

News of the State Legislature

Mortgage Moratorium Extended. Bill No. 100 is Introduced by Senator Bishop of Alpena.

The legislature continued to grind away with many bills introduced but few enacted. Senator Bishop of Alpena introduced bill No. 100. It will bar commercial fishing from Pottamungus Bay. It is the custom for the person who introduces bill No. 100 to banquet the legislature and for several days they have been side-stepping. Finally Bishop came across when a resolution was adopted limiting it to the senate and governor and barring the 100 members of the house.

Senator Little of this district introduced a bill making a long list of occupational diseases compensable under the Workmen's Compensation Law. This bill will involve a big fight as many think the disease should be left for determination from the evidence.

The mortgage moratorium bill, fixing the final extension date as Nov. 1, 1938 was passed by both houses and signed by the governor. He also signed the emergency deficiency bill. This provides funds for schools and other departments which have not enough funds to carry them through the year.

The bill provided for the appointment of judges has had tough sledding, and is encountering strong opposition. It has been sent back to the committee and will probably not be on the April ballot.

Rep. Elton Eaton has also introduced a bill repealing the provision providing that applicants for old age pensions deed their property to the state. There are already several bills introduced affecting this pension. Most of them would change the age limit all the way from 75 to 60 years.

Senator Brake offered a bill providing that the nominations for attorney general, auditor general, state treasurer and the secretary of state be nominated at primary conventions. Similar bills have been introduced before but failed of enactment.

The governor has presented his parole system change. It would abolish the present setup and create a state corrections commission. This would be split into three separate divisions. One would handle prisoners, another paroles and another probation.

The new reapportionment plan is being studied. This would abolish 36 legislative districts and reduce the legislators from 100 to 64. This would be affected by consolidating a number of districts. Livingston would be grouped with Shiawassee.

James G. Bryant, state welfare director, has also changed the old age pension setup. The state has been divided into 14 districts with a supervisor over each area.

If one would judge by the pay bill just voted, the legislature would adjourn on May 31. The legislators have just voted themselves $50 per week pay for 20 weeks. This would bring the adjournment date to May 31.

The death penalty advocates are again clamoring for a death penalty but it is probable that one of the several now in committee will be reported out. Not that the committee is in favor of it but for the reason that one such bill is released every session as a barometer to get public opinion. It is doubtful if there is enough sentiment to pass such a law.

The Sunday hunting bill is again up and is more drastic than ever. Livingston is one of the counties listed. In it all persons are prohibited from hunting or carrying guns on settled lands. As this would close all lands but a few swamps and wood lots there is opposition from city dwellers. Land owners, however, may continue to hunt on their own lands on Sunday.

ANNUAL VENISON BANQUET

On Tuesday, March 2, Livingston Lodge No. 11 will put on their annual venison banquet. Supper will be served at 7:00 P. M. and will be followed by a short program. Then a third degree will be conferred. Master Masons of this section are invited.

Percy Ellis, W. M.
Paul Cuslett, Sec.

ASKS $5,000 FOR SLANDER

Dr. W. H. Erwin, Howell veterinarian, is suing B. L. Grisson for $5000 damages for slander. Dr. Erwin alleges that on last July 15 Grisson told him in a Howell store that he knew nothing about hogs or hog cholera. Grisson purchased the Red & Knowles farm, north of Howell, a year or so ago and started a stock farm. Some of his hogs became ill and Dr. Erwin was called to attend them.

No dear reader we have not heard from Col. Chalker of Florida for many moons. He may have gone native and married a creole or been swallowed by one of those deep sea fish as he goes after. If the last supposition is correct, the fish will spit him up quicker than the whale did.

The Washington News Letter

By Congressman Andrew J. Transue
Sixth District, Michigan.

Wearry Postmen

Congressional mail sacks bulged last week as advocates and opponents wrote to their representatives and Senators to tell what they thought about President Roosevelt's proposal to have Supreme Court judges retire at the age of 70 or have additional justices appointed in the venerable members of the highest tribunal failed to retire voluntarily. The recorded sentiment of the Sixth Congressional District in Michigan is about 95 percent in opposition to the rejuvenation proposal.

In addition to the printed forms that have been signed and sent from Genesee, Livingston and Ingham counties, hundreds of citizens have written letters expressing their ideas and explaining the reasons for their attitude. Most of the writers express an emphatic opposition to "tampering with the Supreme Court."

There is no question but that a great deal of good will result from this nation-wide discussion. President Roosevelt is not the first President to criticize the Supreme Court. He has for his precedent Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, U. S. Grant, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt. It is your Congressman's opinion that this question will be decided only after careful study and due deliberation by the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Wolverine Prominence

Socially and in the inquisitorial chambers of the Senatorial LaFollette Committee Michigan won the spotlight in Washington last week. Governor Frank Murphy was given the most prolonged applause next to the President and James Farley at the "Jim Farley" banquet that drew 1,500 top ranking Democrats to Washington from all sections of the country. The banquet committee had to refuse more than 3,000 requests for reservations on account of space limitations.

Senator Prentiss Brown was the guest of honor of the Michigan State Society in Washington. The Senator was president of the society last year and was succeeded by Representative George A. Dondero of Royal Oak.

Hint and Lansing factory workers who did a little detecting on the side for the Pinkerton Detective agency, and joined the automobile union, and the Pinkerton request and then told the union leaders about their dual capacity, were the star witnesses before the LaFollette Committee. The Senate last week granted the Committee an additional $40,000 to continue the investigation. Having asked for $50,000 the Committee accepted the appropriation and said more money would probably be necessary to complete the investigation into labor espionage.

HOLD BANK ROBBERY SUSPECTS

In the arrest of Peter and Vernon Bowers of Rose City state police believe they have two of the men who robbed the Williamston and Fenton banks recently. Bernard Helsel who escaped from Jackson prison last July is also sought. Arthur Basmer who assisted Helsel to escape has also been arrested.

The Bowers boys were not suspected of the crime and are said to have good records. It was reported that they had sunk the car in North Dace Lake. The state police raised it and it was found to answer the description of the car used in the Williamston robbery. They deny the bank robbery but admit a series of chicken and automobile license plate thefts. The Bowers are held in the Gladwin county jail. Helsel was seen and chased last Wednesday by state police but got away near Standish. The Fenton robbery occurred Feb. 2 and the Williamston one on Jan. 22.

The LaFollette Investigation

The LaFollette investigation into the Pinkerton spy system used in big industrial concerns is interesting. These Pinkerton operatives have worked for the big industrialists for years for the purpose of crushing labor unions. The great Homestead strike in Pennsylvania years ago was a battle between the strikers and the Pinkertons who were aiding the industrialists. Now their system is different and open conflict is avoided. The Pinkertons now join the labor unions, report the union activities and endeavor to get control. Then they do all in their power to break the union. The General Motors and other industrial concerns have discontinued the use of the Pinkerton spy system since Jan. 1 according to testimony.

E. J. Drewy called on Henry Kise one day last week.

School Auditorium To Be Dedicated

Large Attendance Expected - Friday Night to Witness Opening of New Auditorium. 200 Persons to Put On Entertainment.

The Prairie Ramblers, a group of our young people, who made such a hit on the Pinckney WLS program, will be heard on the Masquerade Entertainment - Friday evening. This group is good enough that they have been invited to appear for an amateur audition over radio station WLS Chicago. They are good, and as Uncle Ezra says, they have rhythm for you.

The Ladies drill is expected to be the main feature of the program. Each member of the team has been busy all week, making special costumes for the occasion, and when this number is seen on the floor, you will declare it beautiful indeed.

