 22 by 30 feet. Also shower bath, locker rooms and a new heating system and furnishings for the addition.

UNADILLA TO VOTE ON SCHOOL BOND

A special election has been called in the Unadilla township school district to vote on a $7,000 bond issue to build a new school. The bonds will run for 15 years and pay 6 per cent. A new site for the school will be provided on the Plainfield road, just north of the railroad. The plans call for a twelve-grade school and will be practically the same as the ones submitted last year. The district has at the present time $5,000 on hand. With the amount raised by the bond issue, would make the share to be paid by the district $12,000. The balance, or 45 per cent, would be paid by the CWA.

LEAVES ON WESTERN TRIP

Russell Read, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Read of this place, in company with his cousins, Stanley and Charles Smoyer, left this morning on an auto trip to California. From there they expect to go to Washington, Columbia River district and Vancouver. Then they will sell their car and return about October 1st.

BEN HUR CLUB INVITES PINCKNEY BOYS TO PICNIC

The Brighton Ben Hur Club is inviting all boys from Pinckney between the ages of 5 and 16 for an all day picnic at the Ben Hur grounds. Bring your lunch and stay all day. Transportation will be had for all. Meet at the park across from the town hall.

Current Comment

No. We did not go on the junket sponsored by the local board of commerce to see the Detroit-New York base ball game Monday. It came at the wrong time of the week. We will remember the last time we went. The gang chartered one of Blanchard's big buses and with Col. Chalker as pilot, set sail. The Col. lost his bearings and the bus got stranded in a blind alley somewhere in Ecorse. This was also a Detroit-New York game, in fact, a double header. They lasted from 1:30 to 7:00 P. M. and Detroit lost both games. As usual part of the Pinckney gang got left behind and a return home trip but then their owners must make a living. This year Col. Chalker will not be in charge as the boys will go in their own cars.

The internal revenue department is again in the limelight over the fact that Collector Kavanagh has discharged the son of former Collector Horatio Abbott of Detroit. Mr. Abbott does not like this at all and has said so. He also comments on the fact that although Kavanagh discharged the son and daughter of the former Collector Fred Woolworth of Pinckney, he retained his son-in-law, Mr. Kavanagh responds that Percy Belmont comes of a Democratic family, his father having been Democratic postmaster at Bad Axe. We wonder if the time will ever come when all such positions will be under the civil service. At that we doubt if the two political parties could exist without patronage to hand out.

Wayne county got a 1,000 average when she convicted all three charged with the murder of Howard Dickinson, New York attorney. Every effort was made to free the four people accused of the murder but to no avail. The sympathies of the press were played upon to the limit and the two children of one of the women on trial and Ferris' baby were repeatedly brought into the court room. Although the women members of the jury were weeping they voted unanimously for conviction for first degree murder. These jurors kept the death to decide the case according to the evidence submitted and refused to let sympathy sway them from their course. Livingston county jurors of the past who have been known to be tender hearted on such occasions should find this case instructive.

If one gets to thinking that there are no more opportunities that everything that can be done has been done, and that the country has reached a finished state, it is well to check up on the possibilities of some of the things that might be done. It is a fact that no new inventions or discoveries are made during the next twenty years to open up a new field for a few of the developments that might take place in the things we already have. A complete cross country system of highways might be built on a much larger scale than is now being attempted. Trucks may be equipped with diesel engines that will pull a load of freight across a state for a few cents. Airplanes may carry perishable vegetables, fruits, and meats to market centers in a few hours, and, by rising to the high cold air, make the trip without using the cargo. There is television yet to come. Electricity is still in its infancy and the next twenty-five years may see it used to heat homes at less cost than the most economical present day method. It is well to remember in this connection that a single invention or scientific discovery may open up to countless new opportunities, and form the basis of a great industry as did the invention of the automobile. A new discovery may completely change the world in which we live. It may bring new opportunities and a new scheme of living.

In the tragic death of Will Rogers, a film lost a star who possessed more appeal for the average person in the United States than any other actor, perhaps with the exception of the late Marie Dressler and these two were much alike. A Will Rogers film always assumed a crowded theatre. His later films such as Judge Priest, David Harum, Life Begins at 40 etc., were all big successes for the reason that little acting was necessary on the part of Rogers. All he had to do was to act natural. Other stars like Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Mae West and Rudolph Valentino fit across the stage but like morning glories, their reign is brief. Rogers talked a language that the people understood and his homely wisdom struck a responsive chord in their hearts.

USEFUL PARASITES

Today the economic use of parasitology is world-wide; at Farnham house there is a catalogue of 60,000 parasites, with information about their habits, hosts, and the countries where they are found, instantly available for use by the governments of the empire. A timber pest was recently despoiling the forests of Canada. A suitable parasite was sought and found in the forests of Europe. In 1932 the laboratory shipped to Canada 3,300 cocoons of that parasite. Last year the exports exceeded four million—presumably with correspondingly large benefits to the Canadian timber. The time may come when, so far as its insect friends and enemies are concerned, economic vegetation throughout the world will be completely under the control of man.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Edith L. Watson

$100,000 IN GOLD

1849—what a date in history it was! Especially for the West. '49 west of the Mississippi was a year that marked the real beginning of things. People coming and going. High hopes ebbing and flowing. Fortunes made and lost. Gold wasted, thrown away, and stolen. Murder, robbery. That was what '49 meant to the West.

There are stories enough to fill a library about the gold of '49 alone. People went mad over it. The golden phantom was at its most alluring, and men followed it crazily, unswervingly, determined to gain its promised riches if they had to kill those who got in their way. The West was overrun with bandits who hungered and thirsted for gold.

That year, in Sacramento, California, there was a band of eight men who planned to enrich themselves at the cost of others. They went about it in rather haphazard fashion, however. Gold dust may be packed in sacks, gold bars are heavy but precious, but gold money clinks, and slides, and takes up extra space—and it was gold money that the thieves coveted. One hundred thousand dollars in golden coin came into their greedy hands. Divided by eight, this would leave each with a small fortune, as computed in those days. And then, there was always the possibility that something might happen to remove one or more of the number.

The guilty eight headed east with their spoil. Across the Rockies, out toward the plains, they hurried. Six of them fell along the way, killed by soldiers who had tracked them. The surviving pair hurried ahead, anxious, desperate.

But they could not escape with their burden of gold. It must be hidden somewhere in safety, marked so that they would not lose the location, and left. It would wait for them to come back to it.

So the two, hastily inscribing a false date on three stones, buried the gold in a gulch, marked the spot by the dated stones, and vanished into the East.

More than thirty years later, a man stopped at a sheep camp near the present town of Clifford, in eastern Colorado. He was, he told the herder, seeking for the treasure which he had buried in '49. For weeks he stayed in the neighborhood, searching for that fortune in coins—searching in vain. At last he went back East, defeated, but before he left he told the sheepman of the three dated rocks, with their false inscriptions "1847." Somewhere these three rocks still lay, and within their triangle a faint golden phantom hovered, guarding the stolen hoard hidden so long ago.

