

Pinckney and Hartland Play Tie Game

Pinckney and Hartland high school football teams met at Pinckney Friday and their contest resulted in a 6 to 6 tie. This score does not tell the story of the game however, as Pinckney was at least four touchdowns better than their opponents. They made 12 first downs to Hartland's 1 and reached the scoring zone on four different occasions. Twice they fumbled and Hartland got the ball, once they lost the ball on downs and finally in the last quarter Billie Myers went over for a touchdown. Tom Youngs missed getting the extra point by inches.

Hartland failed to gain against the Pinckney line and only made one gain on the field. In the first quarter after taking the ball from Pinckney on a fumble Boyce caught a forward pass from Hettie and ran ten yards for a touchdown. The try for the extra point failed. From then on they did not make any threats to score. Pinckney on the other hand made gain after gain but over anxiousness and the fact that the new backfield had not yet got to working smoothly kept them from scoring several times.

Tom Youngs was Pinckney's best ground gainer with Nelson Shehan a close second. Youngs penetrated the Hartland line repeatedly and showed ability at eluding tacklers. Both teams tried numerous passes but only completed two each. Pinckney was penalized four times for off side etc. and Hartland once. One penalty kept Pinckney from making a touchdown.

Pinckney plays the Ann Arbor High School Reserve Team at Ann Arbor, Friday.

The Pinckney line again put up a great game.

Pinckney	L. E.	Hartland
Dinkel	L. T.	Boyce
Glover	L. G.	Newman
Howell	C.	Harrell
Clark	R. G.	Buell
Harrell	R. T.	Dingler
Gardner	R. E.	Cole
Reason	Q. B.	Hubbell
Myers	L. H.	Hettie
Young	R. H.	Reickoff
Ledwidge	F. B.	Brian
Shehan

Substitutions—Pinckney, Van Blaricum for Dinkel, Lee for Glover, Smaka for Ledwidge, Shultz for Harrell, Hartland, Austin for Newman, Touchdowns—Boyce, Myers. Penalties, Pinckney 5, Hartland 1. First downs—Pinckney 12, Hartland 1. Referee—Fred Miller, U. M. Head Linesmen—Bourbonnais.

Pinckney School Notes

Well Tom Youngs and Nelson Shehan certainly made a fine start as backfield men, considering it was the first time either played there.

Next Friday Pinckney plays the Ann Arbor high school reserve team. This aggregation depends on the forward pass and will put up a good contest.

Fred Miller of the Intramural Sports Dept., U. of M. refereed. The penalties he handed out to Pinckney for holding, offside etc. had considerable to do with Pinckney's failure to score more points.

Both teams tried many passes but only completed two apiece. Tom Youngs caught both of Pinckney's and Boyce, the tall Hartland end got both Hartland passes.

Harold Campbell was out with injuries received in the Brighton game and Gerald Dinkel started at left end. Bennie Van Blaricum later replaced him.

Hartland brought over a bunch of fans with a yellmaster. The Pinckney yell team failed to function again and the home boys had to get along without any cheering.

All things considered the game was a freak. Hartland only making one first down to Pinckney's twelve was able to hold the local team to a tie by getting the breaks.

Pinckney handled punts much better than in the Brighton game. Only one got away from them and that was in the first quarter.

Several of the cars there were equipped with radios and it was possible to watch the game and listen to the world series at the same time.

Well the boys did not let the world series get them down this year. Through the courtesy of John Dinkel a radio was set up in the hall up stairs and all the rooms heard the last game of the world series broadcast.

The Senior Class has elected the following officers: Pres., Thomas Youngs; Vice Pres., Janis Carr; Sec., Delbert Harrell; Treas., Margaret Adams.

Hunting Season Opens Oct. 15

More Than 200,000 Brown Clad Hunters Will Go Into the Woods And Fields of Lower Michigan Tuesday, Oct. 15, To Open The Upland Hunting Season.

Beginning October 15, ring-necked pheasants, ruffed grouse, prairie chickens, sharp-tailed grouse, rails except coot, fox squirrels, woodcock and rabbits become legal game. The upland hunting season in the lower peninsula opens Tuesday, Oct. 15 to Oct. 27, inclusive.

Pheasants Oct. 15 to Oct. 27, inclusive.
Ruffed grouse Oct. 15 to Oct. 27, inclusive.
Prairie chickens Oct. 15 to Oct. 27, inclusive.
Sharp-tailed grouse Oct. 15 to Oct. 27, inclusive.
Fox squirrels Oct. 15 to Oct. 24, inclusive.
Rails except coots Oct. 15 to 19, inclusive.
Woodcock Oct. 15 to Oct. 27, inclusive.

The season on rabbits is staggered. North of the north line of Town 16, the season is open from Oct. 15 to Jan. 31, inclusive; south of that line, including all of Huron county, the season is open to and including Jan. 1.

Season bag limits on several species of birds have been increased over last year by the 1935 legislature. Six pheasants may be shot during the open season this year, instead of four which was the season limit last year.

The season limit on ruffed grouse is 25 and on prairie chickens and sharp-tails, combined, 25. Last year it was 10. Day and possession limits are the same as last year. Pheasants cannot legally be hunted this year before sunrise.

Open seasons in the upper peninsula on ruffed grouse, prairie chickens, sharp-tailed grouse, fox squirrels, rabbits, woodcock and rails except coot opened Oct. 1. Legal hunting of ducks, geese, brant, jacksnipe and coots is from Oct. 21 to Nov. 19, inclusive, in both the upper and lower peninsulas.

PAYING BACK TUITION

Thanks to the alertness of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, rural school districts have been given an opportunity to save in the neighborhood of $200,000 in unpaid high school tuition, on opportunity which was not called to their attention by the Department of Public Instruction, due, no doubt, to the lack of definite leadership in that department in a period when the post of Superintendent is the subject of litigation.

R. Wayne Newson, legislative counselor to the Bureau, points out that if the high school districts to whom these sums are owing should collect them from the primary districts, all such collections would be offset against any equalization aids which the high school districts would receive from the State. In other words, the high school district has a choice of taking these funds out of the taxes collected from neighboring communities, or of taking them out of the large school aid fund created by the last Legislature.

It can be safely predicted that when this situation is fully understood by the Superintendents of high schools which receive equalization aid under the Thatcher-Saur Act, they will recommend to their school boards that the back tuition claims against surrounding primary school districts be cancelled.

The accuracy of the Farm Bureau statement is hardly open to question. It is well known at Lansing that Mr. Newson is closely associated with the development of the Thatcher-Saur Act as a representative of the Farm Bureau, and member of the consulting body appointed by State Superintendent Paul P. Voelker. At the same time his connection with the American Life Insurance Company of Detroit, two large taxpayers in Wayne County, has led to his being appointed to the Wayne County Tax Allocation Board, where the question of back tuition came before him at the time when school district budgets were up for approval last summer.

The relation proposed is a particularly happy one, as most of the districts now owing tuition have been exceptionally hard hit in recent years. We therefore gladly congratulate the Farm Bureau upon another outstanding service to rural Michigan.

Board of Commerce Elects Officers

Regular Meeting Held Monday Night and Plans Are Made for the Future

The annual election of the board of commerce was held Monday night and resulted as follows:

President William Dillaway.
Vice Pres. Wayne Allen.
Sec. Paul Curlett.
Treas. Roy Clark.

William Slavin and Glenn Caub of the county road commission were present and considerable time was spent in discussing the blacktopping of M-36, State Highway Com. Murray Von Wagner has announced that he will ask Federal funds to blacktop 1000 more miles of Michigan roads.

Messrs Slavin, W. C. Miller and W. C. At Lee were appointed a committee to get in touch with Mr. Von Wagner.

Community banking was discussed and Messrs Lee Lavey, P. H. Swarthout and W. C. At Lee were appointed to investigate and report on this.

It was decided to set out a live Christmas tree on the square, and Mr. Dillaway offered to pay the cost of one.

An oyster supper will be served at the next meeting of the board of Oct. 21.

THE FOWLVERVILLE FAIR

Although rain and cold weather cut the attendance at the Fowlverville Fair considerably, the first two days, Saturday's large attendance made it a success financially.

