Never fasten suspenders below the reinforced hems of stockings. Wash stockings with lukewarm lather and squeeze out gently—they'll ladder if they are wrung.

A pinch of alum added to the water when washing blue or green articles of clothing will prevent the colors from running.

Two or three slices of bacon placed on top of a liver loaf during baking adds to the flavor.

Don't use any kind of artificial heat for drying stockings. Hang by the toes in an airy place to dry and don't fold away damp.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington. — I suppose most members of congress will deny it, but there certainly is every evidence of an agreement, an understanding, to let President Roosevelt's radical court reform legislation stew until the country is heard from. There is no doubt in my mind nor in the minds of other observers here that representatives and senators are anxiously awaiting word from their constituents because if any issue ever was loaded with political dynamite, the plan to pack the Supreme court of the United States with six additional judges surely contains highly explosive elements.

The facts I have mentioned in the above paragraph explain largely why there are so many senators and house members who remain non-committal on the issue. They want to know which way to jump. Actually, I believe as many as half of them are going to try to determine which band wagon they ought to ride—whether they ought to go against the President or for him. In other words, the spot they are now on is not nearly so hot as the one upon which they may find themselves if they guess wrong at this time. No politician will ever jump from the frying pan into the fire knowingly.

In the meantime, the debate rages. Out and out supporters of President Roosevelt, the kind of men who follow him blindly because he is their leader, and the extreme opposition type who are against the President regardless of his position are battling for public attention. The radio is being used to an extent as great, if not greater, than occurred in the last campaign. Those who are committed for or against the President's reform proposition are anxious to sustain their positions and the remainder of the national legislature is egging on the more bold members in order that those who have not made up their minds can take advantage of word from back home.

In the meantime, as well, there are proposals and counter-proposals seeking a compromise. Few of them have any definite merit. Most of them, I believe, are purely and solely representative of floundering minds. Their sponsors entertain hopes that somehow, somewhere they will gain a streak of light that will guide them through to a proper answer politically.

There has been only one plan for giving the federal government more power that can possibly be described as sound. That is the original proposition by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader of the senate, who announced early in the session of congress that he favored an amendment to the Constitution. While Senator Robinson did not then say so, nor has he said so since, the truth is that he and many others would like to see the people of the country have an opportunity to pass upon any program that would change the country's judiciary. The President regards this method as too slow. He thinks that any changes which he desires ought to be made at once and holds that the tremendous majority by which he is re-elected gives him authority to do so. Yet, as the picture now stands, there is every prospect of considerable delay and from the way I analyze the circumstances, delay will provide the vast majority of voters with an opportunity for determination of the question which is vital in this case: Does the country want to keep an independent system of courts or does it want to establish a precedent by which this administration or any other administration can influence those courts to do the bidding of the nation's Chief Executive?

Through many years and in every year there has been constant criticism of congress for delay in reaching conclusions. It is fortunate, in my opinion, that these delays constitute a part of our governmental system. They allow time for cooling off.

I think it will be generally agreed that every time legislation is rushed through congress ahead or as part of an emotional wave among citizens, there has invariably resulted unworkable, if not entirely unsound, statutes. Such is bound to be the result when men and women fail to think things through—when they fail to examine all of the phases of any problem.

President Roosevelt moved quickly, and I believe sincerely, in proposing the NRA and the farm relief plan under the agricultural adjustment administration. Yet, neither of these reform measures stood the test of workability; neither had been drafted upon a proper knowledge of the ends they were to serve and neither did justice to all of the people. It was only natural, therefore, that they should fall by the wayside.

These two laws are cited because they are the outstanding examples of emotional legislation. There are many others, most of them not as bad. But lately one offshoot of the NRA has arisen to plague the administration. I refer to the so-called Walsh-Healey law.

In order to refresh memories, let me explain that the Walsh-Healey law prohibits the federal government from buying products of mills or factories, or any fruit of labor, unless the supplying contractor has complied with the same minimum hours and wages that were a part of the old NRA codes. Unless the contractor agrees to produce the material which the federal government is buying in accordance with those terms, his bid must be rejected under the law.

When the Walsh-Healey law was passed, there were comments heard in several quarters that the time would come when the government itself would regret the legislation. That time has arrived.

Everyone is aware, of course, that Great Britain has started on a naval building program under which it will expend approximately seven and a half billion dollars in the next five years. American policy always has called for matching the British navy ship by ship. Fifteen years ago when the Harding disarmament program was written into treaty form, we destroyed ships so that our tonnage was the same as that of Great Britain. Now, with the world in a turmoil, with Great Britain announcing an unprecedented building program in order to protect its vast colonies and dominion from aggression, the need arises for a building up of our navy again. At least that is Mr. Roosevelt's view and he has wide support for it.

To build up the navy requires vast amounts of steel and other products of industry. Much of the naval building will be done in the navy's own yards. Thus, it has come to pass that the navy has been unable to obtain steel and other equipment since the manufacturers of the needed equipment are not willing to subject themselves to the terms of the Walsh-Healey law. In some instances where the navy has sought to buy material, the manufacturers have refused even to make an offer or state a price at which they would sell the required material and there is a very real possibility that unless the Walsh-Healey law is repealed or dodged, our navy building program may have to come to a halt.

The reason for this condition is that the Walsh-Healey law, with its prescription on minimum hours of labor and wages would place a burden on industry that it cannot bear and return its cost of production. The government, as a buyer, is a tough customer in any event. Its specifications are always more difficult than is the practice in industry. Add to that, then, the requirement that men may work only 30 hours a week and that their pay shall not be reduced from the rate of their compensation when they were working 40 hours a week and you have burdened any manufacturing establishment with a load that will break its back.

