Pinckney Resident Falls in Suicide Attempt When High Water Carries Him Over Dam

Ernest Frost, 66, retired farmer, has had spells of despondency since the death of his wife some years ago and of late has been getting worse. Sunday night he aroused all the neighbors by shouting for some time and was finally quieted down by them. About three A. M. Tuesday morning Roy Reason who lives near the Ford dam on the Pinckney mill pond heard someone go past his house and go towards the dam. Growing suspicious he got up aroused Lucius Doyle and started for the dam. Before they reached there they met Ernest Frost coming from there. He was soaking wet and had injured one of his shoulders. The water in the Pinckney mill pond is very high on account of the many recent rains and recently, Lucius Doyle the Ford caretaker here had to take off several sluice boards to lower the water. Mr. Frost jumped in front of the dam and the swift current took him over the 8 foot dam and threw him on the land below the dam striking one shoulder. Messrs Reason and Lucius Doyle took him to the home of the latter where Supervisor Norman Reason was called. They took him to the Frost home where he was given dry clothes and taken to Howell by Sheriff Kennedy and Deputy Sheriff Loren Bassett for an examination. Since his wife's death Mr. Frost has lived alone. He has a daughter Mrs. Clare Skinner living in Detroit. A. F. Weceneran, aged Pinckney resident committed suicide about a year ago near the dam but held himself under water by means of a chain on a boat anchor. Monday Garth Meyer, 10 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meyer was swept over the dam while swimming but escaped injury Monday.

MARK TWO GOVERNORS GRAVES IN COUNTY

The Phillip Livingston County Daughters of the Revolution marked the homesteads of the late Gov. Edwin Winans of Hamburg and Gov. Bingham of Green Oak with Bronze tablets last week. Mrs. W. P. VanWinkle chaplain made the prayer at the ceremony and Glenn Burkhardt of Fowlerville regent of the chapter the dedication speech.

JUSTICE COURT CASE APPEALED TO CIRCUIT COURT

The justice court case of Orville Amburgey vs. Gerald Reason recently tried in Justice Fry's court here has been appealed to circuit court, Hiram Smith, attorney for Reason having filed notice and bond last week. Amburgey got a judgement in justice court.

CATCH HOLDUP MAN HERE

Tuesday a motorist at Flint was held up and his 1937 Chevrolet sedan taken from him. The theft was put on the air and the stolen car was reported at Hartland where it hit another car but got away. This morning a man was found asleep in a car near the Pangborn farm at Anderson west of Pinckney. Deputy Loren Bassett came over and recognized the stolen Chevrolet. He arrested the man who was intoxicated. He gave him the name as Edmund Stone, 31, of his name as Edmund Stone, 31, of Flint and is held at the jail for Flint officers.

The Use of Waste Marsh Lands

Claude Soper, Local Farmer, Shows Way To Utilize Waste Land and Produce Valuable Crop

Farmers in this neighborhood should be interested in the excellent results Mr. Claude Soper has shown on the Harris farm south of Pinckney in converting five acres of waste marsh into a fine meadow of Reed Canary Grass.

Last summer Mr. Soper cut 15 loads of hay from three acres of Reed Canary Grass. This grass is a hardy perennial providing hay superior to timothy as a horse feed or luxuriant pasture for six months capable of carrying five dairy cows to the acre.

Contrasted with the marsh hay and cattails in the numerous marshes in this vicinity, this is a crop deserving of careful consideration by every farmer who has any low lying land on his farm. Breaking up the old marshes and preparing a seed bed is difficult but the results justify the labor.

The seed usually sown five to eight pounds per acre was formerly very expensive costing as high as $1.50 per lb. but improved methods of harvesting the seed have reduced the price to thirty cents. The stand grows thicker each year from shoots put out underground from the roots and the dense root growth forms a mat which will support machinery and horses in wet weather.

Stands of this grass in Minn. and Ore. which have been pastured and cut for hay for 30 years show no sign of "running out". The seed may be sown in the spring or as late as Nov. first and is not damaged by overflow or standing water. Thorough preparation of the seed bed is advisable and ordinarily a tractor is necessary to break up the dense sod in the marshes.

Any farmer interested should inspect Mr. Soper's meadow on the Harris place.

STATE DAIRY INCOME GROWS

The dairy income in Michigan increased $8,000,000 the past fiscal year over the previous year. This represents a total income for the dairy industry of $66,000,000 produced by the 900,000 dairy cows in the state last year. During the past fiscal year over $14,000,000 worth of milk was produced by 14,000 farmers residing in the Detroit area, according to records of the Michigan Milk Producers' Association. This represents approximately 92% of the milk in market produced by farmers who are participating in the farmer's cooperative marketing program. All of these farmers share alike in the fluid milk sales, even though some have none of their milk shipped to the city.

Pinckney School Notes

Edsall Myers has been appointed captain of the high school football team which will meet the alumni on the square at 4:00 P. M. on Saturday afternoon, June 26. The team will line up as follows: Paul Singer, p; Ed. Myers, c; Marcian Ledwidge, lb; Francis Shehan, 2b; Bill Meyer, 3b; Howard Read, rs; Lloyd VanBlaricum, lf; Emmett Clark, cf; Glennan McClellan, cf; Vincent Young, rf.

