

School Bells To Ring Tuesday

Pinckney School to Re-open Next Week. Usual Enrollment is Looked For. All of New School Building Available

Following the summer vacation the Pinckney school will re-open for the fall term on Tuesday, Sept. 7. Most of the local boys and girls can hardly wait for this date.

The entire new building will be available for use this year. Last year the new building was not yet completed as it is this year. This will also do away with crowding and congestion of the opening days of the past. The enrollment is expected to be around the 200 mark again this year with a possible slight increase.

For the benefit of new students who desire to enroll the supt. will be at his office the Saturday preceding the opening day to enroll them.

The teaching staff is as follows:

J. P. Doyle

Supt. and science teacher... J. P. Doyle
Mathematics... John Wise
English and Athletics... Robert Seelke
Languages... Mrs. Alice Wilson
Music, Drawing... Mrs. Iva Myers
Intermediate... Mrs. Lola Loddell
Primary... Miss Jessie Green
Sanitary Engineer... Wm. Jeffries
Two of the Pinckney teachers have long service records. Miss Jessie Green primary teacher will be starting her 46th consecutive year as a teacher in the Pinckney schools. Supt. Doyle, his 24th. Mrs. Alice Wilson will start her 7th year. John Wise and Robert Seelke, both in their 10th year. Mrs. Loddell her first. Last year she finished the term of Miss Cormen Leland who resigned at the time.

Football practice will undoubtedly start the first week as most of the other teams belong to high school leagues and Pinckney has to start early games with them before the league starts. Pinckney usually plays Brighton, Hartland, Manchester and Ann Arbor high school reserves. Graduation hit the team hard last June taking nearly the entire line. Those who graduated last June were Ed Howell, Nelson Shehan, Emmett Clark, Winston Baughn, Alger Lee, Ray Ellis, William Meyer, Marsh Ledwidge, Gerald Dinkel, Floyd Humes, Wm. Darrow and Wm. Dillon have left the school. Ralph Otwell will not be able to play this year.

This will force Coach Seelke to build an entirely new team. He will have Edsel Meyer, Capt. Howard Read, Jack Hannet, Paul Singer, Lloyd Van Harteum, Billy Baughn, Merley Lavey, Francis Shehan, Glen McClellan, John Carpenter, Russell Gardner, Vincent Young, Keith Ledwidge, all of whom played last year more or less to start with. Then there will undoubtedly be some material coming in with the freshmen. Pinckney always has a good football team and this year will probably prove no exception.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends, neighbors, officers and the Boy Scouts for their acts of kindness in participating in the search for our mother and sister.

Found After Three Days Search

Mrs. Minnie Gardner, 60, Disappears Wednesday and is Found by her Son Saturday Noon After a Three Day Search

Mrs. Minnie Gardner, 60, disappeared from her home three miles north of Pinckney about 2.00 p. m. Wednesday, August 26 and was not found until noon on the following Saturday. She is the widow of the late Albert Gardner and was formerly Minnie Hassenschal. Several years ago her mind began to fail and she was committed to the Pontiac asylum. Last spring she was paroled out to her daughter as her condition had improved. Her daughter came home from Ypsilanti to care for her mother. Of late Mrs. Gardner has required almost constant watching. Two weeks ago she got away and went to Bentley Lake a short distance from her home. The daughter, Carrie, with her sister, Mrs. Ethel Plummer, went to look for her. She was discovered out on the lake in a boat. Procuring another one the two girls rowed out to her. Just before they reached her she jumped into the lake where she was rescued by her daughters.

Wednesday she left home for a few minutes. When she did not return, Carrie went to look for her but she had disappeared. She traced her to a cornfield near the home where all traces of her were lost. Getting her sister Mrs. Ethel Plummer, who lives on the Beardsley farm adjoining the Gardner farm, they got their brother who were cutting hay near Bentley Lake. Some men fishing stated they had seen no one there for several hours. Going back to the cornfield they followed her tracks nearly to Barber Lake where they turned and went north. There all trace of her was lost. Sheriff Kennedy was notified and he in turn notified the state police. Sheriff's deputies, state police and neighbors turned out and searched all night without avail. Another bunch turned out Thursday night searching the woods, swamps and lakes. Friday Barber Lake was dragged unsuccessfully. The woman had apparently dropped out of sight completely. Some thirty Boy Scouts came from Howell Friday with their leader and searched the woods thoroughly. Some of them were poisoned by sumac.

Saturday the searchers ranks had thinned considerably but nevertheless the hunt for the missing woman continued. A party composed of Mrs. Gardner's son, Dean, Deputy Sheriff Frank Bowers, Orville Smith, Wm. Hassenschal and Mark Swarhout started to search the woods on the Wilcox farm a mile north of Pinckney. Dean suddenly yelled, "I have found her." When the others arrived she had disappeared but was soon found again. Apparently she was in good health except insect bites. As far as she could be understood she had wandered about in the woods all the interval since her disappearance, living on berries and other things she had been able to obtain.

The entire community sympathized deeply with the family during their misfortune and are glad their mother was found alive and uninjured.

MASONIC, O. E. S. PICNIC

The Masonic and Eastern Star Lodges of Pinckney will hold a joint picnic at Newport Beach, Portage Lake on Friday, September 8. There will be a pot-luck dinner at noon. All Masons, Stars, their families and friends are invited as well as members of other lodges. There will be a program put on consisting mostly of athletic events. Prizes will be given for them. They are as follows:

Tug of War, Fat Man's Race, Ladies Race, Relay Race, Quoit Contests, and a soft ball game—Dexter vs Pinckney. Other events may be added. Anyone wishing to go and who has no way should be at the hall at 10:30 A. M. and there will be cars available for all who wish to go.

Find Field Of Marijuana, Brighton

Sheriff's Officers Seize Marijuana Found Growing at Hartland and Brighton. Growth of Weed Seems Widespread

Sheriff Irwin Kennedy and deputies destroyed 4 acres of marijuana found growing in Hartland last week. Previously they had destroyed some found in a lot back of the Odd Fellows in Brighton. The weed was discovered in Hartland when some negroes from Detroit were seen gathering it. When asked by some boys what they wanted for it they said they wanted to make tea of it. This weed is said to have grown wild in Michigan for some time but no attention was paid to it until it began to be used as dope.

The federal narcotic bureau at Detroit will take over the prosecution of Marijuana cases when the new federal law that becomes operative on Oct. 1, 1937. Violators are now tried in state courts. The new law subjects violators to a $2,000 fine, or a five year prison term.

PINCKNEY GETS FORFEIT

Ann Arbor forfeited their game to Pinckney which was scheduled to be played here Sunday when they only had six players on the field at 3:00 p. m. In the other games Chelsea split a double header with Hamburg winning to first 7 to 3 and losing the second 7 to 4. Dexter beat Saline.

