

Pinckney Won Two Games Sunday

Was First Game from Ann Arbor, 9 to 0 and Takes Second Contest 4 to 3. Harlo Haines Wins Own Game with Homer in 9th. Puts Pinckney in Tie with Hamburg

Pinckney was victorious in both games with Ann Arbor in the Trinity League last Sunday. In the first game Ann Arbor failed to put nine men on the field at 1:30 p. m. and forfeited to Pinckney, 9 to 0. In the second contest Pinckney won out, 4 to 3 in the ninth inning when Harlo Haines connected for a home run.

The game was a tight affair all the way through. Ann Arbor was reinforced by Tillotson and Wilson, former U. of M. players, and played hard. Pinckney scored 3 runs in the second inning when Rickard, Haines, and Maycock singled in succession, and D. Buster dropped Bud Dilloway fly. This ended their scoring. They had men on several times but Buster was extremely stingy with hits. In the 7th Maycock and B. Dilloway got on through errors, but Maycock was caught off second and Smith and Ward died out. Skowerski dropped a Texas Leaguer over first in the 8th but Dinkel, Miller and Rickard all failed to hit. In the 9th Harlo Haines first up, hit one over the centerfielder's head for a home run. Maycock followed with his third hit, but the next three batters were all easy outs.

Harlo Haines, in the box for Pinckney, only allowed 5 hits but issued 5 bases on balls. Ann Arbor scored a run in the 4th when C. Buster walked and scored on a wild throw to first. They got two more in the 5th when Smith and R. Mercer singled. Tillotson singled to left and got three bases on it when Skowerski let it get past him. Haines tightened up and struck out Jaffee and Ward threw out I. Mercer. Ann Arbor had men on every inning but couldn't shove them around. Smith, first up for them in the 9th, singled; R. Mercer attempted to sacrifice, but popped down the first base line. Haines made a remarkable catch of it and doubled Smith at first. Rickard ended the game by throwing out Tillotson.

The first victory gives Pinckney a tie with Hamburg in games won and played for the first half of the season, each having 9 victories and one defeat. This tie will be played off at Pinckney on Labor Day, Sept. 7. The second victory enables them to keep just one game behind of Hamburg in the second half of the season. They play Hamburg at Hamburg on Sept. 6.

Local Circle Holds Interesting Meeting

Pinckney King's Daughters Present Good Program at Meeting Last Week

The regular meeting of Pinckney Circle of King's Daughters was held at the home of Mrs. Burt Daller on Thursday, August 13.

After the usual business session the meeting was turned over to the committee in charge. Miss Charlotte Iseler, as chairman of the program, presented the following numbers:

Violin Solo—Eddie Drost. (This was so much enjoyed that he responded with a second number.)

Reading—Miss Clella Fish. (Which was a very fine tribute to the King's Daughters and their work.)

Miss Charlotte Goodremont of Detroit gave a humorous reading and also a toe dance. Both were very well given.

Duet—Miss Jessie Green and Miss Charlotte Iseler.

Miss Iseler favored with a violin solo also, and Barbara Crowe completed the program with an original reading.

A very tasty lunch was served to about 40 guests and members. The committee in charge wish to thank all those who contributed in various ways in making the meeting a success, both socially and financially.

Winifred Graves, Sec'y.

COLEMAN MURDER TRIAL SET

Rouse, Harvey Davis, John Bannerman, Ervin Lee and James Lorraine, the Black Legionaires, who are accused of killing Silas Coleman at Nash's bridge east of Pinckney, on May 25, 1935, will be tried in Detroit before Judge George Murphy on Sept. 9, presiding Judge Maher has announced. 175 extra jurors have been called for this trial.

FARM BARNS BURN DOWN

The barns on the farm of Mrs. Mark Swarthout, east of town near the Durwin farm, caught fire from an unknown source and burned to the ground last Wednesday night.

The Pinckney fire engine went out but was unable to obtain any water. The farm is known as the William Harris farm and was occupied by Rocco Lupo as tenant. He lost 300 bushels of corn, several stacks of hay and a number of chickens. There was no insurance on the buildings or contents.

Miss Mitcuff is one of the leading puppeteers of America, and has studied her art both in Russia and the University of Rome. Puppetry is such an ancient art that it is now again, and is being revived all over the United States as excellent entertainment for both young and old.

There will be both afternoon and evening performances to accommodate all. Do give yourselves, your children and your guests a real treat. Buy your tickets from Mrs. Palmer, of the local chapter.

CAR TURNS OVER SAT. NIGHT

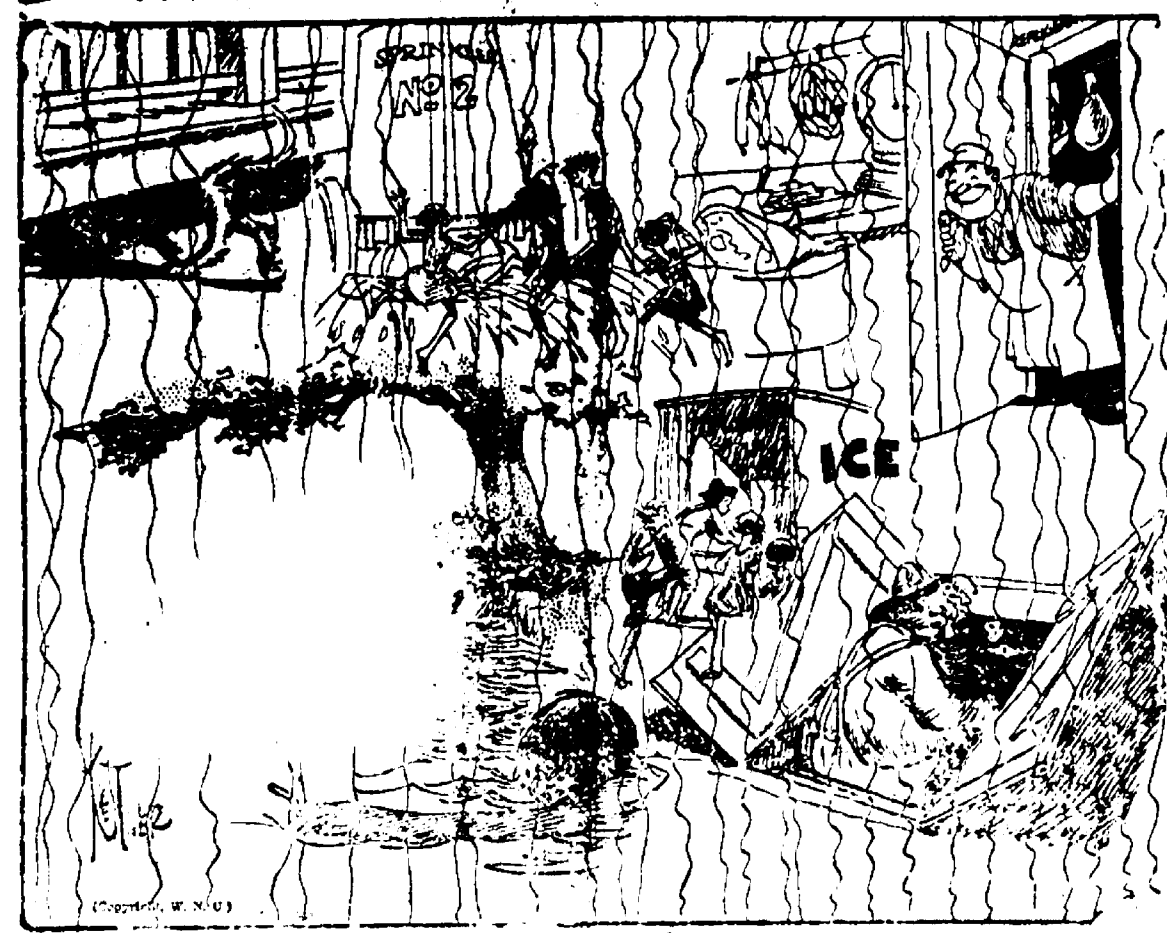

A car enroute from Detroit to the Mallion and Clark corners about 10 p. m. last Saturday night and crashed through the fence into the field. It turned over several times. The woman in the car was thrown out but the man was pinned under it. Deputies Tom Finlan and George Fawcett were summoned. The couple gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Skiba of 2708 Earl Pl. Detroit, and stated they were on their way to Gregory to a wedding.

They were taken to the Pinckney Sanitarium where first aid was given. Marvin and Henry Shirey took them into Detroit. The name and address given may be false as the man was taken to an address on Buchanan Ave., and the girl to one on 14th. Ed. Parker, local garage man, now has the wrecked car.

