NO UPSETS

The proper treatment for a bilious child

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason why her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, must be carefully regulated as to dosage.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

Ringworm on Head. Child Cried All the Time

Cuticura Relieved

"Ringworm started with a white crust on my little boy's head. Then it turned into eruptions and his head was in a terrible way. These eruptions itched and when he scratched them they would burn, and more broke out. He could not rest, but cried all the time.

"I tried different remedies, but the eruption lasted one year. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and now my boy's head is relieved. I will never be without Cuticura Soap and Ointment." Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—Through some months past, Cordell Hull, secretary of state, has been proceeding cautiously and quietly in the negotiation of trade agreements with foreign nations. His work has attracted comparatively little public attention although throughout the negotiations individual economic interests who stood to gain or lose depending upon their lines of business have made known their feelings quite emphatically. Six of these trade agreements, now called trade treaties, had been consummated in this manner. When the seventh agreement came along, however, the story was different. That was the treaty with our northern neighbor, Canada.

It is impossible here to set forth the list of commercial products encompassed in the new trade agreement with Canada. I doubt if most of the people of this country ever will know details of that treaty. By the nature of things, few persons can be interested in all of the items. But, I do not believe that it is the question of individual interest in the entire list that ought to concern us. Aside from the policy involved in the negotiation and agreement on tariff concessions, the importance of the Canadian treaty to the average individual lies in the one or two, or half a dozen at most, items that affect each one personally.

I do not mean to say that the policy involved is unimportant. The contrary is decidedly true. From a political standpoint, of course, it is general policy that will be debated; from an individual standpoint it will be the direct effect that execution of that policy has on each of us that will determine our ultimate views and to that extent determine whether we will be for or against the general policy of reducing tariffs enacted against certain kinds of imports.

The new agreement with Canada takes effect January 1—provided the Canadian parliament ratifies it. No such ratification is necessary in this country.

The treaty was negotiated by Mr. Hull and President Roosevelt under the authority granted by congress in legislation passed a year ago which gave to the President the privilege of working out trade treaties without further congressional sanction. That law restricted the President in only one way, namely, the requirement that an increase or reduction of tariff rates included in those trade treaties may not exceed 50 per cent of the rate fixed in the present tariff laws. So it is seen that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull had virtually complete authority. It will operate for three years and, as far as I have been able to discover, it will be effective after Canadian ratification and there will be nothing anybody can do about it, be it good or bad.

In making public the agreement negotiated by Mr. Hull with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, the President asserted his belief that the agreement will initiate or revive a flow of commerce back and forth across our northern frontier in a manner that will be most helpful. He considered that the agreement would mean additional markets for some of our products and therefore additional work for some of our unemployed. The Canadian prime minister was of the opinion that in this agreement a long step had been taken toward healing a breach that has existed between the two countries for 69 years. He was hopeful, like President Roosevelt, that the channels of trade again will be filled, perhaps not to the levels of the boom days of 1923 and 1929, but would again carry satisfactory volume.

It will be recalled that our shipments to Canada in 1930 amounted to about $900,000,000. The depression cut those shipments to approximately $300,000,000 last year. So, if the predictions of the President and Mr. Mackenzie King are in any way fulfilled, a considerable traffic is due to begin upon the operation of this new treaty.

Any discussion of the treaty, however, that failed to call attention to basic conditions, in my opinion, would be short of its goal. So, it seems to me that while the President and the Canadian prime minister hold such high hope for trade revival, one ought not forget that trade will not flow if no market, no demand, exists for the goods. It may well be that by reducing the tariff duties that must be paid at the frontier on goods enumerated in the treaty that a reduction in prices will follow. It may then follow that the consequent reduction in prices will stir up a demand for the products. But that is not certain.

Now from the political standpoint, examination of the treaty must take into consideration individual items. And how those individual items affect communities and economic interests in this country. Already, we here in Washington have been deluged with the complaints of certain communities against provisions of the treaty. Likewise, we have heard those provisions praised from other sections. Thus, from the political standpoint we see developing a fine old fight over the tariff. Tariff questions are and always have been sectional questions. Industrial communities want to be protected against inroads of foreign competition where labor is cheaper. Agriculture wants to be protected against imports from bountiful producing lands in those countries where vast open spaces and high productivity exist at the minimum of cost. Importers and consumers of imported products always have fought and always will fight to have low tariff rates so that the things they buy may enter this country at the lowest possible price. With reference to the Canadian treaty, these same conditions exist.

Early outbursts indicate that cattle raising communities and dairy producing sections are up in arms because the treaty reduced a tariff protection accorded against imports of cattle and cattle products and the products of the dairy.

Lumber interests are upset. It is true that the lumber market in the United States has been in the doldrums for several years and naturally the lumber people do not want to have Canadian shipments absorb what little market they have.

These are just a few of the complaints. They are offset partially at least by the praise and the hopes of some other phases of agriculture such as fruit and vegetable growers who feel that they can now market their products in Canada. Without even a careful analysis of the more than seven hundred items involved in the treaty, it is to be seen that there will be possible markets available after January 1 to a number of agricultural lines and to some industrial interests. Yet it remains, as I said earlier, for the passage of time to disclose exactly whether the net result will be favorable to us commercially or whether the Canadians have put over a fine bargain from their standpoint.

All of the discussion about the Canadian treaty, however, brings back memory. As a result of these recollections, I dug back the other day into the congressional debates of 1911 when a Canadian reciprocity agreement was under consideration, backed by the late William Howard Taft. After reading those debates, particularly the observations of the late and distinguished Champ Clark of Missouri and Representative George Norris, now a senator from Nebraska, I could not fail to realize the political dynamite embodied in the new course of international trade relations adopted by President Roosevelt. It was the Canadian reciprocity proposal that defeated Mr. Taft for re-election to the Presidency. It was, indeed, that controversy that caused the organization of the Bull Moose party and that sent Mr. Taft into political oblivion.

