Mussolini Takes Part in European War Dance

IT WAS Benito Mussolini's turn to go into the European version of the Indian war dance, following Hitler and Stalin, and he gave a great performance. At Avellino, center of the Italian army maneuvers, Il Duce announced to a cheering throng that he could mobilize 8,000,000 soldiers "in the course of a few hours and after a simple order." The premier declared the world is in the throes of an irresistible re-armament race and Italy must reject the idea of eternal peace, which he said is "foreign to our creed and to our temperament." He asserted that the armed forces of Italy are more efficient than ever as a consequence of the Ethiopian war and that the 60,000 men engaged in the maneuvers are but a modest and almost insignificant part of the country's actual war strength. "We must be strong," cried Mussolini. "We must be always stronger! We must be so strong that we can face any eventualities and look directly in the eye whatever may befall!"

Germany's new army of a million men, created by Hitler's order doubling the term of compulsory military training, is to be financed by increased taxes on all companies and corporations by 25 per cent for 1936 and by 50 per cent for 1937. This increase brings the corporations tax up to a minimum of 25 and 30 per cent on new profits.

A government communique carefully explained that corporations which have enjoyed heavy earnings due to government orders frequently pay "only a tax of 20 per cent on reserves they accumulate while private business men pay up to 50 per cent."

Germany is rapidly increasing naval armaments. It was announced that a second U-boat flotilla will be formed in addition to the first flotilla named for the former submarine commander, Otto Weddigen.

Polish Army Chieftain Visits the French

SHOULD war break out in Europe, France counts on having the powerful Polish army on her side. Consequently the week long visit of Gen. Edward Rydz- Smigly, inspector general of that army, and a Polish military mission to France was made the occasion of elaborate ceremonies. The train carrying the Poles crossed the border at Belfort and the General Rydz-Smigly was received by the commanding generals of the area and reviewed thousands of troops of the frontier regiments. Going thence to Paris, the Poles were accorded the highest military honors and the crowds in the decorated streets cheered them lustily.

Gen. Rydz-Smigly.

Dinners for the guests were given by President Albert Lebrun, Premier Leon Blum and Foreign Minister Delbos. Later they were taken to the Franco-German frontier where they inspected the famous Maginot defense line of concrete and steel strongholds and passages. A great military review at Nancy ended the tour. The Paris press is sure that Hitler's action in lengthening the term of German military service has drawn Poland closer to France.

American Destroyer Periled by Spanish Bombs

SIX bombs dropped from an unidentified Spanish airplane fell perilously near the American destroyer Kane, which was en route from Gibraltar to Bilbao to help in the removal of Americans from the war zone. The Kane fired several rounds from an anti-aircraft gun at the plane. Naturally our government was roused to protest. Secretary of State Hull instructed his agents abroad to request both the Spanish government and Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebel forces, to "issue instructions in the strongest terms" to prevent another "incident of this character." The rebel forces in the north were making a powerful air attack on Irun, scattering many bombs on that border city, and an assault by land and sea forces was expected at any moment. The government troops there had refused to surrender and their officers said rightist prisoners, including some prominent men, would be exposed in the "most open places during the bombardment."

The Madrid government admitted its troops had sustained an "important reverse" in a battle at Orpesa, 100 miles southwest of the capital and were driven back to Talavera. Later a loyalist victory at that place was claimed, though London heard the rebels had scored another victory there. The fighting in the Guadarrama mountains continued indecisively, and in Toledo the loyalists were still hammering away at the ancient Alcazar in which about 2,000 rebels were besieged.

Ten foreign envoys accredited to Spain sent a note to the Madrid government calling on it to "humanize" the war, and they expressed the hope that "both parties" would stop the killing of hostages and non-combatants and refrain from bombarding non-defended cities. The American and Japanese representatives did not sign the appeal.

Ruth Owen Resigns as Minister to Denmark

MRS. RUTH BRYAN OWEN, now the wife of Capt. Boerge Rohde of the Danish king's royal life guards, has resigned as American minister to Denmark in order to be free to campaign as a private citizen for the re-election of President Roosevelt, and the President has accepted her resignation. This was done in an exchange of telegrams, that from Mr. Roosevelt saying:

"While I am very loath to have you discontinue the very fine services you have been rendering as United States minister to Denmark, I appreciate your reasons for wanting to resign and the motives that prompt you. I therefore reluctantly accept your resignation."

Mrs. Rohde, daughter of William Jennings Bryan, has had a long career of public service. Before entering the diplomatic service she served in the Seventy-first and Seventy-second congresses, 1929 to 1933, from Florida. Captain Rohde, to whom she was married in July last, is her third husband. She divorced her first husband, William Homer Leggett. She entered politics after the death of her second husband, Maj. Reginald Owen of the British Royal Engineers.

American Bar Association Against Court Limitation

RESOLUTIONS adopted by the American Bar association at its meeting in Boston declare firmly against any attempt to limit the power of federal courts to pass on the constitutionality of laws. The association avoided what had been expected to be a lively debate by taking a noncommittal attitude on the report of another committee which denounced in great part the alleged invasion of the rights of citizens by the New Deal. This report, to which there was a minority report appended, was received and filed by the assembly, but not accepted, and the committee which filed it was discharged from further duty.

Frederick H. Stinchfield of Minneapolis was unanimously elected president of the association for the coming year.