County Nurse

Is Established
Service and Advice from Experienced Nurse Now Available in This County

Continuing its educational program to improve maternal and child health, the Bureau of Child Hygiene and Public Health Nursing, Michigan Department of Health, is inaugurating a nursing service in Livingston County in co-operation with the Livingston County Medical Society.

Miss Edith M. Green, R. N., will have charge of the maternal and child health program here, working in co-operation with an advisory board of the county medical society including Dr. N. Huntington, Dr. C. L. Sigler, Dr. Horace Mellus, Dr. Jesse Hendren and Dr. D. C. Stephens.

This health program is part of the development of maternal and child health service in Michigan under the Social Security Act. Nurses are being located in counties having no generalized public health program.

Special emphasis will be placed on services to prospective mothers and children under school age, although some health education will be offered in the schools, including occasional child care classes.

The infant welfare program will include the delivery of birth certificates to parents of newborn babies. At these calls the mothers are urged to take the child to the family physician during the first year for immunization against diphtheria and vaccination against smallpox. General health problems of the children of the family will be discussed.

A series of nine educational prenatal letters and one postnatal letter will be mailed once a month to prospective mothers at the request of physicians of the mothers themselves. The program is entirely educational in co-operation with local physicians, and will include no bedside nursing.

BRUCKER FOR SENATOR CLUB ORGANIZED

In the plan for a Brucker-Ford Senator-Club in every county, a meeting was held in the Hotel Livingston at Howell last Friday night for the purpose of organizing a Livingston county unit. Hiram Smith, Howell attorney, was elected president, and Herman Hox, Howell city clerk, was named secretary-treasurer. There were also a number of vice-presidents elected.

Brucker is making a strong campaign for the senatorship against Senator Couzens, who on the other hand, has made no campaign at all. The report that Henry Ford is financing the Brucker campaign is unconfirmed and doubted by many.

Philathea Notes

The class met at the home of the Haze sisters on August 12, 1935 for its quarterly Missionary service and monthly business meeting. The first chapter of James 1:22, was read by the chaplain, followed by the Lord's prayer.

The secretary being absent on a vacation trip, Clella Fish served as secretary pro tem. Cards of thanks and verbal thanks were given, and other routine business followed, and plates and cards ordered sent to shut-ins.

The September meeting is expected to be with Mrs. Lee or Mrs. Henry, the latter especially urging all to come. The September committee was announced by the president as Meda Henry and Mae Daller or Rose Hendrick and Mrs. Daller.

After the Philathea benediction, Mrs. Bowman called on various ones for the program; the first number being an interesting article on "Kagawa", read by Mrs. Hattie Swarthout. Next, Mrs. Hattie Rae Mains of Dearborn, house guest of Mrs. Decker, and Miss Haze gave an exceedingly helpful talk, commenting also on "Kagawa", whom some of our members were privileged to hear recently, and quoting Dr. Fisher as speaking of "The Power that we call God."

She spoke of Dr. Gray in his travels in Berlin, having found the youth of that country very wide awake, but as not having decided just what to accept of religious belief. It is up to us to help them to decide right. Mrs. Bailey of Ann Arbor and Portage Lake was called on and told of specific work along Missionary lines in her church group, these groups being rearranged each year. Mrs. Shankals said that in the church from which she came, they gave for Missions about as much a month as we do in a year. Mrs. Vail told of work for the mountain whites in her church, and Mrs. Euler said it was mostly Home Mission work in the Alabama church she attended. Miss Fish read "Mrs. Sangster's Sweetest Poem."

The offering for the Benevolence fund, including a later addition, was $5.10. About twenty-five members and guests enjoyed the afternoon.

On Sunday, about a dozen members and friends joined in a discussion of the Temperance Lesson, after a message from the teacher of the class, Mrs. Inez Zuse, who is enjoying a vacation trip. We will be glad to welcome any who care to join us for next Sunday's lesson period, considering the topic, "The Gospel for All Men." Road Acts 11: 5-18, and Romans 1: 15-17.

The Sponsors of the Toledo Newsboys' Camp are making the services interesting at the Community Congregational church during Rev. Zuse's absence. Everybody welcome.

Improved Conditions Aid Tax Collections

Money Coming in Promptly With Many More Property Owners Enrolling in Ten-Year Plan

With Michigan industry leading the nation in economic recovery, employment at a high level and real estate holdings gaining in value, both from a sale and rental angle, it is forecast by state officials that this year's collection of taxes under the ten-year plan will materially exceed the total of $15,000,000 paid in 1935.

There has been a great change for the better in the whole tax collection situation during the past twelve months. Whereas a year ago, before the plan was announced much pessimism was evident, today widespread optimism prevails, due to improved economic conditions and to the fact that it is more universally realized that the state has made it comparatively easy for the property owner to meet his tax obligations.

Previous to the enactment of the Moore-Holbeck act which placed in operation the ten-year plan many millions of taxes were held to be uncollectable. Interest and penalties on the old bills ran into such high amounts that the owners, suffering from the continued effects of the depression, lost all hope of salvaging their holdings. Accentuating this feeling of hopelessness was the decrease in property values and rentals due largely to lack of demand.

Then it was that the state through legislative mandate came to the aid of its harassed citizens. The prepayment idea was put into effect. While through educational methods the ten-year plan is widely known, it may not be amiss to re-state its salient features for the benefit of those who are not wholly familiar with them.

Under the plan, taxes for 1932 and prior years, except for Detroit, which has an individual plan, were lumped and divided into ten annual payments. All accumulated interest on these old taxes was cancelled. This year's interest amounts to only four per cent figured from September 1, 1935, when the plan went into effect.

The response to this economic relief project afforded by the state officials was instantaneous. As a result $55,000,000 in taxes were brought to life and placed on the active rolls. Home owners saved and owners of other property were able to breathe easier again. Various units of government, threatened with curtailment through lack of funds, were enabled to continue functioning in the interest of all the people.

Property owners who paid their first year installment now have a new path for the second year. Thousands have already done so. Many more thousands will make their payments on or before September 1st, and be secure in their tax position.

For various reasons many property owners were not able to take advantage of the ten-year plan when it was originated. Early payments this year reveal that add numbers are enrolling under its provisions. This may be done by making the first two payments, 1935-1936, with interest charge on the payment that was not made last year.

Another favorable condition that prevails this year is the large number of property owners who, with better of property owners, are paying their remaining balances on the ten-year plan in a lump sum. This, of course, brings a large saving. 8 to 36 per cent interest on future payments.

State officials have received much praise from taxpayers, and outside sources for the working out of the ten-year plan. It has been copied by other commonwealths. It is felt that this is an equitable adjustment of a serious situation which developed through no fault of the property owners who had made their investments before the shadow of the great depression spread over the nation.

The returns from various counties in Michigan indicate that the ten-year plan has an added appeal this year, as it did last when the plan was first introduced. The state this year, as it did last, is conducting an educational campaign so that more citizens may become familiar with the plan and also to remind those who are operating under it that their second installment is now due and under the terms of the agreement must be paid before September 1, 1936.

It is felt that as advertising and promotional work are a necessary adjunct to the success of any commercial or industrial enterprise, today, the state in placing its business on a workable basis could do no better than to follow the course which proved so effective in 1935.

Milton M. Alexander, Detroit economist-publicist, is directing the campaign again this year.

Current Comment

The different state finance departments have given out their reports and Gov. Fitzgerald is exonerated in giving out false reports, in a statement signed by all three departments—accounting, state treasurer and auditor general's dept. It states that the governor was right when he said that the State of Michigan collected five millions more than it spent the past year. But it also adds that the entirely different reports given out by the state treasurer and auditor general were also correct. The treasurer's report deals with cash on hand while the accountant's deals with net cash, detailed cost expenditures, etc. Now all is as clear as mud. The question, whether the state had five million in cash after paying all expenses, is still unanswered.

In the old days of the Lincoln-Douglas campaign for the senatorship in Illinois, these old stalwarts went around from town to town debating. We believe Lincoln won the debate but Douglas won the senatorship. Frank Murphy has offered to meet Gov. Fitzgerald and debate the issues of the day. The offer has been declined by the governor on the grounds that Mr. Murphy is not yet the Democratic nominee. Whether this may be taken to mean that the governor is willing to meet Murphy providing he wins the nomination is problematical. The fact remains that Murphy has proved to be a regular nightmare to the state administration on account of his Wayne county strength. The Detroit Free Press devotes more space to attacking Murphy than it does to any other candidate.