Next Sunday Pinckney will play Hamburg at Pinckney. This is Pinckney's big game and a good contest should result.

Dan Smick, U. of M. star will play with Hamburg.

Two more games remain to be played after this contest. They are Saline at Saline on Sept. 12, and Dexter here Sept. 19.

Current

The European-Asiatic wars now raging in Spain and China seem to be pretty much of a racket being waged for the purpose of exploiting these two countries. Soldiers of fortune of every nation on earth seem to be trying the brunt of the conflict including many American aviators. In the meantime munition and airplane manufacturers seem to be making hay while the battles rage. 29 B-12 bombers were shipped to China from Newcastle, Delaware and fire arms and munitions have been going to both war areas for many months. The stout resistance being waged against Japan is undoubtedly due to the experienced soldiers from other countries fighting in her ranks.

There seems to be quite a movement on to snout Frank Fitzgerald onto a siding and nominate Harry Toy for governor on the Republican ticket in 1938. The reason seems to be that Harry Toy has run strong in Wayne county his home in the past while Fitzgerald's weaknesses there last fall resulted in his defeat. Also the latter is identified with the McKay-Barnard machine which is just now in bad repute. Anyway the Toy for Governor campaign is now on and the papers favorable to Republican party are boosting his candidacy.

Judging by reports in our exchanges and the state press the growing and cultivation of marijuana, the drug which is smoked in cigarettes is wide spread. This drug was brought into this country by Mexican laborers it having been used in Mexico for years. It is said to be a mild drug which invariably leads one who used it to desire stronger drug. We have been told Marijuana cigarettes are sold in Detroit by peddlers for 25c a package. Last week four acres of marijuana plants, found to be growing on the Lindley farm four miles west of Chelsea on M-92 were cut and burned by state police and sheriff's officers. 15,000 marijuana plants were found growing between Albion and Homer last week on the Bert Seamon farm and destroyed. In both cases the farm owners were absolved from blame but it was not clear how the drug happened to be on their farms.

Stamp owners must have to step lively to keep up with the different stamp issues for special occasions. Postmaster General Farley has announced a new stamp issue commemorating the 150th anniversary of the signing of the constitution. It will go on sale in Philadelphia on Sept. 17. It will bear a reproduction of J. B. Stearns painting depicting the signing of the constitution.

The Michigan Republican Women met at Lake Huron camp for 2 days last week. Speakers condemned Nazism, Facism and Communism and dictators in general. Baroness Vonrenne Benning described her experience in Russia. The most significant speech was made by Alean B. Clutta, Detroit attorney. He said "Capitalism is the life blood of expansion in business and we can not have progress without it."

The state supervisors and supts. of the poor are said to be circulating petitions providing for a referendum on the act passed by the last legislature creating the state dept. of Public Assistance. This does away with the supts. of poor and turns the county welfare administration over to a three man committee. Senator Brooks of Holland says if they succeed the Mich. State Welfare Dept. will find themselves without any appropriation for direct welfare relief mothers and old age pensions. The supervisors objected to the new setup and fought the bill unsuccessfully during the last legislative session.

The railroad retirement board estimated that 65,000 retired trainmen will receive pensions totalling $4,000,000 this month. By the start of the new year Congress will provide social security payments for about 100,000 workers. The board has about $142,000,000 available for the payment of pensions until next July 1. Congress appropriated $99,800,000 and made available another $42,000,000. The railroad act provides for voluntary retirement at 65 years on a maximum pension of $120 a month. Pensions for total disability and death benefits. To finance them, payments a tax is levied on railroad and their employees.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building
Washington, D. C.

Washington.—The Supreme court of the United States has a new member, and to that extent, President Roosevelt has succeeded in reorganizing the highest court in the land. With the nomination by the President of Sen. Hugo L. Black, Alabama Democrat, and confirmation of that nomination by the senate, we find a Supreme court that stands for liberal interpretations of the Constitution by a vote of six to three on most questions.

While it is important, of course, to know that Senator Black, the new justice, is nearly 100 per cent New Dealer, it is much more important to the country as a whole to think of Mr. Black hereafter as being fully aware of the reasons why he was selected to the lifetime job at $20,000 per year. It is likewise important to remember the reasons why Mr. Black was selected when one examines the so-called balance of power in the Supreme court.

It seems to me that Mr. Black will enter upon his duties next October under one of the gravest handicaps that ever was set upon the shoulders of a Supreme court justice. Because of this handicap, and because of the reasons lying back of his appointment, I greatly fear that Senator Black can never be a great member of a great tribunal.

In the first instance, his record in the senate, covering a period of ten years, has demonstrated to most everyone that he has a keen mind, but the fact remains, and I think it cannot be disputed, the new justice lacks the poise which always has been an attribute of outstanding judges. I hope he has the qualities that will enable him to grow and become a good justice from the legal standpoint; I hope this for the sake of the country as a whole and for the sake of the judicial structure of our government. But after observing him as an independent writer over the last ten years I think I would be unfair to those who read these lines if I did not characterize Mr. Black's as a decidedly mediocre appointment.

Again, the fact that nearly all Washington observers and a very great number of officials do not expect much legal wisdom from the new justice is traceable more to the conditions under which Mr. Black received the honor than to Mr. Black himself.

Let us examine the reasons that lie back of Mr. Roosevelt's selection of Mr. Black. In this case, as in the case of many lesser appointments, the motives, the politics, the underlying objectives have not been stressed anywhere. In order to understand the situation, it is necessary to review several years of history on one line and it is likewise necessary to examine various incidents marking Mr. Black's career in the senate. Out of this maze of detail, certain significant and more or less definite conclusions appear. Along the one side of the examination we find Senator Black consistently supporting President Roosevelt's New Deal programs wherever and whenever he found them. We note as well intolerance on his part for those persons and those arguments running counter to New Deal policies. Thirdly, we cannot overlook various senate investigations conducted by Senator Black for we know that in most of these he was carrying out orders from the White House. That is, Senator Black was engaged in expeditions of smear, of muckraking, and in needless exposure by way of senate investigations, in order that if there were flashbacks someone other than the President would be in the white light of criticism.

Casting aside many of the assaults on Mr. Black's personal record, and turning to the other phase of the situation that culminated in his selection for the court, it must be plain to anyone knowing all the facts that President Roosevelt had a definite purpose in selecting the Alabama. This phase also requires a bit of review.

When the President suddenly demanded that congress reorganize the Supreme court and make provision for the appointment of six new justices of his own choosing, he created an enormous split in the Democratic party. He alienated many sections of the South and at the same time provided many old-line southern Democrats with ammunition which they could use to justify their positions in opposing Mr. Roosevelt on many other phases of legislation.

