Civil War in Spain; Likely to Be Long

AFTER more than five weeks of desperate fighting, neither the Spanish loyalists nor the rebels were able to claim a decided advantage, and it became evident that the conflict would be long drawn out if the other European nations could keep aloof. This latter eventuality was made more probable by Adolf Hitler's announcement that the German government had ordered an embargo on arms to Spain. He thus lined his country up with Great Britain and France, and Italy had accepted the French proposal for neutrality, though with some reservations.

These "neutral" nations, however, do not intend to be imposed upon and both the British and the German governments made strong protests to the Madrid government against alleged violation of the freedom of the seas. Five British warships set sail from Gibraltar and Hitler sent seven from the Baltic to enforce the demands that interference with shipping cease. The crews of these vessels were ready for immediate action.

Germany's chief complaint was that the steamship Kamerun had been stopped and searched and not permitted to enter the port of Cadiz, held by the rebels. However, the Kamerun proceeded to a Portuguese port and, according to an American correspondent, there unloaded twenty-three car-loads of war material that was sent across Portuguese territory to the insurgents at Badajoz and Salamanca.

Rebel airplanes made their first attack on Madrid, bombing two airports and allegedly destroying a considerable number of loyalist planes. This was in retaliation for the airplane bombing by the government of open cities held by the insurgents.

Merciless slaughter of captives and hostages on both sides continued. Several Frenchmen who were captured by the rebels while serving with the loyalist troops were executed, and word was sent to France that the same fate awaited any other French nationals caught aiding the Madrid government. The rebel leaders are especially enraged against France, insisting that many French planes have been assisting the government and that the loyalist force that invaded Mallorca is composed largely of French and Russian volunteers using French munitions.

Couzens for Roosevelt; Colby for Landon

SENATOR JAMES COUZENS of Michigan, a Republican long noted for his independence of party restrictions and a candidate for re-nomination on the Republican ticket, has announced that he will support President Roosevelt for re-election. His statement was:

"Believing as I do that the most important matter confronting the nation is the re-election of President Roosevelt, I intend to support him."

"The outcome of my own candidacy for the senate is neither important to the nation nor to me, but I believe it is important that my many loyal supporters in Michigan be advised in advance of the primary on September 15."

"The reasons for this conclusion will be advanced from time to time between now and election next November."

Former Gov. W. L. Brucker is opposing Couzens for the senatorial nomination.

On the other hand, Bainbridge Colby of New York, who was secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet, announced that he is for Landon, declaring in a published statement:

"Governor Landon's candidacy carries the hopes of every American who knows what America stands for, and who respects the principles which have brought us to greatness as a nation, and preserved our liberties as self-governed people."

"The thoughtful and independent Democrats throughout the country—and their number is formidable—are determined in this election to rebuke the betrayal of their party by the administration in Washington."

At least four ventures by private companies into this field in the last seven years have met with failure because of a lack of public acceptance, Green said, but added that a study had revealed flaws which could be avoided.

Green contended these efforts failed because they were "income, not crop insurance." By having farmers pay their premiums in grain, and by paying losses the same way, he argued, the danger of price changes would be eliminated.

Death of Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota Governor

FLOYD B. OLSON, Farmer-Laborite governor of Minnesota and candidate for the United States senatorship, died of stomach cancer after a courageous fight. He had been ill for months but had kept up his executive and campaign activities as best he could until the end. Hjalmar Peterson, lieutenant governor, succeeds him as governor, but at this writing there is doubt as to whom the party's state central committee will select to make the race for the senatorship. Francis H. Shoemaker of Duluth announced his candidacy immediately, and two other men were being considered—Senator Elmer A. Benson, now a candidate for governor, and Representative Ernest Lundeen of Minneapolis.

On his deathbed Olson pledged his personal support to the New Deal in the November election, and it is presumed the Farmer-Laborites of his state will largely conform to that stand.

Plotters Against Stalin Are Executed

SIXTEEN men, arraigned in Moscow on charges of plotting the assassination of Dictator Josef Stalin and the seizure of power in the Soviet republic, calmly pleaded guilty. Two of them, Gregory Zinoviev and Leo Kamenev, were members with Stalin 13 years ago of a triumvirate that governed Russia and are well known to the outside world. The confessions did not end the trial, for the defendants contradicted and accused one another until the case was in a jumble. Some of them, like Zinoviev, proudly accepted responsibility for the plot, which was said to have been engineered by the exiled Leon Trotsky.

All sixteen were declared guilty and executed by a firing squad. Twelve more men and one woman, the government announced, were held for examination and probable trial. Some of these were involved by the confessions of the sixteen conspirators.

Prosecutor Vishinsky said Gregory Sokolnikoff, former ambassador to the court of St. James, and M. Seredyakoff, a former vice minister of communications, were under criminal charges. Under investigation, he said, were Nicolai Bukharin, editor of the government publication Izvestia; Karl Radek, prominent soviet commentator; M. P. Tomskey, former chief of trade unions and now head of the state publishing house; Alexei Rykov, commissar of posts and telegraphs, and Gregory Pyatakov, assistant commissar for heavy industry.

In the case on trial the defendants revealed the fact that not only were they plotting the assassination of Stalin and four others, but planned also to betray Trotsky and place Zinoviev and Kamenev in supreme power.

Trotsky, at Hoenefoss, Norway, scoffed at the Moscow proceedings as "humbug." "For political vengeance," he said, "the trial puts the Dreyfus scandal and the reichstag fire in the shadow."

Phillips Is Appointed Ambassador to Italy

WILLIAM PHILLIPS, who has been undersecretary of state, has been appointed ambassador to Italy and will sail for Rome on September 9. Mr. Phillips is considered one of the most efficient men in the diplomatic service, which he entered 33 years ago as private secretary to Joseph Choate, ambassador to Great Britain.