A feature of the fair was the stock parade Friday evening led by Miss Margaret Calkins on horse back. The parade was nearly a mile long and consisted of a 20 piece band, 20 head of horses, cattle, 4-H clubs etc.

The ball games resulted in victories for Durand and Fowlverville over Webberville and Howell. Stockbridge beat South Lyon. Fowlverville beat Durand. In the final Stockbridge beat Fowlverville 2 to 1 in 13 innings.

THE BOMMERITO CASE

A peculiar circumstance seems to arise in the Scallie murder case, of which Thomas Bommerito is accused. He is a member of the Bommerito family of Detroit, one of which was tried for the killing of Jerry Buckley. Bommerito has a record of ten arrests and no convictions to amount to anything. The Scallie case against him is weak, depending mostly on circumstantial evidence. Conviction is problematical. His family would probably import a first class outside attorney, so why should this county spend several thousand dollars to secure a murder conviction in which they are only remotely interested.

There is a possibility that Livingston county may be faced with another such murder trial. Last May the dead body of Silas Coleman, a Detroit negro was taken from Honey Creek at Nash's bridge, a mile west of Pinckney. 11 bullet wounds were in it. The woman with whom the dead negro was living disappeared at this time as did her estranged husband. We understand that if the latter is captured he will be returned here for trial.

Wonder just why outstate murderers consider Livingston county an ideal place in which to commit their crimes.

Concerning the New School Addition

Fred Read, Director Of The Pinckney School Board Answers A Number Of Questions Relative To The Proposed Addition.

The editor has asked the following questions relative to the proposed addition to the Pinckney School and they have been answered by Fred Read of the school board. They are as follows:

1. Why is it considered necessary to add to a school in this district?

Answer—To pay interest on debt.

2. Why is it necessary to build a gymnasium and auditorium?

Answer—For the good of the school.

3. Will the contract to furnish the material be let by bid?

Answer—Yes.

4. Will it be necessary to employ welfare labor on the proposed addition?

Answer—To a certain extent.

5. Will the contract for the construction of the addition be let by bid?

Answer—Yes.

6. Will it be necessary to employ more teachers and an extra janitor when the new addition is ready for use?

Answer—No.

7. What is the school tax in some of the neighboring district?

Answer—Fowlverville school tax is 11 mills, Brighton 12.7 mills, Howell 11 and Dexter 7. Brighton had to raise more money to make-up a deficit, hence the 12.7 mills. Dexter did not increase the mill tax, but got around this by doubling the valuation.

8. Is there a time limit to this outright grant of $20,450 which has been offered to the district?

Answer—Construction must start by December 15, 1935.

9. Just what is the status of the Pinckney school. We were informed some years ago at the time the dept. of education considered closing the school and later rescinded the order that the school had been given five years in which to establish a sinking fund toward building a new school or making the necessary repairs?

Answer—My understanding is that there was no time limit set but that the formation of a sinking fund was recommended.

10. Who now has in the coming election to approved bond issue for the addition and increase the school tax?

Answer—Any taxpayers in the school district or husband or wife of a taxpayer?

11. Is a two-thirds majority necessary to carry over proposition?

Answer—A majority is necessary on raising bonds, a two-thirds majority is necessary on raising the school mill tax.

12. If the proposition could be and the other losses just want would be the result?

Answer—Both Propositions may carry.

13. If the proposition is approved at the next election, when would the new building be ready for use?

Answer—On September 1, 1936.

14. The proposed auditorium and gymnasium were built would it be available for rental for other than school purposes?

Answer—If left to the school board.

15. Is it not a possibility that if the present PWA offer is not accepted Pinckney will have to find the entire cost of constructing a similar addition being the only village or city in the county which has not built a new school in recent years?

Answer—Yes.

16. Will a new heating plant be necessary for the new addition or will the present one be sufficient?

Answer—The present heating plant will be added to.

17. Does the entire appropriation of $44,450 include the furnishings and equipment for the proposed addition?

Answer—Yes, it includes all equipment.

18. If the proposed addition is built is it probable that the district will be asked to do any more building or remodeling for a number of years to come?

Answer—No.

19. Is there danger of the school being dropped from the accredited list of the University of Michigan, providing the proposed bond issue loses?

Answer—No doubt about it.

Current Comment

The citizens of this school district were so busy tuning in on the world series, attending the Fowlverville Fair and other things last Thursday that only a handful turned out at the mass meeting held to discuss the new addition to the Pinckney school. We wonder if they realize that this is an opportunity to get an outright donation of $20,450. To turn down this proposition would seem to be similar to locking the door on Santa Claus. There is a time limit to this offer and work on the new addition must be started by December 15, 1935. Owing to the smallness of the crowd Lucius Wilson made a motion that it be adjourned for one week which was accordingly done. So on Friday of this week, October 11 the people will be given another opportunity to hear this new school addition discussed. We know that there is considerable opposition to the proposition but feel that this is due to the fact that the proposition is not thoroughly understood. If these people are given a chance to ask questions we believe their viewpoint would be different.

Evidently the depression has at last been licked. All branches of business are reporting gains in business and everything seems to be running on an even keel. This fact would further seem to be born out by the million dollar game which Joe Louis and Max Baer drew at their recent fight in New York City and the fact that 50,000 people paid admission to the opening game of the world series Detroit last week Wednesday. The prices ranged from $5.00 on up for seats. So the common people must be getting their buying power back again. The fact that there is more money in circulation now than there has been in several years cannot be disputed.

A peculiar circumstance seems to have arisen in Livingston county. On June 30, 1934, Salvatore Scallie, an Italian, was found dying in the cellar of an abandoned farm house in Iosco township. He was removed to a Detroit hospital where he died. Before his death he gave the name of Thomas Bommerito as his murderer. Bommerito was not captured until two weeks ago when Detroit police nabbed him and turned him over to Howell officers. According to the Detroit Free Press Prosecutor Stanley Beriman has asked Wayne county to prosecute the case as he claims that Livingston county is financially unable to do so, owing to the fact that the Frechette trunk murder trial cost over $5,000. Also the Scallie murder had its background in Wayne county where both Scallie and Bommerito resided. Prosecutor McGree has taken the matter under consideration. If Beriman's plea is granted a new precedent may be established. Former Prosecutor Jay P. Sweeney, is attorney for Bommerito.

Henry J. Bakema, secretary of the Michigan Bakers Association predicts that the short wheat crops and European situation will soon result in an increase in the price of bread. He states that there is a domestic shortage of 50,000,000 bushels of wheat this year and the Iulo-European situation is a contributing factor to the increased price.

It was ever thus, when wheat hit the skids, a few years ago and went down to 30 and 40 cents per bushel bread stayed up, for as the bakers explained they were overstocked with the high priced wheat which they must get rid of. But when wheat goes up, it doesn't seem to take them long to get rid of their cheap wheat.

At last the problem of stopping or curtailing the drinking of liquor at university stadiums at football games is being considered. For years that has been a nuisance and people entering or leaving the stadiums have been obliged to pick their way over smashed whiskey bottles. Several years ago several Pinckneyites got into an argument with a drunk, who persisted in standing up in front of them. The argument was finally settled by knocking the drunk down. This problem admits of no easy solution. It would hardly be possible to search everyone who enters the stadium for booze as there are numerous gates and this would cause a congestion.

The women's Organization for Non-partisan Reform has again been defeated in their second attempt to finance a temperance educational program with state funds, the financial committee refused Friday to appropriate $33,000 to support this campaign among adults and school children. In the last legislative session Gov. Fitzgerald vetoed a $25,000 appropriation for this purpose. Wm. P. Lovett, secretary of the Detroit Citizen's League claims that governor broke his promise to the league and that teaching temperance in the schools is mandatory under two sections of the state law passed a few years ago. To the public the teaching of temperance by the state while that body is also engaged in the liquor business appears inconsistent.

