School Election to Be Held Again

WPA Head Asks Another Election
For Pinckney School Project As Ballot Did Not Give Enough
Details. Tuesday, Nov. 12, is Set As Date

Fred Read, director of the Pinckney school board has received word from the WPA that the election on the new Pinckney school addition must be repeated. The reasons given are that the dates of the bond issue payments and the amounts are not given, and it is not stated whether the tax is to be increased 4 mills for each of the five years or whether it is an aggregate tax levy. The letter received is as follows:

Dear Sir:
A copy of your letter under date of October 28, 1935, to Mr. Lawrence Bailey of the Finance Section, has been referred to the Legal Section, together with a copy of the ballot used at your recent election.

This is to advise you that the election with respect to the issuance of the bonds is defective, as the amount of bonds maturing each year is not set out in the ballot. We refer you to Section 7437 of the Compiled Laws of 1929, as amended by Act No. 54 of the Public Acts of 1931, which requires this insertion.

We also wish to advise you that the proposition submitted to the electorate with respect to increasing the taxes outside of the constitutional limitation is not satisfactory. The proposition as submitted does not indicate whether the tax shall be increased by four mills during each of the years from 1936 to 1940, both inclusive, or whether the additional tax levy of four mills is an aggregate tax levied during this period. It is anticipated that within a few days the formal offer from the Government will be submitted to the School District. With such offer, there will also be submitted a sample bond transcript for the guidance of the Board of Education. This bond transcript will embody a form of ballot for both propositions herein involved, which form of ballot has been determined to be acceptable.

Yours very truly,
M. E. Cooley,
Acting State Director.
By Charles P. O'Neill,
Counsel (Michigan).

Pinckney School Notes

Well for the first time since the memory man runneth not to the contrary, the school grounds did not resemble a junk yard, the morning after Halloween.

The many friends of Harriett Bowman who have been in the hospital for some time are glad to see her back in school.

By bringing a radio into the school the world series was prevented from getting the boys down this year. Now if some one will figure out a plan to overcome the handicap of pleasant hunting and Halloween.

Once more the high school yell team was conspicuous by its absence at the game Friday. We don't believe that the team has had a cheer given them this year.

Pinckney certainly made a Notre Dame comeback the second half last Friday. The only difference was that they did not have any forward pass attack to help them score.

Manchester's successful use of those lateral passes was the only thing which gave her victory. In both cases the ball carrier was tackled before he passed to a teammate who made the touchdown.

Passing has revolutionized football and will change the game still more in the years to come. A combination lateral-forward pass which many teams are using is very hard to break up.

Pinckney's biggest handicap is that with all new men in the backfield but Myers she has not been able to perfect a good forward passing attack. A good forward pass inserted most anywhere in the last quarter would have given her a touchdown. Jack Reason caught one but it was in the field.

Coach Cal. Hooker, the old reliable, was back as one of the officials of the game. He was head linesman. Cal started officiating way back in 1926.

Where! Oh where, are the crowds of other years who took in all the games? It can't be that football is losing its popularity?

Robert F. Read of Pinckney has joined the Freshmen Glee Club at the University of Michigan.

James Billie former Star Lyon high school student is a star member of the U. of M. freshmen football team.

Friday of this week Pinckney will play her last scheduled game, meeting Ann Arbor high school reserves at Pinckney. In a game played earlier at Ann Arbor, Pinckney was beaten by this team by a forward and lateral pass attack. They have been working hard on a defense against this and hope to defeat Ann Arbor Friday.

Manchester Wins Hard Game Here Friday

Pinckney High School Plays their Best Game of the Season and Nearly Wins From their Opponents.

Pinckney high school football team put on one of the best games ever seen on the local gridiron Friday and but for a number of bad breaks against them would have defeated the crack Manchester team. Manchester has only lost one game out of six this year and was a top heavy favorite over Pinckney. The local team got off to a flying start and scored their touchdown in the first few minutes of play. Pinckney was unable to gain near mid-field and Bill Meyers got away a long punt. It was grounded on Manchester's ten yard line. On the first play Manchester fumbled and Jack Reason recovered for Pinckney. Nelson Shehan went over for a touchdown. The attempt to forward pass for the extra point failed.

Then Manchester got going and made a couple of first downs. Then on a lateral pass Widemeyer scored six points for Manchester. The try for extra point failed. At the half the score was 6 to 6. In the third quarter Manchester again scored by the lateral pass route. That ended the scoring.

Now Pinckney began to come into her own. In the last half they gained through the Manchester line at will making 11 first downs to Manchester's three. They reached the ten yard line where they lost on downs but came right back again when Manchester's punt was short. Bennie VanBlaricum made some nice gains and apparently had a touchdown but the referee ruled it was lacking six inches of being over. On the next play Pinckney fumbled and Manchester recovered. They failed to get anywhere and once more Pinckney was rapping at their door.

Pinckney somehow when they got in the shadow of Manchester's goal line couldn't get the right play out of the bag to score. Smaka was inserted in the lineup late in the game and made a first down on his first attempt. Young, Shehan, Meyers and VanBlaricum also pulled many gains. Jack Reason besides recovering a fumble which resulted in a Pinckney touchdown also caught the only forward pass Pinckney completed.

Outside of the two lateral passes which Manchester converted into touchdowns Wolfe was their best ground gainer. He is small but fast twice made first downs on end runs.

Taken all in all Pinckney was not disgraced by her defeat and only bad breaks were to blame for this. They played a heavier, better and more experienced team to a standstill. In the end Manchester's greater experience and mastery of the lateral pass end of the game gave them victory.

Pinckney has but one more scheduled game to play and that with Ann Arbor high school reserves. This team depends almost entirely on forward and lateral passes and for that reason is a hard team for Pinckney to beat. In the first game several weeks ago they beat Pinckney 7 to 6.

OIL STATION BANDITS ARE SENTENCED

Dale Watkins and Jimmie Fields, the two Unadilla youths who pleaded guilty to robbing the Jubb and Barnett oil stations near Howell recently while armed were sentenced by Judge Collins last week. Watkins was given from 4 to 8 years in the Jackson State Prison and Fields was placed on three years probation. Both boys were 19 years old.

There was not much doing in court last week. Several motions, mostly having to do with mortgage foreclosures were argued. The most important one was in the case of F. Bush guardian vs. Martin J. Lavan. In this case Lavan took a mortgage for services rendered which the plaintiff is endeavoring to have set aside. This case is somewhat complicated since the mortgage has changed hands twice since Lavan received it and is now owned by Will Meehan of Brighton. The case is set for trial Nov. 12 but great efforts are being made to settle it. Judge Collins will not try the case, owing to his acquaintance with both parties but will call in Judge Parker of Flint. For the same reason no Livingston county lawyers will appear as counsel for either side. The attorneys who are all from Ann Arbor, but one, are Jacob Palmer for Frank Rush and Gerald Meehan for Hart Mich and Carl Stuhberg for Lavan.

A divorce was granted to Marjorie Campbell from Floyd Campbell on motion of her attorney, Stanley Bertman.

Fall Flowing

State to Unite in Safety Campaign

Intensive Fight to be Waged Against Careless Driving and Mounting Death Rate

Henry T. Ewald, president of the Camp Belvidere Company, Detroit, appointed by Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald as publicity director of the State Safety Campaign, has issued the following statement:

Millions have been spent to mark, pave and light Michigan roads to make them safe.

Millions have been spent on traffic devices, men to man them, and on traffic enforcement.

The automobile industry has given its best brains to the job of making the motor car itself safe.

The industry can make the car. But it cannot manufacture the man who goes behind the wheel. To these who are stunned by rising fatalities, it may seem a pity that drivers cannot be run off a conveyor line as cars are, and like the cars, give the same uniform performance. But they don't.

Car and highway have been made safe to nearly the maximum of current human ingenuity. The DRIVER must now be made safe to use those facilities.

