DIAMOND DEWEY HAS

ENVIALE RECORD

Diamond Dewey, 2:05 1/4, owned by A. M. Roche, Lansing, has been for several years the outstanding trotter in Michigan. She also ranks high in the list of leading race winners in the United States.

For years this gallant miss of the trotters has been a favorite with horse lovers at Fowlerville, perhaps, for the reason that she is so closely connected with trotting horse history at this place.

Her sire, Morgan Dewey, owned by the late J. L. Roche, was trained here during the greater part of his racing career; her dam was sired here, being a daughter of the famous Diamond Axworthy, which was bred by the late John Diamond. Diamond Axworthy after trotting to a fast record was exported to Denmark. The sire of Diamond Axworthy was Kaffir Axworthy, owned by the late E. E. Joslin, and his dam was Arlo May.

Diamond Dewey 2:05 1/4 with A. M. Roche up.

formerly owned by Geo. A. Newman. The maternal granddam of Diamond Dewey is St. Ruby, 2:06 1/4, owned by Wm. Valley of Howell.

Diamond Dewey received her initial training here as a two year old in 1927. She is now 10 years of age and is in her 9th year of racing. During this period she has been in the money in every start except five. During the past two weeks she was a winner at the Ionia and Northville fairs.

Depression Licked Says Attorney General

Tax Payments Portend Real Recovery

The successful State drive to collect delinquent taxes which ended September 1 is final proof that Michigan has shaken itself free of the depression's last doubts and uncertainties in the opinion of Harry S. Toy, Attorney General.

"Final figures for August collections of back taxes from virtually every county in the state show tremendously increased payments," Toy said. "It is the first convincing evidence I've seen that people are at last willing to bank on what the future holds."

"For some time we have been seeing bigger crowds at the theaters, at the beaches, or out to watch the Tigers. We've been told that more clothes are being sold. Feeling better, the people have been making money and spending it more freely."

"But, in spite of this, there has been little to indicate that the public has been looking into the future in faith and confidence. Until very recently, new building construction, new business enterprises and purchases of real estate have continued close to low ebb. These are criteria of the public confidence in business prospects."

"Now, however, the log jam of fear has been broken. Thousands of homeowners have cleaned up most of their overdue taxes. Real estate companies and banks have paid delinquencies on properties they hold. The public has proved it believes in Michigan and is convinced of its stability in the years to come. I look for this new confidence to accelerate the process of real recovery."

Toy pointed out that when Michigan was undergoing its great industrial expansion and people were coming here from all over the country, the percentage of families owning their homes decreased. "Newcomers did not feel sure enough of their future to tie themselves down to the land," he declared. "As Michigan's expansion continued and confidence grew, home ownership again increased. This has been true throughout our history. When the people of a state put their hard earned cash into homes, that state is headed for well founded business improvement that portends rock-solid prosperity for its people."

Toy was one of those principally responsible for the State delinquent tax campaign. He urged that move on the State Administrative Board. The Board was quick to approve the idea and set about the drive which has brought millions of dollars into the coffers of the treasuries of the state, county and local governments.

OVER PRODUCTION

The following is taken from the editorial column of the Dispatch of 50 years ago. At that time there was apparently a fear of over-production. It does not seem to have been realized. Such an editorial could be appropriate at the present time, however.

A prominent business man expressed the opinion that "the great danger of the country now is over-production. The theory is that history will repeat itself, and what happened a few years ago, when the industries were flourishing, will happen again when business shall have fully recovered from depression. It is the natural thing, of course, to expect the same results from the same conditions in two periods of activity. But perhaps in the dull times now coming to an end the productive industries have learned the importance of conservatism as an element of safety. If they have not, we may at any rate expect that American manufacturers will work more earnestly than ever for the expansion of our foreign trade, and, with that aim, demand of Congress such legislation as may be necessary to restore American shipping and take the carrying trade out of the hands of rival commercial nations."

DETROIT BUILDING CO. IS

ERECTING NEW LINES

The Detroit Edison Co. is building a number of new farm lines in this section. One is being built east of the Pinckney-Dexter road, serving the Darwin, Stickle, Swarthout and George Clark farms. Another is being built from the Howell road past the Eli Aron and R. K. Elliott farms. The line to Anderson and Pingree is also expected to be built soon.

Base Ball Games

DEXTER LABOR DAY

Pinckney defeated Dexter in the annual Labor Day game there by a score of 8 to 6. Pinckney got away to a flying start and led 7 to 0 up to the fifth inning. Dr. Howell pitched part of the Sunday game. Holt and weakened in the last three innings and Dexter scored 6 runs. They scored a run in the 9th and had the tying runs on the bases when Howell ended the game by striking out Stephens and Shoup.

Tommy Rickard started pitching for Dexter. He struck out Lamb, Budd and Ferrell in the first inning to retire the side. In the second he lost his stuff and Pinckney scored three runs on an error, a walk and hits by Dinkel and Brogan. In the third Dinkel hit a home run scoring Ferrell and J. Dilloway ahead of him. In this inning, Howell also struck and Springman doubled. Rickard pitched the last five innings and let Pinckney down with one run and 4 hits. Dexter kept whittling away Pinckney's lead but fell two runs short.

PINCKNEY 3, HOLT 4

Pinckney dropped a close game to Holt at Holt Sunday by a score of 4 to 3. Their loss was due to the pitching of Harris, a slicker ball pitcher, who worked for Holt. He pitched 15 Pinckney batters by the knockout route. Frank Gori of the Land Lake, started pitching for Pinckney. His first ball went Holt from scoring for the first time in the game. In the 5th Holt scored 4 runs. Holt's lead was 3 to 1. Dr. Howell went to the mound and held Holt. He pitched for the last three innings. Pinckney had nine men hit on bases and their inability to hit in the pinches cost them the game. Pinckney scored twice in the third when Gori and Springman singled and scored on Ferrell's hit. Their last run came in the 8th when J. Dilloway doubled and scored on a hit by R. Dilloway. Dinkel batted for Gori but ended the rally by flying to left field.

Resort Business Is Better this Year

Michigan's Summer Industry Shows
Big Increase According to Figures
Given Out by the Michigan
Tourists Association.

Figures given out by the Michigan Tourist and Resort Ass'n show that fully 400 per cent more summer visitors came into this state this year than in 1934. The Mackinac Islands did 25 per cent more business than last year and 65 per cent more than in 1933.

What was true in the big resort sections of the northern part of the state is also true for the resort section in this vicinity. All cottages, with few exceptions, were rented during the entire season and quite a number of new ones were built. Of course, there was no such boom as in the years of 1926 to 1929 but a steady improvement was noticeable. These improved conditions indicate a business recovery in other lines of endeavor for, as a rule, the summer resorters come from the cities. Increased activities in the factories is undoubtedly responsible for increased summer resort business.

The resort business means much to the people of this section. An increased lake population means more business for the merchant, more work for the carpenters, plumbers, electricians, well drillers, painters, etc. The different lines of business are so interlocked that it is not possible for one line to be fit by improved business conditions without aiding the others.

BOY IS BADLY INJURED

Stephen Aschbrenner, 16, was badly injured last Wednesday evening about 6:30 P. M. when he was hit by a car driven by Jack Sheldon. Aschbrenner was riding a bicycle belonging to Harold Hickey on 31st and the duck farm at Nash. Aschbrenner was going east and the boy on the bicycle was going west. The car struck the boy and he received, among other things, a broken pelvis bone, broken ribs and internal injuries. He was taken to the Pinckney Sanitarium and later to the University Hospital at Ann Arbor.

Prosecutor Stanley Barrman made an investigation but has not decided if there was any blame. The car driven by Jack Sheldon was owned by Mrs. Edna Sparks and was fully covered by insurance.