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED
By William Bruckart
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Settle Controversy

Washington.—President Roosevelt has settled a controversy by the simple expedient of transferring two men from responsible positions in the Virgin Islands to jobs in Washington. He has taken Paul M. Pearson from the post of civil governor of the Virgin Islands and has made him assistant director of housing in the Interior department and has transferred Federal Director Judge T. Webster Wilson from his post in the islands to the federal parole board here in Washington. Each man has accepted his new appointment and in so far as a current controversy is concerned, the book is closed.

It will be recalled that Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson long have been at loggerheads over Virgin Island affairs. The battle was bitter. It came to a head when Paul Yates, executive assistant to the governor and a former Washington correspondent, resigned his job and came back here with a bag full of charges against his former chief. The Yates allegations ranged all the way from minor charges of poor judgment to gross accusations. He succeeded in getting a senate committee investigation and it was at that time that the Pearson-Wilson feud flared so openly that administration officials here were dragged in and the whole scope of differences aired.

As a matter of fact there is every reason to believe that Governor Pearson was far from a successful executive in the islands. He frequently aroused the ire of natives and, according to testimony adduced by the senate investigation, had very little to show for the sums of money he expended in attempting to give the Virgin Islands a new lease on life. All of the information tends to establish that the islands continue to be "an effectual poorhouse" just as President Hoover described them on the occasion of a visit during his term as Chief Executive.

But Governor Pearson had his supporters in the administration. Chief among these was Secretary Ickes whose department is responsible for administration of the islands. Just why Mr. Ickes has been so enthusiastic about Governor Pearson's regime is not fully disclosed in any evidence here except that the interior secretary has certain ideas about social reform that some unkind critics refer to as pure socialism which Governor Pearson had been attempting to impose upon the island inhabitants. Governor Pearson has expended vast sums of PWA funds in the islands in his efforts to carry out the Ickes program of reform. It seems, however, that the schemes were not as practical as they might have been and so trouble started in a rather extensive fashion.

The President stayed outside of the row until in the course of the senate inquiry Senator Tydings, a Maryland Democrat and usually an anti-Roosevelt Democrat, received a letter from Mr. Ickes. Mr. Ickes accused the investigating chairman with having whitewashed a witness whose testimony was all anti-Ickes and anti-Pearson. The senator flared up in a big way at that letter. His reply is likely to become a classic in official correspondence. He did not mince his words. After voicing his general conception of the attitude exhibited by Mr. Ickes and accusing him of attempting to interfere in the investigation, Senator Tydings informed the interior secretary that he may as well attempt to run the Department of the Interior and let the senators run the senate. He used just about those words.

That was the signal for Mr. Roosevelt to take a hand. It was easy to see that a few outbursts of that kind and Mr. Ickes might have found himself in a splendid position to resign from the cabinet. So the President got the feudists into his office, singly of course, and when those conferences were over the senate investigation into the Virgin Island situation was suspended for two weeks. The transfer of Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson resulted.

One might properly inquire why all of this agitation has occurred about the Virgin Islands. They are many hundreds of miles from Washington. They lie in the Caribbean sea, considerably out of the usual pathway of ships; they are populated by about 22,000 individuals, 95 per cent of whom are negroes and may generally be described as a "backward" place.

They may have some military and naval value. That has never been fully demonstrated. But the fact remains they are possessions of the United States and if our government is to be their protector, it is responsible for a sane administration of their affairs.

The Washington fight may have had its start in the Virgin Islands, but it has progressed beyond that point and is a domestic battle now. It is safe to say that for 18 years, which is the time the islands have been under United States rule, there has been a dire need for a plan of government suited to those people. Each year congress has been appropriating thousands of dollars for the island government and each year there has been miserably little in the way of improvement to show for these funds.

Almost as frequently as congress has appropriated money it has made changes in the administration methods in use there. There has never been a long term program laid out and there has been nothing whatsoever done showing the sympathy of a so-called intellectual people as we claim to be for those down-trodden masses that populate the Virgin Islands.

All of this, it seems to me, shows the woeful need for careful consideration of that situation. It seems to me equally apparent that as long as congress keeps meddling in and as long as politicians from the mainland are sent there purely on a political basis we will continue to have a pack of trouble bundled up in those Virgin Islands.

Several attempts have been made to work out a governmental system worth while but the politicians are not among those who will let plums escape. It is certain, therefore, that the Pearson-Wilson-Ickes-Tydings battle royal is an outcropping of what amounts to a festering sore in American governmental policy.

If congress continues in session past August 15, and it is now apparent that it may run to September 1, it will have been in session 225 days, some two weeks longer than the average of the so-called long sessions of congress.

Long Session Severe Strain

Prior to adoption of the "lame duck" amendment which did away with sessions of unequal length, the shorter sessions of congress averaged about 170 days. The longer terms were around 215 days before final adjournment was taken. Thus, the current session stands in a fair way to be among the list of hardy sessions.

All of which is by way of saying that the current session of congress has worn down its members both physically and mentally to an extent quite unusual. I was talking a few days ago with a veteran senator, a man who has served almost 25 years in the upper house of congress. He is known as a physically strong individual and usually lasts very well through the work that piles up before senators and representatives. I inquired of him concerning the general health of congress and his reply was:

"I regret to say we are just a bunch of debilitated old men, incapable of doing the job that is expected of us and everyone is hoping against hope that we can live through this work and this heat."

As a result of that conversation the thought came to me that there was an answer to the oft repeated declaration that members of congress fail to earn their salaries of $10,000 per year. I have observed congressional proceedings almost a score of years and it is my mature conviction that few times in that period has congress failed to earn its salt.

There is another reason why congressional sessions should not run so long and should not be carried on in the intense heat of Washington summer.

One condition nearly always has obtained near the close of a long session. As the days drag by, persons with axes to grind and individual interests to serve have a way of digging up questionable bills that theretofore had been side-tracked and assumed to be dead. With resistance low, the average senator or representative is unable to fight off legislation which he knows to be bad with the same spirit that accompanied his activities earlier in the session. Likewise, he is unable to battle as successfully as before for legislation which he knows to be good.

This condition opens the way for a revival of lobbies. They are back in Washington in numbers now despite the disclosures being made by the two congressional committees that are investigating the lobbies that operated to defeat, temporarily at least, the legislation killing utility holding companies. One would have assumed justly with the investigations under way after the utility legislation was passed that lobbyists and self-serving representatives would have been frightened away from Washington.

Such was not the case. They are here in such numbers that some observers believe Mr. Roosevelt has made a mistake in demanding that congress stay until it has enacted the share-the-wealth-tax bill and the legislation which will prohibit lawsuits against the government for damages resulting from abrogation of the promise in government bonds to pay them in gold. Mr. Roosevelt is insisting on these laws. He will get them. But in the opinion of many authorities he stands a fair chance also of getting some other legislation which he may not want.

Linen Suit a Midsummer Favorite

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE present vogue for linen is nothing short of sensational. Whether you go dining, dancing, swimming, flying, motoring, golfing or shopping, or play tennis, there's a linen for every occasion from rustic crashes and peasant weaves and colorful Tahitian prints to alluring novelties in stripes and plaids and in sheer lovely effects for high-style evening wear.

Midsummer days are proving that linen suits, especially in white and natural tones, are of first interest among best dressed women for about-town wear. A linen suit and a wardrobe of blouses and the problem of being smartly appareled during the daytime hours is solved not only for the immediate moment but for well on into the fall, since the very newest linens are in white shades, in Dubonnet red, in beetroot, purple and orange tones.

Just now, while the weather is warm, it's the white and natural linens that are lending their immaculate and well-groomed appearance to the summer scene. The trio of stunning suits pictured represent the very creme de la creme in linens as now featuring on the style program.

The young woman seated shows that she knows fashion in that with her suit of moogashel linen, in natural color, she is wearing a dark blouse, the same being brown with white polka dots. You are doing the right thing this season if to wear with your white and natural linens you choose dark accessories. The coat is single breasted with buttons all the way up to the collarless neckline. A novel idea is introduced in the placement of deep large pockets above the belt line. Raglan sleeves add a final touch of smartness to this linen classic.

The other two suits are also of moogashel linen. It is rather interesting to know in this connection that King George sends the flax grown on his royal estate at Sandringham, England (supposed to be the finest flax in the world) to Moogashel, Ireland, there to be woven, because the workmanship is so fine—quite a royal pedigree for these linens.