Rich Cargo of Sealskins From Pribilof Islands

SEALSKINS valued at $1,750,000, the season's "take" from the Pribilof islands, arrived at Seattle aboard the navy transport Vega. Seventy per cent of the cargo of 52,486 skins will go to the United States, 15 per cent to Great Britain, and a like amount to Japan under the terms of the international sealing treaty. Skins were taken from young male seals on the Pribilofs in Alaskan waters where the seals go annually to breed.

The skins for the United States and Japan will be processed in St. Louis and sold at auction. Great Britain's share goes to London,

Blanton Loses His Seat in Congress

TOM BLANTON of Abilene, Tex., veteran ranter in congress, has lost his seat in that body and says he will return to the practice of law. For twenty years, with one brief interlude, he has represented his district in the house but in the run-off Democratic primary, which is equivalent to an election there, he was beaten by Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland, a county judge. Returns to the state election bureau gave Garrett 33,314 votes to 18,218 for Blanton. Garrett's campaign platform calls for "more jobs and less dolo," adequate care for veterans of all wars and the merit system for all postmasters.

Last hours of the campaign were enlivened by a dispute over a telegram purporting to give Blanton the endorsement of James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee. Farley denied sending such a message and Blanton charged political enemies had sent it to embarrass both himself and Farley.

Hungary Honors Memory of Gen. Bandholtz

WHEN Brig. Gen. Harry H. Bandholtz, U. S. A., was head of the international allied commission in Hungary, in 1919, a band of Rumanians undertook to plunder the national museum in Budapest. But the doughty American, armed only with a riding whip, faced the mob and dispersed it. Bandholtz died in 1925, but Hungary has not forgotten him, and the other day with much ceremony they unveiled a memorial statue of the general with the whip in his hand.

Benes Promotes Friendly Relations With Germany

NEITHER Fascism nor Communism will be tolerated in Czechoslovakia, which is "a firm, indestructible lighthouse of democracy," said President Eduard Benes in a speech at Reichenberg. But he told the German minority that he was addressing particularly, that he hoped that in the fall "the Locarno powers will be able to work out a plan for general European co-operation and that good neighborly relations will be established between Germany and Czechoslovakia."

Leaders of the German minority in Czechoslovakia charge that unemployment in their part of the country is greater than anywhere else in Czechoslovakia—73 unemployed per 1,000 population, compared with the state average of 38 per 1,000.

They charge that this is partly the result of the government's failure to place orders in German Bohemian factories and failure to give state jobs to members of the German minority.

German Pastors Denounce Nazi Church Rule

BOLDLY defying the Nazi government, hundreds of German Evangelical pastors thundered from their pulpits against the Nazi leaders who, they said, are trying to drive Christianity out of Germany. They protested vigorously against governmental interference that cripples the freedom of the Protestant church and demanded that such interference cease. More than a month ago the preachers sent a list of their grievances to Reichsfuehrer Hitler, but he did not even reply, so they decided to make the protest public at church services.

France's Maginot Line Is Given a Test

DURING the fall maneuvers France has been testing the strength of its new fortifications along the German frontier—the Maginot line. In the Montmedy region the elaborate system of concrete strongholds was subjected to an "enemy" attack, and observers said the assaulting troops, armed with the newest and speediest equipment, were able to penetrate the line only at a few places and in small numbers. Reservists from the interior of France had moved up to occupy the line in thirty-six hours. Watching the "battle" was a delegation of generals from Soviet Russia, with which nation France has a defensive military alliance.

Danish Princess Engaged to Bavarian Count

PRINCESS ALEXANDRINE LOUISE of Denmark, one of the few young ladies considered eligible to be the bride of King Edward VIII of England, is going to marry another man. Her engagement has been announced in Copenhagen to Count Luitpold Zu Castell-Castell of Bavaria. The princess, handsome and twenty-one years old, is the daughter of Prince Harald, brother of King Christian of Denmark.

Navy Building Bids Show Costs Have Gone Up

STARTING its 1937 building program, the Navy department opened bids on twelve new destroyers and six submarines. The bids came from private shipyards and estimates were submitted by navy yards, according to law. The latter were not made public.

It was found that the cost of construction has advanced approximately $1,000,000 per vessel in the last year.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Mason—Ingham County's peach crop this year will be about 50 per cent normal, due to the drought and last winter's long cold spell.

Coldwater—Mrs. E. A. Sebring went on a quiet search for a milk thief when the production of one of her cows declined sharply. She found the thief—a snake coiled about a leg of the cow, busily engaged in milking the animal.

Detroit—W. M. Hammond, 28, a survivor of the crash at sea of the navy dirigible Macon in 1935, has enlisted for a 4-year term of service in the navy. He told recruiting officers that he had no fear of aircraft but preferred service this time on a surface craft.

Ionia—The State Prison Commission has approved the plan of Dr. David Phillips, now psychiatrist at Jackson Prison, for segregation of moron and sex type inmates at the various state prisons from other prisoners. It recommended this plan be submitted to next Legislature for necessary appropriations.

Adrian—President of the Michigan Milk Producers association since it was organized 20 years ago, Nathan P. Hull of Lansing announced that he would retire from the office when his term expires in November. The announcement was made at a picnic here of the Michigan Producers Dairy Co., an association subsidiary.

Lansing—Michigan's 1936 crop of hatchery trout—nearly 11,000,000 brooks, browns and rainbows—are waiting in state hatcheries and rearing stations for planting in the streams of the state this fall. The work will be done after the trout season closes for 1936. It is believed that nearly all of the fish will be of catchable size next year.

Detroit—Dick Degener, "America's greatest diver" is back home again, now possessor of the Olympic gold medal, won in the springboard event of the Olympic games in Berlin. Degener was developed at Central High School in Detroit, attended the University of Michigan and was a member of the 1932 Olympic team, placing third at that time in the springboard event. This year, he proved himself the best in the business.

Lansing—A report by the secretary of the state safety council states that about 4,000 reports on accidents are being received each month. The subcommittee is concerned only with enforcement and is allied with the National Safety Council. In order that the state may receive complete reports of all accidents, a recommendation has been made that a small fee be paid to local governments for such reports.

