Cold Wave Hits This Section

Last Wednesday Marks Coldest Day of the Winter. Drifted Snow Blocks
Roads and Causes Much Delay.

Although it did not hit 55 below as it did in Minnesota, it was plenty cold here last Wednesday. About 6:00 p. m. the mercury got down to 10 below and this, combined with a biting wind from the north, made it plenty cold. Fortunately it started to warm up during the night and by Thursday morning was considerably warmer. The dailies got considerable kick out of the fact that "Hell Froze Over." This is the Hi-Land Lake summer resort, three miles south of Pinckney. In the old days, the Reeves family operated a distillery, grist mill and saw mill here, at which time the place was known as Hell. The Detroit Free Press, Thursday, published a picture of the frozen dam there under the heading "Hell Has Frozen Over."

A few here got frozen ears and noses, but there was only one casualty. Miss Lucy Hoffmann, who attends school at Pinckney, started to walk to her home 3 miles west of here, near Anderson, after school. She started to get a ride, but traffic was so bad that no one was along. She was stranded for some time, but finally got home by taking the bus.

One Campbell, who works at a Howell factory, started home, but hit a snow drift near Chubb's Corners and had to leave his car there and walk to Pinckney. Fred Reed came along later and also failed to negotiate the drift. Fred did not do any hiking, but stayed at Supervisor Many Hoels's all night. M. J. Reason and Curtis Brown also got stuck in snow drifts and failed to reach home.

George Hornshaw went out Mrs. Eva Clark's to cut wood. He was so busy swinging an axe he did not notice the blizzard. When he went to go home he couldn't find his car as the wind had completely covered it. He tunneled his way to the Clark home, about a mile where he stayed all night. He did not reach home until Saturday morning, as he could not find his car and did not dare leave without it. He shoveled the snow off several likely looking automobiles, but they all proved to be brush piles.

Taken all-in-all, it was some storm and the wise ones were the ones who stayed at home.

WAS WIDELY CIRCULATED

The fact that Hell (Hi-Land Lake) froze over seems to have been generally broadcast. We have received a copy of the Cincinnati Enquirer from Will Devereaux and Steve Giv from Ed. Kearney, in both of which the article on Hell was given a prominent place.

We also received a Berkeley, Cal. paper containing the Hell item. Tuesday the local postoffice received a letter from a stamp collector from Lisbon Falls, Maine. It was addressed to Hell, Mich. and stated he saw the item in the Portland Press-Herald. He wanted a Hell, Mich. postmark. The letter went to the post office and was forwarded here with remark by Postmaster Bird Hight that Pinckney was closer to Hell than Howell.

HELL'S FREEZING, NO GAG WEATHERMAN CONCEDES

W. C. Devereaux, weatherman remarked yesterday that when he read in The Enquirer, Thursday of Hell's being frozen over, he did so more than just a business interest.

The meteorologist was born and reared in Pinckney, Mich., just five miles from the Hi-Land town of Hell, and is a native of Pinckney. Devereaux told how the town came to have that name. Its original name was Highland. In Highland many years ago was Reeves mill, which was not only a flour mill, but a distillery.

Men of the surrounding Livingston County, tradition has it, went on so many spears at Reeves mill that the village was given its unsavory name by temperance groups and the wives and children of the distillery's visitors.

Enquirer, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Bommerito Murder Trial Now On

Thomas Bommerito Is Being Tried
For the Murder of Sam Scali
In Losco on June 30, 1934
Many Witnesses Heard

The jury went out Tuesday night and rendered a first degree murder verdict Wednesday morning. Bommerito was given life in Jackson. Wm. Dilloway was foreman of the jury.

The Bommerito murder trial got underway at Howell last Tuesday. Last December 14 jurymen and women were picked for this trial. Then it was postponed when Irene Parmenter, an important witness had an appendicitis operation. Monday, a number of this jury were excused and jurors to replace them drawn from the regular panel. The original jury were all from a special panel. The jury trying the case is composed of Wm. Dilloway, Putnam, Dan Love, Tyrone, Beatrice Leitz, Brighton, Allie Clements, Brighton Twp.; Eva Bessert, Handy; Mae Daily, Conway; Jay Brigham, Marion; Chas. Wehner, Hamburg; Rinhalt Smith, Brighton; H. Hiner, Conway; Ed. Heinrich, Henry Semmers, and Herman Rich. Martin Lavan is defending Bommerito, and Prosecutor Bertram and Assistant Attorney General Tappan are handling the prosecution.

The prosecution charges that Thomas Bommerito lured Sam Scali to the empty house on the Percy Carson farm in Losco on June 30, 1934; shot him several times and left him in the cellar of the house to die without food or water. Scali was not found until July 3. The prosecution placed Thomas Gaffney and his daughter and several others who found Scali on the stand. Also Deputies Kennedy and Bassett, who took Scali to the McPherson Hospital. Jay Seeneey, at that time was Prosecutor, and took a statement from Scali naming Bommerito as his assailant. Scali was removed to the Detroit Receiving Hospital and died there on July 18 from his wounds. Mrs. Salmon, who took the X-ray pictures of Scali and several doctors and nurses from the Detroit hospital also testified. Other state witnesses were Tony Scali, a cousin of the victim, who recovered the car and testified there was no blood on it. Leon Gaffney and Mrs. Dunsmore, Losco residents, who saw the car parked near the deserted house and Sergeant Lisle of the Detroit police who arrested Bommerito in September, 1935, when the latter was living at the Royal Apts., under the name of Charles Harris. Leroy Smith, Detroit firearms expert, who examined the bullet taken from Scali, and other members of the police force who testified that both Scali and Bommerito had police records.

Thursday was mostly taken up by the testimony of Mrs. Irene Parmenter. She testified that she lived for nine years with Scali as his common-law wife. She visited him at the Detroit hospital before he died, where he named Bommerito as his slayer. The defense sought to discredit her testimony by putting Sergeant Booth, of the Detroit police on the stand. He testified that he had twice arrested Mrs. Parmenter under the name of Rosemary Bates for prostitution.

Others who testified that Scali named Bommerito as his slayer were Deputy I. J. Kennedy, Ahmed Shukry, Mrs. Mary Cowan and her sister, Miss Esther Wright. The latter testified that she expected to marry Scali. The defense attempted to prove an alibi by Detroit witnesses. Frank Hogan, clerk at the Monroe Hotel, testified he, his common-law wife and another man went on a fishing trip with Bommerito on the afternoon of June 30, returning at 11:00 p. m. He admitted on examination that he had been arrested several times and served a term for larceny. Mary Scutari, a graduate of the State Normal and ex-school teacher, now a clerk at the Monroe Hotel, also testified to the fishing trip. She rented a room to Bommerito on January, 1934. He was working at the Briggs Body Co. The following July he checked out. On the night of July 1, after the murder he was visited by both Esther Wright and Irene Parmenter after 11:00 p. m., but at different times. Miss Scutari remembered this as it was a house rule at the hotel not to allow the roomers to entertain women in their rooms after midnight.

