Ford Surveyors Start Work Tuesday. Options Taken on Huron River Property Near Hudson Corners

A right of way man employed by the Ford Motor Company was here Monday and interviewed several people who have acreage on which the Ford Motor Company has options. Several descriptions of this land has been found to be faulty and the surveyors are here for the purpose of correcting them. The Ford Co. has given out no information as to what they intend to do with their Pinckney holdings but has told property owners that their money is ready for them when they get their deeds made out. In many cases they are asking abstracts and it is taking time to get them made up and brought up to date.

We understand that the Co. has also been active on the Huron river around Binkett and Hudson Mills. Options have been secured there on the Gallagher property, and Katie McCabe farms and the lands of Mrs. Emerson Howard. We understand the buildings will be moved off the Howard land.

FORD CONTINUES OPERATIONS

Henry Ford has continued his operations at Milford and last week hired 14 local men according to the Milford Times. They are now engaged in cleaning up the remains of the old Auto Dash and Fixture plant at the place where the Ford factory will be built. Steam shovels, air hammers, trucks, etc. are also busy at work. Dynamite will have to be used to tear away concrete foundations of the building. As yet no details have been given out by the Ford Co. but it is understood that a carburetor factory employing 250 men is contemplated. It is said that the Continental Chimney Co. of Chicago have a contract to build a 200 ft. smoke stack for the factory. They are now building a 150 ft. one for the general motors Proving Grounds. The council held a meeting Monday to vote on closing streets for the Ford Co. but no Ford men showed up so nothing was done. The Ford interests own three water powers here, two on Pettibone Creek and a large dam on the Huron river.

TEACHERS RETIREMENT FUND

Under the new "Teacher's Retirement Law" pensions are doubled in Michigan for teachers. The state contributed $325,000 annually. Under it teachers become eligible for a minimum pension of $600 a year or a maximum one of $1200 a year. The teachers to become eligible for retirement must have taught 30 years and be 60 years old. If they quit teaching before they have taught 30 years they get a 75% refund of what they have paid in. Previously it was only 50 percent. There are about 450 teachers in the state eligible for retirement but only about 100 are expected to retire this year.

DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Frank Linck, 60, of 262 N. Waterman St. died of a heart attack last Thursday afternoon. The deceased was an engineer for a Detroit lumber company and has owned a cottage in Bock's subdivision for a number of years. He had driven up to Bock's in his car and dropped dead while getting out of it. Coroner Ganzhorn of Ann Arbor was called and decided no inquest was necessary and the body was removed to Detroit for funeral and burial.

SCHOOL OUT OF POLITICS

Supt. of Public Instruction Elliott in an address advocated taking school out of politics entirely. This he would do by having the county school commissioners and supt. of public instruction placed under control of the state board of education and appointed by them instead of being elected.

Camp Robinson to Close Aug 28

Toledo Old Newsboys Camp Ends its Fourth Two Weeks Camping Period on That Date. Handles 46 Boys Each Period

Camp Robinson, the Toledo Old Newsboys Association Camp located at Silver Lake will close their season August 28 at which time their fourth two weeks camping period will end. 46 boys are handled during each two weeks period. These are underprivileged boys and the cost to them for a two weeks period is only $1, the balance of the expenses being paid by subscriptions.

The camp started about a year and a half ago when the Association bought the Frank Tiplady farm. Some ten cabins were built and a 40 by 100 hall and auditorium. This is equipped with an electric water system and the cabins are lighted by electricity. The cabins are located on a bluff overlooking the lake and the mess hall is at the foot of this bluff. The camp is in the charge of Homer Hannon a teacher in the Toledo schools and under him is a resident doctor, Dr. Demerco, a cook and some 15 leaders. Each leader is in charge of seven boys and sleeps in the cabin with them. When the boys arrive they put away their clothes and dress in trunks and sweaters furnished by the camp. They are also furnished with two sheets and a blanket. One cabin is equipped as a hospital and another as a handicraft shop.

The days program consists of baseball, basketball, volleyball, swimming, boating, handicraft, hiking, scavenger hunting etc. The camp has a base ball diamond, volleyball court etc. It is named Camp Robinson because the Robinson family of Toledo have been the principal donors to the old newsboys fund and Mr. Robinson was one of the organizers of the Assoc.

The editor visited the camp Sunday and was shown through it. The boys had just finished dinner and were helping clear off the table and take off the dishes. Sunday the boys are taken to church in a truck. Each night there is a camp fire talk and on some occasions the boys take their lunch and go on hikes in charge of a leader.

Next Sunday the 52 piece band of Vernon McCune Post American Legion of Toledo will give a free concert. The public is invited.

PRE-MARTIAL EXAM REQUIRED

FOUR CONVICTS ESCAPE BUT ARE CAUGHT

Four convicts who attempted to escape from Jackson prison Saturday morning were all recaptured. Two were caught on the roof of the prison, one fell off and was injured and John McAlister, 22, who got away was recaptured in a Jackson park on Sunday afternoon. The other three who tried to get away from the prison were John Thompson sentenced from Livingston County for robbery and murder, Andrew Lake, serving a life sentence for murder and rape and Hamilton sent up from Lenawee for robbery and murder. Thompson fell from the 33 ft. wall and was injured.

Thompson had a lively but short career in Livingston county a couple of years ago. He comes from Fenton. After pulling several robberies in Genesee county he escaped. On Grand River near Brighton he abandoned his car and stole another one at the point of a gun. Cornered by the state police near Rushton he engaged in a shooting match with them and was severely wounded. He was left at the hospital in Brighton but after several weeks escaped clad in his pajamas but was later captured and sent to Jackson.

CEMETERY DAY

August 20 has been set aside as cemetery day by the legislature. On that day all persons are urged to bring lawn mowers, scythes, sickles etc. and help clean up the cemeteries. A sum was appropriated for this purpose by township and many cemeteries pay dues. On account of the numerous rains this year this money was insufficient. So in order to make the cemeteries presentable a woman a woman interested in them should turn out this day and do their share. Norman Reason, Supervisor

Washington News Letter

By Congressman Andrew Tansue

Surprise Appointment

President Roosevelt's surprise nomination of Senator Hugo Black, Alabama, staunch advocate of the New Deal, topped an eventful week in Washington as Congressional leaders refused to give up hope for an early adjournment and sought to delay the most controversial legislation until next January. The House Banking and Currency committee late last week reported favorably on an amended low rent housing and slum clearance bill while the House Rules Committee temporarily snagged the wage and hour bill. Among legislative items that have been put over until the next session of the 75th Congress is the anti-lynching bill, which will have a preferred status in the Senate next January.

Senator Black's nomination was approved by a Senate sub-committee the day after the nomination was made. Confirmation by the Senate is expected this week after the entire Judiciary Committee considers the nomination. In a press conference President Roosevelt declared the Attorney General had given an informal opinion that the nomination of Senator Black is perfectly legal. This ruling contradicts the theory of Senator Borah who claims that no vacancy exists and refutes the contentions of other senators that any member of Congress is ineligible to the vacancy because of the retirement law passed several weeks ago. The latter argument was answered by Administration leaders who declared that if a new position had been created by the new law it was for the retired justice and not the appointee.

