St. Mary's Picnic Is July 25

Annual Event of Pinckney Catholic Church to be Held on Public Square

The date for St. Mary's annual picnic is Sunday, July 25. It will be held on the village square. The chicken dinner will be served from 11:00 A. M. until all are served. Following the dinner there will be games and amusements of all kinds.

This event is an annual homecoming for former Pinckneyites and by holding it on Sunday it was thought more people would be able to come. This picnic has been a yearly event for many years past and the attendance has been large. Last year Gov. Murphy spoke and was greeted by one of the largest crowds ever assembled in this community. People who live away make it a point to visit the old home town and renew old friendships.

DANCE PATTERSON LAKE

The Patterson Lake dance hall will be opened under new management on Saturday evening, July 17. Music by Five-Piece Detroit Orchestra. Dances part old part new. Everybody invited. Refreshments served.

SUMMER CAMPS OPENED

The summer camps in this section have now all opened. There are about 50 at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Silver Lake. A hundred or so at the Camp Robinson maintained by the Old Toledo new-boys at Silver Lake on the Frank Triplady farm, and several hundred at the U. of M. fresh air camp at Patterson Lake. In addition there is the Red Cross Girls Camp at One Lake and a new one started this year at North Lake. These camps do much to swell the population of Pinckney and they are the chief patrons of the free movies shown here every Saturday night by the Pinckney business men.

SOFT BALL GAME FRIDAY

Pinckney failed to show up for a softball game with Pinckney last Friday night. This week on Friday night the Pinckney soft ballers will play at Birkett at Silver Lake. The game will please be at the Dispatch office at 8:30 P. M.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN YOUNG PEOPLE'S CRUSADE

The young's People's Crusade Miss Imogene Quinn, speaker, is now in its second week, at the tent on the Grayton grounds, Howell. Much interest is being shown and attendance is increasing nightly.

The messages brought by Miss Quinn are very helpful and strengthening and the congregation song service is most inspiring. There have also been several special musical numbers rendered which have been greatly enjoyed.

As tent has been screened against mosquitoes and other insects, it makes a pleasant cool place to spend worthwhile hour each evening.

Services are being held every night of the week except Monday which has been set aside as rest night, beginning at 8 o'clock, and will continue up to and including Sunday night July 25.

Court Debate

Senatorial debate on the Supreme Court proposal overshadowed all other developments in Washington last week as 28,000 boy scouts evacuated the Capital and the House of Representatives approved the repeal of the widely protested "marriage clause" in the Civil Service Regulations and voted $4,850,000 for a new naval hospital and medical school in the district of Columbia, while individual Members criticized "stunt aviation flights" that costs the government $250,000 a day to have the Navy search for lost fliers. The senate Labor Committee intervened in the court battle to report a wage and hour bill that would fix the minimum wage at 40 cents an hour at the maximum hours at 40 a week.

The Supreme Court debate began immediately after the senate recessed following the Fourth of July recess. Senate galleries have been packed with every bit of standing room utilized since the argument began. Hundreds of persons have waited patiently and in vain outside the gallery doors as the "early birds" reminded Members of the House of Representatives are admitted to the floor of the Senate and many of them deserted their own sessions to face the trials at the rear of the Senate Chamber while the Senate battled fiercely over points of parliamentary procedure fighting for every possible technical advantage.

Endurance Contest

As the Court battle gave promise of becoming an endurance contest there was one section of the Senate gallery that was strikingly unoccupied. Directly opposite the rostrum of the Vice-President of presiding officer is the reserved gallery for the Diplomatic Corps. While long lines of citizens waited outside the other gallery doors the Diplomatic gallery was used by only a few foreign attachés who remained only a few minutes in the special gallery section.

Majority leader Joseph Robinson of Arkansas, who has been mentioned repeatedly for the Supreme Court vacancy caused by the retirement of Justice Vandevanter, may-headed the Administration forces while Democratic Senators Edward R. Burke of Nebraska and Burton K. Wheeler of Montana were the leaders of the opposition. The debate almost caused Senators to miss the All Star Baseball game that the American League with Chicago's Gehrig at second and Tommy Hughes pitching three innings won. Senator Robinson had declared he would keep the Senate in session until the Court issue was decided. He was prevailed upon, however, to permit the Senate to meet at 10 o'clock in the morning rather than at noon to permit an early recess. The debate has "stopped time in its flight" as far as the Congressional Record is concerned. While the ordinary calendar date is on the Record the Senate portion has the italicized notation, Legislative day of Tuesday, July 6, 1937. This legislative date will be carried (Continued on last page)

TABLE LICENSE APPLICATION

Considerable interest was shown at the village council meeting Tuesday night as it was known application was to be made by J. Cadwell for a tavern license. Proceeding action on the license a petition was presented to the council signed by Rue Lamb and others asking that only 1 beer dispensing place be licensed in the village. After some discussion the application was tabled.

TOOK EXAMINATION FOR RURAL CARRIER

The following from here took the examination for rural carrier at the Pinckney post office which was held at Howell Thursday: Alta Meyer, Miss Dorothy DeBarr, Gorman Kelly, Leo McCluskey, Leo Lavey, Lee Lavey, Wm. Clark, Marshall Meabon, Gerald Reason, Lloyd Hendee, Herbert Palmer, Grant Cass, Lorenzo Murphy, Leo Clark and Roland Shehan. The examination papers will be sent to Washington D. C. and one of the three receiving the highest standings will be selected by the civil service commissioner.

Miss Carmen Leland and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Dinkel were in Howell Saturday.

Current Comment

Gov Murphy added two subjects to his must legislation last week and predicted that the adjourned session of the legislature on July 29 would be a protracted affair.

The two new subjects are "Teachers Tenure" and "Rural Lighting". The others previously listed were civil service, unemployment compensation and labor relations. These bills were all introduced at the present session but failed to pass both houses. The teacher's tenure bill was amended so that it would not go into effect unless the voters of the district voted for it. Prospects that a quorum will be present on July 29 were brightened when Speaker Schroeder predicted that 90% of the house members to be present.

Dwight Rich, principal of Eastern high school, Lansing, and head of the Lansing Law and Order League has denied that his organization is a vigilante organization, or that it contemplates taking the law into its own hands. They will only act when requested to do so by legal authorities. He also denied that the organization was backed by industrialists. Stress is placed on citizenship education he stated. A vigilante organization has no established authority and is responsible to no one. For that reason such organizations in the past have often acted to gratify private spies. The Black Legion was a vigilante organization.