James Will, the owner of the sheep, would have been more than human if he had not succumbed to the lure of that phantom. Others, to whom he confided the story, hunted also. But no such dated rocks could be found.

At last, only a few years ago, a man named Elkins discovered one of the stones. His find caused scores of persons to flock to the place, digging where it seemed likely the treasure had been hidden. But nothing came to light except roots and rocks, disinterred eagerly, thrown down angrily, by disappointed treasure hunters.

Then late in November, 1884, a second stone was found. T. C. Hutton of Clifford discovered it—a flat rock bearing the inscription "D. Grover and Joseph Fox Lawe—Aug. 8, 1847." And the hunt was on again.

It may be presumed that Grover and Lawe were the fugitives who buried the gold, although why they should thus perpetuate their guilty names is not clear.

So far, no one has succeeded in finding the treasure. Will the third stone be discovered some day in the future, and will another generation of eager gold-seekers dig over the ground?

Perhaps—and yet it may have happened, also, that the man who came back in the '80's to search for the cache found it—and did not tell. He may have moved it, come back later, and taken it away—or even (and this is possible) found that his surviving partner in crime had already been on the scene.

It is possible, too, that the stranger might have been "spoofing" the sheepherder. He could have been looking for something entirely different from hidden, stolen gold, and he could easily have inscribed that peculiar date on the rocks at that time. Why? Well, why do men enjoy playing practical jokes?

Still, no one could convince the people of Clifford that his story was other than the purest truth. The golden phantom is one ghostly figure that is delightfully easy to believe in.

And maybe it is all true—maybe some one will dig up that pleasant sum of one hundred thousand dollars in gold coin some day—who knows?

The English Setter

The English Setter is a larger breed of the Spaniel group. It is a sporting dog and is taught to crouch down when marking game, instead of standing, like a Pointer. It is a handsome animal with a wavy, silk coat, while the tail carries a fringe of long, straight hair.

Oriental Drape and Classic Pleat

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SEEKING a new fashion thrill? Here it is and a rather startling one when it comes to "something different." It's the draped silhouette either of Hindu or classic Greek influence. Look for it this fall, for draped fullness is on the way. As a matter of fact it has already arrived.

For quite some time Paris designers have been giving these draped effects a good try-out in evening wraps and gowns. When Schiaparelli and Alix and others first displayed gowns that either went harem or were daringly draped a la Hindustan and when artful pleatings went classic Greek and the aari and the Ibrahim headscarf made their dramatic appearance, they created no end of excitement in fashion's domain. The venture went over with such overwhelming success style creators were led to adopt the idea of drapes and pleats as a workable formula in the designing of the new fall and winter modes.

The oriental influence which is being so dramatically exploited this season is shown in the costume to the right in the picture. The front fullness which is a characteristic feature of the newer fashions is achieved through both shirring and draping. As the season progresses the importance of front fullness will become increasingly apparent. The new softly styled frocks, the new separate skirts and the new coats all emphasize this trend. In harmony with this idea of front fullness comes the vogue of draped bodices. The most important feature of these smartly draped bodices is that their technique involves the use of gathers and fullness that seems to radiate from the shoulder line.

It is also significant that this stunning gown is made of chiffon, for the formal afternoon gown of filmy black is proving a favorite among best dressed women. The square rhinestone buttons add sparkle to the costume. The hat of quilted silk is very unusual—suggests Egyptian inspiration.

The other gown is likewise made of black silk chiffon. The waist-length jacket is done in all-over exquisitely fine accordion pleating. The blouse and the softly tied and pleated sash are of bright vermillion silk chiffon. The classic arrangement of this sash obviously suggests Grecian influence.

The Greek trends are reflected in every realm of fashion, ranging from evening gowns to beach costumes. Beach wraps are so designed as to fall over the shoulder in classic cascade pleats. Then there are the lovely white chiffon evening gowns that are all-over pleated and go trailing in grace with pleated capelike scarfs which fall over the shoulder in most picturesque fashion.

One outcome of Greek influence is the vogue which calls for flat-heeled Grecian sandals. The smartest Parisiennes are wearing them fashioned of gilt leather. Picture a gown of Greek inspiration made of white crepe. The sculptured classic look is accented with a handsome gold cord with tassels about the waist. Gilt leather Greek sandals add the final touch.

The Hindu turban which the lady to the left in the illustration is wearing is noteworthy in that advance millinery showings are placing particular stress on the importance of Hindu-draped turbans for immediate wear with one's midsummer frocks. These charming turbans and berets are made either of black or white crepe or chiffon. As you see in the picture the thin fabric is twisted and shirred in interesting fashion. A new look is achieved this season for berets and turbans of Oriental inspiration in that they are worn, in some instances, back off the forehead.

MIDSEASON COAT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A swagger coat of uncompromising simplicity in your favorite pastel shade is the thing to wear right now over that summer frock you love best. The model pictured is developed in a new novelty woolen that combines the appearance of chinchilla with the softness of polo cloth.

MODERN VOGUE IN SCENT APPLICATION

A delightful new vogue in scent application—one particularly effective and appropriate with sleeveless and backless summer frocks and beach wear—is the one sponsored by a famous old French perfume house. Perfume, according to them, should not be applied to the clothing or handkerchief, or in little dabs behind the ears (as most American women apply it), but should be applied directly to the skin, spread over it in lavish quantities. Applied in this way, scent becomes an intrinsic part of the personality, being modified differently by the different texture of each skin, and so acquiring a warmer and richer, as well as an individual, fragrance.

A lovely and refreshing preparation known as "skin perfume," which should serve a double purpose in the sticky summer months (since it is cooling and stimulating as well as fragrant) is produced by this French house. The skin perfume comes, incidentally, in the fresh and delicate scent of lilac, unprecedentedly popular this year both as spring and summer shade and as floral perfume.

Another new note in scent fashion widely advocated this summer is the combination of perfume and dusting powder in the same scent to give one a single, individual fragrance. These combined perfume and dusting powder packages are ideal for summer use, from the viewpoint of comfort as well as charm.

Beauty Hint

An astringent lotion with a powder base makes an excellent foundation for make-up during warm weather. It may also be used to cleanse the face several times during the day before applying powder.

QUILTMAKERS FAVOR OLD-TIME PATTERNS

Patchwork quilt making is still in the limelight and the old patterns seem to be most in demand.

Here are the names of the blocks shown above. Most of them are very old designs—"Log Cabin"—"Rare Old Tulip"—"Poinsettia"—"Pineapple"—"Butterfly"—"Pussy in the Corner"—"Pin Wheel"—"Sunbonnet Babies."

When making the next quilt watch the seams, one seam sewed wrong ruins the whole block. Here are a few suggestions for making perfect quilts. Press all material before cutting. Use blotting paper for patterns, thus avoiding pinning. Cut each piece exactly like pattern. Match all edges perfectly when sewing together. Lay the patches and blocks out for best color combinations before sewing together.

Patchwork Quilt Book No. 21 contains 37 old and new quilt designs with illustrations, instructions and cutting charts for the patches. The above 10 quilts are included. Send 15c to our quilt department and receive this book by mail.

