

Warning To Delinquent Tax Payers

Auditor General George Gundry again reminds taxpayers that Sept. 1, 1937 is the last day they can avoid having their property sold for taxes.

Issuing a note of warning to delinquent tax payers, Auditor General George Gundry again calls attention to the fact that after September 1st the taxpayer will automatically come under the provisions of Act 28, passed by the 1937 legislature, and act which leaves no option to public officials on the matter of property delinquent for taxes.

After September 1st, Mr. Gundry points out if the 1936 taxes are not paid in full, and if the matured installments of 1932 and prior years have not been paid in full, and if the first installment of 1933, 1934 and 1935 taxes have not been paid, (prior to September 1st) the tax payer has completely lost his opportunity to take advantage of the ten payment plan. If payments are made before Sept. 1st there is a saving in fees amounting to 34 and one half percent on 1933 tax, 29 and one fourth percent on the 1934 tax, and 16 and one fourth percent on the 1935 tax.

The penalty for default of any installment is that the entire balance of the tax is offered for sale at the next tax sale, which is in May 1938.

County treasurers, continues Mr. Gundry are greatly encouraged by the response to the state and county advertising concerning delinquent tax collections and it is anticipated that by the time Sept. 1st is reached that the total delinquency for taxes will be substantially reduced.

GRAND JURY TO INVESTIGATE
STREICHER CASE

On March 8, 1935 the body of 7 year old Richard Streicher of Ypsilanti was found stabbed to death and crowded into a culvert. Although numerous suspects were examined no arrests were made and the murder is as much of a mystery now as it was on the day it was committed.

Judge Sample of Washtenaw county and on the approval of Attorney General Starr has ordered a grand jury investigation in which all of the evidence will be reviewed. The petition for the investigation was signed by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baker of Ypsilanti neighbors of the Streichers. Assistant Attorney General James Stewart and Albert Wing will conduct the hearings before Sample. About fifty witnesses will be subpoenaed. The inquiry will last about a week.

Prosecuting Attorney Rapp of Washtenaw said he had no knowledge of such inquiry and regarded it as useless and a waste of money unless the grand jury had information which was being withheld from him.

This was a case which attracted nationwide attention and every effort should be made to solve it. There are altogether too many unsolved murder mysteries at the present time. The dead boy's parents now live in Grand Rapids.

More Federal Money
For County Roads

More Federal Money is to be Available Soon for Roads. Counties are to Match Federal Money

Varnum B. Steinbaugh, deputy of state highway commissioner chief engineer, announced this week that the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads has approved final regulations covering the Michigan secondary road construction program.

The program provides for a maximum expenditure of $1,557,412 a year during the current biennium for the government of secondary trunkline and county roads. The federal government has made $778,706 available for this work in Michigan while the same amount must be furnished by the state and counties.

27 per-cent of the program funds will be expended on trunk line construction and 73 per cent on the county system. Steinbaugh said. The state will be required to match funds expended for trunkline work while the counties must do the same for the county road improvements.

The entire program will be under the general supervision of the state highway department. State specifications will rule. Projects must be approved by the department and it will award final contracts.

Steinbaugh said the next move to get the program under way will be the allocation of minimum funds proposed for expenditure in each of the 83 of counties in Michigan.

"Some of the counties will not want to match these funds," Steinbaugh said. "Others will not be able to do so. In such cases, additional work will be available in other counties."

Thomas McDonald, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, has suggested that some counties may want to join together in a bridge improvement program on county roads that extend through two or more counties

To Offer Scholarships
To Rural Teachers

Owing to Scarcity of Rural Teachers the Teachers Colleges Will Offer a Number of Free Scholarships See Your School Supt for Details.

Because of the shortage of rural teachers, scholarships will be offered to the teachers by the teachers colleges of Michigan.

The scholarship will be offered for the coming two year period, a committee of the state Board of Education and teachers colleges of Michigan decided today, Doctor Sangren said.

They will be granted to highest ranking high school students in the field of rural education, the course leading to a limited certificate for teaching in rural districts.

Those granted the scholarships will pay only the local fees of the school they attend the state tuition being waived, Doctor Sangren explained. The candidate is to complete the course. In case the quota of a county is not filled on the basis of one scholarship for each 12 rural teaching positions other counties will be granted the privilege of naming additional recipients.

The applications now in the hands of county school commissioners must specify which teachers colleges the applicant desires to attend and must also be endorsed by the commissioners and high school principals. Doctor Sangren.

All applications must be in the hands of John Emens assistant state superintendent of public instruction before Sept. 11.

In announcing the decision to award the scholarships in the hope of easing the shortage in this field Doctor Sangren cited an analysis of the demand for rural teachers in a state which shows a need of 900 such teachers every year. County normals provide 450 and teachers colleges 200.

Congress Adjourns

Congress adjourned last week to provide the biggest, although anticipated news of the week in Washington. While Senators and Representatives were leaving the capitol the chief item of speculation was whether President Roosevelt would call a special session in the fall to consider important items of legislation pertaining to labor and agriculture that are now listed the unfinished business category and certain to get immediate attention as Congress reconvenes.

Word went after eight months of legislative debate and argument, the congress terminated the first half of the 75th congress with a rush of business that required three night sessions for the House last week. On the final day both houses agreed upon a conference report of the slum clearance and low rental bill retaining most of the amendments suggested by the house Banking and Currency Committee. During the week the Senate confirmed Senator Hugo Black as a member of the supreme court and Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves wife of the governor of Alabama, was appointed to succeed Senator Black until a special election is held in Alabama next spring. Both Houses passed a compromise sugar bill that restricts importations from Puerto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands until 1940 with the fate of the measure uncertain when it reaches the White House. President Roosevelt signed the D. of C. tax bill with the fair trade practice bill hooked on as a rider. He said he hoped the resale price maintenance bill wouldn't prove too expensive to consumers and scored the device of attaching unrelated riders to important and vital legislative bills.

