

Kings Daughters County Convention

Local Circles Are Well Represented at County Convention Held at Marion Church Wednesday.

The convention opened with piano votations conducted by the Rev. Daniel Ryan, pastor of the west Marion church. Mrs. William Patton of the Marion-Losco Circle hosts to the convention gave greetings which were responded to by Mrs. Frank E. Wright of Howell.

The retiring president, Mrs. Paul Kingsley of Brighton presided. Mrs. Gail Clements of Losco presented the program.

The morning session was given over to hearing reports of the Junior and Senior circles, there being eleven Junior groups and nine Senior Circles in this county.

One of the most outstanding features of the reports was from the Gregory circle which raised over $150 in money and gave approximately $200 worth of clothing and bedding to the flood sufferers last Spring by giving a community pot-luck dinner asking everyone to come and bring what they could for this cause.

The speaker of the day was the Rev. Florence Teel of Ann Arbor who gave an interesting talk on character, conviction and courage.

Six members of the Margaret B. Loomis circle of Howell are planning to attend the Lake Missaukee camp this summer.

All of the reports were very gratifying. The ladies Aid of the convention church served a delicious chicken dinner at noon, the favors being coronas of sweet peas in the King's Daughters colors of purple and white the church also being beautifully decorated in these colors.

Mrs. Frank Whitney of Saginaw state second vice president, Mrs. John McGregor, of Ann Arbor, chairman of the convalescent committee Mrs. C. A. Richards, Brighton, secretary, Mrs. Ford Lamb, Pinckney, treasurer.

The board presented the new county chairman with a gavel. Several amendments to the constitution and by-laws were adopted among them being the addition of a corresponding secretary to the corps of officers to be appointed by the president.

Musical numbers were given by Mrs. Nina Young, piano accompanist of Howell, Master Edward Briggs, II, violinist of Fowlerville and Mrs. Stanley Herriman, vocalist of Howell.

The Marion-Losco quartet gave a playlet. Joe Brady of Howell, spoke of the work being done in caring for crippled children, six children now being helped by this society to which the King's Daughters contribute liberally by buying Crippled Children's seals each year.

An invitation from the Stockbridge circle to hold next year's meeting at that place was accepted.

Mrs. Clara Palmer, Pinckney retiring second vice-president, was presented with a gift from the Pinckney circle of which she is president.

The convention was a very successful one and largely attended despite the rainy day.

MRS. ELLEN DOLAN

Mrs. Ellen Dolan, 86, widow of the late William Dolan of Pinckney died in a Detroit hospital May 23. The funeral was held in Detroit Tuesday. The deceased was formerly Ellen McNamara of Dexter and married William Dolan who was a Pinckney merchant until his death in 1885 when his son-in-law, John Tuomey, took over the business. Of her large family only Tom survives, Frank, Will, Laura, Nellie, and Agnes all having passed away. There are a number of grandchildren.

MRS. NELLIE PFÄU

Mrs. Nellie Pfäuf, widow of the late Herbert Pfäuf died at Dayton, Ohio, May 27. The funeral was held there with burial at Howell. The deceased graduated in 1926 and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Jones, former Pinckney residents. She married Herbert Pfäuf of Howell who died several years ago. An infant son born to her died at birth. For the past number of years she has been in poor health.

MARRIAGE LICENSE APPLICATIONS

The following applications for marriages have been issued: Oscar Holden, 23, Howell; Geraldine Clickner, 19, Howell; Ernest Wright, 23, Marion; Gladys Dankers, 27, Marion; Wm. Wyle, 32, Howell; Mrs. Eunice Bowhall, 49, Howell; Jesse Spaulding, 31, Howell; Lucretia VanDusen, 31, Howell; Paul Z. Stiff, 22, Emily Tamlyn, 22, Howell; Thomas Wahl, 24, Hamburg; Gertrude Kourt, 23, Brighton; Carmen Loree, 20, Howell; Clayton Damman, 22, Howell.

Casper Sykes Passes Away

Aged Pinckney Resident Is Found Dead From Heart Attack in His Home Here Thursday

Casper Sykes, 86, was found dead in a chair in the kitchen of his home about 12:00 noon last Thursday. Since the death of his son, Carl, some years ago, he had lived alone and was not an early riser. Not seeing him about Thursday, his daughter went to investigate and found him sitting in a chair in the kitchen of his home about half dressed. Coroner Henry Wines of Howell was called and pronounced the death due to heart disease and no inquest needed. Death had taken place some hours before the discovery of the body.

Casper Sykes, eldest son of Samuel and Lucinda Sykes, was born in Pinckney October 24 1850. He was united in marriage with Emma Finch on July 3, 1870 who passed to her reward on November 5, 1929. A daughter, Mrs. Mildred Sigler and a son, Carl, who passed away Jan. 8, 1930 were born to this union.

Mr. Sykes received his early education in the public school. When about 18 years of age he attended business college at Lansing. Later he was a partner in his father's carriage factory for years when he was in charge of the paint room. He was the inventor of a carriage spring which he later sold to a Cleveland manufacturer. Later he engaged in the insurance business. Afterwards with his son, Carl, he installed many heating plants in this vicinity and adjoining towns.

He was a lover of music, singing in the church choir for many years; also playing in the village band which he organized and led.

The funeral services were held at the Swarthout funeral home on Saturday at 2:00 P. M. Burial was made in the Pinckney cemetery on the lot where his wife and son, Carl, are buried. Rev. C. H. Zuse officiated.

Session Is Well Attended. Paul O. Strawhecker of Grand Rapids Is Elected Grand Marshal

At the annual communication of the Michigan Grand Lodge F. & A. M. held at Mt. Clemens last week Paul Strawhecker, Grand Rapids, was named grand marshal. This is the first step in line for the grand master and in 6 years time he will be elected to that office. His opponents were Charles Fey of Royal Oak and Oliver Blanchard and Bert Sogge of Detroit. An effort was made to get the two Detroit candidates to withdraw in favor of Dr. Albert Hughes. This failed but they later withdrew after the first ballot in which they trailed. Strawhecker led 18 of nomination on the first ballot and got a majority of 31 on the

Philathea Notes

Again our organization is reminded of the 5th annual gathering of Baraca and Philathea Bible Class at Ocean Grove, N. J. on June 29-July 3, 1937. Among those to be present we note Rev. Ralph Sockman, D. D. whom we hear over the radio, Rev. Edson R. Leach, Newark, N. J., Rev. C. Gordon, Boston, Mass., and Albert Lyons, president world-wide B. P. Union.

Also remember the date, June 9, when the local class will meet with Mrs. B. G. Egan for the usual business session and potluck supper. Come prepared to sew on quilts. All Philatheas and friends invited. This is also quarterly missionary day.

We need more time in our class room for discussion under the able leadership of Mrs. Zuse. Last Sunday's subject was "Remaking of Jacob's Next Step" and the subject is Joseph's Readiness for Service."

The Pastor calls our attention to the fact that next Sunday is Missionary Day. We are falling behind in collection. This collection will be taken up at our meeting at Mrs. Isham's Wednesday.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved ones in the death of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Sykes. May the loving help of the great physician be in adjusting their lives to God's will.

Mr. and Mrs. John Craft and children were Detroit visitors Sunday.