Cass City—An 8-months-old baby was killed when thrown from an automobile as the car struck a cow on the highway. The victim was Frances Louise Schneider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schneider, of Cass City. She was seated on her mother's lap in the car driven by her father when the auto struck the cow at the intersection of M-81 and M-53. Mother and child were thrown from the car, the mother escaping with bruises.

Cheboygan—The fame of little Shirley Ann Boda, not yet a month old, has spread quickly. Her mother, Mrs. Herbert Boda, recently revealed that she had received a proposal of marriage by mail from a widower in New York state, who said he owned a beautiful home and was anxious to become the father of Michigan's smallest baby at birth. Shirley Ann's father committed suicide on July 23rd, only a few days' previous to her birth.

Lansing—A basic science bill for the state, similar to the laws already on the statute books of nine states and the District of Columbia, is favored by the State Medical society. Essentially, the basic science proposal would set minimum educational standards in non-clinical subjects for those who aspire to practice the art of healing. It would not affect those now in practice. The examiners would be teachers and not practitioners of healing.

Stanton—M. V. Mitchell, local resident, appeared before the state administrative board in an attempt to have his pension reinstated and was allowed $50 per month. After Mitchell was bitten by an insane man while he was a guard in the Kalamazoo state hospital, the state purchased a farm of 20 acres near Stanton for Mitchell and he was awarded $75 a month. The incident happened more than 20 years ago. He had been drawing a pension until recently.

Empire—Mrs. H. A. Reable of Detroit vacationed in this vicinity with her husband this summer and while here, discovered an albino frog, which scientists say is one of the rarest of biological occurrences. The frog is pinkish-white, with the tell-tale pink eyes that mark true albinism. It is about one-third developed and authorities say is of the species Rana Calamitans whose natural colors are brown, gray and green. Mrs. Reable expects to dispose of her find to some scientific institution.

Peck—At a special election Peck voters authorized a bond issue of $16,000 to build a water works.

Kalamazoo—In a survey of Michigan farm income covering the last four years, the Department of Agriculture reported that June cash receipts for Michigan crop marketings and livestock was the highest for any June since 1933.

Bad Axe—Almost every community has had a queen of some sort this year but this community had something different. Sixteen-year-old twins, Marjorie and Marion Lafave of Gagetown, ruled together as thumb district bean queens.

Jackson—After having tied the Foote Hospital record for a five-year period last month, Old Man Stork this month appeared out to exceed the peak. July brought 55 births at that institution. During the first 17 days of August were 36 births, more than two a day. This is at a rate in excess of the previous month.

Traverse City—While rains and cooler weather brought about a great improvement in the condition of the Grand Traverse potato crop, farmers in this district say that the oats crop was the nearest thing to failure ever witnessed. One grower threshed 20 acres and got 50 bushels of oats. Most fields were not threshed but the grain used as hay while the finest fields have yielded from 20 to 25 bushels per acre.

Grand Rapids—The youth of Kent county have taken pity on hay fever sufferers. A giant ragweed pulling event was staged here, with the result that many thousands of the scourge were destroyed. Prizes awarded by interested citizens helped provide incentive to the young people and Boy Scouts, 4-H club workers and just plain boys and girls had an opportunity to do their communities a worthwhile service.

Manistee—The Manistee-Mason county health unit offices have been set up here in the County Savings bank building, and details of contacting city, county and school officials started by Dr. L. W. Switzer of Ludington. No actual health program work will be taken up until opening of the public schools, when children's clinics will be held. The sanitary expert, E. J. Friar, will start his duties at once, making surveys of resorts.

Lansing—The state health department has announced the award of 10 scholarships in the University of Michigan and John Hopkins University to Michigan physicians. The awards are made under the provisions of the national social security act governing the training of public health personnel and cover matriculation fees, tuition, and living expenses of from $150 to $200 per month. The scholarships cover public health training courses.

Lansing—So that the official seal of the state may be made familiar to school children, the secretary of state has had authentic copies of it made for school distribution. The reproductions are colored to bring out the features specified by the legal description. The drawing of the seal, from which the official reproduction was made, was prepared this summer and distribution will be made to some 6,000 public schools and 500 parochial schools.

Ann Arbor—A contract for a clock with a minute hand seven feet long, which will strike the quarter hours on the Westminster chimes of the third largest carillon in the United States, has been given to a Birmingham, N. Y. firm. The 53 bells for the carillon, shipped from Liverpool, England, are expected here next month. The clock will be placed in the tower housing the carillon bells and will be synchronized with the university master clock on the campus.

Lansing—Through an ambitious system of weather reporting, the state board of aeronautics has laid plans designed to provide greater safety for men and women who fly Michigan's airplanes. The plan calls for six hourly weather reports a day from radio stations. The board also revealed that Michigan is second only to Florida in the number of airports under construction. Work is under way on 45 airports in the state and 38 more projects have WPA approval.

Lansing—The cost of living for the average laboring man's family in Michigan increased 9 per cent in July over the first three months of 1936, a report of the department of labor and industry revealed. Cost of feeding an average family of four (two adults and two children) was $7.75 per week in July. The one item of expenditure which has accounted for the largest share of increase is the price of potatoes, the basic food in the diet supplied by the Department as supposed to provide a well balanced ration.

Lansing—The railroads, last citadel of central time in the state, will soon adopt eastern standard time for their schedules. The interstate commerce commission has granted a petition that the state be included in the eastern time zone. Action of the Michigan legislature in 1931 changed the entire time from central to eastern although the eastern schedule had been observed for some time before act was passed. Railroads, governed by the ICC have had to cling to central time, although both have been quoted.

Easy to Crochet Set of Lace Filet

Pattern 5627

New china, glassware, even the furniture newly polished—but what about a set of doilies to set off all this loveliness? Neighboring Notes

Dispatch of Aug. 31, 1911

Fred L. Woodworth of Pinckney, who also maintains a home in Detroit has announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election as Wayne County Republican chairman, as he is about to move to Lansing. He is now state welfare director and old-age pension director with headquarters at Lansing.