Farmers' July Income Best Since 1929

PERHAPS the farmers of America don't realize it, but during July they enjoyed the largest cash income they have had since 1929. Figures given out by the Department of Agriculture show the sales of farm products brought them $711,000,000 against $582,000,000 in June and only $451,000,000 in July, 1935.

To their income from sales, the farmers added $24,000,000 in various forms of government benefits, bringing the total cash at their disposal to $735,000,000. The rental and other benefits totaled $57,000,000 in June and $19,000,000 in July, 1935.

Transfer of W. C. Bullitt to the Paris Embassy

TRANSFER of William C. Bullitt from the embassy in Moscow to that in Paris is not surprising. He it was who was chiefly responsible for the recognition of the Soviet government by the United States, and when he was rewarded with the ambassadorship it was expected he would be able to swing a lot of Russian business to American concerns. Also it was hoped he could persuade his Russian friends to keep their promises not to disturb this country with communitistic propaganda. In these respects at least Mr. Bullitt has been a disappointment. But he retains the confidence of President Roosevelt and will not be out of place as ambassador to the leftist French government.

Some observers think Mr. Bullitt is sent to Paris for the purpose of secretly sounding out the major European powers on the possibility of reconvening the world economic conference in 1937.

Death of George H. Dern, Secretary of War

SECRETARY OF WAR GEORGE H. DERN died in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, of heart disease and other complications resulting from influenza. He had been ill since last spring but part of the time had insisted on attending to his official duties, keeping this up even from his sick bed. Mr. Dern, who was sixty-four years old, was formerly a brilliant mining engineer and was the second non-Mormon to be elected governor of Utah, serving two terms.

Funeral services for Mr. Dern were held in Washington, with many high federal and army officials and private citizens in attendance. The body was then taken to Salt Lake City on a special train aboard which were Mrs. Dern, her three sons and two daughters, and a cabinet delegation including Secretary of Commerce Roper, Acting Secretary of War Woodring, Attorney General Cummings, Acting Secretary of Navy Standley and Acting Secretary of Labor McGrady. Gen. Malin Craig, army chief of staff, headed a delegation of the army high command. At Salt Lake City final rites were held in the great Mormon tabernacle with President Roosevelt attending.

President Roosevelt's Trip to the Drouth Area

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S special train made a quick run to Bismarck, N. D., and the special committee on the drouth, headed by Morris L. Cooke, reported to him on its inspection of the afflicted area. The President then took an automobile tour through the countryside to see for himself some of the effects of the long dry spell. He conferred with Acting Governor Welford and Senators Nye and Frazier of North Dakota and Acting Governor Holt and Senators Wheeler and Murray of Montana. Next day Mr. Roosevelt's train carried him down to Pierre, S. D., and thence into other drouth stricken states.

Mr. Roosevelt's original schedule was changed to permit him to make a quick run to Salt Lake City for the burial services of Secretary of War Dern.

Secretary Ickes' Stepson Commits Suicide

WILMARTH ICKES, stepson of Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, shot himself to death in the Ickes home at Winnetka, Ill. He was thirty-seven years old, married and the father of three children. The suicide, on the anniversary of his mother's death in an automobile accident, was attributed to despondency over illness. The young man had just been informed by a physician that he had tuberculosis. Secretary Ickes, informed of the tragedy, went to Chicago at once by airplane.

Stalin Warns Red Army That War Is Near

REICHSFUHRER HITLER has injected a little more ginger into the international armament race by suddenly announcing that the terms for compulsory military service for Germans was doubled—two years instead of one. As matters are just now in Europe, this appeared to be aimed directly against soviet Russia, and if the London newspapers are to be believed, Dictator Stalin recognizes this and reacts as might be expected. The London Evening News and Daily Mail both assert that Stalin, in a secret radio address to the red army, said:

"Comrades of the red forces: We are on the very eve of momentous events. At any moment now you may be called upon to lay down your lives for the defense of the proletarian birthland."

"This is the moment you have been anticipating, and now your birthland is expecting you to do the duty you have so eagerly awaited."

"I have no doubts about you, and I am convinced you have no doubts about us, your leaders."

"Our enemies are getting into position. So be ready. The enemies are on the frontiers of our great land. Keep watch."

"Everything money could buy, everything the genius of man could invent and everything the loving labor of the workers could make have been given into your hands for the defense and glory of the Soviet land."

Food Supply Near Normal, Says Federal Bureau

ACCORDING to estimates of a federal bureau of agricultural economics, the food supply of the United States for the year ending June 31, 1937, will be only 3 per cent below that of 1935-'36, and 1 per cent less than in 1934-'35. The reason is that the exports of food products probably will be less than during the last fiscal year.

The drouth has been unusually severe on feed crops, spring wheat, potatoes, and vegetables for canning. The short feed supply is expected to result in considerable liquidation of live stock during the first half of the marketing year, and these increased marketings, together with the larger spring pig crop of 1936, are expected to maintain meat production slightly above the level of 1935-'36. Supplies of poultry and eggs are expected to be larger, but dairy products will be less than last year, as will be fresh and dried fruits.

Flair for Hand-Quilted Fashions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

UP TO comparatively a short time ago handquitting was regarded as a form of needlework to be utilized and reserved for luxurious intimate apparel, robes, bed-jackets, negligees and such. The thought no longer holds good. The emergence of hand-quitting from boudoir environs becomes a high-style event—the dawn of a new era for this exquisite needle work.