Miss Faith Conley and R. Aton of Pontiac were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin.

Miss Clarice Corey and Jack Reason spent Decoration Day in Allan.

Miss Grace Young and Donald Sigler of Detroit spent the week end at Decoration Day with Mrs. C. H. Sigler.

Dr. and Mrs. Gerald McCluskey of Howell were Sunday guests of Mrs. Ella McCluskey.

Monday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Miller were Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Randall of Lansing, Harry Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Clara Miller and son of Detroit.

News of the State Legislature

1183 Bills Are Introduced During Present Session. End of Session Seen Near At Hand

Last week Monday, the dead line for the introduction of bills into the legislature saw a number of bills introduced at the present session reach 1183. Of this number 727 were house bills and 356 senate bills. At the last session 1,044 bills were introduced.

The Basic Science bill passed both houses and was signed by the governor. It requires chiropractors to have expert medical knowledge.

The amendment providing for the appointment of supreme and circuit court judges was defeated 13 to 15 by the senate.

By a vote of 70 to 20 the house passed the revised liquor bill abolishing beer gardens and allowing the return of the saloon. It is being predicted that the senate will kill this bill.

The following appropriation bills have been reported out: $43,000,000 for the schools, $5,000,000 from the general fund to the highway fund, $800,000 for snow removal in upper Michigan.

The house passed the relief bill for $914,000 for emergencies. This now goes to the governor.

The senate passed a bill providing that the liquor commission mark up its liquor 15 percent. This would provide $4,000,000 to be used in hospital building.

They also passed a bill forbidding the sale of filled milk. This is milk to which coconut oil or some other substance has been added.

The senate passed the Murphy bill providing for a ten year term of practice for attorneys without an examination.

The bill providing for two auto inspections a year has come out. Of the 500 inspection charges paid by the motorists, the garage would get 40c and the secretary of state's office 10c.

The senate passed the revised old age pension measure. It lowers the age limit to 65 years, abolishes the deduction of property to the state and returns that already decided. The vote was 18 to 11. These will now be administered by the welfare dept.

Two anti-syphilis bills passed the house. One requires physical examination for the disease and a medical examination before marriage. It passed 88 to 44. The other introduced by Mrs. Helen would permit the taking of sex hygiene in the schools.

It passed 75 to 15. Children could be excused from such teaching on request of their parents.

A long range building program including a governor's mansion and state office building would be started under a bill passed by the house and sent to the senate.

A bill prohibiting employers from denying work to persons over 45 years old was introduced. Under it an employer would have to give some reason besides age for refusing to employ a person over that age.

R. P. Stanley introduced bills to abolish five existing agencies. They are the crime commission, stream control commission, a commission to promote use of Michigan coal, and the act creating a state superintendent of public employment.

The legislature turned down Sen. McCullough's bill to enable the City of Detroit to form a separate school district from Ferndale.

Rep. Chas. Adams of Howell voted against the liquor bill which would bring back the old time saloon. This provides for three kinds of liquor licenses, all of which would be beer and hard liquor.

Rep. Adams was placed on the committee by Speaker Schroeder to investigate graft in the liquor control commission during the years 1935-36.

Also lobbying, also the state labor commission. Mr. Adams is the only Republican on the committee, the others being from St. Ignace and Grosse Pointe. The result of this investigation was the result of a resolution by Rep. Eaton of Plymouth, Republican.

The late Casper Sykes was a famous athlete and played on that immortal Pinckney team of 1874 which challenged the famous Cass team of Detroit holders of the national championship. The game was played on the Pinckney public square which was treeless at the time and the people came from miles around to see it.

The game was close all the way and Pinckney went into the 3th inning one run behind. Freeman Wilcox, fast man got on after two were out. He got to third and slid across the plate with the winning run only to be called out by Empire Huggar of Howell.

A riot followed. The Pinckney lineup made like a page from the hall of fame. George Carr, Willis Grimes, Dan Markey, 1b; Matt Joffrey, 2b; Lafayette Sellman, 3b; Nelt McCullough, ss; Freeman Wilcox, cf; Casper Sykes, of; Frank Grimes, rf; Chas. Henry and S. Jenkins also played. On the strength of their great showing Pinckney was asked to play at the famous Cass Park in Detroit but also lost here to the champions.

Week end and Decoration Day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russel Bokrus and family were Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peto and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Lazlo and family, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Torak and son of Northville, Mr. and Mrs. Mungan and family of Lincoln Park, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Malt and family, Mr. and Mrs. Erdaly and family, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Shamburger of Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hannal and family of Schoolcraft.

The Muses, Nellie Gardner and Fannie Monks were Monday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Shafer, of Saginaw.

Miss Katherine Gibney was the honor guest at a kitchen shower given by her cousin, Miss Marion McClellan, Sunday afternoon. Guests were present from Detroit, Stockbridge, Ann Arbor and Howell. The bride-to-be was presented with many pretty and useful gifts.

Current Comment

We wonder what some of the often divorced people who had their marital ties severed because their husbands forgot to kiss them goodbye think of the Tennessee hillbilly who hitched his wife to the plow and forced her to pull it until she dropped dead. Maybe it would not be amiss to recall some of the missionaries from Africa or China as it is doubtful if they found such conditions there.

Detroit last week, did honor to Dr. George Washington Carver of the Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, one of the most famous scientists. This aged colored man born in slavery with a limited education has done wonders from the humble peanut he has extracted 24 different substances. From one kind of peanut oil he has developed a cure for infantile paralysis. On this the medical profession are divided as to whether it is the massaging accompanying the application of the oil or the personal magnetism of the aged negro. However his service is best recognized in another line as he persuaded the negroes in the south to plant peanuts and fruit in place of the cotton and tobacco which was impoverishing the soil. While in Detroit he was entertained by Henry Ford and other prominent persons.

Iris Fern of Ferndale the champion speller of Michigan failed to place in the national contest at Washington D. C. last week, going down on the tenth word given her which was "Georgette". Nervousness probably accounted for her failure in a great feat.

The death of John D. Rockefeller last week occasioned numerous eulogies and a remark that the peoples attitude towards him had changed. 25 years ago he was classified with Theodore Roosevelt as "Muckrakers of Great Wealth" and a judgment of $8,000,000 was secured against his company by an enterprising lawyer who was later governor. The supreme court did it so he never paid, but he collected it as about that time the price of kerosene was advanced sufficiently to make the amount. Of late years he has spent most of his time giving away his money in endowment and so forth. In spite of his great wealth he was said to be a very lonely lonely man with very few friends or intimates.

The racket which seems able to thrive most anywhere has now got into the baby chick industry. Since the raising of chicks the hatcheries have found themselves with many male chicks which are hard to get rid of. Racketeers buy them for a fraction of a cent apiece. Then the chicks are sold to someone at a reduced price. The reason usually given being that the person ordering them failed to take them. Nothing is said as to their sex. One woman who purchased some chicks of such a dealer found herself with 800 roosters on her hands which is too many main guys for one flock. So it would seemingly pay one to buy their chicks from approved hatcheries instead of itinerant dealers.

Prof. Moley the first brain trustee who broke with President Roosevelt and went over to the opposition in a press interview says that the president's supreme court bill was only a bluff to scare the supreme court into approving his laws and now that this has succeeded no great effort will be made to pass it. He concludes with the statement that bluffing is not statecraft. Maybe not, but it is at least 50 percent of it. At least all great statesmen of history did their share of bluffing.