The whole program will be packed full of good clean entertainment and it will be necessary for any expecting a seat to be on hand early. Doors open at 7 o'clock.

The School Board, in sponsoring this entertainment, feels it is doing a real service to the Community, in as much as it brings together and fosters a Community spirit which is so often lacking these days.

Should this effort meet with public approval, future programs will be attempted.

RECORD BRIDGE HAND

At a bridge party held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Betts of Ann Arbor by the women of the Ingham County Club last week four perfect bridge hands were dealt. Mrs. AtLee won the prize for the afternoon's play.

THREE MEN ESCAPE FROM JACKSON PRISON

Joseph Scofic, 26, Detroit; Alvin Mott, 19, Detroit; and Ray Rusch, 19, Flint escaped from Jackson prison Friday morning. The men scaled the high wall near the administration building by means of a ladder made of pipe used to hold electric power wires, shortly after 5:00 A. M. The men were on kitchen duty and got up at that hour. Their escape was not discovered for nearly two hours. They stole five cars and trucks, driving them until they ran out of gas. Although the state police reinforced by sheriff's officers blockaded all the roads they were able to escape. The last seen of them was when they abandoned a wrecker, stolen at Quincy, on a parking lot at Coldwater. They were supposed to have escaped on a freight train but the train was searched at Bronson and they were not on it.

Scofic was sentenced last summer when he robbed St. Alphonsus rectory at Dearborn where Rev. Morgan Harris is assistant rector. He was wounded and captured while making his getaway. Later his companion in the robbery, Ted Bisaga, assaulted a nurse and attendant at Ford Hospital while trying to free Scofic who was a patient there. Bisaga was later captured in Canada and given five years in Kingston prison for another offense.

The Book That Upset Pinckney

The Story of the First Book Written About Pinckney by Mrs. C. M. Kirkland.

Neither milk, eggs, nor vegetables were to be had and those who could not live on hard salt ham, stewed apples, and bread raised with salt rising would necessarily run some risk of starvation.

oOo

The night dews were falling chill and heavy when crossed the last log causeway and saw a dim glimmering in the distance. The children were getting horribly cross and sleepy. . . . Up the stick ladder we paced slowly and sadly . . . The aspect of our lodging was rather portentous. Two bedsteads, which looked as if they might, by no very violent freak of nature, have grown into their present form, a good deal of bark being yet upon them occupied the end opposite the ladder; and between them was a window, without either glass or shutter - that is to say, politeness aside, a square hole in the house. Three beds spread upon the floor, two chests and a spinning wheel, with reel and swifts, completed the plenishing of the room. Two of the beds were already tented, as the vibrations of the floor might have told us without the aid of ears (people snore incredibly after plowing all day) and the remainder were at our service . . . And thus passed my first night in Montacute.

I do not remember experiencing at any time in my life, a sense of more complete uncomfortableness than was my lot, on awakening the next morning. . . . Be that as may my troubles, when the children were to be washed and dressed, became real and tangible enough; for, however philosophical grown people may sometimes be under disagreeable consequent upon a change of habits, children are very epicures and will put up with nothing that is unpleasant to them, without at least making a noise, which I detest and dread; though I know mothers ought to "get used to such things". I have heard that eels get accustomed to getting skinned, but I doubt the fact.

That morning I ever attempted to carry through the ordinary nursing routine, in a log hut, without a servant, and a skillet as a wash-basin. . . . Good souls! how little did they know of Michigan! I have since that day, seen the interior of many a wretched dwelling, with almost literally nothing but a bed, a chest and a table; children ragged to the very last degree, and potatoes the only fare; but never yet saw I one where the daughter was willing to own herself obliged to live out at service. She would "hire out" long enough to buy some articles of dress or perhaps "because our folks had been sick" and want a little money to pay the doctor, or for some such special reason; but never as a regular calling; with an acknowledgement of inferior station.

This state of things appalled me at first; but I have learned a better philosophy since. I find no difficulty now in getting such aid as I require; and but little in retaining it as long as I wish, though there is always a desire of making an occasional display of independence. Since living with one for wages is considered by common consent a favor, I take it as a favor; and, this point once conceded all goes well.

The log house which was to be our temporary home, was tenanted at this time; and we were obliged to wait while the incumbent could build a framed one; the materials for which had been growing in the woods not long before; I was told it would take but a short time, as it was already framed. . . . Our cottage bore about the same proportion to the articles we had expected to put into it that the "lytel hole" did to the friend whom Virgil had coaxed into its narrow compass; and the more we reflected, the more certain we became that without the magic powers of necromancy one half our moveables at least must remain in the open air. To avoid such a necessity Mr. Clavers was obliged to return to Detroit and provide storage for sundry unwieldy boxes which could by no art of ours be conjured into our cot.

It was no easy matter to get a "lady" to clean the place, and ne'er had the place more need of the tutelar aid of the goddess of scrubbing brushes. (Continued on last page)

Current Comment

The assertion that President Roosevelt is trying to pack the supreme court in his bill calling for six more judges, amuses us. Just what is meant? We take it that it is feared that he would appoint judges favorable to him and his measures. Well, has not that practice been followed by all presidents in the past. Did not the late President Harding appoint William Taft to that tribunal for the reason that Taft was one of the arch conservatives of all time. President Coolidge later appointed Hughes and Senator Butler for a like reason. President Hoover seems to have slipped when he appointed Justice Cardozo as he has consistently supported the policies of President Roosevelt. The truth of the matter is that the supreme court is composed chiefly of conservatives and is practically speaking their last frontier. Here is where they are making their last stand since their disaster of last November. The same crowd are active here that waged the losing fight against Roosevelt last fall. The Liberty League and other economic royalistic organizations are furnishing the means but are leaving the talking to someone else this time, having learned their lesson last year. Lippman, Kent, Lawrence and other syndicate writers are busy earning their salaries. It is the same lineup that failed last year. The only thing missing is that the Literary Digest is not taking any poll of the situation. We wonder why???

Whenever a fatal accident occurs, which is due to drunken driving, the question is usually asked "Why is not the drunken driver law enforced?" The main reason is that there is no accepted standard judicial decision as to what constitutes drunkenness. We notice that one Oklahoma judge has ruled that the odor of liquor on the breath is sufficient but that is not generally accepted. Neither is the amount of liquor consumed as the capacity of drivers is different. Until there is some uniform rule or standard laid down by the judges, there is not likely to be much abatement of this nuisance, except in spasmodic drives now indulged in by enforcing officers.

The indications are that the mortgage and land contract moratorium will be terminated in November 1938. A bill to that effect has been passed by both houses of the Michigan legislature and signed by the governor. As the legislature does not meet until the following January there will be no chance to extend the moratorium. The bill as first drawn sets June 1, 1939 as the date but the senate changed this. Now in order to take advantage of the moratorium it is necessary to go into court and get a court order.

Many are still wondering why the General Motors gave in and agreed to the peace proposals which ended the strike. The Washington column in the Lansing State Journal states that the main thing which caused them to do this was the report that the Chrysler and Ford Motor Co. were both about to announce wage increases. The General Motors ended the strike and announced a wage increase in order to beat its two rivals to the gun.

Way back in 1908 when Theodore Roosevelt was president he severely criticized the supreme court because it had thrown out the Employer's Liability Act of 1906 and reversed the $25,000,000 fine given against the Standard Oil Co. by Judge Landon. In 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt was a candidate for the presidency against William Taft he advocated the recall of judicial decisions. It was T. R.'s contention that there was a middle ground in which the supreme court was in complete control in which it could throw its influence in any way it was inclined to stifle legislation. The way to do away with this was not by constitutional amendment he maintained but by giving the people the power to vote on legislation. By voting favorably on it, said measures would be made legal in spite of the supreme court. The progressive party placed this in their platform but only made it apply to state courts.