That faithful perennial back-to-college clothes problem is with us again. By way of a new and interesting approach to the subject suppose we talk about the perfectly fascinating hand-quilted sports coats and evening jackets such as are now proudly showing in shops that make boast of being ever "first" in fashion.

Tuck away one or more of these cunning and chic hand-quilted garments in your back-to-school wardrobe. Wear 'em on the campus and to parties and proms and you will excite the admiration and envy of the whole college. If you think this is an exaggerated way of putting it, please take one long look at the hand-quilted fashions here pictured. The argument is closed, n'est-ce pas?

Hand-quitting really dates back to early history, some of the oldest pieces originating in China and India. In the general art revival of the Renaissance period Trapunto quilting came into existence, the same accomplished by quilting the design in double lines, raising the space between into a bas relief effect by drawing through wisps of soft wool to form a padding.

Women especially in north of England and in northern Italy created unusually artistic and original pieces of hand-quitting. Via the English route the art of quilting was brought over by the English settlers whose descendants, farmers' wives, living in the mountains of Kentucky carry on the work today.

Visioning the possibilities in this attractive handwork, current style creators have put experts in voguish costume design at the service of native workers and thus is added to hand-quilted garments now showing in the shops.

The new sport coats and evening jackets now featuring in the fashion picture are made mostly of hand-blocked linens, cottons, smart satins, sheer woolsens and dainty challis. There are flowery prints, geometrical designs, checks and plaids as well as plain colors in flattering combinations.

The stunning swagger coat in the picture is made of hand-blocked challis in brilliant plaid. It is lined with plain linen. Just the thing for campus wear or to stroll about town on an early coolish autumn day.

The good-looking model to the right at the top makes an ideal knockabout country club coat. The original was done in brown lines. The pronounced vogue for satin this fall bespeaks the appeal of a hand-quilted coat thereof fashioned in like manner.

The sports cardigan "set" shown in foreground is of bright monotone fabric lined with a gay print, the complementary waistcoat being of match-color pique with silver coin buttons to add to its lure. The evening jacket (in panel) is in a Trapunto design on silk-finished linen with contrasting lining. This model comes in exquisite Chinese colorings. A perfect accessory to complete an autumn campus frock is shown to left above. This roundabout jacket is reversible and has contrasting lacing.

TAILORED SILK

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Emphasis is on the tailored theme for pajama costumes. The pajamas pictured is typical. This two-piece is tailored of gray silk shantung with glove stitching to give it fine finish. This model is not only good to wear at a resort or at countryside, one may even drop in to see a friend and wear this conservatively styled pajama costume with perfect propriety.

LOOKING AHEAD TO COATS FOR WINTER

Those who prefer to ignore the heat by focusing their thoughts on the winter and fur coats will find sufficient different styles in the shops to keep them guessing for hours as to which is the most important. If they're wise they'll choose the most becoming silhouette and forget about the others.

Outstanding in fur fashions is the flared silhouette, the width of hemline contrasted with the slenderness of the waistline. A coat of this type is obviously dressy, so the busy woman may prefer to pass it by in favor of a straightline "topcoat" model which proves serviceable from morning until night.

Fall Hosiery to Glisten

in Bright Copper Tones
A penny—or rather a copper—for your thoughts if you're thinking of colors that are good in hosiery at the moment. The copper tones are important—shades that glisten with the bright bronze of a new penny, or of your burnished copper teakettle. The copper casts will continue into the fall, the fashion makers tell us, because they consort so well with the new autumn colors in fabrics and shoes. New taupes and grays are also coming into the picture.

Wine Tones Are Popular in Fashions for Autumn

The prominence of wine tones, grapes and vintage greens in the first fall fashions springs from the Exposition Vinicole at the Tuilleries in Paris.

American women have already caught this Bacchanalian note in fashion. Evidences of its presence are seen in clusters of grapes worn in the hair for evening, wine colors in the first fall hats and leaf motifs in trimming.

SEEING IS FOUND MOST IMPORTANT OF FIVE SENSES

Scientific research discloses that the eyes receive 87 per cent of all impressions we receive. Our ears receive but 7 per cent; our sense of smell, 3.5 per cent; touch, 1.5 per cent; taste, 1 per cent.

These five senses form our sole contact with the world and the people in it. All that we know comes to us through our senses.

Though the eyes represent our most priceless physical asset, most of us subject our eyes to needless abuse. That this is so, is seen in the fact that 22 per cent of all children in the country have defective sight. At college age 42 per cent have impaired vision. At age forty, the figure jumps to 60 per cent. And after the sixtieth birthday, only 5 per cent have unimpaired eyesight.

These statistics are the more appalling when we consider that our own carelessness is largely responsible for these deficiencies. Yet it may not be so much of carelessness as a lack of understanding as to what causes eyestrain.

Of all the abuses to which we subject our eyes, poor lighting is said to be one of the greatest. Oddly enough, this is also the easiest cause to prevent. All we need do is remember that light is as important to seeing as the eyes themselves. Eyestrain comes not so much from bad eyes as from the efforts of good eyes to see where there is not enough light.