The rise of automobile accidents has been appalling and Michigan, acting through its State Government, has now set itself to the task of educating the irresponsible minority against whom the increasing death toll may be charged.

A better education will help the situation. Ninety per cent of accidents in the United States are caused by 10 per cent of the drivers and I believe a honest appeal to them can prevent continuance of the damage they already have done.

GRANGE ADOPTS STATE PROGRAM

The Michigan State Grange adopted a wide program at their annual meeting last week held at Big Rapids. It was as follows:

1. State income tax law.
2. Continuance of Federal Farm Relief.
3. Re-establishment of Warner-Crampton Saloon Act with 11:00 P. M. closing.
4. Prohibiting drunk driving and beer and liquor sales in dance halls.
5. Reduction of state sales tax from 3 to 1 1/2 %.
6. Adjustment of delinquent taxes so that they can be paid on present day values.
7. Force able bodied person on relief who refuses to work to go to the poor house.
8. Enforce Gov. Fitzgerald civil service plan.
9. Reduce wt. tax on farm trucks.
10. Tax oleo 5 cents per lb.
11. More game covers and winter feeding for deer.
12. Exempt farmers from paying sales tax.
13. Amend laws to aid farmers getting rural electrification.
14. Make it a felony to overthrow government by force.

CAR IS RECOVERED.

Last Wednesday the new Plymouth sedan, belonging to Mrs. Christine Howlett was reported stolen from in front of the Howlett Hardware store at Gregory where it had been parked. Tuesday night it was recovered in Pinckney Wednesday where it developed that Harold Cone, a Gregory youth had taken it Tuesday night loaded it up with Pinckney boys and gone to the Brighton motion picture show. On account of the fog he had not returned to Gregory with the car but spent the night with friends here. As the car was not hurt we understand the Howlett family does not desire to take any action against the youth and he will probably be released to Fred, Teeple, county probation officer.

Philathea Notes

The last issue of the Baraca-Philathea news had a splendid picture of our beloved founder, Marshall A. Hudson. There were also inspiring reports of many classes throughout the country, who are carrying on the work and ideals that he started for his class forty-five years ago in Syracuse New York.

Next week occurs the regular monthly meeting of the Philathea class. This will be the quarterly Missionary meeting, with Mrs. C. H. Zuse as hostess, and the roll call letter for this time is R. Remember: Wednesday, November 13, at the parsonage. Everyone urged to come.

Next Sunday not the topic: "Ezekiel Teaches Personal Responsibility." Ezekiel 33:7-16.

Earthquake Shock Is Felt Here

Many People Are Awakened Early Last Friday Morning By Concussion. No Damage Is Done Though.

About 1:15 A. M. last Friday morning many local citizens were awakened by a slight earthquake shock. It is believed to be the tail end of the one which did so much damage in the states of Montana and Washington last Thursday. Here houses were shaken on their foundations and at the home of Mrs. Henry Harris, a stove pipe was shaken down. Many people noticed it but all did not know what it was. Some thought that some Halloween celebrators were shooting off a gun while others suspected that Fred. Read was getting rid of some surplus dynamite.

Halloween went off the quietest here that it ever did and very little damage was done. All of the young children were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Swatout, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Vedder and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meyer, assisted by Mrs. Anna Reason at a party at the Swatout cottage at Portage Lake. About 60 children attended this and had a wonderful time playing games and eating. Most of the older ones attended another party at White Lodge Country Club. The town was patrolled by Deputy Sheriff Kennedy and two state police also passed through here several times. This kept the hobgoblins rather quiet. A few who got a little over enthusiastic were sent home by Mr. Kennedy. Other communities also report a very quiet Halloween. Beyond removing the soap from the windows, the local merchants were not forced to do their usual amount of cleaning up the morning after.

HOWELL IS HOST TO TB WORKERS

Three State Organizations Hold All-Day Session at State Sanatorium

Three groups of tuberculosis workers met at the Howell sanatorium Monday for a discussion of the problems facing the effort to eradicate this disease. The Michigan Tuberculosis association held their annual meeting at this time with the Michigan Trudeau society and the Michigan Sanatorium association aiding in the program.

A three course luncheon was served to 260 seated in the main dining room of the institution. The patients were served from trays in their rooms to make a place for the large attendance.

At the program George L. L. Sie, superintendent of the state sanatorium, welcomed the guests. Others who took part on the program were Dr. Bruce H. Donchin, president of the Michigan T. B. association, who presided; Dr. W. M. Bauer, director of the bureau of public health inspection of the American Medical association of Chicago, who spoke on "Health Education vs Health Racketeering"; C. W. Kammmer, executive secretary of the Iowa T. B. association who spoke on the tuberculosis program in Iowa; Theodore J. Werle, executive secretary of the Michigan T. B. association; Dr. John Sundwall; Dr. C. C. Slemmons, Michigan state health commissioner; Dr. John H. Peck of D. S. Moines, Ia., formerly president of the tuberculosis association and now medical director of the Iowa Medical association; Dr. Bon Lindberg, supervisory and medical director of the Macon county tuberculosis sanatorium at D. Catur, Ill., who spoke on "Case Finding in the T. B. Program." His address being profusely illustrated with x-ray pictures Dr. Warren E. Forsythe, director of public health and hygiene at the University of Michigan, who spoke on "Experiences of T. B. among Students."

At the morning session of the three groups a clinic with program and discussion of the sale of Christmas seals took up the time.

In the afternoon the Michigan Trudeau society held a meeting of their own at which the following spoke: Dr. John Alexander of Ann Arbor; Dr. Leslie of the sanatorium and other staff members; Dr. E. J. O'Brien of Detroit; Dr. R. H. Morgan of Detroit; Robert Gelf of Ann Arbor; Dr. Paul Dr. C. Haight of Ann Arbor; Prof. Lojacombe of Marquette, who spoke on "T. B. among the Finns of Marquette County."

Dr. N. R. Barrett of St. Thomas hospital, London, England, was among the delegates who registered.

The delegates were taken through the state sanatorium by personally conducted tours.

Officers were elected at the afternoon session.

Current Comment

Owing to the large number of traffic accident deaths, especially in Detroit, a big publicity campaign is on to reduce the death rate and curb reckless drivers. This has shown some results but this method can not go for ever and when it gets to be an old story and disappears from the front pages of the newspapers, the accidents will again increase. The real trouble seems to be that no one gets down to the real cause of all these accidents. If they took the trouble to they would find that lack of proper enforcement of the traffic laws is directly responsible for the many traffic fatalities. The Detroit Free Press published an interesting set of figures last Thursday. According to them only one traffic violator in 300 arrested is jailed. 5 % of those arrested have the cases against them dismissed, 50 % are released on payment of nominal fines and 12 % are acquitted. A continuation of this kind of traffic law enforcement will never make the highways safe for careful drivers. The papers last week carried a story of a Detroit judge who got out of bed at midnight to get a traffic violator out of jail.

A short time ago we were regaled with news dispatch quoting Aud. General John O'Hara, to the effect that all convicts in Michigan prisons serving terms would be forced to pay for their board if they were financially able to do so. Under a new statute the state was given the power to do this. Prison records were to be scrutinized and all convicts of means were to be billed for their board. Rosy prospects were entertained of the tremendous receipts to come from this source. Under a similar statute over $250,000 has been collected from inmates of state hospitals. However the plans of mice and men oft go astray and up to date only $57.66 has been collected and that from Balfe McDonald, Flint matricide. Aud. Gen. O'Hara said reports had been received from Marquette and Ionia but none from Jackson. Twenty-five suits are pending against inmates to collect board bills but hopes of a big revenue from this source have gone glimmering.

The farmers of the nation voted 6 to 1 in favor of corn and hog control. Michigan voted about 5 to 1. Livingston was only county in the state to vote against it. Here the vote was 107 to 95 against. The signers voted 52 to 10 for it but the non-signers were against it. What this vote indicates is much disputed. However it cannot be denied but what the control plan is favored by the farmers.