Messages by Kite

The Chinese are much given to the pastime of kite flying and some of the constructions are marvelous to behold. The Chinese kites often have two strings and these enable the operator to make the kite do some wonderful things. It becomes an aerial messenger, as it is possible to make the kite form letters and characters by which messages may be exchanged.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—I have frequently mentioned in these columns the problems that have confronted and continue to confront the commerce and industry of the United States. However one may regard the ethics of the business interests of the nation, I think everyone must admit that business has its problems that are just as serious as the job of earning a living is to you or me. This has been especially true during the period of the depression and it is equally true at this stage of economic recovery.

Business, moreover, is affected to a greater extent than you or me by any governmental policy that is pursued or any legislation that is enacted by congress or by state legislative bodies. In consequence, it seems to be a fair statement to say that business lives by the will and the whim of the elected representatives whether those representatives be local, state or national.

Those observations should demonstrate fully the importance of one piece of legislation now pending in congress. I refer to the so-called permanent sugar bill. Seldom in history, I believe, has a single unit of industry found itself in a position where it is so utterly dependent upon federal policy for its existence as is the case now with those eighteen or twenty plants that refine about seventy-five per cent of all the sugar we use on our tables and otherwise in this nation.

The situation, succinctly, is that President Roosevelt has recommended to congress that it adopt legislation of a permanent character "to protect the interest of each group concerned," and assure meanwhile that the interest of the consumer shall have due consideration. Pursuant to the President's proposal of March 1, last, the house committee on agriculture is working out a piece of legislation which seeks to reconcile the differences of all the various interests and make thereby a permanent policy which this country may follow as regards sugar.

It must be remembered that the United States imports something like seventy-eight per cent of all the sugar it consumes. The other twenty-two per cent is produced by our sugar beet and sugar cane farmers—a consequential industry worthy of protection from its government but still quite unable to satisfy demands for the commodity. Some of the sugar we import comes from Puerto Rico; some comes from Hawaii; some from the Philippines, but the bulk comes from Cuba.

Since Puerto Rico and Hawaii are insular territories of our nation, they must receive consideration as an integral part of our nation. The Philippines are no longer a possession and yet there is something of a fatherly interest, or should be, on our part. With reference to Cuba, the United States long has attempted to help the islands economically and politically in order to insure the independence which our nation helped them to establish.

So it is seen that we have in the sugar problem questions involving (1) a home industry; (2) an industry in an insular possession; (3) an industry in a nation newly born and which we are trying to lead into a position of complete independence and solvency; and (4) the maintenance of our chief source of sugar supply in a nation for which our government yet feels somewhat responsible.

That summary indicates the complexity of the general problem to be dealt with in the current legislation but the picture omits a most important unit in the industry. I refer again to those plants who must refine the sugar and must make it ready for home use or other consumption.

To make the picture complete, it ought to be recalled that for several years we have had a temporary law which fixed the amount of sugar that could be imported. It was managed through what is called a quota system; that is, the law provided authority for the secretary of agriculture to prescribe how much sugar could come in from each of the regions that I have described. This had the effect of stabilizing sugar prices and guaranteeing to the cane and beet growers of the United States a dependable market. But it had another effect which was shown by the operation of the law, an effect not so painfully evident when the law was enacted. This effect was to encourage the refining of sugar in the areas outside of the United States where the bulk of it was grown. In consequence of that, our own sugar refiners began to suffer and they continued to suffer because refiners operating in Cuba or Hawaii, to mention two examples, were able to employ labor that cost about one-fourth as much as the standard of wages paid in this country. The natural result was that our own workers were thrown out of jobs and the refining industry was running at barely two-thirds of its capacity.

To show by figures what has happened: Imports of sugar, ready for table use came from Cuba to the amount of about one thousand tons in 1925. In 1933, more than five hundred thousand tons of refined sugar was imported. It has grown some since and for every ton imported, naturally the refining plants of this country have had their volume reduced.

The President wants legislation that is fair to all interests but it seems that some of those interests are desirous of using cheap foreign labor in preference to American labor and they are fighting the President's bill. It is too early to forecast what is going to happen but there is every evidence that American owned sugar companies in some of these foreign areas are doing their utmost to kill the legislation which would substantially reduce the importations of this refined sugar.

Now there is a question of foreign policy that is involved and that part of the situation in congress concerns the State department. The home industry, of course, concerns the Department of Agriculture but there is the Department of the Interior also to be considered because of the insular territories over which it has supervision. On the surface, it is made to appear that the secretaries of these three executive departments are at loggerheads over what shall be done and as far as I can see none of the three is paying much attention to protection of the refining people who have been caught between the upper and nether millstones. My conversations with members of the house committee who have studied the problem backward and forward convinces me that congress had better for once do its own reasoning and pay less attention to the three cabinet members, each of whom is seeking to push forward the interests of his own department.

The whole situation can be summed up in one statement: if congress wants to preserve the sugar refining industry in this country (an industry that is more than two hundred years old) it can do so by providing a low limitation on the amount of refined sugar that can be imported and it can protect the cane and beet growers of the United States by establishing a quota of imports of both raw and refined sugar small enough to permit the home market to absorb the complete output of the American cane and beet growers.

I reach that conclusion because I am an American who believes in a self-sufficiency of American industry as far as it is possible to go. I take the position further because no other leading country in the world fails to protect its home industry in the handling of sugar.

Nearly everyone has realized lately that prices are climbing at an alarming rate.

Prices Climbing
This has gone on over a period of about two years and there is nothing on the horizon to indicate that the top has been reached. You and I feel it, of course, directly in what we pay for the things we buy—shoes or clothing, food, furniture, and essentials for the household.

The situation is a bit disturbing for several reasons. For one thing, if prices continue to skyrocket, sooner or later we are going to be confronted with another condition like that of 1929 and no one can doubt that if prices get too high, a tailspin will follow. If there is another tailspin like that of 1929, I am afraid that this nation as such is likely to go to pieces.

Numerous factors are at work to cause the price increases. New Deal policies were formulated, first of all, with the idea of raising prices to bring us out of the depression. President Roosevelt contended it had to be that way.

His program to force prices higher has been eminently successful. In fact, it has been too successful and in that lies one of the grave dangers. Effective means of control are lacking and there is every possibility that the upward movement may reach the stage where it will fall of its own weight.

Another cause of the price inflation has been the labor movement. Throughout the nation, organized labor has been demanding higher and higher wages. I think there can be no doubt but that labor is entitled to higher wages than obtained during the depression. But in many cases, according to government records, the demands of organized labor have been so great as to constitute a burden on industry which it cannot carry.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

Prophet Who Predicted U. S. Trailer Craze.

NEW YORK.—The reporters gave due attention to Al-dous Huxley when he came in from England recently, but they overlooked his interesting companion, Gerald Heard, British author, critic and broadcaster.

Mr. Heard is a prophet and philosopher, which isn't hot news perhaps, but the ship news men probably would have run him down had they recalled that, in 1923, he quite definitely predicted the trailer craze.