Sheldon and Francis Kych, who was with him, both work for Mrs. Sparks.

ASK INJUNCTION

AGAINST OIL STATION

Dr. A. G. Wall, mayor of Dexter, and Sidney Thompson, head of the common council, have secured a temporary injunction against the Sinclair Oil Co., prohibiting the company from erecting an oil station on Main St., in the village of Dexter.

The petition, filed by the village officials, alleges that the Dexter village council refused the company a permit to erect an oil station on July 1, 1935, but nevertheless the company started building the station. That Dexter, a village of less than 1,000 population, already has nine oil stations, one of which is controlled by the Sinclair Oil Co.; that proposed oil station is in the midst of the residential section of the village, and would destroy the desirability of the homes there, less the value and affect the safety, morals, health and public welfare of the village. The petition further terms the station unsightly, a nuisance and asks that the injunction be answered and made permanent.

The conditions at Dexter may be different but other cities and villages who have started similar suits have invariably lost. In the suits of the City of Ann Arbor vs. Fred Temple and the City of Ann Arbor vs. John Cox the findings were that the cities could not prevent the construction of oil stations in residential sections.

BOARD OF COMMERCE MEETING

The Pinckney Board of Commerce will hold a meeting at their hall on Monday evening, Sept. 9. A good attendance is asked.

A CORRECTION

In our writeup of the canal at Little Portage lake, dug by Paul Bock two weeks ago, we stated that it was 117 ft. long and 30 ft. wide. That was a misprint as it is 1700 ft. long and 30 ft. wide. This canal is now completed and open to boats and launches.

Mrs. R. C. Deller, Sec'y.

Current Comment

It seems to be an impossibility to keep a banker in prison. George Kellowich, the Hamtramack banker who embezzled $82,933 has just been released from Jackson prison on parole. He was sentenced to a term of 10 to 20 years by Judge Ferguson of Wayne County. The supreme court gave him a new trial but again he was convicted. Gov. Fitzgerald obligingly commuted his sentence to from 10 to 2 years and immediately he was paroled over the objections of Judge Ferguson and Prosecutor McLean of Wayne County. We are not criticizing Gov. Fitzgerald altogether. He only followed the example of his predecessors. Gov. Bliss paroled Frank Andrews, the bank wrecker and Gov. Cushman paroled most of the Flint bankers. But what on earth is the use of holding long, drawn out and expensive trials when a governor can nullify all efforts by cutting down the sentence so that the convict becomes eligible for parole. Just why should the governor have the power to release a convict? The answer is that the governor has the power to release a convict. The answer is that the governor has the power to release a convict. The answer is that the governor has the power to release a convict.

The indication is that next year will see the beginning of another wet and dry fight. Both sides are circulating petitions or will be soon. The Anti-Saloon League would tighten up the liquor laws and make them more strict. John Bodenstab, secretary of the Michigan Brewers Ass'n, is circulating a petition to abolish the state liquor control system and give the control of the liquor business back to the brewers. It would also give the inhabitants of a county power to prohibit the sale of any alcoholic beverage containing more than 4 1/2 percent of alcohol. It also states that no tax shall be assessed on this beverage if it is less than 4 and one-half percent. As most Michigan beer is from 3.5 to 4 percent it would exempt tax under this law. The main idea is to let the state out of the liquor business and to get rid of the heavy tax. That this amendment will be fought hard is a certainty.

As far as enforcing the liquor laws, the main pastime now seems to be passing the buck. George Schuchard, speaker of the house of representatives, recently stated that when the state liquor inspector made over 900 complaints the Detroit police only made 297 complaints for liquor violations. Police Commissioner Lickert rejoined that that might be a bit but that the 83 sheriffs in the state had made only nine such complaints. All of this is very interesting but does not indicate much of a sense of responsibility on the part of the enforcers of the law.

The secret is out! It is claimed that former President Hoover who asked if he would be a candidate for the presidency in 1936, said "No", but that he expected to have enough influence to prevent the radicals capturing the party in the coming election. He further said that he favored Senator McNary of Oregon but thought if he could get it, Frank Knox of Chicago would be his second choice. Mr. Hoover, like many other forecasters, cannot see an eastern republican at all for the presidential nomination.

The Hearst papers, which are strong backers of the county government reorganization movement, are enthusiastic about the law created by popular referendum by Senator Norrie of Nebraska. This law abolishes one house of the legislature. If this plan is so perfect why not have a dictator and abolish both houses of the legislature.

Governor Fitzgerald has shown that he is a clever politician in the manner in which he handled the slot machine matter. When he took office he announced that the slot machines which had flourished for many years without much molestation by the officers must go. A few raids were made, the machines disappeared. At the beginning of the resort season they came back in large numbers. Another campaign against them was made and some 50 warrants were served in Clark county. At the hearings of those arrested nearly all were released as no evidence could be found. The slot machine war began to be a joke and for the second time the machines began to operate again. This left the governor out on a limb as he was not getting any aid in his slot machine war. Now he seems to have literally hoisted himself out of the difficulty by his bootstraps. At the law enforcement conference he announced that he would turn back all law enforcement to the local communities not only for the liquor laws but for all other laws. So now if the slot machines become a nuisance it will be the sheriff and prosecutor and not the governor who will be holding the bag.

HOFHENESIAN-KALORIAN

The marriage of Miss Archelias Hofhenesian, daughter of Mrs. Sophia Hofhenesian of Pinckney to Arcon Kalorian, took place at Monroe, an Armenian Catholic priest performing the ceremony. The bride would be a member of the senior class of Pinckney high school in 1936.

Sunday a reception was held at the Hofhenesian farm home west of town in which some fifty neighbors, friends and relatives were present. The Dispatch, on behalf of their many friends here, congratulate the newly-weds. They will live at Monroe.

Washington.—Politics being inseparable from governmental administration under our system, it becomes pertinent at this time to examine what has happened in the late session of congress. In a nation where a two-party political structure obtains, politics cannot be segregated from the administration in the larger sense. It is not with a critical attitude, therefore, that the magnifying glass is held over the doings of President Roosevelt, his cabinet and brain trust advisers and the congress that has lately adjourned. I believe it will be agreed that politics has predominated in the management of our national affairs during the last eight months especially. The fervor and appeal that was held for recovery by all of us during the earlier days of the Roosevelt administration seems to have been largely dissipated. That is not to say that no one wants to see recovery accomplished. It is to say, however, that this fervor and this appeal has been somewhat subordinated. Thus, it can be summarized in a brief sentence: The administration, looking to the elections of 1936, has been engaged in building campaign battle lines and forging campaign ammunition.

The 1934 congressional elections presented to the country an issue based on the performances and the future program of President Roosevelt. It was accorded a proposition where citizens were voting either to give the New Deal a future mandate and the President authority to proceed as he thought best or to vote a mandate that would call a halt on those same performances and policies. The country supported Mr. Roosevelt, some of his advisers since have told me, in a manner even more substantial than he had anticipated. He emerged from that campaign with a larger Democratic majority in the house than he had before. In addition he was accorded much more than a necessary two-thirds of the senate. The picture looked rosy.

Though the congress that has just ended its session gave the President many anxious hours, I think that on the whole it can be regarded as having provided him with a record of rather arduous and faithful response to his wishes. He did not obtain quite all that he wanted nor did he obtain that portion of his program exactly in the form he desired. But, again, politics in congress is almost a matter of general compromise anyway so that the President can be said to have come out very well. He can proceed now to any plans for that session of congress which convenes next January and which, in accordance with nearly all precedents, will adjourn ahead of the national political conventions next June.

Politics being the game that it is, one must look into the future to discover the ultimate goal. So, looking into the future, one discerns several objects or objectives of decided, as well as important, interest to the individual voters.