The two-piece centered in the group has a tight-fitting basque coat with no belt to disturb the natural line. It is of white linen with navy buttons and tie. The double binding to the coat which gives a vestee effect is new and smart. The sports flap pockets are chic, too.

Handstitching around the notched collar and the pockets gives a distinctive touch to the white linen suit to the right. The stitching and the belt are in matched coloring. The coat is double-breasted, and a polka dot shirt is worn under it.

A very fashionable thing to do is wear a bright colored linen coat or jacket with your white linen skirt. Lilac colored linens for these coats are the rage with beetroot or Dubonnet red close seconds.

Then, too, novelty linens with nubby surface or loose porous weave are in good style for suits and for coats. These heavier suits are mostly in oyster white. Very "fifty" ones are shadow-checked in gray and some stunning weaves are in herringbone patterning flecked with brown.

There are lovely embroidered linens shown for dressier wear and sheer striped linens are made up into fascinating evening gowns, as formally as if they were stately silks. With the new fall tweed suits designers are creating clever blouses of fine handkerchief linens in colorings related to the costume entire.

SMART BEACHWEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This beach ensemble is out of the ordinary. It is fashioned of purple seahat-lace over a linen foundation. Which again proves that lace goes everywhere this season. The ensemble consists of a pair of shorts and blouse with a wrap-around skirt. The large hat is of purple straw.

SHOE COMFORT IS MOST IMPORTANT

To be footloose and free during the season of pleasant week ends and after-dark breathing spaces, one must have foot comfort.

Cool shoes with flexible construction are a likely way of getting this comfort, with preference given lightweight numbers, and those that are ventilated by perforations, lattice and cut-outs.

Novelties in shoes are always at their peak in the summer season, and they are usually far more moderately priced than the novelties thought up for evening shoes to complement formal winter costumes.

Sandals of printed linen or crash, slippers covered with gay flowered chiffon, oxfords of splendid supporting strength, perforated into lacy prettiness, plain cotton or linen shoes of any color you can name, plaid linen in natural tones, checked gingham in kitchen apron designs, lightweight suede in any pastel hue or any flag hue and crocheted string shoes are just a few of the kinds you can choose from in the shops.

Oriental Influence Seen in Evening Clothes Styles

The Hindu influence, inspired by the Maharajah of India, has initiated a definite swing away from fitted, bias lines to softly draped designs in evening clothes. Allied influences, such as Persian, Arabian, and a new version of Grecian folds, contribute to the same effect. These flattering, age-old drapery details are difficult to make and hence are not easily copied, a point being stressed now in high style circles. Aliz, the Parisian couturier, has turned out a thrilling array of Oriental formal gowns. Most of them are topped with seductive saris, those long, scarf-like affairs which start out by wrapping around the body and then proceed to cover the head in the manner of a monk's hood.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

THE STORY OF LAS PLACITAS

THEY were sitting on their heels in the shade of a corral fence, these two southwesterners, one day in the spring of 1880. It was at a place not far from Santa Fe, that center of romance and excitement for the whole western country. As they talked about things old and new, never dreaming what madness was in store for them, old Jesse Martin came riding up, all steamed up over something.

"Look at this, boys," he said, fairly stuttering. "I've got the richest thing on top of this here earth."

"This" was a handful of ore—ore so rich that the two friends caught the contagion and grew as excited as Martin.

"Where'd you get it, Jess?" they asked, eagerly.

"I ain't a-goin' to tell you," was the answer. "Not now, boys, I ain't. I got a partner in Santa Fe, and I'm goin' to tell him first. Then when we git everything fixed, I'll let you in on it."

All the pleading they could do would not move Martin from this decision. He rode off finally toward Santa Fe with his ore and his news, leaving them to wonder where in the world he had found such a bonanza. Had he run across the Adams diggings, or the Hatchet mine? Pshaw, those places were too far south for Martin to find. This must be something a lot nearer home.

Nearer home—why, perhaps they could ask some questions of the Mexicans and Indians thereabouts, and find out where old Martin had been. That was the idea! Hastily they caught up their horses, rode forth, and began to take up Martin's trail. Oh yes, said someone here and someone else there, the old man had passed this way, or he had ridden yonder. We saw him just a day or so ago. He was coming from thus-and-such a direction. So the pair rode in that direction. And sure enough, they finally came to a claim, all regularly staked. In the prospect hole was ore—ore like that he had showed them—very rich ore.

The two men were greatly pleased with their forethought in tracing down the location. With business-like promptness, they staked their claims alongside Martin's. From these new mines-in-the-making they gathered a few samples, and then they raced back to an assayer, wild with curiosity. How would the ore turn out?

The assayer grew excited with them. Hastily he prepared for the business of extracting gold, as they watched the process with eager eyes. At last—

In the bottom of the crucible lay a button of something. Now for the acid test—would it prove to be gold? With trembling hands the assayer poured in the acid—and the button did not cut! Eureka! They were worth fortunes!

They rushed back to their claims. The news had already spread, in that strange manner with which the word of new-found gold always has spread, and men were coming in to stake claims as near to theirs as possible.

Then came a crowd from Santa Fe. At its head were Jesse Martin and Governor Lew Wallace! So that was the partner! The news ran ahead of them—Jesse's samples had assayed $75 to $100 to the ton. Everyone laughed with glee—everyone cheered.

In three days Las Placitas accumulated a population of 10,000 souls. Everyone was gold-crazy—the golden phantom had led them to fortune and they had left their wits behind when they set out to follow her. And yet—

Some of the more sober souls began to quiet down. It was time to make more assays, to see just how far the gold spread out, to learn just how rich it would run.

The assays were made. They showed no value at all.

The shock was tremendous. Men refused at first to believe it. They argued angrily that there was some mistake. They knew that they had found gold. The assayer must be a fool, not to know his business. He could not find gold when it was right under his nose.

Then someone thought of looking for Jesse Martin. He had "the richest thing on top of this here earth," did he? Well, he'd better explain himself.

But Martin had vanished from sight—and with him disappeared about $4,000 in real money—money that he had obtained from Lew Wallace and other prominent men of Santa Fe. He had "lit out" for parts unknown as soon as the rush set in. He was too keen an old coddler to risk discovery and retribution.

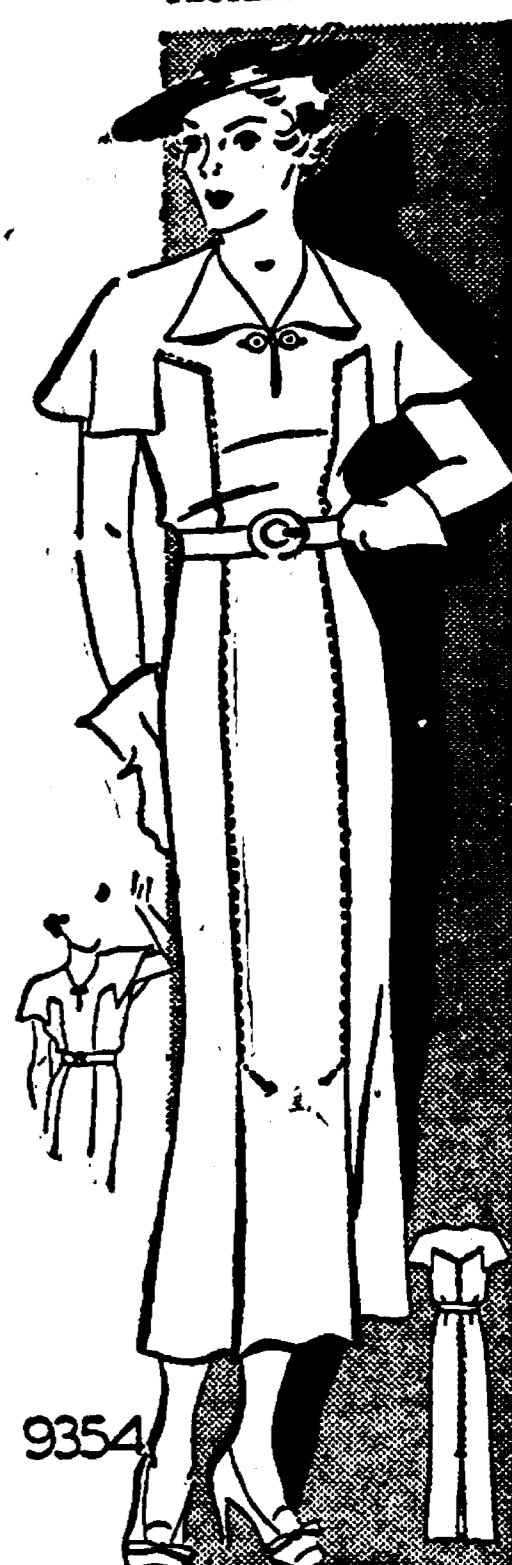

But the mine—that was still there, and the rich ore had most certainly come from his claim! So it had—but not originally. Martin had salted the hole with high-grade from another mine.