Committee Burial

Buried in the House rules committee was the wage and hour bill that has been passed by the senate and approved by the House Labor Committee with a few amendments. All efforts to enlarge the labor legislation proved futile when nine members of the rules committee including five Republicans and four Southern Democrats refused to give the bill the right of way although it was conceded that the majority of the House favored legislation to eliminate sweatshops and child labor. Your congressman & other majority members called a special caucus to devise some method of getting the bill to the floor of the House but the caucus purpose was defeated when a bloc of Southern Representatives refused to answer the roll and thereby prevented a quorum that would have allowed the caucus to take official action. The Southern objection was that the wage legislation would be detrimental to the wage and hour bill which will be one of the first bills on the calendar next January. Under the rules of the House another 30 days would have been needed to get the bill out of committee by petition. Although your congressman and others interested in humanitarian legislation were willing to stay in the Capitol until the bill was passed the coalition opposed to legislation that would benefit the working people of the nation prevented this plan.

Current Comment

President Roosevelt made a quick comeback when his nomination of Senator Black to the supreme court was confirmed by the overwhelming vote of 63 to 16. This is one of the smallest negative votes on record. Justices Hughes and Brandeis each had more votes cast against their confirmation. In vain Senator Copeland and others waved the bloody shirt and brought up the Klu Klux Klan issue. Even Senator Borah condemned the latter charge stating that not a bit of evidence was presented to the judiciary committee to prove Black was a klanisman. We wonder what Dorothy Thompson, Kent, Foote, Lawrence, Lippman and other stooge writers who berated the nomination of Senator Black won't do to explain any more than they did last fall after the Roosevelt landslide.

Rep. Elton Eaton of Plymouth who introduced the resolution providing for an investigation of gambling is angry because it is being held behind closed doors. This annual crusade against gambling is like sweeping the ocean back with a broom. Gambling is human nature and has existed since the birth of humanity. You may pass all the laws you desire and conduct all the investigations under the sun, but when it all simmers down those counties which want gambling will have it and those who do not want it will be without it.

Every so often a mass murder is uncovered and the general thought is, how did the murderer get away for so long without detection. Cincinnati has arrested one Anna Marie Hahn a 31 year old blonde, ex school teacher and charged with poisoning two elderly German men. She is also suspected of the death of 9 other men. It is claimed she won their friendship and their death soon followed and in nearly all cases Mrs. Hahn benefited financially. She denies her guilt but the authorities seem to be weaving a tight net around her. Years ago a woman, Belle Guinness, perpetrated another such scheme in Indiana. She advertised for a husband. When a candidate arrived he was asked to make a money settlement. When she received this his death soon followed. Ray Lanphere, a suitor of hers and also an accomplice quarreled with her and killed her and burned the farm house. He was arrested and admitted the numerous murders. Nearly all the victims were found buried on the farm.

The farm union which was organized some years ago for the purpose of getting the farmers their just rights seems to have split into two part radical and conservative. The radical group wishes an alliance with the CIO which the other opposes. At the picnic at Grandville recently which was attended by some 20,000 the radicals were in control. The chief speaker was Homer Martin, president of the UAW. Others on the speakers platform were Roy McDonald and Rev. Chester Graham, both classed as radicals. The president Ira Wilmouth of Adrian was not asked to speak at all. For the past two years the Farmers Union has battled for control of the Michigan Milk Producers Union but has not quite been able to get it. If they could have done this their strength would have undoubtedly become very great.

Of the amount of money appropriated by the state of Michigan by the legislature for all purposes 52 percent was for educational purposes $122,000,000 was appropriated and of this the schools get $58,000,000. Although the above amount was appropriated the revenue of the state is estimated at only $107,000,000. This amount for schools also does not take into account what is raised by districts by local taxes.

You have probably heard the saying that a person was mean enough to steal pennies from a blind man. You probably regarded it as a figure of speech yet Detroit police arrested a man for that very crime. He was given a sentence of 90 days in the House of correction by Judge Scallan. The records revealed he was placed on probation in 1923 on the same charge. His method was to drop a penny in the blindman's cup and take out 30c. This he had done twice before seen and caught by a passerby.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington. — Some years ago, when New England's sharp-tongued George H. Moses sat in the president's chair as president pro tempore of the senate, I used to marvel at the speed with which he got rid of legislation. The Republicans were in control of the senate. The late Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas was the Republican leader. Between the astute Curtis and the nimble-witted Moses, the senate many times really ran in high gear. To me, it was reminiscent of the old days, therefore, when I watched Vice President "Jack" Garner operate in the senate the other day to get the judiciary reform bill through that body without permitting a deluge of debate. I think Mr. Garner performed on that occasion with even greater finesse than did Senator Moses because Mr. Garner did not wait for cues from the floor of the senate; he simply took charge and, knowing what the job was, saw to it that things were accomplished in record time.

But the significance of this incident should not be overlooked. It was noteworthy, of course, that the senate should pass the court bill and send it to the house in a total of six hours. It was noteworthy that the Vice President established a precedent by granting permission to senators to include in the Congressional Record speeches they would have made if the debate had been prolonged. And yet it was the implication of the senate action that seems to me to be the most important phase of this situation.

The way I see the picture is this: The ease with which that bill was put through demonstrates that those who opposed the original bill to add six new justices to the Supreme court were objecting only to the court packing and not to the reforms in procedure.

The bill as it becomes law provides for a number of changes in court procedure to the end that adjudication of controversy can be accomplished much more quickly than has been the case in the past. It does not include any addition to the membership of the Supreme court and it does not include any provision for sending hand-picked judges into the various circuits and districts as the White House and the Department of Justice may decide. In other words, the new law leaves the judiciary system independent and again establishes it as a coordinate branch of the government, equal in all respects to the legislative, which is congress, and the executive, which is the President and the executive departments. There can be no doubt that this piece of legislation is worthwhile although to the layman the benefits may not immediately appear. It must be regarded, however, simply as a piece of legislation that cuts much legal red tape and those who must avail themselves of the courts or those who are forced under jurisdiction of courts will come more nearly obtaining justice than heretofore.

I have said in these columns before that when the senate refused to accept the President's orders and pass legislation that would permit him to appoint six new justices to the Supreme court at one time, the President suffered one of the worst political defeats he has ever encountered. He probably will never meet with another such disastrous setback.

It was obvious to the vast majority of senators and representatives and to observers here within six weeks after Mr. Roosevelt submitted the court packing bill that he could not force it through. He refused nevertheless to admit defeat. In consequence, it took nearly six months of bitter and futile wrangling in the senate to convince the President that he was on the wrong side of the question as far as public sentiment was concerned.