Your Temper

No man ever amounts to very much until he learns to control his temper. Every time we "fly off the handle" we waste a lot of precious energy, besides wrecking our poise and crippling our judgment. Man must first learn to master himself.—Grit

Inconsistency Noted in Application of Words

One wonders how the same name—which etymologically is equivalent to "twice cooked"—came to be applied to two things so widely diverse as the English and the American biscuit. Yet, although the Englishman in the United States must ask for a "cracker" if he wants what he has hitherto called a "biscuit," he finds, to his surprise, that an American firm which manufactures it on a large scale registers itself under the name, not of the National Cracker company, but of the National Biscuit company.

One might, perhaps, mention as a further though minor example of verbal inconsistency the fact that, while it is an "administration" at Washington that corresponds to the "government" at Westminster, the individuals who compose it are known as "cabinet members," not "cabinet ministers" as they would be called in England.

The Briton learns that in the United States "boot" is specialized to mean what he calls a "high boot" or a "Wellington," whereas the footwear that he ordinarily calls "boots" is known there as "shoes."

But the mystery that remains to be cleared up is why the Englishman should employ a "shoeblack" to clean what he calls his "boots" while an American employs a "bootblack" to perform a similar service on his "shoes."—Herbert W. Horwill in the Atlantic Monthly.

Provide Food for Dead

Ojibway Indians still place food for the dead at their burial grounds at L'Anse and Chicaugon, Mich., says a correspondent in the New York Times. Miniature houses are built for the food, and the Indians say their dead come to the houses at midnight and partake of it. As a matter of fact, small animals and birds usually eat the food.

CONSTANT SMOKER

Most men that smoke a lot have what we call "fuzzy tongues" and don't know it! Smoking stops the flow of saliva in the mouth and you get too much acid in your system. Makes you feel sluggish and lousy. The best way to lick the acids and still keep smoking is by taking Milnesia wafers twice a day. Your mouth will always feel clean and fresh and you always have your usual pep.

MILNESIA Wafers neutralize the excess acids that cause indigestion, heartburn and sick headaches. Each Wafer is a full adult dose, children—one-quarter to one-half. Pleasant to take. Recommended by thousands of physicians—At All Good Druggists.

Economical, too! Each Milnesia package contains more wafers than all other liquid forms.

JUNK CAR RACKET

ALREADY SOLVED

As the result of cooperation of the Detroit Police Department, the Secretary of State's Department, automobile insurance companies and United States Department of Justice operatives, the "junked car" racket has been placed in the category of kidnapping—you can't get away with it.

This announcement, sanctioned by officials of the Detroit Police Department, has been made by the Department of State at Lansing, following the recent broadcasting of a news story which received wide attention throughout the Eastern half of the United States for its description of the details of the racket supposedly "foolproof".

The story related the tactics of a gang of motor thieves whose agents, buying up late model junked or wrecked cars, came into possession of the titles. The next step was to steal a car virtually identical to the one junked. The serial numbers of the stolen cars would be changed to agree with those of the junked car, as shown by the title. Shortly thereafter the title would be transferred, legally, from the name of the original owner to that of an agent of the gang. From that point on, open sale of the car was possible.

In the moves made to combat the racket, it was noted that most of the wrecks were bought in Detroit, through the new cars stolen to replace them might be traced to distant states. Herman R. McConnell, head of the Title Division of the Department of State and Inspector William Dwyer, in charge of the auto squad of the Detroit Police Department, The plan evolved is simple. Every member of the Detroit Police Department has been charged with reporting every badly wrecked car he spots anywhere. Two detectives, Elmer Busse and Ray Dardy, who have been assigned exclusively to checking wrecks reported; the details are noted, and a memorandum filed at once with McConnell. Thereafter, no transfer of title will be made to any other person. If and when such application is made, it is certain that the applicant will give his correct address so that the title may be mailed to him. The title won't come, but police will. If the applicant is innocent, he can tell the police where he purchased the car.

One application for transfer of a title already "flagged" in the records at Lansing, led to the arrest in Detroit of 16 men and the recovery of 80 stolen cars, mostly stolen before the new system was installed.

Some thieves have worked the junked car racket in Detroit for some time past. Records show 44 men convicted within the past year of offenses involving junked cars. Federal Department of Justice operatives have cooperated where men arrested for violation of the Federal Dyer Act, which defines transportation of stolen cars across state boundaries as a felony. Other offenses punished as the result of tracing wrecked cars, include grand larceny and unlawfully driving away automobiles.

Insurance companies have been advised to cooperate by notifying the Department of State when they pay total loss claims on wrecked cars.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made by Clarence E. Glenn and Carrie B. Glenn, husband and wife, of Putnam Township, Livingston County, Michigan, to James O. White and Bessie B. White, husband and wife, of Cincinnati, Ohio, which mortgage was dated the twenty-second day of April, 1918, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Livingston County, Michigan, on the twenty-sixth day of April, 1918, in Liber 103 of Mortgages at page 420, which said mortgage was duly assigned by the mortgagees therein named to Fred Glenn, by assignment thereof, dated the eighth day of October, 1919, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Livingston, on the sixteenth day of October, 1919, in Liber 119 of Mortgages on page 6, which said mortgage was further assigned by Fred Glenn and Tirzah Glenn, his wife, to Edwin R. Ostrander, by assignment thereof, dated the fifteenth day of October, 1919, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Livingston, on the sixteenth day of October, 1919, in Liber 119 of Mortgages on page 6, which said mortgage was further assigned, pursuant to the last will and testament of Edwin R. Ostrander, by an order of the Probate Court for Washtenaw County, Michigan, which order was dated the seventh day of July, 1932, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Livingston, on the eleventh day of July, 1932, in Liber 172 of Deeds at page 592, to Edwin Kenneth Purchase and Marie C. Purchase, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice for principal and interest, the sum of Sixty Eight Hundred and 14/100 Dollars, and an Attorney Fee of Thirty-Five Dollars as provided for in said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding at law having been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, on Friday the eleventh day of October, 1935, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the westerly entrance of the Courthouse, in the City of Howell, Livingston County, Michigan, that being the place where the Circuit Court for the County of Livingston is held, sell at public auction to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage, with six percent interest, and all legal costs, including said attorney fee, the premises being described in said mortgage as follows:

The Symbol of an Ideal

THE history of American industry affords no example of lasting success that came by chance. Instead, it shows that enduring institutions are products of an honest policy applied intelligently and faithfully over a period of years.

The vital place which the telephone occupies in modern life did not result from accident. It was won—and is held—by supplying the public with a service of genuine and steadily increasing value.

To better that value is the abiding principle of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company's policy. Even during the recent years of sharply reduced revenues, years in which all values were subjected to bitter tests, this company did not relax in its obligation to achieve further improvements in its service.

As a direct result of this policy, the people of Michigan are receiving a higher grade telephone service than over before. This statement is not made lightly. The improvement is revealed by carefully compiled records of daily performance. They show a greater speed and accuracy in handling local calls; a continued decrease in "out-of-order" reports; more prompt repair service; and a greater proportion of out-of-town messages completed while the subscriber holds the line.