I am not predicting here that the same consequences are in store for President Roosevelt but it is fair to recall, it seems to me, that the reciprocity proposal of 1911 burned the fingers of every political leader who touched it. The cases are not exactly comparable nor analogous. Mr. Roosevelt has retained a number of tariff duties which were swept aside in the proposed Taft reciprocity arrangement. He is therefore fortified to that extent. But you may be sure that those who sponsor the present Canadian agreement are going to meet the same sort of fight that was made against the Taft proposal.

Then there is in the current treaty circumstance another factor to be considered. It links back to the Champ Clark observations which were made on February 14, 1911. At that time, Mr. Clark was expressing the view that the reciprocity agreement constituted a step at least in the direction of universal peace. In the debate just mentioned, Mr. Norris asked Mr. Clark to elaborate on his view concerning the value of the agreement as an instrument of peace.

"I wanted to ask the gentleman a question along the line of universal peace," said Mr. Norris. "As I understand it, the gentleman favors the bill for at least one reason—that it will have a tendency to bring Canada into the Union."

"Yes," Mr. Clark replied. "I have no doubt about that. I do not have any doubt whatever that day is not far distant when Great Britain will joyfully see all of her North American possessions become a part of this republic. That is the way things are now tending."

So, if the controversy over the present Canadian tariff agreement becomes violent, I think it is fair to expect that again we will hear the question discussed whether the United States is seeking to annex Canada—to make Canada part and parcel of the United States. Of course, as far as anyone can see today, annexation of Canada is inconceivable but the incident is related here simply to show how far-reaching such controversies may become.

Designers in a Mood for Pleating

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLEATS, pleats and nothing but pleats, is the message of many of the smartest fashions this season. Turn where one will in the realm of costume design, there's an orgy of intriguing pleated effects "carrying on." So let's keep up with the mode while we talk about pleats, pleated and being pleated.

French designers, especially, are not leaving anything unpleated that could, should and must be pleated according to their idea of things. Their pleated mood pertains to daytime fashions as well as those of highest evening formality. The all-over pleated gown reflecting Grecian inspiration is a highlight in evening modes. Evening capes to go with these lovely creations are also completely pleated in waistline or longer lengths. In daytime fashions the all-over pleated dress, has also been received with acclaim.

However, all-over pleating is only one phase of the subject, for the use of pleats is embracing every sort from the tiniest of sprightly pleated edgings which run hither and thither about hemlines and up and down, flanking each side of neat buttoned closings which sometimes extend from head to foot. Some designers there are who make a feature of pleated tiers and apron fronts and pleated sleeves.

The new fabrics are entering into the pleated conspiracy with a noble gesture. Most of them seem made just to be pleated—fairly invite one to pleat them. Take the all-silk black crepe which is so ultra smart for daytime dresses. It pleats to perfection. A statement that does not need a second telling after one glimpses the stunning gown in the center of the illustration. Pleated every inch of the way is this black silk crepe afternoon dress. The pleats are stitched down at the neck, shoulders and waist, giving a fitted well-groomed appearance to the frock. A green clasp at the throat and a suede belt in the same color provide bright contrast. This dress is the much talked-of Moynaux which is meeting with such outstanding success this season.

An effective treatment of wider pleats in a black silk crepe dress for the young girl, is pictured to the left. The pleats are stitched with tailored precision about the neckline and released half way down the skirt so as to slenderize at the same time that it provides a flared hemline. The bodice is a modified shirtwaist with tiny metal buttons in front.

Speaking of the new materials adapting themselves so readily to the pleated mode, the new silk lame weaves, many of which are sheer and tissue-like in texture, enter into the scheme of things with infinite grace. If you are wanting a lovely gown for prom gayety, here it is at the right in the group pictured. Shirrings and pleats go fifty-fifty in the instance of this ultra chic and adorable evening dress made of silver silk lame. The shirred top is held by narrow double straps, and the décolletage is outlined by a tiny band of pleats. The pleated theme continues in the skirt, held well in place by the crispness of the silk lame. The only trimming is the metal and jeweler buckle of the belt.

Among the pleated triumphs in evening fashions are the perfectly charming airy-fairy floating visions of silk chiffon, most lovely, perhaps, in white but which set your heart throbbing at faster pace in any of the new jewel colors or pastel shades. Sometimes only the skirt is pleated, but when it is, it's done so artfully it flutters out like a fleeting cloud or a mist enveloping the figure.

WEAR TO SCHOOL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Is the "what to give for Christmas" problem beginning to disturb your peace of mind? If it's Junior or Little sister you have in mind, the answer will be found in the picture. To become the happy possessor of a pig-grain three-quarter length coat just like big brother's is enough to bring a big smile to any little boy. Little girls have a liking for leather coats, too, for no doubt they have heard their elders declare that leather's the thing for smart sports wear.

FUR CAPES RICHER; OF MANY VARIETIES

Fur capes are richer than they have been in years. Full-length evening models are made of strips of silver fox running from shoulder to hem—one very elegant one boasting twenty full-sized animal skins. Knee-length day capes are fashioned of mink, silver fox, dyed red fox or moleskin, while any number of shorter capes appear in astrakhan, nutria or broadtail.

Occasionally the fur capes for day wear are cut with broad shoulders and little fullness below so that they hang straight, though more often they have some flare.

New Soft Wool Weaves Are Proving Popular Just Now

With wool increasing in fashion importance, and women's insistence on being comfortable indoors as well as out, something pretty definite has been done in this year's weaves for the interests of all concerned.

This year's domestic weaves are as soft as chiffon, warm enough for all normal purposes, and have taken on an additional silky finish, adding to wearing enjoyment.

Colors have never been more flattering. That day has gone when winter means somber tones, and the "little wool frock" to wear underneath the tweed coat or the fur sport coat may be as gay and colorful as one's temperament demands.

Whiter Blouses White silk blouses should never be hung out to dry as it will yellow them. Wrap them in towels until ironing. If they become yellowed in spite of your precaution, use a little whitening in the rinse water.

Sharp Contrast Paris is wearing black afternoon frocks with billowy white sleeves—a style becoming to many women.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY

By CORDELL HULL, Secretary of State.

