New School Addition Is Now Assured

Local School Contracts Approved By
P. W. A. Electrical Contract
Must Be Re-Let

Monday morning the School Board received official notice from the P. W. A. Office in Detroit to let the contracts covering the general construction, heating, plumbing and ventilating of the new addition to the school. It will be necessary, however, to re-advertise for bids covering the electrical work. These bids will be opened at the school house on Jan. 28th. This is on account of the General Electric Shop, of Ann Arbor, who was the lowest bidder, making an error in their bid of January 1st, and according to P. W. A. regulations, this bid could not be changed in any way without giving the other bidders an equal chance to change their bids.

In order to be assured of the addition, it was necessary to omit the basement entirely, as the bids ran considerably over the original estimate, and it was thought that this could be done at some future time if necessary. This addition will be first-class throughout with the exception of the wood block floor which will be laid on a cement foundation, and will be modern in every respect.

It will also be necessary to have another bond issue. This is on account of the interest rate of 4% being omitted from the ballot. The P. W. A. Office sent the draft of the ballot to the Secretary of the School Board, who had our local printer make a sample copy of the ballot to be used in the election. This sample ballot was taken to the P. W. A. Office in Detroit for their approval and same was given. Several weeks after the election this oversight was discovered in their legal department, and they admit that this was not an omission upon our part, and that the treats are on them.

The new addition is now definitely assured provided this bond issue carries. It will be necessary to vote only on the proposition authorizing the bond issue. The signing of the contracts covering the above mentioned work need not be delayed on account of the bond election, the P. W. A. officials being of the opinion that this new addition is strong enough to convince them that the bond issue will carry with ease. The contracts will not doubt be signed within the next day or two, and construction should start within a couple of weeks thereafter.

LIVINGSTON COUNTY EMERGENCY WELFARE RELIEF

Given During December, 1935.

Howell City, Brighten City, Livingston County Townships and State funds provided direct relief for 242 families, representing 110 persons, during the month of December, at an expenditure of $4,736.25. Local contributions to the above amount were 40 percent. The State furnished the balance of 60 percent. The direct relief was distributed as follows:

Cash	$42.00
Food	2,144.26
Shelter	306.50
Clothing	254.43
Fuel	1,261.97
Medical	162.50

In addition to the above, the State furnished the following commodities which were distributed to needy persons on the relief rolls:

480 5 lb. lbs. ground beef
608 13 lb. lbs. beef stew
250 12 lb. lbs. mutton
556 lbs. prunes
107 16 lb. lbs. evaporated milk
17 mattresses
2 comforters
36 towels

During December a rapid transfer of all employables was made from direct relief to the Federal PWA. The PWA now has 170 men and women working and are paid, entirely thru Federal funds, a regular monthly wage. All physically able-bodied men and women who were on the relief rolls on November 1 were put to work in Livingston County on projects useful to the county. The factor curbing further reduction in the welfare rolls was the Federal order prohibiting persons who have gone on relief rolls since November 1 from becoming eligible for WPA.

There are also quite a number of persons who are physically unfit for work and not old enough to be eligible for old age pensions. It has also been necessary to supplement in some cases to those who have old age pensions not enough for their necessities.

CONGRATULATIONS, FINLEY

Annual Farmers Week Offers Many Features

Speakers of National Prominence
Will Discuss Vital Problems
In Meetings

With more than fifty sectional meetings, banquets, luncheons, reunions and special features of entertainment, Farmers' Week at Michigan State College, February 3 to 7, is easily the greatest agricultural conference in the state.

Each day there will be numerous attractions, in addition to the general sessions, at which speakers of national prominence will discuss topics of significance in Michigan. A few of the speakers and their topics are:

Tuesday p. m.—Dr. Mary S. Rose, Columbia University, "Food Revolutionizing Health." Elmer Beemer, President, Buffalo Producers Co-operative Association, "Trends in Livestock Marketing."

Wednesday p. m.—O. E. Baker, United States Department of Agriculture, "The Relation of Population Trends to Commercial Agriculture." Wednesday evening, James Thomson, commissioner of agriculture, "Marketing Michigan Products."

Thursday p. m.—Edward O'Neal, President, American Farm Bureau Federation, Thursday evening, varied program.

Friday p. m.—Rural Drama contest, Little International Livestock Show.

Throughout the week, musical organizations of the college will provide entertainment for the visitors, and use of departments of the college are making elaborate plans for unusual demonstrations and exhibits. A number of the programs will be broadcast over WKAR, the State College radio station, for the benefit of those who are unable to attend.

Programs for the week are off the press, and those who do not obtain one within a reasonable time should write to the college for a copy.

