Work on School Addition Started

Gang of Men Are Now Excavating
For Foundations. So Far Only
PWA Labor Is Being Used.

Mr. Culbertson of the Culbertson Construction Company of Detroit, his supt. Amos Corto and Otto Musch, architect, of Howell, appeared on the job Thursday morning and the work of building the new addition to the Pinckney school started. So far only 12 men have been used. They are all PWA men and 10 are from Putnam township and two from Fowlerville. The Putnam township men are Earl Truhn, George Devine, Loren Meabon, Roy Hannett, L. Devine, Ralph Harris, Adolph Peten, Rocco Lupp, Ralph Lupi, Emory Hummer.

The first work done was digging trenches for the foundations. These are about four feet deep. Then a construction shanty was built. This will be used as an office and to store the tools.

Many local men were there Thursday morning for work. They were told that for the present only PWA men would be used as the preliminary work is labor. This is to be supplied by the welfare fund. In order to qualify for the PWA it is necessary for you or your family to have been on the welfare last May.

We are informed that when the work of pouring the concrete is started, two shifts will be put on.

The men will work four days per week. All excavations for foundations will be 4 feet deep. No concrete will be poured until danger of frost is passed.

Monday noon, six of the WPA men were laid off. The reason is that no cement work will be done for two weeks and twelve men were considered too large a gang for the excavating to be done.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

NEAR HOWELL

Three members of the James O'Brien family of Howell were killed at 8:00 p. m. Saturday, and three others injured when the car in which they were riding crashed into truck on U. S. 16, two miles west of Howell. Those killed were Wm. O'Brien, son of James, who was driving; his mother, Mrs. James O'Brien, and sister, Ella. Two other sisters, Anna and Lillian, were taken to the McPherson Hospital at Howell with injuries.

The truck was driven by Dick Clendenning, who lives near what is called Five Points on Grand River between Howell and Fowlerville.

He was arrested and put in jail. At the time of the accident he was said to have been intoxicated.

The O'Brien family are well known here. All three girls are employed in the Citizen's Mutual Auto Insurance office at Howell. James O'Brien, the father, formerly was captain for the Hammond Beef Co.

A man riding with Clendenning is alleged to have escaped before the officers arrived.

Julius DeJoyne, 51, Clendenning's companion, was later arrested by the sheriff's officers and is held on a drunk charge.

Clendenning has lived on a farm north of Five Points about two years. His truck was insured against liability.

A triple funeral was held at St. Joseph's church today for the three accident victims.

Prosecutor Berriman announced that Clendenning would be charged with manslaughter. He was taken before Justice Knapp Monday, where he waived examination and was bound over to circuit court. He will probably be arraigned before Judge Collins this week.

Miss Ella O'Brien, one of the victims, has been employed by the Citizens Mutual for the past fifteen years and was in charge of the policy department; and also secretary of the Livingston County Garden Club.

Dean Reason, formerly of Pinckney, witnessed the accident. He was on his way to Lansing at the time.

Coming Out of Hibernation

Report on Poor Farms Given

Fred Woodworth, State Welfare Director, Advocates Closing All Such Institutions Having Less Than 40 Inmates. Would Consolidate Smaller Ones

The State Welfare Commission which was recently ordered to make a survey of the poor houses or county infirmaries in the state, has completed its task and rendered its report. 71 such institutions were examined. Immediate closing of the poor houses in Presque Isle, Schoolcraft, Arenac, Kalamazoo and Gladwin counties as unfit was asked. Also so the one in Ontonagon county which was classed as the worst in the state. The report draws no salary there, being paid 35c per inmate. These in Montcalm and Roscommon should be closed for economy as they have but few inmates. Many others were found to be overcrowded. These were in Kalamazoo, Monroe, St. Clair, Allegan, VanBuren, Muskegon, Menominee, Isabella, Clinton, Delta and Alger.

The commission will ask the counties to replace or repair all condemned institutions. Also to weed out all inmates eligible for old age pensions. If they fail to act, Fred Woodworth intimated that the matter could be taken to the Supreme Court.

Between 500 and 600 inmates are in these poor houses awaiting transfers to Lapeer and insane asylums. These would be removed.

Mr. Woodworth also stated that all institutions having less than 40 inmates be closed as it has been proved that such institutions can not be run economically. In these cases several of the smaller counties should be consolidated.

The Livingston County infirmary is not mentioned, so it evidently passed inspection. However, it never has over 18 or 20 inmates and in the superintending not over 12. This would place it under the head of those having less than 40 inmates.

CIRCUIT COURT NEWS

Judge Collins heard a number of non-jury cases last week. The following divorces were granted: Grace McCook, Reader from Charles Reader; Anna Samborski from Boleslaw Samborski; Maude Mummery from Claude Mummery, and Mildred Cooper from Henry Kiehl.

The contested divorce case of Edna Tukey Mills vs. Max C. Mills of Stockbridge was set for Friday. Don VanWinkle represents the plaintiff, and Glenn Yelland, the defendant. The couple have a several months old child.

Edna Mills was given a divorce from Max Mills on a cross bill, and custody of the minor child. She is to receive $4 per week alimony until the child is 16 years old. Mills is to pay the costs of the trial and doctor bills for 30 days. He had previously paid the hospital bill at the time the child was born and temporary alimony of $3.

Terry Brown was given a foreclosure decree against Harold Schram. Paul Mosser was given a decree to quiet title against Edwin Mortlock. Fred Lang was brought back from Detroit for not supporting his family. He pleaded guilty and was placed on two years probation, ordered to pay $19 a week for support of minor children at Howell and $5 per week for the support of a daughter in Ingham county. His wife is now serving a term in the Detroit House of Correction for an offense.

Earl Bohm, pleaded guilty to embezzlement and was sent to jail to await sentence. He is alleged to have incurred the schoolhouse in District No. 8 Chochotah, obtaining $100. However, the policy was no good as he was representing no insurance company.

The divorce case of Wilmont vs. Adelaide Lewis was settled and they are now living together. William Newton was granted a divorce from George Newton. The case of Ella vs. George Moon was set for this week.

JAMES L. RYAN DIES; RETIRED EXECUTIVE

James L. Ryan, a former vice president of the Rudolph Wurlitzer Co., died of a heart attack today while traveling in a taxicab from a railroad station to the Pelham Country Club, of which he was a member. His age was 48.

He moved last month from New Rochelle, to 356 West Fifty-sixth St., New York.

In distributing organs and other musical instruments throughout the country, Mr. Ryan had been particularly active among stage and moving picture notables, many of whom he knew personally during his twenty-two years with the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company. He retired last June after serving eight years as vice president.

He was born in Pinckney, Mich., and was educated in schools of Dexter.