No matter what you think of the sit-down strike method of settling labor disputes you will have to admit that it is the most effective weapon which labor has so far devised. It received its first big tryout in the Flint strike and won and now sit-downs are becoming a regular epidemic. It has its advantages over other methods tried in that it seems to be a harmless, bloodless way of settlement and usually ends in arbitration.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Too often the honeymoon expression is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. ## FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Lyons—Local competition for the Dionne quintuplets was brought forward recently when a cow owned by Albert Cook gave birth to triplets.

Port Huron—Twenty years ago Mrs. Arthur E. Basney saw her first motion picture. It also was her last. "I know some people who think I am foolish," she says, "but I believe in the Bible and consider it a sin to look at today's motion pictures."

Unionville—A canine Methuselah around this section is Trix, a pedigree Airedale, owned by J. M. Allison. Trix is 16 years old, which would amount to 112 years in a span of human life. Still active and frolicsome, Trix is well known around eastern Michigan and the Thumb district.

Port Huron—Sentimental policemen cried when Detective Sergeant Clarence Marx finished his bit in the Police Department target shoot recently. Marx didn't make the best score, but took a short cut to the hearts of his fellow officers, who broke down into unrestrained tears when he fired his last shot. By some jest of fate it happened to be a tear gas shell. The contest was temporarily ended.

Kalamazoo—Mrs. Rose Eller, Route 2, has a tintype campaign button used by Abraham Lincoln in his 1860 Presidential campaign. On one side of the button is a picture of Lincoln, and on the other side a picture of his running mate, Hannibal Hamlin. Given the button when she was twelve years old, Mrs. Eller was told to keep it, as only six were made. She has refused offers as high as $80 for it.

Saginaw—G-cars stirred excitement here recently. Rumors of an influx of strike sympathizers were rampant and two scout cars were dispatched to find out what was happening. Police found a Flint used car dealer and several drivers, homeward bound with cars they had bought in Alma, bearing the letter G, which, on second thought, could stand for Gratiot County, where Alma can be found any time.

Port Huron—As part of the national observance of Boy Scout Week, Howard Conlin served as Mayor of this city recently for the term of one hour. Other scouts who held rank in the municipal government were Duane Fair, Parks Commissioner; Kenneth McKinnon, Finance Commissioner; John McClung, Safety Commissioner; Eugene McCully, Public Works Commissioner; Bill Fenner, Chief of Police, and Gordon Cook, Fire Chief.

Newberry—The Michigan lumbering industry in the eastern end of the Upper Peninsula seems to have staged a comeback. Three large sawmills here are now operating, with a daily production of about 100,000 board feet. Contrary to a belief that lumbering is due to fall off in the near future because of the lack of timber, members of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association say that the new system of selective logging insures an indefinite supply of logs.

Jackson—With the title of Michigan's Champion Whittler at stake, Fred F. Fisher, local hardware dealer, throws down the gauntlet to would-be aspirants to the honor. Fisher, who has spent 50 years whittling, wishes that state and county fairs would offer premiums for the best example of the art, like they used to do. Half a century ago, he took first prizes at the Jackson and Marshall fairs. Today, he specializes in carved wood fans, which are greatly in demand.

Lansing—Skulking about Valentine counters recently, your inquiring reporter unearthed some modern trends. It appears that women go more for the ornate, streamlined creations that are in vogue, while the men prefer the old-fashioned Valentine hearts and simplicity. Oddly enough, however, a new note was struck. On several of the counters was an item entitled "Live Alone and Like It." Done up with a Valentine wrapper, it appealed to many and was one of the fast sellers.

Jasper—Because her health prevented her from becoming a nurse, Mrs. Ada Pearce, of Madison Township, Lenawee County, began raising white mice for medical research. In eight years, she has satisfied her desire to be of service in eliminating suffering to humanity and at the same time has established a profitable business which provides her with a comfortable living. Starting with three pure albino mice, she now ships from 100 to 500 mice each week to research laboratories.

Kalamazoo—Patrolman Benjamin Whistler has discovered a new wrinkle in the art of hitch-hiking. While Whistler was standing on a downtown street corner, a car pulled up to the curb. Comfortably perched on the rear bumper was a white hen. Recognizing the fowl as one of his own, which had enjoyed a 70-mile-drive at 60 to 70 miles per hour, the driver started an outster movement which resulted in a hectic chase before the hen was finally landed in the trunk compartment of the car.

Lapeer—Thanks to Treasury Department experts in Washington, the local woman who put $1,100 in a bottle and hid it in a chimney and later found only the charred remains of a roll of bills, has most of her money back. The ashes were forwarded to the Treasury Department, where all but $40 of the original sum was identified.

Elkton—Michigan residents are keeping Blythe Kellerman, publisher of the Elkton Advance, busy as a travel agent. For the third year, Mr. Kellerman has arranged for a tour to Washington, D. C., March 13 to 18. The itinerary includes a visit to Congress in session, Harper's Ferry, M. Vernon and Annapolis, as well as the Government buildings.

Traverse City—Western Michigan's cherry barons dug up a mythical hatchet recently and went on the warpath for any fellow Americans who know not the delights of cherry pie. With George Washington as their first, if unsuspecting press agent, the traditional Cherry Week program was carried out recently. The hatchet they exhumed is that which domestic mythology claims was buried by George Washington in one of his father's choice trees.

Jackson—A new note in strikes was found by WPA workers here recently. Scorning the popular sit-down type, which has been the vogue, a twenty-six-inch alligator started the wheels of fashion revolving with a "digger-under" seizure of Grand River Avenue. After the manner of its tribe, the reptile had buried itself in the mud to await the warm sun of spring. It is believed the alligator escaped from some one who had kept it as a pet.

Ludington—A combination of the familiar fog-horn and a radio beacon is being used at the Ludington Lighthouse to guide ships into the harbor. The new method is designed to remove the element of chance in navigation. All the navigator needs to do is to note the exact time of the radio beam, then note the interval until he hears the fog siren. He divides the number of seconds by five, the result is his distance in miles from the breakwater.

Deckerville—Citizens here apparently are determined to make the position of village president a life job. John Kirkpatrick, 81 years old, has again been nominated for the office he has held for 11 years. He had expressed the desire to retire, but was drafted at the village caucus. To make certain that he would win the nomination, a man who is wintering in the South and didn't even know he was a candidate was nominated to oppose Kirkpatrick.

Olivet—At a recent "Town Hall Tonight" sponsored by the senior class of Olivet College, staid professors executed the allemand left, performed the do-cido and other old-fashioned steps to the tune of melodies of a hillbill, band. Every Saturday night, the pages of time are turned back, as students, faculty members, townspeople and neighboring residents join in a square dance at the town hall. Revenues derived help defray class expenses for the students.

Ann Arbor—For the second time in its history, the University of Michigan Law School will issue a diploma to a blind student. The student is Mandino Perlongo, who lost his sight in an accident when he was four years old. With more hobbies than the average person, he is expert at repairing radios, a first rate carpenter, a cobbler and an accomplished pianist. He has hitch-hiked alone to nearly every section of Michigan, including trips to his home at Gastra in the Upper Peninsula.