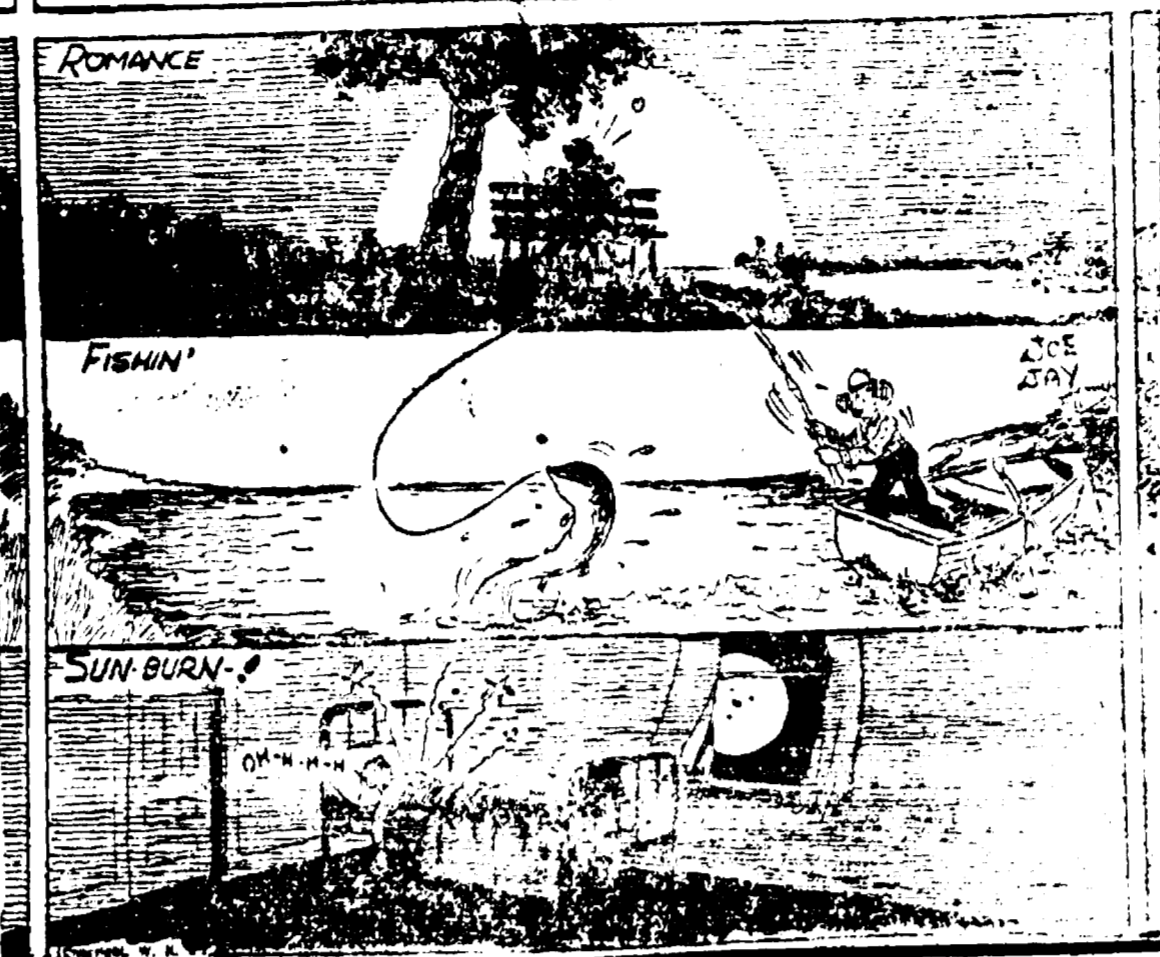

The alumni lineup is, Bill Lamb, c; Don Swarthout, p; Roy Reason, lb; Cliff Miller, 2b; Rollie Shehan, 3b; Bennie VanBlaricum, ss; N. Miller, rf; Jim, Lamb, lf; Doni Spears, cf; Bob Read, rf.

The high school football team had their pictures taken in their togs last week. The members of the team had to use their own cameras. Next year's team will be changed. Edward Howell and Nelson Shehan, two of the best tackles ever to represent the Pinckney high school will be lost by graduation. There is plenty of material available. Capt. Howard Read who played in the line may be shifted to the backfield. Ed. Meyer will probably replace his Brother, William at quarter. Bill is also a senior and has played in the backfield for four years. Vincent Young is a promising end and Glennan McClellan a good tackle.

Marriage Vows Are Spoken

Two June Weddings Take Place Last Week at Pinckney and Brighton

DEVEREAUX—DEAL

The wedding of Mary Elizabeth Devereaux, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Devereaux, former Pinckney residents to James Deal of Brighton took place at St. Mary's rectory Saturday morning, Rev. James Carolan officiating. The couple were attended by Helen Devereaux, sister of the bride, and Leonard Devereaux, brother of the bride. Only members of the family and immediate relatives were present. A wedding breakfast was served at Ann Arbor and a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Detroit for the bridal couple on Saturday evening.

The bride graduated from the Pinckney high school in the class of 1935 and is employed in a dress-making parlor, having taken a course in cosmetology. The groom is a bookkeeper at the Red Bend Motor Co. at Howell. In behalf of their many friends the Dispatch joins them in extending congratulations.

ELY—FOGG

Marked by a quiet and dignified simplicity, the wedding of Charlotte M. Ely of Ann Arbor and William H. Fogg of Chicago was solemnized Sunday at the home of the bride's grandparents, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Shannon of Brighton.

Shortly after one o'clock, the vows were spoken, the double ring service being read by Rev. George Fogg, father of the groom.

The couple were attended by Mrs. Harold Cleavinger, of Ann Arbor, sister of the bride, as matron of honor; and Harold Fogg, of Columbus, Ohio, brother of the groom.

The dresses worn by the bride and her attendants were of Her Lady-like crepe, identical in design, the bride's being of a dainty green hue, and her sister's, yellow. Both wore orchids. After the ceremony, a luncheon was served, covers being laid for 28 guests. A color motif of green and yellow decorated the table decorations, and a variety of flowers added beauty and fragrance.

The bride is the daughter of Myron and Hazel Graham Ely and an honor graduate of Ann Arbor high school class of 1937. The groom is the son of Rev. and Mrs. George Fogg of Bay City and Ann Arbor. He received his A. B. degree from the university of Michigan in 1935 and his A. M. degree in 1936.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Fogg left for their new home in Chicago where Mr. Fogg holds a responsible position with the Western Electric Co.

FRED WOODWORTH HURT

Fred Woodworth, former collector of internal revenue of the port of Detroit and state welfare director, suffered a broken collar bone Sunday when he was thrown from a horse in the barn of the Woodworth farm near the House school, three miles north of Pinckney. He was unconscious when taken from the stall. Taken to the Mellus hospital Brighton, he is said to be resting comfortably.

VIEWS MURDER SUSPECTS IN TENNESSEE AND ALABAMA

Deputy Sheriff Cass Clinton, former Pinckney resident went to Ann Arbor and Tenn. last week to view several suspects held there on the suspicion that they might be Ray Law, the hired man wanted for the murder of his employer John Davis. Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Lydia (100-brand) in Tyrone, Tenn. were accompanied by a neighbor of the Davis family from Tyrone. Some six suspects held in different jails were viewed but none of them were Larsen. The latter seems to have made a clean getaway, not a single clue as to his whereabouts being discovered as yet.

News of the State Legislature

Civil Service Bill Beaten. Adjournment This Week Special Session Th Threatened

The Stout-DeLand bill to clarify the election laws was defeated by the House last week. One feature objected to was that it would bar the minor parties, such as the socialist, Farmer Labor, Commonwealth, American, etc. from the ballot. It cut out many minor party voices, and is estimated to be able to save $75,000 a year.

The civil service bill worked out after long study by commissions appointed by Governor Fitzgerald and Murphy may pass, but it has been drastically altered so it is said to be more realistic. Rep. Vern Brown states that about all it would accomplish now is to make it necessary for all applicants to be college graduates. The great conflict of views on the labor question is likely to doom the bill for bill. Much opposition has developed to making the governor czar with power to settle strikes and also to acquiring strikers to give advance notice of intention to strike.

The bill to legalize slot machines passed the House 51 to 35 but is expected to be beaten in the senate. It is claimed it would put $5,000,000 a year in the treasury. Under the bill each machine would be taxed $100 a year. The bill would also pay $1,673,000 annually for the state of Michigan and $2,000,000 for Mich. State College and would pay $100,000 a year for the next two years for the upkeep of mental hospitals.

The bill adding $225,000 a year to the state treasury fund passed by a vote of 51 to 35.

Friday was the deadline for action on bills to be taken to the senate. The deadline for such bills must be over five days before a vote is taken.