And the assay—that button of gold which the acid would not cut! It was merely a crystallization, and not gold at all.

Ten days later Las Placitas had again become a desolate spot in the hills. Only thousands of tin cans sparkled and glittered in the New Mexico sun—just as shining as had been the hopes of the ten thousand, just as worthless as the claims they staked.

WITH AN EYE TO COOL SIMPLICITY

PATTERN 9354

The smart girl has one eye on the budget and the other anticipating a rise in temperature—and makes a cool decision to include several summer sports in her wardrobe right now. It took a lot of ingenuity to design that clever yoke-cape-panel in one. It makes sewing so easy, and briefly, that cape is much cooler than a sleeve. Pattern 9354 sports an action pleat back and skirt just to help you "get places." If you find a simple flat neckline becoming, omit the dashing revers (but we like 'em). Very correct for spectator sports, office wear or week-end jaunts. Make it up in washable sport silk or shantung. Try a novel "cork" buckle and buttons.

Pattern 9354 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 4 yards 38 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

RULES FOR A SUCCESSFUL FOOTBALL TEAM

- 1.—Teamwork. In other words the ability of eleven players to work together unselfishly for attainment of a single objective.
- 2.—Self-discipline in the work of attaining perfection or as near to perfection as possible.
- 3.—Intelligence in seizing the opportunity which presents itself. Or, to put it another way, generalship and the ability to rise to an occasion for the big test.
- 4.—Physical condition.

In describing a game between Columbia and Stanford he says that his team felt they were underdog. He says an American who plays football "reacts with especial interest to a challenge such as that. Let him think that the test ahead is easy and he may grow a little over-confident. The boys were coming up to the game in an almost perfect frame of mind—confident in their ability to play good football but with a high respect for their opponents and with the knowledge that every possible ounce of ability and power intelligently used would be necessary if Stanford were to be defeated."

And then after outlining the plays of the game and showing how they were a demonstration of the qualities of Teamwork, Self-discipline, Intelligence and Physical Condition, Coach Little says, "I think that every boy on that Columbia team learned in the Rose Bowl the satisfaction of real achievement that is based on conscientious effort and hard work."

"Every coach can tell you of the boy who usually reached his greatest heights against stern opposition. Some players are like that. The harder they play, the better they play. That's the boy who in the slang phrase is called the 'money player'. I don't have to tell you that whether he is playing football or out doing a worthwhile job in the world, the chap who is able to produce under pressure is the one who gains the respect of his associates."

USE CARE WHILE HUNTING

In the hope of saving lives and preventing serious injuries, the Department of Conservation again issues this pre-season warning to the hunters of the state.

Hunting hazards are becoming a serious matter each fall in Michigan, especially during the up-land bird-south. This season opens Tuesday, Oct. 15, drawing tens of thousands of sportsmen into the woods and fields with shotguns.

During the brief period in which pheasant-shooting was legal last season, the careless and reckless handling of shotguns took the lives of a dozen sportsmen and injured eighteen others, some seriously.

The accident record for the 1934-35 small game season was 30 dead and 50 injured.

The hunter whose name may appear on the casualty list this fall is today planning his hunting trip. A decision to abide by the rules of caution and safety may save a life.

CAN'T HUNT DEFER FROM TREES

Hunting deer from a tree is no longer legal in Michigan.

In fact, an amendment to the general game laws of 1935 makes any part of a tree except the dead stump an illegal perch for the hunter. And it makes no difference what species of game he is hunting, whether it be deer or rabbits.

Before the 1935 legislature made this change a part of the general laws, it was legal to hunt from a tree so long as the sportsman did not use as a perch any type of artificial platform.

The law now reads: "It shall be unlawful for any person at any time to make use on any pit, pitfall, dead fall, scaffold, raised platform, tree, cage, snare, trap, net, baited hook or any similar device or any drug, poison, salt, chemical, smoke, gas, explosive, guinea pig or rodent of any kind, artificial light or mechanical device for the purpose of injuring, capturing or killing any birds or animals protected by the laws of this state." Firearms or steel traps are not construed as mechanical devices.

SAY HONEY DESERVES MORE FREQUENT USE

Honey is one Michigan product which should be used more commonly in most homes, according to the home economics department at Michigan State College.

Americans prefer honey either as comb honey or in the extracted form but granulated honey is the most popular in some countries. The food value of honey is high, as one cup of honey contains about 9 1/2 ounces of sugar while a cup of sugar weighs only seven ounces. A tablespoonful of honey has the same value in calories as 1 1/2 tablespoonsful of corn syrup, four of maple syrup, or 1 1/2 of molasses.

The flavor of honey is due to the aromatic substances found in the flowers from which the honey is made. These substances differ in the various flowers so it is possible to secure honey with a flavor to suit many tastes. The lighter colored honeys usually have the milder flavors.

When honey is used to replace sugar in baking, the cook should remember that the amount of liquid used ordinarily, should be reduced one-fifth for every cup of honey used. Honey replaces a little more than an equal volume of ordinary sugar in baking. Too hot ovens must be avoided if honey is used. A small scorched spot ruins a whole cake if honey has been used in making it.

If cups used to measure honey are coated lightly with grease before the measuring, the honey will pour out readily to the last drop. Rubber scrapers will remove honey easily from dishes.

SCOUTING GROWING IN LIVINGSTON COUNTY

"Scouts number 1/2 are new enrolled in the nine scout groups in Livingston County and we have set our goal for 200 or more scouts cubs and Senior Scouts before January first," Scout Executive Walter MacPeck said yesterday.

Of the nine present scout troops, four are in Howell and one each in Brighton, Fowlerville, Pinckney, Hartland and Hamburg. No cub groups are registered yet but considerable interest is being shown in Cubbing. As yet no senior scout groups have been formed in the county, but this one is filled of real interest. An Explorer Group of scouts fifteen and over provides an effective way of holding the interest of Senior scouts.

LARGEST GROUPS

The largest group in Livingston County are:

Troop 2 of Howell	27 scouts.
Troop 1 of Hartland	25 scouts.
Troop 1 of Howell	22 scouts.
Troop 1 of Fowlerville	20 scouts.
Troop 1 of Brighton	19 scouts.

SCOUTING HERE UNDER FULL SWING

Membership Total Climbing Higher

The month of October is to be a full period for Scouts and Scout-leaders of this District. The schedule of activities is full of opportunities for football ushering, training courses, courts of honor and other high-spots Scout activities.

The fall year opened on Saturday, September 28th with an enthusiastic Kick-off meeting attended by more than 60 scout leaders and 100 committeemen from various parts of Washtenaw-Livingston Counties.

BENSON TO RETURN

Several local scouts enjoyed hearing Mr. O. H. Benson, National founder of the 4th club program director of Rural scouting and when he was here last February. Mr. Benson is to be in this Council again on the 20th of October and special arrangements are being made to provide opportunities to have a large number of county leaders to hear him.

STANDARD TROOP AWARDS WILL BE GIVEN

Standard Troop Treasures will more be awarded to outstanding troops, it was announced definitely today. These awards, which have been issued for several years, will be based on the troops growth in membership, advancement in rank, program, activity, participation in hikes and camping, and service rendered.