In the first place, the consensus surely is that Mr. Roosevelt has built a legislative and administrative structure in our government that presents a concrete and unqualified issue to the American people, namely, to proceed along New Deal lines and make the necessary changes in the Constitution to permit execution of those policies or to throw the whole thing overboard. There can be no equivocation. As the structure stands at this time and as it will stand until the next session of congress is under way, many New Deal propositions are of doubtful constitutionality. If they are so held by the Supreme court of the United States then Mr. Roosevelt is believed certain to turn to the country and request Constitutional revision.

His latest and perhaps his most definite move in this direction was in connection with the so-called Guffey coal bill. It will be recalled that, in placing that piece of legislation on the "must" list of measures to be acted on before congress adjourned, Mr. Roosevelt advised house leaders that he wanted it passed and he did not care particularly whether some members of congress had "reasonable doubts" about its constitutionality. In effect, therefore, the President commanded passage of legislation that must place before the Supreme court a vital question for determination. It will be tested. Of that there is no doubt. If the law is held unconstitutional, it merely means that its provisions form another part of the campaign battleground observed to be shaping.

Mr. Roosevelt also succeeded in forcing through congress the legislation destroying the public utility holding companies. It was a tough fight but the President was victorious. Now, I hear from many sources that court examination of the legislation likewise will come because some folks are convinced it is confiscatory. If it is, it is unconstitutional.

And so it is in the case of several other pieces of legislation enacting New Deal ideas into statutes. One by one, it appears they will get before courts for review.

Thus, the line of cleavage is marked.

While the President has remained silent, neither denying nor confirming the undercurrent of information that I have reported here, one cannot fail to reach the conclusion that if many of the New Deal measures are held invalid, the President and his New Deal supporters, of necessity, must go to the country in the next election seeking constitutional modification to permit the use of policies now inimical to our form of government. That is the issue which the voters will be called upon to decide.

As to the Opposition

Since we have examined the circumstances from the New Deal side, let us likewise see what the Republicans and other oppositionists are doing. Lately, I have talked with some of the recognized Republican wheel horses. Whether they speak the sentiment of the masses of Republican voters or whether they voiced only their own views is not important here. Political straws do show which way the political winds are blowing. So when these veterans of many political battles say that they welcome the creation by the New Dealers of an issue, they evidently see in the situation worthwhile opportunities. When they say that they are willing to go to the country in defense of the Constitution as it stands and the traditions it represents, they evidently feel they are on firm ground.

Much water can go over the dam between now and November, 1936, and much sentiment can be changed in that time. But the Republicans thus far have done very little in the way of building up their case. While they appear to be enthusiastic about their chances against Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, they have thus far failed to develop even a nucleus of an organization.

It may be their strategy not to start their cannonading too early. Indeed, I have heard the thought expressed that it would be unwise to use ammunition too far in advance. At any rate, there have been only a scattered few direct attacks on what certainly must be the issue of 1936, the question of revision or retention of our Constitution. It is to be noted in this connection that those Republicans who have let go with a few shots have been of the ultraconservative type. I think it is generally agreed that the Republican set-up next year will be managed not by the old ultraconservatives but by those who have pulled away to some extent and who are willing to admit that times have changed conditions and a new model, perhaps not streamlined, is necessary.

One argument advanced why Republican leadership has not been more active is that if a G. O. P. Bides start is made too early, the Roosevelt administration will have an opportunity to answer all of the criticism. Said one Republican leader: "We would be utterly foolish to permit the New Dealers to know all of our arguments too far in advance. I, for one, am content to let them proceed with their socialistic regimentation because I know that every time a calf is given too much rope, it chokes itself to death."

Then there is another factor which I understand is responsible for the delay in Republican attacks. A good many Republicans have a hope, at least, that a campaign based on a plea for maintenance of our Constitution and the traditions and modes of living which it represents will draw to the Republican candidate a certain segment of Democrats who are unsympathetic with the New Deal. There has been plenty of evidence in the session of congress just adjourned that at heart numerous Democrats lean to the conservative as distinguished from the New Deal method of government. The closing hours of the congressional session seemed to belie this. But anyone who mingled among old time Democrats in the house could not fail to have observed existence of a doubt as to the wisdom of many New Deal policies. Those men were forced to line up behind the Presidential program not because they believed in it fully but for two other reasons. These reasons were: first, they still entertained some fear that if they broke with the President it might mean their political defeat for renomination and re-election, and second, they were harassed and physically and mentally tired and wanted to go home.

The late summer and fall months during which these representatives and senators naturally will be among their constituents is rather likely to provide them with a better knowledge of where they stand. They will come back next January either convinced that they must tie fast to the New Deal or they will be more obstreperous than they have been in the recent session. If the strength appears to be on the Roosevelt side, the next session of congress will be simply a rubber stamp for the Chief Executive. If, on the other hand, they find that the enthusiasm for the New Deal has waned, I think it is fair to predict that the next session of congress will be one of the most troublesome with which any President has yet been confronted.

New Autumn Woolens Are Striking

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WOOLENS to "suit" the smart woman this fall are that fascinating we are not going to be able to resist them and you wouldn't if you could after once glimpsing them. From every inch of their wool and their warp the woolens brought out this season radiate a beauty of coloring, of texture, of novelty in patterning and weave which is simply taking the world of fashion by storm.

Seeing that the American mills and the mills abroad are giving us the most amazing, the most beautiful woolen fancy can picture, it is to rejoice that the English habit of wearing sporty or tailored costumes for all daytime occasions in contrast to most resplendent and glorious formal fashions for evening has spread to America. Now that the smart thing to do this fall is to go very colorfully and handsomely tailored in the daytime, it is safe to predict that dresses, suits, swaggar costumes together with three-piece ensembles made of stunning woolens will predominate by a large majority in the wardrobe of every fashion-wise woman.

One of the most dramatic gestures which has to do with this sweeping vogue for grand woolens is the costume which goes fifty-fifty gorgeous cloth and high-colored suede. That is to say, a skirt of rich woolen is topped with a jacket or sweater of suede or leather which carries the key color of the plaid or striped material. To climax the scheme of design, the newest thing is the blouse which is knitted of the identical yarn in which the wool material is woven. Thus a perfect color harmony is achieved.

Another thing likable about the new woolens is that they are so delightfully soft and caressing to the touch, and give ear to this bit of good news—they are so woven in combination of yarns, they do not wrinkle.

Just to mention a few of the smartest and newest of new woolens—these are kemp tweeds, bright nubby tweeds of unusual treatment, sawtooth checks, broken plaids, marl tweeds, chevron stripes, ribbed diagonals, ombre plaids and others too numerous to cite.

The colorings of the versatile woolens brought out this season are a triumph both in art and of science. A complete wardrobe may be planned to include several colors, none of which conflict because the most vivid plaids and gay hues are given dusky overtones which blend into one grand symphony via misty interweavings of grayish or brownish yarns. The attractive Seton Cotterill collection of London which was recently shown in America by the Chicago wholesale market council stressed particularly this feature of color blend in smart woolens. The trio of high-style woolen fashions here pictured were displayed in this exhibit.

See illustrated to the left in the group a perfect travel costume. The Scotch plaid in black and white, of which it is made, has a heavy nub yarn interwoven to give highlights of canary yellow.

A new chevron-stripe wool in tones of amber, rustique and brown makes the suit with tuxedo topcoat (centered in the illustration). Note the smart cross-scarf of the jacket. Semi-fitted lines and woolen buttons give a new smart air, also the front fullness of the skirt.

The new skirts are marvelously built. They are most deceptive. They look as innocently pleated and paneled as you please, while in reality they are concealing skirts which allow for perfect freedom of action. Such a skirt is the one to the right in the picture. "Swaggar collegienne" describes this ombre plaid suit in rich tones of duobonnet red and ivory. It has a snug collar and stock scarf and is worn with matching sweater.