Current Comment

The strikes seem to be a big news item of the day and there seems to be a great variety of opinion as to what course of action should be taken. Striking seems to have become so prevalent that several unauthorized ones were called including the Consumers Power strike in Saginaw Flint and other cities. The most spectacular one was the steel strike in Monroe in which Mayor Dan Knaggs mobilized a force of vigilantes and broke through the union picket line. He got columns of publicity for his feat and the fact that he allowed the Union forces to reestablish the picket line the next day or so and it is still ineffect is overlooked. On the strength of this he has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor next year and Frank Fitzgerald who thought he had this all sewed up would have to work for the nomination. Walter Lippman, a Roosevelt man who supported Landon last fall says the methods of the industrialists in opposing Mr. Lewis and the CIO and trying to make ogres of them is all wrong and the only effective way is to make agreements with Lewis where he has a real following and help him make them effective. He also adds that he is the most effective labor leader to appear since the days of Samuel Gompers and apparently is here to stay. The trouble he further states is that industry is used to unorganized labor and not try to hold back the tides of history. Also he adds they will find it more pleasant to work with Mr. Lewis than against him. Mr. Lippman has articles in many leading papers and this one provoked a storm, but it will stand consideration.

What is your idea of the vigilantes which are being organized in various places to restore order etc. especially in strike areas? In the days of the early west these groups were necessary to restore law and order as the new towns of the west had no law enforcing officers. It is possible to round up a group of say 500 untrained men and wield them into an effective police force to protect property and restore order? In Monroe they seem to have gotten slightly out of hand smashed union cars and thrown them into the river. A trained group of law officers would not have done this. We know of but one case where such a organization functioned in this county. Back in the old cotton days this country went dry. A locker club, similar to the ones established in other cities was started at Howell but law enforcing officers did nothing about it. Finally a group of men banded together, raided it and the two proprietors were arrested. Waiters were gotten out for others but they were never served. The cases were postponed several times and finally the two men were fined and let go. Prohibition came along and although numerous blind pies sprang up whose successful defiance of the liquor law finally brought repeal these vigilantes never functioned again or pulled any more raids.

Rev. Jardine, the vicar of Darlington, who defied his church by marrying the uncrowned Duke of Windsor and Wallie Simpson, has thrown up his pastorate and is on his way to America to lecture and harvest American dollars. Will the glamour surrounding the ex-king and Wallie hold up long enough to allow him to achieve his goal? The manufacture romance between two middle-aged lovers is already beginning to fade and the Rev. Jardine may have overestimated his capabilities. If the public is no longer interested in the two middle aged lovers what will the reverend have to talk about? We shall see when he arrives just how much of this line of tommy rot the public will swallow.

A California doctor by the name of Citron has just got a judgement against W. C. Fields, the famous comedian for $12,000 for 25 days treatment in his hospital. On the stand he testified that he cut Field's whiskey ration down from two quarts a day to an ounce and a half. Asked if he did not consider his fee exorbitant he said he based his charges on Fields salary which is $6000 a week. The court agreed with doctor.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—As it becomes more painfully apparent that there is no basis upon which to expect present returns of federal taxation to produce sufficient funds to maintain the administration's rate of spending, the President and the Treasury are peeping into every corner for new sources of money. They have already recommended to congress that the present nuisance taxes be re-enacted to bring in some five hundred million a year and they are casting their eyes elsewhere for other tax receipts.

In addition, and as a part of the general pinch that the Treasury now feels, Mr. Roosevelt has asked congress to revise certain provisions of income tax law to close up loopholes and prevent escape from taxation. The President's message to congress on this point was quite bitter and, many observers thought, rather unfair but, nevertheless, he told congress that it was up to the legislative branch to see that there was no tax avoidance.

The President's message dealt with an alleged moral phase of tax avoidance and that part of his message has provoked much criticism of the Chief Executive's attitude. He sought in his statement to the congress to make it appear that many wealthy persons had avoided taxes and that, by so doing, they had sinned.

Now, the President's view is entitled to consideration and his charge that there is tax avoidance is correct. Indeed, I believe no one can successfully dispute the charge that there is tax avoidance of a wholesale character in the United States. But when the matter is placed in the category of a moral issue, it must be examined in a different light. The President did not talk about tax evasion in his message; he talked about tax avoidance. Tax evasion is illegal and immoral. Tax avoidance is purely and simply the arrangement by an individual so that he pays the lowest tax he can and still complies with the law.

I am inclined to side with those in congress who have criticized the President on the attitude he assumed. As long as congress tells an individual, through the language of a law, that he must pay so much tax and prescribes the conditions, if that individual complies with that direction of congress, he does not commit a crime when he pays only that much tax.

I am constrained to support my view in this instance with the language of the late Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes who, as a member of the Supreme court of the United States, gained probably as much respect as any man who ever sat on the highest bench. Mr. Justice Holmes said in a decision of the court 21 years ago and now strangely reproduces the following words: "We do not speak of evasion, because, when the law draws a line, a case is on one side of it or on the other, and if on the safe side it is none the worse legally that a person has availed himself to the full of what the law permits. When an act is condemned as an evasion, what is meant is that it is on the wrong side of the line indicated by the policy, if not by the mere letter, of the law."

Again and again, courts have held that a citizen may employ "any legal means" available to him to diminish the tax which he must pay. It would seem then that Mr. Roosevelt's message used rather ill chosen and ill advised language when, in dealing with questions of tax avoidance, he sought to make it appear that it was wrong for a citizen to try to save his own money.

It has been rather interesting to note the type of outbursts, editorial and verbal, that has come as a result of Mr. Roosevelt's tax message. These outbursts have continued partly because the President asked congress to make an investigation of tax avoidance where some very large taxpayers are involved. Of course, congress is going to do that because it will give congress, or at least certain individual members, an opportunity for publicity. And they do not overlook opportunities for publicity.

Since the discussion of tax questions has continued on the basis of the projected investigation, it has given plenty of writers an opportunity to express their opinion in detail. Many of these critics have become quite personal in their assault upon Mr. Roosevelt and their biting observations are doing him no good politically at all. In fact, I have heard some rumblings beneath the surface to the effect that his tax message has hurt him as much politically as his proposal to add six new justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States.

Probably the worst of these criticisms appeared in the Washington Evening Star, a newspaper that seldom takes a bitter stand on any question. The Evening Star called attention to regulations of the bureau of internal revenue which prescribed that a person must count as income anything taken in payment of services, whether that thing be money or some other thing of value. It cited the fact that the President occupies the White House without payment of rent and that he has available a large staff of servants who man that institution; that he is provided with automobiles and yachts and various other services and circumstances without cost. Editorially, the newspaper then goes on:

"Has the President of the United States, unwittingly, failed to include in his income tax the value to him of the residence provided by the government which pays him his salary? Under these regulations it would appear that even the automobiles and the yachts provided by the government should be considered in making out an income tax return. There is no publication of income taxes and therefore the public is not informed as to whether the high officials of the government who are provided with residences, as some are, or with automobiles, as many of them are, take these things into consideration in reporting their income taxes. It would scarcely be an argument to say that residence provided for a public official is not part of his pay. Cabinet officers, for example, are not provided with residences by the government. They must provide residences themselves, at considerable cost. It is obvious, therefore, that a residence given a government official is part of his pay."

When the President proposed the tax investigation, he said that he believed there were a good many millions of dollars that could be forced into the federal treasury as a result of such inquiry. His action followed sweeping orders issued to internal revenue agents and auditors to review every income tax return with the utmost care. The agents and auditors, of course, will go over the returns filed by the entire list of income tax payers, little as well as big, but the congressional investigation will be devoted only to some of the men called by Mr. Roosevelt, "economic royalists." It is obvious that congress cannot go into all returns so congress will pick on the big ones because those men will have names out of which good headlines in newspapers can be written.