Pontiac—Even depressions have their good points, says Miss Adah Shelly, city librarian. During the depression, the number of book borrowers at the local library jumped by thousands. Now, with the return of prosperity, the library has noted a subsequent decrease in books being taken out. However, an unusual increase in the demand for books dealing with government and economics and a general greater interest in reading has placed library business above that of pre-depression days.

Iron River—Neighbors of Nels Larson, chemist and farmer four miles east of here, say that by "sitting closely to his well he can predict weather with greater accuracy than official observers. It seems that when snow or rain is on the way, the 180-foot well gives out a noise somewhat like that of an electric fan, and there is a current of air from it that will blow out a match. Along with these peculiarities, Larson says that the well was driven after geologists failed to find any traces of water.

Mt. Clemens—17 Macomb County banks, which have gone through reorganization or are in receivership, are holding $149,109.57, all or at least part of which will eventually, if not claimed within seven years, escheat to the State by law. It was pointed out that many people may have felt that receivership cancelled any obligation of the bank to pay, or may have forgotten about their deposits. In other cases, depositors have died and their heirs have not bothered to investigate any possible bank accounts.

Worthy of Your Pridel

MOTHER, between you and me Sis is getting to be a little show-off. Last night when Dick called, there she sat, big as life, right in the middle of things chirping about the new dress you made her: how you used a remnant left over from one of your dresses, and got it finished in one afternoon—she even had Dick feel the material.

Well, Elsie, you can't blame the child's appreciating herself in a new dress. How about ourselves? Didn't you say your jumper was the talk of the Tennis Club meeting yesterday? And haven't I been spending more time before the mirror since I made my new "Stylish Stout" model? I actually feel like a new person in it—imagine me being vain at my age!

Flatters Stout Figure.
Oh, Mother, you're not vain and you're as young as any of us. You just were lucky to find a particularly flattering style for your figure. That soft jabot makes you look lovely and the whole thing is so slenderizing. But only an expert like you could make such a dress.

It isn't being expert, Elsie, it is choosing a pattern that is deftly designed and giving full step-by-step instructions on how to proceed.

Several Blouses.
I'm going to make another blouse for my jumper soon, Mother. I always admired that white pique shirt of Dick's, so I think

I'll try it for my blouse, since the pattern is a lot like a man's shirt in design.

It sounds good to hear you interested in making something for yourself. Maybe you girls will turn your Bid-or-Bi Club into a Sew-Your-Own before long.

You can never tell, Mother, you never can tell!

The Patterns.

Pattern 1229 comes in sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 42 bust. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material for the jumper and 1½ yards for the blouse. Pattern 1847 is available in sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4¼ yards of 39-inch material.

Pattern 1882 is designed for sizes 2 to 10 years. Size 4 years requires 1¼ yards of 39-inch material.

Household Questions

Winter Salad—Mix one cup of celery with one cup of tart apples and half cup of walnuts. Cut the celery and apples into very small dice and combine with mayonnaise or cream dressing. Add walnuts just before serving. Garnish with celery tips.

Sometimes ink stains can be removed from the hands by rubbing them with the inside of a banana peel.

You can produce your own sour milk for use in sour-milk recipes by simply adding a teaspoon of vinegar to each cup of fresh sweet milk.

A good cleaner for glassware having a deposit of lime from hard water, consists of a mixture of one cup vinegar in one quart of warm water into which six or eight slices of raw Irish potatoes have been cut.

Cane-bottomed chairs should be brushed to remove all dust and then washed with salt and water and placed in the open air to dry. This treatment tightens up the cane.

If the roof should leak and stain your ceiling, cover the stain with black magnesia. Rub the block over the spot until the stain is covered, then smooth over with the tips of your fingers. It works like magic.

RELATIVE TO SEED

A small article appeared in the county publication last week dealing with grass and legume seeds. Since that time numerous people have called at the office to question this statement. In the essence the statement meant that under the soil conservation act soil building payments would not be made to those people using seeds that were unadapted to this climate.

What seeds are adapted is a logical question. The adaptability of foreign seed can be determined by the color of these seeds under the federal act. For instance imported red clover and alfalfa of unknown origin 10% red stain; Italy, 10% red stain; Africa, 10% red stain; South Africa, 10% orange red stain; Turkey, 10% purple red; Canada 1% violet; Other countries of known origin 1% green.

In the event that you intend to buy seed grown in the United States determine the origin of the seed if it has been produced in some of the southern or southwestern states and the seed would probably not be as well adapted as seed grown farther north, and no where near as well adapted as home grown seed.

In the case of farm to farm movement of home grown seed, or the local distribution from elevators of locally grown seed, the farmer is permitted to sell seed grown by himself to neighboring farmers without tagging according to our seed law. It also permits the elevators to distribute locally grown seed without tagging or labeling according to our seed law. "Locality" is defined as being the territory or district from which an elevator might expect to receive seed, and beyond which the farmers would be expected to make use of some neighboring elevator.

FARMERS CLUBS

Farmers Clubs and other farm organizations have played an important part in building our agricultural structure. Like all other phases of agriculture they have passed through a metamorphosis.

A few decades ago farmer institutes were quite in vogue. In fact most gatherings were conducted on the same basis. These meetings, being of an educational nature, have been supplanted by more general meetings having a tendency toward the social in order to keep the interest of the membership. Do not interpret this to mean that these meetings are void of any educational program for it has been the custom to have some speaker talk to these gatherings on topics of interest. The chief difficulty that has been encountered in this type of meeting is to select a topic of interest. Probably this difficulty can be explained by the great diversity of interests within a community.

The Marion Farmers Club is making a drastic departure from either of these methods. At their next meeting the speaker will talk with them. In other words the membership is going to participate in the program and not act as an audience.

I am very anxious to see how this plan of program works. We will appreciate any comment for or against such procedure.

THIS PROBLEM OF TENANCY

Results of the first farm tenancy conference to be held in Michigan are being studied by the state department of agriculture and leaders at Michigan State College. Although Michigan is not high in percentage of land operated by tenants, in comparison with other states, the percentage is increasing. From 23 per cent in 1925, the amount of land tenant operated in the state has risen to 27 per cent, says E. B. Hill, who presided during the meeting as head of the farm management department at the college. Dean E. L. Anthony and Agricultural Commissioner Burr Lincoln sponsored the meeting to determine a better basis for assuring soil conservation on tenant operated farms.

Notes of 25 Years Ago

Dispatch of February 29, 1912

The biggest snow storm of the season hit here last week. The roads were blocked and there was no service of any kind for three days. No mail or papers were received at all. The merchants ran out of bread and people who had not baked in years had to start in again. The stock trains went through Thursday and stalled at Walled Lake. All calves and sheep were butchered there and taken to Detroit. M. J. Reason's car of stock finally reached Detroit with but one cow dead. Travelling men were marooned here for three days. The snow plow got through Saturday and opened up the cut at the Fred Teeple farm which had drifted full. 125 friends and neighbors gave Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fick a surprise party at Fitchburg last Friday night. The Ficks will soon move to Pinckney.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Max Ledwidge Feb. 23, a daughter.
Miss Grace Gardner is working in a Lansing department store.
Married on Feb. 28, Miss Grace Barton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barton to Lyle Gorton of Iosco.

A musical tea will be given at the Congregational church Wednesday night, Rev. Rippon will speak on "This is That". Rev. Rippon will read out copies of a book written by him.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET HELD FEBRUARY 20TH

The Annual Father and Son Banquet was served in the Community church dining room last Saturday evening to a goodly number of men and boys of Father's and Sons. After the fine Swiss Steak supper was taken care of by the bunch of hungry men and boys, everybody was ready for the program.