Louis Parmenter, owner of an apartment house, testified that he rented an apartment to Rosemary Bates for a massage parlor. That she had trouble with Grover Hall, a handbook operator, who lived in the building. Hall was put out of business by the police. He laid his down fall to Miss Bates and had her raised twice. Later Parmenter divorced his wife, giving her a house and lot on Maryland Avenue and $1,500 in cash and married Miss Bates, who is now known as Irene Parmenter. He stated he married her in Redford, but did not recall the name or denomination of the minister who married him. Parmenter denied that he made a practice of renting apartments to street women.

The jury is not locked up as is generally the case with murder juries. They are permitted to go home each night and out to lunch alone at noon, but are not supposed to discuss the case.

How the Bonus Will Be Spent

Most of It Will Go to Pay Off
Household Debts, Belief.

The American Legion, Thursday presented its picture of where the veterans' bonus dollar will go—a picture showing that virtually every phase of business and industry will react to the trickle of fresh coins in the cash register.

The picture was based on a questionnaire answered by some 42,000 ex-service men and was predicted on full cash payment of the bonus. The baby bond feature of the present bill will reduce expenditures by about $500,000,000, or 14 percent the Legion estimated. This sum should be deducted from each of the totals presented, the Legion said.

If all the certificates were cashed, the veterans' organization believed, veterans would receive $1,985,391,182 or about $565.17 apiece. Congressional sources have estimated the entire bonus cost to the government at around $2,237,000,112.

Here's how the veterans say they will spend their money:

To pay old bills and debts	$623,615,793
On homes	643,445,000
Clothing	139,893,000
Automobiles and accessories	128,581,000
Farm implements	48,821,038
Investments	154,993,000
Insurance	67,239,000
Education	17,855,000
Savings Accounts	88,884,000
Miscellaneous	79,931,312

The average veteran, the Legion revealed, will put a bigger share of his money into paying off the butcher, the baker, the physician, and the dentist, than any other single item.

THE AL SMITH SPEECH

Well, Al Smith made his speech against the New Deal at a banquet at which the Duponts, Raskobs and Shoues were prominent with the rest of the Wall Street crowd. This bunch applauded him so often that there was danger that he would not be able to finish his speech. The theme of his speech seems to have been that "You can't injure capital without hurting labor."

There is no doubt that many of the Conservative Republicans of the east would be glad to have him for their presidential candidate and that the vice-presidency would be his for the asking. They figure that such a ticket as Landon and Smith would be unbeatable. This is borne out by the following from the Saturday Evening Post, the mouthpiece of big business.

It may be treason, but I see no reason why the Republican Party should not pick its candidate without reference to his past political affiliations. It took Mr. Hoover a long time to discover whether he was a Democrat or a Republican. If a conservative Democrat whose party has left him fits our principles and platform, why not take him? There is nothing quite like the zeal of a new convert.

However, Al Smith seems to have killed this opportunity when he stated that he expected to live and die a Democrat.

Rev. Fr. Coughlin in his broadcast

Sunday referred to Smith as the mouthpiece of big business.

Current Comment

One is forced to marvel at the space and publicity given to the death of King George of England last week. Undoubtedly he received more newspaper space at the time of his death than he did during his entire lifetime. His death was not especially momentous as his functions were chiefly ornamental, the entire governing power of Great Britain being vested in the Prime Minister, House of Commons and the House of Lords. The late king seldom got the front page during his lifetime, being quiet and unassuming. On the other hand, the present king got plenty of it and probably had more pictures taken of himself, falling off his horse than any other person in existence. We once asked a British subject why they considered it necessary to maintain a king and royal family at great expense, when they had nothing to do with governing the country. His reply was: "England has always had a king." This is the whole answer for tradition maintains the king of England.

Judge Homer Ferguson in Wayne county, ruled last week that a justice of peace has no power to levy fines for contempt of court. Justice Lila Neufeldt, Dearborn's famous woman justice fined a policeman for contempt in her court. He appealed, and this is the result. This means the justices will have to go back to the old method of going out into the alley and taking off their coats when their feelings are ruffled.

Michigan educators are fighting to take the department of education out of politics. A committee is drawing up a constitutional amendment to provide for an enlarged non-partisan state board of education, who would choose the superintendent of public instruction. This will be submitted to the voters in the November election. The present board is composed of 4 members. The amendment would call for 6 to be chosen at a non-partisan election. 125,000 signatures must be obtained to the petition before the end of June. It is claimed Gov. Fitzgerald will endorse the project. At the present time the superintendent of public instruction is elected and his appointments are part of the patronage handed out to political workers. This keeps affairs in this department in a turmoil and hinders the work to be done. This amendment should go over big.

Congressman Carl Mapes must be an ornery cuss. He was the only Michigan congressman to vote against the bonus. All sixteen other Michigan congressmen voted for it. When Senator C. C. Cox and Vandenberg voted against it. These gentlemen must have the courage of their convictions, or else they do not like the bonus, an important campaign issue next fall.

For a great many years Michigan has been in the "red" in December. The climax of misfortune was reached on December 31, 1933, when the general fund on that date faced a deficit of $13,628,555.87. On December 31, 1935, the general fund of the state showed a balance of $5,086,707.47. The change has come about through the imposition of a sales tax which the people paid as well as the enforcement of the most rigid economy on the part of the state administration.

The above is from a press sheet sent out by T. H. Johnson of Rockford, Mich., boosting the present state administration. It however, only tells half the truth. Strict economy had little to do with getting the State of Michigan out of the red as there are more people on the state payroll now than ever before, and the state payroll is $2,000,000 higher in 1935 than in 1934. There were three things which combined, enabled the state to show a profit. They are the sales tax, the liquor commission profits and the tax advertising campaign. The liquor profits to the state alone, were over $4,000,000 last year. The sales tax and liquor taxes were Democratic laws. The delinquent tax campaign was Gov. Fitzgerald's. Yet strange as it may seem, these two had much to do with Gov. Comstock's defeat. The sales tax, known as the "money for Comstock law" made him very unpopular and the liquor commission plan got him the hatred of the dry forces. Yet both have combined to put the State of Michigan on its feet, notwithstanding a two million dollar increase in the state payroll.