In three contests last week, the Townsends failed to show any great strength in two contests. Senator Borah easily defeated his Townsend opponent in Idaho and Senator Robinson was also victorious over a Townsend opponent in Arkansas. In Florida a Townsend won the nomination to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Senator Tamm. In most cases the Townsends show lack of organization. In this 6th district, for instance, Congressman Blackney has two Townsends running against him, which should make the matter of his renomination simple.

A peculiar situation exists in East Detroit. There two deluxe gambling halls, the Chesterfield Inn and the Chateau flourish, seemingly immune from Macomb county authorities. East Detroit officials, the state police and the attorney general's office. Each one of these departments disclaims all responsibility for suppressing them. Recently, a Mrs. Hanna of East Detroit got some 800 signers, asking the city authorities to suppress the gambling dens. The opponents immediately got busy and got 800 signers to a petition asking that the gambling places be allowed to run, for the reason that they stimulated business in the neighborhood. These two places have been wise enough to do all buying locally, and one meat market has sold them as much as $500 worth of meat a week. Among the signers were two members of a Presbyterian church board. Consequently the East Detroit council tabled both petitions and the places will continue to operate. This passing-the-buck shows cowardice. We remember how the late Gov. Fred M. Warner handled a similar situation in the same place years ago. He sent the Macomb county prosecutor an ultimatum to the effect that if he did not close the places he would send the state militia to do it. Gov. Fitzgerald could do the same thing, and much easier, as he now has the state police to do his bidding. This body was not in existence in Gov. Warner's time.

Just why the press attaches so much importance to the rump Democratic gathering, recently held in Detroit, is problematical. One and all, they unite in praising Messrs. Reed, Ely and Colby as God's noblemen and the salt of the earth. Unfortunately their Democracy is mostly synthetic. Of these Ex's, Senator Reid was a bitter foe and opponent of Woodrow Wilson all through his two terms. He failed to support Franklin Roosevelt in 1912 and appointed secretary of state to fill vacancy in Wilson's last term. Ely is an Al Smith man and failed to support Roosevelt in 1932. The rest are unknowns. Not a single Michigan man of any importance attended the gathering. Although only about 40 attended the meeting, they were unable to agree on any course of action.

The Woolworth Co. announces that it has enjoyed the best business of its entire existence during the past year. The General Motors Corp., The Chrysler Corp., Ford Motor Co., the steel companies and in fact, all great corporations report likewise. Yet one and all they unite in opposing the Roosevelt administration. Can you beat it?

Jeffersonian Democrats Band Together

FORTY-THREE Democrats, most of them prominent nationally or locally and representing twenty states, gathered in Detroit to tell one another and the world how much and why they disliked the New Deal. After two days of conferring, they organized themselves as the National Jeffersonian Democrats and named former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri as their national chairman. They decided to establish headquarters at once in St. Louis and to set up an organization in every state. Then they gave out a 1,500 word declaration or platform in which they declared they "will not support for re-election the candidates of the Philadelphia convention for President and vice president, and we call upon all loyal and sincere Democrats to consider the question of their duty to their country in the approaching election with the same earnestness that has guided our deliberations—joining with us if they feel that our conclusions are sound and our anxiety for the future of our party and our country is justified."

The name of Governor Landon was not mentioned in the declaration, but a number of its signers are openly supporting the Republican candidate. Among these are Joseph B. Ely, Col. Henry Breckinridge, John Henry Kirby of Texas and Robert S. Bright of Maryland. However, the avowed prime objective of the Jeffersonians is the defeat of President Roosevelt and the restoration of the Democratic party to its status before the New Dealers captured it. Their declaration is unsparring in its denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt's course and the policies of his administration.

Bar Association Split on New Deal Legislation

WHEN the American Bar association convenes in Boston soon it will receive two widely differing reports from a special committee named to study the effects of New Deal legislation on the rights and liberties of citizens. They were made public in Washington. The majority report, signed by John D. Clark, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Fred H. Davis, Tallahassee, Fla.; George L. Buist, Charleston, S. C.; and Charles P. Taft II, Cincinnati, Ohio, "deplored" the action of President Roosevelt in reducing congress to a "rubber stamp" body to carry through his program.

"Novel legislative and governmental trends of the New Deal are just as uncertain today as they were two years ago," the report said. "Laws specifically proposed as emergency measures with limited life have been declared by important members of the administration to be the beginning of permanent changes in national policy."

"There has been a continuing conflict between such officials as to whether a new social and economic order is in the making or the old institutions are being perfected so that they may be preserved."

These findings were challenged by Kenneth Wynne, New Haven, Conn.; Fred L. Williams, St. Louis, Mo.; and James G. McGowan of Jackson, Miss. In their minority report they said: "If the purpose of the resolution creating the special committee was to get the opinion of the American Bar association regarding legislative trends designed to meet changing economic conditions, the report is superficial. It does not deal with the problem but concerns itself with a short range attack on surface trivialities."

Congressman Zioncheck Commits Suicide

MARION A. ZIONCHECK brought to an end in characteristic manner his checkered career and his life. He leaped to his death from a window of his office in Seattle shortly after he had filed for re-nomination to the congressional seat he had held for two terms. His friends attributed the suicide to worry over a psychiatrist's advice that he take a long rest from politics. His trouble had been diagnosed as dementia praecox.

American Track Team Victor in Olympics

EIGHT days of track competition that brought out many record-breaking performances showed that the American team was unbeatable in the matter of total points. These Yankee athletes piled up a total of 203 points. Finland was second with 80 1-4, Germany third with 60 3-4 and Japan fourth with 51 13-22. Jesse Owens, the marvelous colored lad from Ohio State university, captured four gold medals for firsts in the 100 meter and 200 meter runs and the broad jump and for pacing the winning American quartet in the 400 meter relay. The decathlon was won by Glenn Morris of Denver.

Japan captured the most highly prized Olympic championship when Kitei Son, young Korean student, won the marathon race over a very tough course and in the record time of 2 hours 29 minutes 19.2 seconds. The distance was 26 miles and 385 yards.

Among the women contestants Helen Stephens of Missouri distinguished herself by breaking the world record in two heats of the 100-meter dash.

Commerce Department on Recovery and Public Debt

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE ROBERT H. ROBERTS has just put out a "world economic review" for 1935 which contains many interesting statements. It says, for instance, that a future business prospects are conditioned in part upon the possibility of narrowing the gap between government expenditures and receipts. It asserted that "the government deficit springs from the root of unemployment, which is still the major problem confronting the country."

As to "the part played in the recovery to date by the heavy government expenditures," the report said: "This question is not easily answered, but it is certain that such outlays have had an influence in many directions—for example, on retail sales, on farm income, on the growth of bank deposits and on the prevailing level of interest rates."

The latter statements may well be compared with the report of Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, to the stockholders. Business recovery throughout the world—in which the United States has participated—is being generated by a combination of various factors, Mr. Sloan explains. In this country the automobile industry has been helped, he says, by principal influences. Only one of these, he points out, has its roots in the New Deal financial schemes and he finds that particular influence a bad one because it creates a temporary fool's paradise in which sales and earnings are ballooned by extraordinary government expenditures.

Asserting that political extravagance has created a highly undesirable and artificial stimulus, Mr. Sloan urges that such spending be halted before it is too late to stave off disaster.

Oil Men and Companies Accused of Conspiracy

CHARGED by the government with conspiracy to violate the anti-trust law by combining to dominate the purchasing of oil in the Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma fields and to fix prices of gasoline in the Middle West, 58 persons, 23 petroleum concerns and three publishing companies were indicted by a federal grand jury in Madison, Wis. Among the prominent defendants are Edward G. Seubert of Chicago, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana; Henry M. Dawes of Evanston, Ill., president of the Pure Oil company, and many officials of Standard Oil, Pure Oil, Deep Rock, Socony-Vacuum and various other oil concerns and their subsidiaries. Also in the list are Warren C. Platt of Cleveland, publisher of the National Petroleum News and Platt's Oilgram; his two publications and the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

The indictment charged that the defendant oil companies formed pools in the east Texas and mid-continent fields for the purpose of purchasing gasoline at artificially high prices from independent producers, and in furtherance of such a scheme were members of associations which included the independents. Further it was charged that independent refiners to aid the plan, had curtailed their production of gasoline.

This, said Mr. Platt, is exactly what the oil companies did with the approval of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, administrator of the NRA petroleum code, when efforts were being made to limit the production of gasoline, prevent the flow of excess quota oil into market channels, and raise prices in that turbulent industry.