HAVE YOUR DRIVER'S LICENSE

Once again the time has come when it is necessary for the motorist to make application for the re-licensing of their vehicles. It is probably well known throughout the State that the Hon. Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, has issued an extension of time on the 1935 plates until February 1, 1936, and, no doubt, the majority of the motorists in the state will take advantage of this month's grace, figuratively speaking, and the result will be that at about the expiration period, there will be a mad rush to obtain the necessary plates. Since has been provided on the application for license plates, for the number and date of expiration of the operator's license.

The smart motorist, to save himself some delay, will help greatly in expediting this burden placed on the staff of the Secretary of State by seeing that his driver's license is in good standing at the time he makes application for the purchase of plates.

PINCKNEY NEW TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

Extension to all day Sunday of the same reduced rates which have been in effect on long distance station-to-station telephone calls after 7 o'clock each night, and the establishment of reduced rates every night and Sunday on person-to-person calls, become effective January 15. These changes will mean a large annual saving to Michigan telephone users according to B. Van Meter, manager here for the Michigan Bell Telephone Company.

This additional discount in rates, which affects most calls between points on which the present station-to-station day rate is more than 3 cents, is the sixth major long distance telephone rate reduction offered by the Bell System since October 1926.

This also is the first time that discounted rates have been offered on station-to-station day long distance calls on Sunday and the first time that discount, ever have been established for person-to-person calls for any period. A person-to-person long distance call is one on which the operator is requested to locate a particular person at the Bell telephone while a station-to-station call is one made to a telephone by number rather than to some person in particular. A station-to-station call requires less time for making the connection than does a person-to-person call and therefore the rate is considerably less.

As an instance of the savings made possible under the new schedule, Manager Van Meter says that the day person-to-person rate from Pinckney to Benton Harbor heretofore has been $1.15 at all times. Now the same call can be made night and Sunday for 85¢, a saving of 30¢.

The weekend discount period on both types of long distance calls will extend from 7 o'clock Saturday nights until 4:30 o'clock Monday mornings.

PUTNAM TWP. TAX NOTICE

Scout Troops Plan Busy Weeks Ahead

Scouting Starts on 27th Year Soon

"Boy Scout Week is one of the big events of the year," Scout Commissioner Fielding H. Yost said last week in discussing the approach of Boy Scout Week which will be celebrated by all Scout Groups in America from February 7th to 13th.

Groups throughout the Washtenaw Livingston Council have been asked to plan a full and varied series of events for the week February 7-13, thus helping to make every man, woman and child in every corner of our two-county council as "Scout conscious" as possible.

On Saturday evening, February 8, at 8:00 p. m. every scout is asked to renew his Scout Oath. National broadcasts are being arranged in this connection.

Every Scout is being asked to attend church and Sunday school in uniform on February 9.

School assemblies, library and school participations will be arranged for whenever possible.

Current Comment

Editor Frank Knox of Chicago toured Michigan in the interests of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for president. The committee in charge of his tour seem to have considered it their duty to place him under severe handicaps. In Detroit at his speech at the Hotel Statler, he was not permitted to speak on political issues, but had to throw his speech in the waste basket and deliver one on "Jupiter" and other mythological characters. Also in his address he was supposed to end up with the statement that he would welcome the votes of the Michigan delegates, providing Senator Vandenberg did not want them. The truth of the matter is that the boys can't dope out the senator. He may be dumb, but he has sure tied up the situation in Michigan for the other would-be presidential nominees.

The American Liberty League has spoken. This is an organization that places property rights above all other dreams every night that the government will levy so many taxes that the only millionaires will be those in museums. Its leading lights are Al Smith, the Duponts, John Raskob and J. P. Morgan. The latter, as spokes man, has announced that they will support the Republican ticket this fall, providing neither Senator Borah nor Senator Vandenberg is the Republican nominee. Frank Knox is their first choice and Gov. Landon of Kansas their second choice. We think their blacklisting of Senators Borah and Vandenberg is the best shot these two gentlemen ever got.

Benno Hoffman will again feature the headlines of the daily papers for another 30 days at least as Gov. Hoffman has granted him a reprieve for that length of time or more. If the paper printed about him were placed end to end they would reach halfway around the world. For the best interests of all concerned we believe that it would have been better if the sentencing judge had given him a life sentence. Then he would not have been the star in a thrilling drama on the front page with last minute reprieves as a climax.

Ingham county is complaining over lack of interest and cooperation shown by the Detroit police in helping Ingham county officers to locate the loot in the W. B. Dancer robbery in which a whole truck load of clothing was stolen. Only about $200 worth of the $3,000 loot was found, the rest being sold to the Detroit forces. Livingston county experienced the same thing several years ago. The Pettibone and Howell Clothing Stores and the Chapel Tower Store at Howell were robbed, and also the schoolhouse. Hardly anything was recovered. As a result of these losses two of the merchants went out of business. The bandit who robbed the Pettibone store was sent up on another charge in another county. His wife, who acted as a lookout, was tried at Howell, but acquitted, being represented by a crack lawyer.