The streamers will be awarded each year—the first ones being issued for the three months of October, November and December of 1935.

The banner will be made of felt lettered "Standard Troop." The quarter for which it was awarded will be lettered on the bottom. The color will be changed for each year. Every troop is urged to start working immediately to win one of these awards.

COMING EVENTS

A list of the coming events include a leaders' training course each Wednesday evening in October at 7:30 at the Ann Arbor High school, for all scoutmasters, assistants and troop committee members.

Friday October 4th Installation of Bridgewater troop at 7:30 p. m. at the Bridgewater school.

Saturday, Oct. 5th. Scouts' usher at Mich. St. game, Mon. Oct. 7th Middle District Board of Review at 7 p. m. in the basement of Area headquarters.

Monday, October 21, Executive Board Meeting 6:15 p. m. McKenny Hall, Ypsilanti.

Tuesday, October 22nd, Southern District court of honor 7:30 p. m. Ypsilanti High.

Wednesday, October 30th Testimonial dinner to scout leaders, 6:15 p. m.

LEARN WAY TO RAISE QUALITY OF FLOCKS

The intention of the owners of Michigan chick hatcheries to use all means to improve the quality of the chicks sold by them is proved by the time devoted by them to learn methods of eliminating any disease carriers from their breeding flocks, at Michigan State College.

Sixty-seven men were awarded certificates stating they were qualified to make tests on birds in their flock to determine if the bird was a carrier of pullorum disease. The certificates were given after the men completed an intensive course of training given by bacteriologists on the College staff.

The tests can be made rapidly and the person doing the testing can tell before he releases a bird whether it is a carrier or not. Birds which react can be removed from the flock immediately. Pullorum disease is one of the serious maladies affecting baby chicks and is transmitted through the eggs of diseased mature birds. Removing these mature birds reduces the chance of chicks being affected.

The cost of the test is only about two cents per bird. The men awarded certificates are not permitted to test the flocks of others but they can eliminate this disease from their own flocks. This will cut the losses of baby chicks purchased by Michigan farmers.

Michigan is one of the important centers of the chick hatching industry. The reputation gained by the State will be maintained if all hatcherymen use every endeavor to improve the quality of their breeding flocks.

YOUR OWN KITCHEN...

on a TRIAL ELECTRIC RANGE

YOU needn't be an epicure to tell the difference between electric cooking and other cooking. Sample a meal like this one, and judge for yourself!

You'll marvel at the deliciously different flavor in foods: meats and vegetables cooked to melting tenderness in their own juices; the light fluffiness of biscuits baked to golden perfection; the fine-grained, even texture of cakes like mother used to make; and the healthfulness and goodness that is sealed-in by this modern cooking method. Once you have tasted electric cooking, you will wonder how you ever got along without it. Your family will enjoy electrically cooked meals

... and you yourself will like their ease of preparation and the convenience and cleanliness of a modern electric range. Why not prove this—in your own kitchen—by means of our Trial Plan?

We will install an electric range in your kitchen without initial charge, so that you may give it a thorough trial. During this trial period, you simply pay for the service as registered by your meter, plus a monthly charge of $1 for the range. If you decide to keep the range, your monthly payments will be applied toward the purchase price. If you decide that you do not want it, the range will be removed at our expense. "Obviously, the only sound policy that will meet these obligations is to continue to furnish the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety."

The Unseen Factor

AMERICA's world supremacy in telephone service is an achievement of the Bell System. And no factor contributed more to the winning of that leadership than the unseen factor of policy.

The fundamental policy of the Bell System is to supply the best possible telephone service at the least possible cost; and the status of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company as a part of that System has a definite, practical meaning for the people of this State.

It means that the telephones and other equipment used in Michigan are of the finest modern make, produced for us—more economically than they can be bought elsewhere—by the Western Electric Company, manufacturing division of the Bell System.

It means that this Company gets the benefit of the work constantly going forward in the famous Bell Laboratories, where more than 4000 scientists devote their entire time to the improvement of the service.

It means that we receive assistance in financing; the use of thousands of important patents; advisory counsel on methods of operation. In short, it means that we can utilize the many benefits that have grown out of a half-century's progress in telephonic communication—a progress which has brought to the modern telephone, despite the vast and intricate physical equipment involved, such efficient simplicity that its use presents no difficulty even to a child.

That progress could not have been achieved under a dollar-chasing policy, but only under a policy honestly dedicated to genuine public service. And that policy, though invisible, is as real and as important as the poles and wires and cables which link the Michigan subscriber with thirty million telephones distributed throughout the world.

For Free Kindergartens

The greatest possible social and educational economy is to give young children expert guidance so that they may be saved building up the unfortunate behavior which must later be broken down," writes H. E. O'Shea, and President Charles J. CHAPTER X—Continued

Jean called out sharply, "Is that you, Kentucky? Are you hurt?" "They hit Lee Bishop, Jean."

She slid out of the saddle, tossing the reins over her pony's head, and came to the edge of the coulee. "Where's Lee?"

"Drop down and I'll take you to him." He held up his arms and she let herself drop into them, but freed herself immediately. "Is he hit bad?"

He whispered, "He can hear us from here, I think. I don't know but what they've finished him, Jean. He's shot in the side of the back, and Lord knows where the bullet stopped. You shouldn't have come here—don't you know that?"

"Somebody had to come. Campo—my father is back from Waterman; but Harry Wilson quit when Campo wouldn't bring out more riders. You and Campo and I are all that's left. And now poor Lee—poor Lee—"

He led her down the cut to where Bishop lay. The range boss opened his eyes and turned his face toward her. "Is that you, Jean?"

She dropped on her knees beside him. "Yes, Lee."

"Didn't know but what I might be hearing things. Where's Campo?"

"He's making a sweep of the upper Bench trail. Lee, you must be plumb frozen!"

"Pretty near," Bishop admitted.

Jean slipped off her coat, and carefully wrapped Bishop's legs. Then she scrambled out of the cut, ran to her horse and, loosening the cinch, jerked her blanket from under the saddle. When this was placed to suit her, she made ready to go.

"It's sure a shot-to-pieces outfit you brought into, Kentucky."

"That deal is off," he told her. "I own no share in the Bar Hook, nor any part of a share."

Jean looked at him but there was no expression in her face, nor in her voice as she answered. "So you're quitting, too?"

"No, nor quite yet," Kentucky told her grimly. "I'm just going ahead in a little different way than we figured I was going to; that's all."

Jean dropped beside Lee Bishop again, and for a long time studied the mask of his face, yellow in the firelight. He seemed asleep. Irrepressible tears appeared on Jean's cheeks, glistening in the light of the fire. She bent over Lee Bishop and kissed him. "Good-by, Lee," she said softly. "I'll be back pretty quick."

Lee Bishop smiled faintly. "Take your time, kid."

Jean caught Kentucky's wrist and led him a little way down the cut. "Do you think there's any chance of moving him?"

"I don't know as we better try, Jean. When you get back to the house, phone to Waterman for Doc Hopper. Then pack a horse and come back. Get hold of a tent if there's any on the place, and all the bed-rolls that come handy. You know what we'll need."

Jean Ragland scaled the side of the cut, re-cinched her saddle, and rode off at a sharp trot.

Lee Bishop said, "There goes a great girl, Kentucky. You're lucky, all right."

"Lucky? Ma?" "She'd ride her horse square off the rim," Lee Bishop said, "if you told her to." He was talking in a queer and somehow childish tone of voice which Kentucky had never heard him use. "Listen, Kentucky. Get this—can you hear me all right?"

"I can hear you, Lee."

"You're worse off than you think. Kentucky. Campo believes you killed Mason."

"Is That You, Kentucky?"

"You're worse off than you think. Kentucky. Campo believes you killed Mason."

Kentucky said slowly, "I don't know but what Campo has almighty good reason to know better than that, Lee." "What if he has?" Lee demanded. "What you don't know is, he's been gathering up stuff against you—tracing guns, and the like of that. In a pinch he'll turn on you, Campo will! But believe in that girl. She believes in you; and she'll stand by you."

"The pinch will come quick, now," Kentucky said. "But she'll not be with me, Lee."