He has an uncanny way of putting two and two together—not necessarily a house and an automobile—which has made him a star of both the British broadcasting and forecasting companies, so to speak. His fortnightly radio program, "This Surprising World," has long been an important feature.

The Huxley-Heard team, in step, here on an important enterprise, is not impelled by the European propaganda surge. They expect to go about quietly, and the fact is it would take a man like the late William James to report their mission properly. After a trip west, they will check at Duke university on those startling experiments and findings in telepathy which have been the sensation of the year among psychologists.

This writer has read the Duke data and conclusions. They cinch up the fact of telepathy to a degree which makes a correspondent hope he will soon be able just to think his stuff, with nobody paying wire tolls, and no wear and tear on the typewriter.

Mr. Heard is not identified with fuzzy pseudo-science, and it is as an intellectual and not as a mystic that he does his prophesying. He is rated in England as one of the most important liaisons between science and psychology, and it is with the reserve of the scientist that he has examined psychic phenomena.

In his numerous books, he has traced a continuing pattern of psychological, not physiological, evolution. There was the pre-individual, the individual, intellectually effective but "morally monstrous," and now there is emerging a super-consciousness, within some life-or-gained rubric of growth, which gives hope for the attainment of a real civilization. That seems to be Mr. Heard's main idea, advanced through his "Narcissus," "The Ascent of Humanity," "The Social Substance of Religion," "Science in the Making" and other books.

He is forty-eight years old, Cambridge bred, a small, alert man with eager blue eyes and blonde hair. At the risk of being too flippancy, it may be observed that he is one of the main intellectual spark plugs of England today. He and Mr. Huxley were the guests of Mrs. Leonard Elmhurst, 1172 Park avenue. They will start collaboration on a book on their western trip.

Scientific War Curve.
BUT, when it comes to prophesying, here's Professor Pitirim A. Sorokin of Harvard, also in the news, who has maintained that neither a man nor a nation can lift the veil beyond today or tomorrow. As the head of the Harvard department of sociology, he says a great deal of sociology is hokum or just a "clerical exercise."

Currently, he catches national attention with his report on wars. The first quarter of this century, he finds, was the "bloodiest period in all history." Supplementing researches which he conducted in 1933 with General N. N. Golovin, he offers the first scientific war curve, covering 902 wars from the year 500 B. C. The World war was eight times bigger than all the rest rolled into one.

Professor Sorokin is no merely bookish student of wars. In the kick-back of war, he was jailed, sentenced, and awaiting the firing squad. That was in Russia, where he had opposed the Bolsheviks. Previously he had been arrested once for being too conservative and once for being too radical. Lenin saved his life on condition that he leave the country. He came here in 1923, joined the Harvard faculty, and in 1930 became an American citizen.

Looking over the Martian box score, he says to believe in peace is to believe in miracles. While he is much gloomier about the future than Mr. Heard, he has written one sentence which seems to put them, for the moment at least, on common ground. He demands, "a liberation of imagination, intuition and speculation from the prison chains of the fact finders."

Cooling Science
In the bubbling of the tea kettle lies the secret of electrical refrigeration. This paradox of science—that in heat lies a method of cooling—is the fundamental principle of thermo-dynamics, the science which Lord Kelvin established.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Season Lightly—Be careful when doubling a recipe not to double the seasoning. Use it sparingly at first, then add more if needed.

Rhubarb and Figs—To one pound rhubarb, after peeling and cutting, add half pound good figs, cut into smallish pieces. Place in a saucepan with a very little water and about a dessertspoon golden syrup or sugar and gently stew till tender. Serve with a rice or sago mold or hot milk pudding.

Keeps Cauliflower White—A tablespoon of sugar in the water in which cauliflower is cooked will keep it white.

Unwrap Food—Food should not be stored in the refrigerator while wrapped in paper because the paper prevents the cold air from circulating freely over it.

Glazing Liquid for Cookies—A mixture of two tablespoons of sugar and one-fourth cup of milk makes a good glazing liquid for cookies. Apply on the surface of the dough with a pastry brush before baking the cookies.

Shaping Knitting Needle—Before using a circular knitting needle, immerse it in hot water for a few minutes to make it pliable. Before it cools, and hardens, hold it in knitting position, and make any desired adjustments such as straightening the ends. This dispenses with a long breaking-in period.

Eggs in Potatoes—Bake potatoes. Cut off tops, scoop out centers and season with butter, salt and a little pepper, mashing thoroughly. Half fill shells with potato mixture and drop a raw egg, salt, pepper, a little grated cheese and one teaspoon butter in each. Put back in hot oven for four minutes to set egg.

To Keep Frosting From Running—A half teaspoonful of baking soda added to boiling frosting will keep it from running.

Notes of 50 Years Ago

Dispatch of June 2, 1887

Wool is worth 27c in Pinckney. Thomas Road shipped two car loads of wheat Monday.

Brick laying has started on the Teeple & Cadwell new store. Thanks to watering nearly all of the trees on the square show signs of life.

Herman Swarthout is now buying wool here for J. T. Eamen.

A. J. Chappel has finished his school term at Hubbardston and now assumed his duties at his drug store here.

There will be a ball game Saturday near the depot between the Pinckney boys and the fast stepping Marion team which has won every game played so far. They trimmed Brighton last week 24 to 6.

E. L. Markey who has been working for the Michigan School Furniture Co. at Northville has been transferred to their St. Louis, Mo., office where his brother, James, is manager. A new law requires all who get married to get a license from the county clerk.

Representative Roughwell has written Supervisor Brokaw to know if he desires any fish for planting in the lakes and streams in the section. We understand some will be planted.

George W. Teeple has contracted with the Hall Safe and Lock Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, for a fine modern bank safe.

The Fourth of July at Pinckney will be celebrated this year.

Brighton barbers have quit shaving on Sunday.

Capt. Winans, son of Hon. Edwin Winans, is in command of the Orchard Lake Cadets at Washington.

It is estimated that the Bohemian Oats agents cleaned up $175,000 in Livingston County with their racket. Jay Carson 27, a promising Green Oak attorney died suddenly on May 24.

The brick layers in Ann Arbor are out on strike. This caused the stopping of work on four brick buildings by the contractors Flinn & Flinn. The men want a 9 hour day and wages of $3 to $4 a day. The affair was settled by giving the workmen their demands.

Some ill minded person is harassing James Mackinder. His fence was set on fire. Paris Green found in his sheep pasture and two calves poisoned. Now he is getting poison pen letters.

THIS dish, "Vermont Ham N' Cornmeal Mush," points out a new way to serve left-over baked ham and cornmeal mush—in a quick-disappearing manner.

Make the mush according to your favorite recipe and add a few raisins when removing mush from flame. Pour into cleanly cut tin cans; cool, then store in modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator where it will keep fresh and moist until you desire to use it. Remove from refrigerator and open opposite ends of cans. Cut mushed mush in 1/2 inch slices and sauté in butter. Serve with slices of left-over baked ham, reheated in oven with a maple syrup topping.

SUMMER ADDS

TO CHILD SKILL

Summer vacation may be as valuable as school time if rightly planned. A well planned vacation will yield in health and gives valuable opportunity for teaching family cooperation through picnics or other interesting projects.

The yearly physical examination may be completed early in the vacation so there will be plenty of time to carry out the recommended health corrections, suggests Alice Hutchinson, newly appointed child development specialist in the office of the Mich. State College.