Rev. Zuse at this point introduced the Toastmaster of the evening in the person of Bill Hodge of Howell, who proved himself a Master Announcer and program agitator. Bill was accompanied by his Amateur Protege Bud Musson of Howell, whose stage name is Bud Kenner and outstanding young impersonator.

After a number of pep songs led by Bill, the toast from the Fathers to the Sons was called for, to which Prof. J. P. Doyle responded with carefully chosen figures of speech, and set goals for boys to climb to reach. The response in behalf of the sons was given by Alger Lee of Lakeland in well selected statements in what a boy expects his Dad to be in being a Pal. Other numbers followed, in all 18 different ones took a special part. P. H. Swarthout, Wayne AtLee, Henry Kice, Herman Weidmayer, Billy Baughn, Cyrus AtLee, Winston Baughn, Norman Miller, W. H. Euler, John Martin, the Mrs. Lee, Palmer, Henry and Reason.

After the impersonations by Bud Kenner and the special musical numbers, and other numbers in which everybody had a part were over, as the Sons and Dads went out they were heard to remark, "and this is the best ever."

IS OPPORTUNITY BALD?

THE Ancients depicted Opportunity as having a forelock, by which it could be grasped when it appeared, but the back of its head, they said, was bald. Once the moment had passed in which to seize opportunity, there was nothing by which it could be grasped.

ALL human experience teaches us that there IS such a thing as OPPORTUNITY. IT DOES come to every human being, BUT, and mark this qualification, it takes cash in hand to avail one's self of it. To those who have no cash, in the twinkling of an eye it presents a bare head, nothing by which to grasp it. Have you cash in the bank to take advantage of opportunity when it will SURELY come your way?

MILD WINTER AIDS FARM BUG PESTS

Wise farmers are brushing up equipment and knowledge of materials and methods to prepare for a strenuous season's battle against insect crop pests. Mild winter weather is credited with aiding the bugs to bed down comfortably in preparation for their spring and summer riddling, boring and chewing.

Muck farmers were warned recently by Ray Hutson, entomologist at Michigan State College, that cutworms, onion maggots and onion thrips likely would be as numerous or more numerous than they were in 1936.

Orchards and general crops will find that the weather which has been kind toward muck crop pests also has aided the winter life of other insects as well, says Hutson.

Plowing under debris, burning weeds and other materials badly infested with insects and making conditions as uncomfortable as possible are recommendations.

Cutworm combat, useful to home gardeners as well as truck crop and muck crop operators, is going to be an especially profitable preparation for spring planting, says Professor Hutson.

Illustrations of common pests and descriptions of the bugs and their specific control treatments are found in Special Bulletin 183, "Common Pests of Field and Garden Crops," available by writing the Bulletin Room, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

MICHIGAN ATTICS YIELD HEIRLOOMS

Celebration of the centennial year in Michigan has quickened interest in heirlooms of all kinds. Many homemakers who own choice pieces of furniture are restoring them to new lives of beauty and usefulness.

For more than 6,000 women enrolled in the home furnishing extension projects of Michigan State College last year, the study of their homes provided the incentive for restoring and rearranging furnishings.

Total savings reported were $15,880. The work is being continued this year.

The refinishing of furniture resulted in 2,681 pieces restored. Tying springs and recovering with new upholstery gave new life to 3,711 pieces which varied from old fashioned rockers that grandmother prized to some more recent pieces that had seen hard use by the younger generation.

Borrowing the idea of grandmother's hooked rugs but improving them in color and workmanship so that they better fit the modern home, more than a thousand were made from old materials.

The motto of making the house homelike without cost was accepted as a challenge and the women found that by discarding "dust catchers" and useless articles their homes gained utility.

Clocks which no longer would run, family photographs crowding the piano and meaningless vases all went their way. Arranging 1,623 rooms to make them more comfortable for the family to use as well as more satisfying to the eye was a transformation that cost not a penny.

Old chairs of good design that were gathering dust in attics, barns and store rooms had a new lease on life when their owners learned how to weave cane and rush seats and repaired 2,000.

The block printing of nearly eleven thousand articles, the making over of 2000 pairs of curtains and 1979 new ones made other inexpensive changes. The story of a woman who found a sum of money in an old sofa she purchased at an auction was front page news.

CONSERVATION DEPT. NOTES

Michigan will gain four more miles of frontage on Pine River, Lake County, a good trout stream, under an exchange with the National Forest Service which has been approved.

Several more miles of frontage have also been secured on the Manistique River and Commencement Creek.

The conservation department has closed Park Lake in Bath township, Clinton county, for one year to all kinds of fishing. The reason for this was that all fish were killed by suffocation there in the winter of 1936-37 and it had to be replanted.

William Kessel of Rochester has left $5000 to the state of Michigan in his will for reforestation purposes.

White bass are legally protected at all times in Lake Michigan and cannot be taken by commercial fishermen. Hook and line fishermen may take them however.

Fish scales under a microscope may reveal the age of a fish in the same way as the cross section of a forest tree.

More than 300 acres of land will be purchased by this department for forest, wild-life and recreation. 80 acres are in the Higgins Lake state forest and 239 acres in the Butterfield swamp area.

Commercial wall-eyed pike will get a breather in Lake Huron as the season will be closed from March 1 to April 10, to allow them to spawn.

The ice spearing season ended Sunday. However, carp, dogfish, gar pike, mullett and suckers may still be taken.

John I. Roberts of Big Rapids has been appointed assistant supt. of Michigan state parks. He has been with the department since 1929.

Nearly twelve million barrels of crude oil and seven billion feet of gas were produced in this state in 1936. There were 777 drilling permits issued and 807 wells completed, dry holes reported 268.

The season in which hunting dogs may be trained ends on March 15.

500 rural schools have now received a nucleus for a conservation library over 500 packets of literature having been sent out.

The Drayton Plains fish hatchery has been enlarged.

There has been one of the lightest snowfalls this year in years. The snow depths are 6 to 14 inches below that of 1936.

Eight moose have been live trapped so far on Isle Royal for transportation to the mainland.

At the request of the legislature the conservation department has forwarded its view on deer hunting. It stated that the one buck law should be retained in all areas except in areas where a food shortage exists. There a one deer law is favored.

Water temperatures govern the spawning habits of game fishes. Brook, brown and rainbow trout spawn with a lowering water temperature; perch, black bass and bluegills spawn on a rising temperature.

USED CAR TITLES SHOULD BE CHECKED

Purchasers of used cars, especially those buying from other than dealers, are cautioned by Department of State officials to examine their titles carefully to see that serial and engine numbers and other details are verified by stampings on the cars.

Instances have been known in which neither buyer nor seller realized that a stolen car was being dealt with. In the event such cars are later traced, they are restored to their rightful owners, regardless of any transactions which may have been consummated with relations to them.

The warning was issued in face of the increase in used car sales noted in the general revival of business confidence following the successful peaceful negotiation of the General Motors "sit down" strike.

LOAD RESTRICTION NOW IN FORCE

The state highway department this week asked truckers and contractors to move all heavy equipment before spring "break-up" begins on the highways.

In the letter addressed to truckers and contractors operating in Michigan, State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner pointed out that special spring loading restrictions go into effect during March. He emphasized that no permits for overweight loads would be issued during the period of spring break-up.

E. E. Blomgren, maintenance engineer for the department, said, "This advanced warning is being sent out at this time because we cannot set a definite date after which no permits will be issued for overweight loads. The law authorizes the state highway commissioner to put the special spring restrictions in effect at his discretion during March, April and May. We are guided entirely by the condition of the roads."

