No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult-dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective anti-acid, gently laxative wafers today. Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letterhead. Select Products, Inc., 4402 23rd St., Long Island City, N. Y.

Italy Takes Addis Ababa; the Emperor Flees

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE of Ethiopia gave up the hopeless fight against the Italian invaders and fled from Addis Ababa with his family.

Mussolini's victorious troops soon after marched into the capital, the first to enter being a picked regiment representing all units of the Italian army, the Askari, infantry, artillery, air force, engineers, grenadiers, bersaglieri, Alpini, cavalry, marines and Fascist militiamen.

Their coming was welcomed by the foreigners who remained in the city, for as soon as the negus left, the natives began to pillage, plunder and burn. The business center of the town was speedily wrecked and the government buildings were stormed and ravaged, these including the treasury from which the state's store of gold was stolen, and the armory. The streets were strewn with corpses and the Ethiopians, crazed by liquor, rushed about shooting at random and gathering up their loot to carry it to the hills.

Only one foreigner was reported killed. That was Mrs. N. A. Stadin, American wife of an Adventist missionary, who was struck by a stray bullet. Nearly all other foreigners were gathered in the well fortified British legation, but American Minister Cornelius Van H. Egbert with his wife and the male members of the staff remained in the American compound. They were armed only with rifles and pistols and were under orders from Secretary of State Hull not to risk their lives uselessly; but they were determined to hold the legation and radio station as long as possible.

This plucky little group was attacked repeatedly by marauders but repulsed all onslaughts. Mr. Engert was in wireless communication with Washington. The British legation offered to send a detachment of Sikhs to escort the Americans to the British compound, but Mr. Engert declined to leave his legation at that time. Next day he and his staff evacuated the compound.

Haile Selassie went by train to Djibouti, French Somaliland, and was received with all honors at the governor's palace. He and his family boarded the British cruiser Enterprise and sailed for Palestine.

At first it was rumored the French would hold him for a time, but later advice said the French and British governments had decided that he remained a sovereign and must have full liberty of movement.

So ends the military part of Mussolini's African adventure, a success despite the opposition of the League of Nations and the imposition of economic and financial penalties. The duke announced the victory to his country from the chamber of deputies and there was wild rejoicing throughout Italy. It is taken for granted Mussolini will set up an Amharic state in part of Ethiopia under a puppet emperor; and presumably Italy, France and Great Britain will get together and determine their respective zones of influence in the ancient empire. The humiliated league can do nothing except lift the existing sanctions, which proved futile in halting the war. British Foreign Minister Eden and his fellows in the government must admit as gracefully as possible their failure to check Mussolini and get what they can for Britain out of the African tragedy. France probably is not sorry over the outcome, for her opposition to the duke's ambitious scheme always was half-hearted.

Vandenberg's Name Is to Be Presented

SENATOR ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan has asked Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of that state to present his name to the Republican convention in Cleveland for the Presidential nomination, but the senator insists this does not make him an active candidate.

"The Michigan state convention generously instructed the Michigan delegation in Cleveland to present my name," the senator said. "But the delegation is unpicked—at my request. It is free to vote as it pleases. I have not sought a delegation here or elsewhere and I shall not do so. I have not sought the nomination and shall not do so. My situation is not changed in the slightest."

Friends of Senator Borah in Utah tried unsuccessfully for a Borah pledged delegation from that state. The Republican state convention in Ogden voted to send an unpledged group to Cleveland, following the recommendation of the resolutions committee.

The Arkansas delegation also will be unpledged, though the state convention approved an "expression of good will" toward Gov. Alf Landon.

Col. Henry Breckenridge, who offered himself to the Democrats as a Presidential nominee aspirant merely so that disaffected members of the party might have some place to go, received about one-seventh of the votes in the Maryland preference primary. The rest, of course, went to Mr. Roosevelt. Colonel Breckenridge had made no campaign.

Radicals Control French Chamber of Deputies

FINAL elections in France put complete control of the chamber of deputies in the hands of the revolutionary "Popular Front," a coalition of Communists, Socialists, Radical Socialists and minor left wing groups. The new chamber does not meet until June, and the confusion is so great that there are fears of chaos and financial panic in the interim. Many believe the Popular Front will be unable to form a stable government to succeed that of Premier Sarraut. The lead must be taken by the Socialists, for they now form the largest group in the chamber with 146 seats. The Radical Socialists have 115, the Communists 72 and minor left parties 44. The National bloc, including center and right parties opposed to the leftists, have 236 seats.

Senator Hastings Will Not Seek Re-election

DANIEL O. HASTINGS, senator from Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee and outspoken opponent of the New Deal, will not seek re-election when his present term expires.

He so announced in a letter to the party leaders of his state, giving as his reason the necessity to devote himself to his law practice. This may have influenced his decision, but it is more than suspected that the real reason was the fact that the du Pont family, all-powerful in Delaware Republican politics, had decided that the senatorial seat should go to Gov. C. Douglas Buck, who is related to the du Ponts by marriage. Senator Hastings has always been ready and eloquent in defense of the du Ponts against attacks by the New Dealers.

Navy Expansion Measure Passed by the House

SINCE international naval disarmament efforts have failed, those who advocate adequate national defense rejoice in the passage by the house of the bill appropriating approximately $531,000,000 to build our navy up to treaty strength. Representative Marcantonio of New York and a few others put up lead opposition, but a record vote was not necessary. The objectors dwelt especially on a clause authorizing the laying of keels for two 35,000 ton battleships after January 1, 1937, should any foreign signatory to the London naval treaty start a battleship replacement program. Two days later they might have read dispatches from London saying rumors had reached there that Japan was considering laying down a 55,000 ton battleship armed with 21-inch guns.

Appropriations in the bill, along with other available funds, will give the navy a total of $592,237,507 for the next fiscal year, starting July 1.

Business Men Differ With Mr. Roper

DANIEL C. ROPER, secretary of commerce, appeared before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its annual meeting in Washington and warned its members, most of whom are persistent critics of New Deal policies, that unless private enterprise takes up the slack in employment, business must pay the relief bill out of earnings.