The Lansing State Journal points out another peculiarity in the Literary Digest straw vote on the New Deal. It says that 58 percent more people cast their votes this year than in the straw vote taken in 1934. This they claim, shows that the anti-new dealers are out for blood this time, while two years ago they failed to vote.

Dr. Townsend, the old-age pension exponent is said to have given up his idea of forming a third party and will work from within the two old parties, in both of which he has supporters. Now he will throw his strength to whichever candidate favors his aim. His congressional supporters for the most part are politicians, and knowing that the launching of a third party at this time would be suicide and mean the end of the old party.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason why her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, must be carefully regulated as to dosage.

A liquid laxative is the answer. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—Through some months past, Cordell Hull, secretary of state, has been proceeding cautiously and quietly in the negotiation of trade agreements with foreign nations. His work has attracted comparatively little public attention although throughout the negotiations individual economic interests who stood to gain or lose depending upon their lines of business have made known their feelings quite emphatically. Six of these trade agreements, now called trade treaties, had been consummated in this manner. When the seventh agreement came along, however, the story was different. That was the treaty with our northern neighbor, Canada.

It is impossible here to set forth the list of commercial products encompassed in the new trade agreement with Canada. I doubt if most of the people of this country ever will know details of that treaty. By the nature of things, few persons can be interested in all of the items. But, I do not believe that it is the question of individual interest in the entire list that ought to concern us. Aside from the policy involved in the negotiation and agreement on tariff concessions, the importance of the Canadian treaty to the average individual lies in the one or two, or half a dozen at most, items that affect each one personally.

I do not mean to say that the policy involved is unimportant. The contrary is decidedly true. From a political standpoint, of course, it is general policy that will be debated; from an individual standpoint it will be the direct effect that execution of that policy has on each of us that will determine our ultimate views and to that extent determine whether we will be for or against the general policy of reducing tariffs enacted against certain kinds of imports.

The new agreement with Canada takes effect January 1—provided the Canadian parliament ratifies it. No such ratification is necessary in this country.

The treaty was negotiated by Mr. Hull and President Roosevelt under the authority granted by congress in legislation passed a year ago which gave to the President the privilege of working out trade treaties without further congressional sanction. That law restricted the President in only one way, namely, the requirement that an increase or reduction of tariff rates included in those trade treaties may not exceed 50 per cent of the rate fixed in the present tariff laws. So it is seen that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull had virtually complete authority. It will operate for three years and, as far as I have been able to discover, it will be effective after Canadian ratification and there will be nothing anybody can do about it, be it good or bad.

In making public the agreement negotiated by Mr. Hull with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, the President asserted his belief that the agreement will initiate or revive a flow of commerce back and forth across our northern frontier in a manner that will be most helpful. He considered that the agreement would mean additional markets for some of our products and therefore additional work for some of our unemployed. The Canadian prime minister was of the opinion that in this agreement a long step had been taken toward healing a breach that has existed between the two countries for 69 years. He was hopeful, like President Roosevelt, that the channels of trade again will be filled, perhaps not to the levels of the boom days of 1929 and 1929, but would again carry satisfactory volume.

It will be recalled that our shipments to Canada in 1930 amounted to about $900,000,000. The depression cut those shipments to approximately $300,000,000 last year. So, if the predictions of the President and Mr. Mackenzie King are in any way fulfilled, a considerable traffic is due to begin upon the operation of this new treaty.

Any discussion of the treaty, however, that failed to call attention to basic conditions, in my opinion, would be short of its goal. So, it seems to me that while the President and the Canadian prime minister hold such high hope for trade revival, one ought not forget that trade will not flow if no market, no demand, exists for the goods. It may well be that by reducing the tariff duties that must be paid at the frontier on goods enumerated in the treaty that a reduction in prices will follow. It may then follow that the consequent reduction in prices will stir up a demand for the products. But that is not certain.

Now from the political standpoint, examination of the treaty must take into consideration individual items. And how those individual items affect communities and economic interests in this country. Already, we here in Washington have been deluged with the complaints of certain communities against provisions of the treaty. Likewise, we have heard those provisions praised from other sections. Thus, from the political standpoint we see developing a fine old fight over the tariff.

Tariff questions are and always have been sectional questions. Industrial communities want to be protected against inroads of foreign competition where labor is cheaper. Agriculture wants to be protected against imports from bountiful producing lands in those countries where vast open spaces and high productivity exist at the minimum of cost. Importers and consumers of imported products always have fought and always will fight to have low tariff rates so that the things they buy may enter this country at the lowest possible price. With reference to the Canadian treaty, these same conditions exist.

Early outbursts indicate that cattle raising communities and dairy producing sections are up in arms because the treaty reduced a tariff protection accorded against imports of cattle and cattle products and the products of the dairy.

Lumber interests are upset. It is true that the lumber market in the United States has been in the doldrums for several years and naturally the lumber people do not want to have Canadian shipments absorb what little market they have.

These are just a few of the complaints. They are offset partially at least by the praise and the hopes of some other phases of agriculture such as fruit and vegetable growers who feel that they can now market their products in Canada. Without even a careful analysis of the more than seven hundred items involved in the treaty, it is to be seen that there will be possible markets available after January 1 to a number of agricultural lines and to some industrial interests. Yet it remains, as I said earlier, for the passage of time to disclose exactly whether the net result will be favorable to us commercially or whether the Canadians have put over a fine bargain from their standpoint.

All of the discussion about the Canadian treaty, however, brings back memory. As a result of these recollections, I dug back the other day into the congressional debates of 1911 when a Canadian reciprocity agreement, as under consideration, backed by the late William Howard Taft. After reading those debates, particularly the observations of the late and distinguished Champ Clark of Missouri and Representative George Norris, now a senator from Nebraska, I could not fail to realize the political dynamite embodied in the new course of international trade relations adopted by President Roosevelt. It was the Canadian reciprocity proposal that defeated Mr. Taft for re-election to the Presidency. It was, indeed, that controversy that caused the organization of the Bull Moose party and that sent Mr. Taft into political oblivion.

I am not predicting here that the same consequences are in store for President Roosevelt but it is fair to recall, it seems to me, that the reciprocity proposal of 1911 burned the fingers of every political leader who touched it. The cases are not exactly comparable nor analogous. Mr. Roosevelt has retained a number of tariff duties which were swept aside in the proposed Taft reciprocity arrangement. He is therefore fortified to that extent. But you may be sure that those who sponsor the present Canadian agreement are going to meet the same sort of fight that was made against the Taft proposal.

