NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED

By William Bruckart

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington. — President Roosevelt has settled a controversy by the simple expedient of transferring two men from responsible positions in the Virgin Islands to jobs in Washington. He has taken Paul M. Pearson from the post of civil governor of the Virgin Islands and has made him assistant director of housing in the Interior department and has transferred Federal Director Judge T. Webber Wilson from his post in the islands to the federal parole board here in Washington. Each man has accepted his new appointment and in so far as a current controversy is concerned, the book is closed.

It will be recalled that Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson long have been at loggerheads over Virgin Island affairs. The battle was bitter. It came to a head when Paul Yates, executive assistant to the governor and a former Washington correspondent, resigned his job and came back here with a bag full of charges against his former chief. The Yates allegations ranged all the way from minor charges of poor judgment to gross accusations. He succeeded in getting a senate committee investigation and it was at that time that the Pearson-Wilson feud flared so openly that administration officials here were dragged in and the whole scope of differences aired.

As a matter of fact there is every reason to believe that Governor Pearson was far from a successful executive in the islands. He frequently aroused the ire of natives and, according to testimony adduced by the senate investigation, had very little to show for the sums of money he expended in attempting to give the Virgin Islands a new lease on life. All of the information tends to establish that the islands continue to be "an effectual porchouse" just as President Hoover described them on the occasion of a visit during his term as Chief Executive.

But Governor Pearson had his supporters in the administration. Chief among these was Secretary Ickes whose department is responsible for administration of the islands. Just why Mr. Ickes has been so enthusiastic about Governor Pearson's regime is not fully disclosed in any evidence here except that the interior secretary has certain ideas about social reform that some unkind critics refer to as pure socialism which Governor Pearson had been attempting to impose upon the island inhabitants. Governor Pearson has expended vast sums of PWA funds in the islands in his efforts to carry out the Ickes program of reform. It seems, however, that the schemes were not as practical as they might have been and so trouble started in a rather extensive fashion.

The President stayed outside of the row until in the course of the senate inquiry Senator Tydings, a Maryland Democrat and usually an anti-Roosevelt Democrat, received a letter from Mr. Ickes. Mr. Ickes accused the investigating chairman with having whitewashed a witness whose testimony was all anti-Ickes and anti-Pearson. The senator flared up in a big way at that letter. His reply is likely to become a classic in official correspondence. He did not mince his words. After voicing his general conception of the attitude exhibited by Mr. Ickes and accusing him of attempting to interfere in the investigation, Senator Tydings informed the interior secretary that he may as well attempt to run the Department of the Interior and let the senators run the senate. He used just about those words.

That was the signal for Mr. Roosevelt to take a hand. It was easy to see that a few outbursts of that kind and Mr. Ickes might have found himself in a splendid position to resign from the cabinet. So the President got the feudists into his office, singly of course, and when those conferences were over the senate investigation into the Virgin Island situation was suspended for two weeks. The transfer of Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson resulted.

One might properly inquire why all of this agitation has occurred about the Virgin Islands.

Why the Agitation? They are many hundreds of miles from Washington. They lie in the Caribbean sea, considerably out of the usual pathway of ships; they are populated by about 22,000 individuals, 95 per cent of whom are negroes and may generally be described as a "backward" place.

They may have some military and naval value. That has never been fully demonstrated. But the fact remains they are possessions of the United States and if our government is to be their protector, it is responsible for a sane administration of their affairs.

The Washington fight may have had its start in the Virgin Islands, but it has progressed beyond that point and is a domestic battle now. It is safe to say that for 18 years, which is the time the islands have been under United States rule, there has been a dire need for a plan of government suited to those people. Each year congress has been appropriating thousands of dollars for the island government and each year there has been miserably little in the way of improvement to show for these funds.

Almost as frequently as congress has appropriated money it has made changes in the administration methods in use there. There has never been a long term program laid out and there has been nothing whatsoever done showing the sympathy of a so-called intellectual people as we claim to be for those down-trodden masses that populate the Virgin Islands.

All of this, it seems to me, shows the woeful need for careful consideration of that situation. It seems to me equally apparent that as long as congress keeps meddling in and as long as politicians from the mainland are sent there purely on a political basis we will continue to have a pack of trouble bundled up in those Virgin Islands.

Several attempts have been made to work out a governmental system worth while but the politicians are not among those who will let plums escape. It is certain, therefore, that the Pearson-Wilson-Ickes-Tydings battle royal is an outcropping of what amounts to a festering sore in American governmental policy.

If congress continues in session past August 15, and it is now apparent that it may run to September 1, it will have been in session 225 days, some two weeks longer than the average of the so-called long sessions of congress.

Long Session Severe Strain Prior to adoption of the "lame duck" amendment which did away with sessions of unequal length, the shorter sessions of congress averaged about 170 days. The longer terms were around 215 days before final adjournment was taken. Thus, the current session stands in a fair way to be among the list of hardy sessions.

All of which is by way of saying that the current session of congress has worn down its members both physically and mentally to an extent quite unusual. I was talking a few days ago with a veteran senator, a man who has served almost 25 years in the upper house of congress. He is known as a physically strong individual and usually lasts very well through the work that piles up before senators and representatives. I inquired of him concerning the general health of congress and his reply was:

"I regret to say we are just a bunch of debilitated old men, incapable of doing the job that is expected of us and everyone is hoping against hope that we can live through this work and this heat."

As a result of that conversation the thought came to me that there was an answer to the oft repeated declaration that members of congress fail to earn their salaries of $10,000 per year. I have observed congressional proceedings almost a score of years and it is my mature conviction that few times in that period has congress failed to earn its salt.

There is another reason why congressional sessions should not run so long and should not be carried on in the intense heat of Washington summer. One condition nearly always has obtained near the close of a long session. As the days drag by, persons with axes to grind and individual interests to serve have a way of digging up questionable bills that theretofore had been side-tracked and assumed to be dead. With resistance low, the average senator or representative is unable to fight off legislation which he knows to be bad with the same spirit that accompanied his activities earlier in the session. Likewise, he is unable to battle as successfully as before for legislation which he knows to be good.