"It is the responsibility of all business and industrial enterprises," said Roper, "and not of one particular segment of the government to increase its efforts for greater employment. If a substantial measure of increased re-employment does not take place the taxation for relief purposes will come largely from business earnings. There must be re-employment or a longer period of increased taxation."

Roper admitted that the administration had fostered bureaucracy, but insisted that it was occasioned by an emergency, and responsibility for its increase again lay at the door of private business.

Various members of the chamber replied spiritedly. Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National bank of Chicago, predicted that if the administration embarked on a sound fiscal program that would inspire confidence, business would make rapid strides toward recovery. He criticized the pending tax on corporate earnings as impracticable and a brake on business expansion and stability.

Wine Barrels Are Carried Under the Carts.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.
SAO MIGUEL of the Azores islands is turning from oranges to pineapples as its chief source of wealth. Excellent oranges are still grown, but since the island lost the British market a few years ago, pineapple culture has occupied agriculturists.

Natives of Sao Miguel hope to develop their island into an "Isle of Pines" which will provide a good part of Europe with practically all its fresh supply of pineapples.

An Englishman, a skilled horticulturist, arrived at Sao Miguel more than eighty years ago to lay out the famous Jose do Canto gardens. It was he who brought the first pineapples to his employer's hothouse. Twenty years later the fruit was shipped to England, each pine in its pot selling for two guineas. England and Germany are now the chief consumers of Azorian pines, France and continental Portugal following.

The plant, which is here of the smooth-leaved Cayenne variety, is grown under glass, special beds of fermenting heath or some other mountain shrub being provided. All the plants are brought to blossom at the same time by a process of smoking, the value of which was accidentally discovered many years ago when a carpenter, working in one of the pineapple houses, chanced to set fire to a pile of shavings. To the surprise of the grower, the plants, instead of being spoiled, burst into flower. By this method practically all the plants in a hothouse can be marketed at the same time, many months earlier than formerly.

Little glass houses shimmer on emerald slopes in various sections of Sao Miguel, the exclusive producer of pineapples in this archipelago. Wrapped in cellophane or packed in excelsior and crated, the fruit is shipped to the European market by a fleet of three vessels owned by the growers. In 1934 about 2,000,000 pines, worth half a million dollars, were exported.

Tea, Too, Is Grown There.

Another exotic industry on this island is the production of black and green tea, which here retains its original name, "cha." Ever since they discovered the sea route to India and planted their settlements as far afield as Macao (Macao), on the coast of China, the Portuguese have been a tea-drinking nation.

There is an old belief that tea is better if it has not crossed the sea. Whether this is true or not, Azorian tea tastes to some much like the far eastern variety on its native soil. It is consumed locally and shipped to other parts of Portugal.

A number of Chinese were originally imported as instructors in the tea culture, but now only native labor, chiefly female, is employed. The plantations dot the hillsides on the northern side of the island, which has greater moisture than the south coast. The stiff little evergreen shrubs stand in precise rows, very foreign in appearance, contrasting strangely with the familiar European flora about them.

A motor road parallels the coast of Sao Miguel, with connecting cross-roads, enabling the traveler to see much of beauty and interest, even in one day ashore, including trips to the two largest volcano craters.

On the country roads are slow-swinging bullock carts, with woven-willow bodies filled with heath for the pineapple houses. Some are of archaic pattern, with solid wheels of the Roman type, their approach heralded by a complaining, creaking "song."

Sao Miguel has a deliciously green and restful countryside. Checkerboard fields, brown and green, alternate with woods filled with songbirds. These islands, like those of the Madeira and Canary groups, are the habitat of the wild canary of greenish-gray hue. Its glad note is one of the pleasantest features of the Azores, where it seems to be more generous and more vocal than on the islands farther south.

Near every stone cottage stands a corn rick where brownish maize in the husk is hung to dry. It forms the staple cereal crop of the islands. Fava beans (broad beans) and yams are grown and are leading articles of export.

In the Crater of a Volcano.

Skirting pine-clad cliffs, a road climbs to a misty, heather-clad tableland; then descends into Furnas valley, shut in by towering green walls. Were it not for the puffs of steam ascending from its many boiling springs, it would be difficult to believe that this peaceful vale is the crater of a mighty volcano which more than once poured out its molten lava and which still speaks through vents in the hot sulphur-stained crust around the springs.

It is a beautiful picture from the heights, this quiet, sheltered valley with its long, narrow village meandering like a stream through woods and meadows. The lake, on a raised platform of the crater, lies some distance from the settlement, which is a favorite summer resort.

Prescott, the famed historian, came to Furnas as a young man to visit at the summer home of his grandfather, first American consular officer in Sao Miguel, who was appointed in 1795 by President Washington.

Furnas has a thermal establishment, where sulphur and iron baths are available. Near-by fountains supply various kinds of mineral water, the place being noted for the diversity of its waters and the proximity of hot and cold springs.

One deep, cavelike caldron, belching forth boiling mud and steam, is called "The Mouth of Hell." Its evil appearance and the strong smell of sulphur give the impression that this is really an entrance to the abode of His Satanic Majesty.

Stately manorial houses, erected centuries ago, are to be seen throughout Sao Miguel, usually set on the heights. One such house, built in 1724, is a delightfully romantic old place. The big stone-paved kitchen has a chimney-place which is a room in itself. Standing in it, beside the huge brick hearth, one can look up the wide chimney, which towers above the house, to a patch of blue sky. Such chimneys are a distinctive feature of Azorian houses.

Life of the Inhabitants.

The upper class of Ponta Delgada leads a pleasant life, quiet as compared with the stress of American cities. There is a social club where dancing is a favorite pastime; a coliseum seating 2,600; a sports field for football, tennis, croquet, and handball; a baseball park; and an open-air sea pool built in the rocks by the shore.