Right now, the Navy department is trying to find a way to get around the provisions of the Walsh-Healey law. President Roosevelt has said nothing publicly concerning his attitude but there are many who believe he himself feels the law is not working out the way it was intended. It is quite a distance, of course, from the Walsh-Healey law to the present controversy under Mr. Roosevelt's plan to pack the Supreme court with six new judges if one stops his examination of the two questions at the surface. It is not difficult, however, to see a direct connection. The Walsh-Healey law was driven through congress in haste. The bad effects of it are coming now two years after its enactment. If the Supreme court reform proposal is driven through as quickly and with as little examination as the Walsh-Healey law, we will reap the reward sooner or later and probably for many years to come.

"Gnu" of Hottentot Origin
The name "gnu" is of Hottentot origin, and was in use by natives when white settlers first went to South Africa. The name "wildbeest" is a Dutch word meaning wild ox, and probably originated on account of the animal's habit of prancing and capering in antics suggesting those of a bull enraged by torments in a Spanish arena. It is said that the Boers, in early days, found that a red cloth excited these antelopes and was frequently used in hunting them. In addition to the white-tailed gnu, there is a species known as the brindled gnu or blue wildebeest, which is abundant in East-central Africa. Gnus have disproportionately large heads which give them a grotesque appearance. They have maned necks and distinctive tufts of hair on their faces. The bulls stand about four feet tall at the shoulders. The general color of the white-tailed species is a deep brown. Their horns are formidable weapons and under certain conditions the animals are dangerous.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Vicksburg—A White Rock pullet, owned by W. C. Burt, has produced an egg weighing a quarter of a pound and measuring four inches from end to end.

Grand Rapids—An apple a day is the key note of a proposed six-week newspaper advertising campaign to be carried out here by the Michigan Apple Institute, Inc., to determine the value of such tactics in making consumers fruit conscious.

Kalamazoo — Proving how the passing of the years and the dawn of a new era can effect a famous name, records of the National Re-employment Service show that 13 persons under the name of George Washington in Michigan are on the federal job-seeking list.

Sparta — Michigan's most novel farm is owned by Phil Klenk here. It seems that 50 years ago, when Klenk was a boy, he sat on a three-legged stool milking a Jersey cow, vowing to have a farm with no cows when he grew up. Today, with his two sons, he has a 300-acre fruit farm, and there are no cows!

Grant—Residents and neighboring farmers are joining together in a chorus of "Happy days are here again," as this great onion-producing center celebrates a new prosperity that has come with booming onion prices. Wealth has been brought by a jump from 60 cents to $2.50 per hundredweight for onions within a period of a few weeks.

Kalamazoo — Depression years with their sharp curtailment of enrollment in teachers' colleges has brought Michigan face to face with a shortage of teachers, which is certain to grow more serious, says Frank E. Ellsworth, director of the Training School of Western State Teachers College. Low salaries paid teaching staffs is given as the main reason.

Lansing — With the first tender green shoots of spring peeping above the good earth, Michigan's Secretary of State becomes 1938 license plate conscious. Following a spring motif, next year's plates will be black letters on a green background. Under an agreement between mid-west states, Michigan was given first choice of license plate colors for 1938.

Lake Orion — What is probably this district's best selling argument on the joys and beauties of Lake Orion as a vacation spot is that 15 years ago Max Wichman, a former factory worker, came to see, remained to live. Originally here vacationing, he liked the community. In this time he has established a profitable business, and has pioneered civic enterprises and improvements.

Cassopolis—Civil War and underground slave railroad days were recalled by old-time residents here last summer when swimmers sighted a wagon used by the Bourbon County Kentuckians in the famous Kentucky raid during the winter of 1846-47. The wagon is under 100 feet of water in Birch Lake. Now, plans are afoot to recover it for the Cass County Historical Museum in Stone Lake Park.

Allegan—With a mark in American history as a good general town, Allegan has a simple explanation of it all. In Civil War days, this county had a population of but a few thousand, but two men, Benjamin D. Pritchard and Elisha Mix left to join Union forces, each with the title of major. As the war progressed, by virtue of their valor and fine leadership, each of the men rose to the rank of general, bringing fame to their birthplace.

Ludington—As a rolling stone gathers no moss, so a rolling roll gleams no interest, according to Frank B. Morse of Sheridan Township. Sheridan drew $350 from a bank last November, intending to buy a trailer. Soon afterward he misplaced the money, gave it up for lost. He traded his old car for a new machine. The old car was turned over to a prospective buyer, who drove it for a few days, then took it back to the dealer, who saw a bulge under the floor mat, found the missing $350.

Jonesville — Pioneer temperance efforts were unearthed recently. It seems that Ashtaw, an Indian woman, gained fame by teaching the younger generation the evils of liquor. She would gather snake eggs, paint them bright colors. When they were ready to hatch, she would give them to the children. Joy turned to terror as the egg shells crumbled in their warm hands, leaving small wriggling reptiles. These, said Ashtaw, were but samples of the big snakes which would appear if they ever drank.

Fenton—A jest of fate, a game of chess among the gods of destiny and this community, which seemed certain to be one of the cradles of the automotive industry, saw the stream of motor car gold pass by. Fenton saw the birth of the Cyclecar, which could develop 13 horsepower from an air cooled, twin-cylinder motor. Farseeing townsmen could see the dawn of an era which would make Fenton a great manufacturing center. Fate will do otherwise, few cars were made and the company passed away.