This condition opens the way for a revival of lobbies. They are back in Washington in numbers now despite the disclosures being made by the two congressional committees that are investigating the lobbies that operated to defeat, temporarily at least, the legislation killing utility holding companies. One would have assumed justly with the investigations under way after the utility legislation was passed that lobbyists and self-serving representatives would have been frightened away from Washington. Such was not the case. They are here in such numbers that some observers believe Mr. Roosevelt has made a mistake in demanding that congress stay until it has enacted the share-the-wealth-tax bill and the legislation which will prohibit lawsuits against the government for damages resulting from abrogation of the promise in government bonds to pay them in gold. Mr. Roosevelt is insisting on these laws. He will get them. But in the opinion of many authorities he stands a fair chance also of getting some other legislation which he may not want.

Linen Suit a Midsummer Favorite

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE present vogue for linen is nothing short of sensational. Whether you go dining, dancing, swimming, flying, motoring, golfing or shopping, or play tennis, there's a linen for every occasion from rustic crashes and peasant weaves and colorful Tahitian prints to alluring novelties in stripes and plaids and in sheer lovely effects for high-style evening wear.

Midsummer days are proving that linen suits, especially in white and natural tones, are of first interest among best dressed women for about-town wear. A linen suit and a wardrobe of blouses and the problem of being smartly appareled during the daytime hours is solved not only for the immediate moment but for well on into the fall, since the very newest linens are in wine shades, in Dubonnet red, in beetroot, purple and orange tones.

Just now, while the weather is warm, it's the white and natural linens that are lending their immaculate and well-groomed appearance to the summer scene. The trio of stunning suits pictured represent the very creme de la creme in linens as now featuring on the style program.

The young woman seated shows that she knows fashion in that with her suit of moirashel linen, in natural color, she is wearing a dark blouse, the same being brown with white polka dots. You are doing the right thing this season if to wear with your white and natural linens you choose dark accessories. The coat is single-breasted with buttons all the way up to the collarless neckline. A novel idea is introduced in the placement of deep large pockets above the belt line. Raglan sleeves add a final touch of smartness to this linen classic.

The other two suits are also of moirashel linen. It is rather interesting to know in this connection that King George sends the flax grown on his royal estate at Sandringham, England (supposed to be the finest flax in the world) to Moirashel, Ireland, there to be woven, because the workmanship is so fine—quite a royal pedigree for these linens.

The two-piece centered in the group has a tight-fitting basque coat with no belt to disturb the natural line. It is of white linen with navy buttons and tie. The double binding to the coat which gives a vestee effect is new and smart. The sports flap pockets are chic, too.

Handstitching around the notched collar and the pockets gives a distinctive touch to the white linen suit to the right. The stitching and the belt are in matched coloring. The coat is double-breasted, and a polka dot shirt is worn under it.

A very fashionable thing to do is wear a bright colored linen coat or jacket with your white linen skirt. Liliac colored linens for these coats are the rage with beetroot or Dubonnet red close second.

Then, too, novelty linens with nubby surface or loose porous weave are in good style for suits and for coats. These heavier suits are mostly in oyster white. Very "nifty" ones are shadow-checked in gray and some stunning weaves are in herringbone patterning flecked with brown.

There are lovely embroidered linens shown for dressier wear and sheer striped linens are made up into fascinating evening gowns, as formally as if they were stately silks. With the new fall tweed suits designers are creating clever blouses of fine handkerchief linens in colorings related to the costume entire.

SMART BEACHWEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This beach ensemble is out of the ordinary. It is fashioned of purple fishnet lace over a linen foundation. Which again proves that lace goes everywhere this season. The ensemble consists of a pair of shorts and blouse with a wrap-around skirt. The large hat is of purple straw.

SHOE COMFORT IS MOST IMPORTANT

To be footloose and free during the season of pleasant week ends and after-dark breathing spaces, one must have foot comfort.

Cool shoes with flexible construction are a likely way of getting this comfort, with preference given lightweight numbers, and those that are ventilated by perforations, lattice and cut-outs.

Novelties in shoes are always at their peak in the summer season, and they are usually far more moderately priced than the novelties thought up for evening shoes to complement formal winter costumes.

Sandals of printed linen or crash, slippers covered with gay flowered chiffon, oxfords of splendid supporting strength, perforated into lacy prettiness, plain cotton or linen shoes of any color you can name, plaid linen in natural tones, checked gingham in kitchen apron designs, lightweight suede in any pastel hue or any flag hue and crocheted string shoes are just a few of the kinds you can choose from in the shops.

Oriental Influence Seen in Evening Clothes Styles

The Hindu influence, inspired by the Maharanees of India, has initiated a definite swing away from fitted, bias lines to softly draped designs in evening clothes. Allied influences, such as Persian, Arabian, and a new version of Grecian folds, contribute to the same effect. These flattering, age-old drapery details are difficult to make and hence are not easily copied, a point being stressed now in high style circles.

Aliz, the Parisian couturiere, has turned out a thrilling array of Oriental formal gowns. Most of them are topped with seductive saria, those long, scarf-like affairs which start out by wrapping around the body and then proceed to cover the head in the manner of a monk's hood.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Edith L. Watson

THE STORY OF LAS PLACITAS

THEY were sitting on their heels in the shade of a corral fence, these two southwesterners, one day in the spring of 1880. It was at a place not far from Santa Fe, that center of romance and excitement for the whole western country. As they talked about things old and new, never dreaming what madness was in store for them, old Jesse Martin came riding up, all steamed over something.

"Look at this, boys," he said, fairly stuttering. "I've got the richest thing on top of this here earth."

"This" was a handful of ore—ore so rich that the two friends caught the contagion and grew as excited as Martin.

"Where'd you get it, Jess?" they asked, eagerly.

"I ain't a-goin' to tell you," was the answer. "Not now, boys, I ain't. I got a partner in Santa Fe, and I'm goin' to tell him first. Then when we git everything filed, I'll let you in on it."