There are motion pictures twice a week, chiefly from Hollywood. American influence is apparent in the English spoken throughout the Azores. There seems to be a genuine liking for the United States. The Stars and Stripes are in evidence at every festival. During the World war, Ponta Delgada was an American naval base.

Economically self-contained, the Miaelenses are no less independent when it comes to their social pleasures. In their amateur shows the scenery is apt to be painted locally, the costumes made in the homes of the young men and women who participate. In their singing, dancing, and acting these young people exhibit amazing talent and poise.

The young folks mingle in "crowds," but there is here no such free and easy companionship among them as exists in the United States. The chaperon is still in vogue and "balcony courtship" is carried on with its own prescribed etiquette, the girl leaning over the second-story balcony to talk with her admirer on the street below.

The finest sight on the island is the crater of Sete Cidades (Seven Cities). The view from the rim is magnificent. The cup-shaped crater is nearly ten miles in circumference and holds, besides a lake with a hamlet on its shore, pastures and cultivated fields and three volcanic cones due to subsequent eruptions.

Owing to varying depths and deposits, the lake, shaped like the figure 8, and sometimes spoken of as two lakes, is vividly green at one end, brilliantly blue at the other.

The Lindberghs, on their aerial edgewise from Greenland's icy mountains to the steaming jungles of the Amazon, swooped down over this secluded lake.

There are many among the poor of the Azores who have suffered since money orders have ceased to arrive from Manoel or Antonio, who formerly prospered in Providence or New Bedford. The Azorian assets are a stout heart, a willing hand, a productive soil, and a climate which, though damp and rainy six months of the year, is without extremes of temperature.

Wages are low, but food is cheap. The main diet of the peasant consists of soup of cabbages, beans and potatoes, white cornbread, and fish. Pork and beef are only for special occasions, such as religious holidays. In the Ponta Delgada market 60 small fish sell for two and a half cents; a pound of green peas for less than two cents. A fresh live lobster, which is only for the well-to-do, costs 25 cents.

Find Roman Ruins in Bavaria

A Roman temple, the third of its type, has been unearthed near Regensburg, in southern Bavaria. Coins found when a wall was excavated in an orchard at Ziegetsdorf, in this neighborhood, proved to hail from the Second and Third century after Christ, and inscriptions were discovered establishing beyond doubt that the wall had formed part of a temple dedicated to the god Mercury.

The Mothers and Sons and Fathers and Daughters banquet, given by the Ladies Guild of St. Stephen's Episcopal church Saturday night, was a most decided success from every point of view, with about 125 in attendance.

The "Hungry Five" or Dutch orchestra of the University high school of Ann Arbor, rendered several numbers. Mrs. Emil J. Kuchar, president of the Guild, introduced Miss Julie Adele Ball, who acted as toast-mistress. Mrs. William H. Kocott responded for the mothers, Rev. Lloyd L. Merrill for the fathers, Mrs. Clifford C. VanHorn for the daughters and Benny Kuchar for the sons; other responses were given by Miss Lydia Greedus of Detroit and Wallace E. Watt of Ann Arbor.

Songs: "Mother" by Edna DeWolf, Rita Paine, Mary Moon, Arlene Lear, Jeanne Bennett and Shirley Smith; "I Wouldn't Trade the Silver in My Mother's Hair" by Elsie DeWolf and Betty Ann Paine; "Cradle Your Mother" by Betty Ann Kuchar and one by little Bobby Murphy. Vocal duet, "Mother Macree" by Mrs. Nellie E. Haight and Charles E. DeWolf.

Vocal solos: "Tommy Lad" by Dan J. Noeker, and "O Little Mother of Mine" by Mrs. Clyde Higgins. Recitations: "Mother" by Melba Shannon; "When I Got Up" by Wecky Shannon; "Dad's Valentine" by Norma and Francis Grostie; "Society's Mother" by Edwin Shannon, Jr.; and "My Dad's Pants" by Donald Shannon.

Hamburg Hive No. 392, Lady Macabees met in regular session at I. O. O. F. Hall Tuesday. A delicious Bohemian dinner was served at 1:00 o'clock.

The feature of the meeting was the initiation of three candidates, Mrs. Edna Moore, Mrs. Charlotte Metzgar and Mrs. Ethel Parkinson. The work was put on by the officers of the Hive.

Announcement was made of the county convention to be held at Fowlerville, Wednesday, May 20. Mrs. Gladys Lee, commander of the Hive, was in charge of the meeting.

Mrs. Emil J. Kuchar was hostess at the monthly meeting of the Ladies Guild of St. Stephen's Episcopal church at her home at Hamburg village, Thursday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. Kuchar, presiding. Regular business of the Guild was transacted. Resolutions on the law regarding raffle games of chance, etc. were read. Bobby Murphy of Kalamazoo sang two songs. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Edwin Shannon, Jr., Thursday, afternoon, June 4. Punch and cake were served.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Winifred Bolser and Ernest Kittle of Northfield, which will be solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bolser of New Baltimore, on May 16.

Mrs. Arthur Doherr and two children, Marlene and Judith, have returned to their home in Chicago, Ill., after spending a few weeks with Mrs. Doherr's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. William Winkler.

YOU NEEDN'T EVEN DO

to enjoy automatic electric hot water!

Electricity provides you with trouble-free, modern lighting when you press a button in a room. But you needn't even press a button to enjoy electric hot water! This new service is completely automatic. It requires no attention whatever. Whenever you need hot water, simply turn the faucet—and there is your hot water on tap. This carefree service frees you forever from such bothersome details as running up and down stairs to light a manually operated heater, the annoyance of "tank patting" and waiting for water to get hot, the inconvenience and delay caused by having only lukewarm water in the pipes.

You will find a plentiful supply of hot water a great comfort in your home... for bath and shower, for shaving and washing, for cooking, cleaning, laundering, dishwashing and countless other daily tasks. You can make housework easier and pleasanter with the liberal use of hot water. It saves time and labor and adds to the efficiency of home-making. Once you have enjoyed the convenience of this automatic hot water service, you will wonder how you ever did without it. Stop in at any Detroit Edison office for complete information today!