Caro—"Death takes a holiday," is no fiction to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wells of this community. When this couple recently celebrated their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary, it was revealed that there had not been a death in the immediate family during that period. All told, there are six children, 41 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Centerville—A United States flag made before Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the Union was given to the White rural school, a mile south of Constantine by the county school commissioner, on behalf of Samuel Brenton Roberts, of Oakland, California. Roberts first attended the one-room school-house 77 years ago. The flag, which he valued highly, is three by five feet and has 46 stars.

Jackson—The problem of people who prefer either the white or the yolk of the egg, but not both, would be solved if Carl Van Arsdale could find a method of producing in quantity the Siamese egg; he was exhibiting recently. The egg, laid by a Buff Orpington hen, consists of two full-sized, soft-shelled eggs, joined together by a stem at the end of each. One contains the yolk and the other the white.

Detroit — "It has real cultural value," says Dr. Lew Saret, author and lecturer, commenting on Michigan's new educational entertainment, the "Pronounce-A-Down." Just the reverse of a spelling bee, this contest is drawing entries from every part of the state. The trick is that you pronounce the spelled word. With $1,000 in prizes, the finals will be run off at the Detroit and Michigan Exposition, April 2 to 11.

Ludington—This community has had a postoffice since 1884, but 17 years before that time a hollow in an old pine tree was used as a depository for letters. In 1847 the vessel Hooker left mail in the tree for two men who were making shingles several miles up the Pere Marquette River. At the same time the ship would pick up letters which the men had left there and take them to Grand Haven, the nearest postoffice.

Kalamazoo—When Lawrence Tetzlaff, 17 years old, enters the University of Michigan next fall, he will be able to thank his pet snakes for making such a move possible. During the past year Tetzlaff has given more than 100 lectures, appearing before audiences as large as 2,700. Luncheon clubs, schools and other groups in almost every community in southwestern Michigan have heard him. Scores of his pets have accompanied him around the state.

Portland—A story of a lost birthright was told here recently when Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hiar, born in Ionia County, found themselves without a country. Explanations follow that the couple went to Canada several years ago, and, in order to homestead land, had to renounce allegiance to the United States. Moving back to Portland later, election officials refused to permit them to vote and said the couple would probably be required to take out American citizenship papers.

Big Rapids—Possible railroad tycoons in the making are the group of local youths who own a model railroad. Recently they acquired a real depot from the Pere Marquette Railway, for the very nominal yearly rental of $1. The depot now houses 300 feet of track, an electric locomotive and several freight and passenger cars, all built to scale. The equipment represents an investment of $300 and additions are being planned to the railroad, which is exhibited to the public two days a week.

Alpena—Michigan's latest "bring 'em back alive" convert to the Frank Buck school is 17-year-old Theodore Reekstin. While roaming about the woods near Hubbard Lake, he found a thirty-five-pound wildcat caught in a muskrat trap. After some maneuvering, he freed the beast and brought thirty-five pounds of wild kitty on the hoof to his home. Father Reekstin, however, had other ideas. Taking a revolver in one hand and a club in the other, he dispatched the animal, to the relief of the family.

Pontiac—Solution of a problem which merits the attention of a modern Solomon faces the City Fathers here. It seems that a half-million dollar city hall site was bought when prices were at the peak in 1929. Today, the city hasn't the money for a new building and there are no immediate future prospects. To add further straws to the burden, this purchase removes thousands of dollars worth of property from the tax rolls. Revenue producing proposals are to use the land as a parking lot or trailer park.

Ann Arbor—Her Majesty regrets or, the Queen says no, could be the heading of the latest co-ed story from the University of Michigan's campus. It seems that plans were afoot to pick the prettiest girls from mid-western universities to sell tickets to a Chicago dance, and one of the girls was to be chosen beauty queen of the Big Ten and so on. All went well and Michigan's fairest co-ed was picked. University officials, however, failed to enthuse, so Michigan's Queen of the Campus withdrew.

The couple were attended by Miss Leah Thompson of Durand, Miss Gladys Gorton, Glenn Clements and Wirt Barton. Sidney Sprout played the wedding march. Mrs. W. Coffman of Romeo, sang "Oh Promise Me". Rev. C. L. Ellis performed the Methodist marriage ceremony. Both bride and groom are graduates of the Michigan State Normal. The groom taught music in Denver, Col., LaCrosse, Wis., and Hiawatha, Kan., schools. The bride has also taught music. The law suit of Wm. Doyle and Edward Spears vs. George Fuller came off before Justice Frost in the town hall last Friday. James Greene represented Messrs. Doyle and Spears and Bert Turnbull of Chelsea for Mr. Fuller. It seems that in the winter of 1911-12 cattle and sheep got onto the Rogers farm in Dexter township and damaged a stack of bean pods belonging to Messrs. Doyle and Spears which they had purchased of the tenant on the Rogers farm. $25 damages were sought. Justice Frost rendered a verdict for $18. There is some talk of appeal.

COUNTY FARM AGENTS LETTER

Beware of Cure-Alls

People are often misled by some vicious advertising scheme. Patented concoctions are offered for sale under the guise of curing all of the ailments common to the human race. Naturally this is a large assignment. In agriculture we find the same misuse of advertising. For instance we are offered a special potato fertilizer, a special oat fertilizer and special fertilizers for all other crops. These statements are incorrect. The fertilizers may be of great worth in some restricted areas when one soil type is prevalent, however on other soil types the fertilizer dollar for this special material is a waste as various soils like various diseases require different treatment. When buying commercial fertilizer for your coming needs buy on analysis instead of any special mixture so that you will know exactly what you are getting.