The supreme court bill is evidently in for a long fight and there is no prospect of an adjournment of congress until it has been disposed of. The new compromise bill seems to have won votes for it and at the present time the bill has a majority although 21 senators are still listed as undecided. Senator Logan of Kentucky charged in his opening speech that the sole object of the Democrat Senators opposed to the bill was to destroy President Roosevelt. This senator Wheeler, the leading senator against the bill, angrily denied. The new compromise bill would give the president the power to appoint one senator per year for every justice over 70 years old. As there is one vacancy now, one to be named for 1937 and another for 1938, it would mean virtually three new justices to be appointed.

Francis Confort, head of the Detroit Federation of Teachers takes an exception to the remarks of Dr. Burt Shurley head of the Detroit School Board, concerning the organization of teachers and denies that his organization is a union. It was organized six years ago and by obtaining the active support of labor and civic organizations has been able to get much school legislation passed.

So Mae West has at last remembered that she was married some 26 years ago. Weightier matters undoubtedly forced it from her mind. Hubby Wallace's court action to establish his standing as Miss West's husband does not seem to spring from any lifelong love for her but is chiefly due to his desire to obtain half of the three million dollars she has earned since she cut loose from him. In other words it is on the racket order.

The man who had the most to do with winning out for the cow inspector retired from active duty Thursday at the age of 70 years. His is Dr. T. S. Rich of the Federal department of Health in charge of bovine tuberculosis. When he came to Michigan in 1916 tuberculosis among cattle ran as high as 12 percent in Wayne county and 14 percent in Monroe county. Year by year this was reduced until today the ratio is not over one percent. Dr. Rich had a hard task as he had to educate the people about a disease of which they knew little. They knew that it threatened them with the loss of money. We know of one case not far from here in Washtenaw county where the cow inspector was said to have been driven off with a shotgun. Gradually the people began to understand the benefits of this work and now the opposition has practically disappeared. Doctors will tell you of the benefit of this work especially in the tender years of childhood. Many baby illnesses have almost completely disappeared and infant mortality has been greatly lowered.

LAST OF ALCOHOL GANG ARRESTED

Ward Myningham, 45, the only one of the alcohol gang who escaped capture when Sheriff Kennedy, Deputies Bassett and Huff and federal officers raided their still in Cohoctah recently was captured by federal men and is on $5000 bail. He is one of the head men of the gang. Sheriff Kennedy is receiving many compliments for his truck and two autos were confiscated work in rounding up the gang and making a clean sweep of it. The following picture we obtained from the Livingston County Press. It shows Sheriff Kennedy and Deputies Bassett and Huff standing in front of the confiscated still. The still was afterwards reduced to junk by the aid of a blow torch. Besides the apparatus shown here a quantity of wine was also confiscated.

Washington.—It appears that another session of congress will go by without the congress and the administration doing anything serious

Spending Will Go On

In the way of cutting down government expenses. There is nothing that can be done now toward carrying out the expressions made by President Roosevelt in his message last January when he told congress that he wanted to cut federal expenses and take important steps toward balancing the federal budget. The reason that federal spending is due to go on for another year at the extraordinary rate of the last four or five years is because a majority in congress, under the lash of the White House, refused to require states and local governments to bear a percentage of the relief costs. In other words, federal spending will go on because congress and the President have lacked the courage to start taking the federal government out of the relief work and gradually restore it to the care of those folks in the various communities who know where relief is needed.

There had been a very determined movement in congress to compel the states to share in the gigantic relief burden. It took on various forms and had various sponsors. But the end and aim of all of them was to divide the cost in equitable fashion.

The proposal that had the best chance of getting through was one offered by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate. He offered an amendment to the relief bill which would have required the states to contribute one-fourth of the amount expended in each state, with the federal Treasury supplying the remainder. When that amount was offered, it was something in the nature of a compromise between proposals that the states should bear 40 per cent and that they should bear none of the cost. With the White House operating through the President's lobbyist, Charles West, and Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the administration was able to force defeat of the Robinson amendment.

Now, Senator Barkley is assistant Democratic leader of the senate and so we had the spectacle of one of Mr. Roosevelt's spokesmen being on one side and a second one on the other side. The one who was spurred on by the President was victorious.

I am not sure that the Robinson proposal would have resulted in an appreciable reduction in the federal outlay for relief. Of course, it would have cut the total somewhat but not by the full one-fourth that appeared on its face. It was valuable as a piece of legislation, however, because it would have required the states again to assume some of the burden which only a few years ago they carried in its entirety. It was a principle for which Senator Robinson fought and it was a principle upon which he was defeated because Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, objected and still objects to returning any part of the relief obligation to the local authorities.

I suspect that Senator Robinson's activities on the relief proposition will not help his relations with the White House but I think it ought to be said that Senator Robinson demonstrated again his capacity as a statesman. He demonstrated as well that he recognizes the dangers confronting the United States Treasury which at the end of the current fiscal year—June 30—had an outstanding debt in excess of $38,000,000,000.

From among some of the senators I gained the impression that there is considerable worry about the government's spending and they wanted to see the Robinson amendment prevail because they recognized it as a move that would eventually bring federal government spending within control. Also, senators of that school of thought maintained that if states were called upon to bear some of the burden of relief, it would bring home forcefully the fact that all of this spending must sometime be made up out of taxes. People do not like to pay taxes and they cannot be blamed for their attitude. Unless they realize, however, that borrowed money is being spent and they and their children and children's children are to be taxed to pay off the loans, they will not be in favor of reducing national, state or local expenses.

The debate in the senate on the proposition to send some of the relief burden back to the states showed rather plainly that most of the senators are disgusted with talk that hunger and distress will haunt the land if states are required again to take over some of this charity work. The impression I gained from this debate was that a powerful lobby of mayors from some of the larger cities was turning on all of the steam it could muster. Mayor La Guardia of New York was the bold-est of these as he has been bold-constantly in forcing the federal government to pay the relief rolls in New York city and save his own New York city budget.

Another phase of the debate should be noticed. It was the reluctance of congress to reassume its right to direct and control the spending of federal funds. The above-mentioned Mr. Hopkins wants to be free and unfettered in his spending and those policies were the ones he recommended to Mr. Roosevelt. Consequently, with administration pressure on many senators, the Hopkins idea prevailed and so for another year congress must sit back and watch the Hopkins organization spend money virtually any way it desires.

I think there ought to be a lesson in this whole situation upon which the country can look back rather regretfully. The experience gained by making lump sum appropriations certainly shows how a bad habit can be contracted and how difficult it is to cure that habit. Seldom in history until this depression would congress ever vote lump sum appropriations for executive departments to spend as they will. Having contracted the habit, however, it is going to be difficult hereafter to deny any President lump sum appropriations, provided only that he has a substantial majority in the house and senate.