Leonard Bury, an eight grade pupil at the Hicks (Red) school, won first prize in the original essay contest which was sponsored by the D. A. Rs of Howell and was open to all eighth grade pupils of the county. Leonard read his very fine essay, "Crime Menace" before the members of the Club on May 5 and received his prize. Leonard resides with Mr. Louis Shaban.

Brighter Walls and Woodwork

Create More and Better Light

Paint your ceilings, walls and woodwork in light colors for more and better light. Light colors give diffuse illumination by reflecting the light that falls on them in all directions. Diffuse illumination cuts down shadows and distributes the light evenly in all directions. It is estimated that some light painted walls reflect as much as 45% more light than dark painted walls. Your EYES will be grateful and you are not compromising with style either, as light colors and tints are seen in the most fashionable and smartest homes.

Mushroom Season Is Here

Be careful what you eat. Consider Dangerous mushrooms which have:

1. A cup-like formation at the base of the stem, (commonly called a death cup).
2. A scaly or close-fitting layer at base of the stem.
3. Loose warts on the cap.
4. A milky juice (unless this is red).
5. Brittleness, with gills nearly all of equal lengths and the flesh of the cap thin.
6. A honey-combed appearance of the gills, if the flesh tastes bitter, or the mouth of the tubes are reddish, or the flesh changes color when cut or bruised.
7. A cobwebby veil or ring when the plant is young.
8. A slimy cap and clay-colored spores.
9. A disagreeable and nauseating odor.

All mushrooms that are decaying or are in the immature button stage should be discarded.

SYMPTOMS OF POISONING. Vomiting and severe pain in the abdomen; gr at depression; unconsciousness; sometimes weak pulse; shallow respiration.

TREATMENT. At the first symptoms call your doctor.

FIRST AID. Cause vomiting; give stimulants and follow with large doses of Castor Oil. Place the patient in a lying down position with head low; cover warmly and apply heat by means of Hot Water Bottles.

COUNTY AGENT'S LETTER

Sheep Parasites
Sheep ticks and mites may be controlled by using one of the arsenical dips. The material is very inexpensive and will more than pay for itself in the increased quality of the wool and the wool clip. At the present time we have two permanent sheep dipping vats, one of which is located on the Wakeman farm and the other on the Crouse farm. I believe that these two owners would be willing to have a community dipping day at which time neighbors could bring their sheep to these places and dip them on a co-operative basis.

We are installing one new tank at the W. B. Clark farm under the supervision of Mr. A. J. Bell from the Agricultural Engineering Department. We hope that after this demonstration we will have several other tanks installed by an individual or a group of individuals. For the people that dip and drench their sheep regularly I am sure that there will be a decided increase in profits as both of these materials are very cheap.

Corn Borer
Corn borers spend the winter in corn stalks. As there has been no practical method devised for killing the adult moths that lay the eggs or for destroying the eggs on the plants in the summer, it is essential to kill the borer in the stalk.

Flowing is usually the cheapest effective treatment for corn refuse not otherwise destroyed. Stubble may be plowed under with any good single bottom plow and kept down. Whole stalks usually require wide bottom plows and the use of wires for a clean job. The plowing job must be clean to be effective and must be followed by careful subsequent cultivation that does not bring pieces of stalk to the surface. A plowed field must be free from surface refuse to the borer. All control work should be completed by June 1.

Renovating Old Lawns
When a lawn becomes thin and sickly looking, the question arises as to whether it is advisable to spade it up and start all over or to try to develop a satisfactory turf without disturbing the grass that is present. As a rule, it will be more satisfactory to start a new lawn. However, where there is a fairly even distribution of grass, it is usually possible to develop a good turf by giving proper attention to fall fertilizing, top-dressing, mowing and watering. Such lawns should be first liberally fertilized with a nitrogen fertilizer, and then top-dressed with one-fourth to three-eighths of an inch of a rich, garden loam or compost made with equal parts of topsoil, sand and manure. Where there are many bare patches in the lawn, it is better to spade the ground and start over, as this is more difficult to produce a satisfactory lawn by reseeding bare areas.

Cattle Sale
Michigan Jersey Cattle Club will hold a sale of Jersey cattle at Michigan State College, East Lansing, May 27. George Cooper, president of the organization, and chairman of the sale, announces that 40 cows and five young bulls consigned by 45 different breeders will be sold.

Successor to Rubis
R. S. Hudson, superintendent of Michigan State College farm and horse department, announces the acquisition of a new full-blooded Belgian stallion. The stud, Success de Cognobaux 17015, is a 2400 pound sorrel imported from Belgium by Holbert, Greeley, Iowa. He was grand champion stallion at the Indiana Spring Stallion Show at Indianapolis in March and will replace Rubis, 24 year old stallion who died last year, as head of the herd.

A Story That Will Thrill You ... A Century of Community Progress

From the sturdy pioneer guiding an oxen-drawn plow through untouched soil to the modern farmer with his powerful tractor used to speed up production of well-tilled soil . . . from the little general store trying to supply all the needs of the early settlers to the large department stores and modern shops of today offering the greatest variety of goods and services in history . . . from the clang of the village smithy's hammer against his anvil to the hum and whirr of the complex machinery of present-day industrial plants . . . from the simple, early athletic contests to the intricacies of football, baseball, hockey, golf and tennis . . . from the first newspapers struggling to furnish the community with news of the outside world weeks after events occurred to the modern daily newspaper with its speedy news-gathering facilities giving subscribers almost immediate information and pictures of important happenings. By word and picture, this panoramic view of the birth, growth and development of this community during a century will be recorded in the Centennial Progress Edition of The Ann Arbor Daily News to be published Tuesday, May 19. Evidence of the inconquerable will of the early settlers who laid the foundation for the community's rise—the development of the commercial and industrial structure . . . advances in education, in agriculture, in transportation . . . all will be told fully, accurately and interestingly in this special number. It is a story of which this community's residents may well be proud.