Fighting Irish

While the house was considering the court procedure bill conference report which was subsequently approved, Republican Representative Wm. Lamberton of Kansas made a stirring remark about the Irish. In addressing the Chairman of the House Committee, Hatton W. Summers of Texas the Kansas Representative said, "you are just an American but he, Representative John O'Connor of New York who is chairman of the powerful rules committee is an Irishman." No Irishman himself, Adolph Sabath of Chicago born in Czechoslovakia and dean of the House by reason of more than 30 yrs. service, was the first of a dozen Democratic Representatives demanding recognition of the chairman. The 71-year-old representative made the formal demand that the Lamberton be taken down. The Kansas Rep. hedged and said he was trying to compliment O'Connor. Sabath heatedly replied that O'Connor did not want compliments from Lamberton. After O'Connor had made a brief address announcing he favored the wage and hour bill and praising his Irish ancestry the incident was closed but Lamberton's remarks remained in the Record.

Important Amendments

After two weeks of twice-a-day hearings the House Banking and Currency Committee of which your Congressman is the majority member from Michigan reported favorably upon the slum clearance and low rent housing bill with several important amendments. The House measure would cut the total appropriation from $700,000,000 to $500,000,000 and increase local responsibility and local contributions. Several protective changes are added to the Senate measure. It requires a conference between the two houses if the house approves its report. Among the other important amendments are the limitation of benefits of the plan to families whose incomes do not exceed four times the amount of the rent of the prospective new dwellings, and a prohibition against (Continued on last page)

THE PIGEON POISONER

Hundreds of pigeons were poisoned in New York City last week, falling dead in streets and on roofs of the houses. The only clue the officers have is that two boys saw an elderly lady feeding the pigeons. Some people's idea of pleasure verges on the morbid. Years ago dog poisoners got in their deadly work and in nearly all cases went uncaught. Such acts as the above are almost impossible to solve and are a throwback to the dark ages. The editor when a small boy had a dog fall victim to poison and well remember the species it suffered.

Current Comment

The second UAW march on the Ford River Rouge plant came off last Wednesday without the least disturbance of any kind. Some 800 members of the organization accompanied by a large crowd looking for excitement visited the plant and passed out papers. No attention was paid them by Ford officials and they failed to get the publicity they were after. This treatment they should have received in their first march on the factory. The strong arm methods and pitched battles between Ford men and the UAW were just what they wanted to make martyrs of them. The UAW was held up as a monster of the worst possible type seeking to tear down institutions and they seem to have achieved their aims of throwing many industrialists into a panic.

The murder of Officer Sheridan in Detroit by a youthful bandit has again started agitation for capital punishment. A capital punishment bill was introduced in the last session of the legislature but not enough interest was shown in it to get it out of the committee. We have yet to be shown that capital punishment cuts down murder average. New York has had it for several years and still has numerous murders. The trouble is not in the Michigan law dealing with murder but in the enforcement of it. A life sentence now means only 12 or 14 years in prison, then the offender is paroled out as by that time the public has forgotten all about the crime. If you want to stop the crime of murder see that a person sentenced to life serves a life sentence.

Supt. of Public Instruction Elliott does not like the Teacher's Tenure Act passed by the legislature because it carries the local option plan. The original law sponsored by Elliott would prevent the discharge of a teacher after said teacher had taught two years unless the teacher had been given a public hearing by the school board and given opportunity to appeal to the state tenure board. To this a referendum was added which gave every district the choice of coming under this law or rejecting it, the vote to be at a school meeting. However Mr. Elliott adds, it is a start in the right direction.

Much attention was given to the snafu in the Democrat party caused by the court issue. The Major parties are prone to have such splits especially when they become too powerful. News commentators also point out that the GOP is not any too united either. Rep. Ham Fish of New York has resigned in anger from the committee of the House Republican because Rep. Wadsworth has been appointed to the New York World's Fair board instead of himself. He says Rep. Wadsworth is all tied up with the Liberty League and is trying to hand the party over to them. He demands liberalization of the party. The Bay City Times has the following to say about the candidacy of Senator Vandenberg:

"With proper support and heedful obedience to a mentor of the right kind, Vandenberg should make an excellent race. But he and the party must get away from the idea that Mr. Girdler, Mr. Henry Ford, Mr. Alfred Sloan Jr. and other very rich men are notable vote getters and that they are the ones to play with. It is not too early for them to take notice that the party is drifting into that delusion dangerously. Should they persist in their course nothing can save them from a licking in 1940 perhaps as thorough as they received last year."

We hear of people walking in their sleep and it seems they even drive in their sleep. Detroit police arrested Joe Kobetis when he ran into the back of another car which had stopped for a traffic light. He stated that he was tired and went to sleep driving eight blocks and only waking as he crashed into the other car.

The state police were given an increase of 150 men by the legislature in order to better enforce traffic laws. 85 men will report at East Lansing on August 17 for a six weeks training course. 40 are expected to complete the course. They will be assigned to the 36 posts throughout the state. The training will be physical, classroom, police, pistol and rifle drills. Another school will be held in the fall.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt stated to the newspaper correspondents in his press conference the other day that crop control must be brought back. He said it with some emphasis. Within a few days before that, he had given his approval to a bill placing a minimum on wages and a maximum on hours in which labor could work in industries whose productions enter into interstate commerce.

The President was not specific as to details of the legislation in either case but it is important to note that he has reaffirmed his position on these two principles for it is to be remembered that both the NRA and the AAA were thrown out by the Supreme court a long time ago, and the President seeks now to restore them in another form.

This circumstance would seem to confirm assertions that have been made in various quarters lately that the President wants to maintain a "planned economy" for this country. It would seem that he is determined to go ahead along those lines and that his program for reorganizing the Supreme court was a part and parcel of the scheme. In other words, the President's new declaration about crop control and wages and hours and his support of the Wagner housing bill represent a return to the original theories which he held for "remaking" our nation.

After discussing these circumstances pro and con with proponents as well as opponents in the congress, the conclusion is inescapable that Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers are headed into new ground. They desire evidently to make the federal government the most important factor in our national life and to set aside little by little the functions of state and local governments by their course of action.

Undoubtedly there is strong argument for the policies they have adopted; certainly, there are many functions which the national government can perform more effectively and more efficiently than they can be performed by state governments, and equally, it is true that some phases of our national life should not be subjected to the influence of state lines. On the other hand, there surely is valid reason why Washington bureaucrats should not be allowed to interfere in the daily practices and convictions of individuals.

The reason I believe all of this is so important now is that always there has been a tendency of federal functions to expand. To say this in another way: Federal officials from the lowest to the highest seem to be equipped with a particular faculty for delegating to themselves additional authority as soon as they are accorded power. What the country should fear then, it seems to me, is the steady encroachment upon the rights of states and thereafter the rights of individuals. Perhaps I should have reversed the order and should have said, first, encroachment upon the rights of individuals and, second, thereafter encroachment upon the rights of states.