These records, though undramatic in themselves, are important as milestones of progress toward complete satisfaction for the users of this vital public service. The improvements they signify were not won by chance—they did not "just happen."

They were achieved by this company's rigid adherence to a policy having as its basic ideal the best possible service for the least possible cost that will maintain the present standards and assure the improvements of the future.

USE A TRIAL ELECTRIC RANGE

to prepare this tempting grilled meal
FOR HOT-WEATHER APPETITES!

THIS delicious grilled oven meal can be prepared with only one utensil, and consists of tomatoes, broiled ham, and potatoes-on-the-half-shell (the potatoes having been previously baked). The flavor-conserving heat of an electric oven makes the preparation of this meal far superior to ordinary methods. Flavor is sealed-in, and food values are retained. The gentle, even heat of the electric range assures the utmost tenderness in the ham, and the tomatoes and potatoes are evenly browned and cooked. This delicious meal is only one of many you can enjoy with a modern electric range—and you can try a range in your own kitchen by means of the Trial Plan.

The plan briefly is this: We will install an electric range in your kitchen without initial charge, so that you may give it a thorough trial. During this trial period you simply pay for the service as registered by your meter, plus a monthly charge of $1 for the range. If you decide to keep the range, your monthly payments will be applied toward the purchase price. If you decide that you do not want it, the range will be removed at our expense. Send in your application for a trial range today!

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO GIVE JAMBOREE BROADCAST

Announcement is made by J. James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, that President Roosevelt, Honorary President of the Boy Scouts of America, will broadcast from the White House on Wednesday, August 21, at 8 p. m. Eastern Standard Time, the Jamboree which had been scheduled for August 21st and 22nd at Washington.

August 21st was to have been the day of a spectacular ceremony when President Roosevelt, who was to have ridden the length of Pennsylvania Avenue between massed lines of uniformed Boy Scouts, wearing their new uniforms, and a reviewing stand, as part of the Jamboree celebration of the twenty-fifth birthday of the Boy Scouts of America.

Cancellation of the Jamboree was made by radio broadcast by the President, following a conference with officials including H. S. Cummings, surgeon general of Public Health Service, George Allen, commissioner of District of Columbia, and Dr. James E. West, chief scout executive, which they felt necessary in view of the mild epidemic of infantile paralysis which is prevalent in parts of North Carolina and Virginia.

However, the speech will be made by President Roosevelt the same day if the Scouts stand beneath the south portico of the White House to hear the talk personally.

Local scouts and leaders will "listen-in" to the broadcast, which will be received over the N.B.C. and Columbia network.

Scouts and leaders of the Washington-Livingston Council who would have been in Washington attending the Jamboree, are holding a three-day encampment at Camp Tie-Tonk-Ah, at Wolf Lake, under the direction of Scoutmaster T. Bruce Rider.

Iosco

Miss Maude Crofoot entertained a girl friend from Detroit over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Harwood and children were recent callers of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Miller.

The annual homecoming of the Iosco M. E. Church will be August 30. A very cordial invitation is extended to all.

The repair work on the Iosco M. E. church is progressing very nicely. Mr. Duncan is doing the carpenter work.

Miss Alice Jensen of Battle Creek came Friday to visit her sister, Mrs. John Rittman and help her celebrate her birthday Sunday.

W. E. Miller called on Walter Miller last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster and children of Lansing visited the former's aunt, Mrs. Henry Tandy and Mr. Tandy and family, Sunday.

Irene and Ila King and Dorothy Jean Miller spent a very enjoyable afternoon with Miss Maude Crofoot.

Philathea Notes

The Philathea Missionary program for the quarter resulted in $100.00 toward our church benevolence. This meeting was held with Mrs. Harry Lee in Lansing on Wednesday last, but the reporter being unavoidably absent, regrets the inability to present a full report at this time.

On Sunday our pastor and family were back from their vacation and Mrs. Zuse had charge once more of the Philathea class. A helpful lesson hour was enjoyed by members and guests on the subject, "Martha's Christ and the Modern World." It is to be hoped that next Sunday, the last August class session, will find even more gathered in our class room for consideration of the topic "In Partnership with God." Barnabas will be especially suited, "to see how he devoted to God his property, his time and his talents." Just where does God need partners in the doing of his work in our community.

Cucumber pickles, which add zest to meals or lunches when carefully made, are sometimes spoiled by causes which could be avoided, according to home economics experts at Michigan State College.

The shrivelling of pickles may be caused by vinegar which is too hot or too strong. Too strong brine or too much sugar are other reasons for shrivelled pickles. Sweet pickles often shrivel due to overcooking or too much sugar.

Bacterial action causes softening of pickles. Weak brine or storage in warm places help the bacteria to become established and to multiply. Boiling vinegar for considerable periods weakens it and permits bacterial growth in pickles preserved in such vinegar. Pickles which are exposed above the surface of the liquid in pickling jars also become soft.

Large quantities of spice or boiling of spice too long in vinegar may cause bitter flavors in pickles. Scum forming on the surface of liquids in which pickles are being soaked should be removed frequently.

Attempting to obtain a brighter green color in pickles by heating them in a copper utensil is not recommended. Copper acetate is formed when this is done and this material is poisonous. The use of alum to make pickles crisp is also a poor practice because the same result can be obtained without using double substances. Pickles can be made crisp by soaking them for 24 hours in a brine made of one pound of salt to one gallon of water.

Hollow pickles may be caused by faulty growth or by permitting the cucumbers to stand too long before they are processed. Cucumbers should not be allowed to stand more than 24 hours.

A grateful public is paying its taxes and saving its homes

FROM all parts of the state come gratifying reports of the way the Michigan public is responding to the current tax-collection drive. Men and women everywhere are determined to save their homes, and benefit by the savings that a thoughtful legislature has provided.

Few indeed are the property-owners who cannot now pay their back taxes, either in full or on the ten-year plan.

If you have not yet made arrangements to take care of your back taxes SEE YOUR COUNTY TREASURER AT ONCE. Bring him your old tax-bills, or at any rate, the legal description of your property. He will tell you quickly the amount that you owe and advise you as to how you may meet this important obligation. Upon request he will give you a descriptive folder that tells in simple terms just what you must do to save your home.

REMEMBER! September first is the last day on which you can pay your back taxes for 1932 and prior years without interest or penalties. It is also the last day on which you can put these taxes on the "TEN-YEAR PLAN" without incurring additional interest. ACT NOW. Delay is dangerous.

By co-operating with your state in this far-flung tax-collection drive you SAVE YOUR HOME, SAVE 27% TO 45% AND EVEN MORE in interest and penalties, and save yourself from worry over the possibility of losing your home. ACT NOW. Help yourself while helping your State, County, City, Village, Township and Schools.

CROPS DISCUSSED

Wheat, hay corn and oats constitute one of our standard rotations. However, other crops may be inserted in this rotation to round out the farming business and to increase the number of years necessary to complete the cycle. In a very short time growers will start to prepare a seed bed for the 1936 crop of wheat. Let us assume that the seed bed has been prepared and deal only with the standard practices that should be followed incident to planting the crop. The 1935 grain should have yielded well due to the excellent growing conditions. However, in most sections wheat rust caused a considerable loss in small deformed kernels. Another pest that thrived this year was chaff. This is a definite plant producing a definite seed. Now to insure a good crop of wheat the seed grain should be thoroughly cleaned to remove all of this foreign material. Even though the seed cleans away one-third your returns will merit this operation. Therefore the first item of importance is to use good clean seed.