All the pleading they could do would not move Martin from this decision. He rode off finally toward Santa Fe with his ore and his news, leaving them to wonder where in the world he had found such a bonanza. Had he run across the Adams diggings, or the Hatchet mine? Pshaw, those places were too far south for Martin to find. This must be something a lot nearer home.

Nearer home—why, perhaps they could ask some questions of the Mexicans and Indians thereabouts, and find out where old Martin had been. That was the idea! Hastily they caught up their horses, rode forth, and began to take up Martin's trail. Oh yes, said someone here and someone else there, the old man had passed this way, or he had ridden yonder. We saw him just a day or so ago. He was coming from thus-and-such a direction. So the pair rode in that direction. And sure enough, they finally came to a claim, all regularly staked. In the prospect hole was ore—ore like that he had showed them—very rich ore.

The two men were greatly pleased with their forethought—in tracing down the location. With business-like promptness, they staked their claims alongside Martin's. From these new mines-in-the-making they gathered a few samples, and then they raced back to an assayer, wild with curiosity. How would the ore turn out?

The assayer grew excited with them. Hastily he prepared for the business of extracting gold, as they watched the process with eager eyes. At last—

In the bottom of the crucible lay a button of something. Now for the acid test—would it prove to be gold? With trembling hands the assayer poured in the acid—and the button did not cut! Eureka! They were worth fortunes! They rushed back to their claims. The news had already spread, in that strange manner with which the word of new-found gold always has spread, and men were coming in to stake claims as near to theirs as possible.

Then came a crowd from Santa Fe. At its head were Jesse Martin and Governor Lew Wallace! So that was the partner! The news ran ahead of them—Jesse's samples had assayed $75 to $100 to the ton. Everyone laughed with glee—everyone cheered.

In three days Las Placitas accumulated a population of 10,000 souls. Everyone was gold-crazy—the golden phantom had led them to fortune and they had left their wits behind when they set out to follow her. And yet—

Some of the more sober souls began to quiet down. It was time to make more assays, to see just how far the gold spread out, to learn just how rich it would run.

The assays were made. They showed no value at all. The shock was tremendous. Men refused at first to believe it. They argued angrily that there was some mistake. They knew that they had found gold. The assayer must be a fool, not to know his business. He could not find gold when it was right under his nose.

Then someone thought of looking for Jesse Martin. He had "the richest thing on top of this here earth," did he? Well, he'd better explain himself.

But Martin had vanished from sight—and with him disappeared about $4,000 in real money—money that he had obtained from Lew Wallace and other prominent men of Santa Fe. He had "lit out" for parts unknown as soon as the rush set in. He was too keen an old coddler to risk discovery and retribution.

But the mine—that was still there, and the rich ore had most certainly come from his claim! So it had—but not originally. Martin had salted the hole with high-grade from another mine.

And the assay—that button of gold which the acid would not cut! It was merely a crystallization, and not gold at all.

Ten days later Las Placitas had again become a desolate spot in the hills. Only thousands of tin cans sparkled and glittered in the New Mexico sun—just as shining as had been the hopes of the ten thousand, just as worthless as the claims they staked.

WITH AN EYE TO COOL SIMPLICITY

PATTERN 9354

The smart girl has one eye on the budget and the other anticipating a rise in temperature—and makes a cool decision to include several summer sports in her wardrobe right now. It took a lot of ingenuity to design that clever yoke-cape-panel in one. It makes sewing so easy, and briefly, that cape is much cooler than a sleeve. Pattern 9354 sports an action pleat back and skirt just to help you "get places." If you find a simple flat neckline becoming, omit the dashing revers (but we like 'em). Very correct for spectator sports, office wear or week-end jaunts. Make it up in washable sport silk or shantung. Try a novel "cork" buckle and buttons.

Pattern 9354 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 4 yards 30 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included. Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighth Street, New York.

GOOD CARE EXTENDS

LIFE OF LINOLEUM

Should be Cemented to Floor and Protected with Wax Coatings.

Either of the two types of linoleum printed or inlaid, is a satisfactory floor covering if it is properly laid and maintained, according to home economics specialists at Michigan State College.

Most of the criticisms directed at the less costly printed type are not really deserved, as this floor material will last for years if it is cemented to a base when it is laid and is then kept waxed to preserve the surface. The same attention prolongs the life of inlaid linoleum.

All linoleums should be cemented to a smooth base and then rolled to remove all irregularities in the surface. High spots left in the linoleum wear through quickly and attempt to patch such spots provide cracks where water can seep beneath and ruin the rest of the floor covering. A quarter-inch space should be allowed all the way around between the linoleum and the walls.

The linoleum should be waxed as soon as it is laid and this wax coat should be renewed as often as necessary. When the wax is gone, particles of grit become imbedded in the linoleum and the material quickly wears out. Daily cleanings with a broom or dust mop lengthens the life of the wax coating.

Strong soap and water will destroy the wax and, when that is gone, will injure the linoleum itself. A damp cloth can be used to remove stains from linoleum which can not be cleaned off with the broom or dust mop.

More detailed directions for the care of linoleum can be obtained by asking the College bulletin clerk at East Lansing for Quarterly Bulletin Vol. 17, No. 4.

GAS TAX FIGURES

REVEAL GOOD GAIN

While many indications have pointed to increases in automobile activity in this state in 1935, from the standpoint of both sales and usage, figures on gasoline tax collections for the first six months of this year show definite increase in the state government's revenue directly attributable to automobile activity. For the first six months of 1934, the Department of State turned over to the Auditor General a total of $9,734,179.28 in gasoline tax collections, while for the first half of 1935 the figure was $10,432,769.65, an increase of $698,995.37 for the period cited.

STATE FURNISHES FORMS

FOR COLLEGE TEACHER OATHS

The State Department of Public Instruction will furnish upon request, blank forms to be used by collegiate institutions in complying with Act No. 23 of the Public Acts of 1935, which requires the teaching personnel in public and private collegiate institutions to subscribe an oath to the Constitution of the United States and the State of Michigan.