So, congress has wasted nearly all of the 1937 session on a proposition for which it was not responsible.

It may be said that congress should remain in session under those circumstances and give all of the time that is necessary to deliberation of measures before it. Yet, facts must be faced. One of these facts is that through all of the months prior to adjournment scores of members were wearing themselves down fighting against a proposition with which they could not agree. In the meantime, Washington's summer settled down. Washington's summer is a completely hot and humid summer. Most of the members of the senate and house are no longer boys of college age. They cannot withstand the physical rigors of heavy work under weather conditions that prevail in a Washington summer. Thus it is not strange at all that as July passed and August wore on, most of the members wanted to go to places more comfortable than the Capital city and that constituted a terrific urge to get rid of whatever legislation was before them with the very minimum of effort. In consequence, there has been some very bad legislation and congress is now wholly to blame for it.

New York's Fight
A friend of mine, a well-known doctor, who is not a politician, knows nothing about politics—a man, in short, who minds his own business and tries to do the best job of which he is capable, asked me a question the other day that precipitated this discussion. He asked me why the newspapers throughout the country were giving so much space, front page space at that, to the political fight over the Democratic nomination for mayor in New York.

My doctor friend observed that which is true, namely, that the mayor of New York is only mayor of that city and has no jurisdiction or power anywhere else; he observed as well that New York City is simply a subdivision of the state of New York and that New York state is only one state out of forty-eight in our nation. Further, he suggested that he, and he believed millions of others, could not possibly have any interest in whether Tammany or the New Deal faction of Democrats in New York City should win the nomination and their mayoralty candidate.

Superficially, the doctor was right. His thoughts, however, do not touch the root of that situation. Fundamentally, the battle between Tammany and the Democrats in New York is a battle between the old line, conservative Democrats throughout the nation and the New Deal faction of the party which is headed by President Roosevelt. It is vitally important also to the Republicans for the reason that the Presidential election of 1940 is almost certain to be a campaign in which we will find conservatives from whatever party aligned on one hand and radicals from whatever party aligned on the other side. To that extent, the New York primary and mayoralty election is the beginning of the 1940 presidential campaign.

The bitterness that is going to prevail from here on has been given something of a preview by the charge by Senator Copeland, the Tammany candidate, that President Roosevelt was interfering in a purely local fight. Senator Copeland's activities in the senate have been almost wholly antagonistic to the President and the New Deal generally. Where the President has been sound, as the conservatives recognize sound policies, Senator Copeland has fought alongside of the New Dealers. Otherwise, he has not concealed his opposition to radical New Deal proposals.

Thus, when Senator Copeland broke openly and accused the President of stooping to local politics, he opened the way for conservatives everywhere to strike back at the political machine managed by Postmaster General Jim Farley in Mr. Roosevelt's behalf. As one house member suggested: "Senator Copeland has put fire into the fight."

The selection of Senator Copeland by the famous Tammany organization in New York City was the signal for the New Deal faction of the great city to take off their coats. They promptly announced selection of New York Supreme Court Justice Mahoney as their candidate against Copeland. There are four borough organizations behind Mahoney. There is only the Tammany group behind Copeland. On the face of it, it would seem that the senator cannot win. The fact seems to be, however, that there will be a rather close race for the reason that some of the four organizations behind Mahoney may not be able to control the Democratic votes in their bailiwicks as entirely as Tammany Hall will control Democrats so long affiliated with that organization. Certainly, according to the best advice I can get, the Copeland charge against Mr. Roosevelt is likely to swing a good many Democrats to the Copeland ticket. This will be so because New York City always has resented outside influences in its political battles. Senator Copeland can be counted upon as well to broaden the charge so that Mr. Farley's tentacles in New York City politics where he has long been active will be made to appear like the strangling, crushing arms of an octopus. In other words, the conservatives who are supporting Copeland will not let the charge of interference by the President become of less consequence any time it is retold.

True, Secretary Marvin McIntyre of the White House staff denied that the President had talked politics with the Mahoney leaders. But the denial was not accepted by Copeland as being sincere, for he added: "I am not afraid of Mr. Roosevelt's reprisals. The President enjoys a great personal popularity, but his political popularity is swiftly disappearing."

The Things That Last Are All in Pennsylvania, Said Kipling

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AFTER having visited the sixty-seven counties of Pennsylvania, trod the streets of all its teeming cities, gazed on its noble mountains, sauntered through all its glorious highland valleys, motored along all its fine rivers, traveled through its dense, young forests, inspected its finest farming areas and studied its amazing industries, it becomes easy to understand how Kipling, after a transcontinental trip, could write:

"They are there, there with earth immortal (Citizens, I give you friendly warning);
The things that truly last when men and time have passed,
They are all in Pennsylvania this morning."

From the heart of Market street in Philadelphia to the famous "Point" in Pittsburgh and Logstown down the Ohio; from Easton and Bethlehem to New Castle and Sharon; from busy Chester on the Delaware to thriving Erie on the lake; from Matamoras, farthest east community, to Greene, the southwesternmost county; the historic, the eye-delighting, and the industrial are bound together in every prospect.

Where the commerce of Philadelphia throbs, William Penn lived; Benjamin Franklin wrought and philosophized; the Declaration of Independence had its birth; and the federal Constitution was created.

Where Braddock fought and was fatally wounded now lives a teeming population, and hard by are some of the principal industrial plants of the world. The Edgar Thompson Steel mills, the Westinghouse Electric, and scores of others stand on ground that was within earshot of the fateful battle; and it is stated that a heavier tonnage moves within twelve miles of Braddock's field than in any other area of its size.

Vast Industries Are There.

The coal that comes down the Monongahela; the ore that moves from the Great Lakes; the iron and steel fabricated in the Pittsburgh district's scores of mighty plants; all the commodities bound east and west and north and south by rail and river—all these, the most concentrated tonnage in the world, pass by or within a dozen miles of the spot where the hostile savage turned back the English forces.