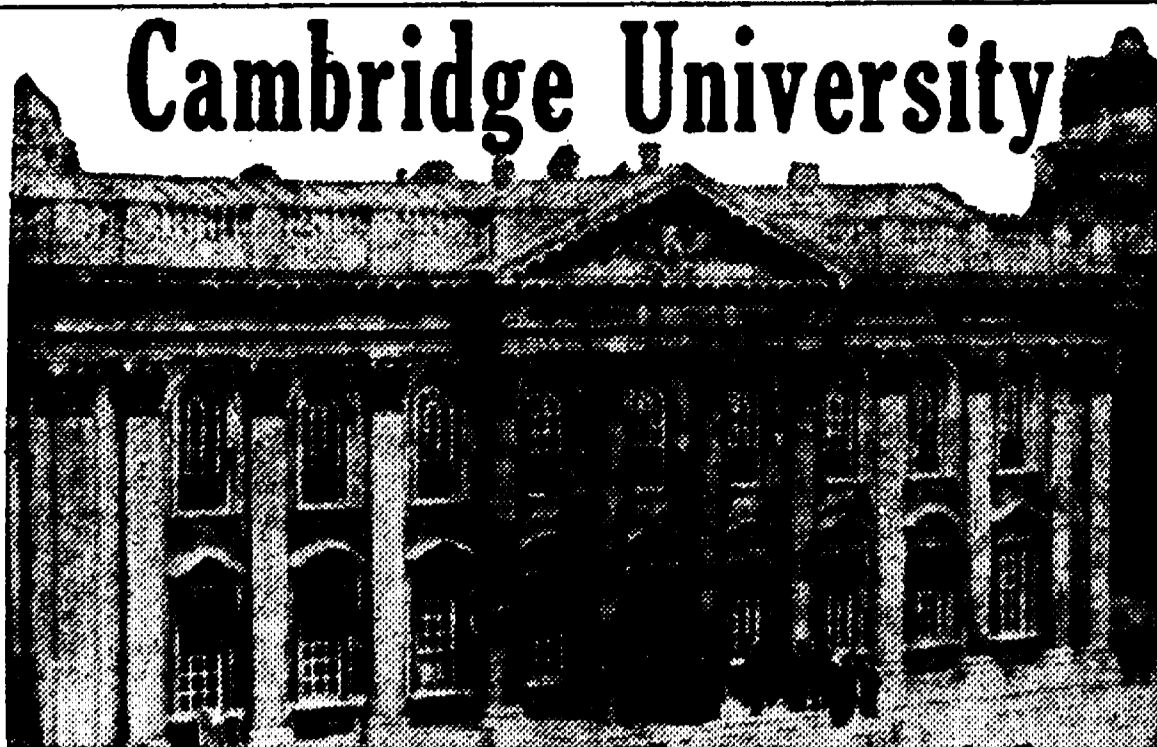

The Treasury had a different idea about the investigation which congress undertook at the President's request. The Treasury's plan contemplated a number of secret hearings, star chamber sessions, and I believe everyone knows what can be had in a star chamber session with bureaucrats operating with all of the powers they possess in our government. Word of the Treasury's ideas did not please congressional leaders and they very quickly put their foot down on the scheme. Of course, members of the house and senate figured they would not share in the political benefits unless they did the investigating. I hear much comment to the effect, however, that an investigation in the manner congress had decided to make it is much preferable to the star chamber proceedings which the Treasury proposed.

I mentioned that the congressional committee is dealing only with "big names." The reason for this is plain. It would do no good at all in a publicity way for the congressional groups to call in some small taxpayer who, by availing himself of the privileges of the law, had been able to reduce his total tax to a comparatively few dollars. On the other hand, if a big business man, an economic royalist, claims all of the exemptions and deductions that the law specifies and thereby cuts down his tax, he becomes the subject or the target for much ballyhoo about tax avoidance. I do not see the difference.

Since the President finds himself in a deadlock with congress on his proposal to add six justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States, he has turned to a new approach in dealing with the legislative situation. He has suddenly loaded congress down with work. This is to be distinguished from the course he has followed in his earlier years of his tenure when he submitted only one legislative suggestion at a time.

Now, in addition to the court reorganization proposal, there is before congress the far-reaching governmental reorganization plan, the billion dollar slum clearance and house building, farm tenancy bill and a highly controversial piece of legislation proposing to establish minimum wages and maximum hours for labor. These are, in addition, of course, to the tax revision proposition I have discussed above and the annual appropriation bills with the billion and a half relief fund measure.

Western Newspaper Union.

The Senate House, Cambridge.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

MANY American college men, old and young, find odd contrasts between university life in the United States and that of ancient Cambridge. These differences are plain in discipline, in daily life, in the relations between faculty and undergraduates (never "students" at Cambridge), and in certain customs peculiar to this venerable seat of learning.

There is little about the dingy railroad station at Cambridge to suggest that somewhere thereabouts stands a great university town.

A policeman of whom you ask your way to "The University" offers no help; he cannot, simply because there are so many colleges here, each in itself a little university. However, after driving into town along a wide thoroughfare which your taxi man tells you had been in ancient times a highway used by Roman soldiers, you finally arrive at St. John's college which you are to enter.

Because John Harvard, principal founder of the famous American center of learning which bears his name, was educated at Cambridge, this university holds a special interest for people in the United States.

John Harvard entered Emmanuel college in 1627. In an old leather book there you see his signature, and a notation that he paid a ten shilling matriculation fee.

Now a tablet is set up in the chapel at Emmanuel to his memory; and last year Cambridge in England observed with sympathetic interest the movement in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the founding of Harvard college.

Each Cambridge college is a separate entity. Each has its own chapel, lecture rooms and assembly hall, but most of the space is devoted to residential quarters.

This independence has been characteristic of Cambridge from its earliest days. It dates from the foundations established by religious orders, such as the Dominicans and the Carmelites, most of which belong to the first part of the Thirteenth century. It continued with the foundation of the colleges, the first of which was Peterhouse, established in 1284. The majority of the others followed in the Fourteenth, Fifteenth, and Sixteenth centuries, though Selwyn was founded as recently as 1882.

Finally Admitted Women.

Cambridge long held out against the admission of women students, and, though it was obliged at last to surrender and welcome the two girls' colleges, Newham and Girton, more than sixty years ago, it still, unlike Oxford, does not allow women to take actual degrees.

The "undergraduates" attend lectures, both university and college, with the undergraduates, and take the same "honors" examinations (they are not allowed to take the easier "pass" examinations), but if successful their reward is merely a "title to a degree."

Every college has its own staff of tutors and its own endowments which, together with the fees from its student members, provide for its upkeep. In many cases the colleges have acquired much landed property.

From the beginning it is impressed on the student that the loyalty of the individual is first to his college. It is by no means uncommon for the members of a family to send their sons to one particular college, generation after generation. But in the background there remains the Alma Mater, the university itself. To the initiated it is your college that you mention first; to the stranger, if asked, you announce yourself as a Cambridge man.