Tenancy

Better times for agriculture in Michigan may cut down the trend to more tenant farming that has occurred in the last 10 years, it was agreed in a recent conference at Michigan State College on the farm tenancy situation in the state. Forty persons including E. L. Anthony, dean of agriculture, Lawrence O'Neil of the state department of agriculture; C. V. Ballard, county agent leader; and E. B. Hill, head of the farm management department, attended the conference. Tenants said they wanted to own farms if credit was easier and security more apparent. Landlords and tenants agreed that instead of tenants moving to new farms each year, more financial benefit could be obtained by renter and owner and greater protection protection given farm fertility if longer term arrangements were affected. About 47 percent of Michigan's farm tenants move each year to new farms, according to a survey of 194,063 farms reported in the 1935 census.

Tractors Value Depends On Uses

Before and after the purchase of a tractor a farmer should figure out sufficient work for the machine to insure at least 75 to 100 days of work to make it a practical investment. Too many farmers forget that although a machine consumes no fuel while not in operation, the machine depreciates and becomes out of date.

In Livingston county the farmers are aware of the difference in cost of per mile operation for their automobiles, cutting down mile costs when more miles are driven annually. Too many of them still forget that efficiency in cost of operation also applies to tractors.

Two means of cutting these costs are suggested. One is to fit the tractor to the farm at the time of purchase of the machine. The other method is to use the machine on as many jobs as it is practical in time and labor saving.

To make these methods definitely profitable, attention must be paid to proper mechanical operation of the tractor in adjustments and repairs.

Overhead tractor costs are approximately 20 percent annually of the original cost of the tractor. This overhead includes depreciation, interest, insurance and repairs but does not include fuel and oil. Tractors operated 1,000 hours, a national survey shows, developed drawbar horsepower at a total cost of approximately six cents per horsepower; 200 hours, approximately 10 cents.

IMPROVING MICHIGAN ROADSIDES

III. A SURVEY FINDINGS

Many interesting facts were disclosed during a recent study of Michigan roadside conditions. Michigan makes no effort, no attempt to control the use of highways for advertising purposes by means of signs erected on adjacent property. No state permit is required for such signs. No set back from the highway is demanded. And this contrary to the recommendations previously stated, by one of the highest highway authorities, "absolute control of the highway right-of-way and all its appurtenances should be vested in the highway authority." That is only common sense.

There are certain highways of the state which offer illustrations of the effort to combine beauty and utility. The highway from Saginaw to Bay City along the Saginaw river and the new Dunce's highway from Benton Harbor to South Haven are examples.

Those two highways serve to illustrate, nuisances which follow the road, mainly advertising is taking a stronger hold than many realize. As you go north from South Haven motorists find their attention begins to slip away from safe driving and scenery for signs begin appearing at the rate of six to the mile between South Haven and Douglas and 14 to the mile between Saugatuck and Holland. This means passing a sign on the average of every six seconds. No scenery can hope to cope with such distraction.

High Average Per Mile

Go on farther north where the distance between towns is greater and on the 40 miles of rural roads between Whitehall and Ludington the signs average nine to the mile. From Traverse City to Charlevoix the average drops to four but from Charlevoix to Petoskey the average is eight signs to the mile.

There is an average of 10 signs per mile from Petoskey north to Harbor Springs and on the longer distance from Petoskey to Mackinaw the average is eight.

Holland with its attractive south entrance along the shores of Black Lake is clouded with 27 signs on two miles. Manistee has nearly achieved an attractive entrance on the south with its park and woods and glimpses of blue water but allows a bunch of poster panels and a string of small signs to spoil it.

Petoskey's south approach along the waters of Little Traverse Bay is lined with 42 on the last two miles. As you cross the city line you see for three tenths of a mile what the approach might be for a well kept country fair grounds on one side and a cemetery on the other give an orderly appearance. But just beyond the posters take possession again, five of them hiding the lake. The first mile north of Petoskey welcomes you with 42 signs, within 85 seconds.

The South approach to Traverse City flaunts 25 billboards on two miles. The north approach was equally bad with 23 signs on two miles. The approaches to Kalamazoo are exceptionally infested with signs, for eight miles on the West, signs average 10 to the mile, one-half mile being flanked by 18 billboards. A two mile approach by US-131 showed 17 boards to the mile, one every five seconds.

Lansing An Offender

Jackson for five miles on S. R. 50, averaged 9 signs a mile, for three miles on US-12, 23 to the mile. Approaching on US-127 Jackson has a pleasing entrance but the moment Ella Sharp park is passed 14 signs show up in a half mile.

Entering Lansing from Holt on the South 50 signs in three miles can be seen. The approach from the East on US-16 is being landscaped by the highway department but on two and a half miles through rural territory, 74 signs glare their messages.

From Grand Rapids to Muskegon Heights there are 10 signs to the mile, from Battle Creek to Marshall on US-12 16; from Marshall to Albion, 9; from Albion to Jackson, 12; from Coldwater to Somerset, 10; with 67 on the first three miles east of Coldwater; from Lawrence to Benton Harbor the average is eight signs per mile.

Signs on places of business are not included. Such conditions will grow worse and offset all effort to improve Michigan roadsides. What responsible national organizations think is to follow.

EDITORS NOTE: This is the third of a series of articles prepared by the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan.