It is significant perhaps that defective eyesight is common among farm families. This is thought to be due to the fact that there are still several million farm homes to whom the advantages of electric lighting are not available. Yet if this is so, it again reflects a lack of understanding of the need for good light, for there are available today, types of portable lamps that provide daylight brilliance for every night-time task.

Perhaps the most popular of these are the gasoline and kerosene pressure mantle lamps—popular not alone because of their exceptional brilliance, but because they are economical to use and priced within the reach of all.

For reading, sewing, and all the after-dark pursuits which require prolonged and close use of the eyes, abundant light is imperative to those who would protect that greatest of God-given gifts, the eyes. And this is more especially important where there are children in the family. Children's eyes are much more easily strained than those of adults. Plenty of live pressure mantle light will do much to preserve and protect the eyes of all the family.

MANY HUNGARIAN PARTRIDGE RELEASED

Ninety-four Hungarian partridges from the state game farm near Mason have been released in the Waterloo tract in Jackson and Washtenaw counties, which is being developed as a recreational area by the National Park Service. The birds were released by game men of the department of conservation.

Hungarian partridges have become established in a few of the southern counties, notably Lenawee and Monroe counties. It is hoped that by stocking areas near the edge of the present natural range the spread of the birds into more territory in Southern Michigan may be accelerated.

Experimental plantings have been made at various points in the state in past years with indifferent success. Some have disappeared completely. Others have managed to survive in small numbers.

H. D. Ruhl, in charge of the game division, is of the opinion that repeated plantings in several selected areas will have more chance of establishing them over wide areas. The game division plans to go ahead with the propagation of the "Hungaries" at the game farm, he said, in order to carry out an intensive planting campaign the next few years. In this way, Ruhl believes, it can be determined definitely whether the birds can successfully establish themselves over a large area in Michigan.

Through the year we try to give our customers an insight into the economic trends of agriculture and industry. Needless to say, our agricultural and industry are very seasonal in many aspects. That means that there are times during the year when peak production is not possible or at least not profitable. These periodic lay-offs follow the various seasons of the year, depending upon the type or industry or phase of agriculture. Looking at the reports of the indication for fall, we see that even though summer business was good, there is no reason to expect a let-down but rather a pickup. Prospects for the farmer, especially in this territory where we raise considerable livestock, point to rather a poor market due to increased feed costs and probable loading of the market with poorer animals. However, this will lead to a better market in 1937. Let us remember that the long pull is an upward one out of any depression and that it is sometimes best to disregard momentary fluctuations.

HUNTING LICENSES EXPIRE SEPTEMBER 30

All small-game hunting licenses for the season of 1935-1936 and all gun permits for the same period will expire Wednesday, Sept. 30, it was announced by conservation authorities here today.

The small-game hunting licenses for 1936-1937 are now being distributed to license dealers who will have them on hand for sale in time for the fall hunting season. Gun permits are issued by local conservation officers only and to individuals who hold small-game hunting licenses.

The first legislative act regarding deer in Michigan was recorded in 1859. In that year the state legislature limited the open hunting season to the last five months of the year. Previous to this action by the legislature there were no restrictions on method of take or season. Deer hunting licenses were first introduced in Michigan in 1895. The resident license was 50 cents; the non-resident license $25.00. Hunters were allowed to shoot as many as five deer per season.

FLOWER SHOWS CREDIT INGENUITY

"Even the most ordinary flowers and leaves are beautiful if they are chosen for their color and grace, arranged artistically in suitable vases and placed where they may be enjoyed."

This is the deduction of Miss Gertrude Reis, extension specialist in home furnishing at the Michigan State College. She offers pointers in flower selection and arrangement that will aid in enjoyment in the home and in obtaining placings at some of the many fall flower shows now scheduled in the state.

In the container itself, one can find means of aiding the flowers to exhibit their beauty. According to Miss Reis, a suitable vase should be simple in shape, with little or no decoration in the form of painted or moulded flowers upon the surface. The plain and simple vase allows the flowers to show and does not attract too much attention itself.

Each house should contain three usable vases, a bud vase for one blossom, a low broad bowl for a medium sized bouquet, and a piece of eight to ten inches high that is large and and heavy enough to hold a fairly large bouquet of long stemmed flowers. Perhaps the one used most of all is the wide mouth container of medium height with a block for holding stems at any angle desired.

"Take a tip from the Japanese," Miss Reis suggests. "They do not combine flowers cut with even length stems, but arrange bouquets with three definite points of interest. The highest point is placed directly over the base, the second in point of height is placed to the right and a little forward of the center, and the third and lowest point is placed to the right and lowest point is placed slightly and to the left of the center. The highest is usually one and one-half times the height of the vase."

FIFTEEN PARTIES CAN BE ON BALLOT

While only the two major political parties of the state held primary elections Sept. 15, a total of 15 parties will be entitled to place the names of their candidates on the general election ballot of Nov. 3.

Only those parties the names and vignettes of which are filed with the Secretary of State prior to last May 2, are entitled to places on the ballot.

According to the records of Oyvall E. Atwood, Secretary of State, there are 15 parties: Republican, Democratic, Socialist, Communist, Farm Labor, Socialist Labor, Communist Party, People's Progressive, National American, Proletarian, Liberty, Progressive, The United Party and The Third Party. However, only those parties certifying candidates will appear on the Nov. 3rd ballot.

