Mrs. Simpson Offers to Free King Edward

INTRESSED by the storm over King Edward's proposal to marry her, Mrs. Wallis Warfield

Simpson, lovely American divorcee, took refuge in the villa of friends at Cannes, France, and there made a dramatic gesture of renunciation. Through Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to the king, she gave the correspondents

Mrs. Simpson this statement: "Mrs. Simpson, throughout the last few weeks, has invariably wished to avoid any action or proposal which might hurt or damage his majesty or the throne.

"Today her attitude is unchanged and she is willing, if such action will solve the problem, to withdraw forthwith from a situation that has become both unhappy and untenable."

This offer to abandon her romance was transmitted to London and all the world awaited the response of the king, in his seclusion at Fort Belvedere. Unhappiness is the fate of both Edward and "Wally", whatever the decision may be. If the king relinquishes the woman and retains the throne, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin law. and the cabinet, together with the aristocratic caste, will have scored a victory, but the contest between the new and the old will certainly be renewed in other form.

At the time when Mrs. Simpson gave out her statement, it appeared that the king had scored a point. Mr. Baldwin, having failed signally to induce the monarch to abandon his determination to wed Wally, gave in to the extent of sidetracking the abdication issue and giving King Edward ample time to come to a final determination. He told the house of commons this and related the whole story of the controversy which, he said, was precipitated by the king himself when he informed the prime minister of "his intention to marry Mrs. Simpson whenever she should be free." Mr. Baldwin said the king "will no doubt" communicate his decision in good time "to the government in this country and the dominions." He added: "It will then be for those governments to decide what advice, if any, they would feel it their duty to tender him."

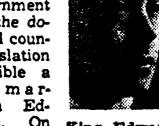

Replying to a warning from Winston Churchill that the government must not try to "extort" abdication from the king, Mr. Baldwin said: "It has always been, and remains, the earnest desire of the government to afford his majesty the fullest opportunity of weighing the decision which involves so directly his own future happiness and the welfare of all his subjects."

But, he added, both the government and the king were aware that "considerable prolongation of the present state of suspense and uncertainty would involve the risk of gravest injury to national and imperial interests."

In what the prime minister said it was made evident the king never had stated his intention of making Mrs. Simpson queen; and it appears the monarch was told that neither his government nor those of the dominions would countenance legislation making possible a morganatic marriage, which Edward desires. On this point neither

King Edward the king nor the cabinet has yield-

no intention of abdicating. Having learned all about the Simpson affair when the British press dropped its self-imposed silence, the British public took hold of it with excitement and enthusiasm. Crowds paraded in London, carrying banners with such inscriptions as "God Save the King From Baldwin.' They booed cabinet members and the archbishop of Canterbury, who was steadfast against the marriage, and surged about Bucking-

Mr. Hull Offers Eight "Pillars of Peace"

H EADS of 21 delegations to the peace conference in Buenos Aires outlined national policies, and among them was Secretary of State

Hull, who proposed a program containing what he termed "eight pillars of peace" upon which rest peace and prosperity. These were: 1. Internal quiet and education. 2. Frequent international conferences. 3. Swift ratifica-Secretary tion of existing

4. Adoption of a common neutrality policy. 5. Fair and equal commercial pol-

6. Practical international coopera-

7. Strengthening of international 8. Faithful observance of the

"There is no need for war," Hull said in his address. "There is a practical alternative policy at hand, complete and adequate. It is no exclusive policy aimed at the safety or supremacy of a few, leaving others to struggle with distressful situations. It demands no sacrifices comparable to the advantages which will result to each nation and to each individual. "Peace can be partially safeguarded through international agreements. Such agreements, however, must reflect the utmost good faith; this alone can be the guarantee of their significance and usefulness." Next day Mr. Hull offered a neutrality pact for all American republics. His plan would create a permanent inter-American consultative committee to co-ordinate existing peace instruments and bring agreement on a common neutrality policy, based on the United States' neutrality theory.

Midland Steel Strike

Ended by Agreement

MPLOYEES of the Midland Steel Products plant at Detroit returned to their work, having voted to accept a settlement of their strike which included wage adjustments and abolition of the piece work system. The strike had been seriously felt by the automobile industry.

The peace terms, which union leaders called a "90 per cent victory" for employees, provide for recognition of the union, a 45 hour week, time and a half pay for overtime and holidays, an increase of 10 cents an hour on the base rate of pay, and a 10 per cent increase on piece work until it is eliminated, which is to be done as rapidly as possible.