CONSERVATION DEPT. NOTES

The idle acres of northern Michigan which were considered liabilities 20 years ago, are now being recognized as assets. Denuded of timber they were allowed to grow up to jack-pine and scrub oak. Now a process has been found to make paper stock out of jack-pine and the scrub oak is now recognized as having value as scenic wilderness.

Although Michigan has more forest fires than Wisconsin or Minnesota her loss is much less. Last year Michigan had 2,556 fires, Wisconsin 2,208 and Minnesota 2,118, yet Michigan only lost 56,560 acres of forest while Wisconsin lost 276,400 and Minnesota 100,818.

Under the terms of the federal conservation program farmers are encouraged to plant and protect trees for use as a windbreak or shelter. They may receive $10 per acre for dry land and $7.50 for other types. In guarding the hatchery ponds from attacks from predatory animals attendants were forced to kill 256 watersnakes and 178 snapping turtles.

So far this year 130 sportsmen have been arrested for law violation. 28 were for illegal fishing, 45 illegal hunting, 19 for illegal trapping. In only 2 cases did the state fail to obtain convictions.

So far the state of Michigan has received $110,000 for leases on state lands where oil well drilling is in progress. If oil is found it will also receive 25 percent in royalties.

With the smelt fishing season almost here fishermen are reminded that a 50c license is necessary to take smelt.

Running bobcats with dogs is proving a popular winter sport. Bobcat pelts bring a $5 bounty.

The area of the lower peninsula of Michigan, 41,300 square miles, is equal to the respective areas of any one of five states, Ohio, Indiana, Virginia, Kentucky or Tennessee.

Michigan's iron and copper mines have an appraised value of approximately $67,000,000. The state geological survey which makes the appraisals for the state tax commission has placed a valuation of $59,281,000 on the iron mines and mineral properties and $7,910,000 on the copper properties.

Michigan produces more salt than any other state in the union.

TUBERCULOSIS SEAL SALES

For selling more tuberculosis Christmas seals per capita than any other rural school enrollment in Livingston county, children at the Green Oak school were this week awarded a fascinating game called "Little America", by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association. The prize was sent to the children through Christine Killmer, teacher at the Green Oak school and under whose direction the sale was conducted.

Second place honors and a handsome cut wall mirror were won by the children at the Pettysville school. Gwendolyn Niles is the teacher there who had charge of the sale.

Congratulations of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association were expressed to both Livingston County schools by Theodore J. Werle, executive secretary of the Association. Mr. Werle declared that the part of the school children in the recent Christmas seal sale was an inspirational one.

"The children and teachers too are indeed to be congratulated," said Mr. Werle. "The victory is particularly significant because of the fact that the total sale in the majority of rural schools increased so substantially this year. To win meant out-selling the field in one of the best Christmas seal sales Michigan has had since the start of the recent depression."

"Although it is possible to award prizes to only first and second place schools the Association is equally grateful to the many other rural schools in Livingston county and the rest of the state for their part in the thirtieth annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals. Without their participation an increase over the sale of a year ago could never have been realized."

Timely warnings and appeals may not always be heeded. They should be. It is much better to do that than to later on play of sympathy.

A workman invites trouble by ignoring a nail protruding out of a board. He steps on the nail, gets a serious infection and is laid up in a hospital for a long time.

Instead of sympathizing with him and sending him flowers and otherwise showing our feelings, it would be much better to write him a brief note calling attention to his carelessness.

This might not be such a gracious gesture, but it is a very practical one. Let him think about his carelessness while he is lying on a cot in a hospital and meditating the loss of time and money.

Less sympathy, more practical common sense.

SHOWS PRESENCE OF MIND

Last Monday, James Lamb, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ford Lamb of Pinckney struck a 2 year old girl, Beatrice Glaser on West Fort St., Detroit. The girl who suddenly jumped in front of the car was hit by one of the fenders. James put on the brakes, jumped out and caught the girl and took her to Receiving Hospital where she proved to be uninjured. He was given much praise by the authorities for his gallantry.

NEW TITLE FORMS PLANNED BY CASE

A revision of the form of title and the mechanics of the new on all motor vehicles, being studied by Leon Case, Registrar of the State, and other officials of the State, & will be in effect in the near future.

for presentation to the current session of the Legislature is being prepared.

The plan under consideration would completely eliminate the recording of chattel mortgages on automobiles with register of deeds, and cause every such mortgage to be recorded only with the Secretary of State. The object of the proposed plan would be to further protect all persons owning or dealing in motor vehicles.

At present, it is pointed out, there is no formal method by which the discharge of a lien on an automobile at time of purchase, may later be recorded on the original title. A new title can be issued, but almost no automobile owners avail themselves of this possibility. Further, persons claiming to have lost their titles may at present secure new ones without original liens noted on them.

Under the proposed plan, no automobile lien would be considered valid until recorded with the Secretary of State, and no discharge of a lien would have legal standing without similar recording.

The form of motor vehicle titles would be changed so as to accommodate easily noted records of title transfers, liens and lien discharges, across the face thereof. All recordings of such data would be filed in the Department of State in the form of photostatic copies of titles.

COEDS FIND NEED FOR SOCIAL POISE

Lessons learned in social gatherings can be as valuable as those obtained in books and classrooms, it has been decided by a group of women students at Michigan State College.

For social poise and the ability to converse and associate with old friends, new acquaintances and strangers are necessary to be happy, the girls decided. Obstacles to this poise, the coeds agreed, are lack of knowledge of how to meet social situations and self-consciousness or the trait of being self-centered.

What to do with one's wraps, what to say to the hostess, should one sneak to other guests who have not been introduced? These are some of the questions that puzzle.