The language of Section 1 of the Act is as follows:

"From and after September 1, 1935, it shall be unlawful for any citizen of the United States to serve as a teacher, instructor or professor in any junior college, college or university of this state or any junior college, college or university whose property, or any part thereof, is exempt from taxation unless and until he or she shall have taken and subscribed the following oath or affirmation:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will support the constitution of the United States of America and the constitution of the state of Michigan, and that I will faithfully discharge, according to the best of my ability, the duties of the position of (title of position and name or designation of junior college, college or university to be inserted) to which I am now or may subsequently be assigned."

"The oath required by this section shall be administered only by the officer or person, or in the case of a board or body by a member of the board or body, having authority to employ such person as a teacher, instructor or professor in such junior college, college or university, and each is hereby authorized to administer such oath shall make a record or notation of the fact in the books or records of the junior college, college or university, and forthwith transmit the oath as taken and subscribed to the superintendent of public instruction, who shall file it in his office, where it shall be subject to public inspection. It shall be unlawful for an officer, person or board having control of the employment, dismissal or suspension of teachers, instructors or professors in such junior college, college or university to permit a person to serve in any such capacity therein in violation of the provisions of this section. This section shall not be construed to require a person to take such oath more than once during the time he or she is employed in the same junior college, college or university, though there be a change in the title or duties of the position. Provided, however, That this requirement shall not be construed as prohibiting such officer, person or board from employing for limited periods instructors or lecturers who are citizens of foreign countries."

Section 2 of the Act deals with enforcement of the law and provides that public institutions failing to comply with the law shall not receive state moneys and private institutions shall forfeit the right to tax exemption.

PINCKNEY DEFEATS HOWELL

The Pinckney Independents beat Howell in the Brighton Gala Day celebration last Friday by a score of 5 to 3. Dr. Howell was in great shape for Pinckney and held Howell to 2 hits and no runs up to the 7th inning. Here Howell scored one run. They got two more in the 8th when the Pinckney team made a couple of errors. In the 9th, Reader, first How-ell batter, doubled. Howell tightened up, struck out Conklin and Ladouceur and J. Reader popped out to J. Dilloway. Gyp Ferrell got three hits for Pinckney and batted in three runs. In the first inning he doubled and scored on an error. In the third he singled, scoring Hollis. In the 5th he again connected, scoring both Lamb and Hollis. With the exception of the 6th inning the Pinckney team fielded cleanly.

GAME ENDS IN DISPUTE

The game here Sunday between Pinckney and the Plymouth-Haggerty team, was the best played here this year. It ended in a dispute in the 9th inning when Pinckney protested a decision of the umpire. In this inning with Plymouth leading 3 to 1, Dinkel led off for Pinckney with a long double over Eddie Drinker's head. J. Dilloway was called out on strikes. B. Dilloway hit one to third which hit Dinkel, who was on that base. The umpire called it a fair hit and called Dinkel out for being hit by a batted ball. The Pinckney team protested the decision and play was not resumed.

The game was a pitcher's battle up to the 6th inning. Pinckney scored a run in the second inning when J. Dilloway walked, took second on Howell's hit and scored on B. Dilloway's sacrifice hit. They held this lead up to the 8th inning when Plymouth scored 3 runs on two errors, a single and a double.

Howell held Plymouth to three hits up to the 8th inning while Pinckney collected four off Kreeger, the Plymouth left hander. Plymouth had 9 men left on bases, prevented them from scoring. Jimmie Lamb had a big day at second for Pinckney, catching 11 chances without an error. Dinkel caught a nice game for Pinckney and Brigham, a Stockbridge high school player, looked good at third and was on the front end of a double play.

Eddie Drinker, old time Detroit recreation player, played center field for Plymouth. He manages the team. Pinckney had several scoring chances but close decisions and poor hitting nullified them. In the 6th inning J. Lamb reached first on an error, stole second. Budd hit over third and Lamb scored but was sent back when the hit was called a foul. In the sixth Budd singled and went to second on Dinkel's sacrifice. He was out standing third. J. Dilloway then got a hit on which Budd could have scored.

Sunday's Pinckney plays Holt here. In the first game with Holt Pinckney won 9 to 0. Labor Day they play Dexter at Dexter. On Sept. 11th, they play Howell at the Howell Fair. Sept. 22 South Lyon plays here and on Sept. 29, they play at South Lyon.

ELECTRIC RANGE

THIS DELICIOUS BUTTER CAKE in your own kitchen

YOUR family will praise your cake-making ability, once they have tasted this delicious butter cake that "melts in your mouth!" Light and golden and fine-textured, with thick icing, it even surpasses the cakes that "mother used to make." And there's no secret about it: It was baked in an electric oven. So of course there is no guesswork. You simply set the dial for the correct temperature, and the accurate oven heat control does the rest. An electric range makes baking a cake as easy as mixing it.

Wouldn't you like to bake a cake like this in your own kitchen?

using a modern electric range on trial? Our Trial Plan puts you under no obligation whatever, and briefly is this: We will install an electric range in your kitchen without initial charge, so that you may give it a thorough trial. During this trial period you simply pay for the service as registered by your meter, plus a monthly charge of $1 for the range. If you decide to keep the range, your monthly payments will be applied toward the purchase price. If you decide that you do not want it, the range will be removed at our expense. SELECT SEED CORN

In buying dairy animals we are quite concerned with ancestry. I can see no reason why this should not be in selecting seed of all kinds. The lift and mass system of selecting seed corn from a crib is highly inadequate. 1. The person making the selection is out to select the largest ears. These may have been produced on a plant or a group of plants that have had undue advantage over the majority of the plants in the field. For instance there may be an area in the field much lower than the surrounding portion. We know that the soil in this small area is much richer in plant nutrients due to leaching and erosion of soil from the higher areas. 2. The proper drying conditions for seed corn can not be controlled in an open crib. If the ears are stored where air may circulate all around them the moisture content will be reduced and the danger of injury from low temperature will be lessened materially.

By field selection and proper storage we can overcome most of our difficulties. When we are making field selection we can see the environment in which the present stalk grew. If it has grown on soil that is representative of the greatest area of the field there will be little doubt about its ability to yield on your soil. Individuals that have matured early may be selected and ears from strong stalks. In view of these facts why not carry a sack through the corn field before the corn is cut and snap off enough ears to insure yourself plenty of selected corn seed for 1936.