Loads exceeding weight restrictions set up by law for other seasons of the year may be moved by special permit from the state highway department.

LAKES IN MICHIGAN

The Michigan Lakes and Streams Directory, published a few years ago, lists 4,187 named lakes in this state, and their total area is about 500 square miles. Florida has about 30,000 lakes of all sizes with a total of 8,905 square miles, though many of these are small and shallow many being formed by sinkholes or depressions in the limestone. Minnesota with over 10,000 lakes and a total lake area of 8,824 square miles is second. Wisconsin has some 2,000 lakes, with a total area of 810 square miles.

IMPROVING MICHIGAN ROADSIDES II. WHAT IS BEING DONE

A few years ago a landscape division was established in the state highway department with a trained landscape forester in charge. Under him are five divisional foresters in each county at least one crew of men are working. In addition to this a few counties have their own forester. Such activities are in line with recommendations of the American Association of State Highway Officials already mentioned.

The highway department is planting thousands of trees. Michigan spends approximately $250,000 annually for roadside maintenance including expenditures of federal agencies. For new construction jobs there is included in appropriations an estimate to cover the cost of roadside improvement.

Such estimates include tree trimming, transplanting of trees which should be saved, and the planting of additional trees and shrubs. This roadside effort for new construction has amounted to $150,000 making a total expenditure of about $400,000 in a year or approximately one per cent of the total highway funds. Surely this amount is not too much and certainly not out of proportion.

Barren Effect Less
Since its existence the landscape division of the highway department has made rapid strides for in Michigan, the barren effect seen on state highways in other states is disappearing.

In Michigan when a highway is to be constructed no "clearing crew" is sent out to clean off everything first, as is still done in some states. Instead a landscape engineer goes over the route stipulating which trees and shrubs shall be saved on the roadways and removes from the new widened roadbed materials worth saving. Transplanting is accomplished in natural groups along the roadside so that when paving is completed some of the landscaping is already done.

Triangles at road intersections are being planted, roadside springs are walled in and planted and highway maintenance stations are landscaped. Evergreen seedlings are being planted to act as snow breaks to eliminate the use of wooden fences. Timber strips are being purchased and recently attractive tourists stations have been built and picnic recesses provided which have met with ready use.

Perhaps More Needed
Whether this effort is adequate in comparison with the total problem is a subject open to controversy. Surely no one can argue but what a start is being made in the right direction. As time goes on even this much roadside improvement will become more and more increasingly noticeable.

But on the one hand tax revenues are spent to make Michigan more than now, a true haven of beauty, to replace some of its original landscape, to remove the scars of highway progress.

Perhaps the movement in Michigan has not reached the stage of equal importance with construction and maintenance recommended by the Highway Research Board but that may come.

Is this step in the right direction keeping pace with other factors making inroads into roadside improvement? Is the work of no avail if the roadways are marred by other factors making Michigan's appearance to travelers less desirable? Those are important questions and many answers will be found in discussions to follow.

Owl Dumb, But Useful

The owl's reputation for great wisdom is quite unmerited. Scientists have known for a long time that the owl is one of the "dumbest" of all things in feathers; though a recent announcement of that commonplace fact got considerable press notice. But though he isn't wise, Old Hooty is nevertheless very useful. He feeds mostly on mice and other small rodents, and helps to keep their numbers below the proportions of an absolute pest.—Science Service.

THURSDAY—Continued

"And then Drina Demoyne died. The newspaper accounts of her career said that she had been married but once—to an actor, Allan Banks. This was before the war. They said that once the two separated for a few years, but were never divorced. Subsequently, they came together again and lived together until Miss Demoyne died. She left him all her property. I have in my possession Banks' affidavit that he never was divorced from Drina Demoyne. Ace had mistakenly thought he committed bigamy in marrying my daughter but Drina Demoyne had actually committed bigamy in marrying him. That changed the whole complexion of affairs. Caro was no longer illegitimate—that is, provided Ace Blaikie had married no other woman. She was the heir to his estate."

"Then Caro, who has a flattering way of confiding everything to me, told me that Molly Eames did not want to marry Ace Blaikie, that she did not love him, that she actually loved another man, Walter Treadway."

"I received the affidavit from Drina Demoyne's husband on Friday morning. Friday afternoon, as you remember, Mrs. Avery, Ace Blaikie, Bruce Hexson and I stopped here for a cool drink. That was about two o'clock in the afternoon. My granddaughter and Molly Eames were here. They left just before we did. When I got home, Caro had not arrived. A few minutes later however, she came in. She had been riding around and around the Head in Molly's car. Molly told her that Ace Blaikie was insisting that she elope with him that night after the masquerade. He was apparently putting the screws on her. I felt that the time had come to act—that I must act instantly—but I wanted advice. I called Bruce Hexson on the telephone and asked him if I could come to the Camp to talk over an important business matter that had just come up. I drove over there at once and told him the whole story."

"How did it affect him?" Patrick interrupted.

"He was horrified—profoundly shocked, I may say. For he too had known Eleanor Dacre, although naturally this was the first time he realized that she was my stepdaughter. He spoke touchingly of her great beauty and goodness. He advised me to go at once to Ace Blaikie and have the thing out."

We went at once to Dr. Blaikie's house. Hexson had dropped him there on the way back. In Mr. Hexson's presence I repeated the story. Ace Blaikie was utterly discomfited. I felt all the time that the only thing he was thinking of was that this might interfere with his elopement. Well, in the end he said that he would reveal his marriage and would acknowledge Caro as his daughter. I asked him if he would draw up a will making full provision for her. He answered that he was an engaged man and begged time to think the matter over. I replied that I would give him a little time. Ultimately, he asked me if I would meet him in Mrs. Avery's Spinney at a quarter of eleven that night and we'd have a little talk. Then I left."

"And you say Bruce Hexson was present during this talk?"

"Yes."

"Did Mr. Hexson leave with you?"

"No, he stayed."

"Where did you go from there?"

"I went directly home."

"Tell me about your conversation with Ace Blaikie."

"It was comparatively brief but it was—from my point of view—satisfactory. Blaikie said that he had decided to make announcement in the newspapers that Caro was his daughter within three days. He said that he would leave her the Blaikie house and a suitable income."

"Did you make any reference to his proposed elopement with Molly Eames?"

"No, for Caro had told me only that evening that she was sure Molly was making up her mind to marry Walter Treadway."

"Have you told me everything now, Doctor Marden?" Patrick asked after a long pause.

"Everything, I believe."

FRIDAY

All that night I kept going over and over Doctor Marden's story. I kept going over the talk I had had with Patrick after he left. Caro—Ace's child. I could not accustom myself to that shining signal-light in my mind. For how glad I was, I find it hard to say. I had grown to love Caro. As to my conversation with Patrick—my tired mind concerned itself only with that last part of it which occurred after Doctor Marden had gone.

"Well, Marden seems to be the third to meet Ace that night. Toriano is out as a suspect—unless he came back. Margaret's testimony fixed that. Margaret's out too—unless she came back. Marden's testimony fixed that. But who's going to save Marden? He's got no alibi and he's got a grand motive."

"You mean, you think he did it?"

"I don't think that. I don't think anything. I'm only thinking what a jury will think. I'm a helluva detective. I don't think Walter killed Ace. I don't think Toriano killed him. I don't think Margaret did it, nor that Marden did. In fact," Patrick went on, "I wonder if I'm not licked."

When Patrick appeared Friday morning he looked for the first time, haggard. "I didn't close my eyes last night," he admitted. "By crimony, Mary, I hate to lie down to this thing. However, I'm giving myself until tomorrow night. If I don't get anything by then, I'll see the district attorney and admit I'm licked. I came over here—well, I don't know why I came over."