Lee Bishop said in a curious hoarse whisper, "She'd jerk the heart out of her, if you needed it. She's got a faith in you that you don't have for her."

"Faith?" Kentucky repeated savagely. "If she'd trusted me only half way, only quarter way, you and I wouldn't be sitting here tonight."

Lee Bishop looked at Kentucky a long time, and his mind seemed to be turning vague. "You ain't licked, Kentucky," he said at last in a weak voice. "You can beat this game yet."

"Sure I'll beat it," Kentucky assured him. "Lee, I'll beat it in spite of her."

Lee Bishop said in a queer voice, "You—you couldn't go against that girl, Kentucky."

"I'd sooner cut off my right hand, Lee; but I've got to go square against her now."

For another long moment Lee Bishop fixed staring, vacant eyes upon Kentucky's face. "You love her, huh?"

Kentucky Jones shivered; he felt as if the grip of the night cold was getting the better of him, so that his body had a core of ice. He covered his face with his hands. "I think," he said, "I hate her as I've never hated any living thing in my life."

Lee Bishop's words jerked out of him incoherently, but unexpectedly sharp and strong. "God help you, Kentucky—don't say that!"

"All right, Lee."

Jean Ragland made the round trip—and loaded a mule at the other end—in a little over four hours, which was wonderful time on those night trails. But she might as well have saved her animals; for an hour before she reached Trap canyon Lee Bishop was dead.

When Kentucky had packed the body to the Bake Pan camp of the Bar Hook, where he placed it with that of Jim Humphreys, he faced his horse into the steep switch-back trail up the rim, and started for the main ranch.

Kentucky had agreed with Jean Ragland that to take Lee Bishop to the Bake Pan camp was a shorter and more convenient pack; and Kentucky had seized upon the opportunity to release Jean from the mournful procession and send her home.

He now put his horse up the trail stiffly, climbing fast. He felt no weariness, but only a black temper. Now that he knew for the first time what set of ugly circumstances he was up against, he knew what he had to do; it was not easy, and he wanted to get it behind him.

The voices of the guns and the circumstances of Lee Bishop's death had brought him an odd new alertness, an almost painful consciousness of everything that moved within the limits of the rimrock horizon. It was as if he had found himself returned to the days of his forefathers, when an awareness of far-off details had a lot to do with keeping on a man's scalp.

And long before Jean Ragland came in sight, he knew that two horses were coming toward him along the trail, that they had but one rider, and that the second horse was not driven, but led.

For a moment after Jean came in sight he was absorbed by the sight of her. She rode a little dark pony, and her short white storm coat was in key with the snow. Hardly anybody ever saw Jean Ragland ride without following her with his eyes, as a man looks after a bird that is a bright living decoration against the snow. And now the girl and the pony she rode looked better because the led horse was rawboned and mud colored, with only a sharp, well-tracked leg action to suggest that it might be more horse than at first it seemed.

As they met in the trail he saw that her face was quiet with the resignation which had characterized it for the last two days; but her eyes were alive. There was a touch of feverish light in them which told him that she was still fighting, though what she was fighting, or how, he was no longer sure that he knew.

"I've brought you a fresh horse," she said immediately. "Maybe it doesn't look like much horse, but it is a whole lot of horse. Pretty near any Bar Hook horse would give down under you before this plug would."

"I suppose I kind of ought to appreciate that," Kentucky said; "but, Jean, how come you think I am going to need such a long-traveling horse?"

"Kentucky," she said, "Kentucky—"

She drew her hand across her eyes, as if what she was trying to say was almost beyond her ability. "Look here. I've asked a lot of favors of you, Kentucky; a lot more than I ever had any right to ask. I have to ask you one thing more. If you'll do this one thing more for me, I'll be grateful to you all my life; and I swear I'll never ask anything of you again."

"Jean, girl," Kentucky said, "what's happened here?"

"Take this horse, and the mule, and such of the stuff as you need. I don't need to tell you where to go or how to get there, nor how to get along; but do as I say! Go a long way, and go fast, and lose yourself; and never come back until some day this ghastly thing is over with and forgotten!"

Kentucky Jones stared at her a long time, studying her face; but her eyes did not flinch from his. At last a crooked one-sided smile changed his mouth.

"I know this is a terrible sacrifice for you," Jean said. "I wouldn't ask you this, Kentucky, I swear I wouldn't. If I wasn't so positive that there's no other way. Believe this—I'll be your friend, always; it may be later that I can help you, and send your money to you, or something like that. That will work out later. All I can say now is that I'd rather be dead than sitting here telling you this; but there isn't any other way."

"Why do you ask this?" Kentucky said curiously.

"Kentucky—God forgive me!—I can't answer that! But I tell you that there isn't any time to lose! Not an hour, not even—I can't tell you any more! I can only—"

"You'll have to tell me, I think," Kentucky said.

His face was hard, and the fatigue that she had been unable to detect before now had carved lines about his mouth, emphasizing the crooked line of his broken nose.

"You've got to do what I say," she told him passionately, "without any question of why about it."

"You hardly expected me to do that, I think," he told her.

Jean cried out sharply, "Don't take the horse and go. Kentucky, as you love me—but you don't love me; I know that."

"I think," he said, "just now it doesn't matter a whole lot who loves who, or who doesn't."

There was a touch of hysteria in her voice as she answered him. "No, not to you—I think you don't care anything about anybody in the world!"

"God help the man who does," he said. "As for taking that horse and making a run of it, I'm sorry not to do something that you ask. But I can't imagine anything on the face of the earth that would make me do that now."

"Then," she said quickly, "I'll tell you why you must. My father—my father—!" It seemed for a moment as if she were unable to go on. But she pulled herself together and spoke evenly, her words distinct and quick. "You know by this time why Bob Elliot is swamping the Bar Hook range. You have eyes that see things—I don't think anyone can hide from you what a thing means. You can't make me think that you don't know why Elliot has no fear of Campo, nor the Bar Hook."

"No," he said slowly, "I wouldn't pretend that I can't see that."

Her words tumbled out of her incoherently. "It's because Bob Elliot was close to the Bar Hook when Mason was killed. Poor Lee Bishop knew that—though I don't think he knew that he knew it."

Kentucky Jones said, "Bishop told me that he knew."

"And now," said Jean, "now I've got to tell you that I've known this all along—almost from the first. And I—"

"You're sure you want to tell me this, Jean?"

"I have to tell you—you make me tell you—"

That was a strange meeting, there on the trail in all that daze of sun-whipped snow, while all the sharp, sad, hidden things that this girl had never meant to tell a living soul came trembling out of her in a panicky disorder. Perhaps he should have wept or gathered her in his arms; but he could not.

"All right," he said. "What, exactly, is Bob Elliot holding over your father?"

"Somehow he's guessed the truth: that— whoever killed Mason killed him with my father's rifle. I knew that when I put the bullet into your hand at the inquest; I've known for days that you must know that, too, though you said nothing to me."

"Yes," he admitted, "I figured out that."

"And Bob Elliot knows it—I'm certain he knows it. Though I swear I don't know how he is so sure."

"But you yourself are sure that it is true—that the murderer used your father's rifle?"

"The—the yes; I'm virtually certain of that. And my father knows it. He—"

"Have you talked this over with him?"

"No—how could I? It's changed him so I hardly know him. He used to have a terrible fighting temper—but where is it now? He doesn't dare come to a showdown with Elliot; he's afraid of the effect the shock would have on my mother."

"And on you."

"On my mother," she repeated. "He doesn't dare face it out because of her. But just as he won't fight Elliot because of that—something in his makeup keeps him from protecting himself, too. Nothing would bring him to hide evidence—though that evidence might turn against him, as well as against the true murderer. He must have known—"

"Then," said Kentucky, "his alibi—about being somewhere else at the time Mason was killed—is not so good as some people have been led to suppose?"

"He hasn't any testimony in support of it but mine. They'll discount that, because I'm his daughter; even—even if they don't break my testimony in some other way."

He did not stop to tell her that he knew by this that her support of Campo's alibi had been perjury. Instead he asked her, "How many people know that Campo—your father set out to kill Bob Elliot the day Mason was killed?"