OUR policy as a member of the community of nations should be twofold—first, to avoid being brought into a war and, second, to promote as far as possible the interests of international peace and good-will.

A virile policy tempered with prudent caution is necessary if we are to retain the respect of other nations and at the same time hold our position of influence for peace and international stability in the family of nations.

In summary, while our primary aim should be to avoid involvement in other people's difficulties and hence to lessen our chances of being drawn into a war, we should, on appropriate occasions and within reasonable bounds, use our influence toward the prevention of war and the miseries that attend and follow in its wake. For, after all, if peace obtains, problems regarding neutrality will not arise.

QUALIFIED NEUTRALITY

By BERNARD M. BARUCH, Former Chairman of War Industries Board.

I AM sufficiently crass to say that if cotton is to be sold to a country from which it may find its way into the hands of a belligerent, then America should have the right to sell that cotton unless and until every other country agrees to withhold its supply.

Look at other countries who are selling or who have sold munitions and other supplies to both Italy and Ethiopia. Why should we continue to be the great international Fat Boy, at whose stick of candy other nations take an unwelcome bite?

The state fire marshal's office inspected the City of Ann Arbor last week for fire hazards and found 1300 rooming houses, sorority and fraternity buildings violating the Brown Fire Hazard Law, passed in 1935, following the Hotel Kerns disaster at Lansing. Conditions here are announced as the worst in the state. 40 of the buildings are fraternity houses. University authorities stated that most of them would be forced to close as they were financially unable to comply with the law.

The Ann Arbor School Board, by a vote of 6 to 3, decided to hire Kenneth Eby, social science teacher for another year. He is a socialist, and it was alleged that he taught his students radical doctrines. This is a "red hot issue" in Ann Arbor, and has divided the city into two camps. It was also charged that he addressed groups outside the school. George Burke, prominent attorney, spoke in defense of Eby and appealed for freedom of speech and thought.

Hon. C. M. Wood of Putnam is one of the speakers at the Howell July 4th celebration.

As the date set for the school meeting fell on a holiday, it was decided no election could be held. A majority of those present did not favor purchasing the balance of property in the block where the school is located. Alfred Monks offered to sell 8 lots on the hill, across the creek, for $400. Mrs. Mary Mann offered a site in the western part of the village, north of the pond. Another meeting will be called soon.

About 400 people heard Rev. Fr. Doherty's lecture at St. Mary's church Thursday night. He gave a fine talk on the origin and history of the Irish people, and wound up with a fine temperance lecture.

Congressman Winans has returned to Washington.

C. F. Travis sold a top-buggy to Albert Pettys last week.

Frankie Burch has resigned as teacher of the Pettysville school and Lizzie Travis has replaced her.

Howell's 800-ft. railroad tunnel is considered the longest in Michigan.

George Marshall's team ran away near Gregory last Friday. One of the horses became entangled in the harness, fell and broke its neck.

Notes of 25 Years Ago

DISPATCH OF JUNE 8, 1911

Postmaster W. S. Swarthout warns all rural patrons that they must paint their mail boxes or else same will be done by the postoffice department, and charged up to them.

Mrs. Maria Harris wishes to thank all her friends who remembered her on her 81st birthday with a postcard shower.

W. E. Brown has installed a new soda fountain in his drug store.

A fine new monument has been installed on the Chas. Stickley lot. F. D. Johnson was the salesman.

F. Beatrice Lamborn closed her school term in the Smith district, Torco last week.

Sanford Reason is considering building a store at Anderson.

The Gregory school celebrated their closing Friday with a picnic and ball game.

Mrs. Peter Harris was surprised last Thursday evening by about twenty friends on the occasion of her 81st birthday.

Miss Emmet Murphy of this place left Wednesday for Spokane, Wash. Tuesday she was married there to J. L. Morrissey of that place. The bride taught school for several years. The groom formerly lived at Bunker Hill, but is now a mail clerk on the Northern Pacific railroad.

10TH ANNUAL CONVENTION
Mrs. E. A. Collette
Mrs. Karl Welcker
Violin Solo, Miss Carol Reid
Readings, Mrs. Julie Adele Ball
Devotionals, Mrs. C. H. Zuse
Mrs. James Jury

Mrs. Fred Lockwood, state president, spoke very confidently and helpfully on the work of the order and urged greater co-operation in some of the routine aspects of the work.

Mrs. John MacGregor, chairman of the convalescent fund, thanked the Livingston branch for the citation presented her by it at the state convention and for its co-operation in the work of caring for convalescent children.

Mrs. Frank Mickle, Junior chapter, reported the Girls Camp at Lake Umbagog well organized for the summer. She and the board are hopeful of an especially fine camp season and urge the order to send the girls there if possible.

Mrs. Fred Bowditch of Gregory, a Michigan delegate to the International convention in Richmond, Virginia in May, gave an interesting report. Michigan, with several other states, extended an invitation to entertain the next convention. It was accepted, and in 1938 Detroit will be honored in being host.

Two members, Mrs. Roy Graham and Miss Olive Lookey, have been taken away, and a very impressive memorial service for them was presented by Mrs. Frank Wright and Mrs. Henry Weidner.

Mrs. Lockwood gave the admission card to two new members. She said no religious creed or obligation is required to join the order—merely the desire to serve others.

The invitation of Marion-Losco Circle for the 1937 convention was accepted.

Mrs. Roy Smollett, Sec'y.

GRAND LODGE F. & A. M. HOLD CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Michigan was held at Traverse City last week. This is a beautiful town but has limited hotel accommodations, and many delegates were forced to stay at private homes.

The annual reports of the different committees indicated a return to prosperity for the order, as a cash surplus was shown in all departments. Nearly all proposals and amendments were voted down. The most important one which precipitated the biggest fight was the one to assess all candidates for initiation, $5.00 for the Masonic home and winter fund. This was supported strongly by the city lodges and opposed by the country ones. After an hour or more debate it was defeated 2 to 1.

The proposal of the grand master to bar all candidates selling beer or liquor from Masonry was also defeated when the assembly accepted the report of the jurisdiction committee to leave it up to the lodges themselves.