It is one thing to preach economy and still another thing to put it into effect. Gov. Fitzgerald had as one of his main platform planks, one of economy. However, it is extremely hard to put this into effect the government or has found out. Instead of cutting expenses, in state government, they have been increased. For the first nine months in 1934 the state expenses were $11,138,018.83 and now for first nine months in 1935 they have increased to $12,812,961.60. The big increases appear to be in the sales tax, liquor control, secretary of state and highway depts. All these departments laid these increased expenses to the vast increase in work done by their offices.

CURRENT COMMENT CON.

The Mich. State Grange has again adopted a resolution asking for a state income tax. It has always been the contention of the grange that those best able to pay should pay the greater share of the taxes. Several income amendments sponsored by them have failed to get majorities in the past. Gov. Fitzgerald appeared before the grange annual convention at Big Rapids last week and opposed an income tax on the grounds that it would cripple industry. However, his council went unheeded.

JESSE AMBURGEY

Jesse Amburgey was born in Estille County, Kentucky, and died at his home in Pinckney on October 29, 1935.

He was united in marriage to Miss Nannie Willis of Erwin, Kentucky on Dec. 12, 1891. To this union were born ten children, Virgil, Orville, and Rorne of Pinckney, Frank of Detroit, Mrs. Lula McCarty of Brighton, Mrs. Anita Riley of Ferguson, Missouri and Inez at home. One daughter, Mae, and two sons, Robert and Maurice, preceded him in death. There are also 18 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Always a devoted husband and father he will be greatly missed by his family and many friends. The deceased was a member of the Baptist church of Burnie, Ohio.

The funeral services were held from the Swarthout funeral home Thursday at 2:00 P. M. Rev. B. F. Esic of the Pinckney Baptist church officiating. Burial was in the Pinckney cemetery.

Washington Digest

NATIONAL TOPICS INTERPRETED
By William Bruckart
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt has settled a controversy by the simple expedient of transferring two men from responsible positions in the Virgin Islands to jobs in Washington. He has taken Paul M. Pearson from the post of civil governor of the Virgin Islands and has made him assistant director of housing in the Interior department and has transferred Federal Director Judge T. Webber Wilson from his post in the islands to the federal parole board here in Washington. Each man has accepted his new appointment and in so far as a current controversy is concerned, the book is closed.

It will be recalled that Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson long have been at loggerheads over Virgin Island affairs. The battle was bitter. It came to a head when Paul Yates, executive assistant to the governor and a former Washington correspondent, resigned his job and came back here with a bag full of charges against his former chief. The Yates allegations ranged all the way from minor charges of poor judgment to gross accusations. He succeeded in getting a senate committee investigation and it was at that time that the Pearson-Wilson feud flared so openly that administration officials here were dragged in and the whole scope of differences aired.

As a matter of fact there is every reason to believe that Governor Pearson was far from a successful executive in the islands. He frequently aroused the ire of natives and, according to testimony adduced by the senate investigation, had very little to show for the sums of money he expended in attempting to give the Virgin Islands a new lease on life. All of the information tends to establish that the islands continue to be "an effectual poorhouse" just as President Hoover described them on the occasion of a visit during his term as Chief Executive.

But Governor Pearson had his supporters in the administration. Chief among these was Secretary Ickes whose department is responsible for administration of the islands. Just why Mr. Ickes has been so enthusiastic about Governor Pearson's regime is not fully disclosed in any evidence here except that the interior secretary has certain ideas about social reform that some unkind critics refer to as pure socialism which Governor Pearson had been attempting to impose upon the island inhabitants. Governor Pearson has expended vast sums of PWA funds in the islands in his efforts to carry out the Ickes program of reform. It seems, however, that the schemes were not as practical as they might have been and so trouble started in a rather extensive fashion.

The President stayed outside of the row until in the course of the senate inquiry Senator Tydings, a Maryland Democrat and usually an anti-Roosevelt Democrat, received a letter from Mr. Ickes. Mr. Ickes accused the investigating chairman with having whitewashed a witness whose testimony was all anti-Ickes and anti-Pearson. The senator flared up in a big way at that letter. His reply is likely to become a classic in official correspondence. He did not mince his words. After voicing his general conception of the attitude exhibited by Mr. Ickes and accusing him of attempting to interfere in the investigation, Senator Tydings informed the interior secretary that he may as well attempt to run the Department of the Interior and let the senators run the senate. He used just about those words.

That was the signal for Mr. Roosevelt to take a hand. It was easy to see that a few outbursts of that kind and Mr. Ickes might have found himself in a splendid position to resign from the cabinet. So the President got the feudists into his office, singly of course, and when those conferences were over the senate investigation into the Virgin Island situation was suspended for two weeks. The transfer of Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson resulted.

One might properly inquire why all of this agitation has occurred about the Virgin Islands. They are many hundreds of miles from Washington. They lie in the Caribbean sea, considerably out of the usual pathway of ships; they are populated by about 22,000 individuals, 95 per cent of whom are negroes and may generally be described as a "backward" place.

They may have some military and naval value. That has never been fully demonstrated. But the fact remains they are possessions of the United States and if our government is to be their protector, it is responsible for a sane administration of their affairs.

The Washington fight may have had its start in the Virgin Islands, but it has progressed beyond that point and is a domestic battle now. It is safe to say that for 15 years, which is the time the islands have been under United States rule, there has been a dire need for a plan of government suited to those people. Each year congress has been appropriating thousands of dollars for the island government and each year there has been miserably little in the way of improvement to show for these funds.

Almost as frequently as congress has appropriated money it has made changes in the administration methods in use there. There has never been a long term program laid out and there has been nothing whatsoever done showing the sympathy of a so-called intellectual people as we claim to be for those downtrodden masses that populate the Virgin Islands.

All of this, it seems to me, shows the woeful need for careful consideration of that situation. It seems to me equally apparent that as long as congress keeps meddling in and as long as politicians from the mainland are sent there purely on a political basis we will continue to have a pack of trouble bundled up in those Virgin Islands.

Several attempts have been made to work out a governmental system worth while but the politicians are not among those who will let plums escape. It is certain, therefore, that the Pearson-Wilson-Ickes-Tydings battle royal is an outcropping of what amounts to a festering sore in American governmental policy.

If congress continues in session past August 15, and it is now apparent that it may run to September 1, it will have been in session 225 days, some two weeks longer than the average of the so-called long sessions of congress. Prior to adoption of the "lame duck" amendment which did away with sessions of unequal length, the shorter sessions of congress averaged about 170 days. The longer terms were around 215 days before final adjournment was taken. Thus, the current session stands in a fair way to be among the list of hardy sessions.

All of which is by way of saying that the current session of congress has worn down its members both physically and mentally to an extent quite unusual. I was talking a few days ago with a veteran senator, a man who has served almost 25 years in the upper house of congress. He is known as a physically strong individual and usually lasts very well through the work that piles up before senators and representatives. I inquired of him concerning the general health of congress and his reply was:

"I regret to say we are just a bunch of debilitated old men, incapable of doing the job that is expected of us and everyone is hoping against hope that we can live through this work and this heat."

As a result of that conversation the thought came to me that there was an answer to the oft repeated declaration that members of congress fall to earn their salaries of $10,000 per year. I have observed congressional proceedings almost a score of years and it is my mature conviction that few times in that period has congress failed to earn its salt.

There is another reason why congressional sessions should not run so long and should not be carried on in the intense heat of Washington summer.

One condition nearly always has obtained near the close of a long session. As the days drag by, persons with axes to grind and individual interests to serve have a way of digging up questionable bills that theretofore had been side-tracked and assumed to be dead. With resistance low, the average senator or representative is unable to fight off legislation which he knows to be bad with the same spirit that accompanied his activities earlier in the session. Likewise, he is unable to battle as successfully as before for legislation which he knows to be good.