COAT OF PIGSKIN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Have you heard about the too-chic-for-words new polo coats which are made of fine pigskin? Just study this picture and see how smart they are down to the slightest detail. You can get them either in natural or rich dark dyes. The model illustrated has all the latest "touches," such as big, roomy bellows pockets, the new sash belt which ties so casually, strap-band sleeves which are adjustable about the wrist, deep-set yoke and an intricate seaming which gives the garment exquisite finesse. The hat is of pigskin to match the coat. The pearly print scarf is up to the moment in style.

LUXURIOUS METALS TOUCH UP FABRICS

Inspired by Oriental and period influences fabric manufacturers have outdone themselves in producing beautiful and luxurious metals on every type of silk ground.

In addition to being important for afternoon and evening gowns, the new metals are widely used for millinery—notably turbans—scarfs to be worn with wool as well as silk suits, blouses, waistcoats, bags, vanity and cigarette cases. In superb evening sandals and evening jackets that have a decidedly new look.

Metals with solid burnished faces in silver, gold—and newest of all—copper are shown in the market and considered especially good for jackets and accessories.

Silk crepes with double borders in metalized broche show distinct traces of Persian, Hindu and Japanese influence in their rich colorings and delicate patterns.

Sheer silk gauzes, completely metalized, form one of the newest and loveliest of the metals.

Pink Rates Coolest Shade and Looks Most Expensive

Pink, fashion's favorite color this summer, is the coolest-looking and, incidentally, the most expensive appearing shade you possibly can wear. There are pink linen and shantung suits for town and country, handsome pink sweaters to wear with white skirts when you week-end out of town and glamorous evening gowns in various tones of this lovely shade. One particularly nice evening gown is fashioned from double layers of pink chiffon and is worn under a billowing wrap of matching material.

Paris Loves Blue Blue is a favorite color of Paris this year. Smart women seen at the races are many of them gowning in navy with white relief; also navy and white prints. Pale, misty blue crepe frocks are worn with darker blue hats, bags and shoes.

Different Ways of Making Rugs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The making of rag rugs has interested needleworkers for hundreds of years. One very good reason for this is that rugs are practical and wanted in every home. The larger the rug the harder the work; the weight increases as the work progresses. Making a rug of motifs and then assembling takes the hard labor out of rug making and the work becomes interesting. Work these motifs in spare time at home or elsewhere and, when all are finished, assemble.

Folder No. 532 contains a lot of information about making the hexagon motif in various sizes in hexagon shaped rugs and in various color combinations. Hexagon motifs are crocheted in any size and color scheme according to your own idea. Amount of material and all the stitches are given and other hints of value to rug makers. A new kind of chart for selecting your colors gives you an opportunity to see what your rug looks like before you go ahead with the work. You can get some wonderful ideas from this folder on "Different Ways to Make Rugs." It will be mailed to you upon receipt of 10 cents.

When to Stand and When to Sit

To know when to stand and when to sit down is something that enters into the amenities of social life. There is an etiquette about it which extends farther, and becomes a matter of patriotic expression, and of the courtesies of concert halls. The correct practice of these seeming trifles is an evidence of good breeding, and so becomes important. There are times when boys and girls, and men and women all follow the same customs in these observances. Also there are times when boys and men follow one set of rules, while adult women follow another.

In school children are taught to stand when the flag is saluted, and this practice continues throughout life. They are also taught to stand when the national anthem is sung and when they hear it sung. These are patriotic observances. The pupils would be reprimanded if careless about these rules. When traveling in foreign countries the same rule holds. Each country expects its citizens to show this respect to the emblem and the voice of the native land as thus expressed.

One of the immediate evidences of good breeding is standing of men in the presence of women. They remain standing until all the women in the room are seated. Boys are instructed either at home or the best boys' schools that immediately a woman enters, whether young or old, to spring to their feet. When they are older they continue to rise, but by that time they have acquired an easy and accustomed manner, rising and seating themselves unobtrusively, so that if a lady remains standing rather long, they do not appear too formal.

Since boys and men remain standing as mentioned, women should be very careful to seat themselves without unnecessary delay. I have seen young women, occasionally, stand chatting so long with one or another of the men, or women that it was very awkward for the other men in the group to remain standing gracefully. The women should never be unmindful of their rules any more than should the men.

A man always rises, when a woman is introduced to him, whether he is out of doors or in, or seated at a table, as sometimes happens in restaurants when one group greets another. The men should rise as soon as party halts by the table, if there are ladies in the group. Women rise for introductions to other women, but not necessarily when men are presented. It is no breach of etiquette either way, except to remain seated when an elderly woman is presented. By the way, if the man is one of distinction, the woman, especially if young, is presented to him, which is a reversal of the custom.

In concert halls when the leader of a symphony enters it is correct form for the audience, both men and women, to rise.

U. S. Had Biggest Schooner
Most of the modern American schooners date from the war, when bottoms were so precious that they would pay for themselves in a single voyage, as in the California gold rush days. A few are pre-war. They are wooden-hulled, carry three, four or five masts. The United States could claim the only seven-masted schooner ever built anywhere, the Thomas W. Lawson, which capsized off the Scilly Isles in 1907. There have been several six-masted boats since then, all of which are now gone or laid up.

Deafened Author Describes Joy of Hearing with Acousticon

Ernest Elmo Calkins, author of "Louder Please" and other works, in a foreword to fellow sufferers advises reading the booklet, "Defeating Deafness," by Isabelle Beglan.

"You who read this and I who write it have one thing in common. We both know what it means to be hard of hearing. I have been deafened practically all my life and have now become worse. Whatever you may feel at this present moment about your affliction, be sure I have known that stage of it, for I have been through them all.

"With a lifetime experience with this exasperating handicap, I can say to you with the utmost confidence, there is no thrill like that of being able to hear again after years of deafening and embarrassing disappointment. The whole world takes on a new radiance as though another window had been opened.

"Therefore, I urge you to read this little book ('Defeating Deafness') earnestly and thoughtfully. Take it to heart and qualify to cope with your problem. It may prove to be the turning point of your life. The first step is the hardest, to admit one is deafened, admit it to one's self and to the world; but the compensations outweigh the penalties, as you will find.

The booklet referred to by Mr. Calkins is available to the hard of hearing without cost. You may simply write to (postcard will do) ACOUSTICON, Dept. 1171, 580 Fifth Ave., New York, for your free copy and learn how deafness may be successfully defeated. There is no obligation whatsoever.

COURTS DELAY TWO STATE PUBLICATIONS

Publication of the Public Acts of 1935, as well as the 1935 Michigan Manual (the "Red Book"), has been delayed because of litigation before the state supreme court.

Preparation of the Public Acts has been held up because of the filing, by the State Barbers' Association, of a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, to include a "barber" bill in the Public Acts of the 1935 session.

Completion of the Michigan Manual cannot be undertaken until incumbency of the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction is determined by the supreme court. When, on July 1, Dr. Paul F. Voelker, unsuccessful candidate to succeed himself in this position, retained physical possession of the office, Harry S. Toy, Attorney General, filed in behalf of Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, a petition for a writ of quo warranto, challenging Dr. Voelker's right to retain office. The supreme court issued a summons of quo warranto; on September 4, briefs were submitted for the principals in litigation, and oral arguments were heard.

The case will be disposed of either by dismissal of Toy's petition, or by issuance of judgment of ouster for Dr. Voelker. Elliott was appointed Superintendent of Public Instruction by Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, after the accidental death, June 22, of Maurice R. Keyworth, successful candidate to that office at the last April election. Keyworth was scheduled to take office July 1.

Pending settlement of both legal actions, all work possible on both books has been completed by the Department of State.