The university, like a college, is a corporate body with its own endowments supplemented by contributions from the colleges and the government. It also has its own lecture halls and research laboratories and it alone appoints the professors, who are the elite among the "dons," or faculty members.

While the ultimate governing authority is the senate, which consists of those who have taken the degree of master of arts, the executive authority is vested in the chancellor, elected by the senate, who is now always a prominent national figure.

In practice, however, his duties are performed by the resident vice-chancellor, who is invariably the head of one of the colleges.

Gowns Are Important.

This division of the university's life into colleges is seen in the differences in the gowns, which all undergraduates must possess. These are curiously abbreviated garments, a survival of the clerks' uniform of the Middle Ages; but the forms of each college have distinctive features, such as the three small velvet chevrons on the sleeves of those of St. John's.

Normally the gowns are black, but those of Caius (pronounced "Keys") are blue with black facings, those of Trinity a darker blue. They, and their accompanying square mortar-board caps, are often in the most decrepit state, since a tattered gown or a crushed cap is regarded as a sign of seniority; hence, "freshers," as the first-year undergraduates are called, frequently indulge in an orgy of near-destruction to acquire this outward mark of seniority. This procedure can prove expensive. It may involve the purchase of an entire new outfit to secure the approval of outraged authority.

Gowns are worn when attending lectures, or when dining in college hall, which is the one occasion when the members of a college meet together, a certain number of nights each week, whether they wish to or not.

Gowns must also be worn on the streets after dusk, and woe betide the unfortunate undergraduate who encounters a proctor when not in this garb. It is an equally heinous sin if he be found smoking in the streets, even when he is properly attired. These are two of the offenses against the dignity of the university for which the proctors, who have charge of university discipline, are on the lookout.

A proctor, to the undergraduate, is an impressive and fear-inspiring being not only because of the moral weight of the authority behind him but also because he is always supported by two "bulldogs" or "bullers." These robust college porters, in spite of silk hats and formal black suits which they are obliged to wear, are often surprisingly agile in their pursuit of a delinquent undergraduate.

Process of Discipline.

But when a capture is effected, proper formalities must be observed.

"Sir," says the buller, polite but puffing, "the proctor would like to speak to you for a moment."

And when you are brought before the majesty of authority, the conversation is equally courteous.

"Sir, I regret to see that you are not properly dressed; I should be glad if you would call on me in the morning."

Your name is noted in a book, and when in a spirit of due repentance the visit is made the next day, you are fined. If you are a bachelor of arts the fine is larger, for surely years of discretion, accompanied by the right to wear a longer gown and a proper tassel on the cap, must be expected to bring a proper respect for the laws of the university. Offenses committed on Sunday also involve a double penalty. No offender escapes. It is on record that King George VI smoked what was probably the most expensive cigarette of his life during his undergraduate days at Cambridge.

Friendly rivalry among the colleges is shown in the wide variety of sports jackets, or "blazers." They appear in all colors and combinations of colors, and may denote not only membership in some particular college but also some athletic achievement, such as membership in the cricket eleven or the Rugby football team.

Most coveted is the pale blue blazer which only those who have represented the university in athletics are entitled to wear. For the remainder of their lives these fortunate ones will be remembered as Cambridge "blues." There are "half blues" for the less arduous sports, such as shooting, or even chess! "Blazers" owe their very name to Cambridge, for this was the term quite naturally applied to the scarlet coats which the Lady Margaret Boat club, of St. John's college, adopted as its uniform.

Sports in general hold a high place in life at Cambridge. Rugby and association football—known as "rugger" and "soccer"—are popular in the winter, while in summer cricket and tennis take their turn. But the sport of sports at Cambridge is rowing.

Pull Hair to Become Indian.

One of the first procedures of the Ohio Indians in transforming a white youngster into a full-fledged member of their tribe was to change his haircut. They would do this by pulling out his hair, one at a time, until only a small patch remained on the top of his head. This would then be interwoven with colored strings or other fastenings. —Rocky Mountain Herald.

By Lemuel F. Parton

New Income Tax Ferret.

WASHINGTON.—The more ferocious New-Dealers took it pretty hard when Prof. Roswell Foster Magill became special assistant to the secretary of the treasury, to explore tax-dodging and point out the dodgers.

He was known as a conservative, and he is a son of the distinguished Hugh Stewart Magill of Chicago, who, as president of the American Federation of Investors, is bracketed more with the haves than the have-nots. The treat-em-rough crowd here wanted Harold Groves of the University of Wisconsin for the tax job. Economic royalists are Mr. Groves' favorite clay targets.

Secretary Morgenthau insisted on bringing in Professor Magill, as an authority on federal taxation, and as a man who ought to be able to uncover hide-outs and get-aways in the income tax maze. The Magill report on tax evasion spurs a drive for a general overhauling and tightening of the income tax law. President Roosevelt, in his last press conference, made it clear that the swing on big-income tax-dodgers was entirely premeditated and that a congressional investigation would follow. This writer gathered, at the conference, that action would be immediate and overt, possibly starting with the President's return from Hyde Park.

Hold-outs on the Magill appointment are cheering the Columbia professor today. There is no indication that he pulled his punch in his fact-finding inquiry and the President seemed to think he had enough ammunition to sink one or all of those $100,000 yachts, allegedly used for tax write-offs.

Professor Magill might be one of those "six men with a passion for anonymity" for which the President yearned when he was telling about the Brownlow report. Naturally a tax expert isn't garlanded or spotlighted like the top-bracket politicians here, and that is all right with Professor Magill who has been busier than a gopher burrowing through the treasury tax underground the last few months.

He is surprisingly human for one of his profession, with nothing dedicated or actuarial about him, and has made a pleasant field day out of his tax evasion study.

Professor Magill is forty-two years old, a native of Auburn, Ill. He was graduated from Dartmouth and from the University of Chicago, as a Doctor of Jurisprudence. He was a captain in the World War and began the practice of law in Chicago in 1920.

He was on the University of Chicago faculty from 1921 to 1923 and has been with Columbia since 1924. He was adviser to the tax commission of Porto Rico in 1928 and is the author of several impressive, and to the layman quite bewildering, books on federal taxation.

Conservatives on the Supreme court turn liberal. Certain congressmen talk like sockless Jerry Simpson and work like the Commonwealth Edison. The conservative Professor Magill gets a big hand on the left. Past performance doesn't seem to be the guide and indicator it used to be, here in the capital.

Social Security Advances.

IT'S "Anchors Aweigh" for the social security board, as the Supreme court hands it its clearance papers. Arthur J. Altmeyer, in the chart room, had the course already mapped. Plans for immediate wide extension of the scope and activities of the board, in six fields, are announced. This extension will bring several additional million persons under the act.

Mr. Altmeyer has burrowed in dry statistics for years, coming to the surface as director of novel governmental financial operations probably unprecedented in history. He is a native of De Pere, Wis., the son of Dutch parents, an alumnus of Wisconsin university, a former statistician of the Wisconsin tax commission and chief statistician of the Wisconsin industrial commission.

In 1933, he was made, chief of the labor branch of the compliance division of the NRA, and later was appointed second assistant secretary of labor. He is the author of several books on subjects in the field of labor law and governmental accounting.