"The government's charge turns on whether a practice legally started and carried on under the recent NRA petroleum code was continued in illegal manner after the NRA was killed by the United States Supreme court," Mr. Platt said.

DENVER— Hub of Vast Area

Eastern High School, an Example of Denver's Fine Educational Buildings.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WHEN you enter Denver, Colorado, you come to the urban hub of nearly one-fifth of the United States.

A state capital, a great western city, a gateway to the mountains—all these Denver is and more. Spokes of influence extend from it into the entire Rocky Mountain area, and into large regions of the adjoining plains states as well, making it the financial, commercial, and industrial center of a vast area. No other city in the United States with a quarter-million population is so far removed—500 miles or more—from all other big cities.

Naturally, the people of this great region turn to Denver, whether they are out for business or pleasure, for a commercial fight or a recreational frolic. It's a habit of long standing. The miners started it when they came every so often to the rough little town that was Denver in the sixties to spend some of their gold for supplies and the rest in more or less riotous living.

Later, when great riches were made in gold and silver and cattle, the fortunate ones moved to Denver and built the mansions and hotels and business blocks that started the solid structure of the city. Globe-trotters, adventurers, and capitalists flocked to Denver in the seventies and eighties. Many "younger sons" of the British nobility and several Britons with well-known titles made the city their headquarters for extensive cattle operations, and gave glittering parties at the old Windsor hotel and the American house that have not faded from Denver's memory.

Before its irrigation empire was even dreamed of and while its mineral kingdom was still undeveloped, Denver's location was of little value; but young Denver, despite surveys, clung stubbornly to the belief that in some way the transcontinental railway, when it came, could be pushed through the mountains west of the city. When, instead, the lines of steel were extended through Cheyenne, a hundred miles to the north, Denverites put aside their disappointment and quickly raised the capital to build a connecting line to the new highway.

With this rail contact with the eastern settlements established and with the steady growth of mining in the mountains, Denver drew to herself in a few years direct lines of railroad from the east. Now these highways of steel radiate north and south and east from Denver like the ribs of a fan.

A result of this railway convergence on Denver has been to make the city one of the country's leading livestock markets.

Never Lost Dream

While the transcontinental railways went their busy ways north and south of Denver, the city never lost its dream of a line straight west through the mountains.

Greatest and most tireless of the dreamers was David H. Moffat, who visioned a six-mile tunnel through the Continental Divide under James Peak. He not only dreamed, but worked, and spent his fortune on the project. He did not live to see his plan realized, but on July 7, 1927, the Moffat tunnel was holed through. Now a standard-gauge railway operates double tracks through it into Middle Park, opening up a new mountain realm to Denver.

You sense Denver's most astonishing physical achievement only when you let your imagination wander back seventy years. It is hard to believe that barely three-score and ten years ago this great city, with its hundreds of miles of streets, lined now with fine, towering shade trees, was raw prairie. Not a tree was in sight; only a level plain covered with sparse grass, dry and brown through most of the year.

As the outlander drives about Denver he is struck by the beautiful lawns. There are no exceptions. Whether he views the grass plot of a humble cottage or the park of a near-palace, the lawns are perfect.

The price of the beautiful lawns is much moisture. At certain hours each day in the summer a virtual barrage of water is laid down over the 1,600 acres of lawns in the city's parks. So frequent are these drenchings that in summer the watering hose is not removed night or day from the hydrants. Driving through the parks in late afternoon, you see orderly piles of hose, as regularly spaced as the trees of an orchard, each like a coiled serpent on sentry duty, guarding its allotted plot.

Use Water Lavishly

Knowing that this is a dry country and that water is precious, you ask one of the officials of the water board about the heavy use of water in the city and run into a surprising paradox.

"It is very important that we use water lavishly today," he tells you, "in order that our grandchildren shall have enough for their vital needs. Visiting water-works experts think we are crazy when we make that statement, but it is literally true."

"This is an irrigation country. Municipalities, as well as individuals, must follow the laws worked out under irrigation conditions in getting their water supplies. Once you get hold of a flow of water, if you don't use it you forfeit it to some one who will. We are looking forward to a city of half a million or more by 1950. That's why we want to keep every drop of Denver's annual water supply busy and to increase the supply in all possible ways."

One way in which Denver plans to increase its water supply constitutes an engineering romance. When the Moffat tunnel was dug, an eight-foot-square pilot tunnel was carried through the Continental Divide beside the large railway bore. Denver leased this small tunnel, and plans to bring through the towering mountain range hundreds of millions of gallons of water that now flow into the Pacific ocean.

In education Denver's fame is great. Educators from the two hemispheres have beaten a path to this far-away city at the base of the Rockies to study its scheme of teachers' salaries, its indefatigable efforts to keep the subject-matter which it teaches abreast of all worthwhile developments, and even its school architecture.

The "Denver Plan" for teachers' salaries has been adopted by many municipalities.

A Practical School

Another famous part of the Denver educational system that draws educators from afar is its Opportunity school. From 8:30 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night this practical school is open alike to young people and old. In it elderly men and women, denied the education they wished in youth, receive high school instruction; men displaced in one occupation may learn another; and young men and women may be trained in practical arts, from barbering to bricklaying, and from cooking to etching.

Most of Colorado's institutions of higher education are naturally concentrated in and near Denver. In the city is the University of Denver, founded, when the community was little more than a village, by Colorado's territorial governor, John Evans, the same John Evans who previously had founded Northwestern university, Illinois.

Thirty miles to the northwest, at Boulder, is the University of Colorado. So attractive are the mountains that cast their shadows on the campus and beckon for week-end rambles that the University of Colorado is as busy in summer as in winter.

Fifteen miles west of Denver, at Golden, is the Colorado School of Mines. Growing up in the edge of an important mining region, the institution is one of the outstanding mining schools of the country. In it in 1926 was established the first course in geophysics in American colleges. Graduates of this latest course in mining here fare forth with dynamite and radio sets, electromagnets, torsion balances, and other devices of modern magic to map rock strata lying hundreds and thousands of feet beneath the surface of the ground.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Lansing—Dr. William Haber, state administrator for the SERRA, reports that 497 persons employed in clerical and typing work and 495 social workers have completed civil service examinations.

Powers—Approval of a new WPA project at the Pinecrest Tubercular Sanitarium in the village of Powers has been announced by the state director. Construction of a 75-bed addition to the hospital will take about eight months to complete, it was stated, and will cost $353,298.

Houghton—Faced by the possibility of a barren isle for its newest national park, the U. S. recently rushed CCC reinforcements to an army of 800 firefighters on Isle Royale in Lake Superior. Large areas of the island have already been denuded by the raging blazes.

Ann Arbor—Wilmet F. Pratt, 24 years old, of New York City, has been appointed carillonist for the University of Michigan's new bell tower, now in construction. Pratt is a graduate of the Malines, Belgium school and has been associated with St. Thomas' Episcopal Church in New York.

Detroit—This metropolitan city has been pronounced the largest steel consuming center in the world. The statement was made by the president of the Association of Iron and Steel Engineers, and went on to say that the automobile industry is largely responsible for the heavy consumption of steel products.

Jackson—A near tragedy occurred when fire broke out in the Alpha Gamma Delta camp at Crispell Lake recently. Housing sixty underprivileged little boys, the building caught fire from embers of a fire kindled the evening before in the fireplace. Cottagers and firemen co-operated to extinguish the blaze and bring all of the children to safety.

Cheboygan—A visitors' day at which guests were to inspect the buildings and exhibits of educational work being carried on this summer, was to be held by the University of Michigan biological station on Douglas Lake. The institution is known as the largest fresh-water biological station in the world. Enrollment for the 1936 session is 105, gathered from 24 states.

Mayville—Three former pupils and their school teacher, none younger than 77 years, met at a reunion here recently. The teacher, a Mrs. Smith, of Postoria, began teaching at the West Dayton School in Tuscola County when she was 16. She is now 86. The former students are Mrs. Ida Putnam Matthews, 77, and Alonzo Lumley, 78, both of Mayville, and Tunis Rice, 77, of Caro.

Ionia—When Leslie Nelson, 39, appeared about town with a new car and purchased $300 worth of new furniture two days after a burglary had been committed, the suspicions of the local sheriff were aroused. Questioned as to his affluence, Nelson was said to have confessed to six safe burglaries which netted him $900. The thefts included the Ionia Post Office and a railroad ticket office.