The use of the Masonic Lodge rooms by the Order of Rainbow Girls was denied by the assembly.

The Grand Lodge accepted the suggestion of the Order of Demolay. Previously it had been sponsored by the Royal Arch Masons.

It accepted an amendment to the constitution providing all voting on resolutions at Grand Lodge will be by ballot. This must be passed upon by the constituent lodges.

The appropriation for the O. E. S. Orphanage at Adrian was increased from $250 to $1,000 on motion of Glen Tupper of St. Johns, former Pinckneyite. The resolution asking for an assessment of 25 cents per year on Michigan Masons for support of Masonic orphans was withdrawn by Judge Neil Reid, who introduced it.

The proposal of Camden Lodge to divert all delinquent grand lodge dues to the Masonic home endowment fund was also defeated. Later a resolution to divert some $3,000 to this fund in delinquent grand lodge dues paid in since May 1, carried.

Orrie Brown of Munising was elected grand marshal, and will become grand master in seven years. His election was effected when Wayne county voted almost solidly for him. Paul Strawhecker of Grand Rapids was runner-up. He is a brother of Mrs. Esther Campbell of Pinckney.

Charles Fey of Royal Oak was the other candidate.

Judge Neil Reid of Mt. Clemens was elected grand master. The meeting place for next year will be at Mt. Clemens.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Chandler of Palmyra spent the week end with Mrs. John Jeffrey.

Miss Mae Higgins of Ann Arbor was a week end guest of her sister, Mrs. George Hassencarl.

Clyde and Eugene Martin of Chelsea visited their aunt, Mrs. L. W. Richards, and Blanche Martin, Decorated Day.

Mrs. Inez Martin and daughter, Frances, of Lansing are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Patsy Kennedy.

Mrs. M. T. Graves had as Sunday guests, the Misses Nyra Graves, Esther Boucher, Beulah Mullette and Charlotte Updyke of Jackson, and Evelyn Graves of Howell. They enjoyed a picnic at Newport Beach.

DRENCHING SHEEP CUTS WORM LOSS

Ten Million Dollar Industry in Michigan More Profitable When Low Cost Protection Is Provided Flocks.

Parasite flecks eliminate all possibility of Michigan flock owners realizing any profit as their share in the state's ten million dollar sheep and wool industry, warns the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College in advocating drenching of sheep and lambs at monthly intervals this summer to prevent infestation by stomach and tape worms.

When lambs go to market, those which have not been drenched for protection against worms weigh but two-thirds as much as healthy lambs. The underweight animals command usually but two thirds the price per pound. Yet costs of drenching are less than half a cent for mature animals and much less for lambs.

A simple job of drenching sheep once a month in the summer may mean profit instead of loss for Michigan farmers.

Treatment is comparatively simple. A soda pop bottle is most commonly used through some sheep men use a syringe. One ounce of copper sulphate and one ounce of nicotine sulphate are mixed in three quarts of warm water. Of this three quart solution, adult sheep receive four ounces, 75 pound lambs should get three ounces, 50 pound lambs get two ounces and 25 pound lambs one ounce. The sheep is backed into a corner and the operator straddles the neck of the animal. Holding the nose no higher than the level of the eyes, the bottle is worked up and down in the mouth of the sheep so that the solution is swallowed slowly.

Although sheep on dry lot feeding should be kept off feed for 12 to 18 hours before drenching, this is not necessary for sheep on pasture, but all sheep should have access to water at all times before and after treatment.

DEER HUNTING TAGS

Since adoption of the deer hunting license tag to be worn on the back of the hunter, deer hunting has increased in popularity here.

Conservation authorities here have received several requests for low numbers, even the unlucky "137".

"We have only a few of these tags left," said Director P. J. Hoffmeister. "We have only a few of these tags left."

"However, for the accommodation of those who have been in the custom of buying their deer hunting licenses at the Lansing office in past years, we will reserve a supply of low numbers."

The deer-hunter's license tag, similar to that in use in Pennsylvania, will be 10 inches wide and four inches high and will have numbers two and one-half inches tall, corresponding to the serial number on the hunter's license and aluminum antler tag.

The tag will be of cloth and set by pins or needle and thread may be used to attach it to the back of the hunting coat. Colors will be black on orange for residents and green on orange for non-residents.

Approximately 124,000 deer-hunter's licenses will be ordered by the Department for use next fall, the Director said.

CHEAPER FISH FOOD

Because of the increasing cost and diminishing supply of fish and fish meal and other expensive products which have been the standard food of hatchery trout, the Michigan Department of Conservation is going to try to develop a food substitute that will satisfy the millions of hungry mouths at its hatchery stations. And this substitute will have to contain the vitamins required to grow healthy, robust, trout of catchable size.

The food problem has been growing more and more acute and fishery authorities in Michigan are expecting that the cost item will approximate $10,000 this year. In past years it has varied from $10,000 to $30,000, but developments of comparatively recent time have caused the fisheries men to begin looking for a new source of fish food.

Dr. L. E. Wolf, of the Institute for Fisheries Research, has been assigned to the study of the hatchery food problem with a view to developing a cheaper type of food. Dr. Wolf was at one time in charge of the New York Department of Conservation experimental hatchery at Rome, N. Y., and has had much experience in the study of hatchery feeding methods and control of fish diseases at the hatchery ponds.

HOUSE FLY LIFE BEGINS IN BARNS

About 95% of the flies about the house are of the common house fly species capable of spreading typhoid, dysentery and tuberculosis germs, according to E. I. McDaniel, associate professor in entomology at Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Miss McDaniel, who has done research work with flies and mosquitoes, believes that complete control will never be secured by use of sprays alone.

"Only such control measures as serve to eliminate the breeding place of the house fly are sufficient," she says. "House flies cannot be controlled successfully by the collection of adults after they have polluted food material."

Miss McDaniel insists that the first step in the anti-fly campaign is to provide for the proper disposal of manure in barns. If manure is permitted to collect for three days in the summer time, it will be almost impossible to destroy the larvae.