LOCAL SCOUTS TO HAVE CHANCE TO Usher AT FOOTBALL GAMES AGAIN

Officials of the Washtenaw-Livingston Boy Scout Council announced today that opportunities will be given to several hundred Scouts from this Council to assist with the ushering at the football games at Michigan Stadium again this year.

Each troop to have quota. A quota of special participation will be assigned to each registered troop requesting it, which may vary from game to game. The home games scheduled for this year will be held on October 3rd, October 10, October 24, October 31 and November 14.

A Service Project. Scouts engage in ushering chiefly as a project of enjoyable scout service. All Scouts participating are in uniform and their contact with thousands of people who come to see the game is a valuable opportunity to impress the public with Scout spirit, courtesy, and helpfulness.

The First Game October 3rd. Local Scout Leaders are selecting those scouts who are to have a chance. They will report for duty at noon to usher at the October 3rd game. Inspected and assigned to their specific aisle.

George E. Paul, a member of the Executive Board of the Washtenaw-Livingston Council is chairman of the ushering committee again this year.

COMMUNICATION THE STRAW VOTES

To the Editor:
The following matter from the New York Sun of the 14th, will probably be new to your readers, and, too, they may wonder why this round about way of getting it.

Circuit Judge George Hartwick investigated the Black Legion in Oakland county and reported that the Black Legion was a Klan with a vengeance organized to accomplish its objects by force and violence if necessary. It was a Black Klan. And further with report, "Certain it is that men who are listed as officers of the Black Legion in Oakland Co. are not possessors of even average intelligence for governmental affairs. Giving the history of the Legion, Judge Hartwick states, "The first 200 members were Klansmen who dyed their white robes black. As a punishment the Ku Klux Klan revoked the charter of the rebel group and a general edict was issued bidding other Klansmen to dye their robes."

And the Sun observes, "Whatever it was the Black Legion was supposed to do something about it but what about what has not become clear." Here I observe certain worthy clergymen and a W. C. T. U. lady are leading a defense for some of the legion men as reported in a Detroit newspaper of this morning.
Yours truly

This year's election to be an open one for straw votes. Some are worthwhile and some are not. For that matter, Detroit was a political hot spot in past years but this year's plenty of open polls. The name of the poll is not important, but the name of the poll is important. This applies to one poll only taken by a farm journal. In the southern of rocky mountain states were polled. The poll was taken in the southern of rocky mountain states were polled. The poll was taken in the southern of rocky mountain states were polled.

The two most complete polls up to date are The Institute of Public Opinion being published in the Detroit News and among other daily papers and the Crosey Poll being printed in the Hearst paper. Both of the latter give President Roosevelt the edge. In The Public Opinion poll President Roosevelt is given 45 votes with a total electoral vote of 175 and Gov. Leland B. Bore is given an electoral vote of 217. However, President Roosevelt's majorities are much larger. In six of the states the vote is even.

The Crosey poll deals in percentages. It gives Roosevelt the lead in 30 states, 21 of those in which his lead is over 10 percent. It concedes to him, in 5 of which Gov. Leland has a ten percent lead it concedes to him. The other 21 it designates as pivot states although in 9 of them President Roosevelt has a lead of 5 percent or more. A slight shift in the remaining states would give their electoral votes to other candidates. The Crosey poll unlike any other, lists a number of undecided voters. These run as high as 35 percent in North Dakota. To this class the Crosey poll gives the balance of power.

The storm last Thursday did considerable damage to the radios in this section. It followed the aeriels into the house and destroyed the radios belonging to J. H. Hooker, Wm. Darrow and W. H. Meyers.

FIND ADVANTAGE IN EARLY CULLING

Selection of the best individuals to form the nucleus for the winter and spring laying flock should be done before the poultry flock is put into winter quarters, says C. G. Card, Michigan State College poultry husbandman. This work can be done quickly and easily before bad weather sets in, he advises.

Usually not more than 30 or 40 per cent of the birds are sufficiently good to be retained after the first laying year. This is largely because the first laying year is the birds' highest producing year and the next year production drops about 20 per cent, Card exclaimed. Very few individuals are worth keeping more than two years.

Health, vigor, size, truthness to type and color as well as high egg production should be the guides to a high standard. A bird in good laying condition will have a large, broad vent that is moist and shows no pigment. A bird that stops laying soon has a vent that is dry and puckered and shows some yellow around the edge, back carried well over the pelvic

The culling crate is a handy device for culling large flocks to prevent frightening the birds. Odds and ends of lumber, some wire netting and an old inner tube that is placed on top to facilitate selecting the birds make up the material. A partition in the center can be lowered for ease in a good bird should have a broad, flat catching the birds.

The Travis Lake farm in Hamburg, arches, Card says. It is obvious that the efficient laying flock is no place for cripples and sick birds. Coarse-headed hens and hens that moult before the first of August should usually be eliminated.

Card, cautions, however, that culling is not the only thing to be done to insure egg production. Proper housing and feeding are important factors not to be minimized. Undoubtedly, a great many discarded hens and pullets would have produced profitably had they been housed in dry, well-ventilated and well-lighted houses and fed a good ration.

Details on culling methods may be obtained from Extension Bulletin 58 of Michigan State College, a copy of which may be obtained by writing to Bulletin Room, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Old favorites, such as "Popeye", "Tillie the Toiler", "Henry", etc. plus such newcomers as "Squirrel Cage", by Gene Ahern, and "Tex Thorne", a Zane Grey picture story, appear every week in The Detroit Sunday Times. CHAPTER IX—Continued

"You? . . . What more do you want, Mr. O'Mara? And at this time in the evening?"