"Perhaps you could help your child develop a garden, do some nature study or learn more of about the history of his own county of state," Miss Hutchinson advises.

Vacation days are an excellent time for the child to learn cooperation both among playmates of his own age and with the family. There is time to develop projects which take several days to complete such as building a play-house or pulmobile or working out dramatizations. The acquiring of a special skill such as learning to swim or play tennis is a worthwhile subject.

Family outings add much to a vacation. Simple meals, outdoors or cooked over a campfire develop a spirit of friendship and cooperation in the family. Young many times can take the responsibility for the organization and preparation of such outings.

USE OF DIESEL OIL SHOWS BIG INCREASE

The use of Diesel oil for highway purposes in Michigan is showing a big increase which has attracted the attention of gasoline tax division officials of the Department of State for the first time in months of 1937.

The records of the Secretary of State show that the consumption of diesel fuel in this state has jumped 42% over the consumption for the corresponding period of the year previous.

The state's 3 cent a gallon gasoline tax is collected on any kind of fuel used to propel motor vehicles on public highways. Diesel oil collections are still almost infinitesimal as compared with regular "gas" collections, but in the sale of Diesel oil for highway purposes in the nation, and the increase in commercial vehicle registration, officials assign as another factor in the Diesel oil consumption increase the fact that some large Michigan transportation companies have been experimenting with its use.

SPECIFIC TAXES DUE SOON

Auditor General Geo. Gundry announced today that specific tax bills have been sent to 167 Telephone and Telegraph Companies in the state. The largest was against the Mich. Bell system whose tax amounts to $2,084,092.47. The specific taxes for 1936 are due and payable June 1st, 1937.

All property of Telephone and Telegraph Companies whose gross receipts within this state for the year ending December 31st, do not exceed $500.00 are exempt from taxation. Mr. Gundry explained that all taxes not paid before the first day of July bear interest at the rate of 1% per month. If however, one-half of the tax due is paid before July 1st, the remainder one-half may be paid before November 1st without penalty. All monies collected by this tax are turned into the Primary School Fund.

Remembering that the decrease in revenue for 1936 was due to a lower rate of taxation, the Auditor General said that the 1936 revenue would amount to $8,634,165.90. The tax for 1936 is based on a tax of $25.57595 per $1,000 valuation as against $26.0953 per $1,000 valuation in 1935.

The taxes assessed for 1936 are as follows:

Railroad Companies 5,481,053.03

Tel. and Telegraph Cos. 3,087,907.41

City of Lansing Co. 68,293.92

Pullman Co. 23,618.36

Exp. Co. 24,297.18

Total 8,634,165.90

Conservation Department Notes

In the recent auctions of state owned lands sportsmen's clubs and resort owners bought 6000 acres of land and 100 lots. The sales netted the state $416,289.25.

Lake Huron had more whitefish for commercial purposes than any other lake. 1,059,651 lbs. were produced. Lake Michigan was second with 768,642 lbs.

Three men charged with decapitating fish were assessed fines of $100. They were Kenneth Alestine of Grand Lodge, Clifford Flannery and Kenneth Mansfield of Walkerville.

Oil and gas rights on 32,050 acres of land will be auctioned at Lansing on June 4.

One of Michigan's state parks was officially opened on May 30. 22 of the state are equipped to supply travelers with electric lights.

It is believed that between 500 and 1,000 deer will be killed or skinned on the highways during the summer season. 6 were killed during the month of April.

Gray is the natural spawning bed for both large mouth and small mouth bass. The large mouth make their nest several feet apart while small mouth make theirs touching each other.

The famous railway car the "Wolverine" has reached the end of its trail on a siding at the Paris fish hatchery where it will be dismantled and its mahogany panels, mirrors and brass furnishings used at the factory. It was built in 1893 for exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair and purchased by the Mich. Fish commission some years later, where it was used to display fish and fingerlings to the lakes and streams of Michigan.

This is now done by truck.

Sandhill cranes, the largest of this species are reported to be nesting in several swamps of Southern Michigan. They resemble the blue heron but are larger and have a different colored plumage. These birds are protected by state and federal laws.

Plantings of Hungarian partridges are to be multiplying nicely. They have been planted in Washtenaw, Lenawee, Schoolcraft, Isabella, Grand Hillsdale Saginaw and Montcalm counties.

Transfer of the coast guard cutter Crawford to Buffalo has stopped the transfer of moose to the main land from Isle Royal. Of the 24 trapped there last winter only 9 have been sent to the mainland. The balance of the moose will be transferred when the coast guard cutter, Diligence arrives.

Trout fishing is said to be the best in ten years. The high water is said to be responsible for this.

PINCKNEY WINS FROM SALINE 8 TO 7

Pinckney broke into the win column in the Tri-County League by winning from Saline Sunday 8 to 7. Lefty Reason went into the box and pitched his first full nine inning game in three years and emerged a victor. He would have had a bigger margin except for three outfield errors which let in 4 Saline runs. Pinckney did their hitting early and it was a good thing as the Saline pitchers were effective after that. Pinckney scored 6 runs in their big inning the second. Jim Lamb led off with a double, Ferrell hit over third scoring him, Reason grounded out Dilloway hit through short, scoring Ferrell, Shehan struck out, Smith singled over second, Grant Ward got an infield hit. Earl Ward was hit filling the bases, Harlo Haines tripped scoring all three runners. Lamb struck out.

In the fourth Pinckney scored again when Smith was safe on an error and scored on Haines double. Their last run came in the 5th when Ferrell was safe on an error and scored on an infield out.

Saline rallied in the third and scored 4 runs on three hits, a walk, a sacrifice fly and an error. They got another in the 4th on a base on balls and a Pinckney error. They threw a scare into Pinckney in the 5th when they scored 2 runs on 2 errors, a base on balls and a hit. In the 9th Lefty settled down, Smith took Galt's fly, Dilloway made a great stop on B. Frey and threw him out and Hoelt struck out.

The Pinckney infield performed brilliantly. Bob Smith handled 12 chances at first, some of them difficult. Lamb had 7 chances and no errors at short and Dilloway 4 out of 5 at third. Gyp Ferrell dug Leftys fast ones out of the dirt in great style as Reason had his old time zip on the ball.

PINCKNEY BEATS CHELSEA WILD EXCITING GAME

Not contented with winning Sunday's game from Saline Pinckney beat Chelsea Memorial day 13 to 12 in a wild exciting game. Harlo Haines pitched for Pinckney against Lindberg of Chelsea. Pinckney scored 2 runs in the 2nd on hits by Smith, Lamb and E. Ward. In the 4th inning Chelsea scored 3 runs to take the lead. Pinckney also scored a run in the 5th on Smith's hit, Lamb's sacrifice and G. Ward's hit. Chelsea also got two more and went into the 8th leading 6 to 4. Here Harlo Haines lost his stuff and Chelsea got 4 runs giving them a 10 to 4 lead. However in their half of the 8th Pinckney scored 6 runs and tied the score. Haines fled out. Dilloway walked, Davis batted for Shehan and singled, Dinkel hit for Maycock and also hit safely. Bob Smith doubled to left clearing the bases. Lamb walked, G. Ward was hit. Ferrell drove over short scoring all three.