Various methods of drying are being employed. The attic of a house, the upstairs of tool shed or garage make very good places for storage. Some people prefer to use a series of nails and jab the cobs onto these so that two ears will not come in contact with each other. Some prefer to leave the husk on the ears and string them on a series of wires. Either of these methods will be far superior to the crib method.

DEXTER SCHOOL PROJECT IS APPROVED BY GOVERNMENT

The Dexter school board has received word that their $64,000 school project has been approved by the federal government at Washington and work on the new addition to the Dexter school will start about Sept. 1. In this project Dexter had the valuable aid of Senator Copeland of New York, who is a graduate of Dexter high school.

RISE IN TIDE

A false note was struck by a writer in his recent report of improved business conditions. He explained how sales were climbing and earnings growing, and then added the sour note, "of course, the Government spending had nothing to do with this."

Whether you agree or disagree with the administration's policies, you can't get away from the fact that the millions that have been poured into trade channels are raising the tide of business. How this writer could separate the millions that have been spent by private industry and the millions spent by the Government, call business good and then give all the credit to one factor, is something to challenge economic experts.

If the expenditures by the Government on half of business have accomplished nothing then the theory of the velocity of money is all wrong. We are not concerned with whether these expenditures are going to have a healthy influence on the country. That remains to be seen when it comes time to balance the budget. We are concerned with whether or not this avalanche of money will bring back the kind of prosperity that we want.

You may disagree with the brain trust and the NRA and the TVA and a host of other agencies, but you can't dispute the fact that the RFC helped put banking back on its feet. The RFC furnished new capital and provided for the release of deposits to the public. Due credit must be given to the automobile industry for its expenditures but it would not be making the progress it is right now if bank deposits were still impounded.

The greatest credit is due to business men who courageously laid plans for expansion and the public which confidently spent what little funds it had, feeling that the country would work out of it somehow. The country has been working out of it in the face of the paradoxical situation of Government assistance on one hand and the most aggravating sort of obstacles on the other.

Government funds have helped restore the upward trend. But will this type of prosperity stand the strain and prevent a boomerang?—Mich. Investor.

EXPLORERS URGED AS SCOUT PROGRAM

A new program, open to first class scouts over 15 years of age, the Explorers, to supplement the 200,000 senior Scouts already in regular troops, was discussed at a Scout leaders conference held at Camp Newkirk, Monday evening.

"Separate groups of Explorers will probably be set up. Also many troops conducted by churches, P.T.A.'s, etc., will organize the Explorer's section in their already existing troop. In time this group of older scouts with their Adult Counselor will gradually develop into a separate Explorer Troop," Mr. MacPeck said.

There are about 180,000 older Scouts in land scout troops, about 20,000 in Sea Scout groups and this number of 200,000 senior scouts may soon be doubled by the addition of the Explorers, Scout leaders predict.

The Explorers will continue the Scout program of adventure, going on expeditions into the wilderness in quest of discovery. These wildernesses into which the Explorers will go include, in addition to physical wilderness, those of vocation, avocation, citizenship, etc.

Jean called out sharply. "Is that you, Kentucky? Are you hurt?"

"They hit Lee Bishop, Jean."

She slid out of the saddle, tossing the reins over her pony's head, and came to the edge of the coulee.

"Where's Lee?"

"Drop down and I'll take you to him." He held up his arms and she let herself drop into them, but freed herself immediately.

"Is he hit bad?"

He whispered, "He can hear us from here, I think. I don't know but what they've finished him, Jean. He's shot in the side of the back, and Lord knows where the bullet stopped. You shouldn't have come here—don't you know that?"

"Somebody had to come. Campo—my father is back from Waterman; but Harry Wilson quit when Campo wouldn't bring out more riders. You and Campo and I are all that's left. And now poor Lee—poor Lee."

He led her down the cut to where Bishop lay. The range boss opened his eyes and turned his face toward her. "Is that you, Jean?"

She dropped on her knees beside him. "Yes, Lee."

"Didn't know but what I might be hearing things. Where's Campo?"

"He's making a sweep of the upper Bench trail. Lee, you must be plumb frozen?"

"Pretty near," Bishop admitted.

Jean slipped off her coat, and carefully wrapped Bishop's legs. Then she scrambled out of the cut, ran to her horse and, loosening the cinch, jerked her blanket from under the saddle. When this was placed to suit her, she made ready to go.

"It's sure a shot-to-pieces outfit you bought into, Kentucky."

"That deal is off," he told her. "I own no share in the Bar Hook, nor any part of a share."

Jean looked at him but there was no expression in her face, nor in her voice as she answered. "So you're quitting, too?"

"No, not quite yet," Kentucky told her grimly. "I'm just going ahead in a little different way than we figured I was going to; that's all."

Jean dropped beside Lee Bishop again, and for a long time studied the mask of his face, yellow in the firelight. He seemed asleep. Irrepressible tears appeared on Jean's cheeks, glistening in the light of the fire. She bent over Lee Bishop and kissed him. "Good-by, Lee," she said softly. "I'll be back pretty quick."

Lee Bishop smiled faintly. "Take your time, kid."

Jean caught Kentucky's wrist and led him a little way down the cut. "Do you think there's any chance of moving him?"

"I don't know as we better try, Jean. When you get back to the house, phone to Waterman for Doc Hopper. Then pack a horse and come back. Get hold of a tent if there's any on the place, and all the bed-rolls that come handy, and grub, and bandages, and stuff. You know what we'll need."

Jean Ragland scaled the side of the cut, re-cinched her saddle, and rode off at a sharp trot.

Lee Bishop said, "There goes a great girl, Kentucky. You're lucky, all right."

"Lucky? Me?"

"She'd ride her horse square off the rim," Lee Bishop said. "If you told her to." He was talking in a queer and somehow childish tone of voice which Kentucky had never heard him use. "Listen, Kentucky. Get this—can you hear me all right?"

"I can hear you, Lee."