James Ryan was the son of the late Michael Ryan and Emma Dolan Ryan, who at one time owned a farm at Silver Lake. Later they moved to Pinckney and went from here to Dexter. He is survived by his wife who was formerly Mary McKernan of North Lake, son, James Jr., his aged mother, who lives at Dexter, and a brother, Charles, of New York City. The New York clipping was sent to us by Rox Reed, who belonged to the same country club as Ryan.

THEY ALL DO IT—

We clipped the following from the last week's issue of the Fowlerville Review:

"Fire, said to have caught from an overheated furnace, badly damaged the office of Dr. C. L. Sigler at Pinckney, Friday. Leo Lavey, one of the firemen, fractured an ankle on a package of aspirin."

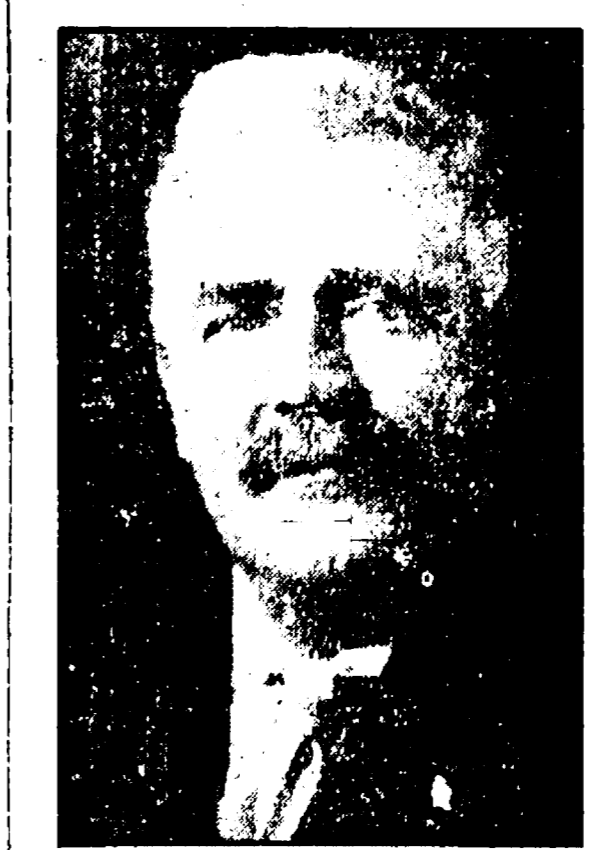

As the accident happened two blocks away from the fire, Leo was too far away from the Doctor's aspirin to lay the blame on that.

Prominent Masons Here Mar. 27

Six Grand Lodge Officers Are on the Program for Livingston Lodge's Annual Past Master Banquet. Most of Them Have Appeared Here Before.

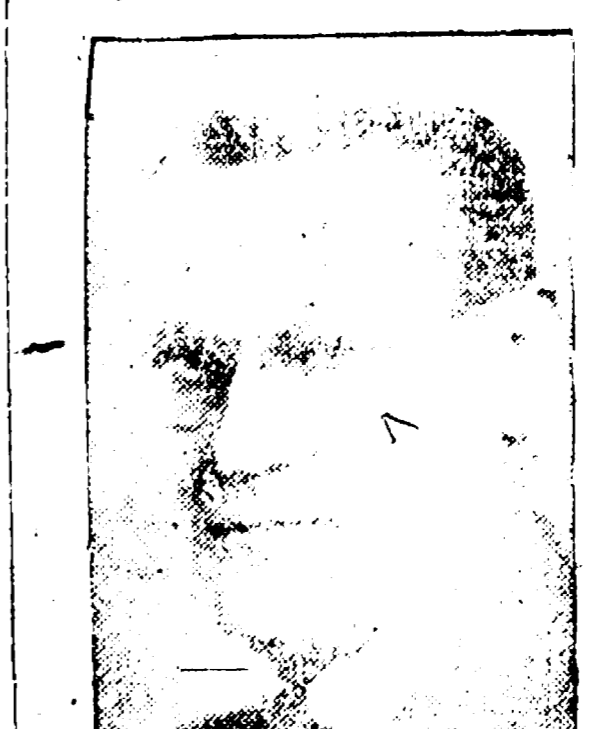

Livingston Lodge No. 76 F. & A. M. is probably honored by the presence of many grand lodge officers at her annual past master banquet, than any other lodge in the state. Since 1929 when a grand lodge banquet was held, it has been a tradition that grand masters have attended these banquets. They are: Past Grand Master, Louis Anderson, Dr. George Ferguson and Frank Gould.

This year the officers will be honored by the presence of Past Master Louis L. Band of Livingston Lodge, one of the outstanding officers in the state and also the past of Frank Lodge, Michigan, Past Master of the Grand Lodge, and Past Master of the Grand Lodge of Michigan.

Dr. Francis Lambie, of Midland, is probably known to more rank and file Masons in the state than any other member of the order. He is a Scotchman with a broad face. When he was elected to grand lodge several years ago, it was reported that he was a "big" man. However, the last time he was seen in a public place, he was a "small" man. There is another issue which seems to be rapidly coming to the fore. That is a return to the local counties and communities of a portion of the tax collected by the state and federal government. Several years ago the counties found the burden of maintaining the highways too much for them, and, as a result, a portion of the highways was returned to them for this purpose. Now they are demanding that a portion of the state tax be also given to them. This question has been temporarily shelved but will undoubtedly come up again. Another issue along this same line is the contention that after governmental expenses and the public debt is retired, the several states should be given a share of the income tax, excise and corporation taxes collected from them. This may not be possible by law at the present time, but it is an issue which will not down.

Dewey Hesse, of Midland, is a veteran by profession. He is a member of the Grand Lodge of Michigan and has been a member of the Grand Lodge of Michigan for several years.

Paul O. Strawhecker, of Grand Rapids, is a candidate for grand marshal this year. He is a brother of Mrs. Esther Campbell of Pinckney, a world war veteran and graduate of the University of Michigan. He was chairman of the grand lodge finance committee for two years.

In addition to the program published last week there will be several presentations. They are as follows:

Past Master's Apron Presentation
Glenn Slayton by Past Master Livermore.

Life Membership Presentations
George Reason by Past Master Kirk VanWinkle.
James A. Greene by Past Grand Master McPherson.

Current Comment

Idleness is getting to be a problem among the inmates of the southern Michigan prison to such an extent that a prison break, similar to those at Columbus and Auburn, N. Y., are feared. During the boom times this idleness did not exist. There were many factories inside the prison. The state operated a cement plant, binder twine plant and hundreds of convicts were employed building roads, etc. When the depression hit us, and thousands of people out of work they protested the use of convict labor and free men were idle. Manufacturers protested against competition from goods made with cheap prison labor, and as a result the convicts disappeared from the road gangs, the cement plants and binder twine plants were closed and also many other factories. Consequently, there was nothing for the prison inmates to do. It is conceded work for them is imperative, but just how to give it to them without depriving workers outside of penal institutions, of jobs, is a problem.