This condition opens the way for a revival of lobbies. They are back in Washington in numbers now despite the disclosures being made by the two congressional committees that are investigating the lobbies that operated to defeat, temporarily at least, the legislation killing utility holding companies. One would have assumed justly with the investigations under way after the utility legislation was passed that lobbyists and self-serving representatives would have been frightened away from Washington. Such was not the case. They are here in such numbers that some observers believe Mr. Roosevelt has made a mistake in demanding that congress stay until it has enacted the share-the-wealth-tax bill and the legislation which will prohibit lawsuits against the government for damages resulting from abrogation of the promise in government bonds to pay them in gold. Mr. Roosevelt is insisting on these laws. He will get them. But in the opinion of many authorities he stands a fair chance also of getting some other legislation which he may not want.

Linen Suit a Midsummer Favorite

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE present vogue for linen is nothing short of sensational. Whether you go dining, dancing, swimming, flying, motoring, golfing or shopping, or play tennis, there's a linen for every occasion from rustic crashes and peasant weaves and colorful Tahitian prints to alluring novelties in stripes and plaids and in sheer lovely effects for high-style evening wear.

Midsummer days are proving that linen suits, especially in white and natural tones, are of first interest among best dressed women for about-town wear. A linen suit and a wardrobe of blouses and the problem of being smartly appareled during the daytime hours is solved not only for the immediate moment but for well on into the fall, since the very newest linens are in wine shades, in Dubonnet red, in beetroot, purple and orange tones.

Just now, while the weather is warm, it's the white and natural linens that are lending their immaculate and well-groomed appearance to the summer scene. The trio of stunning suits pictured represent the very creme de la creme in linens as now featuring on the style program.

The young woman seated shows that she knows fashion in that with her suit of moynashel linen, in natural color, she is wearing a dark blouse, the same being brown with white polka dots. You are doing the right thing this season if to wear with your white and natural linens you choose dark accessories. The coat is single breasted with buttons all the way up to the collarless neckline. A novel idea is introduced in the placement of deep large pockets above the belt line. Raglan sleeves add a final touch of smartness to this linen classic.

The other two suits are also of moynashel linen. It is rather interesting to know—in this connection that King George sends the flax grown on his royal estate at Sandringham, England (supposed to be the finest flax in the world) to Moynashel, Ireland, there to be woven, because the workmanship is so fine—quite a royal pedigree for these linens.

The two-piece centered in the group has a tight-fitting basque coat with no belt to disturb the natural line. It is of white linen with navy buttons and tie. The double binding to the coat which gives a vestee effect is new and smart. The sports flap pockets are chic, too.

Handstitching around the notched collar and the pockets gives a distinctive touch to the white linen suit to the right. The stitching and the belt are in matched coloring. The coat is double-breasted, and a polka dot shirt is worn under it.

A very fashionable thing to do is wear a bright colored linen coat or jacket with your white linen skirt. Lilac colored linens for these coats are the rage with beetroot or Dubonnet red close second.

Then, too, novelty linens with nubby surface or loose porous weave are in good style for suits and for coats. These heavier suits are mostly in oyster white. Very "nifty" ones are shadow-checked in gray and some stunning weaves are in herringbone patterning flecked with brown.

There are lovely embroidered linens shown for dressier wear and sheer striped linens are made up into fascinating evening gowns, as formally as if they were stately silks. With the new fall tweed suits designers are creating clever blouses of fine handkerchief linens in colorings related to the costume entire.

SMART BEACHWEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This beach ensemble is out of the ordinary. It is fashioned of purple shawl lace over a linen foundation. Which again proves that lace goes everywhere this season. The ensemble consists of a pair of shorts and blouse with a wrap-around skirt. The large hat is of purple straw.

SHOE COMFORT IS MOST IMPORTANT

To be footloose and free during the season of pleasant week ends and after-dark breathing spaces, one must have foot comfort.

Cool shoes with flexible construction are a likely way of getting this comfort, with preference given lightweight numbers, and those that are ventilated by perforations, lattice and cut-outs.

Novelties in shoes are always at their peak in the summer season, and they are usually far more moderately priced than the novelties thought up for evening shoes to complement formal winter costumes.

Sandals of printed linen or crash, slippers covered with gay flowered chiffon, oxfords of splendid supporting strength, perforated into lacy prettiness, plain cotton or linen shoes of any color you can name, plaid linen in natural tones, checked gingham in kitchen apron designs, lightweight suede in any pastel hue or any flag hue and crocheted string shoes are just a few of the kinds you can choose from in the shops.

Oriental Influence Seen in Evening Clothes Styles

The Hindu influence, inspired by the Maharanees of India, has initiated a definite swing away from fitted, bias lines to softly draped designs in evening clothes. Allied influences, such as Persian, Arabian, and a new version of Grecian folds, contribute to the same effect. These flattering, age-old drapery details are difficult to make and hence are not easily copied, a point being stressed now in high style circles. Alas, the Parisian couturiere, has turned out a thrilling array of Oriental formal gowns. Most of them are topped with seductive saria, those long, scarf-like affairs which start out by wrapping around the body and then proceed to cover the head in the manner of a monk's hood.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Edith L. Watson

THE STORY OF LAS PLACITAS

THEY were sitting on their heels in the shade of a corral fence, these two southwesterners, one day in the spring of 1880. It was at a place not far from Santa Fe, that center of romance and excitement for the whole western country. As they talked about things old and new, never dreaming what madness was in store for them, old Jesse Martin came riding up, all steamed over something.

"Look at this, boys," he said, fairly stuttering. "I've got the richest thing on top of this here earth."

"This" was a handful of ore—ore so rich that the two friends caught the contagion and grew as excited as Martin.

"Where'd you get it, Jess?" they asked, eagerly.

"I ain't a-goin' to tell you," was the answer. "Not now, boys, I ain't. I got a partner in Santa Fe, and I'm goin' to tell him first. Then when we git everything filed, I'll let you in on it."

All the pleading they could do would not move Martin from this decision. He rode off finally toward Santa Fe with his ore and his news, leaving them to wonder where in the world he had found such a bonanza. Had he run across the Adams diggings, or the Hatchet mine? Pshaw, those places were too far south for Martin to find. This must be something a lot nearer home.

Nearer home—why, perhaps they could ask some questions of the Mexicans and Indians thereabouts, and find out where old Martin had been. That was the idea! Hastily they caught up their horses, rode forth, and began to take up Martin's trail. Oh yes, said someone here and someone else there, the old man had passed this way, or he had ridden yonder. We saw him just a day or so ago. He was coming from thus-and-such a direction. So the pair rode in that direction. And sure enough, they finally came to a claim, all regularly staked. In the prospect hole was ore—ore like that he had showed them—very rich ore.

The two men were greatly pleased with their forethought in tracing down the location. With business-like promptness, they staked their claims alongside Martin's. From these new mines-in-the-making they gathered a few samples, and then they raced back to an assayer, wild with curiosity. How would the ore turn out?

The assayer grew excited with them. Hastily he prepared for the business of extracting gold, as they watched the process with eager eyes. At last—

In the bottom of the crucible lay a button of something. Now for the acid test—would it prove to be gold? With trembling hands the assayer poured in the acid—and the button did not cut! Eureka! They were worth fortunes!

They rushed back to their claims. The news had already spread, in that strange manner with which the word of new-found gold always has spread, and men were coming in to stake claims as near to theirs as possible.

Then came a crowd from Santa Fe. At its head were Jesse Martin and—Governor Lew Wallace! So that was the partner! The news ran ahead of them—Jesse's samples had assayed $75 to $100 to the ton. Everyone laughed with glee—everyone cheered.

In three days Las Placitas accumulated a population of 10,000 souls. Everyone was gold-crazy—the golden phantom had led them to fortune and they had left their wits behind when they set out to follow her. And yet—

Some of the more sober souls began to quiet down. It was time to make more assays, to see just how far the gold spread out, to learn just how rich it would run.