She says that properly constructed manure-pits, bins and platforms can be of great help in combating flies. Solutions of borax, kellebore and arsenite of soda for treating manure are recommended. Precautions should be taken to keep livestock from heli-bore solutions because it is poisonous.

An ingenious fly trap which can be built at home for catching adult flies is also recommended. Two boards, 12x18 inches, one for the top and one for the bottom are completely enclosed with wire netting. From a large entrance at the bottom, a truncated cone screen extends to within two or three inches of the top. A small hole is cut at the top to take out dead flies. A sweet-smelling bait is used to attract flies and sprays can be used to kill them once they enter the trap.

Details on combating flies and mosquitoes can be secured by writing the Michigan State College bulletin office for Circular Bulletin No. 144 revised.

AMERICAN LEGION TO HOLD CONVENTION

Michigan's capital city is to be host to the 1936 state convention of the American Legion, according to advice received from convention headquarters at Lansing today. Determined to make this convention the most outstanding in the history of Michigan's Legion, members of the convention corporation are swinging into line with new ideas for entertainment of delegates and guests. The convention is to be held August 16, 17 and 18.

Arrangements have already been made with a Terre Haute, Ind., company for decorations which will be unique in beauty and originality and the parade committee has promised to have more bands and drum and bagpipe corps in line than have ever appeared at a Legion state convention in Michigan.

The committee on entertainment is considering a score of features which will be unusual. It is probable that there will be a sportsman's show, log rolling contest, junior baseball, softball games between outstanding girls' teams, carnival and a colorful military ball.

The housing committee is making plans to accommodate several thousand visitors, with headquarters for men at the Olds Hotel and for auxiliary members at the Roosevelt Hotel.

For the Legionnaire who desires to use a home trailer instead of making hotel reservations, several sites are being leased, in addition to the municipal tourist camp, which is one of the most modern and best equipped in the state.

The Misses Mary and Dorothy Stackable of Detroit spent the week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Stackable.

The LANSING LOOKING-GLASS

Robert Perkins

NEWSPAPER MEN are frequent visitors at the Capitol, it being "a natural" for story angles. There's always something brewing here, and quite frequently our canny colleagues from the hinterlands barge in on the press gallery crowd and score a scoop or so of their own.

Perhaps the most popular among the occasional visitants is Midland's jovial Phil Rich, who has made such a notably fine success of his very large and very healthy weekly newspaper, The Midland Republican. Attending to Phil's popularity is the unanimity with which he was recently seated in the presidential chair of the Michigan Press Association.

When Phil comes to the capital quite a few capitalites pause in their labors to make him welcome, and leaving town is always an ordeal for him... they hang on to his coat-tails, so to speak.

Of course, Phil is not the only newspaperman to receive a cordial welcome on the occasion of a capital visit. They all get the glad-hand, plenty of assistance in digging up what they want, and are made to feel at home. Come on down, boys and girls!

NATION'S BUSINESS for April contained an article in which every resident of Michigan will be interested. It is entitled "Government Without Red Ink" and it is by our Governor. It tells the story of how Michigan taxpayers are being protected from political extravagance.

THE CIVIL WAR is something they won't let you forget in Lansing. In the Capitol building the ancient and honorable gentlemen who command the Grand Army of the Republic maintain an office, seldom used but there when they want it. The basement of the building, directly beneath the rotunda, is given over entirely to a Civil War museum, and several hours may be devoted to a study of the exhibit. Here one finds all manner of trophies, weapons, uniforms and other romantic relics of the past. In spare time I'll recruit the necessary data and tell you, from time to time, of the various items on display. Some of them rather gory, some seem steeped in tragedy, some guaranteed to provoke a chuckle... and all of them interesting.

FIGURES ON FILE here, from Washington, concerning the amount of taxes contributed by the various states to the Federal income tax, show that in 1935 Michigan turned in $135,853,971 in taxes and was granted $80,906,066 for relief during the fiscal year running from July 1, 1935, to April 1 of the present year. Whereas Wisconsin, to pick a state at random, contributed $51,558,708 in taxes and drew $63,175,453 for relief, or over $11,000,000 more than it paid in! Something for the tax-payer to be thinking over, this, from the standpoint of mounting taxes and the drain on the nation's treasury, say the capital's most intelligent observers.

HIGH RENTS here at Lansing are driving many capitalites to the "home car colonies." Several of these latter, communities of rather complete little (about 60 trailers, in all) have sprung up hereabouts. A number of the colonists weathered Michigan's severest winter in their homes on wheels. The capital housing condition is really acute.

CANINE CAPERS got the best of Governor Fitzgerald one day last week, while the state's chief executive was addressing a gathering of school children here. It seems that an attendant, at the building in which he was speaking, had occasion to step outside for a moment, and there discovered a very dirty and weebone dog painfully and helplessly caught in one of the building's basement window wells. Playing the good samaritan, the attendant released the animal, which—with a joyous howl of relief—tore madly up the aisle, through groups of daintily dressed little tots (on the program with the Governor) and took up a strategic location back stage. His Nibs, as Fitzgerald is known to capital familiars, was just paying to tribute to the children of the state—had, in fact, just commenced—when the grateful canine set up the most persistent howling. The incident occasioned much amusement, particularly to the Governor, who laughingly observed that "now the program goes to the dogs."

But, both Governor and grateful Rover made a big hit with the several hundred youngsters.

ORDER APPOINTING TIME FOR HEARING CLAIMS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, The Probate Court for the County of Livingston.

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Howell in the said County, on the 20th day of May, A. D. 1936.

Present, Hon. Willis L. Lyons, Judge of Probate.

In the Matter of the Estate of George E. Marshall, Deceased.

It appearing to the court that the time for presentation of claims against said estate should be limited, and that a time and place be appointed to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against said deceased by and before said court:

It is Ordered, That creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court at said Probate Office on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1936, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, said time and place being hereby appointed for the examination and adjustment of all claims and demands against said deceased.

It is Further Ordered, That public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Pinckney Dispatch, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Willis L. Lyons, Judge of Probate.