Now, there are those persons in considerable number who believe sincerely that the federal government is the agency through which all public functions should operate. I cannot agree. Rather, long experience in Washington convinces me that the old, old argument for state rights—so long one of the tenets of the Democratic party—has too much merit to be overthrown without consideration for the effects of the new theories. It may be that human nature has changed enough to accept new theories and live happily thereunder but I am quite convinced that human nature does not change so fast.

To get down to cases in application of the principles discussed above, let us consider the wages and hours bill. That measure shows how this encroachment takes place and gives a rather clear picture of the expansive nature of federal policies.

The wages and hours bill first creates a labor standards board. It is circumscribed by certain limitations which say that it cannot fix wages above forty cents per hour nor can it reduce the number of working hours per week below forty. Further, a great number of lines of work are exempted from jurisdiction of the board—work of a seasonal character, farm labor, labor in certain specified industries which obviously cannot be subject to regulation without destruction of the business itself. Besides these restrictions, there is an implied warning in the bill against sudden or abrupt changes in business practices that would dislocate industrial operation or curtail employment.

These delimitations would seem to leave the board without a great deal of authority. Such, however, is not the case. Among those industries remaining under jurisdiction of the board, there is yet as much power as obtained under NRA and its codes which were so hidebound and so inelastic that thousands of firms were in open rebellion against the restrictions unless they were able to pass on the higher costs resulting from these restrictions, to the public. That is, unless they could make the consumer pay the added cost, they faced eventual bankruptcy.

I do not say that the labor standards board as now conceived will go as far as the NRA codes but experience with the present national labor relations board indicates that the public should expect the maximum exercise of power instead of any middle of the road policies. The labor relations board has become a festering sore on private initiative. Business interests everywhere, while being pounded on the back by the administration to employ more workers, are kept in a constant state of confusion by the bias of the board. This is the board which was designed by Senator Wagner, of New York, to maintain peace between labor and employers. If the labor standards board can use discretionary powers accorded it and can proceed in correcting abuses of labor as rapidly as is "economically feasible," it may be able to develop better conditions in industry. But such language as the words "economically feasible" are subject to all kinds of interpretation and if the membership of the labor standards board happens to include some radical labor leader, most anything will be economically feasible.

It is from such quirks of law that bureaucrats expand their powers.

But there is yet another phase of this policy that demands consideration. While the United States is one unit under the federal government, it is made up of a number of sectional units and each sectional unit comprises a number of states and even each state in some cases embraces subdivisions where practices in business and living traditions are as different as day and night. A regulation as to the fairness of hours or wages in New England may be, and probably would be, wholly inapplicable in Alabama or Georgia. A regulation that would operate satisfactorily in Pennsylvania may be, and probably would be, completely sour in the Pacific coast states. Yet this board cannot administer its regulations on a piece-meal basis; they must apply to the whole country and it is only fair to assume from the existing facts that where as rulings may be advantageous to some sections of labor, they might completely destroy other sections of labor. The same results can be expected from the effects of these rulings on the employers, except that where the effect is adverse on employers businesses can be driven into bankruptcy—and the jobs they provided disappear.

I think there can be no denying that no law will be successful unless it has the co-operation, the active support, of a very large majority of the people. If proof be needed, it is only necessary to recall how the prohibition laws were not enforced in those areas where public sympathy with them was lacking. It does not require very much time to determine whether a law is popular. During the life of the NRA, those who opposed such impossible regulations as General Hugh Johnson dictated were branded by President Roosevelt at first as "chiselers." It was a biting criticism. Yet, within a few months there were more chiselers than there were those who believed that the law could possibly be made to work. I am very much afraid that there will be more chiselers under the wages and hours law than there are those who believe in its efficacy.

The initial operations of the board and the law probably will not create a great deal of dissension. But there will be disgruntled groups of workers and there will be dissatisfied employers who will seek exemption or changes or special consideration by regulation. In some cases, obviously, the board will issue new rules. As likely as not those new rules will upset some other group or region or section and they will demand consideration. Just here, it might be recalled how under the AAA crop control law, wheat, cotton and corn were originally considered but tobacco had to have protection and rice and potatoes and peanuts, and every other farm product had its champions battling for consideration before the Supreme court held that the law with its processing taxes was an invalid delegation of power by congress. Therefore, while I may be "seeing things" concerning the labor standards board and the new proposal for crop control, the records surely support my statement that anytime the federal government starts a new policy it begins at the same time to enable expansion of federal power far beyond the original concept of a program.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

Baritone Business Agent.

NEW YORK.—Opera singers of Genoa had a union early in the Eighteenth century and sundry were broken in its furtherance, but Lawrence Tibbett is, according to all available records, the first baritone, tenor or bass to take up that line of work in modern times.

Mr. Tibbett, as head of the American Guild of Musical Artists, joins the drive to form a union of radio broadcasters in the American Federation of Labor. It is indicated that they are beating the C. I. O. to this objective.

Mr. Tibbett was upped to fame on the night of January 2, 1925. Before that, he had sung meager roles under his $60 a week Metropolitan contract. On this occasion, singing in Verdi's "Falstaff," he stole the show from Scotti, with a thundering ovation rarely given any singer at the Met.

He was the son of a sheriff in the "Badlands" country around Bakersfield, Calif. His father was killed by a bandit and young Tibbett grew up in Los Angeles. He knew he had a voice, but he didn't want to sing. He wanted to be a Shakespearean actor. Hoping to study for the stage, he earned money singing at churches and movie palaces, becoming soloist for the California theater.

In 1922, he arrived in New York on borrowed money. He worked up a concert and sold a lot of tickets, but he wasn't there. He had the mumps. All that came out of the concert was an extra "T" dropped in his name by the program printer. He let it ride and that's how he became Tibbett instead of Tibbet. Numerologists would say, of course, that that was what changed his luck. At any rate, the change came soon after. Gatti-Casazza gave him a hearing and he was soon on the uptake in the Metropolitan.

He is tall and good looking and lacking in those stellar eccentricities which make newspaper copy. There is, though, one little oddity worth noting. Apt to have headaches, he cures them by walking around on his hands. He says that sluces the blood down into his head and stops the pain.

Egypt's New King.

KING FAROUK I, who was crowned king of Egypt recently on his eighteenth birthday, seems to be entirely acceptable to the powerful Wafd sect which, during the last few years, has been fanning up a challenging nationalist movement in Egypt. England has done some adroit maneuvering since his father, old King Saud, died in April, 1936.

King Farouk was educated in part at the Royal Military academy and, it is understood, is enthusiastically certified by the British guardians of the empire. It is believed that this coronation will cinch a bit tighter the political and economic ties of Britain and Egypt. This has become a matter of special concern since Italy's seizure of Ethiopia and her threat to the blue Nile with its bearing on vast cotton growing and processing projects in the Sudan.

For the last two years, Farouk has enjoyed kingly status, but under a regency. He will now be Egypt's first nominally independent ruler in four centuries. He is an athlete, six feet tall, skilled in polo, swimming and other sports.