In order that hundreds of persons not residents may learn about this community, its natural and developed advantages, its nature, its potentialities, its future, The Ann Arbor Daily News has arranged for the mailing of Centennial Progress numbers. On the day of publication, May 19, papers may be purchased and will be mailed in an attractive envelope anywhere in the United States for 10c a copy. After May 19, copies of the edition may be purchased for 10c each but the purchaser must pay postage. Details of mailing, however, will be handled by The Daily News if desired. For further information concerning the purchase and mailing of extra copies of this edition, communicate with the Circulation Manager, The Ann Arbor Daily News.

THE ANN ARBOR DAILY NEWS CENTURY OF PROGRESS EDITION

FARM LOANS MADE

The Pontiac Production Credit Association is laying a large part in the spring operations of farmers in Livingston, Oakland, and Macomb counties, says Fred J. Beckman, secretary-treasurer of the association.

During March 78 farmers used their membership in the association to procure crop and livestock loans, which is about 3 times the number who obtained loans in February, he says. The March loans totaled approximately $29,700 compared with approximately $18,000 for February.

The members will repay their loans out of the proceeds of their farms this year, and in some cases they are making monthly payments, where there is regular, frequent income, such as from dairy farms. In the case of livestock bought for feeding, or of grain crops, payments are made when the products are sold.

Mr. Beckman said that a number of farmers who had never patronized the association before have joined since the first of the year, so as to have the benefit of its service. Loans are made by the association to farmers who hold class B stock, which is the voting stock, or who are willing to purchase class B stock when the loan is completed.

Sources of income are estimated for Livingston county to be derived, 26 per cent from crops, chiefly beans, wheat and potatoes; 31 per cent from livestock, chiefly cattle and hogs; and 43 per cent from dairying and poultry.

NEW EDUCATIONAL FILM

Recent progress in methods of producing, casting, and machining steel are pictured in a new educational film produced under the supervision of the United States Bureau of Mines and now available from the bureau's experiment station in Pittsburgh, Pa. The film has its setting in the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company at Dearborn, Mich., and is entitled "Making a V-Type Motor."

While the title indicates a study of the technique which permits the casting of the eight-cylinder V-type block as a single unit, the film is more comprehensive in scope. Beginning with an airplane view of the 1,096 acre plant, the pictorial story traces the manufacturing process from the arrival of the ore to final tests on the completed engine, with special emphasis on modern methods.

Steel treating processes requiring temperatures ranging from 310 degrees (Fahrenheit) below zero to 290 degrees above zero, precision inspection to an accuracy of three ten-thousandths of an inch, and inspection of rapidly rotating parts in the motor are among the operations shown.

HAMBURG DAMAGE

SUIT TOTALS $80,000

On September 21, 1935, cars driven by Harmon Earle of Flint and Harold Smith of Hamburg, collided on U. S. 441, about three miles south west of Brighton. Mr. Earl received injuries from which he later died. His wife, Bertha Winkelhouse, Earle's daughter, Elizabeth were injured and also Mr. Smith. Mrs. Earle has now started suit in the circuit court for damages to the amount of $80,000. Carl Stuhberg of Ann Arbor is her attorney, and Don Van Winkle and Martin Lavan appear for Smith.

THE PRESIDENTIAL SITUATION

In March, as in the three previous months, a nation-wide poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion showed an advance in popularity for President Roosevelt. The March poll showed 24.5 per cent of major party votes for the president, as compared with 24.1 per cent for February. According to this poll there are now 35 states with 365 electoral votes for Roosevelt, while 12 states would account for 150 electoral votes for the Republican candidate, one state being exactly 50-50.

According to one well-informed news source, Wall street has conceded the election of Roosevelt, but will spend at least four million dollars on radio, billboard and newspaper advertising in an attempt to elect a Republican congress.

The Republican candidate whoever he may be, will find himself confronted by such facts as the following:

In the week ending April 14 production of cars and trucks in the United States attained the highest level since August, 1929. Output for the week was 112,818 units.

The Bell System in the first quarter of 1936 had a net gain of 201,000 telephones, against a net gain of 113,000 a year; toll and long distance calls increased 13 per cent.

Construction awards in March were up 62 per cent over a year ago, totaling $199,028,300, as against $122,940,500 a year ago.

Money in circulation in the United States, according to a treasury report, amounted to $5,877,042,000 at the end of March, compared with $5,493,138,000 for 1935.

Figures may be dull, but certainly the story that these figures tell is far from uninteresting. They spell Recovery with a capital "R," and they also spell, unless all signs fail or a political overturn that is so unlikely as to be practically impossible should develop, the re-election of the present tenant of the White House.

American voters are not in the habit of kicking a president out of office for doing a good job. The Roosevelt job when he took office was to promote Recovery; those who argue that Recovery has not been promoted will not find any help for their argument in these figures.

"She was lying down on her bed when a gag was clapped over her mouth. Pharaoh, of course, but alone. She put up a fight, but he very soon had his way. He bound her wrists and ankles and took her master key. Then he carried her down her private staircase and into a secret room—the antechamber, in fact, to the cellar where lies the gold.

"I'm afraid there's no doubt that she suffered; but, except that Pharaoh put it across her, she simply leaves that bit out. But he must have been pretty ruthless, for in the end she opened the secret panel concealing the cellar steps.

"Well, Pharaoh and Dewdrop went down, to view the gold; but Rush and Bugle remained in the chamber on guard. I ought to have said that her hands and her feet had been freed. Still, she hadn't much chance, for they kept a torch on her face.

"I shall never understand why Pharaoh employed two such wash-outs as Bugle and Rush. The first thing those two bright lads did was, between them, to drop the torch. By the time they'd found it again their prisoner was gone. The door to the secret room is a secret door. It cannot be opened from within. It was, therefore, standing open. In a flash my lady was out and had shut the door.

"Well, though she was safe, she wasn't clear of the wood. She was locked in a staircase-turret, and Rush had her master key. She called from the embrasures, but, as the castle was empty, there weren't many ears to hear. Then, after a while she found Sabre standing beside her, licking her hand."