Pope Pius XI Stricken

With Leg Paralysis

STRICKEN with paralysis that affected both his legs, Pope Pius XI was believed go be in a serious condition because he already was afflicted with asthma, arterio sclerosis and high blood pressure. At first the holy father flatly refused to submit to a medical examination, saying "I am in the hands of God," and he even insisted on dictating and signing letters. But later he was persuaded to take Pope Pius complete repose, which his physicians said was vitally necessary. Father Agostino Gemelli of Milan. a medical expert, was summoned to Vatican City and gave out a statement indicating that rigid measures were being taken to stave off possible uremic poisoning.

The pope's illness was discovered when he was unable to arise for a ceremonial concluding a week of spiritual exercises. He was barely able to stir the left leg and physicians found that the heaviness of deputies to the support of his policy | limb had spread also to the right

> Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, was more optimistic than many others. After a visit to the sick room he said:

"The pope is improved. In about a week the strong constitution of the holy father will win out over the illness. He is nearly eighty years of age and has never been confined to bed by illness. It is only chamber of deputies that France once feel indisposed form

TE WAS a small boy named Tim who had never been more than ten miles from his home in the Ozark-hills. His teacher said he couldn't even bound Arkensas, his own state, but what his teacher didn't know was how well he knew the mountain "crick" and the hill slopes circled with green-gold pine trees that bounded his father's tiny farm. He also knew what it took to keep a family of six children and that for as long as he could remember his father's farm had scarcely been able to produce enough to stretch over every need.

It was just before Christmas time that he heard his father tell his mother that if there was to be anything "extra" to give the day its meaning for the children, he'd have to get the ax and hack out a few ties. Her face went white, for she knew what that meant. So often had they been forced to remain on the hacking of a few ties to be sold to the railroad for dire necessities that practically all their timber available for that purpose was gone. And trees don't grow over night. She could tell by the look on her husband's face that he was taking a desperate and back-breaking chance of finding a few logs tough enough for the commission man to buy.

As she looked out of the window and saw the passing cars of winter "touristers" on the new scenic road the government had built through the hills, she wondered by what magic folks could come to own automobiles and take time off like that to go traveling. But she hadn't many moments to spare on such thoughts, for her husband had returned to say that the ax was gone. Could one of the children have taken it?

The father had borrowed an ax from a willing neighbor but on the day before Christmas he was silent as he unhitched his team in the wagon lot. Christmas tomorrow and he had been forced to bring back the load from town. The commission man had been truly sorry, for he did need ties; yet Lone of these were large enough.

He crept up to a window, lost shantung. in the sense of failure that made him ashamed to walk to his own door. There an odd sight straightened him. Inside were Tim and his mother joyously trimming a Christmas tree. Tim raced to the door to keep the younger children from bursting gleefully into the room and learning its great secret.

When the father entered the house, no one asked him about the "Dad, dad!" Tim shouted. ties. "Do you know those red berry trees that grow way up the crick? Awful hard to get to, but when I found 'em I thought they were so purty I took some to school. The teacher said, 'that's holly' and then I read about holly and learned that folks will pay for it to have it for Christmas. So I gathered a lot of it and made me a holly stand up on the new road just hopin they would. And dad, they did buy it! Stopped their cars and said, 'Why it's holly; who would have thought we'd find it here!' They wanted so much I had to work awful hard getting it, but gee, it was fun! I wanted to surprise mom and you, and now I'll tell you both that made $27.82. There's $20 right now in that bureau drawer left after buying our Christmas. Gee dad, I love this old farm! It's got lots of surprises on it yet. This one ain't the last one."

The father brushed a tear from his eye and kissed his wife. Then he shook hands with Tim. "You're the kind of son a man can be right proud to own," he choked.

"But dad, will you forgive me?" the boy suddenly implored. "Why Tim, forgive you what?"

the father asked in surprise. The boy led the way to the kitchen. "You see dad, I just had to have it?"