I do not mean to say that all of the southern Democrats turned against the President because that is untrue. There were possibly a half dozen senators from the South and an equal proportion of representatives who are sticking by the President and will continue to support him. That fact, however, does not alleviate the condition.

who stayed with the President through thick and thin. He never was an exceedingly popular man among his colleagues. Add to this the capacity of using harsh language in the extreme and one finds that he was not the most popular choice among the senators for the job to which he has been elevated. From various quarters, therefore, I have heard observations to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt appointed Senator Black with full knowledge of the facts I have related. He could and did slap at some members of his own party for failing to go along with him on the court packing plan and some other New Deal legislation like the wages and hours program. He showed certain groups and cliques in the senate and house that he is boss.

Then, in selecting a man from the deep South undoubtedly the President figured it would be influential in pulling back to him some of the support which he certainly has lost among local politicians in the southern states. Views of this test of political strategy differ greatly, but whether he gains or whether he loses on that score, there certainly is ground for belief that the reasons were as I have given them.

There is also another reason for the appointment of Mr. Black. Of course, everyone realized that Mr. Roosevelt would name a man of New Deal leaning. Moreover, everyone recognized that it would be strictly a personal appointment as far as the President was concerned. So the stage was set for appointment of a man of more or less radical tendencies—but no one expected the choice that was made.

Now, the senate long has operated almost as a high class group. Every senator considers his colleagues with great deference and respect. This is senatorial courtesy. Does it not seem quite reasonable then, to consider that Mr. Roosevelt went into the senate to pick a new justice with the full realization that the nomination would be debated in gentlemanly fashion; that senatorial courtesy would tone down the barbs and the darts and the personal attacks that would probably obtain if the name of a private citizen were submitted? I cannot know the President's mind, obviously, yet I have heard these conclusions stated so many times that they cannot be wholly disregarded. New Dealers consider the appointment clever from the standpoint of senate debate, and those opposed to the New Deal called it a smart trick. So there is very little disagreement.

I called attention earlier to the effect of the conditions under which Mr. Black enters the court. I think examination of them is vital. They are important for the reasons I have set down and they are important from another standpoint.

It is pure conjecture, of course, but I am going to mention the possibility that Senator Black's entry into the court membership may possibly create resentment among the other justices. Each of them will certainly know about all of the various undercurrents, the gossip, and the more or less obvious facts involved in the appointment.

I have been wondering then whether the other members of the court, even liberal members like Justices Stone, Brandeis, and Cardozo, may not feel that Mr. Roosevelt has subjected them to undignified terms. I mean by that, is there not a possibility of them feeling that the President is seeking to gain decisions along his own line of reasoning rather than on the basis of justice and law?

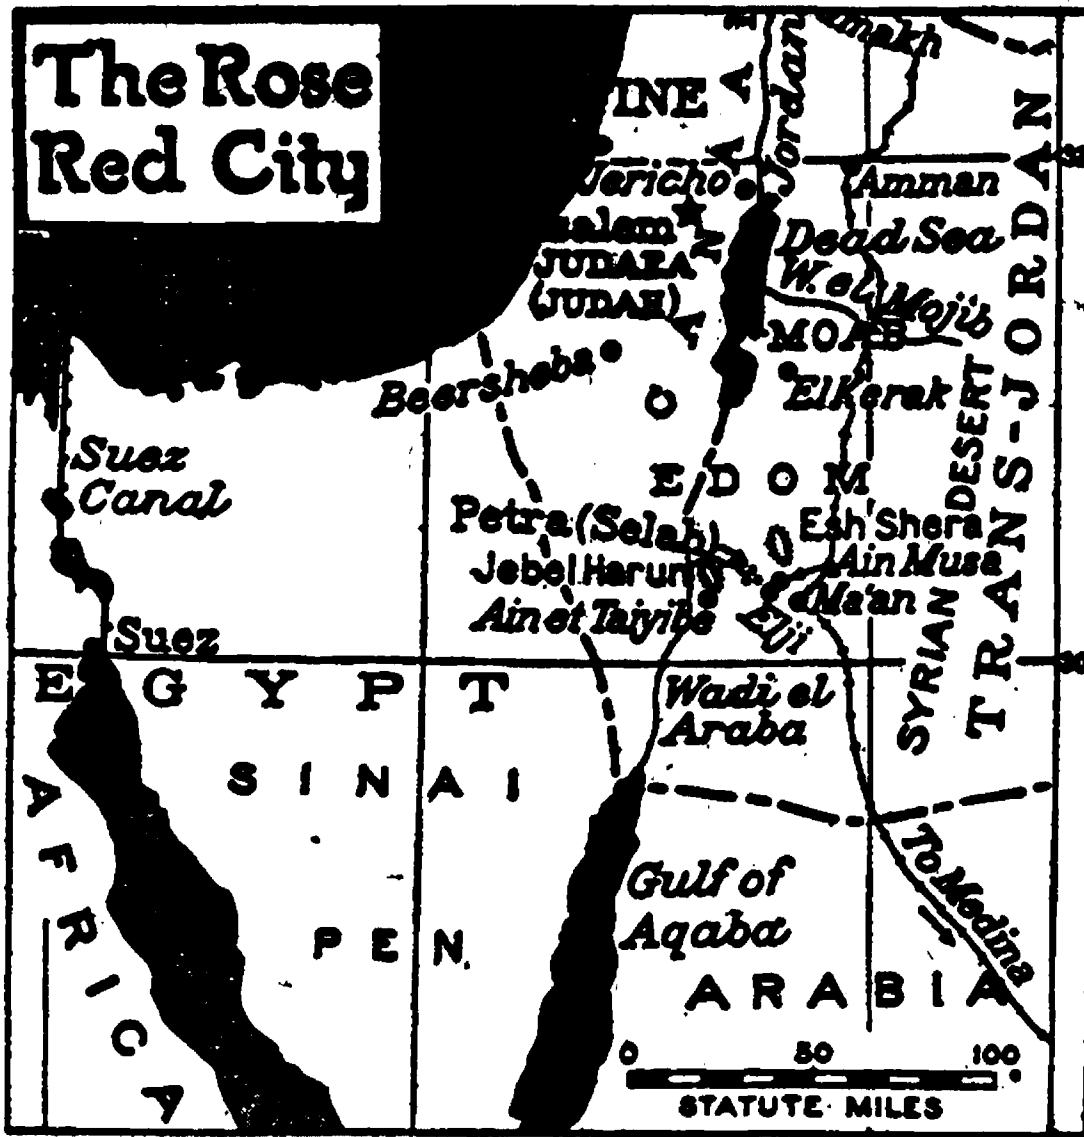

As I said, this is pure conjecture. Nevertheless, I think it will be agreed that it is a logical thought, because the Supreme court justices, after all, are just as human as you and anyone else.

Carrying this thought a little further, what will be the effect upon the old conservative members of the court like Justices McReynolds and Butler and Sutherland? Will they regard the Black appointment as a direct thrust at them personally? If they do, it seems to me the logical result would be to make them more conservative than they now are.