The Lansing State Journal in their political comment column has the following to say about Gov. Landon of Kansas:

"Concern"
Governor Landon has so far ignored an effort by teachers' organizations to get him on record as to what his attitude towards education will be if he is elected president. At the educators' and disturbed about Landon and will keep hammering away at him until they get a reply of some sort.

Their concern is based on specific examples of what the governor's economic have done to the Kansas educational budget. A number of Kansas teachers are paid as little as $20 a month and a certificate of graduation from a grammar school gives as an adequate qualification to teach in the public elementary schools.

Another item which makes the teachers' organizations feel that Landon is not their man is that Kansas spends vastly greater sums monthly on concrete highways than she does on her schools.

Gov. Landon's popularity at the present time comes mainly because he has refused to take a stand in any important question. However, he has reached a point at the present time where such a policy will no longer be possible.

In the flurry over the passage of soldier's bonus, the fact was lost sight of that 15 other pension bills have been introduced in congress. One of most of them will be in committee, but three may be reported favorably. One provides for pensions to World War veterans' widows and orphans.

Germany has again proved that peace treaties are only scraps of paper. Less drastic actions than that taken by her have caused war in the past. However, the nations do not appear eager for conflict. The last war showed that such conflicts settle nothing and cost much. The Versailles Treaty was too drastic, and it was a foregone conclusion that Germany would overthrow it as soon as she had regained sufficient strength.

The State of Michigan has chosen the Ingham County Circuit Court in which to fight the issue whether it can collect a three percent sales tax on power sold by cities and villages in electric power plants owned by them. Judge Leland Carr, in the case of the City of Lansing, has ruled they cannot. Wyandotte Lowell and other cities have refused to pay this tax.

JUNIOR KING'S DAUGHTERS

The Pinckney Junior Kings Daughters held their meeting and installation of officers at the home of Mrs. Fred Read, Monday night. Their leader, Mrs. Anna Reason, was in charge. The newly elected officers were installed by Mrs. F. R. Lamb, with the usual services. The officers are as follows:
President Katherine Dilloway
Vice-Pres. Helen Kennedy
Secretary Ruth Devereaux
Treasurer Helen Reason
Ass't. Treas. Rosemary Read
A pot-luck supper was served and the evening was spent in singing and games.

Hitler Rearms Rhineland; Other Nations Protest

EUROPE'S dogs of war were growling ominously and tugging at their chains, but those chains, being forged in England, seemed likely to stand the strain. Reichsfuehrer Hitler brought on the new crisis by his abrupt and dramatic action in denouncing the Locarno treaty and remilitarizing the Rhineland. He first informed the ambassadors of the countries signatory to the pact as to what he intended, and then delivered a ringing speech in the hastily summoned reichstag, eloquently defending his action.

At the same time Hitler was sending into the formerly demilitarized strip along the Rhine some 25,000 troops of all arms. This he declared was a "symbolic" army, and in his public utterances he asserted that Germany was not thus making a warlike move and did not desire war, but was determined to defend herself. He upheld his unilateral abrogation of the Locarno treaty on the ground that France had already violated it by making a mutual assistance agreement with Russia, which pact is pending in the French senate. To show his desire for peace, he offered a plan which includes: A demilitarized strip of German, French and Belgian land; a 25-year non-aggression treaty among Germany, France and Belgium, with Great Britain and Italy as guarantors; inclusion of the Netherlands in the system of pacts; and air pact with the western powers; a non-aggression pact with Germany's eastern neighbors, including Lithuania; and return of Germany to the League of Nations after her equality is established and her sovereignty restored.

Reaction in the capitals of Europe was quick and in some cases almost violent. Premier Albert Sarraut of France appealed to the League of Nations, asking that sanctions against Germany be applied. He also called a meeting of the signatories to the Locarno pact. In a radio address he warned Hitler that France would not stand for his action, and asserted that the reichsfuehrer's new plan was not at all acceptable. Meanwhile there was intense military activity along the eastern frontier, and within a few hours the Maginot line, that wonderful system of border fortifications built since the World war, was completely manned.

Italy's position in this squabble was interesting. Called on by France to support the protest against Germany, Mussolini took full advantage of the situation to get all he could for his own cause. He promised to stand by France and uphold the Locarno pact if the league would slacken the sanctions that were imposed on Italy as a result of her Ethiopian adventure. Poland gave assurance that she would carry out faithfully her obligations under the Franco-Polish accord; and the nations of the little entente not only promised support but warned France that if she did not bring Germany to time they might be forced to abandon their alliance with France.

Now it devolved on Great Britain, real arbiter of peace or war, to define her stand. For France demanded full support in return for the assurances she had given when trouble impended in the Mediterranean. The British statesmen refused to get excited over the affair and it was left to Capt. Anthony Eden, youthful foreign secretary, to set forth his government's position. After consultation with Prime Minister Baldwin and others of the cabinet, Eden appeared before the house of commons and declared that any attack on France or Belgium in violation of the Locarno treaty would force Great Britain to go to their assistance. He added, however, that he was thankful to say there was no reason to suppose "the present German action implies a threat of hostilities."

Eden said he had already protested to Ambassador Von Hoesch against the military re-occupation of the Rhineland, telling him the effect on British public opinion would be deplorable. "The abrogation of the Locarno pact and the occupation of the demilitarized zone," declared Eden, "have profoundly shaken confidence in any engagement in which Germany may in the future enter. It strikes a severe blow at the principle of the sanctity of treaties which underlies the whole structure of international relations."

Eden indicated Great Britain was willing to consider Reichsfuehrer Hitler's proposals for new peace covenants.

Belgium joined France in the appeal to the League of Nations, and a session of the league council was called for March 13.

Senators in Washington who expressed any opinion were unanimous in saying that the United States must be kept out of any European war, regardless of developments.

Power Plans of TVA Blocked by Court

PLANS to furnish TVA power to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., under a project to be financed with PWA funds were blocked by a temporary restraining order issued by the District of Columbia Supreme court.

The order was granted on the petition of the Tennessee Public Service company which contended its $4,000,000 investment in Knoxville would be rendered practically worthless, if the government brought cheaper power into the city.

Also in the District Supreme court, 66 producers of soft coal attacked the Guffey coal control act as unconstitutional in its entirety on the ground that it invades the rights of the states and deprives producers of their property without due process of law.