She cried out with a shudder in her voice, "You even know that?"

"Bob Elliot told me that," he said shortly.

Jean Ragland looked dizzy, and sick. "Then who can tell how many people Bob Elliot has told?"

Kentucky Jones stripped off his gloves and made himself a cigarette. "And how many people," Kentucky said slowly, "do you think can tell a living man from a ghost?"

Her voice quavered irregularly, no longer fully under her control. "What do you mean?"

"There used to be a picture hanging in the Bar Hook ranch house," Kentucky said. "A picture in a dark wood frame. That picture was stolen because somebody thought it had something to do with the Mason case. When you saw that picture was stolen, you were panic-stricken, and hid the empty frame from your father. Now I'm going to tell you what that picture was."

"You can't— you never saw—"

"It was a picture of a man on a horse. When you first looked at that picture it seemed to be an enlarged snapshot of Bob Elliot. Only—when you looked close, it was not Elliot, but John Mason. Do you deny that, Jean?"

"No," said Jean miserably. "You see? It's just as I said. Nothing escapes you, nothing's able to hide itself away from you. That—that's the rest of the case against my father. Lee Bishop didn't know who it was he saw near the Bar Hook when he thought he saw Mason, and Joe St. Marie only thought he saw Mason's ghost. But—when they rested sideways in their saddles with their faces hidden, a long way off or in the dark—anybody could—could mistake Bob Elliot for Mason."

"Or," he said, "an angry man might—just possibly—mistake Mason for Elliot."

She drew a deep breath and pressed her gloved fingers against her eyes, but did not reply.

"It's my belief," Kentucky said, "that it was the sheriff who searched the house—or had it searched; in which case, he must have that picture."

"I think you're right about the sheriff; he must have been looking for the gun to match the Mason bullet. But he didn't take the picture of Mason—because I took it myself."

"You did? But you looked so scared—"

"I didn't hide frame and all, at first, because it left a pale spot on the wall, that Dad would have noticed. I meant to slide some other picture into the frame. But I forgot it. And then, with Dad hunting all through the house, to see what had been taken, I thought he'd notice the empty frame—and I was terrified."

"And that rifle—?" He paused, watching her, and licked shut his cigarette. "The rifle!" she burst out, jerking her hand away from her eyes. "Who knows where that is now? How do we know that Bob Elliot doesn't have it—himself? Sheriff Hopper has the other bullet. If ever the bullet is fitted to my father's gun—"

"No," he said, "Bob Elliot doesn't have the rifle."

Her voice rose hysterically. "How do you know he hasn't?"

"Because," he told her, "that rifle is dismounted and hidden in the mattress of your bed."

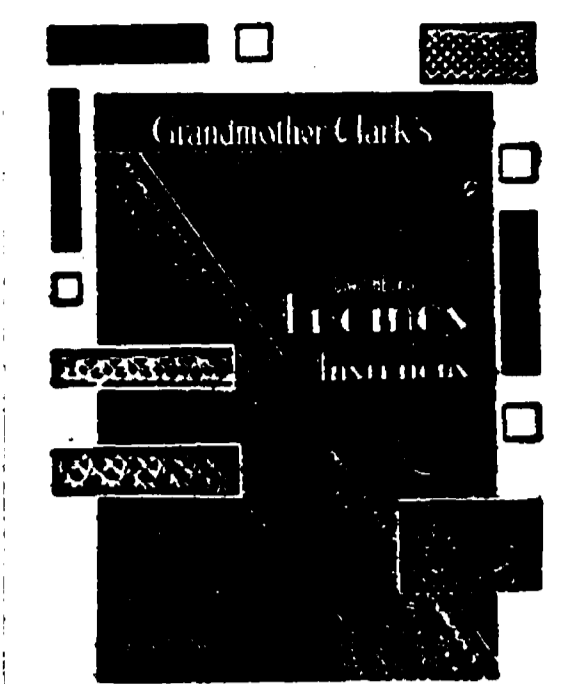

She stared at him blankly for a long moment. "Oh, dear Lord," she said at last in a broken voice. "Why did I ever try to hide anything from you?" She did not avert her face from him, sitting very straight in the saddle. "Yes, I hid it. Campo must have known at once that Mason was killed with his rifle; but do you think anything in the world could have persuaded him to do away with that rifle, to pitch it into the bottom of some canyon?"

Watching her face in half profile he saw her begin to cry, silently, and without tears. "Is that all?" She steadied herself.

"And what's the other side?"

Blind Husbands in Colony

A two-hour journey from Belgrade reveals one of the strangest villages in the world, where all the husbands are blind and the work of the colony is directed by the wives who see.

The town of Vetrnik is the first blind war veterans' colony in Yugoslavia, the first in a program of land settlements for the blind undertaken by the government.

The government institute for the blind has arranged many marriages for unmarried blind veterans and aids the couples in the settlement at Vetrnik. The men are employed in useful crafts and the household work and operation of the colony are managed by the wives.

JOBS IN FLORIDA

Michigan residents are advised by Governor Fitzgerald not to visit Florida this winter unless they are self-supporting. His statement was issued after receiving a letter from Governor David Schlotz of Florida which warns that employment is not available for out-of-state persons. The letter follows:

"It becomes advisable for me to again seek your co-operation in preventing an influx of persons seeking employment in Florida during the winter season which will only be to their own detriment.

"The intake in transient camps ceased Sept. 20. November 10, has been set as a goal for placing all employable on FERA rolls to work under WPA projects. Those listed as of May 1 on the FERA rolls and in the transient camps will receive first consideration. Additional transients simply cannot find employment in Florida, and if they come I will have no alternative except to follow the course pursued last year and have them turned back at the border or let them be arrested for vagrancy if they have no visible means of 'support.'"

TEARS CHOKE STAR IN GREAT MOVIE SCENE

Will Rogers Can't Think Of a Thing To Say — And Improves The Scene!

Volcanoes explode, nations declare war, quintuplets are born and presidents come and go—and Will Rogers never fails to issue the crowning comment on whatever has just come to pass.

Then, in a motion picture scene, a sweet little girl and a nice boy are married in a prison and Will Rogers—the shrewd, garrulous, imperturbable Rogers—chokes up, sheds tears and can't think of a thing to say.

It all occurred during the filming of Will Rogers' new starring vehicle, "Steamboat Round the Bend," which comes Sun. to the Howell Theatre.

The scene was the wedding of Anne Shirley and John McCall. Eugene Pallette, the sheriff, was performing the ceremony. Pallette called for the ring, Rogers standing nearby, was supposed to hand it to McCall, and say, "It belonged to your mother."

In the background a negro chorus was humming a doleful tune, the spiritual "The Eagle's Nest." Suddenly the thing became too real for Rogers. There was a lump in his throat, tears were starting to his eyes. He knew that if he uttered his line it would be choked and spoil the scene. So he said nothing, passed the ring, with a gesture that was more eloquent than any speech.

When the scene was finished no one spoke, not even the electricians. And Director Jno. Ford reasoned that if the scene affected his case-hardened audience in that fashion, it would have a hundred times more effect in a theatre. So the scene stood, not according to the script, but infinitely more human and affecting.

"Steamboat Round the Bend," plot revolves about the romance of two young lovers, but its comic interest is furnished by the hilarious story of Will Rogers and his old friend Irvin Cobb as competing railroad captains. Sol M. Wurtzel produced the picture.

Philathea Notes

This is the week that our class is meeting for its October social and business hour, at Mrs. Hattie Swarthout's.

The class assembled in the church auditorium Sunday for the lesson period and Mrs. Zuse directed our meditation on the verses chosen from Isaiah, fifty-three.

"The message of Jeremiah for next Sunday promises to be a most interesting lesson. A number of chapters from the book of Jeremiah will give light on this study."

This is rallying time for our whole Sunday school. Let's all help to increase the attendance. The collections, as well, need "pepping up," for supplies have to be kept on hand.

Did you read the first page article in the "Conference News"—"The Church in a Day of Crisis?" We will be interested in learning next Sunday the first of the "Twelve Sermons" by our Pastor, Come.