No doubt many persons will wonder why this sort of thing constitutes an important issue. The answer is simple. Governments are wasteful and the federal government, being larger than state or local governments, is just that much more wasteful and unable to handle money carefully. If states and local communities have to bear expenses of this sort out of their own treasuries, they see to it that only those entitled to relief obtain it. Unhappily, the national relief system is caring for thousands upon thousands of men who could get jobs and who could support their families but who will not do so as long as money is given them from Washington.

Since the national debt is at the highest point in the history of our nation, there is a growing conviction at the Capitol that a halt must be called sometime. The present trouble is that there are not yet enough courageous representatives and senators to force a stoppage in such spending.

While the steel strike blazed forth with battle after battle, blood was shed and property was damaged, little attention was paid to a development here in the nation's capital—in the government itself.

While all of the sensational things were happening on the steel front, one Jacob Baker was resigning his job as assistant relief administrator and was accepting the job of chief of a new labor unit to be associated with John L. Lewis and his Committee for Industrial Organization. Mr. Baker's unit is to be made up of government workers themselves, a labor union in the government of the United States.

For some years, there have been minor labor units among government employees. They were affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Generally speaking, they were impotent and did little more than create a dozen jobs for the officials of the organization.

Now, however, the government workers are to have a "militant, fighting labor union which will get things done for them." Such at least is the press agent word that has been spread under Mr. Baker's direction.

Mr. Baker is familiar with the problems of government service. Undoubtedly he recognizes that he cannot use the same methods in organizing government workers that are used in private industry. If, for example, he would attempt a strike, I think probably it would be the end of labor organizations in the government of the "militant, fighting" type.

The advance notices concerning Mr. Baker's plans seem to indicate that he is seeking members below the grades of official rank. In other words, if the Baker plans are carried out, the new union will be made up of the so-called rank and file. This would seem to be an advantageous arrangement because it eliminates some of the dangers that always develop where bureaucrats and division heads assume too much authority.

There is a danger also in confining the organization to the rank and file because among the less experienced labor leaders there is always a tendency "to flare up." That is to say, lacking experience they may say things or do things which are regrettable or which they have cause to regret later on. The violence that has shown its ugly head in the steel strike proves this point. So Mr. Baker has his job cut out for him in this direction.

GETTING ACROSS

Celebrating the Opening of a New Bridge in Sydney, Australia.

Bridges, or Lack of Them, Have Determined the Course of History

Prepared by National Geographic Society.

THE completion of the new steel bridge across the Golden Gate recalls some of the old metal spans, many of which have been in use for two or more centuries.

To England, in 1776, fell the honor of erecting the first iron bridge. There Abraham Darby cast a bridge at the Coalbrookdale Iron works and erected it across the Severn.

Thomas Telford, a Scotsman who lived between 1757 and 1834, is known to students of engineering the world over for his achievements in canal, harbor, road, and bridge construction. He was engineer for the parliamentary commissioners for road making and bridge building in the highlands of Scotland, under which organization 1,200 bridges were erected. In England he helped build five bridges over the Severn, and was employed on canals and highways by the Swedish and Polish governments.

The Menai suspension bridge in Wales, connecting Carnarvonshire with the island of Anglesey, is the best-known monument to his pioneering genius. It was opened in 1826, after seven years of work, and was, at that time, the world's largest suspension bridge, being 1,710 feet long, with a main span of 579 feet.

Ancestors of Brooklyn Bridge.

Telford was a shepherd's son. Apprenticed to a stonemason at fifteen, he studied engineering in his spare time and published verse. A man of amazing industry and versatility, Telford invented the pavement which bears his name.

Cables spun in place to swing a suspension bridge were tried in 1831 by Vicat, a French engineer, for a bridge across the Rhone. Later Roebling developed this method at Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and finally at the Brooklyn bridge.

In Europe, as in America, the nineteenth century saw vast advance in iron bridge building, especially stimulated by new railways. The Newcastle and Berwick railway alone required 110. Progress in design sometimes was costly. A new iron bridge across the Firth of Tay, near Dundee, Scotland, collapsed in a gale. Rushing at night into the open gap a mail train was wrecked, killing some four-score passengers.

Today's bridge excels not only in design, foundations, and methods of erection, but especially in materials. Now iron yields to steel. The Bessemer, and later Siemens-Martin processes, gave bridge builders something new and stronger—a steel cheaply produced.

At any army field day you may see the speedy work of engineers, showing how emergency bridges are built, wrecked, and repaired in wartime.

Washington Bridge Beats George.

Homeer tells about pontoon-bridges used in war. Darius, Cyrus, Xerxes, Alexander the Great, all employed them. Caesar built his 1,400-foot wooden bridge across the Rhine in ten days.

In 1781, it took General Washington four days to ferry only 4,000 men across the Hudson when he moved his army south from New York to Virginia. Now, over the George Washington bridge at New York, a whole army corps—or 97,000 men, 23,105 animals, and more than 11,000 gun carriages, trucks, and other vehicles—could be put across in eight hours!

Chinese classics relate that a certain king once crossed a river by walking over a bridge formed by the backs of a long line of big, accommodating turtles!

Turkish and Chinese Bridges.

In west China and Tibet, to this day, men "coast" across rivers on tightropes, sitting in a seat slung under the rope and sliding along it. To make the underslung seat slide faster the rope is often greased with butter. Dr. Joseph Rock, exploring for the National Geographic society, reports his own use of yak butter on such bridges. "I always tried to find a bridge made of new rope," says Dr. Rock, "for the rope soon wears out."

In his "Voyage to South America," written many decades ago, Don Antonio de Ulloa describes various Inca bridges he found there. One of them, the tarabita, is much like the greasy buttered bridge of Tibet. "The tarabita is only a single rope made of bejuco," says Ulloa, "or thongs of ox hide."

This rope is fastened on each bank to strong posts. On one side is a kind of wheel, or winch, to straighten or slacken the tarabita to the degree required. From the tarabita hangs a leathern hammock capable of holding a man."

Using another rope, the passenger pulls himself back and forth. Ulloa saw mules moved the same way.

At Baghdad years ago, when the Turks were still waging their long war against desert tribes, their artillery used to lumber noisily across the Tigris on a bridge of boats, on its way to bombard some Arab mud town that had not paid its taxes. From a safe distance, when Turkish guns opened fire on the mud-walled villages, observers could see dust and timbers fly high into the air. Sometimes the Turks came back across the bridge of boats driving long lines of camels confiscated from delinquent nomads. One quiet, very hot Sunday morning, the Bedouins, shooting and shouting, rushed suddenly over the bridge, and stole their camels back again.