The assays were made. They showed no value at all.

The shock was tremendous. Men refused at first to believe it. They argued angrily that there was some mistake. They knew that they had found gold. The assayer must be a fool, not to know his business. He could not find gold when it was right under his nose.

Then someone thought of looking for Jesse Martin. He had "the richest thing on top of this here earth," did he? Well, he'd better explain himself.

But Martin had vanished from sight—and with him disappeared about $4,000 in real money—money that he had obtained from Lew Wallace and other prominent men of Santa Fe. He had "lit out" for parts unknown as soon as the rush set in. He was too keen an old coddler to risk discovery and retribution.

But the mine—that was still there, and the rich ore had most certainly come from his claim! So it had—but not originally. Martin had salted the hole with high-grade from another mine.

And the assay—that button of gold which the acid would not cut! It was merely a crystallization, and not gold at all.

Ten days later Las Placitas had again become a desolate spot in the hills. Only thousands of tin cans sparkled and glittered in the New Mexico sun—just as shining as had been the hopes of the ten thousand, just as worthless as the claims they staked.

WITH AN EYE TO COOL SIMPLICITY

PATTERN 9354

The smart girl has one eye on the budget and the other anticipating a rise in temperature—and makes a cool decision to include several summer sports in her wardrobe right now. It took a lot of ingenuity to design that clever yoke-cape-panel in one. It makes sewing so easy, and briefly, that cape is much cooler than a sleeve. Pattern 9354 sports an action pleat back and skirt just to help you "get places." If you find a simple flat neckline becoming, omit the dashing revers (but we like 'em). Very correct for spectator sports, office wear or week-end jaunts. Make it up in washable sport-stick or shantung. Try a novel "cork" buckle and buttons.

Pattern 9354 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighth Street, New York.

DEER HAVE INSUFFICIENT FOOD

How many deer will starve to death or die from malnutrition, disease, and other factors resulting from insufficient food this winter?

No one knows the answer, but the Department of Conservation hopes to find out.

It is planned to conduct drives by CCC crews next spring to obtain a count of the deer that have died during the winter. These drives will be held in major deer areas where there are heavy populations of deer and where the deer have been forced to "yard" by heavy snows.

The winter season is the "pinch" period for the deer in times of deep snow, for then the deer congregate in areas of heavy cover, many of which hold limited supplies of food. Often when these food supplies are depleted, the deer suffer and frequently die of starvation.

A drive conducted by CCC men near Alpena last spring revealed that 22 deer had died, apparently from lack of sufficient food, in an area of two square miles. The bodies of the deer were found by the CCC workers. By learning more of the food and yarding problem, the Department hopes to be in a better position to manage deer supplies in local areas where the winter feed is heavily barged and the supply endangered.

POTITICAL TALK

The political pot is far from a boil, but a perusal of editorial comment throughout the state gives indication of a gentle simmering.

The editors have chosen both state and national arenas as the topic of their discussions.

In state, the strength of the Couzens—the senatorial father and the mayoral son—is a favorite topic, with a consensus that the father and son combination is akin, in popularity, to the LaFollette regime in Wisconsin.

Muri H. DeFoe, in the Charlotte Republican-Tribune, warns that "the renomination of Mayor Frank Couzens (son of Senator Couzens) for another term as mayor of Detroit by a 10 to 1 vote, should be a warning to upstate politicians who are opposed to the senator's renomination. The Couzens name has strength and the youthful mayor would be elected just as easily to the senate as his father."

Foking fun at the role of defender of the constitution, recently taken by former Governor Wilbur M. Brucker, and seeing in it an effort by Brucker to bring himself to the front as a candidate for Couzens's senatorial seat, Harry Royal in the Oceana County Herald, makes short work of Brucker's chances with this statement: "Nothing that Mr. Brucker has heretofore attempted matches the accomplishment of defeating Michigan's philanthropist statesman."

The Iron Mountain News introduces an upper peninsula figure in Congressman Prentiss Brown, of St. Ignace, who, the News asserts, is being weighed by the Democrats as possible senatorial timber for next year.

The upper peninsula paper however, holds out little hope for the St. Ignace congressman, although acknowledging his rise in the ranks of the Democrats and his power to retain the support of all factions through his character, ability and efficient campaigning. Discussing the possibility of opposition to Couzens, the News comments: "There would be small likelihood of his (Couzens) defeat in the Republican primary. There would be even less that any Democrat would be able to win his seat."

Comment on the national field is limited, but two newspapers, The Marquette Mining Journal and the Midland Republican, see Colonel Frank Knox, of Chicago, as the strongest candidate now in line that the Republicans could throw in the arena against Roosevelt.

The Midland Republican, counting Borah out of the picture as an actual candidate but regarding him as the strongest supporter in a campaign, says: "Colonel Frank Knox * * * is to power of sale and the premises the one who could probably muster therein described as: Land in the Village of Pinckney, County of Livingston, State of Michigan, described as follows, to-wit: Lot number eight (8) in Block number five (5) and Range number seven (7) according to the original recorded Plat of said Village of Pinckney, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the sheriff of Livingston County at the west front door of the Court House in the City of Howell in said County and State on Friday the twenty-seventh day of December 1935, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day. attitude. If he wants the nomination it has sound political basis. If the favorite sons get tied up in knots, as they are likely to do, the candidate will be found among the group of eligible nominees who have stood clear from their quarrels."—Washington Tribune.

MORE TESTING DONE BY STATE DAIRYMEN

Better prices for dairy products have encouraged more Michigan farmers to invest money in finding out just how much milk and butterfat each cow in their herds is producing according to the dairy husbandry department at Michigan State College. The number of herds being tested has increased in this State from 605 December 1, 1934, to 921 on October 1, 1935. The gain in numbers of tested cows has been 4,347 in the same period. This is the first significant increase in testing that has occurred in several years and indicates that dairymen are much more optimistic.

The men who make the tests for milk and butterfat production for members of herd improvement associations also have other duties. They often are able to show dairymen how to change dairy rations so that important savings of money can be made without reducing the production of the cows. The tester's reports show that such changes in rations have helped Michigan herd owners to save $1,029 since December 1, 1934.

Another service which the tester performs often enables a farmer to avoid waste of butterfat through improper adjustment of the cream separator. Testers made adjustments on 1,511 separators in the period reported. Another source of waste in the dairy is furnishing feed to cows which will not pay for it. Tests showed 2,080 star boarders in the herds and these were sold for beef by their owners.

In some instances, the testers act as lifesavers in persuading dairymen to build safety pens for the confinement of herd sires. Bulls can be confined in these inclosures and given proper care without the need for any person to enter the enclosure. Several Michigan farmers who fail to use this precaution are killed or injured each year.

CHAPTER X—Continued

Jean called out sharply, "Is that you, Kentucky? Are you hurt?"

"They hit Lee Bishop, Jean."

She slid out of the saddle, tossing the reins over her pony's head, and came to the edge of the coulee.

"Where's Lee?"

"Drop down and I'll take you to him." He held up his arms and she let herself drop into them, but freed herself immediately.

"Is he hit bad?"

He whispered, "He can hear us from here, I think. I don't know but what they've finished him, Jean. He's short in the side of the back, and Lord knows where the bullet stopped. You shouldn't have come here—don't you know that?"

"Somebody had to come. Campo—my father is back from Waterman; but Harry Wilson quit when Campo wouldn't bring out more riders. You and Campo and I are all that's left. And now poor Lee—poor Lee—"

He led her down the cut to where Bishop lay. The range boss opened his eyes and turned his face toward her. "Is that you, Jean?"

She dropped on her knees beside him.

"Yes, Lee."

"Didn't know but what I might be hearing things. Where's Campo?"

"He's making a sweep of the upper Bench trail. Lee, you must be plumb frozen!"

"Pretty near," Bishop admitted.