On the Ohio between Economy and Baden, where Dam No. 4 stretches across the river, is the vast plant of the Byers company, manufacturers of wrought iron. In front of the plant offices is a marker which proclaims the site of Logstown, where George Washington, carrying the greatest "message to Garcia" of all our history, negotiated and bargained with the Half King and his confederates for an escort to Fort Le Boeuf.

Across the bridge, a stone's throw down the highway, is a smaller marker proclaiming the site where Gen. Anthony Wayne had his winter camp.

In sight across the river is the factory-studded area where Queen Aliquippa had her cornfields. Here where Indian conferences created tribal agreements and wampum belts sealed bargains between redskins and paleface, giant furnaces and mills now mix slag and purified iron and produce more than half of the nation's wrought-iron pipe.

Almost Forgotten Romances.
Everybody knows the stories of Gettysburg and Valley Forge, but how many know the story of Ole Bull and his castle in the wilds of the big woods of the Kettle creek country? Every travel folder and historical map tell of the chief points of interest in Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, and Erie, but who hears of the birth and boyhood days of Robert E. Peary spent at Cresson, of Prince Gallitzin's superb work in the heart of the Alleghenies, of Horace Greeley's Utopia, or of the French settlement at Asylum?

Likewise, everyone knows something of the oil romances of Titusville and Oil City, but how few know of the rejuvenation methods in the Bradford field now in full swing!

The story of Ole Bull's hapless adventure in the heart of the Big Woods, where the Viking virtuoso dreamed his dream of "a new Norway, consecrated to Liberty, baptized with Independence, and protected by the Union's mighty flag," is one that stirs the heart of every admirer of the artist.

During his concert tours through the South, Ole Bull had encountered many of his countrymen, whose efforts to accustom themselves in balmy areas than the lands of their birth had brought them privations, hardships, and ill health. Their appeals had touched him. Later, when touring northern Pennsylvania, he found in the heart of Potter county a large area reminiscent of Viking land itself. He bought it and started to build there his "new Norway."

Some 800 of his countrymen flocked to his haven in the heart of the mountains. Three hundred houses, a store, and a church were built. For himself, he erected a rustic castle of unheated, unmortared stone on a little bluff overlooking Kettle creek.

End of Ole Bull's Colony.

In the intervals between concert tours, the violinist would go among his people. There he would seat himself on the ramparts of his castle, and "reproduce the rush and roar of rapid streams, the frolic of the winds through the rocky glens, and the tempest's crash on the mountain top."

To this day as one motors down the historic old Coudersport and Jersey Shore turnpike, past the hamlet of Oleona, one may see the remains of the old castle and fancy he hears Kettle creek and its rocky glens echoing back the music that imitated them fourscore years ago.

All went well with this new Norway of America until one night when Ole Bull was entertaining some friends in his castle. A messenger rode up and carried a notice from the actual owner of the property. The men who had sold it to him had no title. The real owner was a Philadelphia merchant.

For five years Ole Bull fought a losing battle in the courts against those who had sold him land they did not own, earning the costs of his suit by his concerts. In the end he got small damages. But meanwhile the colony had perished.

Prince Gallitzin's Mission.

In the heart of the Alleghenies, high above Johnstown and Altoona, there are markers, memorials, and institutions which preserve the memory of a prince who elected to become a pauper in order to serve the cause of Christ and to carry His message of benevolence and brotherly kindness to the humble mountain folk of the region. Prince Demetrius Augustine Gallitzin was born in Holland in 1770. His father was Russian ambassador to the Netherlands and his mother the daughter of a field marshal of Frederick the Great.

At the age of seventeen he picked up a Bible in a bookstore and began to study it, with the result that he became a convert of the Church. Later his father sent him to America for a season of travel. Once here he decided to spend a season's theological studies in Baltimore. Then, after ordination in 1798, he started out as a traveling missionary. Erecting a log church on the west slope of the Alleghenies, he traveled far and wide, visiting homes where bare floors were his bed, his saddle a pillow, and his food the coarsest mountain fare.

Prince Gallitzin lost his all. His father left what was to have been his patrimony to his sister. But he used the money his mother gave him for his mountain mission work, and at Loretto that work is still carried on in the fine missions, schools, and churches he founded.

Fine Feathers for Three

SEW-YOUR-OWN wouldn't be your weather prophet for the world, but you know, Milady, and so does S-Y-O, that it's always fair weather when good fashions get together. Which brings us to today's three sparkling new frocks—a whole crowd of style for the pretty part of any man's family.

A Fun Frock.

Rain, nor gloom, nor a flat tire (either kind), can dampen the spirits of the girl who wears this buoyant, young sports frock (above left) on her daily rounds—be they on the fairway, the campus, behind the counter, or merely from pillar to post.

Here's to Mothers.

Sew-Your-Own loves nothing more than catering to mother's wardrobe needs. The frock above (center) is for all mothers: old sweet ones, young darling ones, yes, even for mothers-to-be. It is easy to run up, easy to do up, and best of all, easy to look at. Smart simple lines make it a favorite of women who demand more than a passable appearance when they're "just at home."

Little Brown Girl.

An all-over sultan is her forte, and many sunny days are ahead for young Miss Fortunate whose mommy chooses to interpret the fetching model at the right. A scallop-edged waist front accentuated by frou-frou trim is right down her avenue, and a gored skirt, that's second to none for class, fits into her scheme of things to a T. Mother, why not make one dressy version, as pictured, another finished differently for school? (Perhaps with a simple braid trim) Rayon prints, gingham, or sheer wool, will do nicely as the material.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1249 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1207 is designed for sizes 34 to 50. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 35 inch material. With long sleeves 4¾ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1366 is designed for sizes 6 to 14 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 39-inch material plus 1¼ yards of machine pleating.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

What You Seek

Have you ever thought how many objects you pass without even noticing them; how many voices and sounds fail to register with you?

It seems that one usually sees what he is looking for and hears that to which his ears are attuned.