Like his late father, he likes to drive a big red car to the mosque on Friday to observe the Moslem Sabbath. His absorbing interest is his stamp collection. Two boy kings are left—Peter II of Yugoslavia, aged fourteen, and King Ananda of Siam, aged eleven.

Pennsylvania Battle.

GOVERNOR EARLE of Pennsylvania was a Republican who became a Democrat. Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia was a Democrat who became a Republican. Each has supported the other in the past. Now they are deep in a rock-and-sock battle all their own—typical of shifts and blurring of party lines under high political pressure. The militant Mayor Wilson is gunning for the governor, charging the latter with responsibility for sending wire-tappers into Philadelphia.

They fudge into the national picture, as Governor Earle, it is understood, wants to be President and Mayor Wilson wants to be governor.

Mayor Wilson was comptroller of Philadelphia before he became the city's one hundred thirteenth mayor January 6, 1936. He is a hefty and hardy seasoned political battler, in politics many years, elected by liberals, reformers, laborites and New Dealers, but now shying away from the lot of them and vehemently anti-Roosevelt.

Life of the Honey Bee

How Germans Protect Bee Hives.

How the Honey Bee Lives and Performs His Very Important Duties

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

LITTLE does the average layman know of the active life of the honey bee which in summer is conspicuous flying from flower to flower, bearing pollen that plants may blossom and bear fruit in season.

The young queen bee, a few days after leaving the hive in which she has been born, selects a day for her wedding flight. She usually chooses a clear, warm, quiet day because her honeymoon is short, and she must make the most of it. Only when she leaves the hive with a swarm, probably a year hence, will she have another occasion to fly.

Mating always takes place on the wing, and if conditions are such that the queen cannot fly she will die a virgin. The strongest drone is her mate, for the queen is a good flyer, and the weak are thus eliminated in this wise provision to maintain the strength and vigor of the race.

Before the queen has had time to return to the hive after the mating flight, the drone will have fallen to the earth, dead.

Because of her specialized duties and the fact that she does not engage in outside work and is not subject to the hazards of weather and enemies that might prey upon her, the queen may live to the ripe old age of three or four years. When she becomes too old, or when she is no longer productive queen and worker bees, or if she becomes accidentally crippled, the bees will raise another queen to replace her and for a while both mother and daughter may work side by side in the hive. But this arrangement does not last long. The old queen will shortly disappear.

The marked differences between the queen and worker bee, both of whom come from the same kind of fertilized egg, have already been mentioned. Their difference in behavior is even more pronounced. The worker bee is armed with a straight sting, the end of which is barbed like a harpoon. When a worker bee stings, it cannot disengage its sting. The violent effort of tearing itself loose from the well-anchored sting so severely damages the tissue of its body that it dies within a few minutes. Normally it can sting only once.

When Rival Queens Battle.

The sting of the queen, instead of being straight and barbed, is smooth and curved. It is constructed so that it can easily be withdrawn when she uses it. The queen seemingly does not realize that she possesses this very effective weapon. She may be picked up and handled as harmlessly as a kitten.

If the queen gets into the wrong hive in returning from her mating flight, a royal battle is sure to ensue, and the two queens fight it out until death comes to the weaker.

If the queen used her sting indiscriminately, she might easily lose her life in meeting an enemy with which she could not cope. If she were being handled by her keeper and attempted to free herself by stinging him, he might instinctively retaliate by crushing her frail body. Should he do so, it would jeopardize the future life of the colony, especially if there were no larvae in the hive from which a successor could be raised. For her protection therefore, she depends upon her own daughters or sister workers, who far outnumber her and whose sacrifice is not so fatal to the well-being of the colony.

The drone usually is regarded as a lazy individual, but, after all, he is the father and is entitled to certain respect. He gathers no food, nor does he help defend the family; he has no tools to collect sweets nor has he a sting to defend even himself. During his brief existence, however, he has certain privileges not accorded his sisters. He can safely visit neighboring colonies. Neither workers nor queens are so cepted in other hives, but during the breeding season drones are allowed to come and go as they please.

Know One Another by Smell.

When the breeding season is over, and the honeyflow comes to a close, the bees become more economical with their food supply, which must carry them through the long, cold winter. Then they drive all the drones from the hives, thus dooming them to perish soon for lack of food and shelter.

The person who can recall the names and faces of several hundred acquaintances is unusual; yet in a family of 80,000 individuals the bee instantly recognizes every member. It is evident that recognition is not through the sense of sight; instead, it is effected by the more highly developed sense of smell.

Every colony has a distinctive family odor, different from that of every other colony. If a strange bee attempts to enter a hive, the guards at the entrance detect its alien odor and drive it away. When a colony is divided into two parts, the parts placed in separate hives and given queens that are sisters, the bees in each half develop different odors. Within a week's time they become total strangers to each other. Were the halves united again, the bees would disregard the existence of any relationship.

It sometimes happens that a beekeeper unites two or more colonies, which separately are too weak to produce a crop or to survive a hard winter. The usual method is to place one hive on top of the other, inserting a sheet of newspaper between them. The bees from both sides gnaw small holes in the paper, and in doing so, they "rub noses," but the holes at first are not large enough for the bees on either side to engage in combat. The apertures permit the mingling of the odors of the two units, so that by the time the holes are large enough for the bees to pass through, the two parts have an identical odor. Thus union takes place peacefully.

If it becomes necessary to place a new queen in a colony, it is essential that she be properly "introduced." The old queen is removed at least an hour before the newcomer is "presented." In this interval the colony discovers that it is queenless and it may start constructing new queen cells.

Even though the colony desires a queen, it would not do to release the usurper, because her strange odor would antagonize the bees and endanger her life. She is placed in a wire cage to protect her from assaults. Although her new subjects would kill her were she suddenly released, they feed her by inserting their tongues through the meshes of the wire.

Must Store Food for Winter.

Honeybees help perpetuate their race by their insatiable desire to gather nectar. Unlike bumblebees, hornets, yellow jackets, and wasps, honeybees cannot live from hand to mouth. They must store enough food during the summer to keep the colony alive throughout the winter. Of the four other insects just mentioned, all the individuals in each colony die at the approach of winter except the young mated queens, and these simply crawl into protected places where they hibernate. During this period they require no food.

Among honeybees, only the drones die in the fall. The queen and the workers live and are semi-active throughout the winter. It is important, therefore, to gather enough food during the summer to maintain the colony during seasons when insect activity largely ceases.

At the end of the swarming season, which coincides with the height of the breeding season, the queen lays fewer and fewer eggs until fall, when the rearing of the brood entirely ceases. Cold weather has overtaken the colony by this time, imposing changes in its organization to cope with low temperatures. Individual honeybees die of chill at temperatures well above freezing; in fact, they seldom fly when the temperature is lower than 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

Gift of Humility

O, the beauty of humility! How rare it is to find people possessing some gift, who do not boast of it and hold it up before others as a wonderful thing, which should be much talked of and noticed.

Every talent we have is a gift of God; we have nothing to do with it except to cultivate and take care of it, and to thank God for it. It is right that we should be aware of this special favor to us, but not to be boastful and conceited over it.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—keeps the kidneys constantly at work. The kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisons, mineral salts, uric acid, etc.