ANOTHER SCHOOL ELECTION FRIDAY, JUNE 5

The Pinckney school district will hold another school election Friday night, June 5 to vote on the bonding proposition. At the last election, the place where the election was held was not on the notices posted. Also as no extra school tax will be levied this year, the date of the bonds maturity extends a year longer. The bonds will be sold to the government and these two points must be cleared up before they will buy them.

The work on the school structure is over half completed. Both floors have been poured and the walls for the second floor are well along. The plumbers and electricians have worked right along with the brick layers. It should be the duty of every qualified voter to vote. As the school is over half completed, if the loan does not go through, it would mean that the district would have to stand the entire cost.

Mrs. S. E. Darrow of Lansing was a Monday dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Gardner.

Air Service to China Will Force New Travel Concept

You can now buy an air ticket to carry you to the Orient. It will put you on board the "China Clipper" in San Francisco bay late in the afternoon. You will be settled in a comfortable compartment in time for dinner—dinner beneath a star-studded sky far above the highest clouds of the eastern Pacific. You will roll out of a larger-than-pullman berth to thrill at the early morning sun splashing gold over Honolulu harbor. Then on again, by daylight now, over a necklace of surf-ringed coral keys to the little Midway islands, where a well-appointed inn awaits your overnight stop. A short flight next day to Wake Island, a tiny dot in the vast Pacific. There, too, you pass a night. Another daylight flight. A night on Guam. The next night finds you in exotic yet modern Manila. Then the following morning you step ashore for luncheon, in China itself.—W. L. Van Dusen and Daniel Sayre in Cosmopolitan.

Spelling Habits

A Columbia university professor has been keeping score and finds that "regrettable" is our most misspelled word. This is easily explained by the times. In the good old days when there weren't so many things that were regrettable we misspelled other words, notably gorgeous, delectable and irresistible.—Kansas City Star.

Shifting SANDS

SYNOPSIS

The youthful and comely "Widder" Marcia Howe has as her guest her late husband's niece, Sylvia Hayden. A stranger, exhausted, finds his way to Marcia's home. He asks her to hide a package containing jewelry. She does so. Elisha Winslow, town sheriff, brings news of a jewel robbery nearby. The stranger gives his name as Stanley Heath. Sylvia discovers the jewels, and Marcia overhears her. Marcia decides to say nothing. Marcia feels she has too deep an interest in her guest, but is powerless to overcome it. Heath wires "Mrs. S. C. Heath," New York, saying he is safe. He also orders a man named Currier to come at once. Sylvia, in her room, overhears herself with the jewels. At Marcia's approach she hides them there. Heath asks Marcia to bring them to him. They are gone! Sylvia restores the jewels to their original hiding place. Elisha Winslow discovers them and has no doubt they are the stolen gems, and Heath is a thief. Leaving the jewels, he makes plans for arresting Heath. Currier arrives. Marcia overhears Heath describe how he acquired the gems, and is forced to believe him guilty of theft. Currier investigates the hiding place and finds the gems! He returns to New York with them, but his references to "Heath" tell him she believes him innocent, but urges him, if he is guilty, to confess. He admits nothing, but compels her to confess she loves him, also telling her he is giving himself up to the sheriff. She insists this must be the end of their association, and he, thinking she will not face the "disgrace," reproaches and leaves her.

Then she swayed, caught at a chair and shrank into it, her body shaking and her breath coming in gasping, hysterical sobs.

The clock ticked on, the surf broke in muffled undertone, the light faded; the candles burned lower, flickered and overflowed the old pewter candle sticks; and still she sat there, her tearless, dilated eyes straight before her.

Having no inkling of a change in the delightful relations that had for the past week prevailed in the Home-stand, the atmosphere that greeted Sylvia when she came down the next morning was a shock.

Stanley Heath stood at the telephone talking to Elisha Winslow and on the porch outside were grouped his suitcase, overcoat and traveling rug. He was plainly ill at ease and had little except the most commonplace remarks to offer in way of conversation.

Marcia had not slept, as her pallor and the violet shadows beneath her eyes attested.

Although the girl did not understand, she sensed Marcia's need of her and rushed valiantly into the breach—filling every awkward pause with her customary sparkling chatter.

When at length the meal was cut short by the arrival of Elisha Winslow, all three of the group rose with unconcealed relief.

"Wal, Mr. Heath, I see you're expecting me," grinned the sheriff, pointing toward the luggage beside the door.

"I am, Mr. Winslow." "I've got my boat. Are you ready to come right along?" "Quite ready."

Heath went to Sylvia and took her hand. "Thank you very much," murmured he formally, "for all you've done for me. I appreciate it more than I can say. And you, too, Mrs. Howe."

"I wish you luck, Mr. Heath," called Sylvia.

"Thanks." "And I, too," Marcia rejoined in a voice scarcely audible.

To this the man offered no reply. They followed him to the door.

It was then that Marcia sprang forward and caught Elisha's arm. "Where are you taking him, Elisha?" she demanded, a catch in her voice.

"Remember, Mr. Heath has been ill. You must not risk his getting cold or suffering any discomfort."

"You need have no worries on that score, Marcia," replied the sheriff kindly, noticing the distress in her face. "I'll look out for him."

"Where is he going?" "To my house for the present," Elisha answered. "I've a comfortable spare room and I figure to put him in it 'til I've questioned him and verified his story."

"Meantime, nobody in town will be the wiser. I ain't even tellin' May Ellen why Mr. Heath's at the house. If I choose to harbor company, that's my business. Not a soul 'cept Elisha's in on this affair an' he's keepin' mum. When him an' me decide we've got the truth, we'll act—not before."

"That relieves my mind very much. Mr. Heath is—see you here?" "He's a first of yours—I ain't forgettin' that, I s' all treat him 'cordin' to, Marcia."

"Thank you, Elisha—thank you a hundred times."

There was nothing more to be said. Heath bowed once again and the two men walked down to the boat where they clambered with the luggage into Elisha's dory and put out into the channel.

Sylvia loitered to wave her hand and watch them row away, but Marcia, as if unable to bear the sight, waited for no further farewell.