I do not mean to imply dishonesty or unfairness to any member of the court. I know some of them personally and I respect every one of them. I merely call attention to these things as among the possible results in the appointment of a man to the Supreme court who may have been not the worst appointment possible but surely, all conditions considered, it was far from the best.

Politically, the Black appointment is likely to enter into the 1938 congressional elections. There seems no way by which the matter can be avoided as an issue. It is only through those elections of senators and representatives that the people can express themselves, and nearly everyone agrees now that the name of Justice Black will enter into numerous state and district political battles.

Petra Is Off the Beaten Path.

Old Petra Now Accessible to Travelers After Many Centuries of Oblivion

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

PETRA, silent city of the forgotten past, halfway between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba, exerts a magic spell upon the minds of those fortunate enough to know it. Its single and weird approach, through a deep rock cleft more than a mile long; its temples, numbering nearly a thousand, cut into the living rock of stupendous cliffs and showing Babylonian, Egyptian, Greek and Roman influence; its high places, courts, libation basins and altars where the ancients worshiped; its amazing color, the work of Nature lavish with ocher and all shades of red—all these are mysterious, enthralling.

"The rose-red city, half as old as time," has a history that began long before histories were written. Near it have been found worked fields of the Late Chellean period, millenniums before recorded dates. It's first written history is found in the Bible; for the land about it was Mount Seir of old (now Esch Shera), home of the Horites, cave dwellers whose progenitor was Hori, the grandson of Seir. These Horites are first mentioned at the time of Abraham in connection with the subjugation of the land by Chedorlaomer.

For centuries Petra was a rich caravan city, a veritable crossroads of the ancient world. The Arabian peninsula was a network of caravan routes, over which passed the products of Africa, Arabia, and India to the valley of the Nile, Palestine, Phoenicia, and the Euphrates-Tigris valley.

Deserted When Rome Fell. Goods were brought to Petra for storage and for trans-shipment in every direction. So important was the city that the Romans built two roads to tap its wealth. When Rome fell, however, its doom was sealed. Abandoned save for a few desert tribesmen, who lived miserably in its caves, as some of them still live, Petra passed from the notice of the outside world, remaining in oblivion for more than a thousand years.

In 1812 the Swiss traveler, John Lewis Burckhardt, disguised as a Bedouin sheik, reached it and returned to tell of its mysteries. It had then become sacred ground to the Arabs, and danger menaced any infidel who approached it.

In the century after Burckhardt few explorers attempted to visit it. Not, indeed, until after the World war was it accessible to any save the most intrepid; and even now visitors cannot enter it save under protection of armed guards. With a comfortable camp for accommodation of guests during the summer months, Petra at last is open to serious travelers.

The trip from Jerusalem to Petra and back once required about a month of arduous caravan travel through country infested with lawless Bedouins. Construction of the Mecca railway from Damascus to the sacred city of Medina was a first step toward opening the country, and later a highway from Jerusalem to Ma'an and a smooth dirt road from Ma'an to Elji brought motor vehicles within two miles of the ancient city. Airplanes, too, now carry passengers to Ma'an, bound for Petra.

When the British cleared the way for automobiles between Ma'an and Elji, the Bedouins rose in open revolt, complaining that the road would deprive them of their income from renting saddle animals to Petra visitors.

Warfare ensued, several persons of both sides losing their lives. After the government had crushed the rebellion by armed force, the Bedouins received assurance that the road would not be extended beyond Elji, and that their horses and mules would be hired under government supervision for the last part of the journey.

Thus the Bedouins have kept modern transportation from actually infringing on the silence of long ago and preserved for Petra a measure of its isolation.

How to Reach the Ruins.

However you travel to Petra, whether by railroad from Damascus, a method almost disused; or by car from Jerusalem, the most practical way; or by air, the latest innovation, all routes converge on Ma'an, a thriving abode village girdled with walled gardens of palms, figs, and vegetables, and surrounded by flat, chalky white desert. There is an English school here, and visitors are often amazed to find that many of the Arab youths understand and speak English.

From Ma'an you drive northwest by car, passing the spring of Ain Musa, to Elji. Here a happy crowd of Bedouins, with emaciated riding horses and pack mules, await your arrival.

Descending first by slippery trails over limestone rock, you follow the bed of Wadi Musa to a mighty barrier, the eastern range of the red sandstone mountains that enclose Petra. Wadi Musa deepens. It seems that you are entering a cul-de-sac, but here Nature has rent the range asunder, cutting a narrow opening. For this long all the Arabs have coined the name Es Siq (a cleft).

Through it the fountain and flood waters flow in winter, and after traversing the precincts of Petra city, and their way into Wadi el Araba by another greater gorge, the Wadi es Siyagh.

Through Bab es Siq.

Approaching the gateway, Bab es Siq, you pass through a small suburb of Petra, without the precincts of the fortified city. This was a city of the dead, as was most of what is left of Petra. Objects of interest are tombs of the pylon type, cut from the solid rock, but, unlike the facade monuments of Petra proper, blocked out to stand apart as buildings.

Here, too, are scattered white sandstone hummocks, rock domes into which large numbers of small chambers have been cut without faces.

Many of like character are found on the less accessible mountain tops. They are believed to be the troglodyte homes of ancient people who lived on Mount Seir before the descendants of Esau made Edom of it.

The Siq is 6,000 feet long as the crow flies and considerably longer as it winds. Once it was all paved, and channels were cut into its precipitous sides to lead the spring water into the city. It is 20 feet wide in its narrowest parts and expands to not more than two or three times this dimension. Its sides are stupendous, making men mere ants by comparison.

In no place may you see far ahead, crooks and corners preventing. A streak of blue sky like a twisted ribbon is all that is visible of the heavens.

Your horses slip over the great boulders that choke this ancient avenue, your Bedouins chanting their weary and melancholy notes.

After 20 minutes of this bewitching seclusion, you strain your eyes for a first glimpse of the vision you know awaits you. Even though you watch, it bursts upon you as a surprise.

The Siq ends abruptly in a cross-gorge. From the face of the cliff opposite the Siq mouth El Khazna has been carved out, a temple to an unknown deity. It peeps at you at first, you see a little more, and then it bursts upon you in all its beauty.

This cross-canyon has been called the "Outer Siq." The name "Lower Siq" may fit it better. Its walls are equally precipitous. To the south its valley floor rises abruptly to the mountain top on which the Great High Place of Sacrifice is located. Steps have been cut at no little expenditure of energy to make easy the ascent of the worshiper. To the north the Outer Siq expands, opening into the Petra basin.

By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—Alva B. See, the elevator man, has long been this reader's favorite epistolarian. His letters to the newspapers caused more people to hit the ceiling than did his elevators. Just now his A. B. See Elevator company, which he founded fifty-four years ago, is being dissolved and its properties sold to Westinghouse. It is hoped he now will have time to catch up with his letter-writing. His son, Alva B. See, who has managed his business affairs recently, did not follow in his father's pen-tracks.