Sault Ste. Marie—With 7,591,157 tons of iron ore and 2,197,157 tons of soft coal establishing new five-year highs, a total of 10,950,748 tons of freight passed through the Sault locks in July, bringing the total for the 1936 season to 29,532,527 tons. The boom swept through the entire major commodity category, according to the recent lock report and was the first time in years that tonnage for any one month went over the ten thousand ton mark.

Traverse City—An appropriation of $150,000 to advertise Michigan as a tourist and resort state will be asked of the next Legislature by the four Michigan tourist and resort associations, it was indicated at a meeting of directors of the West Michigan Association. The Upper Peninsula Development Bureau has approved this amount and the Eastern Michigan and Detroit associations were expected to concur in the action.

Jackson—Jackson can thank its forgotten sandstone deposits for the fact that it has the second largest penal institution in the world. Henry B. Lathrop, who had built a city prison and workhouse at Buffalo, had just moved to Jackson when the location of a prison was being discussed in 1838. Detroit and Napoleon were contesting for the institution with Jackson. Lathrop reported that the Jackson sandstone deposits were of the grade needed for building stone, and that settled the argument.

Lansing—The Conservation Department reports that its forest fire crews battled 1,200 forest fires during July. The fires burned over 17,500 acres, it was estimated. The state's regular fire-fighting force consists of 135 townsmen, or lookouts, 150 fire wardens, 840 "key men" who are paid per fire, and emergency help drawn from 28 CCC camps and WPA projects. Fifty trucks, 35 tractors and plows, a radio car, an airplane, and a fleet of pickup cars complete the equipment.

Battlefields Still Draw

More than 250,000 people a year are still visiting the battlefields of France. Most of them are French. Then come Belgians, and Germans take third place in numbers.

Verdun alone attracted 14,700 Germans last year, though its poignant associations and historic forts were the goals of pilgrims of all nations.

All over northeastern France nowadays one sees groups of visitors kneeling before shrines, English, French, American, Italian, that commemorate the heroism and suffering of the years of warfare.

CO. FARM AGENT'S LETTER

Treat Seed Grain
Copper Carbonate Dust Treatment
Use a full-strength copper carbonate dust (about 50 percent copper), manufactured especially for seed treatment. Apply at the rate of 2 to 2½ ounces per bushel of well-cleaned seed. Mix the seed and the dust in a tight mixing machine until every kernel is thoroughly covered with the dust. Seed thus treated may be stored indefinitely until sown without injury to germination. With this chemical, care must be used to avoid damage to the grain drill. Sometimes there is a tendency for the treated seed to cake in the drill, when standing overnight, or longer, in damp or wet weather. In such cases it is advisable to rock the drill wheels back and forth before starting in order to avoid breaking or bending the working parts. All working parts of the drill should be kept well oiled. The treated grain should be well cleaned out of the drill when seeding is completed to avoid corrosion of the parts. Seed treated with copper carbonate should not be fed to farm animals.

State Fair

The people in Livingston County are extremely fortunate in their location with respect to the State Fair. This is one of the leading agricultural exhibits held in the country. Last year a number of our growers exhibited agricultural materials at this show. We are hoping that we may have a greater number of exhibitors this year.

One item that has always attracted a considerable amount of interest is the county wool exhibit. Last year Livingston County took second place in the State with their fleeces.

Our 4-H club entries are rapidly filling up. We believe that this is an opportunity for the adult as well as the boys and girls to compare their products with those from other parts of the State.

Fly-Free Dates

I do not expect that there is any immediate need of giving fly-free dates for the planting of wheat for the ground is in a condition now where it would be practically impossible to prepare a seed bed. However, in some areas people may have carried on a practice of summer fallow and are waiting for enough moisture so that they may plant wheat. According to the entomology department of the Michigan State College the fly-free dates for this section are from Sept. 15th to Sept. 26th. For further information on the Hessian fly, write to the county office and ask for Circular bulletin No. 39.

Seeding

Under the terms of the soil conservation program, people were to receive soil conserving and soil building payments based upon the amount of land that was seeded to some hay crop during the year of 1936. So far this year it has been practically impossible to do any seeding alone. Many people are asking whether or not it will be possible to collect a soil conserving payment if the seeding is made after Sept. 1. We have had no definite instructions on this particular question, but as soon as we receive any information we will pass it on to the growers of the county.

Insulated Milk Tank

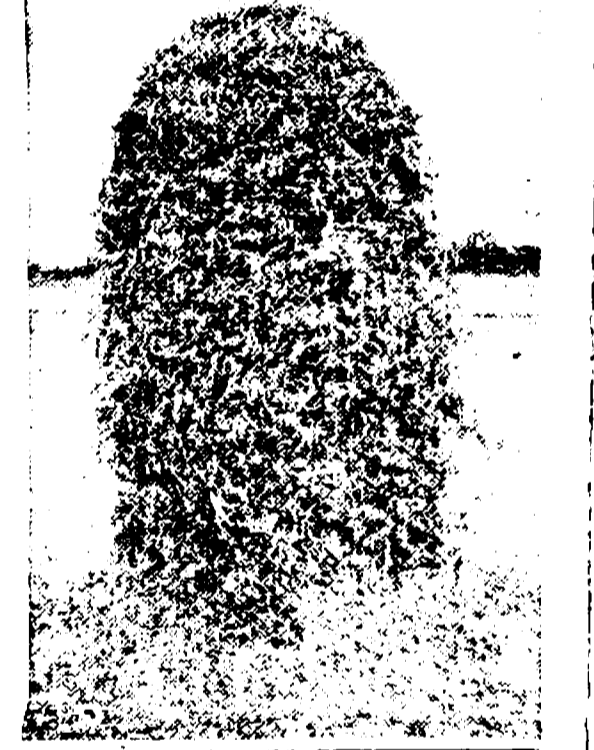

According to the rules and regulations laid down by the Board of Health it will be necessary for milk producers that wish to install new cooling tanks to use an insulating material in the construction. We have one such tank built in the county. This tank was constructed the early part of August on the farm belonging to J. G. Hays. Any one interested in this tank is cordially invited to stop at the farm and look it over. For additional information, a bulletin dealing with milk house and milk tank construction may be obtained at the county office.

STACKING BEANS CUTS CULL LOSS

Growers of beans in Michigan receive nothing for cull beans and in fact are docked for the labor charge in hand picking. Because many cull beans are the result of conditions prevailing during the first two weeks in September when beans are harvested and in the stack for curing, H. R. Pettigrove, assistant professor in farm crops at Michigan State College, has compiled a new bulletin, "Field Stacking for Michigan Beans," Special Bulletin No. 276, available within a few days by writing the Bulletin Room, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

"Pick is the term used by bean growers and shippers in this state to designate cull beans," says Pettigrove. "The term includes foreign material and all diseased, discolored and damaged beans. The average pick on Michigan beans from 1914 to 1934 was 8.16 per cent. Obviously pick is an important factor in bean prices and bean profits."

Stacks such as this used in field curing beans the first two weeks in September reduce hand picking and mean better premium prices to growers.

"A typical transaction shows why a reduction in pick is worthwhile to a grower. Take a price of $3 per hundredweight for choice hand-picked beans. For eight pounds of culls there would be a deduction of three cents per pound because of loss in net weight, or a loss of 24 cents. There would be a cull picking charge of five cents per pound for labor, or another deduction of 40 cents. Subtracting 64 cents from the $3 quotation, the grower actually would receive but $2.36 cents for the hundredweight."

Weather conditions are not subject to human management but harvest practices are, says Pettigrove. The method used in the harvest can do much to overcome the disadvantage of unfavorable weather.

A full description with illustrations includes details of using the McNaughton system of stacking, which is one of the means by which Pettigrove suggests for cutting the percentage of culls. The result would be better returns from the bean crop in which Michigan ranked first in quantity in 1935 in the nation.

CANTALOUPE - TOMATO SHOW

Commercial growers of cantaloupe and tomatoes are invited to the first "Melon and Tomato Day" to be held at Michigan State College, Saturday, August 22. C. H. Mahoney, extension specialist in horticulture, is planning the program.

Nearly three acres of melons are on test, including varieties obtained from Egypt and China. There are 196 strains from all of the standard varieties grown in Michigan. Although 85 per cent of the melons in the state are produced in Berrien county, growers also are expected from Ingham, Monroe, Wayne, Jackson, Van Buren, Saginaw, Bay and Livingston counties.

In the tomato work, three projects will be explained to commercial growers. Early variety trials include testing of 86 variety strains for field production. Another portion of the tests compares southern grown plants from Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Illinois with Michigan grown plants. Canning trials for yields comprise another part of the experimental work.