Rhodes Wasted His Time

In the latter part of the Nineteenth century, during the imperialistic scramble for African territory, England was accused of having aspirations for a railroad from the cape to Cairo, through all-British territory. Today, that railroad is still incomplete and probably never will be completed. The obstacles now, however, are not political as they once were. Instead, they are economic, for the locomotive has to compete with the airplane and the motor car. Thus ends Cecil Rhodes' dream on which he lavished so much time and intrigue. Defeated in his own time by the political difficulties of the project, he would, if he were alive today, find that he had wasted his time and that invention rather than intrigue had solved the problem.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Storing acidity or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer stinging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something that is only locally known. Use Doan's Pills. A reliable guide of grateful people recommends Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

RURAL WOMEN GET CONFERENCE INVITATIONS

Conference plans for the annual visitation of rural women on the campus of Michigan State College and a week's vacation from washing dishes are announced by R. W. Tenney short course instructor at the college.

Through rural county agriculture agents the women are already registering for the program which begins Sunday July 25, and continues thru Thursday July 29.

Because dormitory facilities are limited, the women who expect to attend are being asked to register in advance and make early reservations for room accommodations.

In the language of R. W. Tenney, purpose of the annual conference include the opportunity to study home and community problems to have a and rest, to make new friends and meet old acquaintances to enjoy the beauty of the campus and to gain inspiration.

Every visitor will be able to attend general meetings as well as pick out hobbies and special interests. Fashions in clothing and foods home furnishing home management, child development, nutrition and parliamentary law are to be offered.

Special lectures to be given are: geology, biology and gardening. Hobbies for discussion will include landscaping, vegetable gardening, poultry dancing trees music, art appreciation recreation books, swimming, tap and creative writing.

ONE CAR N THREE CARRIES STICKER

Regardless of the marked increase in the number of motor vehicles on the states highways, about one car owner in three buys his annual license on the installment plan, figures show.

Leon D. Case, Secretary of State, points out that the 1933 act which brought the "sticker" or half year permit into being, has been accepted as the permanent method of buying plates by some 500,000 car owners every year.

The use of the half-year permits expires Aug. 1, annually and at a date prior to that, designed by the Secretary of State, plates go on sale at half price. Thus, as the "half price date approaches, few stickers are sold. In 1936, a total of 448,035 stickers were sold; records of the department of state as of June 16, show 441,726 stickers had been recorded at Lansing though actually more had been sold at branch offices on that date.

It is pointed out by Secretary Case that on June 16, the number of plates and stickers recorded at Lansing as having been sold this year, is nearly 35,000 in excess of the total plates sold in the entire year of 1936. New car purchases during the balance of this year, plus purchase of plates for cars not yet registered for 1937, will swell the number of cars to a near all time record, it is believed.

The date at which 1937 license plates go on sale at half price is July 1.

The Safety Man

The other day I was asked, "Why do we have all these accidents in spite of the fact that so much safety work is being done?" I told this person frankly, "As long as people feel that safety work is someone else's job and not their own we will have automobile accidents."

When each of us realizes that the prevention of automobile accidents is everybody's job, then we will have a safety-consciousness that will be valuable in the prevention of accidents. It is your job and my job; it is everybody's job to prevent accidents.

Apartment Dwellers, Picnickers, Cottagers:
For your cooking this summer choose DUTCH OVEN SUSAN!

In small, cramped quarters, cooking is a problem... particularly during the summer months when a stove heats up the kitchen so quickly. But there is a comfortable, convenient way of preparing meals—a method made to order for people in apartments, cottages, crowded rooms: DUTCH OVEN SUSAN, the electric cook. For 2c it will cook a complete meal for a family of two to ten people—and it operates from any electric outlet. No heat can escape through its insulated walls. After the cooking is finished, it will keep food warm for hours. It is ideal to carry on picnics: It will hold a complete dinner—two vegetables, a roast, potatoes and gravy.

On sale at hardware stores, furniture and department stores, other electric appliance dealers and at all Detroit Edison offices.

I. O. F. TEAM

A team picked from the Pinckney Soft Ball League defeated the Howell Odd Fellow team here Thursday night by a score of 7 to 6. The game was played mostly in the rain. Paul Singer pitching for Pinckney only allowed six hits but Howell scored 3 runs on errors the first inning. Pinckney got 3 runs in the 3rd when Reason singled, W. Myers walked and Darrow hit a home run. They tied the score in the 4th on singles by N. Miller and Reason. In the 6th Reason got his third son. W. Myers forced Miller at second, but Lamb doubled emptying the bases. In the 6th Reason got his 3rd hit of the game and scored the winning run on Jim Singer's double. Allen and Sherman hit home runs for Howell. Pinckney pays a return game at Howell Thursday (tomorrow) night.

TRI-COUNTY LEAGUE GAMES

Pinckney Shut Out 7 to 0 by Ann Arbor. Dexter and Hamburg Win

In the Tri-County League game at Pinckney Sunday Ann Arbor used Russell Dobson, U. of M. freshman in the box and he had too much stuff for Pinckney, limiting them to one hit and no runs. Only two Pinckney players got as far as first base.

Bob Smith beat out a perfect bunt and Earl Ward was hit by a pitched ball. Dobson got 12 strikeouts. The game was called in the 7th inning on account of rain. Harlo Haines was found for 8 hits but only allowed one earned run. This was scored in the first inning when Townsley doubled and Kremer and Wilson singled. Ann Arbor scored 5 runs in the 3rd when the Pinckney infield made three errors. Their last run in the 4th was also unearned.

Next Sunday Hamburg plays at Pinckney. This is one of their big games and a crowd is expected. The Pinckney lineup will be revised for the occasion and the team will do its utmost to win.

"Smash—the side road!" Jim, keen enough now, sprinted through shadows to the fence that closed in the stable yard at the rear of the grounds. From there, looking across meadows, he was able to see the side road which joined the Cherry Hollow road a scant quarter of a mile beyond the riding academy.

The side road had a dirt surface. It was one of the many winding byways used by horseback riders, narrow, thinly wooded. Through a fringe of trees Jim saw, in the clear starlight, two discs of light, obviously the headlights of a car. People parked in the side road, sometimes, kids from the village, young people looking for privacy in romantic surroundings.

Jim had seen headlights in the side road on fine evenings before. The position of these particular headlights, however, caused him to give a sharp exclamation. They were not in horizontal alignment. Even at this distance he could see that one was higher than the other, as though one side of the car had gone off the road into a ditch. Convinced, at last, that something was wrong, Jim vaulted the fence and set off, running, in the direction of the lights.

The distance across the meadows to the side road was not more than quarter of a mile. As he ran through meadow-grass and goldenrod, Jim tried to remember whether or not there was a ditch at the left side of the road. He had ridden along it frequently on horseback but, now, he could not remember. Half way across the fields it occurred to him that he should have driven around in the car. Whoever it was, if they'd gone off the road, might need a tow-line. Well, it wasn't far to go back. Might as well keep on now.

Looking ahead through the fringe of trees, the body of the car was nothing more than a lightish blur in the shadows. It was a long car, he observed, a roadster with the top folded back. One of the neighborhood debutantes out on a lark. It wasn't late. Half-past twelve. A gentle slope upward. He hadn't remembered that the road was a little higher than the meadows through which it ran.