Two Fowlerville men, Lloyd Alward and Oral Aaker, are held in the Mason jail, charged with breaking in to a barn on the Ed Lewis farm near Webberville and stealing beans. Anker was given to 2 to 5 years in Ionia and Alford, 2 years probation.

Land Bank of St. Paul, Minn.

The Livingston County Republican
Press, which is conducting a straw vote for the Publishers' Autocaster Service of New York, announces that in the votes received from Livingston county for president, Roosevelt leads with 50%, Lemke has 30 and Landon 20%. In the national poll only 18 states have been polled. These give Landon 37,987 and Roosevelt, 31,
665. This, like all previous straw votes, puts Michigan in the Democratic column.

Seven people were drowned in Livingston county during the month of July.

IS INTERESTED IN DELINQUENCY WORK

Judge Sam Street Hughes, of Lansing, Republican candidate for Congress from the Sixth District, believes that society has not been sufficiently impressed with the care and the problems of American youth.

During his two terms on the municipal bench in Lansing, Judge Hughes through his many contacts with the juvenile delinquent realizes the al-larmingly importance of this social problem, and has developed a sympathetic understanding of the maladjusted youth.

More than six million young men of the nation are now idle and drifting into lives of crime and delinquency because they are not absorbed by industry or adequately trained by society according to Judge Hughes.

True, steps have been taken by governmental agencies to check the spread of this social blight, but Judge Hughes is convinced that as yet society is not wholly conscious of the extent of the problem of idle youth.

Judge Hughes is constantly active in juvenile delinquency work and in the Parent Teacher Association. The latter group he considers to be one of the most admirable organizations yet established to aid society in gaining an insight into the problems of the coming generation.

HUNTING MAPS AVAILABLE

As a service to deer hunters who are planning trips into new & strange country this fall, the lands division of the department of conservation has available maps of many northern tracts showing the roads, streams and lakes. These maps will be sent on request of a fee covering part of the cost of publication and mailing.

The maps will meet a demand that has been recurrent each fall, particularly from deer hunters from the southern metropolitan centers of the state.

Printed Lithographic maps showing in colors the lakes, streams, soil type and the roads and trails on a scale of an inch to a mile are available at a fee of 50 cents each on the following counties: Antrim, Alpena, Crawford, Kalamazoo, Roscommon, Ogemaw and Menominee.

Another set of maps of the blue-print type on a scale of two inches to the mile will be distributed at fees ranging from $1 to 2.50 on the following counties: Alger, Schoolcraft, Cheboygan, Bay, Charlevoix, Chippewa, Iron, Luce, Montmorency, and Oscoda. These maps show the lakes, streams, roads, trails, forest cover types and soil type.

The maps will meet a demand that has been recurrent each fall, particularly from deer hunters from the southern metropolitan centers of the state.

MICH. STATE COLLEGE SHORTS

Picking the so-called soft fruit such as the tomato, peach, grape, or strawberry while they are rather green may be necessary in areas of Michigan affected by the Alabama moth, says Ray Hutson, Michigan State College entomologist. This moth is the only one in this section capable of piercing the skin of soft, ripe fruits. This is done by means of spines on its mouthparts. The insect then feeds upon the juices which exude and upon the soft tissue just beneath the skin. The result is water-soaked areas, which serve as enticement for fungi. Picking the fruit before it ripens fully is the only means of preventing injury.

Wood shavings or ground corn cobs properly treated may be effectively used as a filler between walls and ceiling of the poultry house to provide cheap insulation, say Michigan State College agricultural engineers. The material is treated with lime in the proportion of two pounds to 100 pounds of insulation material. The lime is used to make the insulating material unattractive to rodents or insects.

Sowing winter oats or barley on land capable of producing good spring crops in an attempt to avoid loss if the next season were too dry for the spring-sown crop is not advisable, according to R. E. Decker, Michigan State College extension specialist in farm crops. Inquiries have been received from farmers who wish to purchase winter oats seed, but the farm crop department does not recommend this seed for use on land that normally would grow good spring oats. Many times such seedlings are prone to winterkill, largely because of the danger of the "heavy" soil, which is the soil on which spring seedlings flourish. If the stand of winter oats succeeds on sandy soil in southwestern Michigan where no one would anticipate large yields of spring oats, Decker said.

RED SPIDER SPRAY WILL AID SHRUBS

A cheap and easily made spray may be applied to control red spider infestations on shrubbery and other deciduous plants. Attacks of the pest are especially bad this season, according to E. L. McDaniel, Michigan State College entomologist. This spray is composed of 5 to 10 pounds of bill poster's paste, 2 pounds powdered skim-milk or 10 pounds ordinary liquid dish-milk, combined with 100 gallons of water. This spray should be applied largely to the underside of the leaf and under consideration in order to be most effective. The red spider is especially bad this season because of the prolonged dry weather.

Although the pest is not deadly to vegetation and shrubbery, its attacks will seriously weaken the plants. Eradication of saw thistle plants will be helpful in controlling the spider for next year as this is the host plant on which the pest spends the winter.

ENSILAGE KNIVES CUT POWER LOAD

Proper Adjustment Can Effect Economies in Silo Filling Job, Engineer Advises.

Michigan farmers filling silos this fall may effect economies in operating their ensilage cutters by considering some pointers given by D. D. Ebinger, Michigan State College agricultural engineer.

Ebinger suggests that farmers may be able to cut their power requirements by giving careful attention to the cutter knives, adjustment of elevating wings, and by avoiding excess speed of the cutter. The knives should be sharp and should be set as closely as possible to the shear plate in order to produce the desired shearing instead of chopping action. The adjustment of the elevating wing should be close. Not more than one-eighth inch between housing and wing is necessary, Ebinger said.