"You're worse off than you think. Kentucky. Campo believes you killed Mason."

"Is That You, Kentucky?"

Kentucky said slowly, "I don't know but what Campo has almighty good reason to know better than that, Lee."

"What if he has?" Lee demanded.

"What you don't know is, he's been gathering up stuff against you—tracing guns, and the like of that. In a pinch he'll turn on you, Campo will! But believe in that girl. She believes in you; and she'll stand by you."

"The pinch will come quick, now," Kentucky said. "But she'll not be with me, Lee."

Lee Bishop said in a curious hoarse whisper, "She'd jerk the heart out of her, if you needed it. She's got a faith in you that you don't have for her."

"Faith?" Kentucky repeated savagely. "If she'd trusted me only half way, only quarter way, you and I wouldn't be sitting here tonight."

Lee Bishop looked at Kentucky a long time, and his mind seemed to be turning vague. "You ain't licked, Kentucky," he said at last in a weak voice. "You can beat this game yet."

"Sure I'll beat it," Kentucky assured him. "Lee, I'll beat it in spite of her."

Lee Bishop said in a queer voice, "You—you couldn't go against that girl, Kentucky."

"I'd sooner cut off my right hand, Lee; but I've got to go square against her now."

For another long moment Lee Bishop fixed staring, vacant eyes upon Kentucky's face. "You love her, huh?"

Kentucky Jones shivered; he felt as if the grip of the night cold was getting the better of him, so that his body had a core of ice. He covered his face with his hands. "I think," he said, "I hate her as I've never hated any living thing in my life."

Lee Bishop's words jerked out of him incoherently, but unexpectedly sharp and strong. "God help you, Kentucky—don't say that!"

"All right, Lee."

Jean Ragland made the round trip—and loaded a mule at the other end—in a little over four hours, which was wonderful time on those night trails. But she might as well have saved her animals; for an hour before she reached Trap canyon Lee Bishop was dead.

When Kentucky had packed the body to the Bake Pan camp of the Bar Hook, where he placed it with that of Jim Humphreys, he faced his horse into the steep switch-back trail up the rim, and started for the main ranch.

Kentucky had agreed with Jean Ragland that to take Lee Bishop to the Bake Pan camp was a shorter and more convenient pack; and Kentucky had seized upon the opportunity to release Jean from the mournful procession and send her home.

He now put his horse up the trail stiffly, climbing fast. He felt no weariness, but only a black temper. Now that he knew for the first time what set of ugly circumstances he was up against, he knew what he had to do; it was not easy, and he wanted to get it behind him.

The voices of the guns and the circumstances of Lee Bishop's death had brought him an odd new alertness, an almost painful consciousness of everything that moved within the limits of the rimrock horizon. It was as if he had found himself returned to the days of his forefathers, when an awareness of far-off details had a lot to do with keeping on a man's scalp.

And long before Jean Ragland came in sight, he knew that two horses were coming toward him along the trail, that they had but one rider, and that the second horse was not driven, but led.

For a moment after Jean came in sight he was absorbed by the sight of her. She rode a little dark pony, and her short white storm coat was in key with the snow. Hardly anybody ever saw Jean Ragland ride without following her with his eyes, as a man looks after a bird that is a bright living decoration against the snow. And now the girl and the pony she rode looked better because the led horse was rawboned and mud colored, with only a sharp, well-tracked leg action to suggest that it might be more horse than at first it seemed.

As they met in the trail he saw that her face was quiet with the resignation which had characterized it for the last two days; but her eyes were alive. There was a touch of feverish light in them which told him that she was still fighting, though what she was fighting, or how, he was no longer sure that he knew.

"I've brought you a fresh horse," she said immediately. "Maybe it doesn't look like much horse, but it is a whole lot of horse. Pretty near any Bar Hook horse would give down under you before this plug would."

"I suppose I kind of ought to appreciate that," Kentucky said; "but, Jean, how come you think I am going to need such a long-traveling horse?"

"Kentucky," she said, "Kentucky—"

She drew her hand across her eyes, as if what she was trying to say was almost beyond her ability. "Look here, I've asked a lot of favors of you, Kentucky; a lot more than I ever had any right to ask. I have to ask you one thing more. If you'll do this one thing more for me, I'll be grateful to you all my life; and I swear I'll never ask anything of you again."

"Jean, girl," Kentucky said, "what's happened here?"

"Take this horse, and the mule, and such of the stuff as you need. I don't need to tell you where to go or how to get there, nor how to get along; but do as I say! Go a long way, and go fast, and lose yourself; and never come back until some day this ghastly thing is over with and forgotten!"

Kentucky Jones stared at her a long time, studying her face; but her eyes did not flinch from his. At last a crooked one-sided smile changed his mouth.

"I know this is a terrible sacrifice for you," Jean said. "I wouldn't ask you this, Kentucky, I swear I wouldn't, if I wasn't so positive that there's no other way. Believe this—I'll be your friend, always; it may be later that I can help you, and send your money to you, or something like that. That will work out later. All I can say now is that I'd rather be dead than sitting here telling you this; but there isn't any other way."

"Why do you ask this?" Kentucky said curiously.

"Kentucky—God forgive me!—I can't answer that! But I tell you that there isn't any time to lose! Not an hour, not even—I can't tell you any more! I can only—"

"You'll have to tell me, I think," Kentucky said.

His face was hard, and the fatigue that she had been unable to detect before now had carved lines about his mouth, emphasizing the crooked line of his broken nose.

"You've got to do what I say," she told him passionately, "without any question of why about it."

"You hardly expected me to do that, I think," he told her.

Jean cried out sharply, "Don't! Take the horse and go. Kentucky, as you love me—but you don't love me; I know that."

"I think," he said, "just now it doesn't matter a whole lot who loves who, or who doesn't."

There was a touch of hysteria in her voice as she answered him. "No, not to you—I think you don't care anything about anybody in the world!"

"God help the man who does," he said. "As for taking that horse and making a run of it, I'm sorry not to do something that you ask. But I can't imagine anything on the face of the earth that would make me do that now."