Jim came out on the road and was gripped for an instant in throbbing fear. The car at the side of the road was Cecily's roadster.

He ran to the car, his heart thudding, his breath coming in painful gasps. There was a figure slumped down in the seat, a girl's figure, terrifyingly limp and still, one arm hanging over the door of the car. Jim knew the instant he touched the figure, his hands under the arms to lift it into a less cramped position, that the girl was not Cecily and relief flooded through him. The interval of suspended fear was followed, almost at once, by incredulity and alarm, for when he had lifted the inert figure higher in the seat, and turned on the search-light attached to the windshield, he saw that the girl was Dolly.

She was alive, thank God for that! but she was unconscious. Blood oozed from a cut above her temple where a lock of hair lay in a wet curl against her forehead. Jim wiped away the blood, laid her lengthwise on the seat of the car, rubbed her wrists, took off his coat and folded it under her head. If only he had some water.

Dolly made no response to his efforts to bring her to consciousness. She lay as he had placed her, her eyes closed, her hands with the bright red nails crossed limply over her breast.

Incredulity and alarm receded before the necessity for thought and action. Who had brought Dolly here in Cecily's car? Tommy, of course, Jim thought. Who else but Tommy would have taken Cecily's car? But where was Tommy? He had gone for help, for a doctor, perhaps. Was it Tommy who had knocked at the door? He would return with assistance soon. There was nothing to do but wait.

Or perhaps the roadster was not seriously damaged. Jim examined the position of the car. The left front wheel, sliding into the depression at the side of the road, had crashed against a low line of stonework, the remains of an old wall. Jim judged, noting with the aid of the revolving search-light the moss which covered the stones. Tommy must have been driving at terrific speed to have struck so heavily. The tire was torn off the rim and three or four of the wooden wheel spokes were splintered. Jim realized that it would be impossible to drive the car in that condition even if he could get it back into the road.

Waiting for Tommy to return, he attempted to reconstruct the accident. When the car had hit the stonework, it had sideswiped a tree. The force of the impact had flung Dolly down and to the side. Her head had struck the upper edge of the door or the tree, perhaps. There was no more than a fraction of an inch of space between the car and the tree. Jim saw in a flash of imagination, the car sliding, crashing into the stonework, Dolly flung against the tree.

Tommy, he assumed, had escaped without being hurt. The left side of the car was on the road. There were no signs of an injury to the driver, no bloodstains, no broken glass. He was probably terrified, though, Jim thought grimly. Where was he? Why hadn't he come in when he thumped at the office door? Frightened out of his wits. Off to get a doctor. Perhaps a car had passed and given him a lift. Why didn't he come back?

A car approached along the road. Jim, fuming with helpless inactivity, waited impatiently for it to reach the roadster. If this was Tommy—

It was not Tommy. Both the occupants of the coupe, a boy and a girl, were strangers to Jim.

"Hello!" The boy called, thrusting his head through the opened window. "Have you had an accident?" The girl gave a little scream.

Jim wasted no time on explanations.

"Do you know the riding academy on the Cherry Hollow road?" he asked the boy.

"Sure." The boy's face under the visor of a checkered cap was excited and important.

"There's a telephone in the office," Jim continued. "You'll find it easily. I left the door open and there's a light. Call a doctor. The nearest one. Ask information."

"Okay, buddy." The boy released the brake with a jerk and the girl, leaning out of the window for an interested view of the disaster, fell back into the seat.

Jim waited for help to come, going at intervals to look at Dolly, wiping the blood from the wound above her temple, speaking to her gently, watching with pity and a mounting feeling of alarm her still face, white under the rouge, bending to hear her faint breathing.

The coupe returned after what seemed to Jim an eternity of waiting. The boy got out; the girl followed. Jim was scarcely aware of her.

"Did you get a doctor?" he asked the boy.

"The state troopers are on their way and an ambulance from the hospital at Chestertown."

The boy was obviously proud of his efficiency. The girl's eyes were two round disks in a round white face. Jim swore grimly under his breath. He didn't want the police mixing into this—not, at any rate, until he had talked to Tommy, until he had gotten in touch with Mr. Vaughn.

"Why didn't you call out the marines?" he asked caustically.

The girl giggled in nervous appreciation.

"Shut up, Gladys," the boy said irritably. "I ought to have taken you home. You told me to ask information," he said to Jim. "I told her it was a pretty bad accident and she phoned the police."

"All right. Thanks," Jim said briefly, and realizing that they intended to see the excitement through, he added, "Have a cigarette."

Another eternity of waiting passed, an eternity made more dismal than the preceding one by the boy's eager questions about the accident, the girl's identification of Dolly, her awed and nervous comments, Jim's growing anxiety for Dolly, the fact that Tommy did not appear. He wished he had gone for his own car and taken Dolly to the village. That might have been dangerous, though. He had no idea how badly she was hurt. He'd have to get in touch with Mr. Vaughn. Where was Tommy?

The police car finally arrived, conveying the ambulance from the hospital at Chestertown.

"Evening, Sergeant McCready," the boy in the checked cap greeted the trooper with swaggering familiarity. "You made pretty good time."

"Good-evening," the tall young man in the uniform returned, scarcely glancing at the boy. "Who's hurt?" he asked addressing Jim.

"She's in the car," Jim led the way. Sergeant McCready followed, accompanied by his companion, a stocky older man. The ambulance driver and an interne came up bearing a stretcher. The boy and the girl with the round white face pressed forward.

Jim watched the interne with strained intensity as he bent over Dolly, felt her pulse, examined the cut above her temple.

"Is she badly hurt?" He asked the question in a low shaken voice. "I can't tell without an examination," the interne said.

Jim moved forward to help the interne place Dolly on the stretcher.

Lifting her gently, his throat felt tight.

"You can give me the name of her family, I suppose," the interne said.

Jim supplied the information. She looked so small and so still on the stretcher. He felt as though he had deserted her when the ambulance bore her away.

Sergeant McCready turned to Jim.

"Does this car belong to you?" he asked.

"No," Jim replied.

"Who does it belong to?"

"It belongs to Miss Cecily Vaughn, Officer. T. H. Vaughn 'Meadowbrook'."

"I thought so," the sergeant's companion cut in. "I've seen this car plenty of times on the road."

"Does Miss Vaughn know you were driving her car?"

The question startled Jim. The sergeant assumed with such casual certainty that he was responsible for the accident. It had not occurred to him that he might be suspected.

"I was not driving the car," he said evenly.

"Who was?"

Jim hesitated for a moment. Then—"I don't know," he said.

"No?" It was the sergeant's companion who spoke. His voice was unpleasantly edged with sarcasm.

"Well, buddy, what's your story?"

Jim told it briefly. He sketched his position in Mr. Vaughn's employ, told of being awakened, of running across the fields, of finding Dolly alone in the disabled car. He knew, before either of the officers spoke that they did not believe him. His momentary hesitation, circumstantial evidence was all against him.

"That's not an entirely convincing story," the sergeant said when Jim had finished.

"It's as full of holes as a sieve," his companion remarked. He turned to the boy and the girl who were watching and listening with wide-eyed interest. "You're riding along the road and you find this fellow, here with the car and a girl who's out cold. Did you see anybody else?"