In the 9th Ferrell, now pitching for Pinckney could not get them over and walked two men, another was safe on an error, two scored on Kolander's hit but a runner was out at third retiring the side as previously one man had struck out and Ward had retired another.

This left Pinckney two runs behind. Dilloway led off with a hit but was doubled when Davis lined to the pitcher. Dinkel doubled to left, Smith got his 4th hit of the game. Lamb singled, scoring Smith, Ward walked. Ferrell got two strikes and then hit through short scoring the winning run and ending the game.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD PICTURES EVERYBODY LIKES

The amateur who took this picture gave thought to it. The boys are his sons, but the appeal of the picture is universal.

THE statisticians tell us that there are now millions and millions of camera owners—more than 16 millions in the United States alone—but how many of them take pictures that really qualify as pictures, such as might be chosen to adorn the walls of a home other than their own, is a question.

Some judges of amateur snapshot contests aver that scarcely one person in a couple of thousand submits pictures of genuine pictorial quality or having the saving appeal of storytelling human interest. Others say that often most of the pictures are so good in these respects that they have difficulty in making decisions.

Perhaps the verdict depends as much upon who the judges are as upon what the pictures are. All of them concede that from the standpoint of photographic quality—correct exposure and proper focus—the average of amateur photographs is high. In that sense there is no doubt that thousands of amateurs take good pictures but with respect to evoking general appeal, it must be admitted that not all give evidence of attention to artistic composition, thought in the choice of subject, or care for the right moment to snap the shutter. The result is pictures that are commonplace in their appeal to others. Usually such pictures are personal to the picture taker, such as a close-up of a beloved infant with no qualities to distinguish it from snapshots of a thousand other babies.

To win snapshot prizes, camera users need to take pains to plan their pictures or at least exercise judgment in selecting a viewpoint that will give the best composition. Haphazard shooting rarely brings really good pictures. Unless experience has proved it, amateur picture takers should not assume that they possess a natural picture sense. They would do well to study examples of artistic photographs constantly published in magazines, newspapers and books, go to photographic exhibits, and learn what it takes to make a good picture.

Can it be that the majority of amateur picture takers are quite content with their pictures considering the fun they get in taking them and their value as records of good times or likenesses of relatives and friends? Certainly many do get vast enjoyment in carrying their snapshots around with them in wallets and handbags and exhibiting them to those in the circle of their acquaintance. They think their pictures are pretty good, and, as personal pictures, they certainly are.

Whether or not a camera user is interested in snapshot contests, he can get all the pleasure the painter gets in his work to create pictures that will be admired by everybody if he will venture beyond the field of personal interest and try to make pictures of general appeal. This means planning, care and thought. It's the difference, for example, between a picture entitled, "My wife and Junior, aged four," with the subjects standing stiffly side by side and one of the same subjects entitled, "A boy's best friend is his mother,"

He went downstairs. MacPherson glanced over his paper. "Bonny Prince Jamie," he said admiringly. "You're a sight to flutter the hearts of the ladies," and Mrs. MacPherson beamed with maternal pride.

The night was still and clear. There would be a moon later, very late, an apricot August moon. Jim walked through the garden, along the drive, up to the familiar side veranda. The house looked very gay.

He was early. The guests had not yet begun to arrive. The orchestra, five dapper young negroes in tuxedos, was grouped about the piano in the hall. In the dining-room one of the caterer's men was mixing punch under Mr. Vaughn's supervision.

"Anything I can do?" Jim asked. "Taste this stuff," Mr. Vaughn filled a glass for Jim. "Too strong?" he asked.

"Just right," Jim set the glass on the table.

Jim waited while Mr. Vaughn gave further instructions to the caterer's man and then went with him into the hall. It was empty, now. The members of the orchestra were out on the side veranda, talking in undertones, joking, their laughter discreetly lowered.

"Everything seems to be all right," Mr. Vaughn said, standing in the open door, looking out across the terrace and the lawn where the lanterns floated in still darkness. "Looks festive, doesn't it? I want Cecily to enjoy her party." His glance turned to Jim. "Having a grown daughter is a tough proposition," he said.

"I can neither agree nor disagree," Jim said, smiling. "I've had no experience."

Mr. Vaughn made no immediate reply. It was apparent to Jim that he had something on his mind. A voice hailed them. "Hello, you two!"

The gentlemen looked toward the stairs. Cecily was descending slowly, trailing a hand along the banister, deliberately making an appearance.

Cecily was lovely tonight. She wore a slim shining cream-colored dress which broke into cascades of ripples below her knees. Her bright hair was bound with a wreath of golden leaves and golden sandals twinkled beneath the satin ripples of her skirt. Excitement deepened the peach-like bloom of her cheeks and shone in her dark golden eyes. Above her, around her, floated a soft radiance, a lovely luminous glow. She came toward them, smiling. Jim drew a short painful breath.

"Am I all right?" she asked, turning for their approval, her arms extended, her head turned to watch them over her shoulder. "Do I look pretty nice?"

"You'll do," her father replied, the pride and affection in his face discounting the brief comment, and "Dazzling!" Jim said, having difficulty with his voice.

"Have you given the men instructions about parking the cars?" she asked her father and, "Jim, would you mind awfully seeing that the lanterns along the terrace are lighted. That Ralph is an imbecile. He hasn't one brain cell to rattle against another."

"I'm not on duty tonight," Jim said, smiling. But he went to light the lanterns, taking with him a little of her radiance, hurrying toward the moment when he would see her again, dance with her, hold her slender form in his arms.

The moment which he anticipated was slow in arriving. Cecily, for a time, was occupied with the arriving guests, with greetings and introductions. When the music started she was whisked off by the prospective groom and, in turn, by the wedding party to a man. Jim danced with a languid blonde who asked him if he didn't think that dancing in hot weather was too utterly foul and with a pert little red-head who thought the music was too divine and that dancing out-of-doors was too marvelous and the lanterns awfully amusing.

Later, when he met Cecily in the center of the floor, she asked: "Why haven't you danced with me?"

"I haven't a landing net."

"Want to now?"

"Awfully."

He was dancing with her at last, at last he held her in his arms, breathed the fragrance of her hair, felt her forehead against his chin. She danced beautifully, effortlessly, not as Dolly danced, with spirited abandon, but with a fluid grace, like a wave, like a—He gave it up, content to dance with her silently, endlessly, on and on—forever.

She drew a little away, looked up at him.

"Is it a nice party, Jim?"

"Grand."

"You're making a terrific impression."

Jim scarcely heard what she said. He watched varying colors wash over her face, violet, rose, amber, as they moved under the lanterns. Cecily, Cecily darling. I love you so. What am I going to do? . . . The music stopped. There was enthusiastic applause.

"That was nice," Cecily said. "I like to dance with you."

"That goes for me, too."

The music recommenced. She came into his arms again. The tune was familiar. Presently the plaintive baritone sang—

"I've told every little star
Just how sweet I think you are.
Why haven't I told you?"

"Cecily—"

She lifted her head, glanced up questioningly.

"Listen, Cecily— If I could sing and knew all the words—"

"Jim—"

She pronounced his name softly, breathlessly, looking up at him steadily. There was a suggestion of alarm in her eyes, more than a hint of compassion.