Through co-operation with the agricultural engineering department at Michigan State College, discussions on irrigation for truck crops will be part of the program. O. E. Robey of that department will offer information on motors and pumping equipment suitable for economical and practical field irrigation.

LIVINGSTON CO. RECEIVED $140,101.00 IN HOLC FUNDS

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR TAX PAYMENT

September 1st is the deadline for the payment of the second annual installment of taxes under the Michigan ten-year plan. Many property owners have already met their obligations and protected their rights. Incidentally they have avoided the last minute rush and congestion of county treasurers' offices.

Officials of the state in conducting this year's educational campaign are endeavoring to bring home to the property owners that to carry out the terms of their agreement they must be sure and make this second payment by September 1st.

They are also hopeful that those who did not come under this legislative act in 1935 will do so this year. Provision is made for this action and it may be taken at very small interest cost.

Incidentally, returns indicate that a considerable number of property owners are paying up their entire back tax assessment, thereby saving considerable money in future interest charges.

There is no more pressing governmental problem today than the question of past due taxes. Both the property owner and the various departments of the state are vitally affected. The state needs the revenue to operate in the interest of its citizens and the property owner wants to save his landed possessions.

While other states were floundering around with the problem, Michigan officials went ahead and worked out an equitable solution. It had whole-hearted support last year, and it is receiving it again in 1936.

State officials are to be commended for working out this tax plan and giving it educational publicity. Don't forget to do your part. Pay your second installment of taxes before September 1st, if you have come under the plan. If you haven't joined up, do so now. Also, if you can afford to pay all your back taxes at this time, do it. You will save materially in interest charges and you will have one less economic worry on your mind.

BEETLES BATTLE ORCHARD TREES

Brush Fires are in Order, But Dry Weather Makes It Necessary to Combat Pest with Extreme Care in Burning Dead Wood.

Fruit trees in Michigan weakened by adverse weather in 1936, as well as in preceding seasons, need extra protection against the fruit tree bark beetle which thrives and breeds in recently dead and dying wood and riddles twigs of vigorous and healthy trees as well.

In pointing out August as one of the two breeding seasons for the beetle, Ray Watson of the entomology department at Michigan State College, suggests burning brush piles left from pruning, taking out dead or dying trees and removing from orchard blocks any of the larger pieces of dead wood that may have been saved for firewood. Burning brush piles must be carefully guarded, of course, because of the dry weather fire hazard.

The two types of injury that occur include injury to trees of low vitality that are easily killed by the tunneling of the beetle during breeding. The other injury is caused by the beetles boring into healthy twigs and bark in search of a feeding or breeding place, then leaving to find less-vigorous wood when the trees counter attack with a flow of gum.

The fruit tree bark beetle also proves a pest in related ornamentals such as flowering crab and quince. The beetle is about one twentieth of an inch long. It is a dark brownish-black in color and is believed to be of European origin. When the bark of trees has been punctured, the beetle and larvae are revealed by peeling down the bark carefully with a sharp knife. Commercial orchard operators are warned by Professor Hutson to clean up abandoned orchard blocks to protect adjacent healthy producing orchards. Branches that broke from heavy bearing or storms should be removed.

SCHOOLS TO RECEIVE STATE SEAL COPIES

In order that the official seal of the state of Michigan may be made familiar to school children of the state, Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, has had authentic copies of it made for school distribution. The reproductions of the seal are appropriately colored to bring out the features specified by the legal description of the seal. The copies will be appropriate for framing by each school.

Actual distribution to the some 6,000 public schools of the state will be handled by Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. The reproductions will be received in the near future, with distribution of school supplies by the state school head. Distribution to the approximately 500 parochial schools in Michigan, will be handled by John J. O'Hara, Auditor General.

The drawing of the seal from which the official reproduction was made, was prepared this summer under the direction of Dr. Louis Weber, Deputy Secretary of State. The move was decided upon by Atwood because of wide-spread laxity through many years, in the printing of reproductions of the seal for various official uses throughout the capitol, on stationery and forms of various kinds. For ordinary use, reproductions of the state seal are not sufficiently large to permit inclusion of many details provided by law.

HOME LIGHTING CAN BE SCIENCE

Prevalence of much eyestrain and the need for wearing glasses is proof of the importance of the slogan, "Better Light for Better Sight," suggests Miss Helen Noyes, extension specialist in home economics at Michigan State College.

"When you buy a lamp," Miss Noyes advises, "look for the tag which says: 'Compliance with I. E. S. Specifications.' The letters stand for Illuminating Engineering Society, which makes a careful test of bulbs and shades to determine which give the best results in the amount of light and the ease in treatment of the eyes.

"A coat of white paint on the inside of a dark lamp will do wonders for the eyes and incidentally will save you money by giving more light for the electric energy burned. A shade must give 75 per cent of the light from the bulb through the shade before it merits the I. E. S. tag."

The reflection of light is best from light-colored walls and ceilings, which leads to the suggestion to keep all walls and ceilings light for economy in lighting and for better preservation of eyesight. By the use of bulbs of 100 to 150 watts and a reflecting bowl, according to Miss Noyes the lamp with a light shade gives maximum light in a room that has light walls and ceiling. Sufficient light with no bulbs in sight is the recommendation of the I. E. S.

No longer does the modern home-maker shirk navy blue gothic over a rose silk foundation and sew-heavy fringe on the bottom. If she knows proper illumination, says Miss Noyes, she may paint the dark shade white or look for new lamps which bear the seal of approval of the lighting society.

Gov. Fitzgerald has been making as his chief campaign claim that he has balanced the budget and got the state out of the "red" to the amount of some five millions of dollars. Now State Treasurer Fry says the governor is all wet, and instead of there being cash on hand,

CHAPTER VII

Rodney Braddon returned to Chicago from Rochester early on Sunday morning just eight days before the date set, on the calendar of the criminal courts, for the trial of Myrtle Lorrie for murder of her husband. Rod was ignorant of that date, and his arrival was without reference to the trial. He had come back to see his brother—and Agnes—before leaving for Germany. He had remained at Rochester much longer than he had planned.

He had been almost happy there. That is, he had found more to absorb him, to interest and excite him in his work, than ever he had before. Happiness for Rod did not depend upon sensual satisfactions; he consciously sought none of them, except music, sometimes. His sole excitement was in his work and study, which occupied him hour after hour; then he would go off on long, swinging walks alone. He kept his spare, splendid body in vigorous condition with swimming, when near water, or with tennis.

Rod played, in fact, to tire himself out when he needed it to beat down the longings within him—and his loneliness.

Sometimes he could ward off the spells by exhaustion; at other times, they surprised him unprepared. Rod would come "home" to his dreary hotel room bringing with him new medical reports upon which he expected to pass the evening, and he would never return on the light, but sit miserably and uselessly idle in the dark.

He missed his brother. To be sure, when they had been in the same city, days passed without Rodney's seeing Jud; but he was there, and on such occasions, Rod could go to him instead of seeking his own lonely room. And recently, he had been able to go, with Jud or alone, to the Glenelths'. But now that was lost.

Rod had made friends among the doctors at Rochester. Not many friends; to be sure, for Rod was no mixer; but he had found a few congenial men whom he liked and respected, and whose lives served the same purposes as his—understanding of disease. But he could not feel like seeking them when his spirit dropped low. They were too like himself. His brother—and Agnes—were utterly different.

He had expected—and half feared, half hoped it—that he would have destroyed his power to retain Agnes in his day-dreams. Losing her, he had supposed he must lose the delight of his dream of her; but this had proved not so. When his loneliness assailed him, and he sat in the dark, he longed for her—her. Separate as he had kept himself from her, he had never been so close to another girl. Now she was his brother's, he believed. So he must imagine her his own no longer! But it had been futile to forbid this to himself. And here he was again in Chicago.

Rod had not wired his brother; and so, while dressing as the train entered the city, he weighed probabilities of Jud's whereabouts.

It was a warm, steamy June morning—so it was probable that Jud would be up early for a long day on the water.

Having no rooms in Chicago, Rod checked his bag at the station and phoned his brother's apartment. Nobody answered, so Rod took a taxi and told the driver to hurry to the harbor.

His brother's familiar boat was not in sight, but when Rod inquired, a boy in a launch said yes, Mr. Braddon's yacht was at anchor. That was it, there.

Rod stared at a new motor-cruiser three or four times as large as the boat he had known. It looked ninety feet long, with graceful clipper bow and a line of brass-bound portholes to cabins, and with gleaming salons above-deck.