I felt that such a statement demanded some sort of expression of disbelief.

"But you said—"

"You shut your face," said Geoffrey. "Truth is stranger than fiction—every time. The door to the turret was open and so were the doors to her room. But her room had been used. The thieves had escaped by the chimney, entered her room by the fireplace, cleaned themselves up in her bathroom and disappeared."

"The obvious thing to do was to search the castle forthwith. I ought to have said that long before I got back, the switchboard had been repaired and the lights had come on, and while my lady was talking, the staff which had been scattered was trickling back. Florin and I induced some sort of order before beginning the search.

"We began with my lady's bedroom. One look at the hearth was enough. There was soot all over the place. But nothing and nobody else. We left the watchmen there and my lady and Florin and I went down to the secret room. It was empty now, we knew, for Pharaoh and company were gone; but the door to the cellar was open and my lady wanted it shut."

He took a deep breath.

"I'll tell you what we found. We found Pharaoh, Dewdrop and Rush—all three of them dead."

"Go on," said I, incredulously. "Fact," said my cousin, shortly. "I'm glad you weren't there to see it. It was a dreadful sight. Bugle had done the three in and then cleared out. I fancy there'd been some scrap. Pharaoh's back was broken; he had no wound.

"And here's my interpretation of this astounding find.

"In Pharaoh's absence Bugle and Rush between them let Lady Helena go. Warrantably fearful of the consequences of what they had done, Rush and Bugle quarrelled, and Bugle killed Rush. Afraid to face Pharaoh—such a dereliction of duty meant almost certain death—Bugle decided to kill him and Dewdrop, too. And so he did. Then he escaped by the chimney, with Lady Helena's master key. This let him out of the castle by the way in which he came in. Why he waited to let her out, I cannot conceive. Possibly some twinge of conscience—you never know. That's one of the points which we shall never clear up."

"Then everything's over," said I.

"The terror is laid," said Geoffrey.

"Bugle remains, of course. But I very much doubt if we shall see Bugle again."

"Thoughtfully I regarded my napkin. Was it five or six days before a corpse rose to the surface of the water in which it lay?

"Then everything's over," I repeated.

"Except the interment," said Geoffrey: "which is fixed for tomorrow evening, as soon as it's decently dark. As you seem to have had a night off, I think you might help with that."

Six days had gone by, and my precious secret was safe.

This was hardly surprising. Only two beings knew that I had approached the castle that terrible night: and of these the one was a dog and the other was dead. I had not used Barley's pistol: I had cleaned my cousin's knife: my filthy garments lay hid in the Plumage woods. Nobody knew that in my notecase was Helena's master key.

But another secret was safe.

On the Sunday night Pharaoh, Dewdrop and Rush had been laid in a common grave, not far from the mouth of the tunnel that ran from the moat. Though nobody knew it but I, Bugle had yet to appear. For some unac-countable reason the most sure with hold his dead.

"My cousin was painting Plumage. Twice a day he visited Yorick: but I was not invited and would not go up unasked. Neither would I go to Plumage—although I longed to see her—because I was sure that Helena sat with my cousin and watched him at work.

I had made up my mind to leave Annabel and to go and stay at Innsbruck which was a city I knew. My cousin was to follow with Barley in four days' time.

And so I was sitting at Annabel, cursing life and regarding my half-packed trunks with a listless stare, when the host of the inn came bustling with a note in his hand.

Dear John, "Your cousin tells me that you are leaving tonight. Before you go, will you be so good as to show me where young Florin lies? I would not ask you this favour, but I was fond of young Florin, and you are the only being who knows the site of his grave. I cannot believe you will refuse me, and so, if it will suit you, I will call for you today at a quarter to three. Please will you tell the bearer 'yes' or 'no.' HELENA.

I went down to the door of The Reaping Hook, to speak to the groom. "Tell her ladyship 'yes,'" I said.

As the coupe stole into the forecourt, I descended the steps of the inn.

Helena smiled and nodded and I took off my hat.

"Will you drive, please?" With a pounding heart, I took my seat by her side, perceived the glow of her presence, discovered her faint perfume.

The spot to which we were going lay 12 miles off, and, after leaving the car, we must walk half a mile through the forest to come to the dell. Be sure,

A Gag Was Clapped Over Her Mouth.

I drove slowly enough. . . . But though half an hour went by before we left the coupe, in all that time we never exchanged one word.

Again and again I sought to make some remark, but I feared that my voice would tremble and so betray an emotion I did not wish her to see. To sit thus by her side, as I had sat so often, was stirring the depths of my being, as though with a sword. Though I kept my gaze fast on the road, with the tail of my eye I could see her peerless features and the gentle, steadfast look on her lovely face. She was neither grave nor smiling, but something between the two: her air was the air of one whose day is over, who has of choice withdrawn from the lists of life and is now content to sit and watch the tourney in which she will ride no more.

I had never seen her like this and at first I could not discover what it was that I found unfamiliar in the beauty I knew so well: and then I saw: the eagerness was out of her face.

When I brought the car to rest, Helena was out in the road before I could open the door. Then we entered the forest together, as we seemed to have done so often in other days.

In silence we came to the glade where Geoffrey had been painting when I first set eyes on the thieves, and in silence we passed to the covert which might have been planted on purpose to keep the dell. And then at last we came out—not quite as I had intended, above the bluff, but lower down, between the bluff and the water, at the edge of a sloping lawn.

Helena caught her breath.

"Oh, John, how lovely," she said. Though I knew the spot was handsome, when I had seen it before I had been too much distracted to consider the features that went to make it so rare.

"It's finer than I thought," I said quietly. "I never saw it from here." For a moment we stood together, looking down on young Florin's grave. "I must bring old Florin," said Helena. "I think it would help him a little."

Helena sat herself down with her back to the rippling brook.

"I'd like to stay friends," she said. "I know you're going away, and I think you're right. But I'd like to think that though our moments are over, we still were friends."