But by noon she was, to outward appearances, entirely herself. She had not been able, to be sure, to banish her pallor or the traces of sleeplessness; but she had her emotions sufficiently under control to talk pleasantly, if not gaily.

That day and the next passed in much the same strained fashion.

It was not until the third morning that the barriers between the two collapsed.

Marcia had gone into the living room to write a letter. She sat down before the desk and started to take up her pen when Sylvia heard her utter a cry.

"What's the matter, dear?" called the girl, hurrying into the other room.

As Sylvia came nearer, Marcia bowed her head upon the desk and began to sob as if her heart would break.

"Oh, how could he!" moaned the woman. "How could he be so cruel!"

"What has happened, Marcia?" "Stanley—he has left a check—money—thrown it in my face! And I did it so gladly—because I loved him. He knew that. Yet he could leave this—pay me—as if I were a common servant. I had rather he struck me—a hundred times rather."

The girl took the check. It was filled out in Stanley Heath's clear, strong hand and was for the sum of a hundred dollars.

"How detestable of him!" she exclaimed. "Tell me, Marcia—what happened between you and Mr. Heath? You quarreled—of course I know that. But why—why? I have not wanted to ask, but now—"

"I'll tell you everything, Sylvia. I'd rather you knew. I thought at first I could keep it to myself, but I cannot. I need you to help me, dear."

Marcia unfolded the story of her blind faith in Stanley Heath; her love for him—a love she could neither resist nor control—a love she had known from the first to be hopeless. She confessed how she had struggled to conceal her feelings; how he himself had resisted a similar attraction in her; how at last he had discovered her secret and forced her to betray it.

"Of course I realized we could not go on," she explained bravely. "That we loved one another was calamity enough. All that remained was for him to go away and forget me—return to his wife, his home, and his former life. Soon, if he honestly tries, this infatuation will pass and everything will be as before. Men forget more easily than women. Absence, too, will help."

"And you, Marcia?" "I cannot give up my love. It is all I have now. Oh, I do not mean to mourn over it, pity myself, make life unhappy. Instead, I shall be glad, thankful. You will see. This experience will make every day of living richer. You need have no fears for me, Sylvia. You warned me, you know," concluded she with a pathetic little smile.

"I was a brute! I ought to have shielded you more," the girl cried. "I could have, had I realized. Well, I can yet do something, thank heaven. Give me that check."

"What do you mean to do?" "Return it, of course—return it before Stanley Heath leaves town. I'll take it over to Elisha Winslow's now, this minute."

"I wonder—yes, probably that will be best. You won't, I suppose, be allowed to see Stanley," speculated she timidly. "If you should—"

"Well?" "Don't say anything harsh, Sylvia. Please do not blame him, or—"

"I'll wring his neck!" was the emphatic retort.

"Oh, please—please dear—for my sake! I can't let you go if you go in that spirit," pleaded Marcia in alarm.

"There, there—you need not worry for fear I shall maltreat your Romeo, richly as he deserves it," was the response. "I could kill him—but I won't—because of you. Nevertheless, I warn you that if I get the chance I shall tell him what I think of him. He is terribly to blame and ought to realize it. No married man has any business playing round with another woman."

"I am half afraid to let you go, Sylvia."

"You don't trust me? Don't you believe I love you?" "I am afraid you love me too much, dear."

"I do love you, Marcia. I never dreamed I could care so intensely for anyone I have known for so short a time. What you did for my mother alone would make me love you. But aside from gratitude there are other reasons. I love you for your own splendid self, dear. Please do not fear to trust me. I promise you I will neither be unjust nor bitter."

"Take the check then and go. I wish I were to see him."

"Well, you're not! Let him do the explaining and apologizing. Let him grovel at your feet. That's what he ought to do!"

"You won't tell him that?" "I don't know what I shall tell him."

"Please Sylvia! You promised, remember."

"Don't fret. Some of the mad will be taken out of me before I see Mr. Heath. Kiss me and wish me luck. Marcia. You do believe I will try to be wise, don't you?"

"Yes, dear. Yes!"

"That's right. You really can trust me, you know. I'm not so bad as I sound."

Tucking the check into the wee pocket of her sweater, Sylvia caught up her pert beret and perched it upon her curls.

"So long!" she called, looking back over her shoulder as she opened the door. "So long, Marcia! I'll be back as soon as ever I can."

The haste with which she disappeared, suddenly precipitated her into the arms of a young man who stood upon the steps preparing to knock.

"Horatio Fuller!" cried Sylvia breathlessly. "Horatio! Where on earth did you come from?"

Her arms closed about his neck and he had kissed her twice before she swiftly withdrew, rearranging her curls and saying coldly:

"I cannot imagine what brought you here, Horatio."

CHAPTER XI

"I can't imagine," repeated Sylvia, still very rosy and flustered, but with her most magnificent air, "what brought you to Wilton—I really cannot."

"Can't you?" grinned Horatio cheerfully.

"No, I cannot."

From his superior height of six feet-two, he looked down at her meager five feet, amusement twinkling in his eyes.

Sylvia, however, was too intent on patting her curls into place to heed his glance.

"You wrote me to come, didn't you?" he presently inquired.

"I wrote you to come!" "Well, at least you led me to suppose you'd like it if I were here," persisted Horatio. "Toward the bottom of page two you said: 'I am positively homesick'; and in the middle of the back of page three you wrote: 'It seems years since I've seen you.'"

"What if I did?" answered the girl with a disdainful shrug.

Nevertheless the dimples showed in her cheeks.

"And that isn't all," Horatio went on. "At the end of page five you wrote: 'Would that you were here!'"

Sylvia bit her lip.

"That was only a figure of speech—what is called poetic license."

"Then you didn't mean it when you said you wished I was here."

Horatio was obviously disappointed. "Why, of course I am pleased to see you, Horatio. It is very nice of you to come to the Cape to meet my aunt and—"

"Darn your aunt!" he scowled. "I didn't come to see her. I am not interested in aunts."