These girls at Michigan State College held the discussion in one of the home management houses at the college, says Irma H. Gross, professor in home management.

From out of the discussion came a statement about shyness that many women can analyze and apply to themselves. Shyness is even worse than most persons realize, for it is due at least in part to being more interested in self than in other persons.

What to do with these problems of social poise? Professor Gross recommends that one can learn much of what to do by watching others who seem to have the faculty of being proper and at ease in social gatherings. Books offer information on proper social customs. In addition to what is in the library, the confidence of some better informed friend can be utilized to get the proper answer to some specific question.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Temple of Howell called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Frye Friday night.

FLOOD RELIEF CONTRIBUTIONS

A report of the contributions for Flood Relief from this county by townships, is given here.

As far as possible, these contributions have been tabulated by townships, but many came in without names, others with no means of identification, that is township identification. These are listed as unclassified. This report, of course, does not include the food, clothing and bedding, both new and used, which was so liberally given by people throughout the county. Four large trucks of this were taken directly to the Flood Area during the first week.

Livingston County Chapter, American Red Cross, has been highly commended by the National Red Cross for the very generous response of all the communities, and the executive committee desires to thank all those who worked so faithfully that these results might be accomplished.

Courage of the Heart

Fortitude is the sentinel and guardian virtue; without it all other virtues are in peril. Daring is inborn, and often born blind. But fortitude is implanted, nurtured, unfolded in the school of life. I praise the marvelous courage of the human heart, enduring evils, facing perplexities, overcoming obstacles, rising after a hundred falls, building up what gravity pulls down, toiling at tasks never finished, relighting extinguished fires, and hoping all things.—Van Dyke.

"WHY DO I FEEL THIS?"

SO much trouble is caused by chronic constipation! Headaches, upset digestion, nervousness, lack of pep are frequently caused by poisonous wastes that accumulate in the bowels. Too often people merely use some temporary relief. See for yourself if it doesn't make a world of difference in the way you feel after using a purely vegetable laxative. Give a thorough trial to Nature's Remedy (N.R. Tablets). Note how gentle they are—and non-habit forming. Get a 25c box containing 25 tablets, at any drugstore.

FRIDAY—Continued

I don't know whether the lights were with me or against me on the trip home. All I know is that I didn't stop for anything. Some of our Satuit traffic policemen, however, are silent and in the morning our side roads are empty. I have an idea that I sped through red lights as casually as through green.

Perhaps Sarah Darbe knows the sound of my machine. At any rate she is always at the door to help me out, to gather up my bundles and to give me the telephone messages that have accumulated during my absence. She saw at once that something had happened and I saw that she saw. But she asked no questions, made no comment. I volunteered nothing, but I clung to her as we walked through the hall and across the floor of my living-room to the door leading onto the piazza.

There I was confronted by a strange picture.

Seated in one of the hammocks were Caro and Hopestill. They sat close, bolt upright, her hand clasped tightly in his. They were looking straight ahead. It was obvious that they had not heard the car or my footsteps.

They started apart and then their hands came together again—clasped. I tottered through the door. They saw at once that something cataclysmic had happened. They leaped to their feet, hurried toward me.

"What is it, Aunt Mary?" Hopestill asked. "Dear Mrs. Avery!" Caro quavered, "what has happened?"

"Some water, Sarah!" Sarah appeared with a glass of water. I drank it to the last drop. "Listen, both of you—and listen, Sarah!" Even I myself caught the strange hollow resonance of my voice. "And don't tell anybody yet! I have just come from Bruce Hexson's camp. He shot himself just as I got there. He's dead. He killed Ace Blaikie. He's left a confession."

For an instant Hopestill said nothing. Then "Great God!" he muttered.

Caro burst into tears. "Oh how horrible!" she exclaimed. "How horrible!" Her voice rounded and deepened with her emotion. But as she went on repeating, "Horrible! Horrible! Horrible!" that emotion went out of her voice and another came in its place—relief. "Oh as long as it had to come out, dear Mrs. Avery, I'm glad that it has come out now. For how I suffered all night long! I have been so afraid that they would arrest my grandfather. Grandfather told me the whole story last night. I know now that my real name is Caroline Blaikie and that I'm Ace Blaikie's daughter, but I cannot realize it yet. I have scarcely thought about it, for last night grandfather told me that I must be prepared at any moment for his arrest. He was so exhausted that he went straight to bed. I asked him if I could tell Hopestill and he said that I could. We've been talking it over this whole morning long. We could see no way out—but what a comfort Hopestill's been to me. And now in an instant everything is changed. Grandfather is out of all danger. But this is horribly selfish—Why did Bruce Hexson kill—my father?"

"I know no more about it than you do, my dear child," I answered. "We shall all know soon, however."

"I can wait," Caro commented in a kind of dreamy apathy. "I want to feel for awhile this release from that awful strain."

"Take her for a drive, Hopestill," I begged.

For myself, I went upstairs to my room. I have a vague recollection that Sarah Darbe helped me to undress. When I sank into the cool sheets, the mid-day sun was flaring in the blue sky. And then nature, reinforced by this second horrifying shock, proceeded to take her toll. I sank immediately into a coma so thick—it was though I had been knocked on the head, chloroformed. . . . At any rate I did not open my eyes until the morning sun was streaming in to the room.