"Then," she said quickly, "I'll tell you why you must. My father—my father—"

It seemed for a moment as if she were unable to go on. But she pulled herself together and spoke evenly, her words distinct and quick. "You know by this time why Bob Elliot is awamping the Bar Hook range. You have eyes that see things—I don't think anyone can hide from you what a thing means. You can't make me think that you don't know why Elliot has no fear of Campo, nor the Bar Hook."

"No," he said slowly, "I wouldn't pretend that I can't see that."

Her words tumbled out of her incoherently. "It's because Bob Elliot was close to the Bar Hook when Mason was killed. Poor Lee Bishop knew that—though I don't think he knew that he knew it."

Kentucky Jones said, "Bishop told me that he knew."

"And now," said Jean, "now I've got to tell you that I've known this all along—almost from the first. And I—"

"You're sure you want to tell me this, Jean?"

"I have to tell you—you make me tell you—"

That was a strange meeting, there on the trail in all that dazzle of sun-whipped snow, while all the sharp, sad, hidden things that this girl had never meant to tell a living soul came trembling out of her in a panicky disorder. Perhaps he should have wept or gathered her in his arms; but he could not.

"All right," he said. "What, exactly, is Bob Elliot holding over your father?"

"Somehow he's guessed the truth: that—whatever killed Mason killed him with my father's rifle. I knew that when I put the bullet into your hand at the inquest; I've known for days that you must know that, too, though you said nothing to me."

"Yes," he admitted, "I figured out that."

"And Bob Elliot knows it—I'm certain he knows it. Though I swear I don't know how he is so sure."

"But you yourself are sure that it is true—that the murderer used your father's rifle?"

"The—the—yes; I'm virtually certain of that. And my father knows it. He—"

"Have you talked this over with him?"

"No—how could I? It's changed him so I hardly know him. He used to have a terrible fighting temper—but where is it now? He doesn't dare come to a showdown with Elliot; he's afraid of the effect the shock would have on my mother."

"And on you."

"On my mother," she repeated. "He doesn't dare face it out because of her. But just as he won't fight Elliot because of that—something in his makeup keeps him from protecting himself, too. Nothing would bring him to hide evidence—though that evidence might turn against him, as well as against the true murderer. He must have known—"

"Then," said Kentucky, "his alibi—about being somewhere else at the time Mason was killed—is not so good as some people have been led to suppose?"

"He hasn't any testimony in support of it but mine. They'll discount that, because I'm his daughter; even—even if they don't break my testimony in some other way."

He did not stop to tell her that he knew by this that her support of Campo's alibi had been perjury. Instead he asked her, "How many people know that Campo—your father set out to kill Bob Elliot the day Mason was killed?"

She cried out with a shudder in her voice. "You even know that?"

"Bob Elliot told me that," he said shortly.

Jean Ragland looked dizzy, and sick. "Then who can tell how many people Bob Elliot has told?"

Kentucky Jones stripped off his gloves and made himself a cigarette. "And how many people," Kentucky said slowly, "do you think can tell a living man from a ghost?"

Her voice quavered irregularly, no longer fully under her control. "What do you mean?"

"There used to be a picture hanging in the Bar Hook ranch house," Kentucky said. "A picture in a dark wood frame. That picture was stolen because somebody thought it had something to do with the Mason case. When you saw that picture was stolen, you were panic-stricken, and hid the empty frame from your father. Now I'm going to tell you what that picture was."

"You can't—you never saw—"

"It was a picture of a man on a horse. When you first looked at that picture it seemed to be an enlarged snapshot of Bob Elliot. Only—when you looked close, it was not Elliot, but John Mason. Do you deny that, Jean?"

"No," said Jean miserably. "You see? It's just as I said. Nothing escapes you, nothing's able to hide itself away from you. That—that's the rest of the case against my father. Lee Bishop didn't know who it was he saw near the Bar Hook when he thought he saw Mason, and Joe St. Marie only thought he saw Mason's ghost. But—when they rested sideways in their saddles with their faces hidden, a long way off or in the dark—anybody could—could mistake Bob Elliot for Mason."

"Or," he said, "an angry man might—just possibly—mistake Mason for Elliot."

She drew a deep breath and pressed her gloved fingers against her eyes, but did not reply.

"It's my belief," Kentucky said, "that it was the sheriff who searched the house—or had it searched; in which case, he must have that picture."

"I think you're right about the sheriff; he must have been looking for the gun to match the Mason bullet. But he didn't take the picture of Mason—because I took it myself."

"You did? But you looked so scared—"

"I didn't hide frame and all, at first, because it left a pale spot on the wall, that Dad would have noticed. I meant to slide some other picture into the frame. But I forgot it. And then, with Dad hunting all through the house, to see what had been taken, I thought he'd notice the empty frame—and I was terrified."

"And that rifle—"

He paused, watching her, and licked shut his cigarette. "The rifle!" she burst out, jerking her hand away from her eyes. "Who knows where that is now? How do we know that Bob Elliot doesn't have it himself? Sheriff Hopper has the other bullet. If ever the bullet is fitted to my father's gun—"

"No," he said, "Bob Elliot doesn't have the rifle."

Her voice rose hysterically. "How do you know he hasn't?"

"Because," he told her, "that rifle is dismounted and hidden in the mattress of your bed."

She stared at him blankly for a long moment. "Oh, dear Lord," she said at last in a broken voice. "Why did I ever try to hide anything from you?" She did not avert her face from him, sitting very straight in the saddle. "Yes, I hid it. Campo must have known at once that Mason was killed with his rifle; but do you think anything in the world could have persuaded him to do away with that rifle, to pitch it into the bottom of some canyon?"

Watching her face in half profile he saw her begin to cry, silently, and without tears. "Is that all?" he said. "That's one side of it." She steadied herself.

"And what's the other side?"

Blind Husbands in Colony

A two-hour journey from Belgrade reveals one of the strangest villages in the world, where all the husbands are blind and the work of the colony is directed by the wives who see.

The town of Vetrenik is the first blind war veterans' colony in Yugoslavia, the first in a program of land settlements for the blind undertaken by the government.