Mr. See's first big turn in the headlines came in 1922 with his insistence that, for the good of all concerned, we ought to burn down all the women's colleges. He was a vehement opponent of feminine education, "beyond knowing their A B C's forward and backward." In support of this view, he offered the findings of his own research, which were that women's brains were, on the average, five ounces lighter than men's brains. "No college woman can be a fit parent," he contended.

He assailed pedagogues, and all contemporary educational techniques, writing and publishing a book called "Schools," in 1929, in which he insisted education should be "under the guidance of men who have the intelligence to own and run a shop."

He was a porcupine individualist, denouncing governmental parasites and tax-eaters and hinting that Herbert Hoover ought to be examined for his sanity in governing by commission. Cigarettes, high heels, extremes in style, slang and a thousand other betes noir enraged him.

He is a benevolent-appearing elderly gentleman, with steel-rimmed spectacles and white hair, living in a nice house in Brooklyn, where he has lived all his life, building his elevators and registering dissent.

This writer never caught himself agreeing with Mr. See on anything, but hopes he will keep on kicking. Most businessmen, when they get angry about something, sluice it off in some desiccated chamber of commerce committee which takes all the sap out of it. Dissent is too refined these days. I once got all the "Letters to the Editor" contributors together at a picnic and published the first photograph of "Vox Populi" ever taken. They were a quarrelsome lot and we almost had to call out the militia, but you couldn't help liking them.

SENATOR ELLISON D. (COTTON) SMITH of South Carolina still follows the cotton boll as his political lode star. Like other southern senators, he has been shaken off-base by the recent Democratic split, but now he is out for the New Deal subsidy medicine, "to keep excesses off the market."

Seventy-three-year-old Senator Smith, in congress 29 years, has a sizable cotton patch which was granted to his family by George III in 1747. In the senate, he has been the leading champion and defender of cotton. With his southern colonel's blow-torch mustache, and his chivalrous defense of southern womanhood, he is the most authentic survival of the days of "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman.

He walked out on the Democratic convention last year, because they had a negro speaker. He remarked, "I don't believe in the Fourteenth or Fifteenth amendments."

As chairman of the agricultural committee of the senate, he is an important figure in the reshaping of farm legislation, to be taken into account in the new agrarian drive for subsidies.

NORMAN EBBUTT, Berlin correspondent of the London Times, loses his four-year battle against Nazi opposition. The German foreign office asked the Times to withdraw him and makes it clear that, if this is not done, he would be expelled. This is the culmination of continuous disagreement between Mr. Ebbutt and the Reich.

The foreign office asked that he be replaced by a correspondent who will "more nearly reflect the official version of the achievements of the regime." Mr. Ebbutt has written his own and not the official version of events in Germany.

In 1933, Mr. Ebbutt was president of the Association of Foreign Correspondents in Berlin. The day before the election which put Hitler in power, he wrote a dispatch in which he said many citizens were afraid to vote for fear of watermarked paper or invisible ink which would reveal them as oppositionists. This angered the Nazis and they demanded retraction. He sent another dispatch, substantiating his story. Many times threatened with expulsion, he has stayed on the job—until now.

THE LOWDOWN ON GLASS

W. K. Kelley in the Detroit News has the following to say about Senator Carter Glass of Virginia:

The commentator is not very fond of Senator Carter Glass of Virginia. He saw him come near getting his head punched by Millard Tydings at a Democratic convention, and the commentator though he is opposed to such encounters thinks it might have done Mr. Glass some good if Senator Tydings had delivered it might have taken some of the cantankerousness out of him.

But it is now the fashion to laud Mr. Glass. He has become the Republican hero of the Democratic party and the tin god of all reactionaries of both parties. This is natural for he is still living in the dark ages, along with most other Virginia politicians including the sublime Swanson.

What set the Commentator off on this ill-tempered, ill-mannered diatribe is an article in a current publication presenting Senator Glass once more as the parent of the Federal Reserve System telling how he introduced in the House the product of Mr. Glass 10 year study of banking and currency—the Federal Reserve Bill that Glass had written, and which stands as the greatest achievement in financial legislation since the Civil War.

When credit for the Federal Reserve Act is being dealt, one has to go as far back as Senator Aldrich of R. I. and then move on to J. Laurence Laughlin whose ideas of the act largely incorporated and to H. P. Willis who drafted the act. To say that Carter Glass wrote the bill is like saying that Caxton wrote the Bible.

MEATS AT FAIR SHOW STYLE

Proof that science has been paying attention to kitchens and that are new styles in meat cuts just as there are in furniture and clothing is to be offered visitors at the Michigan fair in Detroit, Sept. 3 to 12.

In an exhibit sponsored by the National Live Stock and Meat Board and Michigan State College, the public is to get some free schooling in meats through cooperation with the State Fair management, meat packers, retailers and meat and live stock marketing agencies.

Meats for reducing diets that adequately protect health are to be displayed in a portion of the exhibit.

One of the scientific features is the meat roast thermometer. Those putting on the meat show will indicate this new gadget makes meat cooking easier and more accurate for tasty dishes. Meat around the clock will be set off by 50 cuts of beef, pork, lamb and luncheon meats.

This 1937 exhibit will help round out the exhibit of live stock," states George A. Brown head of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College.

WILL COMPETE AT FAIR

Pick of the Michigan 1937 4-H boys and girls who number 41,000 will be at the Michigan State Fair to vie for competition and state championships Sept. 3 to 12.

Included in those at the fair will be the following from Livingston county: Mildred Coffey, Howell, Canning Judging; Stanley Frederickson, Howell, Dairy Judging; Ronald Maxwell, Howell, Dairy Judging; George Robb, of Fowlerville, Dairy Judging; Harold Robb, Fowlerville, Crops Judging; Francis Sheehan, Pinckney, Crops Judging; Teddy Zinta, Howell, Crops Judging; Okie White, Howell, Clothing Judging.

Nearly 700 head of livestock will be exhibited by boys and girls, some of the winners will then enter them in open classes against their elders. 50 colts, 200 sheep, 150 swine, 75 beef animals and 800 dairy animals plus about 75 pens of poultry are to be shown, it is estimated.

Health camps, who will compete in November at the International Live Stock exposition in Chicago will be named. Dress revenue winners & the best judges are to be selected in the competition. Eight achievement booth winners and the best judges will be named to attend the next national club encampment at Washington in June, 1938. Dairy winners will go to the National Dairy show at Columbus, Ohio, in October.

The boys and girls at the fair will represent at least 70 counties. Expenses of their trips paid by the fair management.

Professor Donald A. Baird, Colgate University psychologist, explains in The American Weekly, the great magazine with the Sept. 5 issue of The Detroit Times, why adults take up child-like pastimes such as collecting fancy dolls playing with tin soldiers and using a tower of matches as a house.