Bruce Hexson's confession lies before me as I write. But not his confession as I shall set it forth here. It is on first sight a curious, insane document. He had poured it out in one night, writing against time. I had read it—and cried over it—again and again before I saw in it two entities. One is the sane Bruce Hexson, trying illogically to justify from the Old Testament what the sane Bruce Hexson would never have justified—sending an unrepentant man into the presence of his Maker, sending himself to his Maker with blood on his hands. Here, I am quoting phrases in the confession itself. All these passages have what my husband used to call the rhythm of insanity. Some are nearly unintelligible, some grotesquely incoherent. Once, he has covered a page with strange diagrams or drawings, with the Ark of Covenant and Solomon's temple in the center.

But when he is dealing with events, and especially when he is trying to produce that effect which is the purpose of this document, he becomes Bruce Hexson the logical, observing lawyer. In my pity for the poor, tortured soul, I cannot bring myself to make public even a single example of the insane mood. But here are those perfectly sane or relatively sane passages which I consider significant. Some I give word for word as he wrote them. Some I have edited a trifle, or even rewritten.

"I killed Ace Blaikie. He was my friend—and I killed him. I loved him as I have never loved another man—and I killed him. We were tied together by a thousand associations of war, peace, fighting together, drinking together, traveling together, playing together—battles, sports, restaurants, dances. Yet I killed him."

"I met Ace Blaikie for the first time in 1914. Like him, the moment war was declared I sailed for France. I volunteered to run an ambulance for the French army. I met him when I was clearing the wounded for the Foreign Legion. We became close friends at once; we have been close friends ever since. There was also a professional tie. I became his lawyer. We have been much together ever since our first meeting."

"In 1914 we both met at a hospital at Coucy-sur-Seine, a young girl—Eleanor Dacre. I did not know her as Eleanor Dacre or even as Eleanor. Everybody in the hospital called her 'Sister Dora' and both Ace and I followed the habit. Indeed when last Friday afternoon I heard her stepfather refer to her as Eleanor, I realized that I had entirely forgotten what her real name was."

"Sister Dora was the most beautiful woman I have ever seen in my life. She was the best woman I have ever known in my life. I fell in love with her the instant I looked at her. From that moment, no other woman has ever entered my heart. She did not love me. I realized very soon that she would never love me. In all the time I knew her, I never even hinted at my love. She may have suspected it, but no word of hers ever suggested to me that she did. It may be that she did not know, for from the time she met him—I learned last Friday—she was in love with Ace Blaikie. I did not guess that Ace Blaikie was in love with her. Naturally, our Paris permissions did not always coincide, so we did not often see her together. I never suspected that, when he was on permission, Ace spent virtually all his time with Sister Dora."

"I remember very well the last time I saw her. But that is a precious memory and has no place in this confession. The next thing I knew of her was that she had gone to southern France. She came back to Paris, but left immediately for Spain. I did not see her then. I never saw her again."

"Suddenly I got through friends the news of her death in Spain."

"It is impossible for me to tell in the haste in which I am writing, and with the inadequate powers of expression at my command what her death did to me. For several weeks, I was not myself. Indeed, I may say that I have never been the same man since. This I managed to conceal from my friends. If I had been free, I would have gone at once into retirement. I think I would have joined some brotherhood or other; retired to some remote monastery. But we were in a war and I was fighting in it. However, I found one comfort—the Bible. I had promised my mother that I would always carry her Bible with me. Now I began to read it. I read it through. Since then I have read it through many times. At first it gave me only comfort. My comfort came—not from the New Testament—from the Old Testament. Presently, but this was several years after Dora's death, I saw the Light."

Here followed a rather long, rambling and insanely illogical account of his conversion. I do not quote it, for it bears only indirectly on Ace Blaikie's murder. I have read Bruce Hexson's confession of faith many times, but I always get lost in the erraticism and disassociation of his expression. In brief, I gathered that once while reading the Old Testament a great Light—he always begins it with a capital—suddenly burned in his mind. He found that that Light was religion—a religion compact of ideas gleaned from the Psalms, Job, Jeremiah, and Isaiah.

"The Light changed my whole life. I became an entirely different man. I eschewed all my former pleasures—drinking, dancing, theater-going, I might say, social diversion of every kind. First I retired from an active professional life, then I retired from the world. "I retired from the world and I eschewed all my former enjoyment. One thing I clung to—that was my friendship with Ace Blaikie. I loved Ace. I loved him for himself. But I loved him for another thing. He was inextricably connected in my mind with Sister Dora. He was extremely fascinating—what with his virility, his zest for life and his joy in it, his great generosity and kindness. Of course I knew that he was a weak man. I did not know that he had become a wicked man."

"This brings me to the morning of last Friday—the day I killed Ace Blaikie. He had invited Doctor Marden and me to an early luncheon and to play golf with him. We played nine holes—and then suddenly he suggested that we call on Mrs. Avery. We arrived there a little after two o'clock. Miss Eames and Miss Prentiss were there. We left at about three. I dropped Doctor Marden at his home on Second Head; brought Ace home and then drove home myself."

"I think I had not been at home more than fifteen minutes when Doctor Marden called me up on the telephone. He said that he had a matter of great importance to talk over with me and asked if he might come to the Camp at once. Of course I said yes. He arrived as soon as his car could bring him. And he told me—"

Here followed in detail the whole story that Doctor Marden had told Patrick and me. This was Bruce Hexson's comment:

"I have never experienced such a cataclysm since the day I learned of Sister Dora's death. It was as though a tornado had been loosed inside my head—a tornado with the extra fury of flame. It swept and swirled. And yet outwardly, I remained perfectly calm. I told Doctor Marden that I had known Sister Dora. I did not tell him that I loved her. I told him only that I had admired and revered her. Doctor Marden told me that Ace Blaikie was trying to make Miss Eames elope with him. There was no time to be lost. I advised him to go to Ace Blaikie and tell him the whole story. He asked me if I would accompany him and I agreed to do so."