Then there is in the current treaty circumstance another factor to be considered. It links back to the Champ Clark observations which were made on February 14, 1911. At that time, Mr. Clark was expressing the view that the reciprocity agreement constituted a step at least in the direction of universal peace. In the debate just mentioned, Mr. Norris asked Mr. Clark to elaborate on his view concerning the value of the agreement as an instrument of peace.

"I wanted to ask the gentleman a question along the line of universal peace," said Mr. Norris. "As I understand it, the gentleman favors the bill for at least one reason—that it will have a tendency to bring Canada into the Union."

"Yes," Mr. Clark replied. "I have no doubt about that. I do not have any doubt whatever that day is not far distant when Great Britain will joyfully see all of her North American possessions become a part of this republic. That is the way things are now tending."

So, if the controversy over the present Canadian tariff agreement becomes violent, I think it is fair to expect that again we will hear the question discussed whether the United States is seeking to annex Canada—to make Canada part and parcel of the United States. Of course, as far as anyone can see today, annexation of Canada is inconceivable but the incident is related here simply to show how far-reaching such controversies may be come.

Designers in a Mood for Pleating

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLEATS, pleats and nothing but pleats, is the message of many of the smartest fashions this season. Turn where one will in the realm of costume design, there's an orgy of intriguing pleated effects "carrying on." So let's keep up with the mode while we talk about pleats, pleated and being pleated.

French designers, especially, are not leaving anything unpleated that could, should and must be pleated according to their idea of things. Their pleated mood pertains to daytime fashions as well as those of highest evening formality. The all-over pleated gown reflecting Grecian inspiration is a highlight in evening modes. Evening capes to go with these lovely creations are also completely pleated in waistline or longer lengths. In daytime fashions the all-over pleated dress, has also been received with acclaim.

However, all-over pleating is only one phase of the subject, for the use of "pleats" is embracing every sort from the tiniest of sprightly pleated edgings which run hither and thither about hemlines and up and down, flanking each side of neat buttoned closings, which sometimes extend from head to foot. Some designers there are who make a feature of pleated tiers and apron fronts and pleated sleeves.

The new fabrics are entering into the pleated conspiracy with a noble gesture. Most of them seem made just to be pleated—fairly invite one to pleat them. Take the all-silk black-crepe which is so ultra smart for daytime dresses. It pleats to perfection. A statement that does not need a second telling after one glimpses the stunning gown in the center of the illustration. Pleated every inch of the way is this black silk crepe afternoon dress. The pleats are stitched down at the neck, shoulders and waist, giving a fitted well-groomed appearance to the frock. A green clasp at the throat and a suede belt in the same color provide bright contrast. This dress is the much talked-of Molyneux which is meeting with such outstanding success this season.

An effective treatment of wider pleats in a black silk crepe dress for the young girl, is pictured to the left. The pleats are stitched with tailored precision about the neckline and released half way down the skirt so as to slenderize at the same time that it provides a flared hemline. The bodice is a modified shirtwaist with tiny metal buttons in front.

Speaking of the new materials adapting themselves so readily to the pleating mode, the new silk lame weaves, many of which are sheer and tissue-like in texture, enter into the scheme of things with infinite grace. If you are wanting a lovely gown for prom gayety, here it is at the right in the group pictured. Shirtings and pleats go fifty-fifty in the instance of this ultra chic and adorable evening dress made of silver silk lame. The shirred top is held by narrow double straps, and the décolletage is outlined by a tiny band of pleats. The pleated theme continues in the skirt, held well in place by the crispness of the silk-lame. The only trimming is the metal and jeweler buckle of the belt.

Among the pleated triumphs in evening fashions are the perfectly charming airy-fairy floating visions of silk chiffon, most lovely, perhaps, in white but which set your heart throbbing at faster pace in any of the new jewel colors or pastel shades. Sometimes only the skirt is pleated, but when it is, it's done so artfully it flutters out like a floating cloud or a mist enveloping the figure.

WEAR TO SCHOOL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Is the "what to give for Christmas" problem beginning to disturb your peace of mind? If it's Junior or little sister you have in mind, the answer will be found in the picture. To become the happy possessor of a pig-grain three-quarter length coat just like big brother's is enough to bring a big smile to any little boy. Little girls have a liking for leather coats, too, for no doubt they have heard their elders declare that leather's the thing for smart sports wear.

FUR CAPES RICHER; OF MANY VARIETIES

Fur capes are richer than they have been in years. Full-length evening models are made of strips of silver fox running from shoulder to hem—one very elegant one boasting twenty full-sized animal skins. Knee-length day capes are fashioned of mink, silver fox, dyed red fox or moleskin, while any number of shorter capes appear in astrakhan, nutria or broadtail.

Occasionally the fur capes for day wear are cut with broad shoulders and little fullness below so that they hang straight, though more often they have some flare.

New Soft Wool Weaves Are

Proving Popular Just Now

With wool increasing in fashion importance, and women's insistence on being comfortable indoors as well as out, something pretty definite has been done in this year's weaves for the interests of all concerned.

This year's domestic weaves are as soft as chiffon, warm enough for all normal purposes, and have taken on an additional silky finish, adding to wearing enjoyment.

Colors have never been more flattering. That day has gone when winter means somber tones, and the "little wool frock" to wear underneath the tweed coat or the fur sport coat may be as gay and colorful as one's temperament demands.

Whiter Blouses

White silk blouses should never be hung out to dry as it will yellow them. Wrap them in towels until ironing. If they become yellowed in spite of your precaution, use a little whitening in the rinse water.

Sharp Contrast

Paris is wearing black afternoon frocks with billowy white sleeves—a style becoming to many women.

"QUOTES"

COMMENTS ON CURRENT TOPICS BY NATIONAL CHARACTERS

Opinions expressed in the paragraphs below are not necessarily concurred in by the editor of this newspaper.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY

By CORDELL HULL, Secretary of State.

OUR policy as a member of the community of nations should be twofold—first, to avoid being brought into a war and, second, to promote as far as possible the interests of international peace and good-will. A virile policy tempered with prudent caution is necessary if we are to retain the respect of other nations and at the same time hold our position of influence for peace and international stability in the family of nations.

In summary, while our primary aim should be to avoid involvement in other people's difficulties and hence to lessen our chances of being drawn into a war, we should, on appropriate occasions, use our influence toward the prevention of war and the miseries that attend and follow in its wake. For, after all, if peace obtains, problems regarding neutrality will not arise.