The father pretended to frown as Tim pointed and then he winked. "Well, being as it's just about Christmas for us, as well as the rest of the world, I guess I'll have to overlook it." For there in a far corner of the room stood the ax. It was Tim who had horrowed it. & Western Memoryer Unive.

wn of Satuit, Mass., with two negro Serah Darbe and Bessie Williams, a manuscrips describing the famous Second Head murder, which occurred on her estate. Next to Mary live Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stow who every year give a summer masquerade party. One of the guests of this function is murdered. Nearby live Dr. and Mrs. Geary and their married daughter Edith and her husband Alfred Bray; Doctor Myron Marden and his step-granddaughter, Caro Prentiss, a beautiful young girl who was born in France. Next live Paul and Lora Eames and their daughter Molly. Molly was engaged to the murdered man, Ace Blaikie. She had been engaged to Walter Treadway, who had been the murdered man's secretary, but the engagement was suddealy broken and he had left town. Other neighbors are the Fairweather sisters, Flora, a hopeless invalid and Margaret. All but the latter two attended the masquerade. Mary's eightyear-old niece Sylvia Sard is visiting her for the summer. The wooded part of Mary's estate is called the Spinney. In it is a tiny log cabin. Near a stone wall is a tiny circular pond called the Merry Mere. This is the day of the masquerade and excitement is high. Mary decides to take Sylvia, who is an unusually observant child. Caro Prentiss and Molly Eames drop in during the afternoon, Soon Blaikie, Doctor Marden and Bruce Hexson, a friend of Ace's, arrive. Molly is impatient to leave and they all excuse themselves. At the party Sylvia identifies each of the masked guests as they arrive. Ace comes garbed as Julius Caesar. Molly Eames appears as a Snow Queen, accompanied by a man in armor whom Sylvia identifies as Walter Treadway. They dance together continuously. Caro Prentiss and Marden arrive dressed in Revolutionary costumes, the doctor wearing jeweled shoe buckles. When the guests unmask, Ace, Walter and Molly have disappeared. When Mary Avery leaves the party a little after two, neither Molly and Walter or Ace Blaikie had returned. Sarah Darbe confides to Mary that someone apparently had spent the night in the Little House and returns screaming. She has found Ace Blaikie stabbed to death in the Spinney. Mary summons Patrick O'Brien, chief of police, who had been a schoolmate of hers and Ace's. Her manuscript recalls early impressions of Ace-how he had been wealthy, the most popular boy in town, how he had gone to Paris to study medicine, became an aviator

"At the Marden house." "What time did you go to the Marden house, Walter?"

"About a quarter to nine, I should say." "Where did you breakfast?"

"There, with Molly and Caro."
"Then about half-past nine you and Molly set out for Plymouth?"

"Yes." Sarah's entrance at his moment created a diversion. She was wheeling the tea-wagon. On it were the coffee things. Back of her came Bessie bearing my biggest silver tray. On it was a stack of waffles. "Mrs. Avery," Sarah explained, "I thought you'd all be hungry by this time."

"Oh Sarah!" I exclaimed, "bless you for this clairvoyance!"

And yet as I kissed her, I was conscious of the first sense of let-down since Sarah discovered Ace's body in the Spinney. For a tiny interval

I was happy. Patrick seemed happy too. He gripped Walter's hand hard and to Molly he dropped an abrupt, "I'm so glad that you know your mind at last!"

ceiver, her soft-voiced, "Hello!" and then her, "Oh yes sir, she's here."

Sarah reappeared at the doorway. "It's Mr. Hopestill!" she announced in a happy voice.

I jumped to my feet. Just as Sylvia is my favorite niece, Hopestill Blaine is my favorite nephew. He is the oldest son of my oldest sister. I ran to the telephone.

"Oh, Hopestill, my dear boy," I called into it. "You don't know how glad I am to hear your voice. You can't imagine how it comforts me."

"You would have heard it much sooner if I could have got to you," Hopestill answered. "The moment we read the papers this morning, mother and I decided that I'd better beat it over to your place and stay with you. I've been trying to get you the whole morning, but I haven't been able to make a connection until now. I suppose everybody in the world's been trying to telephone you."

"Everybody," I replied. "But until an hour ago, I'd spoken with nobody, and until an hour ago, I'd seen nobody but Patrick O'Brien and Mattie Stow. And now Molly Eames and Walter Treadway are here. Hope's such a swell kid!" "Who's that?" Patrick was sitting with his back to the piazza and he spoke without looking around. Then I heard the sound of a motor. Sarah appeared. "Miss Prentiss would like to see you, Mrs. Avery." I looked at Patrick. He nodded. "Tell her to come in, Sarah!" I said.

Caro appeared. "Good morning, Mrs. Avery!" she said to me. "Hello there-you two!" she said to the Treadways. 'Good morning, Mr. O'Brien!"

she said to Patrick. An awkward pause intervened. I did not want to make Molly's great announcement if she wanted to make it herself. Apparently she

"You angel!" I exclaimed. "We're dashing off in a moment!" Molly said, "just as soon as I've got hold of myself." "Where are you living, may I ask. Mrs. Treadway?" "At present, Mrs. Avery, with my husband's people," Molly answered. "They don't know it yet, but I think they'll take us in. We're going to look around for the tiniest house we can find in Satuit and I shall begin presently to experiment in cooking." "I shall give you a dining-room table for a wedding present," I promised. "Old maple if I can find it."