At Mosul on the Tigris, hard by old Nineveh and in the shadow of Jonah's tomb, is another such bridge of boats. Millions of Shiah pilgrims have crossed these swaying structures, carrying their dried and salted dead relatives and friends to sacred burial grounds around the desert holy cities of An Najaf and Karbala.

Bridge Into the Sea.

In Arabic Al Kantarah means "The Bridge." That old Roman bridge, the Alcantara, over the Tagus in Spain, stands today as proud and stout as when its huge arches were built, some 1,800 years ago.

Look at the mass, the heavy weight of these ancient bridges! They were built in, and for, one particular place. Today man cuts his steel bridges to order, ships them 5,000 miles, 10,000 miles, and erects them, by standardized practice, wherever they may be needed. The pieces are all shaped, numbered, and packed in a ship's hold like the pieces of a child's construction toy in a Christmas box; blueprints are the "directions" for setting up!

Rocketing from rain clouds on an air trip around Brazil, passengers come suddenly upon an enormous suspension bridge that seems to run out into the Atlantic ocean. It does. It connects the mainland state of Santa Catharina with its capital, Florianopolis, which stands on an off-shore island. The American Bridge company erected this structure, shipping all the parts ready-made.

No other field in American overseas trade demands more ingenuity than does the bridge man's calling. Orders come in for new bridges which may be wanted in any land from Alaska to Ecuador. No facts may be at hand about floods, river traffic, health and food conditions, or the nature of the river bed and banks, whether rock, clay, sand, or mud, at the spot where the new bridge is to be built.

Since no tools, equipment, or building supplies of any kind may be available there, the American builder must take everything with him.

A Twist of Tongues.

Problems of language, food, and climate must be met. One American engineer arrived in Peru on his first visit to Latin America to build a bridge. Anxious to gain a Spanish vocabulary of bridge words, he chose a personal helper from among the workers and practiced diligently. Imagine his chagrin when he finally discovered that his bridge vocabulary could be used only in India, for he had picked a Hindu as a teacher! On another job food shipments were so delayed that one American foreman was found subsisting on popcorn fried with bananas.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

STICKER DEADLINE TO STOP MANY CARS

Several thousand owners of motor in the streets and highways of Michigan, on Sunday Aug 1, because they waited too long to buy 1937 license plates to replace their half-year "stickers", it is estimated by Leon Case.

It has been computed that by July 16, with only 10 working days remaining before Aug. 1—the "sticker deadline", about 375,000 motor will still be equipped with stickers which their owners plan to replace with 1937 plates by Aug. 1. This takes into consideration cars which will be junked when stickers expire, together with stickers already replaced with plates.

One points out that it would tax the facilities of the Dept. of State and its 150 branches throughout the state to issue an average of 37,500 sets of plates daily, in the time then remaining, even if applications were made at that rate. Inasmuch as a large part of the stickers are being used in congested Wayne county, it is believed that time will not permit service to all those who seek it when Aug. 1 approaches. The motor vehicle laws of the state do not permit the secretary of State to postpone this deadline.

BOVINE TB EXPERT RETIRES

Whenever a municipality starts a vigorous enforcement of the traffic laws it gets branded as a speed trap Howell, Brighton, Wethersville and other neighboring places have received this appellation in the past. Now Inkster has been honored with it. The Automobile Club of Michigan do not like the setup there at all. Five officers who make the arrests draw no salary but are paid for each arrest. Of the $520 collected in the last two weeks of June the city got but $120 the rest going to officers and justices. The Club want one justice and one officer to do all the work on a salary but the village claims it can not pay salaries.

PINCKNEY DEFEATS DEXTER

After losing three straight games the Pinckney team broke into the win column Sunday, taking Dexter down the line 9 to 8. Tillotson the U. of M. pitcher in the box for Dexter was hit freely being found for 8 singles and two doubles by Pinckney hitters. Jim Lamb got four hits in four times up and Grant Ward 3 hits and a base on balls in four times up.

Pinckney scored 4 runs in the 1st inning and were never behind although Dexter scored four runs in the 9th to tie the score. In their half of the 9th Gyp Ferrell got to first when the catcher touched his club when he was at bat. He stole second and went to third. Cole grounded out. Paul Singer drove a hard one to second scoring Ferrell with the winning run.

Haines allowed ten hits, the same number Pinckney got off Tillotson. However errors figured largely in the scoring by both sides.

Next Sunday Pinckney plays Chelsea at Pinckney.

SIX MAN FOOTBALL

Six man football for the smaller high schools is a coming sport in Michigan. E. Forsthye director of Michigan interscholastic athletics has predicted the sport will be adaptable in schools where the enrollment does not warrant a complete football squad that can place a team of 11 men in the field, Forsthye said.

Six man football is regulation football played with only six players on a side. Three men must be on the line of scrimmage on the offense. The game is played on a field 80 yds long and 40 yds wide.

The purpose of six man football is to make football available to a wider range of boys than is now the case. Forsthye said. It is not pass and touch football, nor is it soccer, the eleven man rules governing throughout with but a few exceptions. This is not an attempt to make something better than eleven man football as now played but an attempt to provide football for schools where the game is now too expensive and where they do not have sufficient material for a larger team.

The game is played with a center, two ends, a quarterback, halfback and fullback. A few changes in rules will make the game interesting to play as to witness. Every man has an opportunity to handle the ball on the offense. Every player is eligible to receive a pass except the center. Before the ball crosses the line of scrimmage it must be passed from the original ball carrier to another player. If a player crosses the line of scrimmage before he passes the ball to a team mate, the play is illegal. Players wear basketball or tennis shoes, except when an agreement is reached between both coaches regarding the use of cleated shoes.

DOG QUARANTINE

The fact has been established that dogs affected with an infectious and communicable disease known as "rabies" have recently been at large in the city of Brighton and the township of Brighton and other localities in Livingston County Michigan and are known to have bitten persons and animals and may have come in contact with dogs as yet unknown.

Notice is hereby given that any dog which is owned, kept or harbored within Livingston county Michigan, shall be securely chained or properly confined under the control of the owner or custodian of such dog to prevent the aforesaid dog from biting any other animal or any person. No such dog shall be allowed to run at large during the period of this quarantine.