The blower should be set just to lift the ensilage over into the silo and not to provide any excess lifting. Excess speed of the cutter increases power requirement. About 400 revolutions per minute is sufficient for filling a 40-foot silo, he points out.

Farmers who have electricity available may find it desirable to use an electric motor in furnishing the power. A five-horsepower motor will be found satisfactory, provided the above points are considered, Ebinger said. Use of such a motor will cut labor and operating cost, he said. About one kilowatt of an electrical energy is needed for each ton of silage stored.

LUNCHES AFFECT SCHOOL PROGRESS

Progress that a child makes in school is influenced by the sort of lunch he eats at noon, Roberta Hershey, extension nutrition specialist, Michigan State College, points out that this noon lunch should receive more attention than merely preparing a few sandwiches of miscellaneous left-overs and a piece of cake.

"The noon lunch for the child who must carry his meal with him challenges the imagination and skill of the home-maker," Miss Hershey says. "In the first place, every child should have at least one hot dish each meal, particularly from September to June. Hot dishes usually have a better nutritive value than cold ones and also tend to stimulate the appetite and digestion. If hot dishes cannot be obtained at the school, the school lunch-box lunch box should be equipped with a thermos bottle so that the home may supply this lack."

A good pattern for a lunch box may include the following: sandwich with a filling of meat, cheese, egg, fish, peanut butter, baked beans or a substantial food with bread and butter; a succulent food such as salads, vegetables or pickled vegetable or fruit; milk, for drinking or in a bottle of milk soup, cocoa, custard or other milk puddings; fruit or fruit juice; and something sweet.

If a thermos bottle is available a great care of the problem of providing nutritive lunch for the child is solved. The homemaker should not overlook the importance of packing the lunch attractively and providing little surprises in the choice of food from day to day. Choice of lunch box has a great influence upon the case in which the child's noon meal is planned and also upon his desire to eat the meal. Lunch boxes should always be of tin or aluminum so that they may be easily cleaned and sealed.

PINCKNEY WINS FROM GARDEN CITY 10 TO 6

Pinckney got into the final at the Northville Fair last Friday by defeating Garden City 10 to 6. This team is in first place in the Inter-County league. Carl Galligan pitched for Pinckney and was unhit except in the 7th inning when Garden City scored four runs. Garden City got a run in the first inning when the umpire called a balk on Galligan with a runner on third. Pinckney got it back in their half when Ward singled and Dinkie doubled him home down the left field foul line. They got another in the second when Bob Smith singled. Dilloway doubled and Galligan scored Smith with a sacrifice fly. In the 4th they batted way around and scored four runs. Searles opened with a double, Rickerd and Smith were safe on errors and Dilloway and Miller each singled. In all 8 men batted. Dinkie singled in the 5th and scored on Bob Smith's hit. In the 6th they added 3 more and it proved that they were needed. Miller walked, Dinkie singled, his third hit and Searles scored them both with a triple and himself crossed the plate on a passed ball. This ended Pinckney's scoring. Tatro relieved Jayska in the 7th and finished the game without being scored upon.

Garden City scored a run in the first on Galligan's balk and not again until the 6th inning. In the 7th Galligan weakened and they scored four times. B. Johnson singled, Jayska walked, Garrity tripled to center scoring both but was out at home trying to stretch it into a home run. Dinkie to Dilloway to Searles. Higgins grounded out, Dilloway to Smith, O'Brien hit a home run and Ward threw out C. Johnson. Garden City got two men on in the 8th but the next three batters all flied out. In the ninth Hetcher batted for Higgins and struck out, M. Tatro singled but was thrown out at second by Dinkie, trying to stretch it into a double. O'Brien singled but C. Johnson popped out to Ward to end the game.

EARLY AUTO TAGS TRACE CAR GROWTH

One of the primary attractions in the basement of the state capitol, so far as tourist interest is concerned, is the display of Michigan's automobile license plates from 1908 to the present day, recently mounted in a glass case by direction of Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State. The first "plate," that of 1908, was a mere metal disc, or seal, the smallest license "plate" ever issued by the state. In that year, only about 3,105 motor vehicles were registered in Michigan; the discs cost but $.50 each.

In 1909, a comparatively enormous plate of heavy leather, with tin "house numbers" nailed to it, was fashioned. There was no indication on the plate of the year issued, but it was so distinctive, there was hardly much need for that.

The State's seal was first used on plates in 1910, when an enameled plate was formed from heavy metal. The seal appeared either enameled or riveted, each year thereafter including 1919 when it was last used. The biggest license tag was issued in 1926. Letters were first used in 1933. Twenty nine tags are contained in the display.

Near the case is one containing 1934 license plates from other states. Michigan's almost prosaic comparison of that of some states, notably Tennessee, the only state in the union to shape its plates to follow the geographical outlines.

The outline of Montana appears in the background of its plate however. Wyoming divides its plate numerals with the figure of a "bronco buster" astride a pony. A pelican divides the Louisiana numerals into halves. Pennsylvania, "The Keystone State," displays a small keystone on its plates. Maine's plates carry the word "Vacationland" across the bottom. Rhode Island calls attention to its "300th anniversary" of statehood this year on its plates, while Texas similarly remembers its "centennial" with that word displayed.

Arizona achieves distinction by making its plates of copper, reminding its people that this is "The Copper State."

NEW GAME LAWS OUT

The new 1936-37 game law digest is ready. Distribution of the digest, together with new waterfowl regulations, small-game and deer hunting licenses and tags has been started by the department of conservation. Supplies are being mailed to nearly 2,000 license dealers in Michigan and nearby states and it is expected the distribution will be completed well before the opening of the upland hunting season.

COMMERCIAL MINNOW LICENSE

Nearly 1,000 commercial minnow dealers' licenses have been issued by the department of conservation so far this summer. The $3 license fee to date has brought $2,775 into the game protection fund of the state and will help to finance operation of state hatcheries and other conservation activities. This year's total of 925 minnow licenses is a new high record, exceeding that of last year which was 886.