CASE HOLDING CHECKS
Leon D. Case is custodian of about 500 checks averaging $4 each, which the state of Michigan has been trying to return to their rightful owners for more than three years.
In 1934, the legislature reduced the weight tax rate on passenger cars, from 55 cents to 35 cents per hundred. But before the act was passed, thousands of motor car owners had already bought their license plates. Refunds were in order and accordingly the checks were made out and mailed to those entitled to receive them. After three years, delivery has still been impossible in some cases.
Occasional a check is claimed but much more frequently people apply for refunds which they think they never got until their signatures on cancelled checks are turned up from the records. The great bulk of refund checks originally returned unclaimed in 1934, were claimed next year: car owners when buying 1935 plates noticed the cost was less, inquired concerning it and in hundreds of cases were presented with their refund checks.
The checks are always good, but many of the appearances are usually no more than a claim.

HOLMES FAMILY REUNION

The Holmes Family reunion was held at the farm home of Mr. Earnest Colson at Williamsville, on August 14th. The family are descendants of David Holmes who homesteaded this farm and other land in and around Gregory, 103 years ago, or on August 23, 1834. He was of English Irish parents, coming here from England at the age of 24, first settling at Hartford, Connecticut.

Mr. Holmes moved from this vicinity in 1866 and settled at St. Johns where he died in 1888 at the age of 87 and is buried in the Williamsville Cemetery.

Few old timers will remember Mr. Holmes as a farmer and merchant at Williamsville then called by the name of Unadilla.

There were 35 present, all direct descendants of Mr. Holmes, many who had never been to this town before, while one, Ezra Holmes was born on the farm.

Those present who partook of the picnic dinner were: Mr. Emery Holmes and Mr. Charles Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Tenney and children, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Cavert and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hoffman and daughter, all of Lansing, and Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Holmes and daughter, and Mrs. Marion Holmes, Calif. Mr. and Mrs. Bert Slocum, Byron Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Parks, Benton Harbor Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Will Haines, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Miller and children of Howell, Dr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Foster and children, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Johns and daughter of Detroit.

Pictures were taken and the group visited the lot in the cemetery.

Early history of the family is taken from a family Bible printed in

"It is certainly the best all-around method of cooking!"

"MY FIFTH." A user writes: "My present stove is the fifth electric range I have owned. It is certainly the best all-around method of cooking. I wouldn't cook any other way." Another says: "My electric stove has been a wonderful investment for us. I would certainly put up a fight if I had to change to any other."

SPIC-AND-SPAN. A housewife comments: "My electric range is a joy to cook on and a joy to keep clean. I especially like the freedom from soot and grease, and the cleanliness of the cooking utensils."

CAKE FOR A MAN!

Angel Food Cake, the supreme test of baking, comes through with flying colors on an electric range. One woman says: "I have had wonderful success with baking in my electric oven. I can't say enough for it. It is splendid!"

OVEN MEAL. Simply delicious! That is the exclamation of everyone who tastes this appetizing grilled oven-meal. It consists of tomatoes, broiled ham, and potatoes-on-the-half-shell. Range users say: "Electric broiling gives foods a new and different flavor that we never got from our old stove. Everything tastes better!" (See the new electric ranges on display at department stores, electrical dealers and all Detroit Edison offices.)

HOMEMAKERS CORNER

Whether they appear collectively or singly on the windows of homes or herds, they are likely to be a nuisance if not a pest. Ever since these fascinating little machines made their appearance back around the turn of the century some law making body has been outlawing them. And we still have them.

More than 200 species of flies are known but only two are predominant in Michigan and the one is the cut and dog fly. But the one we see here is not very particular about its home. Most of the annoyance is caused by the number of insects that are attracted to the Michigan State College.

They white eggs and laid by the old mother fly while she wanders about through the hair of the host animal. The eggs hatch off on the blanket or on the floor where the animal means. The eggs hatch into tiny larvae which feed on organic matter such as dry blood. When growth is complete they pupate and adults appear.

Adults may live about three months without food. This accounts for the inconvenience which occurs when the household pets from a vaccination ranging from two to six weeks.

When the fly is not killed in a basement scrub the floor with kerosene and allow it to stand 12 hours pour off the clear liquid and use it freely. This comes from the larvae when it comes into contact with flies in any stage of their development where it is necessary to apply the treatment to finished floors any of the patent fly sprays are recommended.

CASE WARNS CRASH DRIVERS

With the tide of highway accidents on the upsurge in Michigan with its accompanying rising toll of life limb and property damage, Leon D. Case Secretary of State, has pointed out an act of the 1937 legislature which will make accidents more expensive than ever for the person deemed to be responsible for them.

In 1937, the financial responsibility law was passed barring from the road any operator unable to satisfy a judgment of $300 or more in property or for any amount in personal injury as the result of an auto accident. Drivers are barred until they pay their judgments and even after that order to regain the privilege of driving, a driver must prove its future financial responsibility as the law directs. Proof must be in the form of a posting with the Secretary of State of $1,000 in cash or negotiable securities or the filing of a special form of liability insurance.

The 1937 legislature reduced the judgment provision from $200 to $300 which means that more drivers than ever will become involved in the law. The most interesting feature of the law is that the number of persons that are brought under the law are those who are unable to meet damages. Drivers are barred from driving for three periods following conviction of a number of motoring offenses as specified in the financial responsibility law.

OUTLAWED AGAIN

Now the legislature has decided to outlaw slot machines again. It's not the first time and probably won't be the last. Ever since these fascinating little machines made their appearance back around the turn of the century some law making body has been outlawing them. And we still have them.

Sheriffs and other local law agents have made sporadic half-hearted efforts to destroy them and sometimes actually smashed one of the demon devices to bits much to the delight of sneaky moralists but the usual practice has been to pick them up, take them to the police station until things quiet down and then allow them to find their way back to their original rendezvous. This procedure temporarily satisfied everybody.

Any legislator that has ever experienced the thrill of "hitting the jackpot" on one of these unlawful machines should realize the futility of putting them out of existence, even if they were as dangerous to the morals of our fair state as some of the holy folk think. It doesn't seem, offhand that they could be much worse than betting on horses which the legislature not only allows but actually encourages by lending it the dignity of state supervision.

BEAN WORMS

A measuring worm has appeared in bean in several parts of the state. The pest is pale green, striped with white or yellowish lines. When distributed the larvae give a series of violent jerks and fell to the ground. It is a lepidoptera caterpillar very closely related to the cabbage looper. When present in large numbers it is capable of causing considerable damage since it strips the bean vines of their foliage and pods.

It can be controlled with a dust containing 1/2 of 1% rotenone as described on page 4 of extension Bulletin No. 164 a copy of which may be obtained by writing to the county agent's office.

CORN BORER

During the past several weeks the corn borers have appeared in considerable numbers in certain parts of the country. Now that the borer has infested corn here is little that can be done to prevent its spread.

However, with a number of corn fields being infested this year precautions should be taken against the recurrence of the pest during 1938. Some of the cultural methods that should be utilized in control would be to shred the stalks, use as many as possible for silage, cut the corn as low as possible and destroy any of the crop residue left in the field. It is a serious condition and should be treated as such.