TO LIVE-TRAP MORE MOOSE

As many as 100 Isle Royale moose may be ranging Michigan's upper peninsula by next spring if the State Conservation Commission gives the word.

At its September meeting the commission will consider the costs of live-trapping and transplanting program on Isle Royale that would be nearly 10 times as extensive as the one conducted by Paul Hickie last winter.

The moose problem on the island was discussed by the Commission at its August meeting at Newberry. The Commission instructed the Game Division of the Department of Conservation to take up the matter with the National Parks Service and submit a report, embodying a recommended plan of procedure and estimated costs at the September meeting.

"We have communicated with the National Parks Service and have received permission to live-trap and move not to exceed 100 Isle Royale moose," said H. C. Ruhl, chief of the Game Division.

"The Parks Service has granted permission to take the moose and transplant them to another place and the Department is requesting the services of personnel and facilities at the CCC camp at Siskiwit. A study of the costs as well as a tentative plan of action now is being conducted and will be ready for the September Commission meeting."

46 C.C.C. CAMPS IN MICHIGAN

Michigan now has 46 state and National Forest CCC camps in operation, leaving 14 yet to be filled under the expanded forestry program, announced E. W. Tinker, regional forester of Milwaukee.

Thirty-eight state and National Forest camps were authorized for the state under the expanded program. Twenty-four have been placed in operation and these are in addition to the 22 camps which have been operating for some time.

REVISED ENTRANCE REQUIREMENTS OF U. OF M.

To qualify for entrance in any division of college whatever, at least three credits in English are required. If one wishes to enroll in the Liberal Arts divisions of colleges, no other specific subjects are required, although certain subject groups must have been completed. The latter may be selected by the pupil from those designated by the school as being acceptable.

Should one desire to pursue Agriculture, Engineering or Business Administration in college, in addition to the three or four credits in English required, two mathematics courses must have been taken. This is in addition to two other subject groups.

If one wishes to enroll in Home Economics, Applied Science, or Physical Education in college, he must of course, submit the three or four English credits. In addition, he must submit either two credits in mathematics or in Science. The latter may be selected from Biology, Physics and Chemistry. Again two other subject groups must have been taken.

It may be noticed that Latin or other foreign languages are no longer required for admission to any division of college, although credits in Languages are still acceptable as elective credits.

Probably the majority of high school graduates do not enroll in any college. How do the changed requirements affect them? It is felt that this group should, as in the past, pursue the high school course which most appeals to them. Those interested in the various branches of farm life should take the Agricultural courses; those interested in homemaking should take the Home Economics courses; and those having no particular vocational interest may select for the greater part academic subjects.

Whichever one of these courses is decided upon, the school faculty will so arrange it as to permit the graduate to qualify for entrance in most of the divisions of college, even though immediate plans are not to attend. This would insure one against disappointment should he change his mind on this important point in later years.

FRUIT IS VALUABLE HEALTH INSURANCE

Four Vitamins, Two Vital Minerals, and Easy Fuel in This Good Food.

Michigan is one of the important fruit producing states but, even here, many housewives do not give this food due credit for its value as a preserver of health and as an aid to getting an attractive meal, according to the home economics staff at Michigan State College.

Fruits contain supplies of vitamins A, B, C, and G and fuel values in the form of fruit sugars. These different values are in addition to the substances which give desirable flavor and to the colors which appeal so strongly to the eye that they help in getting appetites. Fruits alone or in combination should appear on the family menu daily.

The different varieties of fruits vary considerably in their content of the vitamins and of energy values. A few of them are sources for all the vitamins. Prunes rank at the top as a fruit supplying the four vitamins, containing supplies of both calcium and iron, and furnishing good energy values.

Vitamin A spurs body growth, B is an appetite builder and a guard against the run down condition which makes bad dispositions, C aids in avoiding heavy dentist bills and must be supplied at regular intervals, and G is a preventative of pellagra and other conditions of malnutrition.

The best sources of readily obtainable fruits for vitamin A are apricots, bananas, blackberries, cherries, dates, peaches, and prunes. Fruits rich in B are oranges, pears, prunes, and pineapples. Vitamin C is supplied in most liberal amounts by currants, gooseberries, grapefruit, lemons, limes, oranges, and peaches, raspberries, and strawberries. Vitamin G is contained most abundantly in pears and prunes.

Apples, dates, peaches, and raisins contain good amounts of calcium and iron. Apples, dates, figs, peaches, pears, prunes, and raisins furnish the greatest number of calories per pound of fruit. The addition of sugar in serving fresh fruit or in canning fruit adds to the energy values of this food and, of course, increases the calories.

The vitamin content, which is the health insurance feature of fruits, is unaffected by cooking processes and sometimes by exposure of juices to the air. Heat readily affects the content of vitamin C. Fruits processed in sealed containers retain a larger portion of their vitamin content. Processed fruits should be kept as short a time as possible in exposure to heat and to air.

Fruits do not provide all the necessary supply of vitamins for any person but they are an excellent source of these nutrients and should be used every day to supplement other foods.

"CAR NUMBER 20"

According to an advertisement of a certain life insurance company, the owner of every 20th car will kill a woman or child before the year is over if the accident experience of 1934 is duplicated. That of 1934. And statistics for the first six months of 1935 indicate that little if any progress has been made in curbing the dangerous driver.

Every driver should decide for himself which he wants to be at the wheel of "number 20." The decision is really within his power. He can drive carefully, in accordance with the law and good judgment, and he can keep his car in first-class mechanical condition so far as safety devices are concerned, and work on the basis that it is better to give up his right of way than risk a trip in an ambulance. Or he can take chances—he can regard crowded streets and highways as playgrounds, where his reckless and adventurous instincts may be indulged to the full without regard for other or himself.

The laws of chance are immutable, and every motorist who is deliberately careless, can be certain that eventually he will come a cropper. He may get away with reckless acts a thousand times—the thousand and first time he will pay the price. Gambles with death always lose—the dice are loaded before you start the game.

One car in twenty will be the cause of someone's death or maiming this year. Are you going to be the 20th driver?

Seven rattlesnakes were killed in one week recently by enrollees of CCC camp Ausable, northeast of Grayling. The largest had eight rattles; the smallest four.

Prove to yourself
... with a TRIAL ELECTRIC RANGE

MANY so-called "modern" stoves today are really no different than the stoves grandmother used fifty years ago. They look up-to-date, but they still use the same old-fashioned method of cooking foods with burning fuel. They still have all the characteristics of grandmother's old fuel-burning stove... the smoke, the soot, the flame, the annoyance and inconvenience. Only an ELECTRIC range is different: Only an electric range is truly modern. The cooking is done with pure heat from a glowing wire—heat as clean as sunlight. Why not discover this superiority for yourself with a trial electric range? Here are the details of the Trial Plan: We will install an electric range in your kitchen without initial charge, so that you may give it a thorough trial. During this trial period you simply pay for the service as registered by your meter, plus a monthly charge of $1 for the range. If you decide to keep the range, your monthly payments will be applied toward the purchase price. If you decide that you do not want it, the range will be removed at our expense. Send in your application for a trial range today!

John S. Haggerty, former secretary of state, believes as does Henry Ford and all the other serious thinkers of today, that the end of present industrial disturbance could be accomplished by proper use of the land. He recommends the complete overthrow of the practice in using gasoline for automobiles, and he would grow in the corn fields the fluid that would drive the machines up and down the highways. Mr. Haggerty says if it were made compulsory that 20 percent of all fuel used in automobiles be grain alcohol, a market for 969,000,000 bushels of grain would be provided. One bushel of rye will yield three and one-fourth gallons of alcohol, and rye can be raised on very weak soil.—South Lyon Herald.