Secondly, even though your seed shows no signs of foreign material after cleaning minute organisms may be present. These organisms or spores will produce a disease known as smut or bunt. To guard against this injury the seed grain should be treated as follows.

No. 1 Copper Carbonate Dust Treatment (Applicable to spring, winter and durum wheats for smut control, and to sorghums for the control of covered kernel smut. Not applicable to oats and barley.) Use a full-strength copper carbonate dust (about 50 per cent copper) manufactured especially for seed treatment. Apply at the rate of 2 to 2½ ounces per bushel of well-cleaned seed. Mix the seed and dust in a tight mixing machine until every kernel is thoroughly covered with the dust. Seed thus treated may be stored indefinitely until sown, without injury to germination. With this chemical, care must be used to avoid damage to the grain drill. Sometimes there is a tendency for the treated seed to cake in the drill, when standing overnight, or longer, in damp or wet weather. In such cases it is advisable to rock the drill wheels back and forth before starting in order to avoid breaking or bending the working parts. All working parts of the drill should be kept well oiled. The treated grain should be well cleaned out of the drill when seeding is completed to avoid corrosion of the parts. Seed treated with copper carbonate should not be fed to farm animals.

No. 2 Ethyl mercury phosphate dust treatment; improved cerasan. (Applicable to spring, winter, and durum wheats, oats and barley.)

Use ethyl mercury phosphate dust manufactured especially for seed treatment. Apply at the rate of one-half ounce per bushel in a mixing machine, or as recommended in directions on the container. The dusted grain should be kept in a bin, pile, wagon box, or sacks for at least 10 hours. During this period dusted grain should remain uncovered. Treated grain may then be seeded at once or stored for at least 4 weeks. Ordinarily, grain should not be treated more than 4 weeks before seeding time because of uncertainty as to the effect on seed germination after this period. This treatment has the advantage of being applicable to wheat, oats, and barley, is easily applied, does not cake in the drill, and is non-corrosive to drill parts. As in the case of the copper carbonate, seed treated with this chemical should not be fed to farm animals. Do not apply more than one-half ounce of this dust per bushel. An excess may injure germination.

FORMALDEHYDE—The formaldehyde treatment, while as effective as copper carbonate in the control of smut, is the least desirable of the control methods and must be used with considerable care to prevent seed injury. Formaldehyde is not recommended for use on wheat when copper carbonate is available. Two methods of treating are commonly employed in certain sections of the state: (1) the dilute formaldehyde, and (2) the concentrated formaldehyde method.

DILUTE FORMALDEHYDE METHOD—Clean the grain thoroughly to remove light seed and smut balls. Place the seed in piles and sprinkle until every kernel is thoroughly wet, using a solution of one pint of formaldehyde in 40 gallons of water. One gallon of solution will treat about two bushels of grain. Cover with blankets or bags for only TWO HOURS, then spread out thinly in a warm place to dry. Sow at once or not later than 12 hours after treating. The drill should be set ahead to allow for the slightly swollen grain. Do not sow in dry soil.

CONCENTRATED FORMALDEHYDE METHOD—Clean the grain as recommended above. Apply the formaldehyde with a hand sprayer as the grain is being shoveled from one pile to another. Use one pint of formaldehyde diluted with four or five pints of water to treat 50 bushels of grain. Cover with sacks or blankets.

FOUR HOURS—NO LONGER. Spread the grain thinly in a dry warm place and allow to air for one or two hours. Plant immediately. Do not treat more grain than be sowed in one day. This treatment will severely injure or kill the seed if it is kept overnight. Do not sow formaldehyde-treated wheat in dry soil; to do so will result in decreased stand due to injury to the seed.

There is no chemical treatment to control wheat rust. Because of the habits of the disease it is well to destroy the common barberry as the disease spends a portion of its life on this plant and a portion on the wheat. The barberry supports this disease during the winter.

Third: Do not get over anxious to plant your wheat as we have an insect to contend with. This insect, known as the hessian-fly, attacks the wheat seedlings and lays eggs in the leaf sheaths. Sometimes in heavy infestation many of the plants die in the autumn and winter.

Control There comes a time each year, usually in September, after which no eggs are laid, and if we can so time our seeding that the plants will not be suitable for receiving eggs until after the flies are through, then we escape the "fly" altogether. This time is called the "fly-free date" and varies with each season. It is, however, possible to compute the relative time between different parts of the State and to base the time for sowing on the average time observed during a period of 25 years over the entire United States. This study is based on an investigation made by Dr. A. D. Hopkins of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology. Fly free date in Livingston from September 16 to 26.

Neighboring Notes

Mrs. Leota Shoemaker of Richmond, Ind., has haled Joe Guinan into court again in Detroit in order to have her common law marriage with him declared legal. She lost her first suit. Judge Marshner has set September 5th as the date for hearing her petition.

Mayor Lovejoy and Supervisor Tripp of Milford have had the suit against them filed by an Oakland county deputy sheriff dismissed on the grounds that service on them was not properly made.

Married at St. John's Episcopal church in Howell on August 12th, Thelma Hoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hoff, to Frederick Salmon. Orrin Daintie, 64 of Detroit, committed suicide one day last week by shooting himself.

Coach Charles Bachman of Mich. State, although he finished second in the contest to see who would coach the college all-stars, who will play the Chicago Bears football team at Chicago on Aug. 29, will coach the team. Frank Thomas, Alabama coach, who finished first, is ill with acute arthritis.

Brighton Businessmen are putting on a big dollar day sale on Thursday, the first of their three gala days this week.

The Hartland school will add an extra teacher to their staff this year.

The Howell fair board has added four new directors to the board. They are Ross Reed of Pinckney, Robert Crouse of Hartland, Bert Donaldson of Tyrone and James Morgan, Brighton and Alfred Pfau of Iscoo.

Winfield Line, Howell merchant, has received a private pilot's license from the Detroit Board of Commerce. He has been taking a course in aviation at the Wayne Airport.

Miss Molly Wilson, who has been spending the summer with relatives in this county, returned to her home in Staten Island N. Y. Wednesday.

The City of Howell will vote on August 26th, to bond for $65,000 to construct a sanitary sewerage disposal plant.

AMERICAN BOY MAGAZINE IS LOADED WITH ADVENTURE

"We try to make a subscription to THE AMERICAN BOY," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor, "a round trip ticket to a world-wide adventure cruise."

"Most boys cannot afford the luxury of travel but they can afford to settle down under a reading lamp and take an imaginative trip to foreign lands in American Boy stories. American Boy stories, during the coming year, will take readers to the stolls of the South Seas in a trading schooner, to the polar wastes behind a dog team, into the Canadian wilderness with the Mounted Police, through the Caribbean with the U. S. Navy, even to the far-away planet of Mars in a space ship.