A bulletin published by the Michigan State College is obtainable at the county office. If you are interested write for the bulletin.

CAMP ROBINSON TAKES

SECOND ONE

Camp Robinson took the second one of a three game series with Pinckney last Friday night 7 to 6. It was played at Silver Lake. Pinckney led up to the 7th and last inning only to see their lead go when the Robinson boys put on a rally. Paul Singer, pitching for Pinckney allowed only 4 runs in the first six innings while his teammates got six. In the last inning after two men were out the score was tied. Dinkel relieved Singer and the first batter to face him singled and ended the game.

Pinckney scored in the first inning on singles by Read and Lamb and another in the third on doubles by the same two players. In the 4th a rally was staged and scored 4 runs on singles by Haines, Aschen, and J. Lavey, Spears double and a sacrifice fly by M. Lavey. This ended the scoring. J. Lavey and Read singled in the 7th but the next 3 were easy outs. Another game will be played with this camp on the 27th.

This week Friday Pinckney will play Brighton at Pinckney.

SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reyburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane. Unwittingly she overhears Jed talking to Mark Trent, a nephew of Mrs. Dane who has been disinherited. Mrs. Dane had lived at Lookout House, a huge structure on the sea, built by her father and divided into two, for her and Mark's father. Brooke had been a fashion expert, and Mrs. Dane, a "shut-in," hearing her on the radio, had invited her to call and develop a deep affection for her. Mark discloses that Mrs. Dane had threatened to disinherit him if he married Lola, from whom he is now divorced. He says he does not trust Henri and Clotilde Jacques, Mrs. Dane's servants. He says he is not interested in an offer of Brooke's to share the estate with him. Leaving her department store job, Brooke refuses an offer to "go stepping" with Jerry Field, a carefree young man who wants to marry her. At a family conference she learns she must live at Lookout House alone, since Lucette, her younger sister who is taking her job, her brother, Sam, a young playwright, and her mother plan to stay in the city.

CHAPTER III

Through the open transom above the office door came the burn of typewriters. Mark Trent, behind his desk, scowled in the direction of the sound. He had paid good money for those machines on the understanding that they were noiseless. Curious that he never had been annoyed by them before. Must be this confounded note in his hands. He read again:

Dear Mr. Trent—
Many times your aunt has told me of the Thanksgivings you spent with her at Lookout House. Won't you dine here on the coming holiday? My mother, sister and brother will be with me. There are many family treasures which you should have. I would like to go over them with you, and more than all, I want to thank you for pulling me out from under that car. I really wasn't so ungrateful as I sounded. This is a late invitation because I have been bolstering up my courage to ask you. Please come. Bury the hatchet, or accept the olive branch, or however peace between enemies—though I am not for a moment your enemy—is being accomplished now.

Sincerely yours,
Brooke Reyburn

Lookout House

He dropped the note and frowned at the red carnations in a crystal vase on his desk. He lived over the instant he had seen a girl go down in the street, had seen a speeding car almost upon her. How had he managed to save her? Colorless and dazed as she was, he had thought her the loveliest thing he ever had seen as she looked up at him. As for a second he had steadied her in his arms, his brain had fought against her attraction and the live warmth of her body had prompted him to growl at her. No wonder she had been angry, and no wonder—he admitted honestly—Mary Amanda Dane had been taken in by her. Well, one victim in the family was enough. She shouldn't hypnotize him.

He drew letter paper toward him and picked up a pen. He'd settle this question of friendship between them for good and all. Little schemer!

Dear Miss Reyburn, he wrote. As he hesitated as to how to word his regrets, another picture of the girl as she had appeared between the hangings in Stewart's office flashed in his mind with startling clarity.

He must get along with that note. His frowning regard of the opening door changed to a welcoming smile as a head poked in.

"Come in, Jed. What's on the little mind now?"

Jed Stewart perched on a corner of the flat desk. He pulled one of the red carnations from the vase and drew the stem through the buttonhole of the lapel of his checked coat.

"I'm taking a lady to tea, need a posey to make me look like a million, so combined utility with business and came here. Knew you always had them."

"What's the business? If you've been sent again to ask me to take half of that—"

"Hold everything; that's all washed up. The matter has not been mentioned to me since the day you and Brooke Reyburn met in my office. I guess you killed her interest in you by your infernal sarcasm."

"Hope you'll enjoy the house and fortune, Miss Reyburn. Happy landings! Perhaps I'd better say, safe landings," sez you."

"Oh, you think so? Read that." Jed Stewart frowned over the note Mark Trent tossed to him. He read it through, reread it. Looked at his friend.

"Going?"

"Going! What do you think?" Mark answered a buzzer. "Who? Mrs. Gregory. Of course I'll see her."

He explained hurriedly to Stewart. "It's an old friend of Aunt Mary Amanda's. She sailed for France a week before my aunt died. She's a martinet, one of those terrible women who don't care where the lash of their tongue falls, and a confirmed matchmaker."

"This is mighty good of you, Mrs. Gregory, and it's a clear case of thought transference; not ten minutes ago I was thinking of you." A wave of feeling menaced the clarity of Mark's voice as he bent over the white-gloved hand of the woman who had entered the office. She had been a vital part of the life at Lookout House which now seemed so irretrievably far behind him. A smile tugged at his lips as he observed that the floppy wide-brimmed picture hat was the model

she had worn since as a boy he had admired the deeply waved blonde hair it shadowed. The hair was still faultlessly marcelled, but it was snow white.

She settled into a chair with the same rustle of taffeta he remembered, and adjusted a diamond brooch of a size and brilliance to make a discriminating thief avidly flex supple fingers. She peered up at him through a jeweled lorgnette, with eyes once a brilliant blue, now the color of faded larkspur.

"Handsome as ever, aren't you, Mark, in spite of the way those two women let you down. First that wife, with a grande amoureuse complex, and then Mary Amanda. I don't wonder that your hair at the temples looks as if it had been touched by frosty fingers, if you are only thirty. Who's he?"

She waved her lorgnette toward Stewart, who, back to the room, apparently had been absorbed in a study of the calf-bound books on the shelf.

"Stewart, of the firm of Stewart and Stewart, attorneys. Jed, come here. I want to present you to Mrs. Gregory, my first love."

"Hm! Flatterer! You always could coax my heart out of my breast with your wonderful smile and your voice, Mark." She peered through her lorgnette as Jed Stewart took the hand she extended with the air of a sovereign.

"Handsome as Ever, Aren't You?"

"Stewart and Stewart! You were Mary Amanda Dane's lawyer, weren't you?"

The contempt in her voice deepened the color of Jed Stewart's already sufficiently ruddy face.

"I had that honor."

"Honor! Do you call it an honor to help cheat her nephew out of his inheritance?"

"Really, Mrs. Gregory, Jed can't be held responsible—"

"Hold your tongue, Mark. I've started, and now I intend to get rid of a few things that have been boiling and sizzling inside me since the day I heard that Mary Amanda had cut you out in favor of that fashion adviser she'd gone crazy about."