"If you please," said I, dully, and sat down a little apart. "I've so much to thank you for."

"I don't know that you have. But that's neither here nor there. We've points to lay it down together—you and I. I know of strange, sweet fruits for children, hand in hand. And now we're back where we were—where we were when you came to Plumage and I told you about the gold. We can go farther back: perhaps we have. But I'd like to stop there, if you can. I mean, one can always be friends."

"I can stop there," I said thickly. "That's right," said Helena gently. "I thought you could."

For a moment she looked at the palms of her little hands, as though to consult those pretty pages before proceeding with a discourse that was making my heart feel cold.

Then— "When I say friends, I mean it. I'll always have a feeling that I can depend upon you. I shan't attempt to, you know. But I shall be glad of the feeling. You know. When things go wrong, it makes a world of difference if you can say to yourself 'If so-and-so were here, they would understand.'"

"You can count on me," I said. "You let me come to know you as—as I'll never know anyone else."

"Will it help you, John?" "I don't know. I'll write and tell you."

"That's right. And I'll always answer. You see, my dear, we must never meet again. We've looked at glory together—and turned away. It wasn't our fault, you know. We rather . . . rushed our fences. But down in that valley of shadow we gave each other judgment . . . and the judgments were good."

I could not speak. I sat as though turned to stone. My heart in my breast was ice. The blow which had fallen already, had fallen again. I had nothing to lose, and had lost it. "From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

"I don't know that mine was," I said desperately.

"I'm afraid it was," said Helena. "I put my love above honor—and you mustn't do that. And in any event mine was. You took my love and you put it back in its place. I don't say you weren't right to do it, because you were. But there are some flowers, my dear, that you can't transplant. I mean—if you move them, they die."

Blow upon blow. Couldn't she see that the thing she was striking was dead? Everything and everyone was dead. Young Florin and Pharaoh and Dewdrop and Bugle and Rush, and now her love. And I had killed them—not Bugle, of course, nor young Florin. But everything else.

"That's all right," I heard myself saying. "I'm glad . . . it's dead." There was a long, long silence. By the time it was over I had myself in hand.

At length— "Poor Bugle," said Helena slowly. "He did me a very good turn."

"By dropping the torch?" said I.

"I suppose he dropped it," she said. "But Rush was bullying me, and sometimes I think that Bugle was going to stop him. I don't know, of course. When it fell, I just flew for the door. And in any event he waited to set me free."

"A twinge of conscience," said I. Helena shrugged her shoulders. "He needn't have done it," she said. And then again, "Poor Bugle. I'll always remember him kindly. I think he was the best of the lot."

"I think you're right," said I. "I had a weakness for Bugle, to tell you the truth. Of course Rush showed him off."

"I know, I know. But he had a spark of feeling. More than a spark, I think. Very few men, placed as he was, would have troubled to let me out."

"What will you do," I said, "about the loss of your master key?" "Change the locks, I suppose. It's a hideous waste of money; but if Bugle's tempted, you know, there are plenty of crooks who'd pay a long price for that key."

I dared not pursue the matter: to do so would be to sail too close to the wind. I decided that Bugle must show another spark of feeling by returning her master key. I would post it to her.

There was another silence.

With her eyes on young Florin's grave, Helena spoke again.

"That wasn't the only reason why I wanted to see you before you went. I want your help in a matter . . ."

"Your cousin is painting my picture—he's really done it. It is the most lovely portrait . . . And as he won't hear of a fee, I want to make him a present."

"Well, I've got a cup 'at Yorick, an old, gold cup, with a curious history. Years ago, in the sixteenth century, the Yorick of that day was painted. A young painter came from Vienna, a man called Latz. Had he lived, he would have been famous, for the picture is terribly good. Your cousin picked it out in an instant as being the best of the lot. Well, when the painter had finished, the count was so pleased with his work that he called for wine and drank the young man's health, and when he had drained the cup he called for gold. I suppose his treasurer brought it. Then he filled the cup with gold pieces and gave the painter the lot. I hope it was adequate payment. In those days it probably was. The next morning the painter left Yorick to make his way home. On his lonely ride to Salzburg the poor man was robbed and murdered—his body was found by the road. Now the thieves didn't break up the cup, but six months later they tried to sell it at Innsbruck where Yorick then had a hotel. But, as it happened, they took it to the very goldsmith that Yorick himself employed. The moment he saw the arms, he knew that the cup had been stolen, and, to cut a long story short, the thieves were taken and hanged and the cup came back to the castle because the poor painter was dead."

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Jackson—Jackson is the first city in Michigan, outside of Detroit, to receive a WPA traffic survey. The WPA will provide $14,320 and the city $500 for the project.

Manistee—Officials of Michigan's 51 Elks' lodges are laying plans for an impressive series of floats in the parade during the Grand Lodge Convention at Los Angeles next July. They will depict the state's industries and attractions.

Lansing—An emergency appropriation of $15,000 to enable the Department of Agriculture to continue testing cows for tuberculosis in several Western Michigan counties has been approved by the State Administrative Board's finance committee.

Gagetown—Moses P. Freeman claims some sort of a record for having been clerk of Elmwood Township, Tuscola County, for 25 terms. He is now serving his twenty-sixth, and has been village clerk of Gagetown for nearly as long. He was born in Ontario, but was brought to this country by his parents at the age of two.

East Lansing—For the first time in the history of Michigan agriculture, every county in the Lower Peninsula has a county agricultural agent. Some counties share the time of their extension specialist with one or more adjoining counties. A number of counties also have home agents, working with the women in the counties, and club agents working with rural boys and girls enrolled in 4-H clubs.

Lansing—A Michigan Merit System Association has been organized to create public sentiment against the spoils system in politics. The purpose has approval of Gov. Fitzgerald, who said at a meeting in Lansing that civil service reform is not making satisfactory progress. The cost of establishing the merit system in Michigan, the Governor said, would be saved many times through more efficient government.