A girl in Detroit, who went into a six-day trance during a revival, aroused considerable interest and gained much publicity for the religious organization to which she belonged. According to physicians her trance was genuine. Maybe 10 years ago it was customary for magicians to hypnotize one of their company, place him in a store window all day long and awaken him at the end of their show. This always attracted great attention. This was, however, proved to be a fake, and has fallen into disuse. In Detroit, years ago, a subject in a trance in a window during a magician's sojourn at the local opera house, was picked with a hot pin, but did not betray himself. Yet this same magician, years later, confessed that it was all a fake.

Another airplane disaster has winded out a large number of people, and once more the nation is mourning. Air travel at the present time is far from safe. Some doubt that it will ever be properly safe-guarded. It is dangerous enough traveling on the ground, but the falling hazard does not exist there to any extent.

The State of Michigan is receiving much credit from the fact that the state is out of the "red." Economy has not affected this, as the state has more employees at the present time than ever before. The reasons for the excellent financial condition are the sale tax, the liquor tax and the money collected in the big delinquent tax advertising campaign last year.

DRIVERS' LICENSE SALE STIMULATED

Most automobile drivers of the state require only a personal reminder that their operator's licenses may have expired, to cause them to investigate and apply for one if necessary.

This is the inescapable conclusion reached by officials of the Department of State as the result of the flow of applications for these licenses during the past two months. Late in 1935, it became publicly known that application blanks for 1936 automobile licenses would contain two questions, one asking the holder of the operator's license to indicate, in other words, the date of expiration.

The thousands of plates appearing flowing across the country of license plates in the capital and at branch offices throughout the state, during the expiration of the year, in the case of application for operator's licenses, hundreds of applicants for plates given a direct hit on the expiration of their operator's license, showing that they would not renew until they realized they would be asked questions about them as they passed their 1936 plates.

While there are still thousands of operators whose licenses have expired, the fact remains that more than 1,000 applications are being received every day, this rate having been averaged for the past two months, with some 40,000 in December, 1935, alone. Chauffeurs' licenses took a giant stride, more than 35,000 being issued in these two months, as compared with some 13,000 for the corresponding months a year ago.

CHILDREN NEED SLEEP AT REGULAR INTERVALS

Strenuous Days, Plenty of Rest, Insure Happiness for Growing Youngsters

Sleep at frequent intervals is necessary for children before the school age, according to Mary Lewis, instructor in Home Management at Michigan State College.

Miss Lewis recently outlined essential conditions for good sleeping habits and placed a strenuous day at the head of the list.

"I would venture to suggest," she stated, "that the child's ordinary daily experiences are as strenuous, as stimulating, and as demanding in frequent adjustments as that of an adult, while on his first tour through foreign lands."

"In order that children may remain toward the interests of what appear to us to be a very ordinary day with the abandon characteristic of healthy youngsters, they must have enough sleep at frequent intervals to permit their bodies to recover from the constant stimulation of their waking hours."

Miss Lewis insisted, however, that the sleep periods should not be dragged out since it might interfere with night sleeping habits.

Other conditions necessary for the development of good sleeping habits were given as follows:

1. Regular hours for sleep should be established by parents.
2. Care should be taken to prevent depletion of energy to avoid restlessness and, in extreme cases, tantrums.
3. Sleeping rooms should have rapidly changing currents of air.
4. Children should not be tucked in too tightly in order to permit some freedom of movement.
5. Children should be in good physical condition.
6. Children should be satisfied with their day's activity and at peace with himself.

WOULD FENCE HIGHWAYS

A proposal whereby the industrial situation in the Michigan penal institutions will be improved, was advanced today by Commissioner of Agriculture, James F. Thomson, who believes the state of Michigan should build fences along all state highways.

It would probably necessitate legislative action, based on the theory that the state should protect its own right-of-ways. Thomson pointed out that railroads are required to fence right-of-ways, and therefore the state should be compelled to do the same, in view of the fact that highways are being built for use of trucking companies operating in direct competition with the railroads.

Farmers should have protection for their livestock along state highways the same as they do along railroad lines," Thomson says.

Prison inmates who have been idle since the new state law went into effect, eliminating the sale of prison-made goods to other than state institutions, could make the fences, Thomson says. Fence posts could be secured from state-owned lands at a minimum cost. The task of putting up the fence could be done by welfare labor.

Thomson would have the work confined at the beginning to only agricultural areas, later to be extended in other districts.

As a member of the legislature of 1929, Thomson first advocated the taking over of township roads by the state, which at that time was declared to be impractical. Since then the McNitt-Holbeck bill has become law, and the fencing of state highways should be in keeping with this program.

"Well constructed fences along Michigan highways will prove a great advantage from many angles. The task of building the fence would prove a valuable substitution to the present works program."