NEW GAME LAWS

While sportsmen and conservation authorities throughout the country were speculating as to whether the federal government would allow any hunting on waterfowl this year, Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey announced a 30-day open season on waterfowl, snipe and coots from Oct. 10 to Nov. 8, with two exceptions. Canvasback and Redhead ducks were added to the protected list this season and cannot legally be shot by the hunter.

Other changes in waterfowl hunting regulations announced by Gabrielson are to be presented to the state conservation commission, which, by formal action will confirm the regulations to them.

NEW FILM AVAILABLE

"Michigan's Forests," a new three-reel conservation movie, will be available for loans to schools and organizations of the state Sept. 15. It was announced by the department of conservation today. The movie was filmed by Walter E. Hastings, staff photographer of the department and shows reforestation work, technical forestry practices, fire prevention and suppression.

DRAGONS DRIVE YOU

Some stared at her hostilely, as if she would cheat them of the death they desired for the girl in black before them; some thrust forward from the same seats as if they would surround and defend the prisoner—and her witness. Suddenly you saw faces.

Mother's and Bee's; and two who had been in the papers: his first wife, with her daughter beside her. How did they feel, a few feet away from Myrtle? Did they want her killed too? Here was another face—an old face, a fine face. A little old woman who had lived a lot, and never let life beat her. Winnie, she was. Agnes never had seen so much as a likeness of her, but there was no mistaking her. When she looked at Martin O'Mara, she knew Winnie was his grandmother.

Agnes sank down upon the witness-chair, and waited for Winnie's grandson's first questions.

They were simple enough. What was her name? . . . Where did she live? . . . How old was she? . . . Had she gone to Chicago on a certain day? . . . Did she meet any one in Chicago? Then what did they do? . . . After she had looked at the empty apartment and Mr. Braddon had left her, what did she do?

"Now tell the jury in your own words what you did and what you saw and what you, yourself, heard after the door of the apartment, upon which Mr. Colver knocked, was opened."

"I saw," said Agnes, "a girl—a young woman—I had never seen before. That girl there." She looked at the prisoner, Myrtle Lorrie. "She was in negligee over underclothes and stockings. She was very excited and disheveled. She looked as if a good deal had just happened to her."

"I object," Mr. Nordell, for the State, was on his feet.

"Sustained!" said the judge. "You must confine your statement to what you observed and heard; you must not give your inferences," he said kindly enough to Agnes.

"I know," she said. "I forgot. I can say I saw bruises and hurts on her. I did. I can say she was shaky. She was. She was holding to the door-knob with both hands. Who're you? Who're you? she asked; but didn't wait for me to answer. She grabbed me and pulled me into the room. She said: 'Oh, God, I'm glad to see you—glad to see you!'"

"She pulled me down into a big, soft chair beside her. . . . Mr. Colver, the agent, went to look for smelling-salts for her. . . . I heard him call from down the hall: 'Mr. Lorrie! Mr. Lorrie!' . . . He came back, and he could hardly speak. Finally he said to me: 'You know what we've walked in on? A killing! There's murder here. . . . She shot him! . . . I had Mrs. Lorrie in my arms, then. I was holding her. She was lying limp across me.'"

Agnes had no idea how she looked as she related this. She was not thinking of herself on the witness-stand; she was seeing herself back in that room. But the judge, the jury and people crowding the benches were staring at her as she sat in the big witness-chair, young and slight and fair, and so completely unaffected and forgetful of herself, indeed, and so honest-looking.

Cathal, standing before her, stepped back a little as though he dared not trust himself closer to the delight of her. What a start she was making—beyond what he had expected! He could not possibly have planned this.

"Then did you do anything?" he asked her very quietly.

Her blue eyes on his shortened their focus from the far-away room which Agnes had been seeing. For an instant, only, her retinas were aware of him; then she went back again.

"Yes, I tried to rouse her. I asked her: 'Did you do it?' She couldn't reply at first. She didn't seem to understand me. I kept shaking her. 'Maybe I did,' she finally said. 'Maybe I did.' I said: 'Maybe? Don't you know?' She didn't seem to know."

"I object!" Nordell protested.

"Sustained," said the judge.

"I'm sorry," said Agnes. "But she didn't."

"I object!" Nordell protested.

"Sustained," said the judge, and told Agnes more sternly: "You must not give your opinions or inferences."

"I won't again," said Agnes. "Or I'll try not to. . . . The phone rang pretty soon, then. I heard Mrs. Lorrie say: 'Oh, God, Bert.' Then I guess she talked to her. I mean, she caught herself, 'Mrs. Lorrie waited and listened as if some one was talking to her. Then she said: 'Bert, something's happened. . . . Charley died today!'"

Then Mr. Colver used the phone to call the police; and I, Mr. O'Mara, called you."

She stopped, aghast at herself and before Martin O'Mara. This was not at all as she has reviewed and prepared her evidence with him; she had said things she had never dreamed of uttering, and omitted a score of items she had promised to repeat. But he had no reproach for her.

Quite to the contrary! His own pulses were dancing with new and wanton pleasure. She delighted him; she delighted the jury-men—at least some of them. The judge was unsuccessful in his severity toward her. Three or four newspaper reporters reluctantly left the courtroom.

They carried the "heads" for the afternoon news. Agnes Gleneth had gone on for the defense, and was winning the courtroom.

to the evidence she had omitted; she remembered the memorandum which she had made on the morning after the visit to the Lorrie apartment; and now, as Cathal questioned her, she read it and explained that she had written it, on that first morning, "because people were saying so many things different from what I'd seen."

This helped; but already, by the unplanned ways of her own, Agnes had established the feeling essential to a favorable turn of the case. The jury, the judge, the courtroom had seen her and approved her; they believed and trusted what she said. It was perfectly plain that only accidentally had she become concerned with the case. Yet, having happened to be the first person to come in on Myrtle Lorrie after the shooting—and having been the person in best position to judge Mrs. Lorrie's physical and mental condition at the time when the crime had occurred—this girl had not turned against her but had set herself to help her; when the agent had sent for the police, Agnes Gleneth herself had summoned, for Mrs. Lorrie, a lawyer.