GAS SHIPMENT NOW OK.

Increased protection to motor vehicle owners whose gas tax payment constitute such a vital portion of the highway revenues of the state is the object of new legislation enacted by the 1937 legislature.

A gap in the law covering collection of gas tax was closed by enactment of a measure framed for this purpose. In the past, the Department of State, which collects this tax, has relied solely on the report of the common carrier as to the contents of the shipments into the state. The carriers on the other hand, reported the contents on the strength of representing made them in each by the shippers.

A new statute law gives the Department of State through its representatives, authority to enter the premises of any wholesale distributors of petrol products for the product for the purpose of taking supplies of his product for analysis at the state laboratories. Joseph D. Hadley, Director of the Gas Tax Division of the Department of State, has reported to Leon D. Case Secretary of State, that the new statute will prevent attempts to ship gas as kerosene or a similar one.

The Milford school board has purchased two new Chevrolet busses. It will make five busses operated by the school.

Celesta Parshall Willis L. Lyons, Register of Probate Judge of Probate

I have often wondered how rural communities select the drivers of school busses. It is done in a sort of indifferent way and is the job given to anybody?

Every school bus driver should be selected for dependability, good habits, knowledge of the rules of the public highways and a tested ability to drive a bus properly. No driver under the age of 21 should be hired to drive a school bus.

Every driver should be provided a set of rules which he must observe to the letter. This is a heavy responsibility and the consequences...

employment should depend on his hearty and faithful acceptance of this responsibility.

No bus driver should drive a school bus for more than 10 hours in any 24 hour period.

Go slow — be safe.

Pointers About Checks

In order that your checking account may give you maximum convenience and safety we offer these suggestions:

Never sign a check in blank no matter to whom you are giving it. Instead of making the check payable to "Cash" its better to write out the name of the payee. Always fill in the date actually-not some future date.

Never issue or give a check to a stranger. Don't attempt to erase errors on a check. (Make out a new one and destroy the old.) Fill out checks completely-drawing a heavy line to fill in the space after the written amount. Be sure that the amounts in writing and figures are the same.

A checking account, when properly used, is an invaluable business convenience. Our bank welcomes new checking accounts

The SNAPSHOT GUILD SYMBOLS OF SUMMER

"The summer comes with flower and bee."

THE beauty of flowers is an attraction and a challenge to every camera owner. Frankly, good flower pictures are not easy to take and for that reason success brings more than ordinary satisfaction to the amateur photographer.

Proper lighting, a large image and patient work with the camera are the essentials of flower photography. The best camera to use is one with a long-extension bellows, enabling one to focus close to the flower, and having a ground glass focusing screen on which you can see the image before snapping the shutter.

But, if you haven't such a camera, good work may be done with ordinary folding or box cameras, provided a portrait attachment is used to obtain a large image. This supplementary lens, which comes with a table of focusing distances, makes it possible to work within arm's length of the subject. Always use a tape measure to determine exactly the specified distance between lens and flower. Panchromatic film gives the best rendering of the tone contrasts among the colors.

Flower pictures need to be vividly sharp; hence, a small lens opening should usually be used—f/16 or f/22 or the smallest stop on your lens. and the camera should be on a tripod or held securely with a camera clamp. The exposure should be from 1/4 to one second.

Wind is a problem, of course. As such close distance movement of the subject makes more difference. It is worth while to wait for a moment when the blossom is motionless. If you find the wind too blowy, devise a wind-breaker of some sort. Hazy days, or when the sun is shining under light clouds, makes the ideal time for flower pictures. Do not wait for perfect weather, but if you can't wait for better conditions, give your subject the protection of a cheesecloth screen. Better results are obtained in the early morning or late afternoon when the light is less harsh and comes from the side. This is especially true for cup-shaped flowers. Nearby foliage, or other blossoms not wanted, may be tied back with string or cut away. A piece of stiff gray cardboard placed behind the flower often is a better background than the natural one.

Sometimes, if you are patient enough to wait, a roving bee will enter the chalice of your flower. Check! Your patience is rewarded with a picture that is a perfect symbol of summertime.

WITH BANNERS

SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reyburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane. Unwittingly she overhears Jed talking to Mark Trent, nephew of Mrs. Dane who has been disinherited. Mrs. Dane had lived at Lookout House, a huge structure by the sea, built by her father and divided into two, for her and Mark's father. Brooke had been a fashion expert, and Mrs. Dane, a "society" hearing her on the radio, had invited her to call and developed a deep affection for her. Mark Trent, who had been married to a woman from whom he is now divorced, says he does not trust Henri and Clotilde Jacques, Mrs. Dane's servants. He says he is not interested in an offer of Brooke's to share the estate with him. Leaving her department store job, Brooke refuses an offer to "go shopping" with Jerry Field, a carefree young man who wants to marry her. At a family conference she learns she must live at Lookout House alone, since Lucette, her younger sister who is taking her job, her brother, Sam, a young playwright, and her mother plan to stay in the city. Jed and Mark are astounded when they hear from Mrs. Gregory, a family friend, that she had witnessed a hitherto unknown will, with Henri and Clotilde two weeks before Mrs. Dane died. Brooke had arrived just as she was leaving. Jed suggests that Mark open his part of Lookout House, get friendly with Brooke and try to find out about the will. Jed agrees to stay with him. Mark accepts Brooke's invitation for a family Thanksgiving dinner at Lookout. Mrs. Reyburn announces on Thanksgiving eve that she has been invited to England. Sam and Lucette decide to move in with Brooke and Sam plans to produce a new play locally.

CHAPTER IV

Brooke noticed Mark Trent's quick glance about as he entered the dining-room at Lookout House. She felt an instant of self-consciousness as she took the seat against the variegated yellow background of tall mimosa and acacia which filled a broad bay-window, which her mother refused with a quick shake of her head and a smile. She immediately forgot herself in pride of her sporting family. Each one was so gay, so determined to do his or her share to make the party a real festivity. Holidays were hard days since her father's death, but always someone who was alone had been invited to keep the feast with them. Thinking of others helped immeasurably to bridge the sense of loss, Celia Reyburn argued.

The dinner was a success. Brooke breathed a little sigh of relief as she rose from the table. This Thanksgiving dinner had been the first entertaining in her own home. Of course the guests had been her family and Mark Trent only, but she had felt pride in having it a success.

As she served coffee from the massive silver tray in the living-room, she glanced at Mark Trent standing before the fire. With his elbow on the mantel, he was talking to Celia Reyburn seated in a corner of the couch. The orchids he had brought her added the perfect touch to her amethyst frock. Orchids for her mother, gardenias for Lucette, and deep fragrant purple violets for his hostess. He had said it with flowers. A lavish gentleman. Had Henri turned chalky as he had announced dinner, or had she imagined it? He had stared at Mark Trent as if seeing an unwelcome apparition.