"Forget it, Mrs. Gregory. I don't need the money—"

"Of course you need it. No one has money enough now because no one has a sense of financial security. Didn't you take over all the lame ducks as your share of your grandfather's property so that your aunt wouldn't be worried by them? Aren't you making that ex-wife of yours an allowance? Mary Amanda told me. What's she been doing since she left you for that French count? It was a French count year, wasn't it? They were buzzing round rich girls thick as wasps about a broiled live lobster."

"She has married, I understand."

"Married! After she divorced the count! The third time! Getting to be a habit, isn't it? She isn't entitled to a penny. I don't wonder your aunt was furious when she found out that you were giving her money. Perhaps that's the real reason she cut you off, though I thought it was because she didn't believe in divorce; on that subject she was stuck back in the eighties. However, that wasn't what I came here to talk about. I just wanted to tell you that if I had known what was in that will I witnessed two days before I sailed for Europe—it was just a week before she died—now, Stewart, don't look at me with your jaw dropped as if I were a moron with a Medusa complex—of course, I know that a person isn't supposed to know the contents of the will she witnesses, but I still say that had I known that your aunt was leaving her money away from you, Mark, I would have cut off my hand before I signed."

Mark Trent's heart stopped and galloped furiously on. A will witnessed a week before Mary Amanda's death! The will which had been probated was of a date two months prior. As he opened suddenly stiffened lips to reply, he met Jed Stewart's warning eyes, eyes which seemed like flames in a chalky face. Jed was as amazed as he.

Jed began to speak. "I was fond of my client Mrs. Dane, and your reference to her last will brought back a picture of the delicate woman in her wheel chair with—"

"With that disreputable parrot swearing in the cage behind her. The bird was there when I witnessed the will; I didn't know but that she would insist upon Micawber's being the other witness, but she called in Clotilde and Henri Jacques, it was her nurse-companion's day off. If I had to choose between the parrot and that French butler as my co-resident on a desert island, I'd take Mr. Micawber. After they went out, Mary Amanda and I were alone for a few moments in the freight. It was the last time I saw her—"

Mrs. Gregory dabbed her reddening eyes with a lace-edged handkerchief. She straightened, demanded angrily:

"Why am I slobbering like that? I love life! I wouldn't give up my place in this problem-logged world for all the starry halos and golden harps you could offer. Thinking of your aunt set me off. The last few times I saw her I had noticed that she seemed distraught, as if something were worrying her. I've wondered what she would have told me when she had done if I had not had to hurry away. I called Henri before I left. As I looked back, she seemed white and exhausted. As I drove away I saw that girl driving in."

"That girl! You mean—"

"The Reyburn girl, of course, Stewart. You ought to get a position somewhere as an echo. I'd met her several times and I liked her too before I knew what she had done to Mark. She made me forget that I was old enough to be her grandmother. Charming manners. Well, I must run along."

"Thank you for your interest in me, Mrs. Gregory. I'm going down to your car with you. Wait for me, Jed."

The woman turned on the threshold. "I hope, if ever you draw another will cutting out a rightful heir, young man, you'll be swished in boiling oil."

Stewart grinned. "Not boiling oil, madam, not boiling; couldn't you reduce the temperature a degree?"

She smiled. "We'll see, we'll see. You're an engaging boy, if you are a poor lawyer. I'm to spend the winter in my country house—not far from the Dane-Trent property—everybody's doing it this year. Motor down some Sunday for lunch."

"Sure, I'll come. Meanwhile, would you mind not telling anyone that you witnessed Mrs. Dane's will?"

"You don't think I'm proud of my part in that robbery, do you? I wouldn't have mentioned it now, but I wanted to square myself with Mark."

Mark Trent's mind was in a tumult as he chatted with her in the corridor, inquired for her health on the way down in the elevator, told her that he thought of her rich trinket whenever he attended a wedding. She looked up at him sharply as they waited at the curb.

"Then you still attend weddings?"

"Why not? I rather like them."

"After your experience, I should think you would shun them. Ever see Lola?"

"No."

"Here's my car. That's Dominique at the wheel. Remember him, don't you? He drove my horses before I had an automobile, and the only thing I have against him is that he recommended his friends the Jacques to your aunt. She made so much of Henri that he got dictator-minded and tried to run the whole place."

Jed Stewart was walking the floor when he entered his office. He stopped abruptly.

"Well," he demanded, "did she talk any more?"

"Not about the will. Why the dickens didn't you ask questions?"

"Didn't dare. Don't you see, Mark? Boy, don't you understand? Someone has snatched that second will she witnessed."

"Did you draw it?"

"Never heard of it. Perhaps your aunt had an acute attack of remorse. I argued with her, as much as a lawyer can argue, against cutting you out; she wouldn't come to me about a new will. Didn't Mrs. Gregory say that she had been distraught the last few times they had been together? She thinks it was because Mrs. Dane was making up her mind to disinherit you; you and I know that the will to that effect already had been drawn."

"You passed up a grand chance to cross-examine her, Jed."

"Didn't dare. She thinks the will she witnessed is the one probated; doesn't know that if it had been she would have been summoned to prove her signature. We mustn't let a suspicion of this second will get out. Where is it?"

"She said the Reyburn girl drove in as she left the place. Do you suppose Aunt Mary Amanda told her what was in it and that she—"

Jed Stewart stopped his restless pacing. His eyes and voice were troubled.

A Washington Square Idyl

By H. IRVING KING

NIGHT had fallen over the city and the benches of Washington square were beginning to fill up with the variegated assortment of men who filled them when darkness made its daily and punctual arrival. On one bench, facing that intensely respectable row of old brick mansions which line the north side of the square sat a young man of perhaps thirty whose dress and general appearance caused passers-by to glance at him wonderingly—he was so evidently out of harmony with the usual frequenters of the place. Maurice Davenport seemed unaware of the interest he aroused. His eyes were fixed upon the lighted windows of a mansion opposite.

In the house upon which his eyes were fixed lived Mabell Harrison, and six months before he had written her a letter offering her his heart and begging for her hand. Why he had written instead of making his avowal by word of mouth he could not say, except that he was of a rather bashful nature and had thought it more easy to say what he had to say in writing. The night before he had said to Mabell in taking leave of her for the evening: "I am going to send you a letter tomorrow, Mabell, and I hope that your answer will be such as my very soul desires." And Mabell had replied with a smile: "Go home and sleep well, Maurice. I can guess what the nature of your letter will be, and—good-night!"

He had gone away buoyed up with hope. He had written the letter and sent it by messenger. But to it he had received no reply. His messenger, a clerk in his office, came back and said that, as directed, he had delivered the missive into the young lady's own hand; that she had read it and had said: "Tell Mr. Davenport that there is no answer." The shock had been terrible. How he had managed to get through the rest of the day he could never tell. His pride prevented him from making another attempt upon the affections of Mabell, and two weeks later he saw in the paper that she had sailed with her father and mother for Europe. And now, that very day, he had seen in the paper that the Harrisons had arrived home.

A TALL, lanky, shabbily dressed young man came and took a seat by Maurice's side.