"Take care! I happen to be very keen on this aunt of mine. If she didn't like you, you might get sent home. Don't be horrid, Horatio. I truly am glad you've come. You must make allowance for my being surprised. I haven't got over it yet. How in the world did you contrive to get away at this season? And what sort of a trip did you have?"

"Swell! I stopped overnight in New York at the Gardners. Mother wanted me to deliver a birthday cake to Estelle, who, you may remember, is the mater's god-daughter. She's a pipkin, too. I hadn't seen her since she graduated from Vassar."

Sylvia listened.

She did not need to be told about the Gardners.

They had visited Horatio's family more than once and rumor had it the elders of both families would be delighted were the young people to make a match of it.

"I'm surprised you did not stay longer in New York," Sylvia observed, gazing reflectively at her white shoe.

"New York wasn't my objective. I came on business, you see. Dad gave me two months off so I could get married."

Sylvia jumped.

"I was not aware you were engaged," murmured she in a formal, far-away tone.

"I'm not," came frankly from Horatio Junior. "But I'm going to be. In fact I chance to have the ring with me this minute. Want to see it?"

"I always enjoy looking at jewels," was her cautious retort.

Horatio felt of his pockets. "Where on earth did I put that thing?" he muttered. "Hope I haven't lost it. Oh, here it is."

He took out a tiny velvet case and sprang the catch.

"Oh, Horatio! Isn't it beautiful!" Sylvia cried. "It fairly takes away my breath."

"Try it on."

She shook her head. "It wouldn't fit me. My hands are too small."

"It's a small ring. Here. Put it on," he urged, holding it toward her. "Well, I suppose I might try it to please you. But I know it will be too large."

She slipped it on her finger. "Why, it does fit. How odd!" "Very odd indeed," he answered drily, as she reached her hand out into the sun and turned the diamonds so that they caught the light. "Looks rather well on, doesn't it?" was his comment.

"It is a beautiful ring."

Horatio, standing behind her, twice extended his arms as if to gather her into them and twice withdrew them, deciding the action to be premature.

At length with a determined squaring of his shoulders, he looked his hands behind him and stood looking on while she continued to twist the ring this way and that.

"Well," yawned he after an interval, "I suppose I may as well put it back in the box."

More Humble About Our Opinions in New Kinship

At the moment, many people are deploring "a lack of leadership" in religion, says Lloyd C. Douglas in Cosmopolitan. "In my opinion, the confessed bewilderment of the churches is a sign of health and progress. The recent use of the soft pedal has made the prophet of more value to the people. They sense an intellectual kinship with the honest man who admits he is a bit at a loss to know exactly where we are."

Editors who were used to saying the last word necessary for the adequate instruction of their constituents are writing in phrases tempered by a new shyness. Statesmen, teachers, parents, even half-grown children are no longer laying down their beliefs with a bang. We are all becoming humble about our opinions. This is the type of kinship we have needed more seriously than any other. It is somewhere along this road that we may find our peace."

GREAT CONCERN OVER NEWCOMER IN A COMMUNITY

The newcomer is a person who appears to make his home in the community and who thereby raises the questions:

Where will he send his children to school? Where will he keep his bank account? Where will he buy his groceries? Will he purchase a house? Does he need an automobile? How is he off for insurance?

Would he be interested in an oil burner? What church will he attend? Is he a prospect for a contribution to charity? Does he require legal advice? Has he an electric refrigerator? Is he, or members of his family, in need of medical attention?

Would he be good material for a ducking club or a golf club or a luncheon club? Or is he a person of intellectual interests who might be drafted for a discussion group or an association for or against war or in the study of foreign affairs?

Is he a good speaker? If so, what is his subject? Could he be persuaded to make a talk? Will his house need weatherstripping? How does he vote? Could he use an electric washer or a vacuum cleaner?

Where does he buy his clothes? Could he be persuaded to open a few accounts? Has he settled on a dentist? Has he engaged a handy man to look after his place? Would his children be interested in instruction in French or the piano or rhythmic dancing? Would he be interested in supporting the art museum?

In fact, if a newcomer were able to hear all the questions his arrival raised and realized the number of endeavors in which he was regarded as a prospect, he would probably pack up and go back as quickly as he could to the place from which he came.—Christopher Billopp in the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "Aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Games Sunday

Pinckney at Ann Arbor
Saline at Hamburg
Chelsea at Manchester

NOTES OF THE GAME

Well, two victories, with half the lineup missing is not bad at all. Stanley Dinkel has started on a big hitting streak. He has hit safely the last seven times up. He had 5 hits against Jackson and 2 against Chelsea.

Dinkel did not get to Chelsea until the third inning. Bud Dilloway caught two innings. Shicks played third and Arthur Haines, star of the Pinckney soft ball diamonds, played right field. He made no errors and in his only time up hit a long fly to right field.

Lefty Reason got the longest hit of the game. Unfortunately the high wind carried it four by about three feet.

Bob Smith continues to play a nifty fielding game at first base. Hulce, who umpired, is Supt. of schools at Gregory.

Chelsea has not had a baseball team in several years. A fair-sized crowd watched the last Sunday contest.

Dexter has organized a team with Don Cushing as manager. So far they have played all their games away from home.

Salerno and Kolerand of the Chelsea team formerly played at Dexter, where they live.

Jack Dilloway did not know he was a pitcher until after he had won Saturday's game. He was a little wild at times but was not hit hard.

With Seales, Culver, Lamb and Ferrell all missing from the lineup, nevertheless the local team delivered.

Clayton Johnson, Hamburg pitcher, played third base for Pinckney, Saturday. His fielding helped in the victory. Hamburg did not play on Memorial Day.

SOFT BALL GAMES

Clark Team Wins Another Game. Dillon Wins Sluggest from Singer By Big Score.

In the games in the Pinckney soft ball league last week, Clark won another victory when he beat Ledwidge, 13 to 9. In the game Wed. night, a rabbit ball was used and every other man hit one over into Fred Read's prize rosebushes.

The final score, when the game was called in the 7th inning on account of darkness, was 30 to 42, we believe in favor of Dillon. As the score reverts back to the 6th inning, the score would be 24 to 30 in favor of Dillon.