Jean slipped off her coat, and carefully wrapped Bishop's legs. Then she scrambled out of the cut, ran to her horse and, loosening the cinch, jerked her blanket from under the saddle.

When this was placed to suit her, she made ready to go.

"It's sure a shot-to-pieces outfit you brought into, Kentucky."

"That deal is off," he told her. "I own no share in the Bar Hook, nor any part of a share."

Jean looked at him but there was no expression in her face, nor in her voice as she answered. "So you're quitting, too?"

"No, not quite yet," Kentucky told her grimly. "I'm just going ahead in a little different way than we figured I was going to; that's all."

Jean dropped beside Lee Bishop again, and for a long time studied the mask of his face, yellow in the freelight. He seemed asleep. Irrepressible tears appeared on Jean's cheeks, glistening in the light of the fire. She bent over Lee Bishop and kissed him. "Good-by, Lee," she said softly. "I'll be back pretty quick."

Lee Bishop smiled faintly. "Take your time, kid."

Jean caught Kentucky's wrist and led him a little way down the cut.

"Do you think there's any chance of moving him?"

"I don't know as we better try, Jean. When you get back to the house, phone to Waterman for Doc Hopper. Then pack a horse and come back. Get hold of a tent if there's any on the place, and all the bed-rolls that come handy, and grub, and bandages, and stuff. You know what we'll need."

Jean Ragland scaled the side of the cut, re-climbed her saddle, and rode off at a sharp trot.

Lee Bishop said, "There goes a great girl, Kentucky. You're lucky, all right."

"Lucky? Me?"

"She'd ride her horse square off the rim," Lee Bishop said, "if you told her to." He was talking in a queer and somehow childish tone of voice which Kentucky had never heard him use.

"Listen, Kentucky. Get this—can you hear me all right?"

"I can hear you, Lee."

"You're worse off than you think, Kentucky. Campo believes you killed Mason."

Kentucky said slowly, "I don't know but what Campo has almighty good reason to know better than that, Lee."

"What if he has?" Lee demanded.

"What you don't know is, he's been gathering up stuff against you—tracing guns, and the like of that. In a pinch he'll turn on you, Campo will! But believe in that girl. She believes in you; and she'll stand by you."

"The pinch will come quick, now," Kentucky said. "But she'll not be with me, Lee."

Lee Bishop said in a curious hoarse whisper, "She'd jerk the heart out of her, if you needed it. She's got a faith in you that you don't have for her."

"Faith?" Kentucky repeated savagely. "If she'd trusted me only half way, only quarter way, you and I wouldn't be sitting here tonight."

Lee Bishop looked at Kentucky a long time, and his mind seemed to be turning vague. "You ain't licked, Kentucky," he said at last in a weak voice. "You can beat this game yet."

"Sure I'll beat it," Kentucky assured him. "Lee, I'll beat it in spite of her!"

Lee Bishop said in a queer voice, "You—you couldn't go against that girl, Kentucky."

"I'd sooner cut off my right hand, Lee; but I've got to go square against her now."

For another long moment Lee Bishop fixed staring, vacant eyes upon Kentucky's face. "You love her, huh?"

Kentucky Jones shivered; he felt as if the grip of the night cold was getting the better of him, so that his body had a core of ice. He covered his face with his hands. "I think," he said, "I hate her as I've never hated any living thing in my life."

Lee Bishop's words jerked out of him incoherently, but unexpectedly sharp and strong. "God help you, Kentucky—don't say that!"

"All right, Lee."

Jean Ragland made the round trip—and loaded a mule at the other end—in a little over four hours, which was wonderful time on those night trails. But she might as well have saved her animals; for an hour before she reached Trap canyon Lee Bishop was dead.

When Kentucky had packed the body to the Bake Pan camp of the Bar Hook, where he placed it with that of Jim Humphreys, he faced his horse into the steep switch-back trail up the rim, and started for the main ranch.

Kentucky had agreed with Jean Ragland that to take Lee Bishop to the Bake Pan camp was a shorter and more convenient pack; and Kentucky had seized upon the opportunity to release Jean from the mournful procession and send her home.

He now put his horse up the trail stiffly, climbing fast. He felt no weariness, but only a black temper. Now that he knew for the first time what set of ugly circumstances he was up against, he knew what he had to do; it was not easy, and he wanted to get it behind him.

Kentucky said slowly, "I don't know but what Campo has almighty good reason to know better than that, Lee."

"What if he has?" Lee demanded.

"What you don't know is, he's been gathering up stuff against you—tracing guns, and the like of that. In a pinch he'll turn on you, Campo will! But believe in that girl. She believes in you; and she'll stand by you."

Jean Ragland made the round trip—and loaded a mule at the other end—in a little over four hours, which was wonderful time on those night trails. But she might as well have saved her animals; for an hour before she reached Trap canyon Lee Bishop was dead.

When Kentucky had packed the body to the Bake Pan camp of the Bar Hook, where he placed it with that of Jim Humphreys, he faced his horse into the steep switch-back trail up the rim, and started for the main ranch.

Kentucky had agreed with Jean Ragland that to take Lee Bishop to the Bake Pan camp was a shorter and more convenient pack; and Kentucky had seized upon the opportunity to release Jean from the mournful procession and send her home.

He now put his horse up the trail stiffly, climbing fast. He felt no weariness, but only a black temper. Now that he knew for the first time what set of ugly circumstances he was up against, he knew what he had to do; it was not easy, and he wanted to get it behind him.

The voices of the guns and the circumstances of Lee Bishop's death had brought him an odd new alertness, an almost painful consciousness of everything that moved within the limits of the rimrock horizon. It was as if he had found himself returned to the days of his forefathers, when an awareness of far-off details had a lot to do with keeping on a man's scalp.

And long before Jean Ragland came in sight, he knew that two horses were coming toward him along the trail, that they had but one rider, and that the second horse was not driven, but led.

For a moment after Jean came in sight he was absorbed by the sight of her. She rode a little dark pony, and her short white storm coat was in key with the snow. Hardly anybody ever saw Jean Ragland ride without following her with his eyes, as a man looks after a bird that is a bright living decoration against the snow. And now the girl and the pony she rode looked better because the led horse was rawboned and mud colored, with only a sharp, well-tracked leg action to suggest that it might be more horse than at first it seemed.

As they met in the trail he saw that her face was quiet with the resignation which had characterized it for the last two days; but her eyes were alive. There was a touch of feverish light in them which told him that she was still fighting, though what she was fighting, or how, he was no longer sure that he knew.

"I've brought you a fresh horse," she said immediately. "Maybe it doesn't look like much horse, but it is a whole lot of horse. Pretty near any Bar Hook horse would give down under you before this plug would."

"I suppose I kind of ought to appreciate that," Kentucky said; "but, Jean, how come you think I am going to need such a long-traveling horse?"

"Kentucky," she said, "Kentucky—"

She drew her hand across her eyes, as if what she was trying to say was almost beyond her ability. "Look here. I've asked a lot of favors of you, Kentucky; a lot more than I ever had any right to ask. I have to ask you one thing more. If you'll do this one thing more for me, I'll be grateful to you all my life; and I swear I'll never ask anything of you again."

"Jean, girl," Kentucky said, "what's happened here?"

"Take this horse, and the mule, and such of the stuff as you need. I don't need to tell you where to go or how to get there, nor how to get along; but do as I say! Go a long way, and go fast, and lose yourself; and never come back until some day this ghastly thing is over with and forgotten!"

Kentucky Jones stared at her a long time, studying her face; but her eyes did not flinch from his. At last a crooked one-sided smile changed his mouth.

"I know this is a terrible sacrifice for you," Jean said. "I wouldn't ask you this, Kentucky, I swear I wouldn't, if I wasn't so positive that there's no other way. Believe this—I'll be your friend, always; it may be later that I can help you, and send you money to you, or something like that. That will work out later. All I can say now is that I'd rather be dead than sitting here telling you this; but there isn't any other way."

"Why do you ask this?" Kentucky said curiously.