Perhaps this is what Emerson had in mind when he said that no one brings back from Europe anything which he did not take over with him. (Excluding merchandise of course.)—Ohio Farmer.

casts, especially the ball game is being panned by the press. Certain breakfast food concerns are paying part of the cost of broadcasting and insisting that their products be mentioned before, after, and all during the ball games. This is rather too much commercializing to suit the fans and there has been much complaint.
These advertisers should use the method of the old time medicine show man. For about an hour he extolled the merits of his cure-all medicine and sold soap, etc. Then these were put away and the show went on with no sales talk of any kind allowed to interrupt it. The breakfast food Co. should do their commercializing before or after the ball game. Also the testimonials from the ball players as to the merits of their foods. It is claimed the players are paid $300 each for these. Hank Greenberg demand-

The Hollister school reunion was held for the 8th time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Haines Musch of Green Oak Saturday. It was the first time in 8 years that the weather man had been unkind, but in some ways the rain was a kindness because of the fact the reunion was held inside the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Musch. They stated that the new home had never had a housewarming and so were glad to be given one by the district reunion which they preceded to do. It is a beautiful new home for the grand good people.

Dinner was served cafeteria style and as usual was good and bountiful.

The president Hunter Galatian of Pinckney, Mich. was in charge of the meeting which opened with singing several old songs.

Mrs. Musch gave the secretary's report and read letters from the Vice president, Sophia Galatian of Philadelphia Mrs. Marshall of Kansas and the new teacher Joe Basydo who did write that he would be unable to come as he was being married that day but he would see that it didn't happen again next year.

Walter Scott of Brighton gave a history of the school; he spoke of one young lady teacher who was so afraid of lightning she took off her corset and put it in the wood box.

Haines Musch told of the contract for the building of the school house which was very brief. It gave the dimensions required that good lumber be used and good glass in the windows. A man named Sam Barbour built it for $800.00.

Mrs. Louis Schleide of Ann Arbor gave The Golden Ladder and others from away spoke briefly.

The same officers of last year were elected.

Following the meeting all resorted to the icecream tubs and the 8th reunion became a thing of the past.

AN ELECTRIC RANGE USER SAYS:

"Before we bought our electric range, we had to decorate the kitchen every two years. I bought my electric range six years ago and have not decorated the walls since. I have 34 plants in the house, all growing beautifully. I wouldn't be without my electric stove!"

THE ELECTRIC OVEN.

Many women who use electric ranges comment on the ease and certainty of oven-cooking. Whether you are broiling a steak or baking a cake, you will be pleased with the results achieved in your electric oven. One housewife says: "It is almost impossible to point out any one feature that I like better than the others—unless it is the oven. PINCKNEY SPLITS DOUBLE
HEADER WITH CHELSEA

The Pinckney Tri-County League team played its first double header of the year with Chelsea Sunday and split even losing the opener 4 to 3 and winning the last game 4 to 1. The boys played a nice fielding game but Lefty Barth of Chelsea was hard for them to hit in the opener. Henry Skowerski pitched the first game for Pinckney and only allowed three in the first five innings. In the 6th the Chelsea team tied the score on a walk two hits and an error and scored the winning run in the 7th with two out when L. Noviss singled to center scoring Eddie Kolander. Skowerski got 11 strikeouts and got two of Pinckney's 6 hits. Pinckney scored all their runs in the 6th when Smith singled, Haines batted for Young and walked and Maycock scored both on a hit to center after they had pulled a double steal. Skowerski hit towards first and was safe when Barth who took Kolanders throw, dropped it, Maycock scoring, Lamb ending the inning by lining to third.

In the second contest Noviss was no problem to Pinckney who threw away several scoring chances by taking too many chances on the bases. Pinckney scored two runs the first inning when Lamb singled, G. Ward got walked and Haines and Maycock also hit safely. In the third Skowerski got a double and Haines and Smith each tripled. Haines was called out for not touching second and only one run resulted from all this slugging. Pinckney's last run came in the 5th when Ward singled got around to third on Skowerski's hit and scored on an infield out. Chelsea's run came in the 4th when Noviss singled, stole second and scored on Parson's hit. Chelsea got two men on in the 7th inning on a base on balls and a fielder's choice after two were out but Jameison ended the game by fouling out to Dickinson. No catcher being available G. Ward donned the armor and went behind the bat where he did a creditable imitation of Fudy York.

MAY CAN FRUITS
WITHOUT SUGAR

Fruit canning in the midst of a large Michigan harvest can be accomplished without the use of sugar until later, but the fruit will not hold its color, shape or flavor as well.

This is the explanation prepared by the home economics extension service of the Michigan State College.

Unsweetened canned fruit is useful for pie making and also in the diet of those who have diabetes. Juicy fruits should be canned in their own juice rather than with water, when no sugar is used.

The process is not difficult. A new wrinkle suggested by those who have experimented with fruit canning is the idea of adding extra juice. Extract the juice from the ripe fruits by crushing, heating and straining. Pack the remaining fruits closely into glass jars or tin cans without preheating and add enough water to cover. Partially seal the jars or exhaust and then seal tin cans.

A hot water bath is then used to process from 5 to 20 minutes depending on the density of the fruit. Still another method is to precook the fruit 2 to 4 minutes depending on the density of the fruit then seal.

Less juicy fruits canned without sugar require water. These include apples, peaches and pears. Only the smallest amount of water necessary should be used, however, in order to keep the natural flavor of the fruit.

DUE TO BE SNAGGED

Suspected bootlegging of gas and other kinds of taxable motor fuel in to the state of Michigan, is due to receive a blow as a result of operation of one of the acts of the regular session of the 1937 legislature.

The statute makes it mandatory that all motor vehicles engaged in the business of transporting any kind of motor fuel, must bear permanently painted in a conspicuous place on its body, the name and address of its owner, Leola D. Case, Secretary of State has notified all concerned, that these letters must not be less than 4 inches high. In the case of wholesale distributors the trucks must also show the "gas tax" license number, indicated by the letters, "GT".

The purpose of the act is to make justice detection easier where it is believed an attempt is being made to bring motor fuel into the state without payment of the state's three cent a gallon gas tax for sales rates that recognized retailers could not meet.

Joseph Hadley Director of the Gas tax Division of the Dept. of State is pointing out that recognized dealers in all phases of the oil and gas industry, who have always co-operated in observance of its gas tax collection law, will be benefited by operation of the statute. The act was immediately effective, but reasonable time for observance is being permitted by the Dept. of State.

The peril of being too careful with cupid. A story of a man who tried his best to play safe with love, and how his caution led to half million dollar loss. In the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with News-Sun.