STATE CONSERVATION NOTES

Careless smokers were responsible for approximately 50 percent of the forest fire reported in Michigan during the past year.

The total value of catches of commercial fish made in the Michigan waters of the Great Lakes averages nearly $2,500,000 a year for the past five years. The record catch for this period was made in 1931 when 31,624,687 pounds of fish were taken having a total value of $2,889,888.

Grand Haven state park leads all state parks in Michigan during 1935 in total attendance of visitors. The Grand Haven unit reported 148,246 visitors during the park season.

As early as 1665 reports of Indian copper mines in the Lake Superior region were sent out by voyagers and Jesuit missionaries.

The belief among many fishermen that fish can hear them if they speak above a whisper is nonsense, according to zoologists' studies of fish. Fish have no external ear and cannot hear most sounds made outside of the water.

PARALYSIS TREATMENT POOL NEAR COMPLETION

Victims of infantile paralysis undergoing treatment at the University of Michigan Hospital will be able to make use of the institution's new therapeutic swimming pool some time in January, according to hospital officials.

The pool is being built in the basement of the hospital and is the gift of the Ruckham Fund of Detroit. It will give the institution facilities similar to those at Warm Springs, Ga., and other sanitariums, for the care of victims of poliomyelitis and related diseases.

Treatment of certain types of paralysis by submersion of the patient in water is based on the fact that the water tends to support a large portion of the weight of the limbs. This allows the patient to move, with little effort, any good portions left in the wasted muscles. In some cases muscles retaining but five per cent of their pre-sickness strength can be exercised and gradually be redeveloped until they are more or less useful again.

The water in the new pool will be constantly circulating and purified with chlorine. It will be warmed up to ninety degrees to prevent chilling of the patient and to increase the circulation of his blood. Massage, light and heat treatments are also combined with exercise, and this hospital is relocating these departments near the pool.

DON'T DO THIS

An exchange suggests that if you have a desire to give anybody any flowers, to give them before that party dies. Carry the flowers to them while they are sick, but do not go about it in this manner.

"Bill," said the invalid's friend, "I've come to cheer you up a bit like, I've brought you a few flowers. Bill, I thought if I was too late they'd come in handy for a wreath, you know. Don't get downhearted, Bill, Lummy, don't you look so ghastly! But there, keep up yer spirits, cheer sport; I've come to see you an' cheer yer up a bit. Now listen, when I've 'ere, but as I see to myself when I was coming up, Wot a crooked stair case to get a coffin down."

CLEARY COLLEGE RE-ORGANIZED

Announcement was made on Jan. 16 that the R. P. Cleary family of this city has given to a non-sectarian, self-perpetuating board of trustees their entire interest in Cleary College. This public beneficence amounts to approximately $150,000 and is effective immediately. For the past fifty-two years the institution has ranked among the leading private commercial colleges of the state.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the Cleary gift, the trustees made public the granting of a Class A ranking for the College by the State Board of Education. Curricular changes will be made immediately to institute four-year courses leading to bachelor degrees.

P. R. Cleary, president of the college since its founding in 1883, will continue to be its administrative head. Steps have already been taken by local and alumni groups to institute a fitting memorial to the generosity of President Cleary and his family.

IMPROVED FUR SEASON

Due in part to the increased rainfall and the improvement of business conditions of 1935, Michigan fur trappers had a "boom" season during the past fall and early winter trapping periods.

Michigan fur dealers are reporting an increased take of pelts, a marked improvement in their quality and a general increase in prices. Through this combination of circumstances, Michigan trappers realized a far greater revenue for their efforts than during the year 1934-1935.

The compilation of fur dealers' reports for that year indicates that the fur industry in Michigan approximates the $1,000,000 mark each year, under average conditions.

The total catch reported by approximately 500 Michigan fur dealers for the trapping seasons of 1934-1935, according to a recent compilation, follows: Muskrat, 342,302; skunk, 70,576; opossum, 26,042; raccoon, 20,162; mink, 14,902; weasel, 11,441; beaver, 2,566; red fox, 1,006; badger, 501; rabbit, 198; wildcat, 100; house cat, 15; bear, 14; cross fox, 14; coyote, 49; deer, 3; wolf, 12; gray fox, two; lynx, one.

Of 808 silver foxes purchased by dealers, probably all were obtained from breeders of these animals at this color phase of the fox is very rare in the wild.

CROW SHOOTING CAMPAIGN

Crow-shooting campaigns, conducted as club projects, produce the best results when held at points of heavy crow concentrations, says the Department of Conservation.

Sportsmen's clubs conducting such campaigns in Michigan should find out where the crows roost or gather in large flocks and hold their shooting or control campaigns at these points.