"Kentucky—God forgive me!—I can't answer that! But I tell you that there isn't any time to lose! Not an hour, not even—I can't tell you any more! I can only—"

"You'll have to tell me, I think," Kentucky said.

His face was hard, and the fatigue that she had been unable to detect before now had carved lines about his mouth, emphasizing the crooked line of his broken nose.

"You've got to do what I say," she told him passionately, "without any question of why about it."

"You hardly expected me to do that, I think," he told her.

Jean cried out sharply, "Don't! Take the horse and go. Kentucky, as you love me—but you don't love me; I know that."

"I think," he said, "just now it doesn't matter a whole lot who loves who, or who doesn't."

There was a touch of hysteria in her voice as she answered him. "No, not to you—I think you don't care anything about anybody in the world!"

"God help the man who does," he said. "As for taking that horse and making a run of it, I'm sorry not to do something that you ask. But I can't imagine anything on the face of the earth that would make me do that now."

"Then," she said quickly, "I'll tell you why you must. My father—my father—"

It seemed for a moment as if she were unable to go on. But she pulled herself together and spoke evenly, her words distinct and quick. "You know by this time why Bob Elliot is swamping the Bar Hook range. You have eyes that see things—I don't think anyone can hide from you what a thing means. You can't make me think that you don't know why Elliot has no fear of Campo, nor the Bar Hook."

"No," he said slowly, "I wouldn't pretend that I can't see that."

Her words tumbled out of her incoherently. "It's because Bob Elliot was close to the Bar Hook when Mason was killed. Poor Lee Bishop knew that—though I don't think he knew that he knew it."

Kentucky Jones said, "Bishop told me that he knew."

"And now," said Jean, "now I've got to tell you that I've known this all along—almost from the first. And I—"

"You're sure you want to tell me this, Jean?"

"I have to tell you—you make me tell you—"

That was a strange meeting, there on the trail in all that daze of sun-whipped snow, while all the sharp, sad, hidden things that this girl had never meant to tell a living soul came trembling out of her in a panicky disorder. Perhaps he should have wept or gathered her in his arms; but he could not.

"All right," he said. "What, exactly, is Bob Elliot holding over your father?"

"Somehow he's guessed the truth: that—whenever killed Mason killed him with my father's rifle. I knew that when I put the bullet into your hand at the inquest; I've known for days that you must know that, too, though you said nothing to me."

"Yes," he admitted, "I figured out that."

"And Bob Elliot knows it—I'm certain he knows it. Though I swear I don't know how he is so sure."

"But you yourself are sure that it is true—that the murderer used your father's rifle?"

"The—the—yes; I'm virtually certain of that. And my father knows it. He—"

"Have you talked this over with him?"

"No—how could I? It's changed him so I hardly know him. He used to have a terrible fighting temper—but where is it now? He doesn't dare come to a showdown with Elliot; he's afraid of the effect the shock would have on my mother."

"And on you?"

"On my mother," she repeated. "He doesn't dare face it out because of her. But just as he won't fight Elliot because of that—something in his makeup keeps him from protecting himself, too. Nothing would bring him to hide evidence—though that evidence might turn against him, as well as against the true murderer. He must have known—"

"Then," said Kentucky, "his alibi—about being somewhere else at the time Mason was killed—is not so good as some people have been led to suppose?"

"He hasn't any testimony in support of it but mine. They'll discount that, because I'm his daughter; even—even if they don't break my testimony in some other way."

He did not stop to tell her that he knew by this that her support of Campo's alibi had been perjury. Instead he asked her, "How many people know that Campo—your father set out to kill Bob Elliot the day Mason was killed?"

She cried out with a shudder in her voice. "You even know that?"

"Bob Elliot told me that," he said shortly.

Jean Ragland looked dizzy, and sick. "Then who can tell how many people Bob Elliot has told?"

Kentucky Jones stripped off his gloves and made himself a cigarette.

"And how many people," Kentucky said slowly, "do you think can tell a living man from a ghost?"

Her voice quavered irregularly, no longer fully under her control. "What do you mean?"

"There used to be a picture hanging in the Bar Hook ranch house," Kentucky said. "A picture in a dark wood frame. That picture was stolen because somebody thought it had something to do with the Mason case. When you saw that picture was stolen, you were panic-stricken, and hid the empty frame from your father. Now I'm going to tell you what that picture was."

"You can't—you never saw—"

"It was a picture of a man on a horse. When you first looked at that picture it seemed to be an enlarged snapshot of Bob Elliot. Only—when you looked close, it was not Elliot, but John Mason. Do you deny that, Jean?"

"No," said Jean miserably. "You see? It's just as I said. Nothing escapes you, nothing's able to hide itself away from you. That—that's the rest of the case—against my father. Lee Bishop didn't know who it was he saw near the Bar Hook when he thought he saw Mason, and Joe St. Marie only thought he saw Mason's ghost. But—when they rested sideways in their saddles with their faces hidden, a long way off or in the dark—anybody could—could mistake Bob Elliot for Mason."

"Or," he said, "an angry man might—just possibly—mistake Mason for Elliot."

She drew a deep breath and pressed her gloved fingers against her eyes, but did not reply.

"It's my belief," Kentucky said, "that it was the sheriff who searched the house—or had it searched; in which case, he must have that picture."

"I think you're right about the sheriff; he must have been looking for the gun to match the Mason bullet. But he didn't take the picture of Mason—because I took it myself."

"You did? But you looked so scared—"

"I didn't hide frame and all, at first, because it left a pale spot on the wall, that Dad would have noticed. I meant to slide some other picture into the frame. But I forgot it. And then, with Dad hunting all through the house, to see what had been taken, I thought he'd notice the empty frame—and I was terrified."

"And that rifle—"

He paused, watching her, and licked shut his cigarette.

"The rifle?" she burst out, jerking her hand away from her eyes. "Who knows where that is now? How do we know that Bob Elliot doesn't have it himself? Sheriff Hopper has the other bullet. If ever the bullet is fitted to my father's gun—"

"No," he said, "Bob Elliot doesn't have the rifle."

Her voice rose hysterically. "How do you know he hasn't?"

"Because," he told her, "that rifle is dismantled and hidden in the mattress of your bed."

She stared at him blankly for a long moment. "Oh, dear Lord," she said at last in a broken voice. "Why did I ever try to hide anything from you?" She did not avert her face from him, sitting very straight in the saddle. "Yes, I hid it. Campo must have known at once that Mason was killed with his rifle; but do you think anything in the world could have persuaded him to do away with that rifle, to pitch it into the bottom of some canyon?"

Watching her face in half profile he saw her begin to cry, silently, and without tears. "Is that all?" he said.

"That's one side of it." She steadied herself.

"And what's the other side?"

Blind Husbands in Colony

A two-hour journey from Belgrade reveals one of the strangest villages in the world, where all the husbands are blind and the work of the colony is directed by the wives who see.

The town of Vetrnik is the first blind war veterans' colony in Yugoslavia, the first in a program of land settlements for the blind undertaken by the government.

The government institute for the blind has arranged many marriages for unmarried blind veterans and aids the couples in the settlement at Vetrnik. The men are employed in useful crafts and the household work and operation of the colony are managed by the wives.

POULTRY ILLS

This is the time of the year for poultry ills. Probably the most prevalent complaint is the common cold which is generally the result of wrong conditions of management. These conditions are improper feeding, faulty house ventilation, or overcrowding, with resulting dampness and lowering of vitality. Any condition which lowers the vitality of the birds lessens their resisting powers and makes them susceptible to colds, which may later develop into roup. Cold, damp weather and sudden changes in temperature favor the development of the disease. It is likely to spread from bird to bird when all are somewhat low in vitality.

Treatment: This consists in correcting the conditions. No amount of doctoring will relieve the situation if the management of the flock is incorrect.