"It happened fortunately that Ace had not left the house. In my presence, Doctor Marden told Ace exactly what he had told me. I think this was the first time in my life that I ever saw Ace Blaikie 'rocked'—as men put it. Before Doctor Marden finished the story his face was ghastly. He admitted that it was all true. He said that Drina Demoyne had not divorced her first husband when she went through the ceremony with him; that in consequence his marriage with Sister Dora was legal and that Caro was legitimate. 'respect him in one thing. He made no attempt to vindicate himself. At the end, he said briefly, 'What do you expect me to do, Doctor Marden?'"

"Doctor Marden said, 'I expect you to make an announcement that my step-granddaughter is your child.'"

"I will do that," Ace agreed.

"When?" Doctor Marden asked tersely.

"Ace said that he would like to take a little time to think the matter over. 'You see it involves changing my will,' he said."

"How long do you require to think it over?" Doctor Marden asked.

"Ace thought for a moment or two. Then he said, 'I'll tell you what I'll do, Doctor Marden. We're going to Mrs. Stow's party tonight. I have an appointment to meet my bootlegger in Mrs. Avery's Spinney at 10:30. I have a little business with him. That won't take two minutes. Suppose you stroll over there at about a quarter to eleven—let us say—and we'll talk the whole thing over. I'm pretty shaken by this and I was up most of last night with patients. I'd like to take a little nap—I want to sleep on it.'"

"Doctor Marden agreed. He left immediately. But after he had gone, Ace said suddenly that it was no use his trying to sleep, that he was too excited. He offered to drive me back to the camp. After he got there, he suddenly made up his mind to change his will then and there. I was his lawyer. I drew up a new will for him. It was short. I typed it myself. He signed it and Berry and Adah served as witnesses. You will find that will clipped to this confession."

"Then Ace went home."

"After he had gone, I began to feel uneasy. That tornado still swirled and flamed in my mind. But some things were clear. I realized that here was a heaven-sent opportunity to serve Sister Dora by protecting her child. Something seemed to tell me that, content with the will. Ace would delay the announcement that Miss Prentiss was his daughter until after he had married Miss Eames. I liked and admired Miss Eames. I did not want her to undergo an experience that would approximate Sister Dora's. But more and more—oh steadfastly more and more—I wanted to do this last service for the dead lady of my heart."

"All this tore and flared inside me."

"The end of it was that I suggested to the servants that we go up the river to the island camp for the week-end. Adah and Berry always enjoyed the island camp and they were delighted with the idea. They rowed up the river to the camp and I gave them a bottle that night. I knew that after the long day, that would make them sleep and it did. They went to bed early."

Dwelling on Grievances—

Power of Trouble Is Increased
And Distributed by Talking of It

THERE is a curious and very much mistaken idea that by talking of our grievances and our troubles, we decrease their power over us to make us miserable. Instead, by dwelling on them we reinforce their power. We not only do this, but we scatter the seeds of their discontent, as we unburden our hearts, and a whole new crop of disturbing thoughts enters into the minds of those who bear with us during our outpouring of words.

Making Misery.

If the person to whom we speak is near and dear to us, our troubles weigh on them almost as their own. We are unwittingly the cause to them of an added weight of discordant thoughts, and perhaps they may be trying to get the better of their own bothers.

Sympathy Versus Help.

We have only to consider the effect on ourselves of listening to others talk of their worries, misfortunes, and hard luck, to realize the depressing power of such conversation. It is seldom we can do anything to help them. In fact persons who talk of their troubles seldom do it to get helpful suggestions. They are bespeaking sympathy and often are disturbed, hurt or annoyed, when they get advice, even though it be excellent. What is wanted is to hear expressions of understanding of their position as difficult, and to hear their actions considered wisely. Is this not really what we, ourselves, hope to hear when we air our troubles?

Trouble Mongers

When we are awakened to the fact that talking of our woes adds to those of the listener without lessening ours, that we are implanting troubles in the minds of others, we surely will try to be more careful about giving vent to the misfortunes by talking about them. Moreover, if we do continue to be trouble mongers, no one will be eager to talk with us.

If, instead of dwelling on our grievances, we discuss pleasant topics, we are not only giving pleasure to others, but we are actually doing ourselves a kindness as well. We diminish our own depression by rising above our troublous thoughts, thus becoming conquerors in and through our conversation.

Dr. Townsend Convicted
Dr. Francis E. Townsend, sponsor of the $200 a month plan for old age pensioners, was found guilty of contempt involving his abrupt departure from a Congressional Committee investigation last year, by a jury in the District courts last week. The white haired defendant accepted the jury's verdict without emotion. In the courtroom he told newshawks "there was apparently nothing else for the jury to do in the light of the judge's instructions."

The Court had ruled out the pension advocates' reasons for summarily terminating his testimony before the House of Representatives without the consent of the Committee. Another judicial ruling barred the introduction of evidence concerning Kansas City politics. Congressman C. Jasper Bell, who was head of the investigation Committee and a witness in the trial against Dr. Townsend, said from Kansas City.

Sentence was deferred until counsel for Dr. Townsend can make an appeal for a new trial. Dr. Townsend previously declared he would not accept probation or a suspended sentence if he were convicted. The night that the jury brought in its verdict Dr. Townsend addressed a Washington meeting of his association. About 40 persons responded to the meeting call.