The attention of all owners or keepers of dogs in the above named territory is hereby called to the following sections of the Michigan State Laws relating to the Bureau of Animal Industry which provide a penalty for violations of this quarantine order and read as follows:

Sec. 6. Said commissioner shall also have power to declare and enforce a quarantine on dogs in any district of this state in which there is an outbreak of rabies, hog cholera, hoof and mouth disease, or any other contagious or infectious disease among the livestock; and may order that all dogs in said district shall be securely chained or otherwise confined. Any dog found at large in contravention of terms of such a quarantine or order may be killed. It shall be the duty of the sheriff of each county in the district affected and of his deputies, constables and other municipal police officers to see to it that such quarantine and orders are enforced. Any officer killing a dog pursuant to the provisions of this act shall not be subject to any liability therefor.

Sec. 23. Any person violating, disregarding or evading any of the provisions of this act, or any of the rules, regulations, orders or directions of the Commissioner of Animal Industry (Commissioner of Agriculture) made pursuant hereto, shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor and by conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or shall be imprisoned in the county jail for not more than six months, or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. The doing of any act herein decided to be unlawful or herein forbidden shall be deemed to constitute a violation hereof.

This quarantine order shall be in full force and effect from and during the period between June 16, 1937, and Aug. 31, 1937.

Dated June 24, 1937.

LADY ENGINEERS

SAVE ELECTRICITY

If the directions accompanying any electrical appliances have been mislaid they may be summed up as follows: Operate the appliance as instructed. Keep it clean and covered. Do not use. Oil as required. Watch the cord that connects the appliance to the source of electricity and repair or replace it if becomes worn or frayed.

These are recommendations offered by Miss Helen Noyes, home management specialist at Michigan State College. In handling an appliance cord she says, always grasp it by the plug and not by the cord itself. Rough handling is hard on the fine wires inside the cord and will eventually cause them to break. Then they may cut through the protective covering in which they are wrapped. The cord should never be twisted or bent. Bike tape may be used to wrap a wire if it has become worn.

For best service an electric washing machine should not be overloaded either with clothes or water. In starting the machine first start the motor and then throw the machine into gear. In stopping follow the same procedure. Wringer rolls, of course, should have the tension released when left. The machine should be stored in a dry place.

Best results with an electric iron come from keeping its sole or bottom surface clean being careful not to surface clean being careful not to mar it. Disconnect when not in use.

Clean the dust bag of a vacuum cleaner regularly but never wash it because washing it will remove the filter in the fabric which helps to make the bag dust proof. Bits of glass, pins or metal objects, if picked up with a vacuum cleaner, may clip the fan blade or make holes in the dust bag. Sparkling of the motor is usually the result of worn brushes. These may be replaced.

The enamel parts of an electric range may be washed with soap and water or a mild abrasive such as whiting when the range is cold. Metal parts may be polished with metal polish. Food spilled on cooking units is simply burned off and any particles left in the grooves brushed out with a soft brush.

Electric refrigerators require but little attention. The food compartment needs regular cleaning and when ever any thing is spilled it should be wiped up immediately.

GAS, WEIGHT TAXES

INCREASE $6,300,000

Department of State collections in the fiscal year which ended June 30 were $51,660,545, Leon D. Case, secretary of state, reported today. Collections in 1935-36 were $51,206,200. Case said gasoline and weight taxes increased $6,300,000 over 1936 to balance a loss of $1,600,000 in chain store tax collections and a reorganization which shifted $4,500,000 in corporation privilege taxes.

Case reported that gasoline taxes rose from $25,028,731 to $29,299,983 and weight taxes from $17,452,563 to $19,559,611. He said the previous year's chain store tax collections were abnormally high because of a settlement effected then of litigation involving large chain store operators.

CHERRY PICKERS WANTED

Cherry pickers in Michigan will be paid higher wages this season, according to reports received by Major Howard Starret, State Reemployment Director who will begin in ten days the transfer of several thousand workers into cherry growing centers. Last year through the National Reemployment Service workers were recruited from all sections of the state most of them being sent to jobs in the Traverse City region.

At Traverse City it was announced that most of the growers would pay 25c a lug for cherry harvesting this season, a wage increase of from five to ten cents over the 1936 scale. At Hart, a canning company announced it would pay four and a half cents a pound for sour cherries which is double the price in the last five years.

"Our Traverse City office informs us that about 3000 pickers will be needed," Major Starret said. "All transportation and living expenses must be taken care of by the pickers. Anyone more than 16 years of age desiring one of these jobs or more information should contact one of the 44 National Reemployment Service offices, Major Starret said.

DRIVERS' LICENSE

TESTS TO STIFFEN

Passage by the 1937 legislature of the act earmarking refunds by the state to local governments of 15 cents on each operator's and chauffeur's license issued, to be used to meet costs of examination and education of applicants for these licenses is a measure which should advance the cause of street and highway safety, in the opinion of Leon Case Secretary of State and Commissioner Oscar G. Olander, of the Michigan State Police.

Case at the request of Olander has drawn up a table, showing the sums returned locally during the last three years, so that State Police may estimate results to be looked for from forthcoming local refund revenues which heretofore have gone into local funds.

For the calendar years 1934-35-36 the total refunds to local governments was $307,373. The so-called "uniform operators and chauffeurs license act" went into effect in 1931 and since then revenues have been high every third year, it being incumbent that licenses be renewed every three years. As a consequence local refunds will show a rise the latter half of 1937 and the early part of 1938, over the preceding two years, closer enforcement of motor vehicle laws plus being a factor in the estimate.

"Did he see you?" Jim asked. "He had his back to me and the hall door was closed and he was calling the hospital and when he'd hung up the receiver he acted so funny that I thought I'd better see what he was going to do because he's our guest," she finished virtuously.

"What do you mean by 'funny'?" her father demanded.

"Well, he sort of looked around as though he was afraid somebody was watching him," she went on, "and he walked fast but sort of easy like a cat does. So I went to his room in the guest wing but he had closed the door and—"

"You looked through the key-hole," Jim suggested.

"I didn't either," Susan's expression was offended. "I just listened. I heard him pulling out bureau drawers and—"

"No fibbing, Sue," Jim said sternly. "Tell the truth."

Susan looked down at her sandals.

"Well, I did look just once through the key-hole," she confessed. "And he was packing his bags. Where do you suppose he's going?" she asked in an interested voice. "Do you suppose he just got tired of it here? Or do you suppose—?" Her eyes widened. She breathed excitedly. "Do you suppose he was the one who took Cecily's car and hurt the girl?"

Susan's questions received no replies.

"I'd like to call the hospital," Jim said.