"It had to be tonight," said Cathal.

"What had to be tonight?"

"Is she—has she retired, Mrs. Glenelgh?"

"Yes."

Then he heard her voice from above. "I've not, Mother. Tell him I'm coming down."

"No," her mother said; and to Cathal: "Please, please go away."

"I want to speak to him, Mother," and she went past her mother and out.

"I've asked him to go away."

"I ask him not to."

"I can't have him with you in my house," her mother said.

"We needn't go in. I'd rather not; it's cooler out here," Agnes said. "I need to talk to him. Then I'll come in."

"Both of you come in," her mother invited unwillingly.

Agnes turned. "We'll go through the house," she yielded, "and out the other side."

Cathal followed her, thus through the house; and there was the water before them. They went to the edge of the sand, and were alone with the lake and Deneb. Over the water, heat-lightning was flashing almost incessantly, and giving them strange, garish glimpses of each other and the shore. The distant thunder became constant.

"Why did you come tonight?" Agnes asked Cathal.

"Now," said Cathal, "I don't know. A while ago, I thought I did. I deceived myself I might do something for you. Of course it was for myself, solely, I came—and wouldn't go away."

"I'm glad you came. There was no one here I could talk to."

His pulses leaped at that.

"I'm leaving tomorrow with Mother," Agnes said.

"Where to?"

"New York; Father's getting us the first sailing for France. It's true I'm all through in the court?"

"That's true," Cathal said. "Can't you believe it?"

"And—she'll be cleared?"

"Cleared," said Cathal, "by tomorrow night, I think. I put her on tomorrow morning; we ought to reach our arguments by noon. By night it'll be over. She'll be cleared."

Agnes caught her breath. He heard it. "By me?" she gasped in her breath's expiration.

"By you," said Cathal. "You turned the case. She, tomorrow, and I—we haven't got to win it; we simply have not to lose it now. We'll do that."

"I know you will."

"And now," he said, "you don't want us to."

"It's not that—quite." Agnes gazed up at him, and the lightning lit their faces. "I want her free. I'm sure I want her not killed, not electrocuted or even jailed for life. But I don't want her paid."

"Payment of the insurance to her is not to be avoided when she's cleared," Cathal said, their faces in the dark, but the images remained on their retinas. "And out of it comes my fee. How much, have you heard?"

"Half," said Agnes.

"And thinking that," said Cathal, "you went on for her—and for me. Half I'm to have, I'm told. The opinion has even been put in print. Well, it's not half, nor near it; but it'll be a big fee—if she's cleared."

"For she'll have the money. I'll take a good part of it from her; and some of that I'll keep; but more I'll pass over to the wife that first married him—and his daughter. Nobody knows it but you."

"Thank you," she said, "for telling me."

"Will it make the night easier for you? You've done no wrong. Let no one tell you that you've done wrong."

The darkness was between them again. "Myrtle Lorrie shot in self-defense, and hardly knowing—for the indignity she'd endured—that she did it. For weeks he'd tormented and beaten her because she could not bear him love—as he'd known love, before he cast off her that loved him, and thought he could buy it from another. That day, he'd found out about Bert, and he was worse than ever before; so his wife grabbed his gun to scare him, but he came at her, and she pulled and pulled the trigger. She'll tell it on the stand tomorrow; by night she'll be free. Twelve men, having heard her—and you—will say she shall be punished no further. They take the responsibility; not you."

"I take it too. I came tonight to say that to you. I didn't plan to tell you about my fee; but I did."

"I'm glad you did."

"The lightning's brighter. I suppose that means it's nearer. Yes; there's the thunder." He waited for it to rumble away. "I thought today I'd see you forever as you were on the witness-stand; and then I thought it would be as you were when I held you for a moment. I'd you know, for a moment I held you?"

"Yes."

"Do you suppose after this,—when it lightnings,—I can see your face? All my life, when it lightnings? It's my last time to see you. I came tonight while it was still somewhere within—within my right . . . God bless that lightning! You're still looking up at me. I'll always see you so! Have you heard what I've said—through the thunder?"

"I've heard."

"I've lived in this world near to thirty years; and nothing ever happened to me like that when I lifted my phone and heard your voice; and you asked me to come where you were. From then, I've been counting the times I might be near you. I'd go to you to review your evidence; twice I could do that. And then the trial—twice more I'd be with you. And now my times are spent; there's nothing of it left for me in all the future. Thirty years more or longer I may live in this world answering my phone, going to them that call me; but I'll never find again the like of you. We'll be in the world, both of us, but I may never again speak to you or see your face."

"That needn't be true."

"Do you mean that?"

"Yes."

"Oh, God, let me see you! Where's the lightning?"

"No," said Agnes, and lowered her head. "I must go in."

"No," he forbade, and seized her wrist. "How much did you mean?"

"How firmly yet gently he held her! Not like Jeb, not like Rod; not like any other man who ever had touched her. She quivered in the first cool gust of the breaking storm. "I've got to go in."

Indeed, for moments they had been calling her; her mother and the servants: "Agnes! Agnes! . . . Miss Agnes! Miss Glenelgh!"