With a groan of repletion Sam pulled himself out of a deep chair. "Boy, let's get out and walk! I feel like a stuffed, trussed turkey. Why do we eat so much more on Thanksgiving? Because we haven't any sense. Notice that I'm acquiring the analytic method, question and answer. Anybody here got the energy to take the shore walk?"

"I'll go with you, Sammy," Celia Reyburn smiled at her tall son. "Gladly, Jeffrey is a great hiker; she will probably walk me all over the British Isles. I must get in practice. Just wait until I change my shoes."

"Boy, I'm glad we have one sport in the family. I'll bet Lucette has a heavy date, and is expecting someone. Coming, Brooke? Coming, Mr. Trent?"

"Mark to you, I hope, Sam. Do come, Miss Reyburn," Mark Trent urged. "It's a grand day. After hours of storm, there is enough wind to make the surf worth looking at."

"Worth looking at" were colorless words to express the grandeur of the shore, Brooke thought, as, standing on a jutting crag, holding on her breast with one hand, skirts blowing, she looked down at the driving current, cold and stealthy in places, in others foaming and white-edged green waves that ledges transformed by the power of the slanting sun into ruddy, dark brown in the crevices, spray, diaphanous as a mist, with a giant atomizer, iridescent as jeweled malines, shimmered in the light. Beyond the surf a dozen lavender winged gulls floated on the water. An amber green wave out-lashed its predecessors, hissed, roared, broke against a ledge, and showered Brooke with crystal spray.

"Oh!" Instinctively she clutched Mark Trent's arm. "It—it took my breath!"

He drew her back to the path, pulled out his handkerchief, and wiped her wet face.

"I should have known better than to let you stand there."

"It wasn't your fault. I adored it. It made me feel as if every inch of me had been electrified. It is so—that when we are together I need to be rescued from difficulties? I want to thank you for—"

"Please, don't."

She wondered at the embarrassed fierceness of his voice.

"I won't, except to add that I know I owe my life to you. There, that's over. I promise never to mention it again."

Spurred by the stimulating air, she took her courage in both hands and plunged.

"Won't you please be friends? I didn't know Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane had any money, really I didn't, Mr. Trent."

In the instant that she waited for his answer, sun, sea, the roar of the surf were blotted out. Only his straight-gazing eyes meeting hers were real. They touched her heart, quickly, passionately. Then Mark Trent thrust his handkerchief into his pocket.

"Forget that Mr. Trent stuff. Being legatees in the same estate—my aunt left me a bank account, you know—ought to make us friends, oughtn't it?" His voice was light, but she sensed a tinge of irony. "We'd better keep going if we are to walk around the point before dark. Your mother and Sam went on some time ago. What did she mean when she spoke of hiking over the British Isles?"

"She is going to England to visit her college classmate. Of course, I'm crazy to have her go, but—I didn't realize how precious she was until I thought of her being so far away."

"Are your brother and sister going?"

"No. They are to be with me while Mother is away. I am so glad. It will give me heaps to do. I'm not used to this poison-ivy leisure that looked so alluring before I had tried it. My life was so full before—"

"Before you had Lookout House stuffed down your throat, you mean? I don't see why the dickens Aunt Mary Amanda tied that string to her legacy, forced you to live in this house."

"It wasn't a string, and she didn't force me. I like old towns, and I love Lookout House."

"My mistake." Trent's laugh turned to a frown. "What are the town fathers thinking of to allow a gas station stuck out on this road? Has that house been sold?"

Brooke promptly defended the brilliant equipment in front of a small white cottage.

"I don't know who owns the place, but doubtless the town fathers were thinking of giving the poor man who has started the filling-station another chance. I heard that he had money, lost it, began to drink too much, and that a friend set him up in business here hoping to steady him."

"Who told you the story of his life?"

"Henri! Does he know the man?"

"He will have to answer that question. He asked me to buy gas at the new filling-station, and I do to encourage the poor fellow to keep on trying to make good."

"How about encouraging honest Mike Cassidy who started the garage at the end of the causeway years ago and has served the public faithfully and unselfishly? He has a wife and five children to support."

Why did his voice rouse opposition in her, Brooke wondered. She had doubts herself lately as to the permanency of the filling-station owner's reform. Twice when she had stopped for gas, a young Irish girl had reported the boss as "sick" and she had wondered if he were backsliding. Mark the Magnificent need not know that, however.

"Don't you believe in helping a man to come back?" she asked crisply.

"I do, most decidedly, but I believe also in helping an honest hard-working man like Cassidy, who has had the strength of character to leave drink alone, to keep his kids in shoes. Come on. We are almost quarreling. Why should you and I fight over a filling-station owner?"

"You're right, when we have so many other things about which to disagree."

Brooke's brown eyes met his, intent and darkly gray; wistfulness tinged her voice as she urged:

"Speaking of disagreeing—will you please behave like a sensible person and take the family treasures which belong to you?"

"Aunt Mary Amanda left them to you."

"I know, but it isn't right for me to have them, and what's more, I don't need or want them. I'd rather go without rings all my life than wear one of those gorgeous things she left, which are rightfully yours. Mr. Stewart has put all the jewelry in a bank vault for you. I have Mother's lovely china and glass and furniture which have been in storage since our home was broken up. I've had everything which belonged to your family moved to the chauffeur's apartment over the garage. There seems to be very little silver. Perhaps your aunt gave it to you?"

"Silver! Very little silver! She had the Trent service which came originally from England and any number of beautiful pieces. That silver is a family tradition. Where is it? She didn't give it to me. What does Stewart say about it?"

"He thought that because of the epidemic of crime reported in the newspapers, Mrs. Dane might have become timid about keeping valuables in the house and had it stored in a bank. But he found no receipt for it among her papers. Do you think she sold it?"

"Sold it! No. I'll bet—" he broke off abruptly. "See that great rock sticking up off shore? I used to imagine it the peak of a submerged island rising from the sea."

"Perhaps it is. Islands arise, grow old and disappear. That isn't original. Sam has taken the title for his comedy from it. The first night I spent at Lookout House I was kept awake by the wailing of that distant siren. Now I don't notice it."

"You'll notice it if you stay here during the winter as Jed told me you were planning to do. There goes the sun behind the city!"

They walked in silence back to Lookout House. On the threshold of the living-room she stopped in startled disbelief. Jerry Field stood by the fire talking to her mother. Who was the brown-haired girl in blue beside Lucette?

"Couldn't wait for you to send out At Home cards, Brooke," Jerry Field greeted jauntily. "You remember that you said I could come to Lookout House when you were settled, don't you? I wanted to meet your family, wanted them to know that I'm in your tag line for sure."

His eyes flashed beyond her to Mark Trent on the threshold. There was laughter in his voice and a hint of challenge. Before she could answer, he commanded:

"Come hither, Daphne, and meet our neighbor. This is my sister."