There'll be true adventures among the lions and chimpanzees of Africa with Captain Carl von Hoffman, famous explorer and ethnologist. In addition there'll be stories about the favorite characters of a million boys, Bonehead Jim Tierney, detective; Square Jaw Davis, engineer; Hilda-rask, the red and gold collie; Connie Morgan, and Douglas Renfrew.

There'll be vocational stories that will help the reader select his life work, advice on hobbies, sports tips from famous coaches and players, money-earning suggestions, vacation hints, and worthwhile contests.

Relief for a Burn

If you or one of the youngsters gets a light burn and you have no efficient remedy at hand, try this: Scrape a raw potato and make a poultice of it. This usually gives immediate relief. If not, continue applying the potato poultices. As soon as one gets hot and dry, replace it with a fresh one.

Wiping Out of Beaver

Deplored by Foresters

It is now an accepted belief of rangers and other forest authorities that beavers help to prevent forest fires, says John P. Dinney in Our Dumb Animals. Whenever logging companies move into a virgin forest they employ hunters to clear the streams of these busy animals. Their numerous dams regulate the flow of waters in the region, with the result that the surrounding lands retain sufficient moisture to check the easy outbreak of fires. With the extinction of the beavers and their dams the waterways gradually dry up. The deadwood and brush, left by the logging company when it moves on, become dry as tinder, easily ignited.

A case in point is that of a virgin territory in northern Saskatchewan. With the appearance of the mill company the beavers disappeared. A million feet of lumber were sent out of the region every 24 hours.

Due to the absence of dams the streams dried up; so did the deadwood. A fire broke out, destroying the mill and much of the remaining forests. In contrast is an adjacent heavily wooded area, where the beaver still holds forth. It is green; the streams are well stocked with fish, the forests with woodland creatures.

"Come on in, if you want to, Bob," Kentucky said. "You might just as well sit in on this."

Elliot accepted, following as Kentucky led the way through the main living room to a little room at one side. This room was small, and its gun-racks and deer horns made it seem smaller, as if there were hardly room for the three men to find places here. Kentucky Jones could not look at this trophy-cluttered room, which gave a curious effect of being a cross section of Campo Ragland's soul, without thinking of that other contrasting room at the other end of the house, which belonged to Jean's mother. So different must have been the people that made those rooms that the wonder was not that Mrs. Ragland was now far away, but that she had ever been able to make herself a part of this household at all.

Campo sat in a corner. His heavy desk was pulled diagonally across in front of him, as if he were at bay there, futilely barricaded. From beneath the sweeping dome of his forehead his eyes regarded them as redly as the eyes of a dog in firelight. Suddenly Kentucky wondered if Campo's evident sense of standing stubbornly at bay had been caused more by himself and Sheriff Hopper than by the now far-off woman who had made him fear a showdown upon Mason's death—so fear it that he was held in a paralysis of indecision while Jim Humphreys was killed, and Lee Bishop, and the 88 herds poured over his range.

In the shadows of a recessed window-seat Jean Ragland sat.

Sheriff Hopper said, "Howdy, Campo; howdy, Miss Ragland."

Campo flicked him a glance, then dropped surlily red eyes to his thick freckle-blotched hands.

Kentucky Jones began the making of a cigarette. "Seems like we been a little bit disorganized out here, Hopper," he said. "The fact is Campo and I haven't seen eye to eye on this, in all things."

Sheriff Floyd Hopper waited; and Bob Elliot crossed his legs and laced his fingers together.

"It seems," said Kentucky, "that Campo became convinced that I did away with Old Ironsides myself."

There was a sharp silence here during which Kentucky Jones finished and lighted his cigarette. Hopper turned a questioning glance on Campo. "Yes?"

Ragland glanced at Kentucky Jones, but did not speak.

"Everybody's known all along," Kentucky said, "that I was out here at the day Mason was killed; and I've admitted it. Assuming for a minute that I could easily have got hold of the weapon that killed Mason, the next thing needed against me was my reason for this act of unseemly violence."

Campo found out where I did have a good reason—and naturally figured that he'd come to the end of the trail."

"You admit you had a reason for killing Mason?" Hopper said.

"I'm not denying that I had," said Kentucky. "Come to find out, that was one of the reasons that Campo Ragland wanted Ted Baylor brought out here. Ted is one of the very few that know that Mason turned me down on a renewal that I'd counted on—and like to broke me."

"You're broke, Jones?"

"Close to it."

"You sure are free-handed about making a case against yourself!"

"Campo was overlooking a couple of things," said Kentucky. "It's true that you can show I was broke by Mason. But what about all those other cowmen that Mason had to close down on? To those men Mason's decisions meant salvation or ruin—exactly as to me. He could not carry us all. In digging up a reason for me to kill Mason, Campo only dug up a motive that forty or fifty rimrock cowmen would own to."

"I see what you're driving at," said Hopper. "Maybe Mason did have such an enemy, or six of them, or fifty; the fifty of them weren't having no barbecue at the Bar Hook the day Mason was killed."

"So I gathered," Kentucky admitted. "But bear in mind this—if any one of the fifty had been there, he might have gun-whipped Mason. There's been an awful lot of wearing of guns in the rimrock the past ten, twelve months, what with riders hoping for a chance to shoot a coyote, or a rabbit—with a .45 slug! Cowmen's minds can work that way only about so long before something boils over and busts."

"Yes," Hopper admitted. "I was looking for it all right; but when it come to killing Mason—"

"He was a right ambitious victim," Kentucky agreed; "but there were big reasons for killing him, too. When you build up pressure like that you can figure on an explosion. But it was the gun smoke in the history, and the pressure of the bad times, that wiped out John Mason—and incidentally Zack Sanders."

"And Jim Humphreys and Lee Bishop," the sheriff put in.

"That's partly true," Kentucky allowed; "the killing of Humphreys and Bishop sure do make up an angle of this thing. It took two things to kill off Humphreys and Bishop—the smoky feeling between the brands before Mason's death, and Mason's death itself. Humphreys and Bishop were killed in the weirdest d—n one-sided range struggle that has ever been seen on this or any other range."

The sheriff said slowly, "Mason's death come first. But don't you ever think, Elliot, that I've forgotten the funny look of this so-called range war that's rubbed out Humphreys and Bishop. Everybody knows you've swamped Campo's range; and Campo's hardly raised his hand against it. I'll tell you plain, Elliot, if it turns out that Bishop and Humphreys were killed in the kind of shenanigan it looks like, I'll—"

Bob Elliot reddened. "I didn't come here to talk about range rights," he said, "but if you want a showdown on that, I'm ready any time. As long as there's been cattle on the rim, or on the Bake Pan either, no brand has ever leaned any harder against another brand than the Bar Hook has borne down on the 88. If Campo's pulled in his horns, maybe it's because he knows that the rights of the 88 are going to be backed up for a change."

Campo Ragland spoke for the first time. "Rights!" he said bitterly. "Rights!"

Sheriff Floyd Hopper said angrily, "You're a funny one, Elliot, to bring in talk about rights!"