Conservation Dept.
Notes

40,000 acres of state owned land in Bay, Clare, Otsego, Rosecommon, Lawford, Arenac Gladwin and Midland counties will be offered to the public when the oil drilling rights are sold at auction on Sept. 3 at Lansing.

An 800 acre tract of land in the township of Grant, Clare county, has been designated as a wild life sanctuary and closed to hunting and trapping for 5 years.

A hog nosed snake 30 inches long, which was trying to swallow a toad was captured by Conservation Officer Gaeht near Gladwin recently.

Michigan paid bounties on 57 coyote pelts last July. There were also 24 bobcat bounties paid. Under the new law more bobcat bounties will be paid.

Ora Hayner of Munith is one of the six master trappers appointed by the conservation commission. They will instruct farmers in coyote and wolf trapping.

The law has caught up with the hunters who smeared their deer tag with mud last year. It has been changed to read legible as well visible.

Otto Hall, a CCC engineer from Gaylord is working on the Dead River flooding project near Houghton. Here 2,000 acres will be flooded for wild animals and fowls.

The Department has purchased 723 more acres of wild land for game propagation from the $1.60 deer license fund.

Starting Sept. 1st 1937 one million copies of the new game laws will be given out.

The trout season has been the most satisfactory in many years. It closes Labor Day.

The state game farm at Mason will keep all female Hungarian partridges which laid over 30 eggs this year to serve as brood stock. The others with the male birds will be planted in different parts of the state.

The conservation dept. now presents a program each Wednesday on Station WWJ, Detroit. This will continue until Nov. 10th.

More than 300 wild ducks and 37 Canadian geese, have been reared at the state game farm at Mason this year. Of the ducks 250 are gray mallards 51 wood ducks and 36 blacks.

So for this year there have been 898 forest fires and 13,304 acres have been burned over.

The season this year on migratory fowl is from Oct 9 to Nov 6.

Effective Oct 29 is a law forbidding the hunting of all small game before the hour of sunrise. Previously only pheasants had been so protected.

An incubator used at the state farm at Mason this year to hatch pheasants produced an 82 percent hatch of the strongest chicks.

Mrs. Edna Spears was in Ann Arbor Thursday.

Norbet Lavey and wife of Detroit were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Lavey.

The Misses Francis VanderWall & Mary Spears were in Grand Rapids over the week end as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Soley.

This Expanding Universe

Be the earth great or small what matter is that to mankind? It is always great enough provided it gives us a stage for suffering and for love. To suffer and to love, these are the twin sources of its inexhaustible beauty. Suffering, pain—how divine it is, how misunderstood! To it we owe all that is good in us, all that makes life worth living; to it we owe pity and courage and all the virtues.—Anatole France.

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, stiffness of muscles, getting up night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. ## SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reyburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane. Unwittingly she overhears Jed talking to Mark Trent, a nephew of Mrs. Dane who has been disinherited. Mrs. Dane had lived at Lookout House, a huge structure on the sea, built by her father and divided into two, for her and Mark's father. Brooke had been a fashion expert, and Mrs. Dane, a "shut-in," hearing her on the radio, had invited her to call and developed a deep affection for her. Mark discloses that Mrs. Dane had threatened to disinherit him if he married Lola, from whom he is now divorced. He says he does not trust Henri and Clotilde Jacques, Mrs. Dane's servants. He says he is not interested in an offer of Brooke's to share the estate with him. Leaving her department store job, Brooke refuses an offer to "go stepping" with Jerry Field, a carefree young man who wants to marry her. At a family conference she learns she must live at Lookout House alone, since Lucette, her younger sister who is taking her job, her brother, Sam, a young playwright, and her mother plan to stay in the city. Jed and Mark are surrounded when they hear from Mrs. Gregory, a family friend, that she had witnessed a hit-and-run accident with Henri and Clotilde two weeks before Mrs. Dane died. Brooke had arrived just as she was leaving.

"Destroyed it? But how could Brooke Reyburn have known what was in the first will? Perhaps your aunt had told her that she was to be residuary legatee—it doesn't seem probable, but women do fool things." He grinned. "Of course men never do. We've got to get busy. If it isn't destroyed, that will may be at Lookout House; you've never liked the Jacques and you say that they hate you. I have an idea. Open your house. Live there. Get friendly with the girl."

"I would feel like a sneak to go there to spy on her."

"You suspect that she may have influenced your aunt to make a will in her favor, don't you?"

"I do."

"Then give her a chance to prove that she didn't. Take a couple of Japs and go down and live next door."

"I won't commit myself to that proposition in a hurry. If I decide to do it, will you come with me?"

"Sure, I've been hoping you'd ask me. Philo Vance is my middle name." Stewart picked up the note lying on the desk. "You'd better open the investigation by accepting this."

"The Reyburn girl's invitation to dine on Thanksgiving day? I would feel like a spy, a traitor. The turkey would choke me."

"Do you want the truth about this will?"

"You bet I do."

"Then go. Don't write. We never send a letter when we can send a man. Phone the night before that you are coming. She'll have less time in which to think why you are accepting."

Brooke Reyburn stood in the doorway of the living-room at Lookout House. Behind her in the hall a graceful circular stairway wound up and up. She nodded approval. The room was the perfect setting she had visualized for the duchess of Argyle since the day she had known that her father had willed her the portrait. The green of the walls and trim repeated the color of the satin gown of the woman in the dull gold frame which hung above the mantel of carved black Italian marble, repeated also the shade of the feathers of the dozing parrot in a gilded cage, threw into relief dark polished surfaces of mahogany.

She had had everything that she thought belonged to his family stored in the apartment over the garage. Curious that she had found so little silver.

She looked at the door which Mary Amanda Dane had told her opened into the twin house. Something uncanny about it. Whenever she was in the room it drew her eyes like a magnet. Mark Trent's house was on the other side. It had not been lived in for years. What a waste. Had his wife refused to live there? His wife? She couldn't think of him as having had a wife. Why think of him at all?

She resolutely switched her thoughts to her surroundings. This was the same room in which she had first seen Mrs. Dane in her wheel chair, but how different. Then it had been drab and heavy; now it glowed with soft color. She would never forget the pathos in the woman's eyes as they had met hers, nor the eagerness of her greeting. She had registered a passionate vow to make her lovely and attractive in appropriate clothes. That had been her job—then—and a thrilling job, too, to help women make the most of their good points.