"No, sir." The boy stepped forward eagerly. "It happened like that. We're driving along and we stop and he asks me to go down to his place and call a doctor. When I told information there'd been an accident she put in a call for you. I didn't see anyone else."

"He might be telling the truth, though," the girl offered, glancing at Jim. "There was a light on in his place. He might have left like he said, when somebody knocked at the door."

The sergeant took the names and addresses of the witnesses—Frank Wilson and Gladys Smith—and sent them reluctantly on their way.

"We'll take you over to headquarters," he said to Jim, leading the way to the police car.

"How long will you keep me there?" Jim asked.

"That depends. We can arrange a preliminary hearing tomorrow. Can you get bail?" he asked, not unkindly.

Bail! Good Lord! He was under arrest!

"I think so," he said. "It will be necessary for me to get in touch with someone at 'Meadowbrook.' Mr. Vaughn is not at home."

"You can call from headquarters," the sergeant said.

"Miss Vaughn's car?" Jim asked.

"We'll send a man out here to take care of it. Let's get going, Kelly."

Jim liked the sergeant. He had a clean-cut, intelligent appearance. His manner was neither bullying nor inflated with self-importance. Jim squeezed himself into the police coupe with the two men and resigned himself to the unpleasant aspects of the immediate future.

Chestertown was a sizable borough eight or nine miles from Glendale. Jim's mind was occupied with thoughts and conjectures. It was Tommy, of course. But where had he gone? Even though he'd been frightened out of his wits, Tommy wouldn't have left Dolly, dying perhaps, at the side of the road, and run off to hide.

There was some explanation. He, Jim, would have to keep the kid out of the mess until he could get in touch with Mr. Vaughn. He felt responsible. He shouldn't have let Tommy believe that Dolly might make trouble with the moon-calf, puppy-love letters the boy had written her. He'd probably taken her out tonight in an attempt to get them. Dolly had looked so small and so still on the stretcher. Was it possible that Dolly was going to die...?

When he had gone inside the highway patrol station with the officers, Jim asked if he might make a telephone call.

Jim gave the operator MacPherson's number. After an interval of insistent whirring, he heard MacPherson's voice at the other end of the wire. Feeling grateful that Mrs. MacPherson had not answered the call, Jim sketched his predicament, asked MacPherson to go up to the house and make sure that every member of the family was there and come at once to the troopers' headquarters at Chestertown. MacPherson's voice, controlled, calmly efficient, reassured Jim. There was no cause for alarm, he told himself.

The following hour was unpleasant enough. The sergeant and his associate asked a wearying number of questions. Jim knew that they did not believe his story. Why should they? He thought. The evidence was all against him. He had to keep Tommy out of it. Oh, well, it was only for a time...

When the hands of the clock had crept around past half past three, Jim heard in the early morning stillness the sound of a car stopping in front of the house. A moment later, Cecily came into the room, followed by MacPherson. She had not changed her clothes; obviously she had not gone to bed. She still wore the filmy floating dress and the short jacket of brilliant brocade buttoned snugly at her waist. Was it only this evening that he had seen her walking across the side lawn at "Meadowbrook," waiting for her escort to take her to Marjory Patton's party? It seemed an eternity to Jim.

"Jim!" Cecily cried softly, walking toward him. "What have you been doing, Jim?" Her voice was steady, her color was high, her hair was blown into flying tendrils giving her an attractively hoydenish appearance.

"I'm under arrest," he said, with a half smile for Cecily and MacPherson.

"Tell us more of the matter, lad," MacPherson said quietly. His expression was grave and concerned.

Jim told the story again.

"But that's absurd," Cecily turned to the tall young trooper standing beside the desk. "Mr. Fielding couldn't have done a thing like that. Sergeant McCready. It's utterly impossible. There must be some mistake."

The darling! Jim thought, touched and elated by her defense of him, loving her spirit and her gallantry. "It is your car, isn't it, Miss Vaughn?" Sergeant McCready asked.

"I suppose it is," Cecily replied. "At least my car isn't in the garage. Mr. Fielding is familiar with it."

Sergeant McCready's face was impassive.

"Did you give anyone permission to use the car last night?" he asked.

"No," she answered promptly.

"But I know Mr. Fielding didn't take it. One of the men on the place must have decided to go on a spree."

"Is everyone at home?" asked Jim.

"Everyone is there," MacPherson replied.

"We looked into their rooms," Cecily continued. "They were all asleep, Susan, Tommy, Jerry, Miss Parker, the maids. I was just getting home from the party when MacPherson came up to the house. And now you're going home with us, Jim."

"We'll have to hold Fielding," the tall young sergeant said.

Cecily turned swiftly. "Hold him? Why?"

MacPherson glanced at Jim. "I'm afraid that ball can't be arranged tonight," he said. "I am not a property owner and Miss Cecily is a minor."

"But you know us, Sergeant McCready," Cecily appealed to the trooper. "I can assure you that Father would want to do everything possible for Mr. Fielding. I'll make myself personally responsible. Isn't that enough?"

"I'm afraid not," Sergeant McCready replied with a half-smile. "In the matter of seeing or skipping a light we do, occasionally, make an exception. But in a case like this we can't," he sergeant continued. "A girl has been hurt—how badly we don't yet know."

"And you admit you didn't give him permission to drive your car," Officer Kelly added.

"But he wasn't driving the car," Cecily said heatedly. "He has told you exactly what happened."

"It was a good story," Officer Kelly observed laconically. "I've never heard of anything so ridiculous!" Cecily was angry, a little frightened.

"You'd better go home with MacPherson," Jim said gently. "It's almost morning. I don't mind staying here. There will be a hearing some time tomorrow."

"Will they let you go then?" she asked Jim.

This reminds us of a story we heard years ago. A certain man went to his family physician and complained of being ill. The doctor told him the only thing wrong with him was he drank too much. The man in a rage left the office without paying him. His health continued bad so he went to a specialist in Detroit. After waiting for some time in the reception room he was ushered into the presence of the doctor and told the fee for the examination was $20. He paid it and after the examination the specialist told him, "The only thing wrong with you is you are drinking too much. If you don't stop you will die." The man went home and quit drinking and recovered his health but the family doctor got a great kick out of the fact that the advice he gave free gratis was not accepted until someone charged $20 for it.

Governor Murphy also signed the new sales tax bill. Under the terms of the new law goods purchased by mail or in person outside of Michigan for use within the state become liable to the 3 percent sales tax levy. The measure was designed to protect business along the border and to increase revenues. It was estimated the yield will approximate $1,500,000 a year.

McPherson State Bank

Over Sixty-Eight Years of Safe Banking
GRADUATES

To the graduates of the schools of this county we offer congratulations on your accomplishments. We know that you will each have a different idea in mind as to what you want to do in the world. Some of you will go on to college for special courses in law, medicine, or any one of many professions. Eventually you will all be earning your living. Some will make more money than others, but each must follow the same ruler. As a bank we are prepared to help you all build for the future. A Saving account opened now will serve as a solid foundation for an estate. A little added regularly grows very rapidly. It acts as a reserve for emergencies, something no one can tell when it will be needed. Thrift has been a by-word with every successful man in this country. Carnegie, Rockefeller Edison and many more started with a little or nothing but saving gave them the capital with which to build.