Seizure of Telegrams to Be Investigated

THE senate adopted a resolution introduced by Senator Borah requiring the federal communications commission to make a full report on its "alleged seizures" of private telegrams for Senator Black's committee on lobbying.

Senator Stetson of Oregon attacked the doings and methods of the Black committee, contending the rights of citizens were being infringed. Mr. Black made a heated defense.

Move Toward Peace in Italo-Ethiopian War

THROUGH its committee of thirteen the League of Nations appealed to Benito Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie to consent to immediate negotiations for an end to hostilities and a definite re-establishment of Italo-Ethiopian peace. Though consideration of the proposal by his cabinet council was delayed a few days, Mussolini accepted the plan in principle as a basis for conference. It was made plain that Italy would not take the initiative and would retain occupied territory.

Haile Selassie accepted the proposal without reservation. In recent days his armies in the northern sector have been routed in big battles and have lost many thousands of men, and the Italians have penetrated far toward the interior of the country; and in the South the invaders were preparing for a rapid advance.

Back of the league's appeal was the standing threat of extension of sanctions to include an embargo on oil. This suddenly brought about a situation rather disconcerting for the league. Dr. Giuseppe Motta, Swiss foreign minister, gave a warning that if the oil embargo was applied his country might feel it necessary to leave the league in order to preserve its neutrality if the consequent threatened war in Europe resulted. Motta pointed out that if Italy quit the league and hostilities ensued, Switzerland, through her membership in the league, would appear in Italian eyes as a party to a hostile coalition.

Koki Hirota Forms New Cabinet for Japan

KOKI HIROTA, former foreign minister, formed a new ministry for Japan and submitted the names to the emperor. He, besides being premier, takes the foreign minister's portfolio. Lieut. Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi is put in as minister of war and Admiral Osami Nagano as minister of navy. Military leaders insisted that Hirota "show a proper recognition of the gravity of the times and the necessity for renovation of Japanese foreign policy," and to this demand he yielded somewhat.

Hirota issued a statement saying that "the present empire situation requires independent and positive readjustment of our foreign relations in order to liquidate this emergency."

Hachiro Arita, new Japanese ambassador to China, told the press in Shanghai that "it is fundamental that China recognizes Manchukuo and that the other North China questions should be settled on the spot."

"There has been no change in Japanese policy in China as a result of the recent Tokyo incident," he declared. "Japan will carry out the three principles of Koki Hirota, former Japanese foreign minister, requiring that China eliminate anti-Japanese, co-operate economically with Japan and Manchukuo and co-operate in the elimination of communism with in China and along the borders."

President Closes Norris Dam Sluice Gates

ON the third anniversary of his inauguration President Roosevelt pushed an electric key in the White House which set in motion machinery that closed the sluice gates of the Norris dam in the Tennessee Valley project. This signaled the completion of that part of the vast work on the Clinch river.

Jackson—The Michigan Taxpayers' Service League, claiming a membership in excess of 30,000 in 32 counties, has opened executive offices here. The league is sponsor of a movement for amendment of the Michigan sales tax law to exempt all foodstuffs.

Battle Creek—Contributing to missions is more than a casual affair to Seventh Day Adventists, newly released figures prove. In 1935, Adventists in the United States and Canada gave $2,030,227 for missions, an increase of $121,256 over the previous year.

Lansing—The State Highway Department announces that Michigan will receive an additional $4,000,000 for the purpose of road construction. Congressional revision of Works Progress Administration rules makes possible resubmission of certain projects that were refused.

Cheboygan—It used to be that every undertaker had a sleigh-bearse, but they were stored away in barns, and a good many of the younger generation never had seen one until this winter. Sleighs have been necessary this year, with the sleigh-bearse followed by a cortege of sleighs carrying mourners.

Cheboygan—While chilly temperatures prevail, the Cheboygan Chamber of Commerce is going ahead with plans to establish a municipal bathing beach where summer tourists can tan to their heart's content. The Chamber of Commerce is also considering sites for a winter sports park with toboggan slides and ski jumps.

Detroit—Detroit is to have a year-round circus; that is, if the Board of Commerce can find a place for it. The James M. Cole Circus has decided to make its permanent headquarters here each winter. When the site is chosen, three large brick buildings will be erected to shelter 250 horses, 11 elephants and a menagerie of 200 other wild animals.

Lansing—A program is being considered which would consolidate the state's 6,700 school districts into not more than 700 or 800. It is thought that the reduction could be brought about by establishing community school districts, with a city or large village as the center of each. Each school district would take in the territory that normally constitutes the community's trading area.

Lansing—The State Highway Department has extended truck loading restrictions as far north as M-20. The size of loads is limited in order that excess weight on trucks may not damage trunk lines weakened by the spring thaws. Restrictions previously had been in effect as far north as Port Huron and Grand Rapids. The department plans to extend the load limit northward as spring advances.

Sebewaing—Assurance that a cutoff drain will be built here by the WPA as a flood relief measure has been given the Lansing office of the WPA. The drain will tap the Sebewaing River Drain a mile south of Sebewaing and run two and a half miles west to Saginaw Bay. It is estimated the cutoff will divert two-thirds of the water of the big drain which serves 63,000 acres of farming lands in Huron and Tuscola Counties.

Owosso—The almost complete skeleton of a man, believed to have been an Indian, was dug up here by WPA workers preparing to build tennis courts at the Emerson school grounds. Some remnants of cloth remained with the skeleton and there was a knife nearby, also the skeleton of two dogs. Human bones have been dug up on the Emerson grounds at intervals for years, and legend has it that many years ago there was an Indian cemetery there.

Battle Creek—An architect's mistake is one of the most prominent features of the City's skyline, seen daily by thousands of taxpayers who helped pay for it. It consists of an astronomical observatory, forming a dome on the high school roof. The copper-covered dome and its contents cost $15,000 but it was found that the observatory could never be used because vibration from traffic and trains caused the instruments to move as much as three feet.

Lansing—During the last 2 years the Highway Department has given "reaction time tests" to 50,000 persons, determining how long it takes the motorist to act after a traffic problem has arisen. Persons tested were required to fill out questionnaires from which approximately 20,000 "case" cards have been compiled. It has been found that the average motorist drives with a feeling of false security and is without a thorough understanding of the factors involved in safe driving. Reaction time does not improve with experience.

Slip and Pantie Set Made in Quick Time

Sleek comfort's written between the very seams of this slip and pantie set that's dedicated to smooth fitting and easy making. They're within everyone's reach, and their low cost makes them an out-and-out economy. The slip does a nice job of molding the figure, with its fitted bodice and all-in-one straps that can't slip. The neckline's cut low enough in back to allow it to be worn with your lowest cut frocks. And could anything be smoother than waistband panties which lie flat? A non-shrinkable rayon or crepe is nice.