Mr. Vaughn rose, paced back and forth across the brick veranda. "I was about to suggest that," he said. Susan looked from Jim to her father, her eyes round with interest and excitement.

Jim called the hospital over the telephone in the lower hall. When he returned to the veranda, Susan had been banished. Mr. Vaughn was alone.

"Well?" he asked, wheeling about as Jim entered.

"Dolly has regained consciousness," Jim reported. "I talked to her nurse. It is a concussion and not a fracture as they feared at first. Her condition is greatly improved."

"That's encouraging. This Jeremy Clyde, Jim—?" Mr. Vaughn's expression was grave and concerned. "Are you certain?"

"Fairly so, although I have no definite proof."

"Hadden't I better go up with Cecily? I don't like the idea of—"

"She wanted to talk to him alone," Jim said gently. "I think she has been expecting this. I was sure, this morning, that she knew. I've been waiting for a chance to talk to you. I couldn't when she was here."

"Poor child!" Mr. Vaughn sighed. "This is going to be difficult for her. Why did you suspect Clyde, Jim?"

Anger flared through his weakening self-control. "Cowardly young bouncer! I'd like to wring his neck!"

Jim detailed to Mr. Vaughn the steps which had led him to suspect Jeremy, of being sure at first that Tommy had taken the car, of his talk with Tommy, of the question which had brought the look of fear into Jeremy's eyes. He related the events of the day preceding the night of the accident, mentioning Jeremy's quarrel with Cecily as Susan had reported it, the party at the Pattons'. He spoke of Dolly and the hints she had given him of her acquaintance with Jeremy. With painstaking care he fitted the fragments together into a complete and convincing blue-print of the entire situation.

As Jim talked, Mr. Vaughn continued to pace back and forth across the veranda, letting his cigar go out, lighting it again, asking a question now and then, making a comment, weighing and appraising the evidence Jim presented. And as he talked, Jim listened, without being conscious of doing so, for Cecily's returning footsteps, for sounds from the distant guest wing, for some hint or indication of what was taking place upstairs.

An interval of considerable length elapsed before Cecily returned to the veranda. Mr. Vaughn, becoming increasingly anxious, went over the situation again and again. At times his anger, exaggerated by weariness and anxiety, broke the restraining bonds of control; at times, anger was lost in tenderness for Cecily, in forgiving affection, in helpless compassion for her humiliation and grief.

"I'd give anything to have spared her this," he said. "She was really in love with the boy. You're her contemporary, Jim. You're closer to her than I am. I feel so helpless, so remote. What can I do to help her?"

Jim knew that Mr. Vaughn neither expected nor wanted a reply. He sat in the willow chair, silent for the most part, now that he had concluded his story, listening, waiting for Cecily to return. He felt a bond of sympathy with Mr. Vaughn. They both loved Cecily and wanted to help her. There was nothing that they could do.

When she returned to the veranda, Mr. Vaughn stopped pacing, Jim sprang up from his chair. For an instant a strained hushed silence filled the atmosphere.

Cecily broke the silence. "Jerry is in his room," she said quietly. "You can talk to him now, Father—if you think you must, if there's anything left to be said."

"Has he confessed?" Mr. Vaughn asked sharply.

"Oh, don't use dramatic words," Cecily was weary and white but reassuringly composed. "Jerry has told me everything—if that's what you mean."

"Sit down, Cecily," Jim said gently. "You're terribly tired."

She lay in the long chair, her fingers loosely linked against the dull green of her frock. "I want you to know this, Jim," she said looking up at him steadily. "Nothing that happened was premeditated. When Jerry called you that night, he had no other motive than to get help for Dolly at once. The thought of letting you take the blame came later when he realized that you did not recognize his voice, that you had no idea who had knocked at the door."

"I was fairly certain of that," Jim said. "If I hadn't been half asleep—"

She nodded. Her eyes turned from Jim to her father. "Jerry isn't vicious," she said. "He's merely weak. How do you know, Jim, what you would have done if you'd been in danger of losing everything that you thought was important and you'd seen a chance to prevent it? How do you know?"

"I don't know," Jim said. "There is such a thing as integrity," Mr. Vaughn said soberly. "The quality inside oneself that makes one do the decent thing whatever the circumstances."

Cecily sighed. "Jerry hasn't that," she said slowly. "I think I've always known that something was lacking, except just at first. If he hadn't run away, it would have been different. I could have forgiven him for taking the car, for consoling himself with the Quinn girl. But to hide, to leave her hurt and alone in the road, to let Jim take the blame—A tremor ran through her, shaking her composure."

"Will you tell me," Mr. Vaughn asked grimly, "how he thought he could get away with it? Does he think you—all of us—are morons?"

"I don't know. Yes, I do," Cecily's face, white against the dark upholstery of the chair, was resolute and controlled. "I can't evade any of this," she said. "I've got to make myself see it clearly. I must not keep a shred of any romantic illusion." She drew a long breath and went on. "Jerry thought if Dolly should die, the truth might never be known. There was nothing against Jim stronger than circumstantial evidence. He told me he knew you could get Jim cleared, Father. If Dolly died—Well, she had gone with him willingly and anyone might have an accident. Telling the truth wouldn't bring Dolly back. His reasoning was all wrong, of course. But I can see his side of it, too."

"Was he running away?" Mr. Vaughn asked. "When you went upstairs?"

"No," she replied. "He was on the point of confessing. His first impulse was to run away but he knew he couldn't, in broad daylight with all of us here. You see he had called the hospital. He knew that Dolly had regained consciousness, that the hospital authorities thought she was almost certain to recover."

"When did you suspect Jeremy?" Jim asked. "Why did you think of him, Cecily?"

"I think I suspected him a little right from the first," she replied. "He knew the Quinn girl and he was awfully angry that night."

"But I knew Dolly, too," Jim said. "You'd seen me with her at Dutch's. Why were you willing to believe that I was telling the truth?"

A faint tinge of color tinted Cecily's face. Her lashes curved down against her cheeks, screening her eyes.

"I knew," she said softly. "I've never felt that quality of integrity Father speaks of lacking in you. I couldn't not have believed you, Jim."

Jim's eyes met Mr. Vaughn's. Again he saw, breaking through the anxiety which darkened Mr. Vaughn's face that half grave, half smiling expression. He looked away, a curious feeling of elation stirring in his heart.

"I tried not to believe that Jerry might have taken the car," Cecily went on, "but the thought kept coming back, even though I'd known he was in bed before MacPherson and I went to Chestertown that night. And then yesterday at the wedding, Jerry acted so strangely. He drank quantities of champagne punch which wasn't like him at all. Jerry seldom drinks more than a cocktail or two, or a glass of wine. Taking care of himself is an obsession with him. The punch exhilarated him to an unusual degree. He tried to persuade me to elope with him. I think, now, that's why he drank."