"Caro and Hopeskill are playing tennis," I said vaguely—merely by way of conversation.

"That seems to have become a pretty close friendship in less than a week," Patrick commented.

"She's only seventeen," I pointed out to him. "Hopeskill is still in college."

"He's a nice kid," Patrick went on. "And so is she! I'd like to see them—"

"He did not finish."

Patrick had seated himself in the hammock, his head back. He closed his eyes for a moment. Sympathetically, I kept silent. Perhaps he would drift off to sleep. But into the silence came Sylvia's voice. Patrick opened his eyes at once. His smile brought back all the life to his face. "Come here, Sylvia," he called, "let's have a little chin together."

Sylvia came out onto the piazza. I remember thinking what a charming figure she was. She was wearing one of the little smocked sleeveless frocks—a pale yellow—out of which stuck her amusing little brown sticks of arms. There were big yellow ribbon bows on the ends of her tight braids, and she carried the eternal Dorinda Belle, also in yellow.

"Now, young lady, tell me what you've been doing!"

"I was glad of the respite—both for myself and Patrick. I left them together. I went inside and busied myself at my desk. I was looking for a list of books. It had occurred to me that I might drive Patrick over to the Satuit library and see if I could get one of them."

"Bruce Hexson Has Just Committed Suicide."

From outside I could hear Sylvia's little voice. "And then I—"

news of Ace's death to him, I felt that it might soothe him a little to talk about books. He's a tremendous reader, you know. He's one of those people who is full of lore. He likes curious, out-of-the-way books."

"Let's go," Patrick exclaimed, and I fancied there was a sudden impatience in his tone.

Presently we were spinning across the causeway. "Any preference?" I asked Patrick idly when we came to the crossroads.

"Let's go over and see Bruce Hexson," Patrick suggested. "He must be over the worst of that cold. He's a wise guy. I have half a mind to lay the whole story before him and ask his advice."

I turned to the left in the direction of the camp.

Patrick seemed to have recovered his animation. He talked steadily all the time. Well he might, for never had Satuit spawned a more perfect day. Langorous warmth of middle August with a sky, a sheet of melting blue loaded with argosies of cloud. In the air the brisk smell of salt-marsh and the pungent odor of tansy.

Once in a while, a tree or a bush waved a flock of autumn coloring. Blackberry bushes by the road showed fine, minikin purple-black clusters of fruit. Milkweed was breaking and puffing into milk-white silk. Goldenrod spired everywhere.

"In all your travels, Mary Avery," Patrick asked me once, "have you ever seen anything more beautiful than Satuit?"

"No, never, Patrick! Paris is not more beautiful. Florence is not more beautiful. Rome is not more beautiful! Venice—"

"We both laughed and abandoned our thesis."

When we got to the end of the lane which led to the cleared area about the camp, Patrick said, "Would you mind waiting here alone for a few minutes, Mary? There are one or two things I'd like to talk over with Bruce alone. It's man talk. I would not mind your being about, but I think he'd be more comfortable if you weren't there."

"Of course!" I agreed. "There's no reason why I should go inside at all. I can sit here until you come out."

"Oh well, that's not necessary," Patrick insisted. He climbed out of the car.

I was returning to the library Elinor Willie's "The Orphan Angel." Idly I opened at the first page. My eyes dropped onto a phrase in the second paragraph which still echoed in beauty in my mind—"the aerial composure of a cloud."

I closed the book over this morsel. With my eyes on Patrick's retreating figure, I rolled it, figuratively speaking, over and over on the tongue of my mind. And yet my eyes followed Patrick, noting subconsciously the alertness of his graceful, springing step. I remembered, I recalled, that Ace Blaikie had always used in regard to Patrick a word that he had picked up in the South—"jimpiculate."

I could never get from Ace quite what jimpiculate meant. It seemed to indicate a vague combination of slenderness, strength, grace and style. I remember noting how fresh Patrick's khaki uniform always looked.

The camp was singularly quiet. Ordinarily, at the sound of an automobile, either Adah or Berry, or both, appeared at the door. Neither appeared today. Perhaps they were working out back. It seemed to me that I saw a flutter of curtain at the window. But to this day I cannot be sure; yet Bruce must have looked out to see who was coming. But very clearly I heard, just as Patrick was nearing the house, the sound of a shot.

That sound did not perturb me. Instantly I jumped to the conclusion that Berry had killed one of the noisome starlings on which we were all-warring. But apparently Patrick did not think of starlings, for instantly he broke into a run. As I have said before, Patrick had always been an all-round athlete and he could sprint. With no tremor of apprehension I watched him pull open the piazza door, rush over the piazza and into the house.

That there-Idly waiting and idly watching the sparkling plane of the ocean—I can't remember how many moments went by. Not many, but presently Patrick appeared, came running toward me. I must have realized suddenly that he was ghastly; for afterwards my head ached from a terrific grip on the wheel.

When Patrick was within speaking distance, he called, "Mary, Bruce Hexson has just committed suicide. He killed Ace Blaikie."

I remember only a frightful sense of weakness and a swirling darkness. Into both came Patrick's voice. "Don't faint, Mary! For God's sake don't faint now! I need you!"

I didn't faint. When Patrick, in what seemed a series of leaps, reached the car, the blackness had disappeared, the weakness had gone.

"He killed himself when he saw me coming," Patrick announced grimly. "His confession lies on his desk. It begins: 'I killed Ace Blaikie.' Now get back home at once, Mary. I don't want the reporters hounding you again. I'll walk slowly back to the cabin and telephone the P.S. That will give you five minutes' start."

Division of Time—

Quiet Pleasures to Punctuate the Rush of Life Are Sought

THE rush of life that leaves persons no time for deliberation, nor the pursuit of happiness in their own special ways, has seemed to reach its apex. Already there is a trend toward leisurely living, the sort that claims the right to dispose of hours not occupied in business or housekeeping, in ways of personal choice rather than of group determining.

Today, in the modern ways of living, time is divided into two units, one of which is work, the other diversion rather than play. As soon as work is over, or can be interrupted, the time is given over to diversion. Some persons work most of the time and some persons spend most of their time in diversions. The division of hours between these two things is uneven, but however divided, no waking time is left.

Spare Time.

While each of us should work part of our time, it is the matter of how we spend the rest of our time that is now coming under special consideration. There is a growing discontent that seems to bode good. Why should any of us be bound to do in time which is our own, what this or that group is doing because at the moment it is the popular thing? Can we have no evenings to ourselves? Must we fall in line with the wishes of friends? Must we do exactly as others are doing whether this means being with them, or simply doing such things as they do?

Home Diversions.

Shall the rare pleasures of home be invaded? Or shall we decide to spend some quiet evenings in reading favorite books or delving into those new ones we realize would be liked? Shall we have time to devote to needlecraft, to music, to studying some language, to pursuing some hobby or doing anything to enrich ourselves or to make something beautiful?

Enriching Diversions.

All these things are diversions from necessary work, but they are the sort that repay us by making life more worth living, and not the kinds that merely absorb attention for the time being, and leave us depleted rather than replenished.

WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER

Arthur G. Dubuc, who called himself "the fighting Frenchman" from the Wolverine or just "French" to his fellow workers, told the committee, among other things, that the widespread activities of the detective agency made it extremely hard to know whom to trust. The Frenchman said he solved his problems by being "a lone wolf" and keeping a jump ahead of his detective employers.