Pattern 9602 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric. Complete diagrammed sew chart included. Oriental Experts in the Art of Starving Themselves

Recently a Yogi ascetic entombed himself in Rishi Kesh, a holy place in the northwest United Provinces of India. After 45 days those without were to listen for the sacred word "Om," whereupon he was to be released and given fruit juice. On the forty-fifth day they heard a faint "Om" and carried out the instructions. During all that time the ascetic had taken neither food nor water.

Oriental seem to be experts in this art of starving. Jatindranath Das, one of sixteen persons arrested in 1929 in the Lahore conspiracy, died in prison after a hunger strike of sixty-one days. Taha Hussein, who tried to assassinate the Egyptian prime minister, Siki Pasha, and was condemned to seven years' hard labor, died in 1932, after fasting fifty days.

Kidnaping Is Not Entirely an American Crime, Nor New

The crime of kidnaping is not a new one or confined to this country, though the organization of kidnaping gangs for profit has been more greatly developed here in recent years than anywhere else. It is a curious fact that the word "kidnaping" came into use not in America but in England about 250 years ago and referred to the business of stealing young people in that country to provide indentured servants or laborers (virtually slaves) for the American plantations.

In Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," written in 1684, occurs the sentence, "Thou practisest the craft of a kidnaper; thou gatherest up women and children and carriest them into a strange country, to the weakening of my master's kingdom." Maj. Arthur Griffith's "Mysteries of Police and Crime" states: "Child stealing has always been a profitable trade, practiced at the instance of greedy relatives anxious to remove a rightful heir; full-grown youths of muscle and sinew were entrapped in great numbers during the first half of the eighteenth century to be sold as white slaves for the American plantations."—Detroit News.

MICH. STATE COLLEGE SHORTS

Two new farm machines which may have important effects on Michigan agriculture will appear on the market this summer, according to Prof. H. H. Musselman, agricultural engineering department, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Professor Musselman, who has made a study of new farm machinery says that two companies are manufacturing low-priced combines to sell for $600. Both combines cut five foot swaths.

More than 40 times as many Michigan dairy herds are free from contagious abortion disease, as there were five years ago, it is reported by B. J. Killham, extension specialist in animal pathology, Michigan State College, East Lansing. Two hundred sixty-one dairymen have received certificates for accredited herds already this year as compared with six in 1932 when the campaign began. Co-operation between federal, state, and county agent authorities is rapidly eliminating the danger Mr. Killham states.

A former Michigan State College extension worker is supervising Michigan's sole federal soil erosion project. He is E. C. Sackrider, soils specialist, in charge of the Berrien county project which involves 28,000 acres of old fruit land.

FISH SPEARING BAN SOUGHT FOR HURON

A petition has been presented to the Michigan conservation commission by the Huron Valley chapter of the Izak Walton League of America, including both Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor sportsmen, asking the closing of the Huron river to all spearing from the outlet of Base Lake to the Broadway bridge in Ann Arbor.

The request was presented personally to P. J. Hoffmaster, chairman of the conservation commission, by representatives of the League chapter, and is to be acted upon at a meeting of the commission on Friday.

Spearing of certain species of non-game fish is permitted in non-trout streams during March, April and a part of May, but under the state law the conservation commission has the power to close any individual stream or part of a stream. The local sportsmen believe much harm is done to fish life through the spearing, many game fish being taken in this manner either deliberately or because the persons using the spears are unable to distinguish the various species under water.

FEED ON BARK

Starving deer in the Oxford and Stiles swamps near Newaygo are emulating the beaver and are browsing on the bark of poplar trees in their efforts to sustain life.

The poplar is a favorite food of the beaver, but game authorities at Lansing doubt whether it has much food value for deer.

A red fox leaves a very strong scent. Veteran fox hunters declare they can smell a fox track under favorable conditions because of the musky odor left by the fox in its tracks.

MOTORISTS FINDING THEIR LOST TITLES

Some 3,000 motorists in Michigan who thought they had lost the titles to their cars, or who didn't think anything at all about titles until they looked them up, have "found" them in the last two months.

The number of titles in the "lost title" files of the Department of State, has been reduced from about 6,000 to near 3,000 since the first of the year. The cause for the reduction is that many motorists, unable to locate their titles in order to buy 1936 plates, have appealed to the department, only to discover the missing titles held there for want of information as to their owners' addresses.

Owners of about 75 titles are revealing themselves daily, this is about 50 percent greater than the daily "crop of lost" titles. These new titles are being returned daily, undeliverable by postal authorities, because of incorrect addresses filed with the state by car purchasers.

Failure to notify postmasters of changed addresses, and carelessness when originally recording addresses with the Department of State, are the two principal causes for "lost" titles.

SUCCESS IN LIFE HINGES ON FOODS

Prospects for Good Health and Social Approval Increased by Proper Eating.

Health value is not enough to persuade adolescents to eat certain foods says Jean Hawks, assistant professor of nutrition, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Boys and girls need some other incentive besides health before they will change their food habits. Better results, she advises can be achieved by connecting good food habits with their goals.

Miss Hawks, who has made a special study of food needs of adolescents, believes in applying psychology to the treatment of the recalcitrant youth who refuses to eat proper or sufficient amounts of food.

"The adolescent child can be made to realize that the better his health practices are, the greater is the possibility of his success in the various things he wants to do," she says.

"When growing boys and girls realize that good food habits are directly related to winning a race, playing the violin or solving a problem, they will be more anxious to co-operate and form good food habits. They want to be in style. They want to look right. Thus they may be interested in eating proper foods."

Miss Hawks points out that it may be advisable at times to permit substitution of other fruits and vegetables for individual foods which adolescents may dislike, but she insists that if sufficient minerals and vitamins in the form of vegetables and fruits are not eaten, the prospects for good health in adult life are decreased.

SELF-STERILE FRUIT TREE MAY BE MADE TO BEAR

Back-yard fruit growers who have only one or two trees for each kind of fruit frequently have trouble getting them to bear, even when they have a good crop of blossoms, say fruit specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture.

Blossoms of certain common fruit varieties do not fertilize themselves but must be cross pollinated. They are self-sterile, and depend upon pollen, usually brought by bees, from nearby trees of other varieties.

Where self-sterile trees already are established a permanent remedy is to top-work a few of the limbs to varieties that bloom at the same time as the rest of the tree. The best time for top-working fruit trees is just as growth starts in the spring.

The Miller Bros. of Chelsea, who operate a barber shop, seem to have a monopoly on the money handling business there. Chester is township treasurer and Ed. has just been elected village treasurer.

PHEASANT COVER IMPORTANT

Don't overlook the importance of "cover" for pheasants and other game birds in times of extreme cold, advise the state game men. Cover may be a life or death factor.