How Mary Amanda Dane had fooled her about money. The crippled woman had kept her feet firmly on the ground when it came to spending. Planning inexpensive, attractive clothes for her had been an exciting challenge. She had succeeded. The frocks had been charming, and with her drab wardrobe the invalid had shed much of her crabbedness. Lovely clothes did that for a woman. Pity that more husbands didn't realize the fact. Now she was gone and had left a small fortune behind her. Why had she denied herself so many of the luxuries of life? Brooke blinked long wet lashes and said aloud, as she had said many times since she had come to live at Lookout House:

"Thank you for everything, Mrs. Mary Amanda. Thanks billions."

She swallowed the lump which rose in her throat whenever she thought of the woman's incredible kindness. Hardly the time to go sentimental when at any moment the family might burst in on her. They were on their way to spend Thanksgiving. For the first time they would see the changes in the house; she had postponed their coming until it should be in perfect order.

The honk-honk of an automobile horn outside was followed by voices singing lustily:

"Over the river and through the wood,

Trot fast, my dapple-gray!
Spring over the ground.
Like a hunting hound
For this is Thanksgiving day."

The gay chorus was followed by laughter and vociferous cries:

"Whoa there! Stand still, Lightning! Whoa!"

Laughing, Brooke dashed for the front door. It was so like the Reyburn family to dramatize its arrival.

In a rush of cold air and excited greetings she piloted her mother and sister to the library. The startled parrot shrieked, "Stop! Look! Listen!"

"Boy, you don't need a burglar alarm with that announcer. You ought to loan him to a bank."

Lucette made a gamin face at the parrot as she slipped out of her ocelot coat. She dragged off her hat and patted the swirl of her dark hair.

Brooke hugged her mother. "It's wonderful to have you here, Celia Reyburn, and aren't you devastating in that eel-gray ensemble!"

"Not as devastating as you are in that shimmering white, daughter. It brings out the copper lights in your hair."

Brooke laughed. "We are like two diplomats exchanging compliments, the difference is that ours come from the heart. Where's Sam? Don't tell me Sam isn't coming!"

Lucette held a lighter to a cigarette with a faint hint of bravado.

"Don't cry, darling. Sam came. Didn't you recognize his voice singing as if his little heart would burst from joy as we approached this baronial hall? Doubtless he is kissing his peachy convertible good-night in your garage. He's crazy about that coupe you gave him, Brooke. He has named it Lightning. And can it go! Who's the tall gent with the undertaker expression who pulled our bags from the car as if he were extracting upper and lower molars?"

"Henri. He and his wife, Clotilde, worked for years for Mrs. Dane. I kept them on to help me settle. They take a lot of handling, believe it or not."

"I believe it. This room looks like part of a House Beautiful exhibit. It's corking."

"Wait till you see the rest of the house, Lucette. Here's Sam. I would recognize his bang of a door if I heard it in Timbuctoo. Welcome to Lookout House, Sammy! It's wonderful that the theater closed just at this time."

"Yeah! It's all in the point of view. There are them who think otherwise. However, I'm not kicking."

"We have, Sam," Celia Reyburn steeled her voice. "We'd better stop emotionalizing and get ready for dinner. I have kept house years enough to know that promptness at meals helps to keep the home-maker's life a walk easy."

"You would think of that, Mother. It isn't dinner to night. I planned a buffet supper, not being sure at what time my relatives from the big town would arrive. Come upstairs and I'll show you your rooms."

A family might get on each other's nerves, as of course it did at times, but there was nothing like it, Brooke concluded fervently, as after supper on a floor cushion in front of the library fire she leaned against her mother's knees.

Lucette burst out nervously:

"If Sam can stop that nut-munching marathon, perhaps he'll announce the latest Reyburn news flash."

Brooke sat erect. "What news?"

Sam took careful aim at the parrot's perch. The nutshell struck its bullseye and roused the dozing bird. "Hell's bells!" he croaked, and ruffled his feathers.

"Looks as if he were caught in a typhoon, doesn't he?" The laughter in Sam's voice vanished. "Mother has been invited to spend the winter in England with her friend Lady Jaffrey."

"Sam!" With the exclamation Brooke was on her feet. "Do you mean it? How perfectly grand! She lives in an old castle, doesn't she?"

"Hey, pipe down, Brooke. There's a nigger in the woodpile. Wait till you hear the condition."

"A condition in Lady Jaffrey's invitation, Sam? I can't believe it."

"Be quiet, children. Let me talk." Arms crossed on the back of the wing chair in which she had been sitting, Celia Reyburn faced her family. Her cheeks were pink; her eyes, as blue as her son's, were brilliant with excitement. She clasped her hands tightly as if to steady them.

"The chair recognizes the lady from the big city," Sam encouraged with a grin.

"What's the condition, Mother? Don't you want to go?"

"Very, very much, Brooke, but I shouldn't enjoy a moment of the visit if I left your brother and sister in that apartment alone. Perhaps I'm a selfish woman, but I would like to and will go, if my mind is perfectly at ease about Lucette and Sam. If they will come here to you, and if you will have them—"

"Have them! Mother, don't be foolish! I have been rattling around in this big house like a dried coconut in a shell. Of course I want them—but will they come?"

"Who's being foolish now?" Lucette flung her cigarette into the fire. Her cheeks were almost as red as her painted lips. "Of course we'll come, Brooke Reyburn. Of course we'll play ball Mother's way. Sam and I aren't cold-blooded fish. If taking to the sticks to be chaperoned by big sister will make Mother's visit happier, we'll settle down here with bells on. She's earned all the fun she can get. She'll have one grand time and mow those stiff Britishers down in swaths and come home Countess Whoosit, or I miss my guess."

"Lucette!" Celia Reyburn protested indignantly.

"Don't mind her Mother," Brooke reassured. "By the time you return your younger daughter will have acquired all the social graces—"

"Just a minute! Now I make a condition. I come only if I keep on with my job."

"It would mean early and late commuting, Lucette."

"I've thought that out. In Sam's convertible we can make it."