The boy ran Rod out to it; and on the quarterdeck stood Jud. He was bareheaded and wearing flannels without a coat.

No guests were in sight, and Rod was glad of that, though he was sure that guests must be on the way or were to be picked up at some port or pier. Jud never planned a Sunday on the water without a party.

Rodney hailed: "Jud! Hello!" And his brother saw who was in the launch. He stood stock still with surprise; and then Rod saw him laugh and run to the boat step, and he caught Rod's hand and hauled his brother aboard.

"Rod!" said Jud—and Rod felt his brother's arm tighten about his shoulders. "Like the stiff, old skate!"

Rodney obediently glanced about. "It looks great, Jud. I didn't know it was yours."

"Good Lord," said Jud, "it was in all the papers. Why's he waiting?" Jud looked at the launch. "Forget to pay him?"

"I paid him," said Rod, "but told him to wait."

Jeb laughed again in his warming way. "You would. Did you wonder if I wanted you to stay?—Hey, you!" he called to the boy. "Come closer! Catch!" And Jeb chuckled a gold-piece which the boy caught, calling out loud thanks.

"All through," Jeb dismissed him. "Now, old top, are you going to stay?" "I'd like to, Jud."

Anchor was up; and they were moving, with deceptive smoothness, out of the harbor on a limpid, lazy lake.

The brothers sat down to breakfast opposite each other at the gay little table at the forward end of the dining-saloon. Rod had learned that the guests for the day would be picked up at the Glenelths'.

In the shining, perfectly appointed galley, Imlo was cooking, but a steward, new to Jud's staff, was serving the table.

For the first time the splendor and extravagance of Jeb's establishment wrung a remark from his brother.

"Doesn't this all cost a heap, Jud?" "I'll tell you the truth, Rod," Jeb confided. "Expense doesn't make any difference to me any more. Money doesn't mean anything. I can make whatever amount I want. That's an absolute fact. A lot of men are past that point, Rod. The city—the country—civilization's in a new era. We've got the production problem completely licked. . . ."

It was after breakfast when Rodney asked at last: "How is Agnes?" "She's all right," his brother returned.

"When are you marrying her, Jud?" "When that damn trial's over. That was the rottenest piece of luck for me. We were all set, Rod; we went to that building to look over an apartment, when Agnes opened that damned door, and—"

Rodney, listening, sat still with difficulty; he held himself quiet by gripping tight the arms of his chair so as not to betray, too clearly, the tumult within him. He had had no idea, until just now, that Agnes was not his brother's. . . .

Ten people came aboard the boat when it lay off the shore opposite the Glenelths': Agnes and her mother and Beatrice and Davis and another young married couple whom Rod had never met. The others were paired, also; but they were not married: two girls whom Rodney vaguely remembered, and two boys, whose names he knew.

They were pleasant, casual, unimpressible young people before whom Rodney felt odd and old and awkward. They looked him over, and their eyes traveled to his brother, making comparison; but what they said to Rodney was carefully polite.

They made no real difference to Rod. Agnes was near him; and if he had not known that his brother must have failed to establish possession of her, now he would have discerned it—though she plainly was supposed to be paired with Jud.

She was in white, with a bit of blue slashed in the cool silk which clung to her as the boat made a breeze; and she cast off her hat and let the sun burn her till Rodney drew her back under the shade of the canvas over the forward deck. They remained there while the others stayed nowhere; and after a while, Rodney and Agnes were alone far forward.

He did not talk much to her. What had he to say? He sat in a striped canvas chair close to hers, and felt engulfed in a content which could not continue, he knew, but which was complete for the moment.

She looked at him and smiled, not at him but with him, in his content; and always, when they would lose something if their eyes lingered on each other, she looked away over the water; and as never, never before, Rodney longed to keep her close to him forever.

She wasn't Jud's yet, whatever the papers, whatever Jud himself, had said. Might she some time in some way be his?

Rodney faced the breeze which was blowing her dress against her slight body. The appeal of her loveliness, the allure of her beautiful body, was only an adjunct to that quality of hers which had caught him long ago and would never release him.

He had never had to explain himself to Agnes; and she, without speaking of it, had stood between him and the world of others. How he needed her! How much more than did Jud! How he could work, what enormous research he could accomplish, if she were his wife to hold in his arms, when he dropped his task; if she would share with him the evening and hours of night, and meet, for him, the world by day.

Now he had talked to her of his work at Rochester, and of himself, as he had to no one else, not even to Jud.

"Rod," she said at last, after one of their long silences, "I've something to decide. Help me. It's about the trial. They say that what will happen to Myrtle Lorrie will depend on me. I can free her—or convict her. Do you believe that?"

"I don't know," said Rod. "But Jud thinks so."

He saw her color quickly deepen under her sunburn. "So Jeb's told you."

"Yes; he told me, Agnes."

"What, especially?"

"That you took, from the first, the side of the defense. He—"

"What, Rod?"

"Can't understand it."

"Yes, he can, Rod. That's the trouble."

"That he understands it?"

"He knows I'm going to do what I am bound to do, because I believe—"

They Discussed Agnes' Coming Ordeal.

She stopped and caught her breath before she said it—"Martin O'Mara."

"O'Mara," said Rod. "The lawyer you called."

"Yes," said Agnes. "I'll tell you about him. He—"

Rodney, attending, tried to keep his mind on what she said; but his feelings made it utterly impossible. Fled far from him was his hour of false content. A new despair seized him.

He knew now that madly he had imagined that perhaps—perhaps—it had been some relic of memory of what he had done and said to her before he had gone away, which had interposed itself between her and Jud's complete possession of her.

But it was not that; it was something which had to do with that lawyer whom Jud had damned aloud—O'Mara.

CHAPTER VIII

The Monday of the trial dawned hot. The sun rose yellow and dazzling out of a lake that lay like a pool to the horizon; the faintest of breezes moved from off this endless mirror. At Agnes's wide-open windows the frail net of curtains barely quivered.

Ordinarily the sun, striking into her room, did not awaken her; but this morning she had seen the last stars fade and the first fingers of day grope over the edge of the waters.

The robins and the wrens chirped at the light; a wood thrush awoke, and gay little song sparrows.

After a while Agnes' mother came in, and for a short time they discussed Agnes' coming ordeal. Then Mrs. Glenelth left.

Today, Myrtle Lorrie must go on trial for her life, for the murder of her husband; and soon Agnes Glenelth must go on the witness-stand for her. No, not for Myrtle. There was no point in being dishonest with yourself. She was taking the side of the defense because of Cathal Martin O'Mara, who had come to the house again on Saturday morning—the day before yesterday—to go over her testimony once more.

Mr. Nordell and another attorney for the state had conferred with her twice; and she was subpoenaed as a witness for the state as well as for the defense.

But Jeb had said to her: "Nordell told me, Glen, you seemed to belong to the defense, body and soul. That's the impression he got. Are you crazy?"

"I'm going to tell only what I saw and heard," she had replied to him.

"But how are you going to tell it? Nordell knows; and he's not fool enough to call you for his witness. You'd never be his. If he put you on the stand, you'd go over to your shyster friend O'Mara. So he'll let O'Mara put you on the stand—and then the state can get after you. Be O'Mara's witness, and see where you land! Good Lord, Glen, what's got into you?"

What was this which was in her, and which, by its recurrent excitements made sleep impossible and unthinkable after the dawn of this day? There was no use in disguising this to herself; when she should go on the witness-stand, she would declare by her implications, if she were forbidden to state it in words, that Myrtle Lorrie had killed justifiably.

Had she?

Halter Neck, Princess Lines, Capes Polka Dot Tunic for You to Sew at Home

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A NEW party dress this time of year brings two-fold joy. There's the fun of rounding out the summer season of social activities in lovely array and then when midseason dances and dinners are over, its off to college where the fun begins all over again for your dress will take on new glamor in new environment. Wherefore, it would reason out that a party dress bought now is not an extravagance but an economy since it provides not only for the present, but for the future as well.

The gowns pictured have smart features that are scheduled to carry through into late fall, since their styling is decidedly advance. The skirt of the lovely flowered chiffon dress on the seated figure is that full and billowy it floats beguilingly with every move of its fair wearer. The halter neckline is especially significant together with the Margot ruff about the throat. The halter neckline is appearing right along on incoming fashions.