Wayne Rossbach, bespectacled Chelsea baseball pitcher who has pitched for Lincoln, in the Nebraska league this year, has been purchased by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Chelsea's new work relief project, which was applied for several weeks ago, is expected to be started in the near future. The projects which have been approved include the cleaning out of Mill Creek from the Main street bridge to a point several hundred feet east of McKinley street; installing of a new surface sewer on North Main street leading to Mill creek; and lowering of the water main on Madison street and installing copper service pipe. The only expense to the village will be the furnishing of necessary materials for the work.—Chelsea Standard.

SAVE THE BEAN CROP

BY MC NAUGHTON PLAN
Past weather records prove that rains will occur in Michigan during September, and the farm crops department at Michigan State College says that the way to avoid weather damage to this year's fine bean crop is to use the McNaughton system of harvesting.

The additional cost of using this method is very small in comparison with the great protection afforded to the crop. Tests made of putting the beans in the small fields stacks have proved that the pick may be reduced as much as 10 to 15 pounds per bushel below the amount taken from beans cured at the same time in windrows and piles.

In addition to the actual savings from the reduction of weather damage, beans may be harvested when a little less mature and will ripen in the stacks. This fact is important to cranberry bean producers, as this bean matures later than the common white pea bean. Threshing can be done at the farmer's convenience after the beans are stacked, and grain can be sown in the field before threshing, as the beans occupy very little space.

Steel fence posts or stakes are driven firmly in the ground, a brace of straw or rails is used to keep the beans off the ground, and the beans are piled around the stake and extend well above it in the McNaughton system. The stacks must have straight sides and should not be more than four or four and one-half feet in diameter. The height of the stack should be about twice their width.

The beans are stacked immediately after they have been pulled and raked toward the center of a 32-foot strip. Average crops require from 10 to 14 of the stacks per acre. A wagon carrying posts and straw can be driven along and the stakes and bases prepared as needed. The straw base should be at least four inches thick.

ASK STATE FARMERS TO GROW RED WHEAT

Turn to the reds is the advice given Michigan wheat growers by the farm crops department at Michigan State College, but the crops experts mean red wheat and not adoption of anarchistic beliefs.

Red wheat on August 26 brought a premium of about three cents a bushel above the price offered for white wheats of the same grade. The college men and members of the Michigan Miller's Association say that this price differential in favor of red wheat is apt to continue for two or three years.

Michigan is fortunate in having a red winter wheat which has been thoroughly tested since its development by plant breeders at East Lansing. This variety is Bald Rock. It is a good producer, grows well on Michigan soils, has a stiff straw resistant to lodging, and is beardless.

This variety runs higher in test weights than most soft, red, winter wheats. Millers accept it readily as its quality is good. It is winter hardy and has been tested in Michigan wheat fields since 1930, during which time some severe winters have occurred.

Elevator managers say that Michigan white wheats are hard to sell and that the only way they can protect themselves in buying is to pay less per bushel than for red wheat. White wheats were in demand at one time for use as pastry flours and in the preparation of breakfast foods. More than a sufficient supply of white wheat is now grown for those uses.

SARA WARE BASSETT KNOWS HER CAPE COD

SARA WARE BASSETT

Miss Bassett, author of "Shifting Sands," the delightful story which is to be published serially in this paper, has spent her life in the atmosphere which is so characteristic of all her stories.

A descendant of William Bassett, who landed at Plymouth in the "Fortune" in 1621, she was born at Newton, Mass., and was educated in the public schools of that city.

For twenty years Miss Bassett was a teacher in the Newton public schools, devoting her spare time to literary pursuits. She contributed short stories to well-known magazines and then, in 1912, her first book, "The Story of Lumber," was published.

Other books followed and as the avocation of writing became more and more engrossing she left her position in the schools to give her entire time to literary work.

Miss Bassett lives in one of the old Beacon Hill houses in Boston and has a summer home at Princeton, Mass., but she spends a part of each season on Cape Cod, where the scenes of many of her stories are laid.

Among other popular novels which preceded "Shifting Sands" were "The Harbor Road," "Flood Tide," "The Green Dolphin," "Bayberry Lane" and "Twin Lights."

Bankers Deserve Confidence
The country can have full confidence in the integrity and competence of the bankers of the country. Out of the lessons of the last few years has come experience that will be valuable to the banker and to his community. He can be counted on to show a proper appreciation of his responsibilities and obligations and to take his place among those who are making earnest and unselfish effort to promote recovery. He is not infallible, but with every power that lies within him I believe he may be depended upon to fulfill his duty as a custodian of the people's money, as a dispenser of credit and as a God-fearing American citizen imbued with sincere regard for the common good.

Disinfect Your Drains

You can easily disinfect your drains and prevent odors in your bathroom. At regular intervals, as often as you think necessary, use the following solution: Dissolve two ounces of chloride of lime in one gallon of water. Pour this down the drains, allow it to remain for a couple of minutes, and then flush.

Deep Wells

Paris is boasting that it has now the deepest well in the world. This new source of supply for the north-eastern corner of the city is sunk 2,850 feet and will yield 1,600,000 gallons a day. The well is fed from a sheet of subterranean water that extends at a variable depth under the French capital. A writer in the London Spectator says that the water has its source in the Ardennes mountains. The existence of this reservoir has long been known; a hundred years ago several localities availed themselves of it.

SHIFTING SANDS

CHAPTER I

The Widder lived on the spit of sand jutting out into Crocker's cove.

Just why she should have been singled out by this significant sobriquet was a subtle psychological problem. There were other women in Belleport and in Wilton, too, who had lost husbands. Nevertheless, despite the various homes in which solitary women reigned, none of their owners was designated by the appellation allotted to Marcia Howe.

Moreover, there seemed in the name the hamlet had elected to bestow upon her a ring of satisfaction, even of rejoicing, rather than the note of condolence commonly echoing in the term. Persons rolled it on their tongues as if flaunting it triumphantly on the breeze.

"Marcia ought never to have married Jason Howe," asserted Abbie Brewster when one day she reminiscingly gossiped with her friend, Rebecca Gill. "She was head an' shoulders above him. Whatever coaxed her into it I never could understand. She could have had her pick of half a dozen husbands."

"She was nothin' but a slip of a thing when she married. Mebbe she had the notion she could reform him," Rebecca suggested.

"Mebbe," agreed Abbie. "Still, young as she was, she might 'a' known she couldn't. Ten years ago he was the same, unsteady, drinkin' idler he proved himself to be up to the last minute of his life. He hadn't changed a hair. Such men seldom do, unless they set out to do; an' Jason Howe never set out to do, or be, anything. He was too selfish an' too lazy. Well, he's gone, an' Marcia's well rid of him. For 'most three years now, she's been her own mistress an' the feelin' that she is must be highly enjoyable."

"Suppose she'll always go on livin' there on that deserted strip of sand?" speculated Rebecca. "Why, it's 'most an island. In fact, it is an island at high tide."

"So 'tis. An' Zenas Henry says it's getting to be more an' more so every minute," Abbie replied. "The tide runs through that channel swift as a race horse an' each day it cuts a wider path 'twixt Marcia an' the shore. Before long, she's goin' to be as completely cut off from the mainland at low water as at high."

"It must be a terrible lonely place," "I wouldn't want to live there," shrugged the sociable Abbie. "But there's folks that don't seem to mind solitude, an' Marcia Howe's one of 'em. Mebbe, after the life she led with Jason, she kinder relishes bein' alone. Furthermore, dynamite couldn't blast her out of that old Daniels' homestead. Her father an' her grandfather were born there an' the house is the apple of her eye. It is a fine old place if only it stood somewhere else. Of course, when it was built, the ocean hadn't et away the beach, an' who'd 'a' foreseen the tides would wash 'round it 'til they'd whittled it down to little more'n a sand bar, an' as good as detached it from the coast altogether?"