"Drives" in which large numbers of men are scattered over an area of many acres are to be discouraged because of the possible injury to game birds and animals. In such drives, pheasants, ruffed grouse, quail and other game may be frightened from their feeding grounds and actual damage to food supplies as well as game may be caused.

The crow is particularly wary at this time of the year and may afford an elusive and difficult target to the gunner, unless surprised at a roost or other points of concentration.

In viewing crow-shooting as a predator control project, the Department of Conservation is inclined not to look too optimistically on the results obtained. The crow is migratory in nature and the extermination of the bird in any one locality merely creates a biological vacuum which eventually draws crows from other areas into the place. It is doubtful whether crow reduction in any one locality under present conditions will produce results of any lasting benefit, according to the game men.

Truman Peach Jr., 12, of Howell, lost an eye Friday while coasting down hill. He was struck in the eye by a stick in the snow, puncturing the eyeball. The accident occurred on Maple street.

GEORGE RECTOR* Says

*MR. RECTOR IS A MEMBER OF THE

KITCHEN STAFF

"There used to be a slogan (maybe there still is)—'Let George do it,' and I suppose that is how I got into this business of converting meats and vegetables from their natural state into a semblance of a well-cooked meal. But now that we're on the subject, let's settle once and for all the age-old question—'What is the best way of cooking: electrically or otherwise?'"

"I've always maintained that a good cook can turn out a masterpiece with nothing more to aid him or her—than a primitive wood fire. But there's no denying the helpfulness of the electric cook stove, especially in its state of perfection today. * * * I think it is perfectly obvious that no man or woman is going to march out in the woods and build a fire, labor with crude cooking utensils and struggle along under other handicaps just to show that he can do it—at least, not every day in the week."

"I like my electric comforts and conveniences as much as anybody. And also—to get it said from the mouth of a saying goes regarding punishment. But cooking—to me, at least—should be a pleasure. And electric cooking, in view of the present advanced state of the art, multiplies that pleasure a hundredfold. Please understand, this is merely my own preference. Others may have their own pet cooking method, and that is all right with me!"

Pension Plan for Employees
Announced by Wrigley Co.
 Recognizing the advantage and fairness of social security to workers and being in favor of an old age pension plan, the Wm. Wrigley Jr. company, has announced a pension plan, for its employees, effective at once. More than 1,800 employees are affected by the move.
 Under the Wrigley plan the company and employees contribute for future service pension on a fifty-fifty basis. The plan provides for employees to be retired at the age of sixty-five.

Our Dependence
 The race is not always to the swift. It often depends upon the character of the man in the judge's stand.

JACK SPRATT
 NOW EATS FAT AND ANYTHING ELSE IN SIGHT. NO STOMACH SOUR CAN KNOCK HIM FLAT... FOR TUMS HAVE SOLVED HIS PLIGHT!

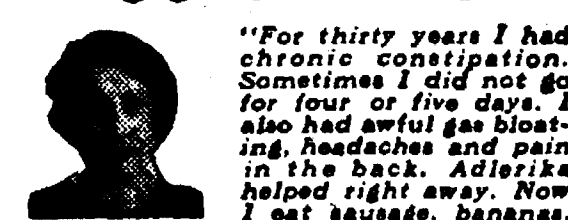

WHO ELSE WANTS TO FORGET SOUR STOMACH?

THE way to eat favorite foods and avoid heartburn, sour stomach, gas and other symptoms of acid indigestion is to keep millions carry Tums. Nothing to mix up. No chewing your stomach with harsh alkalies. Tums doctors say may increase the tendency toward acid indigestion. Just enough of the antacid in Tums is released to neutralize the stomach. The rest passes on inert. Cannot ever harm the stomach or blood. You never know when, so carry a roll always. 10c at all drug stores.

Harder to Get Over
 We ought to be more offended at extravagant praise than injuries.

CONSTIPATED 30 YEARS

"For thirty years I had chronic constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas, bloating, headaches and pain in the back. Adierka helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and never feel better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life." — Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adierka. Many report action in 30 minutes after taking just one dose. Adierka gives complete action, cleansing your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports:
 "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierka checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli."
 Give your stomach and bowels a real cleansing with Adierka and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous, feel all unwell and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

SYNOPSIS

John Spencer and his cousin, Geoffrey Bohun, are vacationing in Austria. Geoffrey is a gifted portrait painter but prefers to paint landscapes. While strolling in the forest, John hears English voices, and decides to investigate. From safe cover he finds four men burying a man in green livery who, evidently, had been murdered. Pharaoh is the leader of the gang; the others are Dewdrop, Rush and Bugle. Unfortunately, John makes himself known to the assassins by dropping a letter with his name and address on it. He tells Geoffrey and his chauffeur, Barley, of his adventure, realizing that John's life is in danger, declares he must vanish. Spencer discovers that the livery of the murdered man corresponds to the livery of the servants of York castle, and tells Countess Helena, mistress of the castle, what he had seen. With Geoffrey and Barley, John starts for Annabel, a nearby village. They encounter Pharaoh. In making their getaway they exchange shots with the gang, without serious result. They arrive at Plumage farm, on the York estate, where lady Helena had resided and John and his cousin to meet her.