"Did you consider the proposition?" Mr. Vaughn asked, looking at her intently.

"No," she said simply. "I had given you my word, hadn't I, Father? When we got home," she continued, "I called the hospital. There was something in Jeremy's face, as he stood beside me, waiting for me to get the connection, that convinced me, a suddenly terrified expression. I suppose all the punch he'd taken had weakened his self-control. I slept scarcely at all last night I knew."

"You didn't accuse him?" Mr. Vaughn asked. "You didn't question him even indirectly?"

"I was afraid," she said. "I knew that if he suspected that I knew he would run away. I wanted to keep him here until you came, Father. I knew you could help him to get out of this with some degree of decency, so that it needn't ruin his chances for a career."

"You expect me to help him?" Mr. Vaughn asked in startled amazement.

"Don't bluster, darling," Cecily said coaxingly. "Let me do the talking now. Dolly is apparently going to get well. There will be no charge against Jerry other than taking my car without permission and driving too fast. He hadn't even been drinking. She went to ride with him willingly. He told me that he simply lost control of the car in that narrow road. If you will pay the girl's hospital expenses—I don't see why we can't get Jerry out of this and let him join the Cherry Hollow company as soon as possible."

"Cecily!" Mr. Vaughn said despairingly. "Are you still in love with the boy?"

A look of pain crossed her face. There was pain in the depths of her dark golden eyes.

"I never want to see him again," she said slowly, "but I do know that I want you to help him. I want him to have another chance."

Mr. Vaughn moved restlessly in his chair. "I don't know what I can do," he said. "He doesn't deserve help or consideration."

"Forget him," Cecily said. "Do it for me." She rose from her chair, stood looking at her father, at Jim. The generosity of the victor to the vanquished. It was a sporting proposition having Jerry here for a visit. A small crooked smile touched her lips. "Gentlemen, you win."

"Where are you going?" Mr. Vaughn asked as she took a step toward the door.

"I'm going to take two of Miss Parker's sleeping tablets and go to bed," she said. "And when I wake up tomorrow or the day following, I'm going in to the city and buy some new fall clothes. And then—"

Her bravado seemed, for an instant, on the point of deserting her. She lifted her chin and again the smile, poignant in its gallantry, touched her lips. "And then," she continued, "I'm going to Hawaii and learn to do a hula or help Jim run the riding academy or—"

Her lips trembled. Tears glistened on her lashes. She went into the house, almost running. Something like a sob broke the stillness. The door swung to with a briefly resounding slam. Cecily was gone.

"These modern youngsters," Mr. Vaughn said with a sort of roughness in his voice. "Bravery and bravado." He cleared his throat. "Call Bradley for me, will you, Jim? The generosity of the victor. We'll see what can be done."

CHAPTER XV

Dolly's eyes, bluer than he had remembered them under a tilted white bandage, shining softly with pleasure and surprise, were turned toward the door as the nurse admitted Jim.

"Hello!" she called gaily. "I wasn't expecting company. Pardon me if the place is a mess. I've been ironing all day."

"Hello, Dolly," Jim stood beside the high narrow bed looking down at her, gentleness in his eyes and in his voice. She looked so small and so thin propped against the smooth mound of pillows, so different from the Dolly he knew, in an expensive looking bed-jacket all lace and chiffon, with no make-up except a delicate touch of rouge, different, younger—What was it?

"They've cut off my hair," she said, aware of his puzzled gaze. "Look, you can see what color it really is. Sort of mouse-brown. Or would you call it gray?"

"Brown," Jim said. "I like it. How are you?"

"Fine. They're going to send me home at the end of the week. This is Miss Penny, Jim—Mr. Fielding." Dolly smiled at the nurse. "She's been swell to me."

Jim acknowledged the introduction. The nurse, a rosy, healthy looking young woman, looked at him with interest and admiration.

"Dolly is our pet patient," she said, displaying large white teeth in an amiable smile. "We'll be sorry to lose her."

Dolly grimaced. "Apple-sauce," she said. But she looked pleased and a little excited.

"I've brought you a present," Jim laid a square white florist's box on the bed.

"For me?" she cried. "Oh, Mister Fielding, how thoughtful! But when she had untied the loops of silver ribbon and lifted the lid she gave a little breathless gasp of pleasure. "Is it an orchid?" she asked, lifting maidenly fern, a mauve and purple blossom streaked with white and yellow from a nest of crisp waxed paper.

"Of course it's an orchid," Miss Penny said appreciatively. "Give it to me, Dolly. I'll put it in a vase."

"No you won't!" Dolly guarded her treasure fiercely. "Pin it here." She touched the lace and chiffon at her breast. "I've never had one before. And fix the mirror so I can see myself. This is probably the last chance I'll ever have to look like Constance Bennett in bed."

Jim smiled. He had known that an orchid would please her more than a wheel-barrow load of less glamorous blooms. "You look like a million gold dollars," he said, seating himself in a chair beside the bed.

Miss Penny shook a finger at Dolly. "Only 15 minutes," she said. "If I let you get all tired out, Doctor Donaldson will give me a scolding."

"I think she's in love with Doctor Donaldson," Dolly told Jim when the nurse had gone out of the room. She stopped admiring her reflection in the mirror, turned her head to look at Jim. "I didn't know for a long time," she said shyly, "that it was you who found me the night I was hurt."

"Don't talk about that, Dolly."

"But I want to." She looked down at her fingers spread in thin fans against the counterpane. "Herb told me all about it, that you'd been arrested. Were you really in jail?"

"I spent a night at the state troopers' headquarters," he said. "They treated me very politely."

"Miss Vaughn is—lovely, isn't she?" Dolly said with apparent irrelevance.

"Yes," Jim replied. "She brought me this," Dolly touched the folds of the jacket, a soft rose pink, like a sunset cloud. "I've never had anything so pretty. Penny says the lace is real."

"Cecily has exquisite taste."

Dolly was silent for a moment. Then she said, "I was so ashamed when she came to see me."

"Why, Dolly?"

"Because I'd hated her. That's why I went driving with Jeremy Clyde that night, because I thought it would hurt her."

"You hated her because of Jeremy?" Jim asked.

"Him! I should say not! I never liked him at all." She looked up at Jim, looked away, her face flushing under the tilted bandage. "Don't you know," she asked in a low voice, "why I hated her, Jim?"