Individual treatment: Remove the affected birds and place them in an open-front house or coop facing in such a direction as to admit an abundance of sunshine. Clean the nostrils and with an atomizer spray iodine in them and in the cleft in the roof of the house, let in the fresh air and sunlight, and remove the windows and curtains until there is an open space at the rate of 1 square foot to 10 to 15 square feet of floor space. If dampness collects inside, give more opening. Renew the litter, if necessary, and replace with deep, dry litter to induce exercise. Do not overfeed on grain. Feed liberally with green feed.

Do not crowd the birds in the poultry house. Allow 3-5 sq. ft. per bird. Use H²O in the drinking water. These fundamental practices, if followed, will greatly reduce the death of birds.

We have received the following information regarding the proposed ruling governing the sale of eggs, from George S. Barnard, Director, Bureau of Foods and Standards.

The ruling has not been printed. Although drawn up in tentative form it will not be ready for distribution until after the sixtieth day of November.

Such official action those dealing in eggs are advised to continue in the past. No permit will be required until rulings have been fully completed and published.

WHEN LOVE COMES TO A "TOMBOY."

"Goose Fair," a fascinating new serial novel, illustrated in full color, starts in The American Weekly with Sunday's Detroit Times. It's an appealing story about a charming girl who did not realize she had grown up.

Marion

The Blue Bird Class and Star Class of West Marion held a Halloween party in the church basement, Wednesday night. A fine time was reported.

The Box Social at the Green School was well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schaefer of Detroit, spent the week-end with Alfred Lange and family.

Mrs. Webb is still in the hospital in Howell, slowly improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Neil of Anchorage, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Albin Pfau.

Melvin Bruff has returned to his home here, after working for the summer months for John Redinger.

Mr. Steve Kurbull spent the week-end with his family here.

Mrs. Lewis Redinger entertained the Jolly Club, at her home last Friday. A delicious dinner was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beach were completely surprised Tuesday evening Oct. 29, by their relatives, friends and neighbors to the number of around a 100, it being their 45th Wedding Anniversary. We wish them many more happy years of wedded life.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Miller, Dorothy and Douglas, and Roy Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pfau and Alfred Jr. and Wilda Rockhold; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Collins and Jean; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cloakey and Joyce, had Sunday dinner with Met Chalker at his cottage at Patterson Lake.

A number of gentlemen in the community are planning on starting next week for the northern woods to hunt deer. We wish them the best of luck.

1935-1939 WHEAT CONTRACT

Mr. R. E. Decker of the Michigan State College met with the Wheat Allotment Committee of Livingston County to discuss the procedure for the 1935-1939 wheat contracts. The contracts will be offered to the farmers of Livingston County in the following manner:

Monday, November 11th those people from Conway, Tyronne and Green Oak that are interested in the wheat program will come to the county agent's office and with the help of members of the Allotment committee will file their applications for the contract.

Tuesday, November 12th the townships of Cohoctah, Deerfield and Hartland.

Wednesday November 13th, townships of Oceola, Howell and Genoa.

Thursday, November 14th, the townships of Handy, Isoco, and Brighton.

Friday, November 15th, the townships of Marion, Unadilla, Putnam, and Hamburg.

By using this schedule it will aid materially in getting this sign-up finished with the minimum amount of time.

Eligibility to sign a contract is based upon the following points:

First: The farm must have wheat in at least one of the base years which are 1930-1932 inclusive.

Second: The farm must have wheat planted on it this fall.

Third: The operator must furnish reasonable evidence to county committees of his planted acreage and production.

Fourth: The acreage of wheat left for harvest in 1936 must be at least 54 % of the base acreage and not more than 95 % of the base acreage.

Fifth: The five percent of the base acreage which is contracted to the Government can be planted to a soil erosion crop, a pasture crop, or any other crop which will not be harvested during 1936, or the land can be fallowed or left idle.

Sixth: A signer signs for four years and has the option of terminating the contract at the end of two years.

Seventh: Adjustment payments will be sufficient to bring the price on this wheat produced up to parity price.

LIVINGSTON LODGE OPENS WINTER SEASON

Livingston Lodge No. 76 F. and A. M. opened the fall and winter season Tuesday night with a corn beef and cabbage supper attended by about 50. Other such events are planned including an oyster supper at the December meeting and a venison supper in January.

Following the banquet a program was put on in which many members of the fraternity were called on for remarks. Those who responded were Past Masters, John Martin, J. H. Hooker, Russell Livermore and P. W. Curlett. Also Past Master, Glen Slavton, H. C. Vedder, Past King, N. O. Frye, Bert Daller, Lawrence Campbell, Albert Dinkel, of Pinckney and Ira Ott and Henry Jewell. Past Master of Washenaw lodge No. 65, Dexter, Lucius Wilson then delivered an excellent address in which he traced the growth of the order from its beginning in New England and the part it played in the revolution. Many other interesting events are planned by the lodge this winter.

FISHING LICENSES TO GO ON SALE

Approximately 625,000 Michigan fishing licenses for 1936-resident, non-resident and special, will go on sale throughout the state next month. Distribution will be started by the Department of Conservation to approximately 2,000 license agents about December 1.

In the neighborhood of a million new fishing digests now are being printed, and will be ready in December for free distribution. The new digest will appear in folder form and will contain the changes made by the legislature in the fish laws as well as recent lake designation by the Conservation commission.

BANKERS HELP

"Save the Land and You Save the Man" is the essence of a suggested agricultural program recommended by the Arkansas Bankers Agricultural Committee. "Beware of impoverished soil. It leads to impoverished homes," says a statement sent to the banks to be distributed to their farmer customers. "To help nature save the land, build up the soil, by:

- Stopping soil erosion.
 - Planting legumes.
 - Raising livestock.
 - Developing pastures.
- "Look ahead with confidence—know what you are doing, therefore:
1. Draw up a farm inventory.
 2. Keep a record, daily or weekly.
 3. Budget expense, and keep within it."

The Objective Sought
In commenting on the foregoing program, Mr. Hecht says that it is not "the primary objective to attract attention particularly to the American Bankers Association as such; but rather to focus attention on and give impetus to those ideas which it believes are beneficial in promoting understanding and solidarity among banking, business and the public." He adds:

"Our program for the development of satisfactory public relations for banking does not consist merely of newspaper publicity. It is calculated to produce a continuous and cumulative effect by varied efforts which are aimed to work day in and day out to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks.

"To have favorable things said about the banking business in the newspapers and over the radio is, the association recognizes, very helpful toward creating a sound public opinion regarding banking. But the association believes that the most important thing ultimately is to foster throughout the banking profession the doing sincerely of those things that reflect favorably the sound, helpful practices of the business of banking, and that then the true news of its constructive activities will constitute the best answers to misrepresentations aimed at banks and bankers."

Predicts Farm Loan Expansion

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — With marked improvement in agriculture already apparent, and further improvement confidently expected, a greatly expanded volume of farm credit will be required, especially short-term credit, according to a statement here recently by W. I. Myers, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C. He was speaking before the Graduate School of Banking, conducted jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University.

"Some people have expressed a fear that the Cooperative Production Credit Associations are threatening the business of country banks, but these institutions have neither the desire nor the resources to monopolize a field which is still in the infancy of development," Governor Myers said. "Farmers who get their credit on time or by charge accounts have a basis for cash loans and should be buying their credit from a bank, production credit association or other institutions that sell credit on a business basis."

Making Your Own Opportunity

So many times we find people wanting to go into business for themselves. They may have the ability and other qualifications for success, but lack the needed capital to start in and carry their project over the formative period.

We cannot urge too strongly the advisability of starting early in life to build a savings account. With the money you will accumulate you will find many an opportunity to use, it to better yourself.

Dun and Bradstreet reports show that more failures come in business from lack of sufficient capital than for any other reason.

Interest paid on Saving Books and Certificates of Deposit. Money to loan at reasonable rates. Deposits up to $5,000.00 insured by our membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Your business always appreciated.