"Let them call," said Cathal fiercely. "Do you care?"

"No! I've taken your word on right and wrong against Jeb and my father and mother. Maybe I'll be thirty years

Over the Water, Heat-Lightning Was Flashing Almost Incessantly.

In the world too. Can you never come to any one, Mr. O'Mara, unless she calls you?"

"Oh, God!" said Cathal, and let her go.

"Agnes! Agnes!" her mother was calling; and the rain was coming down.

In great drenching drops it struck. Cathal whipped off his coat to cover her; but they were wet through before they gained the shelter of the house.

"Are you mad, Agnes? Mad?" demanded her mother.

"I guess so," Agnes told her.

Never as upon this night had Agnes needed her room for sanctuary. After he had gone, discussion of him with any one or the presence of any one—even of her mother—was unbearable.

She shut herself in her room, and strangely for her, she locked her door.

She lay upon her bed, undried. She had stripped off her wet dress which his coat had covered, but she had made no move beyond that.

She thought how little alien upon her his coat had felt. You could not bear upon any garment of a person who offended you. How far from offense had been the cover of his coat which the rain had made to cling upon her!

Cathal, when she gave his coat back, had put it on; and he wore it wet as he drove through the storm to the city.

The lightning continued to crash as the heat from the prairies broke in the blinding sheets of rain which made cascades of the streets, but Cathal got through and scarcely considered how.

Winnie was waiting for him. Throughout that day, as from the first of the trial, she had sat in court; and tonight she had no doubt of the great trouble that dwelt within him.

His mother, assailed by the heat of the day, lay in the grateful dark of her room; and his sister too, when midnight once more had made remote the thunder, had dropped to sleep.

"Cathal!" she called, when at last he entered, "where were ye?"

"North."

"North, seeking her, Cathal?"

"Yes."

"It's wet ye are!" Winnie's thin head had found his coat-sleeve and moved up to his shoulder. "Did she give ye no shelter?"

"Shelter?" said Cathal.

He seized Winnie's hand gently and put her off; and for once she misunderstood him. "She didn't have ye in! Thank God for that, Cathal! . . . Any other—any other, Cathal; 'twould have been the cruel ruin of ye."

CHAPTER X

Agnes and her mother—and Rogna—left Chicago for New York on the Century the next day. It was Saturday, and throughout the morning, Myrtle Lorrie was on the witness-stand; the noon papers were full of her defense of herself.

Bee and Davis went to the railroad station, but Jeb did not appear. The ignominious testimony in regard to him, which Agnes had given on the previous day, had been printed fully not only in Friday's late editions, but was prominent in the morning papers.

"You got complete coverage, darling," Bee assured Agnes. Bee was the only one able to assume any levity over it. "Not only in the news but in the chatty little social columns. Some one has commented that if there is an absolute zero in ways to announce a broken engagement, possibly you hit on it."

At Albany next morning, Agnes read, at last, that the jury late in the evening had acquitted Myrtle Lorrie on the fourth ballot.

They sailed—Agnes and her mother Beatrice Glenelgh and Rogna, their maid—on Wednesday, Bob and several friends seeing them off. The three days in New York with her husband had proved even more difficult for Tricie than she had anticipated. They stayed at the same hotel, of course; they preserved, outwardly, all appearances.

Tricie mentioned "Cash" but once; and then not even by the name of "Cash." Tricie asked—and this was not until Tuesday: "Bob, is she in town?"

"No," Bob told his wife. "Not since before you came." For he had sent her away on Saturday.

Cash had not wanted to go without him; but he had told her she must. No; he wouldn't like it, he assured her; but they both must do it. Thus he would keep his conscience clear; such temporary abstinence was enough for virtue in these days.

Prosperity, power, and impunity! They strutted on the ship, with their wives or the women whom they preferred to their wives—these men of America new to the millions which they believed and they boasted they had "made."

There was no escape, on the ship, from those people; and none, that summer, in Paris; for Americans, as never before, possessed the city.

Beatrice Glenelgh had never intended to linger in Paris. She fled to a little quiet village of the Hautes Pyrenees; and she and Agnes settled, at last, in a tiny inn a few kilometers from the border of Spain, where no man was in the least like Bob—and the moon sunlight shone sharp and warm, but always there was a breeze down from Maladetta or the snowy summits of Mt. Perdu.

There, week after week, mother and daughter waited.

Waited for what?

For human nature to change? For years to reroll themselves? For the world to fit its ways again, as once happily it had, to the complete fulfillment of an individual's decent desires?

Tricie did not deal with such matters through her mind; her emotions always controlled her. She wanted what she had had—her husband's desire and devotion, which she had done nothing to lose.

If she had "done" anything which deservedly would have alienated him, she might have seen the "justice" of what had occurred; but she had not.

Day and night, Tricie relived her married life in review.

A letter arrived, once a week regularly, from the husband; and always, on the day one came, Tricie answered it.

Bee wrote her mother and her sister once a week, but alternately; and she always assumed that they shared her letters, as indeed they did.

She had moved her household to Mackinac Island for July and August. Davis had been with her most of July, but in August he came up only for week-ends. Jeb had appeared several times in his big boat, and always had stopped. She—and Davis—had gone up with Jeb, and several more people, into Superior for a week.