QUALIFIED NEUTRALITY

By BERNARD M. BARUCH, Former Chairman of War Industries Board.

I AM sufficiently crass to say that if cotton is to be sold to a country from which it may find its way into the hands of a belligerent, then America should have the right to sell that cotton unless and until every other country agrees to withhold its supply.

Look at other countries who are selling or who have sold munitions and other supplies to both Italy and Ethiopia. Why should we continue to be the great international Fat Boy, at whose stick of candy other nations take an unwelcome bite?

Not Profitable

Perhaps the chief advantage of having much money is that you can say what you please. Yet most millionaires don't.

WHY MILLIONS CARRY TUMS!

MILLIONS now know the smart thing is to carry a roll of Tums, always. Heartburn, gas, and other symptoms of acid indigestion have a habit of occurring at unexpected times. You don't have to crunch your stomach with harsh alkalies which physicians have long warned may make the tendency toward acid indigestion worse. can be likened to hen's teeth—there just ain't no such animal. With continuous zero or near zero weather, smashing many previous records, people are content to remain close by their own fire—unless necessity calls them elsewhere. Stalled cars and trucks, frost-bitten feet, hands, noses and ears are no longer news, but common occurrences. Spring may be just around the corner, but I think we'll travel many a mile before we reach the corner.

THE OLD MASTER COMES OUT OF THE KITCHEN

to Remark "George Rector speaking. Today I want to explode some popular ideas about cooking . . . such as the belief that Crepe Suzettes can be properly made only in Paris, and that American apple pie is no good anywhere outside of a New England breakfast, and that steak not broiled over charcoal has been shamefully mistreated. * * * That charcoal broiling business, now . . . there's a pretty bit of nonsense!

"I know some good and honest and estimable citizens who swear by charcoal broiling. When it comes to steaks, they will have no traffic with the ordinary way of fixing them. This select little group will turn up their collective and respective noses at any piece of meat broiled in the common manner. And that state of affairs is too bad. Yes it is!

"Give me an electric cook stove, a good thick juicy Porterhouse, and all the trimmings, and I will guarantee you as succulent and tender and deliciously-flavored a platterful of steak as you have ever tasted in your born days. What is more,
I would like to invite all these particularly fussy gentlemen to dinner, and let them judge for themselves about the cooking."

TREE AND SHRUB SEEDS COLLECTED BY CCC MEN

Nearly 2,000 quarts of seed from native trees and shrubs have been collected by CCC men from various camps in northern Michigan for planting in the new hardwood nursery under construction for the Department of Conservation near Waverly.

The seeds were taken from mountain ash, basswood, black cherry, black plum, hawthorne, june-berry, sumac, dogwood, chokeberry and winterberry trees and shrubs.

Young trees and shrubs to be grown from this seed will be used by the Department for wildlife cover and food on state-owned lands. The seed will be planted in the nursery this spring.

EGG GRADING LAW

Michigan has ceased to be the dumping ground for poor eggs shipped here from other states, Commissioner of Agriculture, James F. Thomson announced today.

More than 500 dozen ungraded eggs from other states have been held up at the state border since Michigan egg grading regulations went into effect January 1, the Commissioner said.

Surrounding states have strict grading regulations for eggs, and prior to now have been dumping off-grade eggs into Michigan.

Commissioner Thomson meanwhile is conducting an intensive egg grading educational campaign and hopes to have the industry in line for strict enforcement of the new rules by July 1.

"We hope to start a strict enforcement campaign within a few months after egg handlers and shippers are familiar with the regulations and have adjusted themselves to them," Thomson said.

The egg regulations call for grading as to quality only. Four grades are provided for, "Fancy" and Grades "A", "B" and "C." The Indiana and Ohio borders are being closely watched by department of agriculture field men in an effort to prevent shipment into the state of ungraded eggs. No prosecutions have been started by the department as yet but dealers who handle out-of-state eggs that are not graded are being warned to cease this practice.

BIRD FEEDING STATIONS

Although there has been to date an abundance of food sources above the snowline, ground feeding birds throughout the southern half of the lower peninsula may face a food shortage this winter if existing weather conditions continue or grow worse.

The ground in many places has been covered by ice and crusted snow forcing ground feeding birds to seek seeds on plants standing above the snowline.

Fortunately, the rainy season of 1935 produced an abundance of such weeds. When these are exhausted pheasants and quail may be hard-pressed for food.

By establishing feeding stations now, sportsmen and bird students may be able to help many game birds to survive the winter.

SYNOPSIS

The youthful and comely "Widder" Marcia Howe has as her guest her late husband's niece, Sylvia Hayden. A stranger, exhausted, finds his way to Marcia's home. He asks her to hide a package containing jewelry. She does so. Elisha Winslow, town sheriff, brings news of a jewel robbery nearby. The stranger gives his name as Stanley Heath. Sylvia discovers the jewelry and naturally believes Heath is a robber, but decides to say nothing. Marcia feels she has too deep an interest in her guest, but is powerless to overcome it. Heath wires "Mrs. S. C. Heath," New York, saying he is safe. He also orders a man named Currier to come at once. Sylvia, in her room, bedecked herself with the jewels. At Marcia's approach she hides them there. Heath asks Marcia to bring them to him. They are gone! Sylvia restores the jewels to their original hiding place. Elisha Winslow discovers them and has no doubt they are the stolen gems, and Heath is a thief. Leaving the jewels, he makes plans for arresting Heath. Currier arrives. Marcia overhears Heath describe how he acquired the gems, and is forced to believe him guilty of theft. Currier investigates his hiding place and finds the gems! He returns to New York with them, but his references to "Mrs. Heath" have convinced Marcia her tender dream has been a foolish one. Elisha and Eleanor come to arrest Heath. The jewels, of course, are not to be found. To Sylvia Marcia admits she loves Heath and has faith in his innocence. She tells him she believes him innocent, but urges him, if he is guilty, to confess. He admits nothing, but compels her to confess she loves him, also telling her he is giving himself up to the sheriff. She insists this must be the end of their association, and he, thinking she will not face the "disgrace," reproaches and leaves her.

Then she swayed, caught at a chair and shrank into it, her body shaking and her breath coming in gasping, hysterical sobs.

The clock ticked on the surf broke in muffled undertone, the light faded; the candles burned lower, flickered and overflowed the old pewter candle sticks; and still she sat there, her tearless, dilated eyes fixed straight before her.

Having no inkling of a change in the delightful relations that had for the past week prevailed in the Homestead, the atmosphere that greeted Sylvia when she came down the next morning was a shock.