"You said yourself," Elliot answered, "the Bar Hook has folded up."

They all turned their eyes to Campo Ragland; but the boss of the Bar Hook was rolling a cigarette with slow meticulous care, and he did not contribute any observations.

Sheriff Floyd Hopper swung restively in his seat. "I can't understand it," he said. "I can't understand it."

"You'll understand it now," said Kentucky Jones. "I can tell you exactly why Elliot has thought he could shove his beef all over Bar Hook range in full peace and comfort."

Bob Elliot said, "If the idea is to sit here half the—"

"Let him alone, Bob," Hopper snapped.

Kentucky Jones looked Elliot over with a cool unfriendly eye. "I'll tell you another little thing that happened the day Mason was killed," he said. "Bob Elliot and Campo Ragland were riding the Bake Pan range; and it happened that they met on that ride."

"Where did you get this?" Hopper put in.

"Partly," Kentucky said, "from Elliot himself."

Elliot said, "I'll be d—d if—"

"Will you be still?" said Sheriff Hopper. "What then, Jones?"

"Elliot was armed; Campo Ragland was not. It seems to be a kind of custom with the 88s to take advantage of a situation like that—as Lee Bishop and I found out one day in a little conversation we had with Bill McCord. Naturally I wasn't there when Ragland and Elliot met; but I can tell you that what happened was this—Elliot gave Ragland such a cussing out as you couldn't expect any man to stand for, or put up with."

"Is that right, Campo?" the sheriff demanded.

Campo Ragland gave a grunt which might have been an affirmative; it did not appear to be a denial.

"Campo Ragland," said Kentucky Jones, "told Bob Elliot that he would kill him before the day was out."

"He's guessing now," said Bob Elliot.

"Yes, guessing," conceded Kentucky Jones.

Campo Ragland said unexpectedly, "Yes, by G—d—but he's guessing right!"

Kentucky Jones nodded. "Sure I'm guessing right! Up here in the Fryng Pan country there's an old lion hunter called Old Man Coffee; and he says—"

"To h—l with Old Man Coffee," said the sheriff. "What happened then?"

"Just at the moment," said Kentucky Jones, "I can't tell you exactly what happened then; but I can tell you something different, of a very curious interest. On the wall of this house used to be a chromo—an enlarged snapshot—of a man sitting on a horse. You'd look across the room at that little picture, and you'd say to yourself, 'Why, Campo has hung up a lens study of Bob Elliot. Then maybe you'd look closer; and you'd see it wasn't Bob Elliot at all—but a representation of John Mason.'"

Sheriff Hopper said, "You mean—you're saying—"

"Bob Elliot knew that sometimes, sitting his horse in a certain way and at a certain distance, he and John Mason looked strangely alike; and Campo had promised to kill Elliot that day. Elliot knew that Campo did not dare to take a chance on what a jury might make out of that."

"You're suggesting that Campo Ragland killed Mason by mistake, taking him for Elliot?"

"I'm suggesting that it could be made to look that way; and that Elliot was able to hold that over Campo—and that was why Elliot dared swamp Bar Hook range."

"You mean that he ran a bluff that he could bring Ragland to trial for the murder of Mason?"

"You can call it a bluff," said Kentucky Jones, looking at Bob Elliot, "or you could call it a kind of silent blackmail, if you want."

Bob Elliot jerked forward in his chair as if he would come to his feet. "Why, d—n your eyes," he said, "if you think I'm going to sit here and take—"

"You'll sit there," Kentucky Jones said coolly, "and you'll take it, and you'll like it. You'll take it because you're yellow, clear down to the roots. And you haven't forgotten the night I knocked you kicking and squalling, in the sheriff's office at Waterman."

Bob Elliot's face went white, and his eyes took on a squinting slant. His lower lip dropped loose away from his teeth. "Why, you—"

"Yellow," Kentucky repeated, "clear down to the roots."

An inarticulate blasphemy strangled in Elliot's throat. Sheriff Floyd Hopper made a clutch at Elliot's belt, but missed his hold, as Elliot sprang at Kentucky Jones like a quirted horse.

Kentucky hunched low, then straightened out the whole length of his body behind his left hand. There was a ringing crack, as if a bone had broken, and an instant's confused tangle. Then Bob Elliot was lying on his back, breathing hoarsely, staring at the ceiling with blank eyes; and Kentucky Jones stood over him, nursing his left hand in his right.

Hopper said in a low exasperated voice, "You bailed him into that, Jones!"

"I was counting on his temper," Kentucky said. "Lord, I thought it would never break!"

Hopper's voice rose angrily. "If you got me out here to make fools of us all—"

"Shut up," Kentucky snapped at him, "we've got work to do. I—"

"You've talked all around and about, and over the bush," Hopper said bitterly. "And you end up with nothing more to the point than a cheap brawl. You've wasted enough words to—"

"Not one single word," Kentucky contradicted him. "I had to go all over that so that you would understand what is going to happen—what I hope is going to happen now. Campo! Hold this range hog here when he comes to—put a gun on him if you need to."

"All right."

Jones caught Hopper's arm and dragged the sheriff after him to the door.

"What are you going to do? You've got the case worse scattered out now than—"

"Then we'll try to tie it together again. Here's where we tackle Bill McCord! It's the turn, it's the break, you hear me? I've got to run a bluff. Are you backing me or not?"

"I'm backing you."

"Give me the gun that killed Sanders."

Floyd Hopper obeyed, and Kentucky Jones stuck it in his waistband. "Come on!"

Three pairs of eyes turned upon Kentucky Jones and Floyd Hopper as they came into the kitchen. In the room from which they had come, all four men had been armed; and so accustomed had they become to the sagging gun belts as standard equipment in the last few days that here it was Ted Baylor and Bill McCord, who were unarmed, who looked unusual and suspicious now. Floyd Hopper was flushed and sharp-eyed; but though it was to Hopper the eyes of the three waiting men turned, it was Kentucky Jones who spoke, his face as unpleasantly cold and ugly as ice on broken rock.

He showed Bill McCord the gun that had killed Sanders—the gun that had been in Sanders' hand as Lee Bishop found him dead.

"I don't suppose," he said to McCord, "you ever saw this gun before?"

Bill McCord seemed to consider for a long moment. "Maybe I have," he said at last; "and maybe I haven't."

"Would you care to say where it was when you saw it last?"

A humorless grin twisted one side of McCord's face. "You go to h—l," he answered.

Kentucky Jones eyed him sorrowfully. "Is that final?" he said.

"You bet your life it's final!"

"I'm sorry for this," Kentucky said. "I swear to heaven, I believe there's going to be an injustice done. I was afraid of this! But this McCord is a man who means what he says. Floyd; if he won't talk he won't talk. I guess there's nothing to do but follow up what Elliot says—don't it look that way to you?"

Floyd Hopper had no more idea of what Jones was talking about than did McCord. But he was a poker player, and a good one; and he had been in office for a long time. "It sure looks that way," he said.

Kentucky Jones said, "You're under arrest, McCord."

For a moment no one spoke. A hard gleam came into Bill McCord's eyes. "Who says so?" he demanded.