"I don't quite know," I answered. "We haven't found a place yet." The girl gazed into the distance. "I hope you'll stay here." "I could hardly believe my ears. 'Here? At Plumage?' I cried. "I hope so. I can answer for the man and his wife; and you'll have a privacy here that you wouldn't get at an inn."

"It's ideal," I heard myself saying. "Simply ideal. We'll be on the spot, yet in hiding. But why—I don't understand."

"If you insist on fighting my battle, the least I can do is to billet you. Don't you agree?"

I turned and looked at her, but though I think she knew it, she did not turn.

"You're very generous," I said. Her eyes left mine—to light on the driving mirror, all splintered and started.

After a long look, they returned to me. "Was that?" she said, nodding. "A present from Annabel?"

"Yes." "And you were driving?" "I was."

"Tell me exactly what happened." When I had told the story, she drew a deep breath.

"If you'd knocked on that door..." She shivered. "May I look at that letter of yours?"

I put it into her hand. She examined the envelope carefully. Then—

"Have you looked inside," she said, "since you got it back?"

I raised my eyebrows. "As a matter of fact I haven't. I never gave it a thought."

She pushed aside the torn edges and drew out the shoemaker's bill. . . . The note on its back was printed and easy to read.

Dear Mr. Spencer, The gentlemen in green had done something which he must have known I should meet like. That is why he was being buried. Verbum sap.

Yours very truly,

We read the words together, her face two inches from mine. Then we turned and looked at each other. But I had no thought for the note. Her hair had stung my temples, and I could only wonder whether she knew how terribly attractive she was.

"I wonder if I'm a hoodoo, and bring bad luck," she breathed. "That's rot," I said thickly. She did not seem to hear me, but sat very still for a long moment. And then she was up and was pushing her hair from her temples as though to rid of her thoughts.

"Yes, you would," said Geoffrey. "I'm your keeper, you know; and when people like Pharaoh get going, ordinary people like us must pass by on the other side. The moment Barley comes back, we've got to locate these blackguards. First come, first served, you know." He drew in his breath. "We simply must find them, John, before they find us."

With that, he insisted that we should retire for the night. And that was the end of that astonishing day, upon which by the merest chance my fortune was joined with those of the finest lady that ever I saw and one of the deadliest ruffians that ever drew arms. The one sought to preserve, the other to take my life; and I was of consequence to neither.

Sharply at eleven next morning Lady Helena York rode up to the farm. Her groom led two spare horses, for after we had consulted, Geoffrey and I were to ride to York for lunch.

"I stepped to her side—" "Nothing new?" says she. "Nothing," said I. "And you?"

She shook her head. "Except that my brother's returning. I wish he wasn't just now, but it can't be helped. At least he's coming alone. He's very young, you know; and people spoil him, and—sometimes he makes the wrong friends. He brought two back last time. . . . One was French. He took me to me at once. I think he'd have gone very well in some servants' hall." She laughed at the look in my eyes and swung herself off her bay. "Worries of a chatelaine," she added. "If only I'd been the boy, and my brother the girl. . . . Where's Mr. Bohun?"

"Map-reading," said I. "His man, with our big baggage, will get to Villach tonight. He's got to be met, of course. What Geoffrey is trying to do is to work out how we can fetch him without fetching Pharaoh, too. That show at Annabel's eaten into his brain."

"I wish it would eat into yours. Rush mayn't be there next time, to jog his superior's arm."

Here Geoffrey walked out of the house and gave her good day. "And now tell me this," said he. "Had young Florin keys upon him?"

"No," said the girl. "While he's within the castle, the night-watchman carries keys; but before he goes out, he leaves his keys with his mate."

"Well, you beat them there," said Geoffrey. "Young Florin was killed for the keys which he hadn't got."

"I think you're wrong," said the girl. "To enter York castle won't help them. I'm the person that matters. They've got to bring me to my knees."

Geoffrey looked at her very hard. Then—

"Lady Helena versus Pharaoh and others. You know I can't help feeling that you ought to go to the police."

My lady pulled off her gloves. "Let's walk in the meadows," she said, "and I'll tell you one or two facts."