Stanley Heath stood at the telephone talking to Elisha Winslow and on the porch outside were grouped his suitcase, overcoat and traveling rug. He was plainly ill at ease and had little except the most commonplace remarks to offer in way of conversation.

Marcia had not slept, as her pallor and the violet shadows beneath her eyes attested.

Although the girl did not understand, she sensed Marcia's need of her and rushed valiantly into the breach—filling every awkward pause with her customary sparkling chatter.

When at length the meal was cut short by the arrival of Elisha Winslow, all three of the group rose with unconcealed relief.

"Wal, Mr. Heath, I see you're expectin' me," grinned the sheriff, pointing toward the luggage beside the door.

"I am, Mr. Winslow."

"I've got my boat. Are you ready to come right along?"

"Quite ready."

Heath went to Sylvia and took her hand.

"Thank you very much," murmured he formally, "for all you've done for me. I appreciate it more than I can say. And you, too, Mrs. Howe."

"I wish you luck, Mr. Heath," called Sylvia.

"Thanks."

"And I, too," Marcia rejoined in a voice scarcely audible.

To this the man offered no reply. They followed him to the door.

It was then that Marcia sprang forward and caught Elisha's arm.

"Where are you taking him, Elisha?" she demanded, a catch in her voice.

"Remember, Mr. Heath has been ill. You must not risk his getting cold or suffering any discomfort."

"You need have no worries on that score, Marcia," replied the sheriff kindly, noticing the distress in her face. "I'll look out for him."

"Where is he going?"

"To my house for the present," Elisha answered. "I've a comfortable spare room an' I figger to put him in it. 'Til I've questioned him an' verified his story."

"Meantime, nobody in town will be the wiser. I ain't even tellin' May Ellen why Mr. Heath's at the house. If I choose to harbor comp'ny, that's my business. Not a soul 'cept Eleanor's in on this affair an' he's keepin' mum. When him an' me decide we've got the truth, we'll act—not before."

"That relieves my mind very much. Mr. Heath is—you see he—"

"He's a frier l of yours—I ain't forgettin' that. I s all treat him 'cord'ly, Marcia."

"Thank you, Elisha—thank you a hundred times."

There was nothing more to be said. Heath bowed once again and the two men walked down to the boat where they clambered with the luggage into Elisha's dory and put out into the channel.

Sylvia loitered to wave her hand and watch them row away, but Marcia, as if unable to bear the sight, waited for no further farewell.

But by noon she was, to outward appearances, entirely herself. She had not been able, to be sure, to banish her pallor or the traces of sleeplessness; but she had her emotions sufficiently under control to talk pleasantly, if not gaily.

That day and the next passed in much the same strained fashion.

It was not until the third morning that the barriers between the two collapsed.

Marcia had gone into the living room to write a letter. She sat down before the desk and started to take up her pen when Sylvia heard her utter a cry.

"What's the matter, dear?" called the girl, hurrying into the other room.

As Sylvia came nearer, Marcia bowed her head upon the desk and began to sob as if her heart would break.

"Oh, how could he!" moaned the woman. "How could he be so cruel!"

"What has happened, Marcia?"

"Stanley—he has left a check—money—thrown it in my face! And I did it so gladly—because I loved him. He knew that. Yet he could leave this—pay me—as if I were a common servant. I had rather he struck me—a hundred times rather."

The girl took the check.

It was filled out in Stanley Heath's clear, strong hand and was for the sum of a hundred dollars.

"How detestable of him!" she exclaimed. "Tell me, Marcia—what happened between you and Mr. Heath? You quarreled—of course I know that. But why—why? I have not wanted to ask, but now—"

"I'll tell you everything, Sylvia. I'd rather you knew. I thought at first I could keep it to myself, but I cannot. I need you to help me, dear."

Marcia unfolded the story of her blind faith in Stanley Heath; her love for him—a love she could neither resist nor control—a love she had known from the first to be hopeless. She confessed how she had struggled to conceal her feelings; how he himself had resisted a similar attraction in her; how at last he had discovered her secret and forced her to betray it.

"Of course I realized we could not go on," she explained bravely. "That we loved one another was calamity enough. All that remained was for him to go away and forget me—return to his wife, his home, and his former life. Soon, if he honestly tries, this infatuation will pass and everything will be as before. Men forget more easily than women. Absence, too, will help."

"And you, Marcia?"

"I cannot give up my love. It is all I have now. Oh, I do not mean to mourn over it; pity myself, make life unhappy. Instead, I shall be glad, thankful. You will see. This experience will make every day of living richer. You need have no fears for me, Sylvia. You warned me, you know," concluded she with a pathetic little smile.

"I was a brute! I ought to have shielded you more," the girl cried. "I could have, had I realized. Well, I can yet do something, thank heaven. Give me that check."

"What do you mean to do?"

"Return it, of course—return it before Stanley Heath leaves town. I'll take it over to Elisha Winslow's now, this minute."

"I wonder—yes, probably that will be best. You won't, I suppose, be allowed to see Stanley," speculated she timidly. "If you should—"

"Well?"

"Don't say anything harsh, Sylvia. Please do not blame him, or—"

"I'll wring his neck!" was the emphatic retort.

"Oh, please—please dear—for my sake! I can't let you go if you go in that spirit," pleaded Marcia in alarm.

"There, there—you need not worry for fear I shall maltreat your Romeo, richly as he deserves it," was the response. "I could kill him—but I won't—because of you. Nevertheless, I warn you that if I get the chance I shall tell him what I think of him. He is terribly to blame and ought to realize it. No married man has any business playing round with another woman."

"I am half afraid to let you go, Sylvia."

"You don't trust me? Don't you believe I love you?"

"I am afraid you love me too much, dear."

"I do love you, Marcia. I never dreamed I could care so intensely for anyone I have known for so short a time. What you did for my mother alone would make me love you. But aside from gratitude there are other reasons. I love you for your own splendid self, dear. Please do not fear to trust me. I promise you I will neither be unjust nor bitter."

"Take the check then and go. I wish I were to see him."

"Well, you're not! Let him do the explaining and apologizing. Let him grovel at your feet. That's what he ought to do!"

"You won't tell him that?"

"I don't know what I shall tell him."

"Please Sylvia! You promised, remember."

"Don't fret. Some of the mad will be taken out of me before I see Mr. Heath. Kiss me and wish me luck, Marcia. You do believe I will try to be wise, don't you?"

"Yes, dear. Yes!"

"That's right. You really can trust me, you know. I'm not so bad as I sound."

Tucking the check into the wee pocket of her sweater, Sylvia caught up her pet beret and perched it upon her curls.