Once more the sheriff, completely in the dark as he was, backed Kentucky's play gamely. "I say so," he told McCord.

"Personally," said Kentucky, "I don't think you're guilty, Bill. I'll admit I was kind of hoping that we had closed in on bigger game. Still, I suppose we ought to be glad that we can hang this on anybody at all. I guess we better tell you that anything you say will be used against you, McCord."

Bill McCord spat into the wood box. "What am I charged with?" he demanded.

"The murder of Lee Bishop," said Kentucky.

McCord's face hardened, but he went back to the making of his cigarette. "In the first place," he said, "I wasn't anywhere near it. And in the second place it wasn't no murder. Lee Bishop was killed in a fair stand-up fight."

"That lie is plumb useless," said Kentucky contemptuously, "because I was with Lee Bishop when he was killed. Bishop was knocked out of the saddle with a rifle shot, by a man hidden in the rocks three hundred yards away; and the slug that killed him was poured into him after he was down and helpless, and I was carrying him to cover. And my story is proved by the nature of Bishop's wounds. Fair fight, h—l! That's murder—you hear me?"

McCord stared at Jones, his face immobile. At last he shook his head, puzzled. "I take all that to be free-hand lying. If you was with Bishop, you'd know that I wasn't there."

"He was shot from cover, I told you," Kentucky said. "I didn't see his killer. I could never have named you as the man—if Bob Elliot hadn't lost his guts."

"Elliot? Him lose his guts?" McCord repeated incredulously. "That's a hot one!"

Kentucky Jones shrugged. "I heard different," he said significantly. "McCord, if you've got anything to say for yourself you sure better talk. I tell you, Elliot's gone out from under you, you fool!"

Bill McCord stared again, hesitated. Then he laughed shortly. "That's a lie," he decided. "That's a lie from the ground up! Neither me nor Elliot had anything to do with any of this."

"So be it," said Kentucky. "Floyd, bring in Elliot. Or, here—I'll bring him myself." He flashed a malignant grin at McCord, and went out.

Behind him Hopper said to his deputy, "Watch this guy, Willie!" He followed Kentucky Jones.

Kentucky and the sheriff paused for a whispered conference beyond the door.

"By G—d, Jones," said the sheriff, "I believe that guy knows something."

"Of course he knows something," Kentucky said irritably.

"But he got through the loop on you," Hopper said. "He's too cool and tough to stampede. You've played your ace, and never took a trick. What are you going to do now?"

"Lead the jack," said Kentucky, unperturbed. As he moved on to the room where Campo was holding Bob Elliot he no longer believed that he could lose.

A dissension was beginning in the little room where Campo was presiding over the now conscious Elliot. Jean and Campo did not appear to have moved; but the boss of the 88 was sitting up in a chair. He leaned forward, his hands gripping the arms, and glowered at Ragland with eyes that seemed not quite able to focus accurately. "Put down that gun," he was saying. "There's no d—n—" He checked as Kentucky and the sheriff appeared.

"Tell him," Kentucky whispered side-long to Hopper, "he's under arrest."

"You're under arrest, Elliot," said the sheriff.

"Tell him," Kentucky prompted, "McCord has spilled the beans."

"McCord has spilled the beans," the sheriff repeated to Elliot with convincing emphasis.

Bob Elliot stared at them vaguely for a full quarter of a minute. "I don't know what you're talking about," he said finally.

Kentucky nudged Hopper, but this time the sheriff did not wait for his whispered instructions. For the first time, Hopper seemed ready to go forward under his own power. "You're charged with murder, Elliot," he said. "McCord has told it all."

Elliot stared at the sheriff for a long moment more. "I'll talk to McCord," he said at last, his voice harsh. "Let me talk to McCord."

"I should say not," said the sheriff. "I should say yes," said Kentucky Jones. "McCord's in the kitchen, Elliot. Just step this way." He pushed the sheriff ahead of him. Bob Elliot followed. Campo trailed along; but Jean stayed where she was.

"Here's your friend, McCord," said Kentucky. "Look him over—and ask yourself what you've been depending on, all this time."

Mrs. Lola Placeway has returned home from a tour of Europe.

"JUDGED BY THE COMPANY" ONE KEEPS"

One evening in October,
When I was far from sober,
And dragging home a load with draming pride,

My feet began to stutter,
So I laid down in the gutter
And a pig came up and parked right by my side.

Then I warbled: "It's fair weather
When good fellows get together."
Till a lady passing by was heard to say:

"You can tell a man who boozes
By the playmates that he chooses."
Then the pig got up and slowly walked away. Author Unknown.

AFTER THE RAILS ARE ABANDONED

Some eighteen months ago the Omaha Railroad abandoned its branch line from Sioux City, Ia., to Wynot, Neb., a distance of about forty-five or fifty miles. The line had been operated at a substantial loss for some time prior to its abandonment and because of its proximity to Sioux City most of the business which it would have normally carried was diverted to truck. When the petition for abandonment was presented by the railroad to the Interstate Commerce Commission, that body granted a stay of one year to determine whether or not the people living in territory tributary to the line wanted railroad service or not. After the year of grace had expired the I. C. C. granted the petition of the railroad and the tracks were torn up.

The truckers assured the townspeople that they would be entirely able to fill their transportation needs. They pointed out that the bulk of the transportation services were already in their hands and that they could handle what little remained.

Now let us see what has happened in this Sioux City-Wynot territory. First of all the grain rate by rail to Sioux City and the east was three cents per hundred from the farthest point on the line. Now the rate is ten cents a bushel to Sioux City. Coal was laid down in the furthest town for twenty cents a ton, while at present truckers are offering to deliver coal to close-in points at two dollars a ton. Farm values have depreciated from 50 per cent to 70 per cent. Some farmers are miles from a railroad. Homes in the towns erected at a cost of $4,000 are begging for buyers at levels as low as $500 and there are no buyers. Lastly the Omaha road paid $28,000 each year in taxes and this sum has been shifted over to the remaining taxpayers.

This is not a nice picture, yet if the rural merchants and the rural community does not awaken it is a scene that is going to be enacted in scores of towns that are today thriving points.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CHILDREN

Written especially for people in every day life who want to know something about tuberculosis and what is necessary to protect their children from the disease, "Tuberculosis in Children," by Dr. Bruce H. Douglas, was offered free of charge to the public this week by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

The folder is not a long dissertation on tuberculosis, but a concise, word picture of its dangers and the approved methods of preventing it. Only a few medical terms are used, and these are carefully explained. The booklet makes but five and a half envelope-size pages of reading matter, and two and a half of illustrations.

This edition of "Tuberculosis in Children" is now in the process of being published and is not to be confused with the longer pamphlet of the same name formerly distributed by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, it was said.

The author of the new one, Dr. Douglas, is president of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association and tuberculosis controller of Detroit. The booklet is made available to everyone and anyone free of charge because it is paid for with tuberculosis Christmas Seal funds, as part of the health education program carried on with this money.

Those parents and others who wish a copy of "Tuberculosis in Children" were instructed this week merely to write the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, 535 S Capitol Avenue, Lansing. The leaflet will not be sold, officials said.