Just how necessary good cover may be was demonstrated near the City of Alligan recently.

A number of pheasants were found dead in a cornfield where several thousand of the birds had concentrated. At first it was thought that starvation through lack of food was the cause of death. Conservation Officers F. W. D. Miller, Harry Peltis, and V. D. Wiley reported that the birds were found in a place that was fully exposed to the elements and that the mouths of the birds were open and the upper throat and mouth were full of ice.

Even game birds, which are well equipped to endure cold, require shelter of some kind and only when temperatures are extremely low and winds strong. Sportsmen might give more consideration to that when establishing bird feeding stations or planting food patches.

COTTAGE CHEESE

Home demonstration leaders of Livingston county witnessed the utilization of skim milk for cottage cheese making purposes in a demonstration conducted by Jewell Jensen, extension dairyman, Michigan State College, on Thursday at Howell.

Mr. Jensen in commenting about this cheese mentioned that it offered additional variety to the home menu, that it provided a splendid source of digestible protein and its attractiveness made it possible to serve milk in a different form to members of the family. It further saves a money outlay in many instances in that it has a value equivalent pound for pound to that of meat.

In explaining the large kernel sweet curd type of cottage cheese, Mr. Jensen indicated that this was the popular form of cottage cheese in the larger markets.

"Out of 100 pounds of sweet skim milk it is possible to gain from 12 to 14 pounds of cottage cheese," said Mr. Jensen.

Mrs. Cook, county home demonstration leader, presided and each of the group leaders obtained a set of instructions for making this popular type of cottage cheese. The group leaders plan to duplicate the demonstration at various points over the county, in their home neighborhoods.

Philathea Notes

As scheduled, the class held its quarterly Missionary program and social and business meeting on Wednesday of last week with Mrs. Rose Hendee. The president, Mrs. Millie Bowman, presided, the meeting being opened by the singing of "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow." The Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Zuse and Miss Fish, and the Roll call letter for this meeting was "U." The response to the names showed a good attendance to enjoy this spring-time meeting. Reports were read and several items of business discussed and disposed of. Mrs. Inez Zuse and Mrs. Pauline Vadder were appointed by the president to divide the names of members into committees for work, and the reporter was instructed to forward our year charter dues to the "World Wide Baraca and Philathea Union." The Baracade offering amounts to $20.00 and a Cent-a-Meal box that day yielded $5.50. Other boxes have been brought in which will help materially on our first payment for this year on our church quota, and for which we are grateful.

For the entertainment features of the afternoon at Mrs. Hendee's, a little Missionary playlet, "A Change of Heart" was put on after the business was finished. Mrs. C. H. Zuse took the part of "Mrs. White"; Mrs. Minnie Van Slambrook impersonated "Mrs. Wells" and Clella Fish represented "Mrs. Early."

Mrs. Hattie Swarthout's fine reading was much enjoyed and the program was concluded by an original reading, "Win the One Next You," by Clella Fish. This is our B-P motto.

The letter for the April meeting is "V" and the place for meeting is to be announced later.

We note the following testimonial of the work of Baraca-Philathea by Rev. Savage of Pontiac in the January issues of the "Baraca-Philathea News." Our Sunday school has grown from an average attendance of 1,987 to an average attendance of more than 2,000. Much of this phenomenal growth has been due to a number of Baracas and Philatheas who are constantly looking for new files to conquer in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. I am an enthusiast regarding Baraca-Philathea work." Topic next Sunday: "Jesus Teaches True Values," Luke 12:33-34.

"Do you think we could get that man, sir? We could have had the others time and again. Bugle and Rush, I mean—though we could have had Dewdrop, too. But Mr. Bohun says, 'No, Bugle and Rush,' he says, 'is our information bureau. So we won't do them in,' he says; 'if there's any news going they'll have it.' But you wouldn't believe how we've laid an' laid for Pharaoh—and missed him every time. Look at tonight, sir. I'd been lying there where I met you since half-past six. Keepin' observation, I was, for Mr. Bohun's at Salzburg—I've told you that. To beat up his quarters, he said, in case you'd called. Well, I thought I had got him tonight, when the Rolls slowed down. I was ready to blow his head off—an' then it turns out that it's you. I don't believe in charmed lives, but if ever a blackguard had one, Pharaoh's him."

"You wait, Barley," said I, and got into the car. "When do you expect Mr. Bohun?"

"Tomorrow morning, sir. About seven o'clock."

"What could be better?" said I. "Tell him to expect me for breakfast at about a quarter to nine. And that after that, if he likes, we'll run along to Plumage and close the information bureau."

As I let in the clutch—"Good-by, Barley," cried Helena. "Do what you can for his lordship and ask Mr. Bohun to forgive me for making free with his room."

But Barley made no answer. I think he was incapable of speech. We were back at the castle within a quarter of an hour.

As the warden stepped out of the wicket, Helena spoke.

"Has anyone entered the castle since I've been gone?"

The porter replied:

"No one at all, my lady."

I had known that would be his answer, but the words were comfortable words. The race had been ours all the way, but now we knew it was over and the numbers were up.

Helena was addressing the warden. "He's not been to the station, Florin. Unless he's here, he must have gone somewhere by car."

"His lordship's not here, my lady. And the Adelaide postern was open which shows that he went that way."

I drove the Rolls under the archway and into the small courtyard.

As the leaves were closed behind us "Out of sight of the wicket," said Helena.

There was just enough room to berth the car out of view.

Helena turned to the warden, who had opened the door by her side.

"The porter is to put out his lights, but stay in his lodge. He is to open to no one, until you return. Mark that. To no one at all. And in five minutes' time you and all the night-watchmen will come to the library."

"If your ladyship pleases," said Florin.

Helena left the car, and I followed her up the stairs.

As I closed the library door, my lady took off her hat, pitched it on to a sofa and moved to the hearth.

"What are you going to tell them?"

For a moment she did not answer, but stood with her eyes on the flames. Then—

"That the man that murdered young Florin is coming to the castle tonight; that three hours ago he did his best to kill you, because he knows you can prove that he took young Florin's life; that they know him as 'Captain Fanning,' but that I know him as 'Pharaoh'—a very dangerous felon, who is wanted for at least four murders in England alone."

She turned to set her hands on my shoulders. "You must forgive me, darling, for playing this hand alone. But now you must stay in the background until we're through. They must not begin to believe that I'm acting on your advice. Now that Valentine's out of the way, my authority here is supreme, but I'm putting a strain upon it when I use my brother's absence to order the death of his guest. Tomorrow—this afternoon you'll stand on another footing, for everyone in the castle will know I'm to be your wife."

I could not answer her, but I put my arms around her and kissed her lips.

And then the light in her face went out.