"So long!" she called, looking back over her shoulder as she opened the door. "So long, Marcia! I'll be back as soon as ever I can."

The haste with which she disappeared, suddenly precipitated her into the arms of a young man who stood upon the steps preparing to knock.

"Hortie Fuller," cried Sylvia breathlessly. "Hortie! Where on earth did you come from?"

Her arms closed about his neck and he had kissed her twice before she swiftly withdrew, rearranging her curls and saying coldly:

"I cannot imagine what brought you here, Horatio."

CHAPTER XI

"I can't imagine," repeated Sylvia, still very rosy and flustered, but with her most magnificent air, "what brought you to Wilton—I really cannot."

"Can't you?" grinned Horatio cheerfully.

"No, I cannot."

From his superior height of six feet-two, he looked down at her meager five feet, amusement twinkling in his eyes.

Sylvia, however, was too intent on patting her curls into place to heed his glance.

"You wrote me to come, didn't you?" he presently inquired.

"I wrote you to come!"

"Well, at least you led me to suppose you'd like it if I were here," persisted Horatio. "Toward the bottom of page two you said: 'I am positively homesick'; and in the middle of the back of page three you wrote: 'It seems years since I've seen you.'"

"What if I did?" answered the girl with a disdainful shrug.

Nevertheless the dimples showed in her cheeks.

"And that isn't all," Horatio went on. "At the end of page five you wrote: 'Would that you were here!'"

Sylvia bit her lip.

"That was only a figure of speech—what is called poetic license."

"Then you didn't mean it when you said you wished I was here."

Horatio was obviously disappointed.

"Why, of course I am pleased to see you, Horatio. It is very nice of you to come to the Cape to meet my aunt and—"

"Darn your aunt!" he scowled. "I didn't come to see her. I am not interested in aunts."

"Take care! I happen to be very keen on this aunt of mine. If she didn't like you, you might get sent home. Don't be horrid, Hortie. I truly am glad you've come. You must make allowance for my being surprised. I haven't got over it yet. How in the world did you contrive to get away at this season? And what sort of a trip did you have?"

"Swell! I stopped overnight in New York at the Gardeners. Mother wanted me to deliver a birthday cake to Estelle, who, you may remember, is the mother's god-daughter. She's a pipkin, too. I hadn't seen her since she graduated from Vassar."

Sylvia listened.

She did not need to be told about the Gardeners.

They had visited Horatio's family more than once and rumor had it the elders of both families would be delighted were the young people to make a match of it.

"I'm surprised you did—not stay longer in New York," Sylvia observed, gazing reflectively at her white shoe.

"New York wasn't my objective. I came on business, you see. Dad gave me two months off so I could get married."

Sylvia jumped.

"I was not aware you were engaged," murmured she in a formal, far-away tone.

"I'm not," came frankly from Horatio Junior. "But I'm going to be. In fact I chance to have the ring with me this minute. Want to see it?"

"I always enjoy looking at jewels," was her cautious retort.

Horatio felt of his pockets.

"Where on earth did I put that thing?" he muttered. "Hope I haven't lost it. Oh, here it is."

He took out a tiny velvet case and sprang the catch.

"Oh, Hortie! Isn't it beautiful!" Sylvia cried. "It fairly takes away my breath."

"Try it on."

She shook her head.

"It wouldn't fit me. My hands are too small."

"It's a small ring. Here. Put it on," he urged, holding it toward her.

"Well, I suppose I might try it to please you. But I know it will be too large."

She slipped it on her finger.

"Why, it does fit. How odd!"

"Very odd indeed," he answered drily, as she reached her hand out into the sun and turned the diamonds so that they caught the light.

"Looks rather well on, doesn't it?" was his comment.

"It is a beautiful ring."

Horatio, standing behind her, twice extended his arms as if to gather her into them and twice withdrew them, deciding the action to be premature.

At length with a determined squaring of his shoulders, he locked his hands behind him and stood looking on while she continued to twist the ring this way and that.

"Well," yawned he after an interval, "I suppose I may as well put it back in the box."

HAVE UTILITY APRON FOR WORK—BERUFFLED ONE FOR HOSTESSING

PATTERN 2370

Those utility aprons (of which EVERY Good Housekeeper needs half a dozen!) are best made of a sturdy printed percale like the lower one pictured. The buttons on bib and beltline are a bright accent and those big roomy pockets are just the handiest catch-alls! But those dainty, dressier aprons—which are quite another story—are best fashioned of sheer dotted swiss, cross bar dimity and the like, and you've no idea how a ruffle round the edge dresses it up until your tea-guest pays her compliments! See how the shape of the big pockets conforms with the deep scallop feature. Both aprons in one pattern!

More Humble About Our Opinions in New Kinship

At the moment, many people are deploring "a lack of leadership" in religion, says Lloyd C. Douglas in Cosmopolitan. "In my opinion, the confessed bewilderment of the churches is a sign of health and progress. The recent use of the soft pedal has made the prophet of more value to the people. They sense an intellectual kinship with the honest man who admits he is a bit at a loss to know exactly where we are."

Editors who were used to saying the last word necessary for the adequate instruction of their constituents are writing in phrases tempered by a new shyness. Statesmen, teachers, parents, even half-grown children are no longer laying down their beliefs with a bang. We are all becoming humble about our opinions. This is the type of kinship we have needed more seriously than any other. It is somewhere along this road that we may find our peace."

GREAT CONCERN OVER NEWCOMER IN A COMMUNITY

The newcomer is a person who appears to make his home in the community and who thereby raises the questions:

Where will he send his children to school? Where will he keep his bank account? Where will he buy his groceries? Will he purchase a house? Does he need an automobile? How is he off for insurance?

Would he be interested in an oil burner? What church will he attend? Is he a prospect for a contribution to charity? Does he require legal advice? Has he an electric refrigerator? Is he, or members of his family, in need of medical attention?

Would he be good material for a ducking club or a golf club or a luncheon club? Or is he a person of intellectual interests who might be drafted for a discussion group or an association for or against war or in the study of foreign affairs?

Is he a good speaker? If so, what is his subject? Could he be persuaded to make a talk? Will his house need weatherstripping? How does he vote? Could he use an electric washer or a vacuum cleaner?

Where does he buy his clothes? Could he be persuaded to open a few accounts? Has he settled on a dentist? Has he engaged a handy man to look after his place? Would his children be interested in instruction in French or the piano or rhythmic dancing? Would he be interested in supporting the art museum?