Designers are all enthusiasm over the new princess lines that are destined to play an outstanding role this coming season both for dresses and coats. The charming gown centered in the picture adopts princess lines that develop into a full hemline. The perfectly gorgeous mousseline de soie that fashions this delectable gown is in an appealing shade of blue with huge golden flowers artfully wide-spaced as are most of the more formal prints this season. This handsome quality-high silk mousseline confirms the message from fabric headquarters that silks of extreme luxury and elegance will triumph in the coming modes.

The flair for all white in the evening is reflected in the ensemble to the right. An alabaster white silk sheer was the choice for this supremely lovely costume created by Reville. The waistband is fastened with a silver Grecian clasp. The prestige of capes in the evening mode is noted, and knowing style creators declare they will continue to play their triumphant role as the new season comes on. The word that fashion is reviving the use of ostrich is confirmed in the opulent banding of white South African ostrich feathers that embellish this cape. Not only, according to indications, will ostrich appear on hats but a lavish use will be made of it for costume accessories and other adornment.

In fact the trend for fall and winter apparel for the social season is toward superbly rich effects in every direction, especially in the new silks and metal weaves of classic tone. Jewelled and beaded embroidery will glitter on crepes and other gorgeous silks. The newest gesture is handpainting done in silver and gold and bronze, borrowing ideas for motifs from Chinese, Persian, Egyptian and other Far East art sources.

A theme of absorbing interest is the new gowns fashioned of black satin for dinner and evening wear. They are in decided contrast to the fluffy ruffles type of shimmer and sheer frocks. The idea is to make them up classically simple. Of course, the satin must be of sterling pure silk weave to successfully sound the luxury note. A favorite styling is similar to that of the flowery silk mousseline gown just described as being cut along princess lines that assume a wide flare at the hemline with the neckline emphasizing the very new square cut. With these satin gowns most glamorous bracelets, rings and clips are worn, withholding ornamentation of any other sort. If you would be "first in fashion" a black satin dress of this type will assure you this coveted distinction.

FOR SCHOOL WEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

In every back-to-school wardrobe there should be at least one dress of light weight wool. Light in weight but warm enough for coolish days, the sheer wool used to make this beautifully tailored two-piece frock makes it equally acceptable for business, campus or spectator sports wear. A two-color print chiffon scarf tucks inside the high round collar. The front closing is achieved with composition buttons matching the shade of the frock.

FEATHERS IN YOUR HAT THIS AUTUMN

Now comes a word about fall hats. Higher crowns and off the face lines in brimmed style are being shown. One advance model developed in black leghorn for late summer, and in velvet for fall, has a turned-up brim, cleverly slit at the back and trimmed with a dark gray ostrich feather.

Feathers are coming into the conversation, too—and how they will increase our vocabularies! Our plumage, it seems, is to be one of our most important autumn features. We'll be using the term "Coc feathers" again, and "coquille." The former are the tail feathers of a rooster, and the latter is a short body feather of a goose. There are "Palette" and "Satinette" and a lot more to learn with the new season, along with the fact that we'll be formalized by ostrich plumes.

Buttons Now Offer Style

Touch for Any Old Costume

Seekers of the latest in accessories for the modern well dressed woman are missing an important bet if they don't make a special point of keeping close watch on the button market.

Every trip to the stores should include a stop at that most fascinating of all counters where buttons of all colors, shapes and sizes are tucked away in hundreds of little drawers.

Since color is so important in accessories, buttons of the new vivid scarlets and blues, emerald greens, and lemon yellows, or of the multiple other intriguing colors, might be just the proper touch for the revivification of last year's clothes.

Pattern 1927-B

Even the slenderest of clothes allowances will permit including this clever tunic frock in your wardrobe. It's the very dress you've been wanting . . . so perfect for town, country, commuting and vacationing.

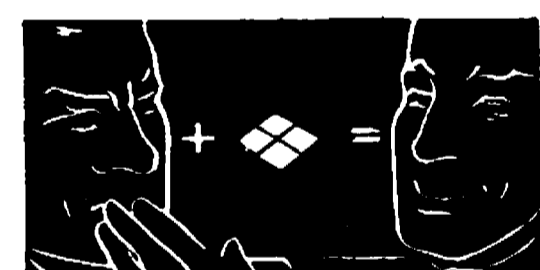

The tunic has a blue polka dot on white ground and flares partly from a tiny waist held by a patent belt. The lines conform to the current wide shoulder vogue while puffed sleeves push up at the shoulders a la Margot. You may wear the neckline open having revers in the same or contrasting color, or buttoned high and ornamented with a clip pin or bouquet. Your friends will succumb to the charm of your black and white shantung model, polka dotted satin, pastel sheer splashed with crisp white, or any favorite shade or material that expresses your personality, making this ensemble yours alone.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1927-B is available for sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 2 3/4 yards of 35 or 39-inch material for the tunic and 2 yards for the skirt. Send 15 cents in coins.

Send for the Fall Pattern Book containing Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send 15 cents for your copy.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 387 W. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

NOTES OF THE GAME

The Ann Arbor team is discouraged, only having won two games in 15 starts. Most of their losses have been by one run. Hamburg beat them twice in ten-inning contests. The Ann Arbor lineup is familiar. Smith and Mercer used to play with Dexter. Jaffee played several games with Pinckney two years ago. Chas. Bennett, Burnstrum and Todd of Hamburg were there to see the first game, the Hamburg-Saline contest not starting until 3:00 p. m. They did not seem to get much kick out of Pinckney's victories.

Don Searles is in the northern part of the state for a couple of weeks, but is expected back in a week or so. Jack Dilloway hurt his foot in the third inning and this made a shift in the lineup necessary. Maycock went to short and Henry Skowerski to the outfield. Henry is not familiar with this position and let two flies get away from him in left field. The last muffed let in two runs. Then he was shifted to center and caught two flies right off the reel.

Clare Miller ran about a mile and caught Mercer's high fly behind second base.

Dutch Wilson, former University player, is a pitcher, but went behind the bat and caught a good game. Haines did not give Ann Arbor many good balls to hit at. His attempt to work the corner continually was responsible for his five bases on balls issued.

The game was played at West Park in Ann Arbor, one of the best diamonds in the state. A creek runs through the outfield. This used to be a favorite place to hit home runs. Lefty Reason claims he once stood knee deep in it and caught a fly several years ago. However, the boys did not get their feet wet Sunday as the creek has dried up.

Lefty was not on the job Sunday to patrol the creek. We wonder why? The Pinckney baseball team has been selected as one of the teams to play at the Northville Fair.

PINCKNEY WINS SECOND GAME

In a return game played at Pinckney on Friday night, Pinckney defeated Plainfield, 13 to 9. Both pitchers, Dinkel and Folker, batted freely but Pinckney managed to get the most hits. Holmes, Plainfield hit a home run, but the best Pinckney could do to match were triples by Dinkel and Paul Singer.

AFTERWARD

The significance of fine funeral direction is seldom appreciated at the time of need. It is after the need has passed and memories of loved ones have become all that remains, that the perfection of our services is fully appreciated. Investigation will disclose that the beauty and dignity of this service is within the reach of any family.

PUBLIC EXECUTIONS

Years ago hangings were a big occasion in merry, old, England. All executions were public and people came from miles around to witness them. Samuel Pepys, in his famous diary, relates getting up at 4:00 a. m. to get a good place at a hanging and the pleasure he derived from it. Only a few states have capital punishment in this country and in these the executions are usually private or limited to a very few. That the people have not entirely lost their taste for the gruesome, is shown by the execution in Kentucky last week of a negro boy. Some 15,000 people are said to have witnessed the execution. This was evidently made still more interesting by the fact that it was handled by a woman sheriff, who released the death trap. Just why it was necessary to make this execution public and give it so much publicity, is a problem.

Fair Outlook Bright

Success of the Michigan State Fair this year, September 4 to 13, depends solely on "a good break in the weather" according to Secretary George A. Prescott.

"Every facility and requisite for making this Centennial fair the greatest in Michigan's history has practically been laid in our laps," Prescott said Saturday, "and apparently there is nothing to fear save cold or rainy weather."

"The automotive and other industrial concerns are renting space and arranging for exhibits far beyond any of their previous efforts. Agricultural and live-stock exhibits will top any achieved in other years."

The Mid-summer Outlook

Since early July the drought has had the lime-light in the news. Now we find figures published on Industrial Activity. And we discover that the heavy industries, building and steel, are the leaders. They are operating at a percentage of capacity which is higher than at any time in the last four years and equal to the 1929 pace. This news means that the farmers' market will be broadened through better industrial wages and greater employment.

According to a noted economist we have climbed back to a normal state of business activity and are ready for a new period of prosperity.