The lips I had kissed were moving, but no words came. . . . and her little hands were trembling. . . . and the blood was out of her face.

She was looking over my shoulder—not so much with horror as dully, as though the battle were hopeless and she was tired.

As I let her go and swung round—"Don't move, Mr. Spencer," said Pharaoh. "The trigger they give these things are absurdly light."

"This thing" was an automatic pistol, pointing in my direction, about six paces away.

CHAPTER VIII

I Bear a Message.

I confess that I was dumbfounded, and several seconds went by before I could find my tongue.

"That's so much bluff," said I. "This isn't the forester's cottage. If you fire on me here—"

"I most frankly admit," said Pharaoh, "that the feelings with which I should kill you would be extremely mixed. To be still more frank, I don't want you to force my hand. Not that I value your life. In fact, you're rather a nuisance. But if I were to—er—abate you, I should probably have to withdraw—and that wouldn't suit my book. But for you to take any action would suit my book even less. And so, if you move, I shall fire. . . . I'm sure Lady Helena favors my point of view."

"Yes," said Helena, quietly. "I see your point. Don't move, John, I beg you. He means what he says."

"He does indeed," said Pharaoh. With his words a knock fell upon the door. . . .

"Ah," said Pharaoh. "The trusty warden, no doubt. With his white hair unbonneted, the stout old sheriff comes; behind him march the halberdiers. . . . I think you were going to tell him something, Lady Helena. Well, do have him in. But perhaps I ought to remind you that Mr. Spencer's life will depend upon what you say."

The pistol slid into his pocket; but though he withdrew his left hand, his right hand stayed where it was.

Again the warden knocked, and Helena raised her voice and cried to him to come in.

The warden entered the room. As his eyes lit upon Pharaoh, he started, as though in surprise; then he closed the door behind him and turned to where Helena stood.

My lady moistened her lips. "I'm not at all satisfied, Florin, with the watch that is being kept. Here's Captain Fanning returned, but he was never challenged or—"

"I found a postern open," said Pharaoh. "To save the porter trouble, I entered by that."

"He should have been seen," said Helena, "crossing the bridge."

The warden looked greatly concerned.

"There is something amiss, my lady—I know not what. I will swear that Hubert is faithful and Piers, who is watchman tonight, is a man of his word. Yet, as I tell them, they might have no eyes nor ears."

"There is something amiss," said Helena. "Double the watchmen, Florin, and stop all leave. Two porters are to stay in the lodge and to keep a list of all persons that use the bridge. No postern is to be opened without permission from me. Why were the servants abed when I came in?"

"By his lordship's orders, my lady."

"Those orders are cancelled—until his lordship returns. And now rouse his lordship's valet and let him prepare the room in the eastern tower—the room above mine. Mr. Spencer Rachel, as well. She will make my room ready and wait till I come. One thing more."

She drew out her master key. "Here is my key, Florin. You may as well keep it for me until I need it again."

The warden bowed and took it.

"Will your ladyship speak to the men?"

"Not tonight. I've changed my mind. But please see that they do their duty. I've a definite feeling of danger—very pressing danger, Florin; so please beware."

"Rest assured, my lady, nothing that I can do shall be left undone."

Helena smiled and nodded, and the warden bowed low. Then he bowed to me, but not Pharaoh, and left the room.

"I congratulate you," said Pharaoh, "upon your quickness of wit. I had to give you some rope and you used it all."

Helena took her seat in a high-backed chair.

"I rather fancy," she said, "you'd have done the same."

"I don't know that I should have," said Pharaoh, wrinkling his brow. "I believe in a margin of safety. . . . Now why do you think the warden ignored me when he went out?"

Helena shrugged her shoulders. "Perhaps you don't command his respect."

Pharaoh fingered his chin.

"Dewdrop," he said quietly.

One of the curtains swayed, and Dewdrop stepped out.

"Concentrate on that warden, Dewdrop. You heard what her ladyship said. If he seems to be getting ideas, you must act for the best. The situation is delicate, Dewdrop, for what are we among so many? And now cover Mr. Spencer. I want to talk."

As Dewdrop moved towards me, he took his seat on a sofa and crossed his legs.

Pharaoh was looking at Helena, smiling an insolent smile.

"I'm afraid it's clear," he drawled, "that you didn't expect me so soon."

He sighed. "That's been the misfortune of so many people I've known. Some of them are still living. You see, a car came by, and the owner gave me a lift. To be perfectly frank, he surrendered the wheel to Dewdrop without a word. You know, I can't help feeling you ought to have thought of that."

"I agree," said Helena, shortly. "That was a bad mistake."

"But the only one," said Pharaoh. "Indeed, if I may say so, I'm much impressed. Mr. Spencer's quite a good chauffeur—I'm sure of that, but only a brain in a thousand would have thought of abducting the Count."

Helena stared.

"Are you being humorous?"

"No," said Pharaoh quietly. "I'm simply giving you the answer to a simple addition sum. As it's very short, I'll do it over again. . . . You left the castle as I was approaching the bridge. In fact, I was able to cross it while Hubert—the faithful Hubert—was closing the wicket, before he re-entered the lodge. That's why he didn't see me. But that's by the way. . . . Well, I found your departure astounding. I mean, on the face of it, once you had gained the castle, to deliberately leave it was the act of a fool. But you are no fool, Lady Helena. . . . I was still considering this paradox, when I found the postern ajar. I confess that helped me a lot—in more ways than one. And the moment I heard that the Count of York was missing, the sum came out."

He uncrossed his legs and leaned forward. "Let me put some cards on the table. I want you to see that, if for no other reason, because you have scruples you are weighted clean out of this race. You see, I am not so embarrassed—I never am. Now take tonight. Placed as you were, once I was back in the castle, nothing this side of hell would have got me out. Yet the Count would have disappeared. Now there's a little problem—which I will resolve. I assume he was drunk—forgive me, but he usually is by ten. Well, they say blood's thicker than water, but I never found it so. I should have dropped him gently into the moat. . . . Perhaps you think I'm bluffing. Let me tell you what happened tonight. I wanted a car—badly, and I took the first that came by. Well, that was against the law. By taking that car I offended the law and order—two inconvenient gods. They therefore had to be sidetracked. . . . What is left of that car is lying on its side in a gully, it's still burning—with the man it belonged to inside."

This recital was dreadful enough, but Pharaoh lent it a horror that made my blood run cold.

"Are you seeking to frighten us?" Helena said.

Pharaoh sat back.

"No," he said, smiling. "Only to open your eyes."

He glanced at his watch. "Dear, dear, a quarter to two. It's far too late to discuss my mission tonight. If you'll promise me one or two things—well, I dare say your room is ready—"

he raised his eyes to the ceiling—"and the room above yours."