Wings Over The Ocean
Provision for a trans-Atlantic air-mail service that may be started next November was included in the appropriation approved by the House of Representatives for the Treasury and Post Office departments. The trans-oceanic project received an appropriation of $750,000. The entire appropriation bill calls for an allotment of almost $3,000,000,000 with about half of this amount necessary for the public debt purposes.

War Profits
General Hugh Johnson, the first NRA boss, told a Senate Committee that any legislation to take the profits of war should be drawn on very general terms. He explained that legislation drafted during peaceful times might be too specific and might prove a stumbling block to necessary measures during war.

House Program
The schedule for the current week in the House of Representatives includes a brief meeting Monday with the reading of Washington's Farewell Address. On Tuesday the local issues pertaining to the District of Columbia are scheduled. On Wednesday the bills previously approved by Committees will be listed on the Calendar and on Thursday the House begins consideration of the Navy Department Appropriation Bill with the same Bill on the Friday Calendar.

THE BOOK THAT UPSET THIS VILLAGE

Mr. Jennings, with the aid of his sons, undertook the release of the pent up myriads of articles which crammed the boxes, many of which though ranked when they were put in as absolutely essential, seemed ridiculously superfluous when they came out. "What on earth's them gimcracks for?" said my lady, as a nest of delicate gossamer tables were set out upon the uneven floor. I tried to explain to her the various convenient uses to which they were applicable, but she looked very scornfully at all and said: "I guess they'll do better for kindling than anything else."

...yet to learn in Michigan as soon as a man marries he becomes "the old man" though he may yet be in his minority. Not long since I gave a young bride the how d'ye do in being, and the reply was "I'm pretty well, but my old man's sick-a-bed".

The Montacute mill was now in progress, and had grown (on paper) in a short time from a story and a half to a four stories; its capabilities of all sorts being proportionably increased. The tavern was equally fortunate for Mr. Mazard had undertaken its erection entirely on his account, as a matter of speculation, feeling, he said, quite certain of selling it for double its cost whenever he should wish. The product of the public house was the product of his cunning brain, and exhibited congenial intricacies; while the windows resembled his own eyes in being placed too near together and looking all manner of ways. I have since learned that a plane, a chisel and two dollars a day make a carpenter in Michigan.

Millwrights too are remarkably abundant; but I have never been able to discover any essential difference between them and the carpenters, except that they receive three dollars per diem, which no doubt creates a distinction in life.

Our millwright was a little round-headed fellow with a button nose, a very Adonis in his own eyes, and most aptly named Puffer, since never did a more consequential dignitary condescend to follow a base mechanical calling.

Several lots had already been purchased in Montacute and some improvements marked each succeeding day. The mill had grown to its full stature, the dam was nearly completed; the tavern began to exhibit promise of its present ugliness and all seemed prosperous as our best dreams, when certain rumors were set afloat touching upon the solvency of our disinterested friend Mr. Mazard.

Mr. Clavers did not return until late in the evening and then I learned that Mr. Mazard had been getting large quantities of lumber and other materials on his account, and as his agent; and that the money which had been placed in the agent's hands for the purchase of certain lands to be flowed by the mill pond, had gone into government coffers in payment for sundry acre lots, which were intended for him, Mr. Mazard's private behoof and benefit.

The results were most unpleasant to us. Mr. Clavers found himself involved to a large amount; and his only remedy seemed to prosecute Mr. Mazard. (But Mr. Mazard had made a clean get away, and Mr. Clavers gave up in disgust, finally concluding to pay whatever bills had been created.)

I had the pleasure of receiving early in the month of September, a visit from a young city friend, a charming lively girl, who unaffectedly enjoyed the pleasures of the country and whose taste for long walks and rides was insatiable. One morning as we sat sewing, she ran in with a prodigious snake story, to which we were obliged to listen.

"A most beautiful snake" he declared, was "coming up to the back door".

To the back door we ran; and there sure enough was a large rattlesnake, or massasauga, lazily winding its course towards the house.

My young friend snatched up a long switch whose ordinary office was to warn the chickens from the dinner table, and struck the reptile, which was not three feet from the door. It reared its head at once, made several attempts to strike, or spring as it is called here, though it never really springs. Fanny continued to strike, and at length the snake turned for flight; both however without a battle for at least two minutes.

"Here's the axe, cousin Fanny," said Arthur, "don't let him run away and while I stood, in silent terror, the brace girl followed, struck once ineffectually, and with another blow divided the snake, whose writhings turned to the sun as many hues as the windings of Broadway on a spring morning and Fanny was a heroine."

(As time went on the Clavers family was visited with "fever and ague.")

King's Daughters

Thursday, February 18, 1937, members and guests of the county board of the Livingston branch of King's Daughters and sons held a very delightful luncheon at the Smith Hotel in Stockbridge. A business meeting followed at the home of Mrs. Emmett Berry, president of the Stockbridge circle. This was conducted by Mrs. Paul Kingsley, president.

Miss Green, the county nurse, was present and gave a general outline of the way in which the order can co-operate with her for bettering health conditions. A lay committee composed of all circle presidents, has charge of this, and will meet with Miss Green Nov. 5 in Howell to plan a definite program.

All senior and junior circles were represented. After the new members were introduced, the president discussed the year's program of work in connection with budgets, Convalescent Fund, Sale of Bonds for Crippled children and other projects of the order.

The circle presidents gave reports of the work being done in their respective circles. These were very interesting and proved beyond a doubt that the hundreds of King's Daughters throughout the county were faithful to their pledge to serve the community. The very best for the community was the very best for the community.

A UNIVERSAL DESIRE
The profession of funeral directing was developed as a response to the universal desire to pay all possible respect to the remains of those who have passed on. The modern funeral director is a man of specialized training and long practical experience.

His function is to give necessary counsel and advice, as well as actual service to those bereaved. The members of this organization are fully prepared to serve in such a manner.

The Five Hundred Club enjoyed a one o'clock pot-luck luncheon at the home of Mrs. C. E. Burdick in Lakeland, Monday afternoon, the occasion being a pleasant surprise for Mrs. Burdick. The afternoon was spent in cards, Mrs. L. H. Metzgar receiving first prize, Mrs. Burdick, second and Mrs. Elmer Stoffet, consolation.

THE SUPREME COURT MATTER
Unavoidably the President's most conspicuous opponents in this matter are conservatives. It was no more to be expected that Herbert Hoover would agree to the scheme for "packing" the Court than that John W. Davis would. The opposition of such men to the plan doubtless is of the highest moral order. Yet the country knows that, to them, the legislation which the President hopes to constitutionalize by his plan is scarcely less abhorrent than the plan itself. This is true in general with the press; the press, with few exceptions, is opposing the Supreme Court plan, but it also opposed the President before this plan was heard of.—The Detroit News.

If any publicity man of standing hasn't a job these stirring days, it comes pretty close to being his own fault. There's wide open and lucrative field for the boys who know their stuff organizing protests against F. D. R.'s supreme court proposal.

The Liberty Leaguers and other big-time conservatives who lost the election are bending every energy to recoup now. It is a golden opportunity to cash in on the most emotional issue the new deal has produced. But this time the big fellows are keeping out of sniping range and using their money to promote the most wide-spread and vigorous popular reaction that can possibly be mustered.

Town meetings, committees of protest, vigilante organizations, every type of patriotic society fit into the pattern. The more the merrier, so long as the protests appear on the surface to be the spontaneous outburst of average citizens. And undoubtedly an overwhelming majority of the protestants sincerely believe that constitutional liberties are threatened. But it takes professional skill, experience and cash to organize "spontaneous outbursts" on any such nation-wide scale of this.