"Well, say what you will against the sea an' the sand, they did a good turn for Marcia all them years of her married life. At least they helped her keep track of Jason. Once she got him on the Point with the tide runnin' strong 'twixt him and the village, she'd padlock the skiff an' there he'd be! She had him safe an' sound," Abbie chuckled.

"Yes," acquiesced Rebecca. "But the scheme worked both ways. Let Jason walk over to town across the flats an' then let the tide rise an' there he be, too! Without a boat there was no earthly way of his gettin' home. He had the best of excuses for loiterin' an' carousin' ashore."

"Well, he don't loiter and carouse here no longer. Marcia knows where he is now," declared Abbie with spirit. "I reckon she's slept more durin' these last three years than ever she slept in the ten that went before 'em. She certainly looks it. All her worries seem to have fallen away from her, leavin' her lookin' like a girl of twenty. She's pretty as a picture."

"She must be thirty-five if she's a day," Rebecca reflected.

"She ain't. She's scarce over thirty. But thirty or even more, she don't look her age."

"Suppose she'll marry again?" ventured Rebecca, leaning forward and dropping her voice.

"Marry? There you go, 'Becca, romancin' as usual."

"I ain't romancin'. I was just wonderin'. An' I ain't the only person in town askin' the question, neither," retorted Mrs. Gill with a sniff. "There's scores of others. In fact, I s'gaw the thought is the uppermost one in the minds of 'most everybody."

Abbie laughed.

"Rebecca, in fact, I reckon 'tis," conceded she. "It's the thought that comes to everyone quick as Jason was buried. Folks 'round about here are fond of Marcia an' feel she's been cheated out of what was her rightful due. They want her to begin anew an' have what she'd oughter have had years ago—a good husband an' half a dozen children. I ain't denyin' there are certain persons who are more self-seekin'. I ain't blind to the fact that once Jason was under the sod, 'bout every widower in town sorter spruced up an' began to take notice; an' before a week was out every bachelor had bought a new necktie."

"Abbie!"

"It's true. An' why, pray, shouldn't the men cast sheep's eyes at Marcia? Can you blame 'em? She'd be one wife in a hundred could a body win her. There ain't a thing she can't do from singlin' a barn down to trimmin' a hat. She's the match of any old salt at sailin' a boat an' can pull an oar strong as the best of 'em. Along with that she can sew, cook, an' mend; plow an' plant; paper a room. It's a marvel to me how she's kept out of matrimony long's this with so many men millerin' 'round her."

"She certainly's takin' her time. She don't 'pear to be in no hurry to get a husband," smiled Rebecca.

"Why should she be? Her parents left her with money in the bank an' the Homestead to boot, an' Marcia was smart enough not to let Jason make ducks and drakes of her property."

"All men mightn't fancy havin' a wife hold the tiller, though."

"Any man Marcia Howe married would have to put up with it," Abbie asserted, biting off a needful of thread with a snap of her fine white teeth. "Marcia's always been captain of the ship an' she always will be."

Gathering up her mending, Rebecca rose.

"Well, I can't stay here settin' Marcia's fortune," she laughed. "I've got to be goin' home. Lemmy'll be wantin' his supper."

A scuffling on the steps, the kitchen door swung open and Zenas Henry's lanky form appeared on the threshold. Behind him tagged his cronies, Lemuel Gill.

"Well, well, 'Becca, if here ain't Lemmy come to fetch you!" Abbie cried. "'Fraid your wife had deserted you, Lemmy? She ain't. She was just this minute settin' out for home."

"I wasn't worryin' none," grinned Lemuel.

"What you two been doin'?" Abbie inquired of her husband.

"Oh, nothin' much," answered the big, loose-jointed fellow, shuffling into the room. "We've been settin' out, drinkin' in the air."

The carelessness of the reply was a trifle overdue, and instantly aroused the keen-eyed Abbie's suspicions. She glanced into his face.

"Where you been settin'?" she demanded.

"Settin'! Oh, Lemmy an' me took sort of a little jaunt along the shore. Grand day to be abroad. I never saw a finer. The sea's blue as a corn-flower, an' the waves are rollin' in, an' rollin' in, an'—"

Lemuel Gill stepped into the breach.

"'Twas this way," began he. "Zenas Henry an' me thought we'd take a bit of a meander. We'd been to the post office an' was standin' in the doorway when we spied Charlie Eldridge goin' by with a fish-pole."

"Charlie Eldridge—the bank cashier?" Rebecca echoed. "But he ain't no fisherman. I never in all my life knew of Charlie Eldridge goin' a-fishin'. Not that he ain't got a perfect right to fish if he wants to outside bankin' hours. But—"

"But Charlie fishin'!" interrupted Abbie, cutting her friend short. "Why, he'd no more dirty his fly-white hands puttin' a squirmin' worm on a fish-hook than he'd cut off his head. In fact, I don't believe he'd know how. You didn't, likely, see where he went?"

"Wal—er—yes. We did."

Zenas Henry wheeled about.

"Havin' completed the business that took us to the store—" he began.

"Havin' in short, asked for the mail an' found there wasn't none," laughed Abbie, mischievously.

Zenas Henry ignored the comment. "We walked along in Charlie's wake," he continued.

"Where'd he go?" Rebecca urged, her face alight with curiosity.

"Wal, Charlie swung along, kinder whistlin' to himself, 'd he come to the fork of the road. Then he made for the shore."

"So he was really goin' fishin'?" mused Abbie, a suggestion of disappointment in her voice.

"He certainly was. Oh, Charlie was goin' fishin' right 'nough. He was aimin' for deep water," grinned Zenas Henry.

"He wouldn't ketch no fish in Wilton harbor," sniffed Rebecca contemptuously. "Wouldn't you think he'd 'a' known that?"

"He wasn't," observed Zenas Henry mildly, "fingerin' to. In fact, 'twasn't to Wilton harbor he was goin'." Bank cashier or not, Charlie wasn't that much of a numskull. He was primed to fish in more propitious waters."

"Zenas Henry, do stop beatin' round the bush an' say what you have to say. If you're goin' to tell us where Charlie

"Zenas Henry, do stop beating round the bush an' say what you have to say."

Eldridge went, out with it. If not, stop talkin' about it," burst out his wife sharply.

"Ain't I tellin' you fast as I can? Why get so het up? If you must know an' can't wait another minute, Charlie went fishin' in Crocker's Cove."

"Crocker's Cove?" gasped Abbie.

"Crocker's Cove?" echoed Rebecca.

"Crocker's Cove," nodded Zenas Henry.

"Mercy on us! Why—! Why, he must 'a' been goin'!"—began Abbie. "—to see The Widder." Rebecca interrupted, completing the sentence.

"I'd no notion he was tendin' up to her," Abbie said.

"Wal, he wasn't 'xactly tendin' up to her—leastway, not today. Not what you could really call tendin' up," contradicted Zenas Henry, a twinkle in his eye. "Rather, I'd say 'twas 'tother way round. Wouldn't you, Lemmy?"

Sagaciously, Lemuel bowed.

"You see," drawled on Zenas Henry, "no sooner had Charlie got into the boat an' pulled out into the channel than he had the usual beginner's luck an' hooked a stragglin' bluefish. You'd oughter seen that critter pull! He 'most had Charlie out of the boat."

"I shouted to him to hang on an' so did Lemmy. In our excitement, we must 'a' bellered louder'n we meant to, 'cause in no time The Widder popped out the house. She took one look at Charlie strugglin' in the boat, raced down to the landin' an' put out to him just about at the minute he was warerin' as to whether he'd chuck pole, line, an' sinker overboard, or go overboard himself."