Agnes was almost the only person in the courtroom unaware of what she had accomplished; she believed she had bungled everything. She thought she had much more to do when, after she had described Myrtle's bruises and hurts as she had seen them, Cathal asked: "Now, at the time you first saw her and when you were in close contact with her, what was the general state of her mind? Did she show any clear recollection of what recently had happened?"

"No. She was both confused and contradictory. I found her in a state of—of shock. Of extreme—shock."

"Thank you," said Cathal. "That's all I need ask." He stepped back a little and turned to the table of the State.

"Your witness," he said to the attorneys charged with the prosecution. He retreated to his own table, that of the defense, whereat Mrs. Lorrie all the time had been seated, and he dropped upon a chair beside his client. Myrtle turned to him, and he nodded to her almost absently; he touched, reassuringly, the impulsive hand she stretched toward him; then turned and watched Nordell as he came to his feet for the cross-examination.

Cathal jerked forward to the edge of his chair; he kept his hands relaxed, but he felt as if with fists clenched ready to fight—fight as he had never fought before—if the prosecutor "tore into her" as he could.

Yet, while half of Cathal tingled and bristled thus for the fight, the cooler half, the professional half—the part of him which was a lawyer—hoped the State would "tear in."

What a mistake! What complete catastrophe if they attempted to sneer and jeer at this girl and "show her up!"

Nordell did not make that mistake. "You have said, Miss Gleneth," he began with careful courtesy, "that you happened to be in the building where Mrs. Lorrie lived, because you were looking at an apartment in it with Mr. Braddon."

"Yes," said Agnes.

"You were engaged to be married to him?"

Agnes hesitated for the first time. Engaged? Were they ever "engaged"? They had been looking at an apartment together; so she must have been then.

"Yes," she said. That was the honest answer.

"Are you engaged to him now?"

"No." There it was, out. That was honest, too.

"When did you break your engagement?"

"We didn't break it." What a thing to talk of before a courtroom full of people, and with reporters writing it all down!

"Then what did you do?" Nordell demanded.

Cathal was on his feet to help her; but, for the first time in this trial, he was confused. He did not know how to help her; this was all within Nordell's right.

"We—we decided not to be married; that's all."

"Who decided that—Mr. Braddon or you?"

"I object!" Cathal protested; but the judge, before ruling, looked to Nordell.

"Overruled," he said to Cathal. "Answer," he said to Agnes.

"I did."

"When?"

"It was when we were in the apartment upstairs. That was why Mr. Braddon left the building."

"What effect had this on you?"

"Effect?"

"I mean," Nordell explained, "after just having broken your engagement upstairs, did you enter the apartment downstairs in a calm and composed mental state? Was your own condition perfectly clear, or confused?"

"Clear," said Agnes. "I was perfectly clear in my mind," she repeated.

"Perfectly clear?"

"Yes; for I had not cared—enough."

Nordell stepped back. He hesitated; he had gained one effect; and he decided to rest on it. "That's all," he said suddenly, looking at Cathal.

"That's all," said Cathal. "You can step down, Miss Gleneth."

Agnes stepped down slowly, cautiously. Suddenly she had felt uncertain of her feet. She looked down at the floor, and a wave of faintness passed over her. What had she just said of Jeb?

She halted for an instant. "Water," she heard some one say. She felt hands on her; strong, steady hands; Martin O'Mara hands. He held her firmly and pleasantly. She felt that she could not possibly fail.

"Here's water, O'Mara," Mr. Nordell's voice said.

"Thanks," he said, and held the glass to her lips.

Agnes swallowed and looked up. "Sorry—sorry," she said.

Then her mother was there. "I'll take her," she said to Cathal.

"All right now?" Cathal asked Agnes.

She looked up at him. "Jeb," she said, "—Mr. Braddon's back in that room? Take me back to him, please," she begged Cathal. "I want—I want to tell him myself what I said."

"I'll get him," Cathal offered. "I'm not calling him to the stand. There'll be no more court this afternoon, I think."

"Then," said Agnes, "tell him, please. I'll wait for him in the car."

Bailiffs opened the way for her mother and Bee and her. An elevator lowered them to the ground; they went out, through the breathless, hazy heat of mid-afternoon, to the hot and dusty car.

O'Mara went to Jeb in the witness-room. He was pleased, Jeb saw; the hour for him had gone well.

"I'm not calling you today—or at all, Mr. Braddon," Cathal said. "I thank you for having been ready. But now I'll not need you. We're through with Miss Gleneth."

"Then where is Miss Gleneth?"

"She's gone out. She's waiting for you—with her mother and sister—at the car."

"All right," said Jeb; and demanded: "Well, what did she do on the stand?"

"She did it," Cathal told him. "She turned the case."

"For your rotten little murderer and you!"

Cathal drew back a little.

"You damned shyster!" Jeb whispered from his soul.

Cathal heard, and knew he was meant to hear; and he caught control of himself. He could not hate this man now; he could not envy him; to strike him, physically, would be silly surplusage. He would not let himself deliver the blow he could with a few words more. He said, as quietly as he might in the tension between them: "Some evidence came out in cross-examination which I neither knew nor expected."

"What evidence?"

"A statement she made—which she was forced to make by the State—concerning herself—and yourself."

"What did she say about us?"

"That," said Cathal, "she wishes to tell you herself."

As Jeb stepped from the door to the Criminal Courts building, cameras clicked at him again; and the crowd turned. Jeb heard his name passed, and he saw lips that passed it, smile. He straightened and faced them. Behind his back, somebody laughed. Jeb would have liked to turn and knock the idiot down. He would like, above all, to knock down O'Mara. Damn him!

Jeb recognized the Gleneth car; and he halted.

Agnes saw Jeb, and she knew that she had nothing left to tell him.

He came to the car, and Simmons opened the door for him.