Lansing—The East Lansing office of the United States Weather Bureau reported in a crop summary that fall-sown grains and seedlings have been injured by spring frosts, although they came through the harsh winter weather in good condition. The report added that "vegetation has made slow growth and is considerably less advanced than is usually the case for the season. Precipitation was below normal in March and April."

Lansing—James F. Thomson, State agricultural commissioner, said that the State fair in Detroit will emphasize the celebration of Michigan's centennial. One of the features will be a $10 award to any person attending the fair who can prove he is 100 years old and has spent his life in Michigan. The fair will give a prominent place to Michigan's honey industry. It ranks second only to California as a producer of the sweet.

East Lansing—A mail poll of the principal fruit producing states with which Michigan orchardists compete indicates that their ill fortune will mean many extra dollars to this State's industry. Winter damage to orchards elsewhere has been severe, while Michigan came through with only light losses. A normal fruit crop in this state is estimated to be worth $15,000,000 and that is the kind of crop expected this year.

Traverse City—Manistee, Benzie, Leelanau, Grand Traverse and Wexford Counties prefer live deer to dead deer and sportsmen are fighting the proposed open season on the deer herds of the five counties next fall. In this battle the sportsmen are opposed by the scientists of the State Conservation Commission, who are doing their best to prove their point that killing a few deer in 1936 will result in ample food for those remaining and work toward a healthier herd.

Ypsilanti—Fred Wenzel, 21, and his brother, Elmer, 20, living on a farm south of Ypsilanti, were injured when their automobile, driven by Elmer, plunged over a seven-foot embankment into the wreckage of a bridge which had fallen during the night. The accident occurred at the Huron River at the Wayne-Washtenaw County line. The car dropped into four feet of water, but its momentum carried it up the sloping floor of the bridge and it crashed into the steel railing.

Gaylord—After 18 months of enforced suspension the Department of Conservation has resumed the assembly of aerial photographs into mosaics. This is a phase of land survey work. Aerial photographs of Isle Royale, Dickinson, Gogebic and Ontonagon, Grand Traverse and Wexford Counties taken from an altitude of 12,000 feet will be assembled into township mosaics on a scale of two inches to the mile. Photographic reproductions of these will be used for cover and base field mapping.

Lansing—Frank Murphy, high commissioner of the Philippines and former mayor of Detroit, was scheduled to depart from Manila May 13 to enter the Democratic primaries for governor of Michigan. Commissioner Murphy will be a delegate from the state to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia June 23. It was also established that Murphy has been reluctant to surrender his position in the islands. He is understood to have agreed to enter the campaign only at the request of President Roosevelt.

Uncommon Sense

He thinks that he is retired. Always from the time of his graduation from Yale and later from a medical school he has looked forward to the time when he could play a little golf, do a little reading, which he has lacked the time to do, and perhaps just sit around his office and talk with congenial friends who gather there.

Two or three times a month I stop in at his office and talk to him. Never have I called but the telephone has rung.

Sometimes a man working in the shipyard has been badly hurt, and the boss on the job refuses to have anyone but my "retired friend" attend to his injuries.

Sometimes a woman "up country" whose offspring he has always brought into the world, is going to have a baby. Nobody but Doctor Jim is wanted.

Every now and then, if there are no calls, he drops in to see some of his poor and elderly patients, who will pay him—"when they can."

When he gets a little time to rest he goes to the big city where some of his fellow physicians are practicing, and brushes up on some of the new methods of treating disease.

He has saved a little money, I know.

But his purse is always available to former patients who are out of jobs, or who are so used to having him treat them that they feel aggrieved if he does not come when he is called.

He always comes—sometimes for a consultation, sometimes just by himself.

His features have changed but little with time. His voice is as clear and resonant as ever.

He seems to bring healing and comfort along with him when he leans over a bed and quietly counts a pulse.

I suppose there are many like him in the country.

Doctoring is his business, just plain doctoring, but it is the kind of doctoring that accumulates friends. A sick person always seems to "get better" the minute he comes into the room.

He is well along in years, yet his step is elastic, his eyes are keen and he inspires confidence wherever he goes.

Such a man would have made a great reputation in a city. But he prefers to live and work among his people.

Simple Lines Mark This Exclusive Model

Pattern No. 1873-B

Checks in crepe, silk, plique, linen or cotton lead the way to chic in this easy, casual, day dress. While the design emphasizes smooth slim lines, comfortable fullness for the skirt is provided by a wide inset at the front.

The model cuts quickly and easily, with only seams to join at the sides, panel and waistline. No troublesome armholes to discourage amateur dressmakers, as the sleeves and shoulder line belong to "one family," and a slim waistline is assured the minute you insert the back darts. This is a perfect utility frock for a multitude of daytime needs. You can make it as a house frock, too—it's so simple and quick to launder and, being collarless, even easier to iron.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1873-B is available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44. Size 34 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 inch material. Send fifteen cents for the pattern.

The Barbara Bell Pattern Book featuring spring designs is ready. Send fifteen cents today for your copy.

LOCAL SOFTBALL GAME

Clark Has Won All Games Played
Ledwidge Breaks Into Win Column
Dillon Wins and Loses

Several good games were played in the Pinckney softball league last week. Ledwidge beat Singer, Monday night, 7 to 5, to win his first victory. Clark defeated Dillon Wednesday night, 7 to 6, in a game which went two innings overtime. Reason and Shehan were the two pitchers, and both got good support. Bill Baughn's hit scored Amburgey with the winning run in the ninth. Thursday a postponed game was played between Dillon and Singer. Singer led 5 to 3 up to the last inning when Dillon scored 4 runs on a base on balls, a home run, a single, and an error.

Home run hitters last week were Cliff Miller, Bill Lamb, Shehan, Smith, Hubbard, Lefty Reason, Emmett Clark.

AFTERWARD

The significance of fine funeral direction is seldom appreciated at the time of need. It is after the need has passed, and memories of loved ones have become all that remains that the perfection of our services is fully appreciated. Investigation will disclose that the beauty and dignity of this service is within the reach of any family.