He saw the pulse in her throat stir and beat, as though something alive were imprisoned there, something that wanted to be released.

The orchestra repeated the refrain, playing softly now, with a low muted rhythm.

"Jim—"

She stirred gently in his arms. "Jim, are you—?"

He hadn't intended that she should know. The compassion in her eyes brought him back to reality. He didn't want her to pity him.

"I'm making love to you," he said lightly, smiling down into her eyes.

"Are you—Jim?"

"Shouldn't I?" he asked teasingly.

"When it's a party and there are lanterns and music like this and pink punch and a prospective bride?"

"Silly!" She laughed naturally, with relief. "You frightened me. I thought for a minute—you meant it. Conceit!"

When the dance ended, she led him to the changing group at the end of the terrace. Presently she slipped away. When he saw her again, she was dancing with her father. He thought, watching her above his partner's head, a sleek head, blue-black as an egg-plant, that her shining look was intensified, as though, in the interval since she had left him, something, something had given it a new breath-taking luster. Cecily, Cecily darling!

She came to him at the end of the dance.

"Will you excuse me, Millicent?" she apologized to Jim's last partner. "I must drag Jim away. It's awfully important."

"Certainly."

"Where are we going?" Jim asked.

"Out to the summer-house. I've something to tell you." Happiness sang in her voice, lent wings to her golden sandals. She picked up her rippling skirt and, catching Jim's hand, ran with him down the central path of the garden. Beside the fountain she stopped. "I can't wait!" she said with a little laugh. "The summer-house is too far away." She lifted her face, her hands touched his shoulders, her lips touched his. "Thank you," she said softly. "Thank you, Jim."

Jim collected his scattering wits.

"What for?" he asked, feeling the light touch of her lips, hearing, as though it came from far away, the splash and drip of the fountain.

"Father just told me," she said breathlessly. "Jerry is coming for a visit. I couldn't wait to thank you. I do thank you, Jim!"

"I had nothing to do with it."

"Didn't you? Early this evening when you and Father were talking in the hall—Didn't you suggest it to me then?"

"No," Jim said roughly. "I've never mentioned it. You've nothing to thank me for."

"Why?" she stood very close to him, looked up at him searchingly.

"Because—"

The moon, rising above the woods at the crest of the hill, sprayed the garden with light. He saw her distinctly, her parted lips, the question in her eyes. She saw him with equal clarity. Some of the brightness went out of her face.

"Jim!" she cried on a soft wondering note of alarm and comprehension. "You meant it, didn't you? When we danced—that song—"

"Yes."

"I'm sorry—"

She swayed toward him. He caught her in his arms, held her, bent her head back to press his lips against the soft hollow in her throat, kissed her with passion and with gentleness, her hair, her eyes, her lips, released her when, through the splashing sound of the fountain, through distant music, through the drumming in his ears, he heard her soft shaken cry.

They stood facing each other in the diffused white moonlight. He saw that her lips were trembling.

"Are you angry?" he asked. The surge of passion receded, leaving only gentleness. "Have I hurt you, dear?"

She shook her head.

"You're weeping."

"That's only because I'm sorry."

"Never mind."

"And because I'm afraid it's—my fault."

"It isn't. It's my fault entirely."

She stood looking down, twisting the wisp of handkerchief in her hands. "I've deliberately made men love me," she said with characteristic candor. "I didn't do that with you. I was only grateful—I—"

"I know."

She raised her head. Tears glittered on her lashes.

"Maybe it isn't real," she said slowly, considering each word.

"Maybe it's just the moonlight, this dress, the pink punch, the music."

"It's real, Cecily."

"I hope you're mistaken. I do hope that, Jim. Of course, in a way, I can't help being glad. That's only the silly vain part of me. I know how it feels to love somebody terribly. I don't want you to love me like that. I'd have you on my conscience—"

CHAPTER IX

Jeremy Clyde was at "Meadowbrook." Cecily made a decided point of introducing him to Jim.

"Jim, this is Jerry," she said, way-laying him early one evening when Jim came to the house for a conference with Mr. Vaughn.

"How do you do?"

"How are you?"

They clasped hands briefly. There was a moment of silence.

"Jim has heard a great deal about you, Jerry," Cecily said in a light quick voice. "I've talked to him about you for hours and hours."

"A dull subject, I'm afraid," Jerry said, engagingly modest. "You must have been awfully bored."

"Not at all," Jim protested politely. He felt that the Clyde was taking his measure, looking him over with something guarded in his eyes. His manner was agreeable. He was good-looking.

The meeting between Jim and Jeremy Clyde ended in an exchange of polite amenities. Jim was glad to escape. He had tried to convey, in answer to Cecily's questioning glance, that, to a certain extent at least, he shared her enthusiasm for Jeremy. He knew that he had not convinced her. She had looked a little hurt, a little disappointed. Her manner became distant. Her hand resting upon Jeremy's arm, was tenderly protective.

It was a relief to discuss business affairs with Mr. Vaughn. Checking itemized bills, tracing a voucher that had gone astray, adjusting the weekly payroll, Jim was able to forget, in a measure, the way Jeremy Clyde had looked at Cecily, the happiness in her voice, the intimacy which had excluded him.

Work! It would be less difficult after a time. He would keep away from "Meadowbrook." Sleep at the riding academy. Not in the house. He would see Cecily, there, as she had been that rainy day, interested, friendly, aware of him. In the office adjoining the stable. Get a cot and a kerosene stove—until cold weather, at least. She would have returned to the city then. The MacPhersons would wonder. Let them—

"I beg your pardon, sir?"

"Wool-gathering, Jim?" Mr. Vaughn settled back in his chair, a signal that the conference, so far as business details were concerned, was at an end.

"I'm sorry," Jim produced a convincing yawn. "Sleepy, I guess. We finished the fencing today."

"Good! Smoke, if you like," Mr. Vaughn selected a cigar from the box on his desk.

"I'd like to have the place in good shape before you return to the city," Jim said.

"You probably will. I've decided not to open the city house until after Christmas. Susan is going to boarding-school. Tommy will be in school, too, if he works off those conditions. Cecily and I will stay here for the hunting in November. I'll put up at the club when I go to town. The doctors seem to think that three or four more months in the country won't do me any harm."

"Probably not," Jim's heart leapt and sank at the thought of Cecily staying on through the fall. Unless she married Clyde—Unless—

"Have you met our guest?" Mr. Vaughn asked, changing the subject.

"Yes," Jim said. "This evening."

"What do you think of him?"

"I haven't thought—especially."

Jim lit a cigarette. "He seems pleasant enough. Very handsome."

"I'll confess that I am agreeably surprised," Mr. Vaughn continued. "I had expected something worse."

"Cecily has given me her word not to do anything foolish. No elopements or anything of the kind. I can trust Cecily. She's never broken a promise. The boy is intelligent Good manners. Respectable family. I don't suppose he'd ever be able to support her. Still—" Mr. Vaughn smiled in a shame-faced fashion. "You aren't interested in all this," he said apologetically. "I've gotten into the habit of thinking aloud to you."

"I know that," Jim said.

"It's meant a great deal to me to have you here this summer," Mr. Vaughn said. "Now if Cecily had taken a fancy to you—"

"Would you have approved?"