"Got a match, Bo?" asked the youth.

Mechanically Maurice handed the intruder his match case. As he did so the youth got a good look at Maurice's face and gave an exclamation of surprise. Maurice looked more closely at his bench companion and said: "Why, are you not John Davis? You used to be in my office, I think."

"Yes," hesitated the youth.

"You left me, I think, to go with Boswick & Clafflin, did you not?"

"Yes, I did," replied John, "and I wish I'd never done it. I ain't had no luck since. Boswick is dead—I'm down and out."

"Perhaps I can find room for you in the office again," said Maurice.

The youth began to cry. "I ain't worth it," sobbed he. "I played a low down trick on you. I'm broken down and weak, or I wouldn't cry, and I wouldn't confess what I done, either. But, somehow, I got to tell you. Will you still give me another chance?"

Greatly surprised, Maurice said gently: "Of course I will! What is it that you are so sorry for?"

"Well, you know the letter you gave me to take to that very house over there? I didn't take it."

MAURICE rose angrily from his seat and for a moment it seemed as if he would fell the youth to the ground. But controlling himself, he sat down again and said sternly: "Why not?"

"Oh," went on John, the conscious-stricken, "Steve Boswick met me on the street, right over there; he was just after coming out of that house. I asked him where the number I was after was, and showed him the letter. He thought a moment, and then offered me a hundred dollars and a job in his office if I would give the letter to him and tell you that I had delivered it. And I fell for it. As long as Steve lived it was all right. But when he was killed they sacked me."

"Come with me," said Maurice, and strode across to the brick mansion, John following him in fear and trembling. A few minutes later Maurice and Mabell stood confronting each other in the drawing room. She looked worn and pale, but her self command was perfect. Then Maurice broke out impetuously and told her the whole story of the letter and the unfaithful messenger. Turning to the door he called in John, whom he had left in the hall, and made him repeat his confession.

Life, happiness and color came back to Mabell's face as she listened. "I thought it very strange; but, oh, Maurice, how could I have doubted you?"

"Come to my office tomorrow morning and I will talk further with you—now go," said Maurice to John, and John went.

But Maurice lingered

Here's Planned Prettiness

IF AUTUMN comes will you be left behind with faded summer frocks, Madam? No, no, many times no—that is, not if you will but accept this cordial invitation from Sew-Your-Own. It's the easy way to become frock-sure of chic for yourself and your daughters, as well. So Madam, why not sew, sew, sew-your-own!

A Dutch Treat.

It isn't often mother gets a break (it's beauty before age, you know) but this trip she does. Sew-Your-Own has designed, especially for her, an all-occasion frock (above left) that's simply lovely to look at. If father's compliments have become a bit rusty from lack of use, this frock will bring them back to their former brightness. It's pretty in any fabric: gingham, silk crepe, rayon prints, percale, or sheer wool.

Sweet 'n' Simple.

It's a treat, too, for mother when she finds a dress for Little Sis that's as carefully planned as the captivating model above center. It gives the growing girl the fluffing out she needs in the shoulders, and the prettily flared skirt offers her graceful poise indoors, plus full freedom for activity out of doors. It's adorable with the collar and cuffs in white linen. It heightens the contrast of her luscious healthy suntan.

Chic for the G. F.

And a treat for all concerned is the frock Sew-Your-Own has created for The Girl Friend. She may be collegiate, high schoolish, a steno, mother's helper, or a young lady of leisure, but whatever she is she'll look the part and prettier in a take-off on Pattern 1327. It is new, novel, and easy to sew. It is undoubtedly the frock to wear when your escort, the time, and the place are important.

Albert Klag, night supervisor of the Page Dairy of Michigan and Ohio night headquarters at Toledo, returned home Saturday after having spent his vacation at Rush Lake, near the town of Pinckney.

Mr. Klag and family have been vacationing in various parts of Michigan for many years. He is loud in his praise of this particular locality in so far as to say it is the most satisfactory vacation he has ever spent.

He goes home with a record of 18 fish in one day, and the largest fish 23 inches long.

Mr. Klag and family visited Howell and remarked its beauty and business like activity.

They also visited Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Peck of Pinckney.

What is your conduct at filling stations when having your car refilled? Do you smoke? Do you allow the others to smoke?

Fires from this cause have been controlled during the past few years. The station attendants have politely asked drivers to stop smoking. That is as it should be.

Fumes from cars are dangerous. Sparks, smoldering cigarettes, and the like, might suddenly cause an explosion and a serious fire. Lives might even be sacrificed.

Remember! Always put out that smoke.

POLICE TELEPHONE DIRECTORY

The fifth edition of the Michigan Police Telephone Directory, published as an aid to law enforcement men in the war on crime is being given out to local, county, state and federal authorities throughout Michigan by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company.

The new issue of the directory is 8 pages thicker and somewhat more comprehensive than previous editions have been, containing additional information and listings, as well as designations to indicate the 22 police offices that are connected with Wayne County Police Teletype System a network by means of which those departments obtain a continuous exchange of information having to do with their work.

Inserted in the book, also is a map lithographed in colors, which shows the layout of the Wayne County Police Teletype law enforcement network and the location of the Teletypewriters connected with it, together with the call numbers of the 22 machines. That system ties with the Detroit and Rockwood State Police posts, the Wayne sheriff's offices, Detroit Police Radio Station on Belle Isle, and the Police departments of Detroit, Dearborn, Ecorse, Wyandotte, Flat Rock, Plymouth, Highland Park, Hamtramck, Grosse Pointe Park, Grosse Pointe Farms, Grosse Pointe City, Grosse Pointe Shores, Lincoln Park, Melvindale, Northville, River Rouge, Trenton and Wayne.

School Health Examinations

There are many ways in which a child may be handicapped for learning. He may not be able to see or hear well. He may be undernourished and therefore easily tired or chronically fatigued.

Diseased adenoids may be poisoning the body. There may be obscure aches and pains. Tuberculosis, heart ailments and other serious conditions may be present though not yet discovered. Decayed teeth frequently constitute a handicap to good school work.

The list could be lengthened manifold. Not all such conditions are handicaps just because they are present, but they may become so at any time. As a general rule the child with latent disease or defect is not up to par. He is below standard in some degree. Consequently, he is not in best condition for hard school work.

He loses something. He is not a good pupil. To ignore the fact is poor economy on the part of parents and school authorities. In recognition of this truth a number of states have passed laws requiring the health examination of all school children by a physician. Other states specify that inspections shall be given by nurses or teachers. The principle is sound and the practice has become practically universal. It is a good investment, and one of the first steps toward preventing lost educational opportunity.

Next week Dr. Ireland will tell what to do in following weeks.

Over Sixty-Eight Years of Safe Banking

With the fall season coming on rapidly we begin to wonder what kind of business is in store for us all. Judging from current conditions we can look for improvement in all lines. Farmers will be getting good prices for most products, employment will be stabilized due to strikes becoming less frequent. The steady pay check will help the retail trade.

Babson Reports state that a 10% increase will not be unlikely for the general business. Of course, this will mean a slow creeping upward in living costs and commodity prices.