Panda, Asiatic Animal
Few if any mammals are more rare than the giant panda, an Asiatic animal of most unusual and striking appearance.

The giant panda has been characterized as an animal with a face like a raccoon, a body like a bear, and feet like a cat. While such descriptions are not scientifically accurate, they have some basis in fact, states an authority, adding also that the animal's teeth have a certain resemblance to those of a pig. The giant panda is about the size of a black bear, has a white head and body, large black circles around its eyes, black legs, and a broad black band around its shoulders.

Fashions at Vacationland

HURRAY for dear old Johnnie Two-Weeks! He's recently given the nod to these three sweet young laborers and now they're off reaping the rewards. Yes, they're vacationing—and how! But, of course, Sew-Your-Own had them dressed right up to the hilt.

Miss M, picturesque blonde, above, left, knows what glamour is and how to have it. That's why she chose this softly feminine frock with its swirling skirt and delicately slim waist. You should see her of an evening in the outdoor terrace. She's a picture in black gossamer chiffon trimmed with white satin. And to think, she made it all herself!

Miss B, above, center, and center of attraction at the Surf Club, has everything under perfect control as she strolls along the boardwalk. With not a care in her pretty head, and lots of streamlining in her natty little sports dress, she walks with confidence and pride. She has a clever way of achieving variety by switching scarfs and belts. In fact, she's so clever she made this little number, button holes and all, in one day without a hitch.

Miss Y, the sports enthusiast at the right, says that her three piece ensemble is so very, very and practical she wears it almost to the exclusion of her other frocks. Her idea is to soak up as much sunshine as possible, and dress. Take a tip from Miss Y. Make your version of this ensemble in duplicate for all summer wear. Have one in seersucker, the other in acetate.

Lee Lavey

Last week, I said something about the action of the pedestrian. Now I am in the position of the pedestrian watching the auto driver.

Just stand on any street corner or at any crossroad, or along the country road and note the actions of some of these crazy auto drivers. They think they have exclusive rights to the highway and that all other auto drivers and pedestrians have no rights at all.

Of course the auto driver has certain rights prescribed by law, but to violate all acts of decency by excessive speed by cutting in and out, and by endangering the lives of pedestrians and other auto drivers, is not anybody's right.

The right to live is more sacred than the right to drive.

on every Record until the issue is settled. While the Senators managed to be among the fans to see the "dream game" they had to pay for their brief respite when the first Saturday session this year was announced with Senator Sherman Minton, Democrat of Indiana holding the floor for the third successive day in favor of the court change. The debate involves a substitute measure for the original six Justice change. The amendment would provide for an appointment at the rate of one a year and boost the retirement age to 75 instead of 70 years. Justices who did not voluntarily retire at full pay would have other Justices named to sit with them on the bench with the maximum remaining at the original provision of 15.

Michigan's Boy Scouts, including the troops from the sixth district, left Washington on Friday after voting the Jamboree a thrilling success. The Lansing troop left in the afternoon while the Flint troops had a long wait for busses to take them to the railroad station in the evening.

Cupid Wins

By a vote of 203 to 129 the House of Representatives approved the repeal of the ban against husbands and wives working for the government. The legal ban had been protested by women's club and civic organizations throughout the nation. It was part of the national economy act of 1933. According to arguments advanced for the repeal the law prevented normal marriages among governmental employees and forced persons who wanted to marry and at the same time keep their jobs to use all manner of subterfuges. In the intense debate that proceeded the vote on the repeal a plan to limit the income of husbands and wives working for the government to $4000 a year was lost. Representatives who sponsored the plan declared the Civil Service merit system should be entirely free of extraneous circumstances such as the marriage status of government employees. The repeal measure will be sent to the Senate for future consideration.

GREGORY CHURCH CENTENAL

On Sunday, July 11, members of the First Baptist church, Gregory and friends celebrated the 100th anniversary of the organization of the church. In spite of a very hot day capacity crowds were present throughout the day. Three hundred guests were present from Howell, Detroit, Flint, Ohio; Danville, Flint, Kalamazoo; Stockbridge, Pomona, Tiffin; Ann Arbor; Ypsilanti, Jackson; Munith; Mason Delaware; Ohio; Eaton Rapids; Fowlerville, and Litchfield. At the morning service, Rev. Milton Dressel, a former pastor brought a brief message and Rev. Slaybaugh, who presided the present pastor on the field brought the morning sermon.

In afternoon brief messages were read from those who were unable to attend and spoken by those of former pastors families, of whom quite a number were present. Wm J. Bird was introduced as the great-great-grandson of one of the charter members a hundred years ago. Rev. W. R. Shaw, Ypsilanti, pastor of the first Baptist church there, brought an exceptionally fine message of inspiration in the afternoon service.

During the day the choir sang several anthems very acceptably under the direction of Dan Denton.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Gregory presented a fern in memory of David and Agnes Bird charter members of the church.

The whole service was rich in memories and fellowship.

At the noon lunch a Memorial Cake in appropriate decorations was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Alva Dickson of Howell.

Miss Carol Reid played a violin solo and Mrs. Mira Reid sang a solo.

The present Pastor of the church is Rev. W. L. Cruthers, who came to the field from a nine year pastorate at Michigan Center, last November and he and his family already have a large place in the hearts of the people.

The meals were served at the Town Hall under the capable direction of the following committee: Mrs. Jennie Voegts, Mrs. Charles Whitehead, Mrs. R. G. Chipman Mrs. C. D. Galbreath and Mrs. W. J. Crossman.

The Centennial committee consisted of Thomas Howlet, Mr. H. E. Marshall, Mrs. Bob Reid and Mrs. Otto Arnold, Mrs. Norman Whitehead and Rev. Cruthers.

The reception was: Mr. F. A. Howlett, Mrs. Charles Bullis and Mrs. H. E. Marshall.

The services of the day closed with a pageant and tableau entitled, "The Lights of the world", under the direction of Bea Lamborne and Nell Denton.

Many of the visitors expressed a desire for more frequent home-coming meetings.

In preparation for this event the church exterior was painted though

"Go forward"

THE divine command voiced by the prophet Moses when the children of Israel were halted by the seemingly impassable waters of the Red Sea, on their way out of the land of bondage, still has power to compel obedience and to put to flight doubt, hesitation, and indecision. The command was, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." To go backward meant slavery and submission to hard taskmasters; to go forward demanded courage and faith in a power unknown to the material senses. Speaking of Moses as a leader, Mary Baker Eddy writes (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 200), "Moses advanced a nation to the worship of God in Spirit instead of matter, and illustrated the grand human capacities of being bestowed by immortal 'I'."