In silence, we left the apron and took to the fields. . . . "My father," she said, "had vision. He knew the great war was coming and he saw that after the war the world itself would fall upon evil times. Mother had a very great fortune, and father was rich, and his one idea was so to invest this money that, while the lean years were passing, it would be perfectly safe. I think he really wanted it for York. Our motto is: All things pass, but York endures. And he wanted to insure that York would always be maintained as it has been maintained for about five hundred years. Well, this idea obsessed him, and I think that my mother's death affected his brain. He threw back to his ancestors, and he put his whole fortune in gold. Golden sovereigns, mostly. She put her hands to her eyes. 'I tell you it's the curse of my life.'"

"You don't mean—" began my cousin. "Yes, I do," said the girl. "Lying in the cellars at York is the best part of two million pounds. It's going, of course. We live upon capital. But even so it'll last for a hundred and fifty years. And long before that, of course, the idea was to change it back."

"Good God," said Geoffrey. "And then, 'But what astonishing foresight your father had.'"

"He was wise—in theory. But how would you like to have charge of two million pounds in gold? The only people who know are old Florin and I. I said it was in the cellars, but it's not as easy as that. It's in a private cellar, the way to which nobody knows. Once a month I take what I need to Salzburg; there's an old firm of lawyers there that sees me through."

"But of course it was bound to come out. I've done my very best, but there's been a leakage somewhere, and Pharaoh knows."

"Well, there you are. He obviously can't get away with a million pounds. He could never transport it, for one thing. Very well, what's his object? I imagine to levy blackmail. Of course I shan't submit, but I can't afford to let the position be known. That's why I can't go to the police." She struck the turf with her palm. "You know what gold means today. Its possession was always dangerous. Men buried it in the ground and misers counted it over at dead of night. But today they wouldn't dare count it. I'd be an outlaw tomorrow if people knew. Everyone's hand would be against me, and half the thieves in Europe would be camping outside my gates."

"The remedy's too obvious," said Geoffrey. "Why don't you get rid of the stuff?"

"Because I have passed my word. My father made me swear that until the world was settled I'd keep our fortune in gold."

"And you've no idea," said I, "how Pharaoh will go to work?"

"I wish I had," said the girl. "To give me away would be futile. I mean, it would kill the goose."

Lady Helena laced her fingers about a delicate knee. "Well, now you know why Pharaoh the Great is here. He may prove hard to deal with, but I'm in no personal danger—I think that's clear."

"This was too much. 'Clear?' I cried. 'I don't think it's clear at all. I think you're in very great danger, by day and night. The man is ruthless—you know it.'"

"I entirely agree," said Geoffrey. "And I'll tell you another thing. In view of what you've told us this morning, I think it was no mere chance that sent John down to that dell."

York was like no castle that I have seen, for though it was moated, the moat was not under its walls, and the pile seemed to rise from an island which Nature had brought from a distance and set in a fold of the hills. We crossed the moat by a drawbridge that could no longer be moved, and a gravel road brought us up to the castle gateway, which must have been twenty feet high. This was now shut by vast curtains of silver-gray, and to my surprise, my lady rode straight between them, her horse's head and shoulders parting them as she went. We followed her under an archway and into a small courtyard.

In the hall my lady left us, to go and change, and, when we had washed our hands, a servant led us to the terrace where a table was laid.

The view from here was astounding, for we looked clean over the forest, which seemed spread out like a fan, on to the foothills and mountains which stood in their ancient order, the nearest some seven miles off.

An Austrian lady joined us, a Madame Olive, who plainly lived at the castle for Lady Helena's sake. But though in this way convention was doubtless observed, as I have shown, my lady went unattended wherever she chose.

When luncheon was done, my cousin went off with Madame Olive to see the gallery of pictures, but Lady Helena walked with me round the ramparts, showing me certain landmarks and telling me the lie of the land.

After a little— "Was that gray all right this morning?" "Yes," said I. "He gave me a lovely ride."

"I thought he would. You shall have him to take you back. I shall keep three horses at Plumage as long as you're there. With a groom, of course. You may have news any moment."

"This is the Gentleman of Whom I Spoke."

"This is the Gentleman of Whom I Spoke."

ment which I should hear. But please don't think they can only be ridden this way. They're for you and your cousin to use whenever you please."

"I shall ride to York," said I. "To see how you are."

"But not too early," says she. "York wakes up at six, but its eyes aren't properly open till eight o'clock. So don't ride before then, if you please, either in this direction or anywhere else."

"I'm going to ask you to do a difficult thing. It concerns old Florin. You see, it's so awful for him. He knows I can take no action, and what can he do? He's got to sit down helpless under this shattering blow, while the men that dealt it go free. And so I want you to see him and tell him what you told me—that you are out to get them and to see that justice is done."

"With all my heart," said I. "Let me see him at once."

Without a word she led me across the terrace and into a library. Then she summoned a servant and bade him ask the warden to come to her there.

Two minutes later a man of some sixty summers was ushered into the room.

Helena spoke in German. "John, this is my warden. Florin, this is the gentleman of whom I spoke."

The warden bowed to me, and I went forward directly and took his hand.