"Quicker'n scat she had the fish-pole, an' while we looked on, Charlie dropped down kinder limp on the seat of the boat an' began tyin' up his hand in a spandy clean pocket handkerchief while The Widder gaffed the fish an' hauled it in."

"My soul!" exploded Abbie Brewster. "My soul an' body!"

"Late-on," continued Zenas Henry, "Charlie overtook us. He'd stowed away his fish-pole somewhere. Leastway he didn't have it with him. When Lemmy an' me asked him where his fish was, he looked blacker'n thunder an' snapped out: 'Hang the fish!'"

"Seem he wasn't in no mood for neighborly conversation, we left him an' come along home."

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Editha L. Watson

THE CHERRY COW GHOST

DID you ever hear of a haunted mine?

If all abandoned mines are not haunted, they ought to be. The fallen buildings, the caved-in tunnels, and the general atmosphere of desolation and decay fairly demand a ghost or two to complete the picture.

The old Cherry Cow mine, in eastern Arizona, had a ghost. It once had been a pretty fair gold mine—and Mike Church, its discoverer, made enough out of it to buy a nice little house and an orchard, where he tried to settle down and spend his days in comfort. But Mike, like the rest of the breed known as prospectors, could not be happy in such a setting. He would wander away without a word and disappear for weeks and months, only to return again, weary but happy. He had been off prospecting—hunting for another Cherry Cow.

During his absences, a young man named Bill Richards, who lived nearby, would take care of Mike's place. He did this just as a gesture of friendliness, because he liked the old fellow, and when Mike was at home he would regale Bill with tales of wonderful mines and their equally wonderful treasures.

He had many good words to say for the old Cherry Cow, as well, and he enjoyed telling about the days when he had several men working there, taking out "some mighty good-lookin' ore—yes, sir!" But the ore had run out, and so had Mike's interest in the mine.

One fall morning, seeing no smoke rising from the little house in the orchard, Bill went over to investigate. As he had suspected, Mike was not there, but a letter lay on the kitchen table, and this was unusual. Picking it up, Bill saw that it was addressed to him. He opened it and read the misspelled scrawl within:

"Dere Bill—I'm off on a trip a long, long one this time. If I don't come back in a yr you take the place and everything I got it all yures this is my will."

Bill was touched. He knew the old man meant it, but he hoped that cold weather would find him in his little house again, telling about his new adventures. So he kept up his visits, saw to the fruit, and looked every day, as time passed by, for Mike's return.

Winter came, and spring. Then the rumors of a ghost began to spread about. Someone had gone up to the abandoned Cherry Cow shaft, and had seen a shadow that flitted out of sight and could not be found again. A miner who passed that way after dark reported a strange light that seemed to shoot straight out of the shaft. A cowboy who rode by said that his horse had snorted and shied as he passed, though nothing was to be seen or heard.

Aroused to suspicion by these stories, Bill Richards went up to the Cherry Cow to investigate. He found nothing but the shaft from which Mike's modest stake had come, with the rotting boards that had once been a shaft-house leaning above it. He called, wondering if his eccentric old friend could possibly be about, but a scolding blue-jay gave him the only answer he heard.

The year went by, and no one knew what had become of Mike Church. At last, urged by his friends, Bill produced the letter, and while it was not a legal will, since no other claimants to the estate were found it became Bill's property.

By now the Cherry Cow was avoided by everyone who had business up that way. No one wanted to be frightened by a ghost, and even the strong-minded who claimed that there were no such things as ghosts saw no reason for going near the mine. At last an easterner came to town, hunting for a mine, and wandered up to the Cherry Cow.

He liked the place. Although Mike had always contended that his ore had been a stray pocket, the newcomer said he believed that he could find a vein. He became so enthusiastic that the stories of the ghost merely amused him. "I'll lay that ghost," he promised, "I'll take the spell right off the Cherry Cow."

And so, he bought the mine from Bill Richards. He hired a small crew of men to clean out the shaft and unwater the sump.

But before long one of his men came to him. "The water's down a foot," he told the easterner. "There's something down there—the Mexicans won't go on muckin' out—they're afraid to touch it."

"I'll go down myself and see. It's that fool ghost, I suppose, that's got them worried. Well, I don't want any ghosts around here." And he hurried to the shaft.

They knew that it was what remained of Mike because they found his old-fashioned watch. The burial was informal and hasty, for there were only bones and shoes and a few shreds of clothing left. The Mexicans quit, of course, and it was some days before an American crew could be hired.

Bill Richards went up alone and said a little prayer for Mike at the grave. An the ghost never haunted the Cherry Cow again. But Mike was right—the easterner never found his vein, either.

SHIFTING SANDS

Sara Ware Bassett's latest and best story, which will appear serially in these columns.

Stanley Heath, a stranger whose powerboat runs aground on the treacherous Cape Cod shoals, stumbles into the Homestead and into the life of Marcia Howe, a young widow with whom half the men in the village are already in love. Out of his clothing falls a leather case crammed with gems and the enigma of this puzzling possession provides the pivot around which the story revolves. Marcia's blind, intuitive belief in the man's innocence brings its own reward.

STATE ORDERS REMOVAL OF ROADSIDE STANDS

Commissioner Murray D. Van Wageningen Tuesday ordered transient roadside stands moved from within the boundaries of state trunk lines.

Labeling the stands a menace to public safety, the commissioner said they were increasing to such an extent that the "situation is rapidly becoming alarming."

Under Michigan laws, the State highway commissioner is in complete control of the trunk line rights of way and he is authorized to proceed against such stands in a summary manner.

The commissioner said he had been "reluctant to resort to the use of the law, but it appears the situation must be corrected."

"We are not concerned with the farm or permanent business establishments, it is the transient we must remove."

Aside from the fact that the stands are becoming an eyesore to the traveling public, they are dangerous.

"Of course, our chief concern is the safety of the traveling public," Van Wageningen said. "The highway department is building roads that will give more visibility and longer sight distances. This type of road is a distinct advance in public safety. Apparently our efforts in this direction will be defeated if the nuisance of the transient roadside stand is permitted to continue."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Brighten Your Shadows

"A piece of white cardboard brightened this shadowed face"

HAVE you ever tried taking a picture of your best girl—or your wife—wearing her new broad-brimmed summer hat and find, when you see the finished print, that her pretty face turned out to be an unattractive dark shadow? Of course you have. Who hasn't?

Now there is really no excuse for this common error in amateur photography. You can't prevent the appearance of the shadow but you can lighten it considerably in the picture by using a reflector to cast or reflect the necessary light under the brim of the hat and on her face.

Please don't gasp and think about spending a lot of money for a reflector for it isn't necessary. A satisfactory, efficient reflector can be had for practically nothing. Any number of things will serve you; a piece of white paper about three feet square, a white cloth of the same dimension or even a pillow slip or white towel. If the chancellor of the linen closet will let you get away with it, will serve admirably.

What's the trick? There's no trick to it at all. This is all you have to do. Suppose we use the pictures of the comely young lady above as an example.

Both snapshots were taken at noon with the sun's rays striking the top of the hat. Notice the picture to the right; how the brim of the hat casts a dark shadow over the face. The picture to the left, however, shows the pleasing results by using a reflector to cast or reflect the sun's rays under the hat. The reflector in this instance was a piece of white cardboard about two feet square held about four feet from the subject and tilted so as to reflect the sun's rays on her face and under the hat.

If there is not a third party to hold a reflector it can be placed on a chair at the proper angle or tilted against a stick placed in the ground. Be sure, however, that the reflector does not appear in the view finder of your camera.

This is only one of the many ways a reflector may be used to advantage in getting better pictures. By giving a little thought to your snapshotting you can readily detect where a reflected light on your subject may brighten over-shaded spots in outdoor or indoor picture making. Try it.