In fact, if a newcomer were able to hear all the questions his arrival raised and realized the number of endeavors in which he was regarded as a prospect, he would probably pack up and go back as quickly as he could to the place from which he came.—Christopher Billopp in the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains about its safety were correct.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

WPA GIVES LIVELIHOOD TO 500,000 IN MICHIGAN

Half a million persons in Michigan are today dependent upon the WPA for a livelihood, a survey prepared by Harry L. Pierson, State Administrator, reveals.

More than 100,000 persons, practically all family heads, are now employed on Michigan undertakings financed from the President's four billion dollar work relief fund. Of this number, nearly 95,000 are on WPA payrolls. Approximately 6,000 others find employment on projects sponsored by other agencies but financed with WPA funds. Twenty-five thousand men and women, with 100,000 dependents, work for the WPA in Wayne County alone.

During its seven months of operation, the Michigan WPA has disbursed a total of $1,828,000. Fredrick S. Schuman, Federal Administrator at Lansing, declared, "Ninety-two per cent of this amount, or $1,680,000, went for wages. The balance, amounting to $148,000, was spent for materials and equipment."

"The Procurement Division advises us that another two and a half million dollars worth of materials are now being purchased. Ninety-five per cent of the orders are going to Michigan concerns. An average of $1,315,000 a week was pumped into the blood stream of Michigan business during the month of January."

"The marked upturn in business experienced by merchants in all parts of the State was due in no small measure to expenditures made by the WPA for payrolls and materials. Many merchants have come voluntarily to WPA officials to express their appreciation for the government program. One hundred thousand families are now receiving regular pay checks for the purchase of food and clothing, a boon to Michigan trade that will continue through June at least."

Schuman also cited the Government's direct relief contribution to the unemployment problem. During the period from January 1, 1935, to January 1, 1936, the Government spent $1,000,000 on direct relief in Wayne County.

"The Government's work relief program, in addition to giving the state needed public improvements, is also restoring the morale and the skill of idle workers," Schuman asserted.

"We find that workers in most cases are very happy when they come to WPA projects. In a few weeks they regain skill and self-confidence. This is of incalculable value to them because when a job in private industry does come along, they are able to handle it."

"Scores of men and women are leaving WPA jobs each week for employment in private industry. As this is the ultimate goal of the Federal program, WPA officials make every effort to help employees regain their old jobs or to find new ones. To this end, any WPA worker may leave to accept even temporary employment elsewhere, then return if the job ends. Many have utilized this arrangement. In a surprising number of cases, however, these temporary leaves have resulted in permanent positions."

An analysis of WPA expenditures shows that only 3.5 per cent goes for administrative costs, Schuman said. Out of the $1,815,000 spent weekly during January, Administrative expenses amounted to $41,500. More than 2,000 WPA projects have now been approved in Michigan, of which some 1,300 are under way at the present time. Federal funds thus far released total $3,500,000, to which will be added sponsors' contributions aggregating approximately $6,000,000.

GAME FARM PROJECTS

With a view toward assisting in the solution of farmer-hunter problems and farm-game management in southern Michigan, the Department of Conservation is asking farmers and sportsmen to consider an experimental plan of co-operative management tentatively planned for this year.

Questionnaires are going to scores of individuals in various parts of southern Michigan listing the suggested specifications of this plan and requesting that the individual or group register their approval of the plan and make suggestions for its improvement.

The Game Division of the Department realizes that hunting conditions in the farm-game areas of southern Michigan have been somewhat unsatisfactory during the past several years. The growing number of hunters, increase of leisure time, better means of travel, resentment of many farmers whose property has been injured by vandalism, the difficulty of maintaining an adequate supply of game birds and animals under increased damage, agricultural development and industry—all have intensified this problem.

Yielding to requests of many individuals the Game Division recently recommended a plan under which the Department of Conservation would co-operate in managing game-covered supplies on acres regulated under farmer-hunter agreements.

The specifications prepared, which would limit the Department's entry into participation in any such program of co-operative management, are contained in the outline being sent to interested individuals. The suggestions returned will help perfect this plan and if a sufficient majority of interested persons register approval of the plan, it will be put into effect on an experimental basis for the current year.

The following specifications, prepared by the Game Division and adopted by the State Conservation Commission at its January meeting:

1. Each project must contain not less than 2.00 acres of farm-game land of which at least 75 percent is in the association.
2. Hunting on the project is to be organized and regulated similarly to the Williamson Plan.
3. Land owners or lessors agree that no direct charge for the hunting privileges is to be collected.
4. Landowners or lessors agree to allow licensed, small game hunters access to the project as determined by the association and its members and not to retain the hunting privileges for any club or organizations.
5. Each landowner or lessee agrees to the following game management practices:

- A. To refrain from unnecessary burning of brush and other suitable wildlife cover and from unnecessary trimming of fence rows and roadside cover.
- B. To give reasonable assistance to the Department in obtaining such information as to the number of game animals killed on the project, number of hunters, etc.
- C. To permit employees of the Department access to the land at all times for censusing game abundance, checking hunters, etc.
- D. To give reasonable co-operation in game law observance and enforcement.
- E. Optional game management practices: By co-operation of sportsmen, farmers and other interested parties, arrangements must be made to carry out at least one of the following projects on at least 90 percent of the farms:

- A. Put in a small food patch or allow a strip of corn or grain to remain standing close to a swale, wood lot brush or pasture or marsh.
- B. Put out winter feed adjacent to winter cover.
- C. Plant a permanent shrub or vine cover along some swale, fence row or on wasteland.
- D. Maintain a permanent nesting or winter cover.
- E. Use a flushing bar on mowing machine.
7. On or before June 15, the secretary of the game management organization desiring to enter into such an agreement shall file a written request for co-operation with the Department and for technical assistance and signs. The Secretary shall also submit with such request a copy of the by-laws, a plat showing the land included in the club, a list of names and addresses of the members, a statement that each farmer-member has agreed to all of the required game management practices and that at least 90 percent of the farmers on the project have agreed to undertake at least one of the optional practices.

THE DEPARTMENT AGREES: 1. To furnish technical assistance and advice in formulating game management plans for the area.

Annual Bankers Convention Says People Have Had Confidence Restored—Recommends Changed Government Policy

The restoration of public confidence in banking has put it in the position where it can function fully and vigorously in playing its full economic part in the progress of recovery, said the American Bankers Association in its annual convention resolutions.

"The passage of a generally constructive banking law in the Banking Act of 1935 has stabilized the banking situation and enabled bankers to devote undivided attention to the normal administration of their institutions in promoting the business and public welfare of their communities," the resolutions said.