"You'd better take her directly home," Jeb said, looking in. His eyes were upon Agnes, but they went at once to her mother, and he spoke to her. "I'm going to my office."

Cathal drove north alone at nine that evening. The roads were choked with cars, many of them parked, more of them barely rolling as their possessors sought the night and relief, in the little breezes of motion, from the dull and heavy heat.

Another day, whatever its triumphs and despairs, was done; its final pale flaunt was furled in the west. Darkness spread its treacherous shield to satisfactions of the longings of flesh for flesh. Self-sufficiency capitulated; one hungered for another; everywhere young people paired, arms about each other, lips together, careless what silhouettes the headlights surprised and betrayed.

Night. For day, the making of money, the struggle and the fight; for night, relaxation and love. Night, with Deneb, the bright star, low over the lake—as low, almost, as the masthead light of a little yacht drifting along.

Cathal was clear of the city. Thunder threatened, but from far away. Beside him, the street-lamps ceased; he followed the dark lines of cool country places.

It was unlike Cathal to falter before a determination he had taken; yet he passed the gateposts of the Gleneths and drove a mile beyond before he turned back and entered their road.

It was ten o'clock, but he saw that doors and windows of the lower rooms were open; shaded lights burned within. The family had not gone to bed.

Cathal rang, and he said to Cravath, who recognized him: "Ask Mrs. Gleneth if I may have a few minutes—no more—with Miss Gleneth."

Cravath left him outside and with the screen door closed. Mrs. Gleneth came, with Cravath, to the screen, and spoke to Cathal through it.

"What is it, Mr. O'Mara? Aren't you through with us? Does the law let you ask something more of my daughter?"

"Not the law," said Cathal, holding his hat. "It's I that do."

HOW ARE YOU TODAY

DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Talks About

Cause of Offensive Breath

OFFENSIVE odor of the breath is often a matter of considerable importance to those afflicted, and medical advice is occasionally sought. The fact that the odor may arise from some trouble in the mouth, throat or bronchial tubes is well recognized. But in some cases no trouble exists and yet the odor persists.

I am quoting Drs. Howard W. Haggard and Leon A. Greenburg, New Haven, in the Journal of the American Medical Association. It has been suggested that the air coming from the lungs is tainted by the blood coming from some part of the body where trouble exists. It has also been suggested that the odor arises from the saliva (the digestive juice of the mouth) or even from the stomach itself.

Dr. Barton

However Drs. Haggard and Greenburg are of the opinion that the odor comes from the mouth or throat, and show the results obtained in experiments with a number of individuals who had eaten onion or garlic. Usually the breath loses its odor within a few hours, but in occasional individuals even small amounts of onion or garlic in soups, sauces, or salads taint the breath for several days.

As a rule in the past little relief could be given for this condition except by disguising the odor with the use of mouth washes containing aromatic oils.

How to Remove Odor

After careful investigation it was found that the odor after eating onion and garlic is from little particles that remained in about the mouth and teeth. It would seem reasonable to suppose then that brushing the teeth and tongue with soap and water and rinsing the mouth would remove the odor but they did not do so.

Even brushing the teeth and tongue with a 30 per cent solution of alcohol in water failed to remove the odor.

However the experiments showed that "the breath can be immediately and completely rid of the odor by washing the teeth and tongue with a solution of chloramine. The chlorine thus liberated in the mouth reacts chemically with the essential oils—garlic and onion—and deodorizes (removes odor) them. It is probable that many cases of foul breath from other causes could be removed by the same treatment."

Chloramine is not a proprietary drug and can be bought from your druggist. The chlorine odor is itself unpleasant and the druggist may have to add something to disguise or sweeten it.

Bad Effects from Dinitrophenol

Editorials in the Journal of the American Medical Association have from time to time warned physicians of the dangers of dinitrophenol. "Repeatedly and emphatically the Journal has published statements regarding the extraordinary dangers involved in the sudden reduction of weight occasionally described as banting, slimming, thinning, slenderization and in other ways. From time to time when dinitrophenol was first proposed for weight reduction, the Journal warned against its uncontrolled use. This was particularly the case because dinitrophenol is a standardized, and because it should be more study over a period before it could be recommended for its permanent effects."

Now it appears that one of the most disastrous effects of dinitrophenol is the production of cataracts in some of the eyes from many places come reports that in certain instances the continued use of dinitrophenol followed by the development of cataracts. In occasional cases eruptions of the skin occur that may be dangerous for life."

Owing to the fact that this drug has been so successful in reducing weight it is being sold under a variety of names and can be readily bought in drug stores. It may thus be that some of the preparations are not safe aside from the fact that "sensitive" persons can be injured by the drug even when it is pure.

The fact that dinitrophenol causes skin eruptions, cataracts, and injures the blood has been amply proven and this must never be forgotten.

The thought then is that it would be well for overweights to use the simple safe method of eating less and (when possible) exercising more, until more has been learned about the effects of dinitrophenol while in use, and its possible effects which may occur many months after it has been discontinued. Such a safeguard would insure against serious trouble and worry later on.

Envy of Crooks

The fingers of Inslee Mount, an American business man in Argentina, leave no readable prints.

He went to Buenos Aires to obtain an identification certificate and the police got a shock when his fingers only registered black smudges. He said it was hereditary and that his hands and feet were insensible to cold or heat. It's lucky for the police that Mr. Mount is not a crook.

See Our State Fair Governor Urges

Through the State Fair Board, Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald has issued a proclamation asking all residents of Michigan to try and pay a visit to the Fair this year.

"It is entirely proper and fitting," he wrote, "that the 87th Michigan State Fair should be used as an instrument to celebrate the 100th anniversary of Michigan's statehood by depicting the progress which we have made and the results which have been obtained from the time our ancestors carved out of the Old Northwest Territory the prosperous and dynamic State of Michigan."

"I'm leaving my car at Home this trip! I've Found Bus Travel costs less than Driving — and I enjoy the ride so much more when I don't have to watch the Road Every Minute."