"I can't bring back your son, Florin, but one day I'll show you his grave. It's a pretty place, far better than any churchyard, fit for a king. But before I take you there, I've some work to do. I'm going to find the fellows that took his life. And they're going to pay for it, Florin. I'll never rest till they're taken, alive or dead."

Head Hunting Becoming Thing of the Past in the Philippines

Still Persists in the Remote Areas, but Loses Its Appeal Elsewhere.

The biggest and busiest native market in all the Philippines is situated in Baguio. Sunday marks the high point of any week's trading. All day Friday and Saturday the mountain trails for miles around are dotted with natives coming to market, bringing their products for sale and having in mind the purchase of things they need.

Baguio is the most beautiful and most healthful resort in the Far East, with wild mountain scenery, and cool forests of stately pines spreading out in every direction. It is the "summer capital" of the Philippines; Americans predominate the population.

Sunday crowds at the market are estimated to number from four thousand to seven thousand. Some come in carts drawn by carabao or bullocks; some by bus; a few in automobiles so old and broken that one wonders if they will hold together for the return trip; others on freight trucks, but the majority walk.

Let the Women Do the Work. The women are the burden carriers and they bring to market the products of garden, field, and jungle in large baskets carried on their backs and supported by a wide leather head strap resting across their foreheads. Another type of basket is carried on top of the head.

In addition to the foodstuffs displayed in the market there are many examples of native handicraft—home woven fabrics, coarser, and not beautifully embroidered as is the pina cloth of the South; silver jewelry, wood carvings, including book ends for the tourist trade, curios, brass and metal work, and rattan and wicker baskets of many sizes, shapes, and styles.

The Dog Market. A short distance into a ravine leading to the market is the stockyards of the Philippines, where pigs and hogs to the number of a hundred are tethered to stakes while awaiting buyers. Beyond the pig market is the spot where horse trading takes place. And beyond this, until recently when the white residents of Baguio protested against its continuance, was found the dog market.

Roast dog is a prized delicacy among Igorrotes. The protest, was not based upon a fastidious objection to dog eating, but the Igorrotes stuffed the poor animals with rice while alive and then beat them to death with clubs, thus assuring tender meat. So the dog market was moved. It is now in the hills back of the principal hotel, and at dawn the howls of the tortured and suffering canines render the morning hideous.

Good roads have accomplished much toward abolishing the former popular pastime of head hunting. In the old days villages of different tribes, though only a few miles distant from each other, regarded each other as enemies. It was the old story of "hating the stranger." Good roads brought them together, they got acquainted, and became less hostile, if not friendly.

Head hunting still persists in the remote areas of Luzon, but is almost obsolete in the mountain province. The custom originated in the desire of the surviving members of a family to provide companions for a dead chief's spirit on the mysterious journey from earth to the Igorrote heaven. The quickest way to provide good company for the departing one was to remove the heads of a few members of an adjoining tribe. This done, reprisals were in order. Thus head hunting became an honored institution.

The taking of a head or heads was the occasion of a great feast in celebration of the event, and all the men, women, and children participating in the feast were entitled to the decoration of tattooing as a distinguishing mark. It is worthy of note that three in every five adult natives at the Baguio market bear the tattooed designs on the arms, indicating participation in a head hunting feast.

DAIRY HERD ASSOC. MEETS

The annual meeting of the Livingston county dairy herd improvement association held at Howell was attended by A. C. Baltzer, extension dairymen, Michigan State College.

In the discussion presented by Mr. Baltzer, some of the important new developments inside the dairy business were reviewed and the likely effect on Michigan dairymen pointed out.

He said that for a time Michigan dairymen will enjoy ready sales for high quality, healthy and productive appearing cows. These are in demand both for the home market and for distant markets such as the eastern states and even the middle western states.

Comment was also made that dairymen would enjoy a larger return from their dairy enterprise if they depended more largely on home grown feeds. "While the prices for dairy products are better, this improvement will not help much unless the dairymen is utilizing mostly all home grown feeds in order to improve his net dairy income," said Mr. Baltzer.

If the findings of the experiment station, Michigan State College, are followed, dairymen would decrease the costs of their ration greatly by depending more on low cost, high quality alfalfa roughage. Experimental facts unearthed at Michigan State College show the feeding value of this crop and its effect in lessened cost.

These facts were illustrated by means of charts, and reference was made to the results obtained by Michigan dairymen keeping records in a dairy herd improvement association. The speaker pointed out the savings that the investment in a membership in one of the associations can effect for a dairymen.

The cow tester, Mr. Carl Robb, presented his annual report. After the report was made Mr. Baltzer introduced Donald Fisher to the association. Mr. Fisher is formerly from Kent Co. He will act in the capacity of cow tester for the Livingston County Dairy Herd Improvement Association.