The government institute for the blind has arranged many marriages for unmarried blind veterans and aids the couples in the settlement at Vetrenik. The men are employed in useful crafts and the household work and operation of the colony are managed by the wives.

There's a song for everybody in Shirley Temple's "Curly Top", the Fox Film Star's happiest and most beautiful picture, which comes Sunday to the Howell Theatre.

In the hit tune score of five numbers, all with music by the versatile Ray Henderson and lyrics by Ted Koehler, Edward Heyman and Irving Caesar, there are three tunes for Shirley, topped by "When I Grow Up" and "Animal Crackers in My Soup". John Boles, who supports Shirley, sings "It's All So New to Me" and "Good-Bye, Hudson".

Shirley's role in "Curly Top" is that of a lovable, orphan child who rewards her benefactors by winning the girl's love.

John Boles is the boy who is helping Shirley in an orphanage, he adopts the child to get the benefit of her charms and happiness. But in a little while he also has to adopt her pet pony and duck and her lovely grown-up sister, Rochelle Hudson.

The little child, transported to society's haunts at Southampton, looks through the frosty exterior of blue-blooded with her facile charms. And when the confidence of her father and John Boles is shattered with disaster, Shirley comes to the rescue and manages to effect a happy climax.

Irving Caesar, who directed the picture, which features Jane Darwell and Esther Dale in the chief supporting roles.

TAX DRIVE CUTS DEBTS

Heavy Payments Lower Govt. Costs

The man closest to the nerve center of Michigan's governmental finances believes counties, cities and towns will soon be able to pay their overdue bills, reduce debts, slice future budgets and get out of the red.

The belief is that of Theodore I. Fry, State Treasurer. It is based on the indication that the State's August drive to collect delinquent taxes is proving successful.

THEODORE I. FRY

Lately reports from the Auditor General show that more than $12,000,000 in delinquent taxes have been returned to the paying column by property owners taking advantage of the plan to pay taxes in installments for 1932 and 1933. Some can be paid over a period of three years.

Fry expresses the belief that the plan for "counter balancing accounts" and similar bookkeeping methods will be eliminated by the time realized from the campaign. He hopes that officials and citizens will be able, for the first time in some years, to get a true picture of the actual financial situation of various governments.

"Collection of these overdue taxes," Fry points out, "means that debts for such delinquent taxes are pledged to be paid and wiped off the books. We estimate that about $125,000,000 of debts could be cleaned up in this way. Since this debt carries an interest rate of more than 4 per cent, the saving would amount to about $2,500,000 a year."

"Obviously, wiping out a debt of this magnitude, or cleaning off a sizeable piece of it, will be the best thing that has happened to public finance since the old president Top heavy tried to pay off debt and debt reduction in budget will be chopped down and the vital functions of government will require the lion's share of the taxpayers' dollar."

BUDGET BALANCED
"With the dead horse of the past taken care of, it will be easier to make receipts cover expenditures. Balanced budgets will again become the order of the day."

"What is important of all, these collections will be distributed all along the line. Improved cities, anemic school districts, distressed counties—they will all get their share. The practice of 'hoarding' Peter to pay Paul will go into the discard."

"Many of the ticklish problems pressing for solution must await a clearing up of the tax situation."

"If organization of school districts, and the consolidation of governments and governmental functions can now be accomplished while hundreds of units are burdened with debt and mired in a morass of uncollectible bills, the success of the State campaign to bring in these back taxes will go a long way to clear the way for an honest effort to simplify the processes of government."

Michigan's tax campaign is now in its third stage. County treasurers throughout the state are working hard to keep up with the rush but are finding it physically impossible to serve the thousands pressing to pay before the September 1 deadline.

A BIG LEAGUE PROSPECT

IN THE BUD

Tuesday, the Ben Hur Club, who maintain a club house and camping ground for boys near Brighton, held a picnic. The juveniles from Pinckney and Howell were invited and went over in a truck sent over after them.

The main event of the day's program was a base ball tournament. Pinckney played Howell in the first game and won. Howell was not satisfied with the result so the two teams hooked up in another game and again Pinckney won. In the final event Pinckney played the Ben Hur team of Brighton and again won 17 to 8. In winning these three contests, Jake Haines pitched all three games and set a record. He had a hop on his fast ball which would draw the envy of Schoolboy Rowe and perfect control. If Jake keeps up this pace he will be in the big league by next year.

His brother, Floyd, worked behind the bat and handled his delivery in good style. The scores of the games were 10 to 3, 8 to 0 and 17 to 8.

The Pinckney team gave him great support and got him sufficient runs to win in each game. The lineup was: Jake Haines, pitcher; Floyd Haines, catcher; Joe Lyrick, 1b; Francis Sheehan, 2b; Merlin Lavey, 3b; Burwell Amburgey, ss; Joe Lavey, if; Howard Haines, cf; Edgar Clinton Jr. One game was played in the morning and two in the afternoon. These games were played with a hard ball.

This camp at Brighton was started by the Ben Hur Insurance Co. for young boys and it is desirous of forming groups in other towns.

"The Gregory School Election"

"Would the taxpayers of Unadilla Township turn down the chance to build a new barn to house their prize cattle in if the state would furnish 45 per cent?"

"No! They would mortgage the cattle to raise their part."

"But, they would condemn their children and their neighbor's children to a building not fit to put the stock in for the winter, because they would freeze."

"The Gregory school building should have been replaced several years ago by a modern, warmer building and so placed that the youngsters could have a playground where there was no danger of breaking windows in private houses."

"If the taxpayers had looked into the situation better, we believe they would have voted 'yes'."

WILL AGAIN ASK

M-36 IMPROVEMENT

The Pinckney Board of Commerce

expects to again start the campaign to get M-36 blacktopped or improved, from Mason to Novi. The biggest difficulty at the present time seems to be that part of the road lying in ships in Oakland county has not yet been taken over by the state. Petitions to have this part of it taken over action has been taken by the dept.

In Oakland county a petition has been presented to the county board of road commissioners asking them to blacktop the road from Novi to the the ten mile road. The board is said

A letter to the Grand Trunk rail-