Agnes lowered the letter and lay back in her gayly painted chair gazing toward Maladetta but regarding, really, her own life on the Illinois shore four thousand miles away.

Plainly she saw herself and them all in perspective; her home and the city below it, and the long level sweep of the lake.

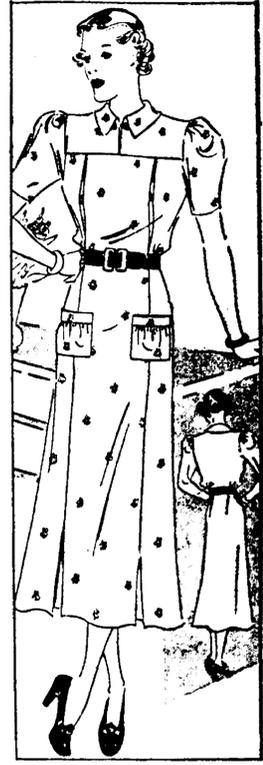

Back and forth upon it, Jeb journeyed in his splendid luxurious ship, picking up people, dining them, winning them, setting them at little tables for bridge or to dancing on the deck while the ship sailed; when it stopped, swimming and diving. Jeb paying for it all, never tired of it until he returned to Chicago to make more money, and more and more.

She might be with him; but she had no wish to be.

Here was no one, but her mother, whom she well knew. Here were hours with the sun, and the wind from the mountain passes; with the tinkle of bells of cattle on the hillside; the herder's whistle, and sometimes his song. . . . But Agnes did not dream of Jeb's big boat.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN A Fetching Frock With New Features

South Lyon—It was 20 years ago that a windstorm first razed the Worden church, five miles from here. On August 25th, this year, a lightning bolt struck it again and the building burned to the ground. It will not be rebuilt.

Marion—Beekeepers here complain that they have lost a great quantity of bees this summer as a result of the insects drowning in their own honey. The hot weather caused the comb to melt, permitting the honey to flow and cover the bees.

Lapeer—Anthony Ait, a farmer near here, found a rattle snake coiled on his doorstep. After striking it with a club, he attempted to remove its 16 rattles. The reptile struck him on the arm, inflicting a poisonous wound from which recovery was slow.

Marquette—A 14-year-old boy rules Michigan's horse shoe pitchers. Bobbie Hitt of Plymouth defeated Lee Rose of Detroit 51-10, 54-35, 47-52, 52-24, 50-32, in the state finals here. The lad never threw less than 70 per cent ringers during the 3-day competition.

Brown City—Although Roy Harris had a fairly good crop of oats he was unable to harvest it because of large cracks in the ground, caused by the drought. Wheels of his binder and the feet of the horses caught in the fissures, from 2 to 10 inches wide and 3 feet deep, so Harris abandoned the attempted harvest.

Port Huron—Construction of the $3,000,000 international bridge over the St. Clair river, has begun. The foundation work is being constructed on the American side at the present time. It is planned that the bridge will be of the steel cantilever type with a single span 871 feet long. There will be a 32-foot roadway between 5-foot walks.

Sandusky—Henry Foote was troubled by 30 prize sheep owned by a neighbor tramping over his bean field. Hiring a truck, he loaded the animals on it and, driving through the countryside, unloaded six sheep at five different places miles apart. The neighbor, Frank Erard, took the matter to the prosecutor but found that Foote was within his rights.

Lansing—Statewide tests on highway and street practices are planned by the State Safety Council this fall. The reward for those who take the tests probably will be windshield stickers, showing that drivers have passed state tests. It was said that a typical question will be "what is the proper use of an automobile horn." The impression of safety rules is the object of the drive.

Durand—The juveniles of this community had their day on August 24th, when the annual pet and doll parade was held. The procession was a block and a half long with ponies, dogs, cats, chickens, big dolls, little dolls and decorated bicycles holding the center of the stage. The affair arouses more interest among citizens than almost any other held throughout the space of a year.

East Lansing—A summary of Michigan cow testing association records showed that milk production of 15,374 cows in 1,036 herds decreased 11.2 per cent during July. Butter fat production declined 10 per cent. Michigan State College dairymen found that average production for cows on test during July was 28.8 as compared with 28.9 pounds of butterfat during April. Feed costs jumped 22 per cent during the month.

Charlotte—The economic dependence of Eaton county on its railroads is outlined in a study made by the Michigan Railroad Employees and Citizen's League. There are five roads operating in the county, having a combined total of 100 miles of track. There are 118 workers employed whose combined wages total $187,155 annually. In addition, the county receives $38,176.61 in primary school money and direct taxes.

Ann Arbor—The University of Michigan cyclotron has generated 6,700,000 volts, which establishes a new record for production of man-made electrical energy. The next step, professors say, will be to increase the amperage to conform to the voltage and then the cyclotron will be placed in regular operation for experiments in the treatment of cancer. The machine uses scores of heavy hydrogen atoms, bombarding them with 10,000 volts as they spiral through a magnetic field, producing radioactive particles equivalent to radium.

Lansing—The state department of public instruction has invoked a higher standard for the state's teaching profession. Four years of college training is now required for a life teaching certificate. The minimum before September 1st was three years. In 1939, a new rule will become effective under which college graduates will be required to serve a 3-year "internship" before they receive permanent certificates. Thereafter, the certificate will lapse if the teacher is unemployed for a 5-year period.