"You insolent swine!" I roared. "If you think—"

The sentence ended in a manner which I should like to forget. I yelped with pain, leaped from my seat on the table and swung about, snarling and furious, to face Dewdrop's leveled pistol some three feet away.

The Jew had pricked my buttock with the blade of his knife.

I hesitated, trembling with rage and desperately weighing the chances of an immediate attack. Fire upon me they dared not.

Helena's arm was about my shoulders, and her cool, slim hand on my wrist.

"Not that way, my darling, I beg you. Let me play the hand."

"I entirely agree," said Pharaoh. "You're much too mutton-headed. But you mustn't become abusive. That's really all Dewdrop meant."

"All right," I said thickly. "You play it. I'll manage to bide my time."

The clasp on my shoulders tightened, but that was all.

"What terms," said Helena, quietly, "do you suggest?"

"Your word that you will do nothing before midday. That at that hour you two will be here, to take up the same positions you now lay down. That you will give no orders and make no sort of statement which might correct the impression that I am your guest. In a word, I desire your parole—the parole of you both."

"I give it," said Helena, quietly.

"And Mr. Spencer?" said Pharaoh. Before I could speak—

"I pledge his word," said Helena. "That's good enough," said Pharaoh. "Allow me to wish you good night."

He bowed and turned to the door. "Come, Dewdrop," he said.

Half an hour had gone by, and I was sitting, brooding, on the side of my bed. I was clad in the Count's pajamas and was wearing his dressing-gown. I had cleansed myself in the bathroom and staunch my wound. This, of course, was nothing, but because it was deep, it had bled a deal more freely than I had supposed. It certainly ached a little, but I was more hungry than hurt. I needed food very badly—to help me, body and soul. Sleep was out of the question. Besides, I did not feel tired. . . .

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

A paste made of dry starch and water brushed over a grease spot and allowed to dry on will remove spot if not of too long standing.

When making slip covers for furniture, ample room should be allowed for seams, easy slipping on and off, and for shrinkage in washing.

A tablespoonful of ammonia added to the water in which glass jars are washed, will make the glass very clear. Rinse well before using.

To remove iron rust from white washable materials, spread stained place over a vessel of actively boiling water and squeeze lemon juice on stain. After a few minutes, rinse the fabric and repeat the process.

A curtain roller or a rod run through both hems of a glass curtain will stretch curtains so they will not have to be ironed. Hang up until dry, then remove rods and press hems of curtains.

As soon as your furnace fire is out and cellar thoroughly cleaned, whiten the walls with a cold water paint or whitewash.

To make pistachio flavoring, mix together equal parts of vanilla and almond flavoring.

Pour off the water in which onions are boiled three or four times while boiling. This removes the bitter taste so often found in red-skinned onions.

Corroded tops of salt shakers may be used for some time if given a coat of one of various colored enamels.

To protect a candle from drafts when carrying it about the house, place wax on bottom of glass and set candle into it.

Don't Guess But Know

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

UNCLE SAM STEPS IN

The Federal Government has attempted to lay Dannie Sullivan by the heels. Sullivan is the notorious gambler who seems to bear a dim life as far as the sheriff, police and state troopers of Michigan are concerned. For years he has changed in the vicinity of Detroit, making changes of the law got too tough was chiefly at him that being a slot machine campaign was dropped two years ago. The net result, however, was only to make him change his location. For several months

he has been operating as a gambler

on Ten Mile Road near the Macomb

Wayne county line.

The federal government alleged that he made a profit of $133,000 in 1929 and 1930 for which he failed to pay income taxes. Sentiment of $225,000 was offered by him and his associates. The penalties for the five years and a fine of $10,000 for personal evasion and a $10,000 fine for conspiracy.

This is the same in that used by the federal to take Al Capone out of circulation when the Chicago authorities were powerless.

700 TONS OF GRAVEL TRUCKS TO BE BLACK- TOPPED THIS YEAR

Seven hundred tons of gravel trucks will be permanently removed this year from the list of gravel roads under an $8,000,000 construction program of the state highway department and the works progress administration.

The program provides for the surface of this mileage with dust-proof on aggregate. Half of this program appropriation will be spent on the Federal Aid system in the state and the other half on state trunklines off the Federal Aid system.

Grading and drainage work on the state trunkline phase of this program has been under way this winter and the roads are to be surfaced next summer. Projects on the Federal Aid system scheduled for this improvement were re-submitted to Washington this week for final approval by

State Highway Commissioner Murray

Dr. Van Wagener.

The improvements are to be made in the tourist and agricultural belts,

the commissioner revealed. The program on the Federal Aid trunklines, provides for the expenditure of $2-

500,000 on Upper Peninsula roads, and $1,500,000 on trunklines north of the Saginaw-Muskegon line in the lower peninsula. Projects on trunk-lines of the Federal Aid system will be carried out throughout the state.

These roads are to be constructed under the engineering supervision of the state highway department specifications. The V.P.A. will handle all other details.

Commissioner Van Wagener revealed that the construction of the new roads will answer to the dust proof type of surfacing is being used but costs about twice as much as the old concrete type of build. Maintenance costs are only more than half the cost of the old gravel roads, or about one-half more than is required for concrete pavements. The new roads will affect all the traffic in the state and that the ideal corrected would be an all-paved system of 1,500 miles of existing roads. At this ideal it would cost the state $36,000,000. "Obviously, we haven't enough money to accomplish this ideal and we look up to the state as the best alternative.

Commissioner Van Wagener sometimes has pointed out that 100 additional miles of gravel roads had been added in the 1936 dust-laying program, but that 140 miles of the new trunkline mileage.

ADOLESCENCE COURSE FOR USE IN STATE SCHOOLS

The department of public instruction has decided to place temperance before every school child and let him decide for himself whether he will drink.

Dr. E. E. Elliott, state superintendent of public instruction, who is in charge of the new temperance study, said it will be used for prohibited methods of teaching to frighten children into abstinence and banned

the old method.

The course for the course has been developed and will be placed in the hands of the 60 teachers in the public system before May 1. It is the result of conferences between leaders of "wet" and "dry" factions, educators and health officials.

Governor Fitzgerald and temperance organizations have differed widely over a plan for temperance education in the school system. At the close of the last legislative session, the governor vetoed a bill appropriating $10,000 to finance temperance education in schools for two years.

"Let the teachers offer courses in temperance," Governor Fitzgerald told those who sought financial aid

"If they don't teach it, they should be reprimanded."

Dr. Elliott said the new course is an answer to the governor's challenge. He indicated the cost of preparing the material on temperance education at $700.

Dr. E. E. Elliott, director of curriculum research, said mimeographed copies of the material to be added to the present school system were introduced quietly in the schools of Oposco.