"That will be grand, Aunt Mary," Molly approved.

"Miss Prentiss," Patrick took over the conversation again, "I find that I shall have to ask you some more questions. I hope you won't mind. I shouldn't bother you. It's merely a matter of routine."

"Oh please ask me as many as you want. Mr. O'Brien," Caro replied simply.

Patrick fumbled in one pocket and found a little leather notebook. "I have to warn you again that anything you say now can be used against you and that there are witnesses present." He fumbled in another pocket. "Darn, I haven't a pencil on me. Do you happen to have anything I can use, Walter?" Walter handed him a fountain pen. Patrick held it poised over a notebook, his eyes fixed intently on it. "Miss Prentiss, did you know that Walter and Molly were going to be married?"

"No, Mr. O'Brien-not definitely. I suspected it!" "When did they leave your house Saturday morning?" "Somewhere between nine and ten — about half-past nine perhaps." "Did they tell you where they were going?" "Did you ask where they were going?" "No." Patrick made a few notes in the notebook, handed the pen back to Walter. "Did you know you were going to elope with Walter when you went to the masquerade, Molly?"

"My suitcase was all packed in my car." "Here's Hopestill!" Patrick exclaimed again without looking around. The runabout crunched to a stop outside and Hopestill came striding into the room. He is a big, tall, stoop-shouldered lad - my nephew-not lanky exactly, but angular. Perhaps the most noticeable thing about him are his eyes -steely gray and deeply set. With his characteristic long, swift stip, he crossed the room to me. "I never thought I'd see you on such

"You bet!" He turned to the others. "Hello, there, you two. What do you mean—getting tied so suddenly? Congratulations!" He kissed the bride. "Hello Pat!" he concluded. He shook hands with Patrick. "You've got your work cut out for you!"

"I'll say!" Patrick wrung Hopestill's hand. "Glad to see you. I think your aunt needs a man about. I've transferred police headquarters to her house."

"It's a ghastly business!" Hopestill commented soberly, "Gee, you read about murders in the paper with the greatest calm. But when it strikes home-well, you suddenly realize that you've never really known what it meant be-

"That's the way I feel, Hopestill." I agreed a little drearily. "You've never met Miss Prentiss. My nephew, Mr. Blaine, Caro."

Hopestill strode to Caro's side, shook hands with her. We all sat down. Hopestill ensconsed himself on the couch, his eyes following Caro's movements.

Molly and Walter arose. "I think we'll be going, Aunt Mary," Molly said, "unless, Patrick, you want us—"

"No," Patrick answered in a meditative tone. "I don't think I want you any more at present. However, Walter, I guess I'll have to ask you to stick around for a while. I may need you any time." Walter gave him a quick, intent look. He nodded. "I'll be at the house!" he announced briefly.

"Could I go down to the Spinney?" Hopestill asked Patrick after the Treadways had left. "I'd like to see the spot—"

"Oh yes," Patrick permitted. "It's anybody's ball now. We've taken all the photographs we want. Go down there and root around as much as you like. If you find a few clues

"By all means," I answered. "I don't want to go with you. Hope still. You understand that . . . It will be a long time before . . ."

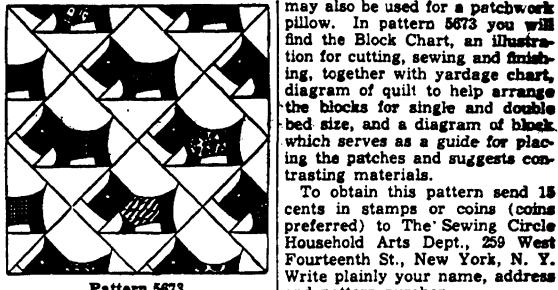

"Of course not, Aunt Mary." "I'll go down with you." Patrick offered. "I'll be back in a moment, Mary," he called over his shoulder to me. Patrick was back in a few mo-

Viewpoint on Wealth

"And never the twain shall meet" has been well said. A noted Western visitor, shown the treas uries of an Indian prince, mil lions of goldpieces, remarked that such great wealth would become even greater if put out to productive uses. "True enough," replied the prince, "but if all this gold were to be taken away, what should I have left to look at?"