"But you and Sam won't be coming down at the same time, and—"

"Don't be so sure, Brooke," Sam aimed a nutshell at the parrot. "The theater has closed permanently and I'm up against one of those simple economic problems, where's the next job coming from? I'll go to New York to see off Mother and take my play. Now that producers have begun to sniff around for bargains, I may get my chance."

"Sam—dear—" Brooke attempted to lighten her dismayed voice. Bad enough for him to be out of work without having her turn sob-sister.

"You'll find something. I read the other day that the theater is on the up-grade. If you don't—oh, Sammy, what a chance for you to write! Why not give your play a try-out here? We'll do it for the town's welfare fund, in the Club House theater. What a chance to try 'Islands Arise' on the dog!"

"News flash! The Reyburns stage a play!" Lucette cut in.

"Why not?" Brooke persisted eagerly. "Most of the summer homes are to be kept open during the winter and—Answer the phone, will you, Sam? Take the message for me. I've been pestered to death by tradespeople and insurance agents wanting to sell me something. Tell them I'm out of town for the evening—anything."

The silence of the room was broken only by the snap and hiss of the fire as Sam Reyburn put the receiver of the handset to his ear.

"Hulloa.—Yes.—Miss Reyburn is out of town for the evening.—Sure, she'll be back tomorrow.—Oh, it is!—Yes, I'll give her your message. She'll be pleased purple.—I get you. I'll tell her. 'Bye!'" He laid the phone on the stand.

"Who was it, Sam? What will please me purple?" Brooke demanded unseemly.

"A party by the name of Trent."

"What did he want?"

"Not much. Only to say that he accepted your invitation for Thanksgiving dinner with pleasure."

1. The Panama canal office says that the Empress of Britain was the largest liner to pass through the canal. It was also the liner to pay the largest fee, which was $18,941.25.
2. Ten Presidents owned slaves: Washington, Monroe, Jefferson, Madison, Jackson, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, Johnson and Grant. Lincoln never owned slaves.
3. Discovery of the simple principles of magnetism possessed by magnetite, or loadstone, was made by Chinese in 1400 B. C., or 3,500 years before magnetism was known in Europe.
4. The Great Lakes have approximately the following elevations above sea level: Superior, 602 feet; Michigan, 581; Huron, 581; Erie, 241; and Ontario, 246 feet.

6. Roman senators were appointed for life unless expelled from office for some dishonorable cause.
7. Contrary to general opinion, says a specialist, there is no small eye or large eye. All eyes are approximately of the same size. The reason for the apparent difference depends upon the orifice or aperture through which the eyes are seen. It is the variable diameter of this opening that creates the erroneous impression of different sizes of eyes.
8. There are three ways in which salt may be secured: First, by mining; second, by evaporation of sea water; and third, by digging wells until a salt vein is struck and then pouring water and pumping it up again as brine.

For Bathroom Curtains.—Terry cloth or toweling makes excellent bathroom curtains, easy to wash requiring no ironing.

To Prevent Iron From Sticking.—A little salt added to starch will prevent the iron from sticking.

Rhubarb Batter.—Cut rhubarb into pieces one inch long. If sticks are large split them lengthwise as well. Fill a buttered fireproof dish three parts full with the rhubarb. Beat together one ounce butter, two ounces granulated sugar and one egg; then add two ounces flour and beat again. Add enough milk to make a thin batter, pour over the rhubarb, and bake in a moderate oven for 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with cream.

For Roly-Poly or Suet Pudding.—When making a roly-poly or suet pudding, instead of using a cloth wrap the pudding in double grease-proof paper and tie with string in the usual way. The pudding will be much lighter and there will be no greasy cloth to wash afterwards.

Fresh Peas, French Style.—One quart shelled peas; two small onions, whole; one bunch parsley, lump of butter, one tablespoonful salt, outer leaves of lettuce, one-half cup cream. In a saucepan put peas, onions, parsley, butter and salt. Add enough boiling water to cover bottom of saucepan, cover with lettuce leaves and cook until peas are tender. Remove onion, lettuce, parsley, add cream to peas and heat until scalding hot.

Retaining Vegetable Flavor.—Vegetables will retain more of their flavor if put on to cook in water that has already been brought to the boiling point. Otherwise much of the flavor will soak into the water.

"Real" Hourly Earnings in Manufacturing, 1920-36

The above chart illustrates the improvement in "real" hourly earnings of manufacturing workers that took place from 1919 to 1937. Earnings moved upward, while the cost of living went down, making it possible for workers to buy more for their money. This is particularly noticeable in the recovery period since 1932. It should be kept in mind, however, that the average number of hours worked has been substantially reduced in recent years. On the other hand, the buying power of the consumer's dollar has increased somewhat more than is indicated because of improvement in the quality of goods and services used in the cost-of-living index.

Deficiency Appropriation
The third deficiency appropriation bill amounting to $73,000,000 and including some $20,000,000 to finance the farm tenancy law, was approved by the House and senate in the final week. The Treasury announced the public debt was rapidly approaching $37,000,000,000 and to reduce this tremendous total Treasury tax experts are overhauling the entire tax structure to make recommendations to congress next January. A voluntary unemployment census that would eliminate a house to house canvass and enable the unemployed to register at various places, was approved and the Senate amendments to the tax loophole legislation were accepted by the House.

Imposing Record
By the prerogative of his position Majority Speaker Rayburn of Texas made the last address before congress adjourned. The House adjournment trailed the Senate conclusion by about ten minutes as the majority leader complimented Congress and said, "the record of this congress has been imposing and anyone who calls this congress a sit down or a do-nothing congress either is ignorant of the facts or wishes to distort laws." He paid a eloquent tribute to Speaker Bankhead as one of the really great leaders of the House and praised the work of the House committees and membership during the last eight months. Then the house adjourned without day according to the announcement of Speaker Bankhead.

With the fall season coming on rapidly we begin to wonder what kind of business is in store for us all. Judging from current conditions we can look for improvement in all lines. Farmers will be getting good prices for most products, employment will be stabilized due to strikes becoming less frequent. The steady pay check will help the retail trade.

Babson Reports state that a 10% increase will not be unlikely for the general business. Of course, this will mean a slow creeping upward in living costs and commodity prices.