Jim's slow smile discounted any suggestion of flattery or disrespect.

"Probably not," Mr. Vaughn confessed. "I would probably have discharged you. But I could have understood the attraction. This Jerry, Jeremy—There's a sort of slyness about him. He looks as though he would slip out of any unpleasant situation, save his own pretty hide, no matter whom he might hurt. That's prejudice, probably. But that's my impression of him."

Mr. Vaughn was prejudiced, Jim thought. Certainly he, Jim, was prejudiced, too. Probably they both imagined an evasive quality in Jeremy Clyde. Nothing that Jim could put a finger on in his infrequent encounters with Cecily's guest after the first meeting. Clyde was amiable, devoted to Cecily, deferential to Mr. Vaughn, charming to Miss Parker.

Jim resolved to keep away from "Meadowbrook." In spite of Mrs. MacPherson's protests, he carried a lunch to the riding academy and returned to the estate for supper at half past six. Usually, then, he caught a glimpse of Cecily and her guest, walking about the grounds in the half hour before the family dinner at seven o'clock. Sometimes Cecily hailed him, called him over to them as gaily and naturally as though the moment beside the fountain had never existed. It had meant so little to her, so terribly much to him.

Jim, in the brief intervals of contact with Cecily and Clyde, attempted to maintain the same natural gaiety and casual friendliness which Cecily established. He found it difficult, especially since he was usually in his working clothes, grimy and weary and needing a shave. At such times, he resented Jeremy's fresh flannels, his tubbed and laundered look, his smoothly rippled hair. Jeremy's suave appearance roused primitive emotions in Jim. He wanted to fight the fellow, muss him up, snatch Cecily and carry her away. He laughed himself away from violence and capture by force.

He resolved to keep away from "Meadowbrook."

No amount of resolution, however, could keep him from thinking of Cecily, could prevent continued conjecture concerning Jeremy Clyde. Too restless in the evening to read or to play checkers with MacPherson, too restless to sit on the cottage veranda, listening, through Mrs. MacPherson's conversation, through the shrill piping of tree toads in the orchard, for sounds from the house, he fell into the habit of driving the second-hand roadster to the village, along the country roads. Usually he stopped in at the drug-store. Sometimes, if closing time was near, Dolly continued to drive with him. More often he only talked to her, drinking orangeade at the fountain, diverted, for a time, by her pert gaiety.

One evening, when there were no other customers in the store, she leaned across the counter and asked him a question.

"What's the matter, Mister?"

"Matter?"

"Are you rushing me or something?"

"Why?"

"You've been dropping in pretty often."

"I have a secret passion for orangeade."

"Apple-sauce!" She looked at him shrewdly, her elbows propped on the fountain, her chin resting on her folded hands. "You look like you did the first day you came in here."

"How was that?" Jim tinkled the ice in his glass.

"Sunk."

"Oh, yes. I was playing 'Hamlet.'"

"You aren't playing now. It's a natural expression. The Vaughns have company, haven't they?"

"Dolly," Jim said evenly, "how well do you know him?"

"Him?" He saw that she regretted making the statement. Her expression, all at once, was too innocent, too bland. "You mean—Jerry Clyde?"

"Miss Innocence! You know I do."

"Oh, not very well." She abandoned her confiding position, moved a glass, wiped a ring of moisture from the fountain. "He used to meet Miss Vaughn in here and a couple of times—"

Her brows drew together in an exaggerated frown. "Who do you think you are, a police sergeant or one of those guys from Scotland Yard?"

WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER

By Congressman A. J. Transue

Postponement Necessary

Washington D. C. June 2.—Relief appropriation arguments in the house of Representatives ranked with decisions of the Supreme Court in validating the Social Security Act and the President's suggestion for wage and hour legislation among the major events of importance in Washington last week.

A coalition of Congressional factions was formed to earmark $505,000,000 of the $1,500,000,000 appropriation for the relief of unemployment. The relief raiders included Representatives who want a definite portion of the appropriation set aside for Public Works Administration and two other groups favoring additional flood control funds and more money for highways. The combination repelled all efforts of the administration leaders to obtain approval for the appropriation without restrictions. Arguments that relief funds spent through the WPA would give employment to about five times as many persons as the same amount would give jobs to under PWA did not change the determination of the earmarking faction that drew the solid support of the Republican side of the House and prevented approval of the appropriation.

Majority leader Rayburn of Texas finally suggested a postponement of the debate until after the Memorial Day recess to give Congress "time to cool off." During the weekend compromise efforts were attempted. One offer to designate $123,000,000 of the appropriation for the joint objectives Your congressman voted repeatedly in favor of the original appropriation without restrictions to prevent suffering next year among persons unable to get other work than afforded by WPA.

Law Constitutional

Social Security legislation involving old age pensions and unemployment insurance cleared the last hurdle when the Supreme Court last week declared the law to be constitutional. Justice Cardozo in reading the majority opinion declared, "The hope behind this statute is to save men and women from the rigors of the poor house as well as the haunting fear that such a lot awaits them when the journey ends is near." The old age pension provision was approved by a seven to two majority while the unemployment insurance section and a third case involving the Alabama state law on unemployment won validation by five to four margins. Coincidentally the Social Security Board announced sending $169,105 to Michigan for the administration of approved unemployment compensation laws. Including this amount, which covers the period from April 1, to June 30 Michigan has thus far received $337,331 for administrative purposes from the Federal Social Security Board. At the end of May Michigan had deposited $13,030,000 in the unemployment trust fund in United States Treas. and with interest of $10,802 gives the state a balance of $138,040,802.

Labor Legislation

Leaving the details entirely to Congress President Roosevelt advocated wage and hour legislation on a special message this week. Joint committee hearings are expected to be started this week in preliminary preparation for eventual laws that will determine minimum wages and maximum hours for men and women subject to its provisions throughout the country. The scope of the problem will necessitate an exhaustive investigation before the far reaching legislation is ready for final action.

Pension Debate

Your Congressman has signed the petition of the speakers to discharge the Ways and Means Committee and have H. R. 4199, the general welfare bill providing for old age pensions, brought before the House for full and complete debate. Believing in adequate old age pensions consistent with the sound credit of the United States, your Congressman is convinced that the good will result from a thorough discussion of this subject. The petition which needs 218 signatures to take the bill from the committee, has not yet reached the hundred mark.

Drive Carefully

The District of Columbia with three times as many automobiles as Genesee county, recorded 48 traffic deaths since Jan. 1st on the same day last week that Flint and Genesee county counted 45 traffic deaths since the beginning of 1937.

LOUD NOISES TO KILL GERMS

An article in The American Weekly with next Sunday's Detroit Times, will disclose facts about invisible sound waves so powerful that they literally shake bacteria to pieces... and scientists say these waves may pull huge airplanes and their pilots apart in the next war.

TRAGIC BAD LUCK OF SWEEPSTAKES WINNERS

An article in The American Weekly with next Sunday's Detroit Times, discusses the fact that the sudden wealth of "easy money" has brought unhappiness, ruin, insanity, suicide and other violent deaths to those unable to stand such bewildering prosperity.

Loud noise to kill germs. The same invisible sound waves may pull huge airplanes and their pilots apart in the next war. An interesting article in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next Sunday's Chicago Herald and Examiner.