"Neighbor!" Brooke smiled at the brown-haired girl as she welcomed her with a cordial handshake. "I would know that you were Jerry's sister, you look so like him; but is the neighbor just a joke?"

"No, Miss Reyburn, we really are staying on the point."

Daphne Field's smile disclosed small teeth as perfect in color and size as a row of matched pearls. She turned to Sam.

"I've heard that you are the coming playwright, Mr. Reyburn, that you have a touch of O'Neill's tragic outlook, a seasoning of Kaufman's humor, and a hint of Coward's sophistication."

Sam grinned. "Is that original, or did you get it from the Times?"

The girl pouted:

"Of course it's original. Why, Mark?"

Daphne Field's breathless exclamation, the radiance of her face revealed so much that Brooke had the embarrassed sense of having looked for an instant at a naked heart. Trent came forward. Was the freighting playing pranks, or had his face gone dark with color?

"Where did you drop from, Daphne? How are you, Field?"

Why didn't someone say something and smash the strained silence, Brooke wondered impatiently. It was as if the freighting had cast a spell and tied all their tongues. Her mother's eyes were on Daphne Field as she thoughtfully pulled her gloves through her hands. Sam, back to the room, was poking at the parrot. He hated emotional scenes—off the stage. The atmosphere fairly quivered with things unsaid. Lucette came to life.

"Turn on the lights, Sam, this gloom may be artistic, but it gives me the merry-pranks. This has turned out to be meet-your-neighbor day, hasn't it? Who's the dame in the floppy hat, Brooke, who looks like a super-animated Bo-peep, and carries a cane which easily could be mistaken for a shepherd's crook? There's the chance of a lifetime for you to get in a little missionary work as clothes adviser; you'd better begin with a streamline diet. She thinks everything here, including Mother, 'charming.'"

Way Back When

By JEANNE

GENERAL WAS SCHOOL TEACHER

SOMETIMES one small incident changes a whole life's trend, and leads to prominence beyond all previous dreams. We all recall one or two unexpected happenings in our own lives which changed their whole course.

John J. Pershing, who rose to be general of all the United States army, might have had an entirely different life had he not taken advantage of a lucky opportunity. He was born in 1850 at Laclede, Mo. His father was boss of a railroad gang and, later, a farmer. John quit school when he was thirteen to work on the farm, digging fence holes, herding sheep, planting corn, all the usual jobs that are the lot of a farm boy. Ambitious to be a lawyer, he studied night after night. In 1878, he got a job as teacher in Prairie Mount, Mo., and saved most of the $40 per month he received to study law at Kirksville Normal school.

Then came the incident which changed his whole life. Jack Pershing saw an advertisement announcing competitive examinations for West Point. He had only two weeks to prepare, but he won the appointment. At West Point he won prominence as president of his class and as first captain of the corps of cadets. Possessing the characteristics of a perfect soldier, his assignments after graduation into the army were marked with success. While a military instructor at the University of Nebraska, he resumed his law studies and took his degree. Since the army conducts its own military courts, this gave Pershing an opportunity to combine his business love with his soldierly success. When the World War broke out, he was made general of the U. S. army.

FAMED TENOR MIGHT HAVE BEEN A CLERK

SOMETIMES parents despair unnecessarily about their children. Just because a youngster shows no aptitude for the job his parents may choose for him is no indication that failure awaits him.

If John McCormack had followed the plans of his father he might have been a Catholic priest. The famous tenor was born in Athlone, Ireland, in 1884, fourth of eleven children. His father worked in the woolen mills of the town and the family was very poor. John attended the Catholic schools and was an excellent student, winning a scholarship to college. There he studied for the priesthood.

At an early age John McCormack's voice showed promise and at the age of nine he sang in a school entertainment. Music was not one of the subjects offered at college, and so John had no opportunity to receive training for his voice. It did not occur to him at that time that singing would be his profession. However, he did decide against becoming a priest, which must have been a hard blow for his father. But the man did not lack understanding and he encouraged the boy in his desire to become a civil service clerk. When John failed in the entrance examinations at the school where he would receive his training, and when given a second chance forgot the appointment, his father must have truly despaired.

Then it began to dawn on John McCormack that singing was his true vocation. He had loved to sing all his life. He went to Dublin and got a job in the Marlborough Street cathedral choir at $125 a year. He began to gain more and more recognition, sang for recordings of the Edison and Gramophone companies, and eventually became a star of opera. Today he is known the world over for his golden tenor.

They're Cinches to Sew

YES, the sewing bug will get you, if you don't watch out, young lady! And when it does there will be a hum in your life (and we don't mean head noises). Right now is the time to begin; right here is the place to get your inspiration. So all together, girls: it's sew, sew, sew-your-own!

Inspiration Number 1.

The vivacious model at the left is the number 1 piece for your new autumn advance. It calls for taffeta, embellished, as you might expect, with grosgrain. You may use vivid colors too, Milady, for Fashion has gone color mad this fall. Reds of every hue, bright blues, lavender, warm browns, all are being featured in smart avenue shops along the Rue de la Paix.

Morning Frock.

For most of us, each day demands that a little work be done. Sew-Your-Own appreciates this and the need for frocks that are practical, pretty, and easy to keep

The Mania of 1937

There have always been manias in the world. A conspicuous one now is the frantic desire to go somewhere quickly and lose your life at it.

Nature is not only, or chiefly, a battlefield, but a workshop in which there is co-operation, as well.

One of the most wearisome features of life in a village used to be the 73 times that you had to tell how your team ran away.

Newspaper publicity can create a "prominent citizen." It is up to him to profitably use the distinction.

Must We Destroy?

Too many men are ashamed to wander through the woods without a gun, merely enjoying nature.

Ignorance is not always absence of knowledge. It is harboring thoughts in which there isn't any sense.

People who never want to hear criticism of anything are as fatigued as those who indulge in nothing else.

A small spark of genius is often better paid than an abundance of it.

Their Influence

A self-made man has a good deal of the tincture of his boy friends.

There are people who end a conversation with you sooner than you want them to, because they have a sensitive fear they are boring you. Undeceive them at once.

The American kind of "equality" is the equality of opportunity. There are men who are loved by their friends simply because they are men through and through and are not particularly brilliant.

that way, hence the new utility frock in the center. Five pieces are its sum and total; seven mornings a week its cycle. Any tub-weil fabric will do nicely as the material—try one version in printed rayon.

Tailored Charm.

The waistcoat used to be a gentleman's identification, but, alas, like many another smart idea, womankind has copied it. Here you see an attractive example of this modern contraband. Not only does it have suavity, but it is entirely feminine, as well. The exquisite waist line, sweet little collar, and puff sleeves, make this a number you can't afford to pass up.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1363 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material, plus 18 yards of ribbon for trimming, as pictured.

Pattern 1354 is designed for sizes 34 to 48. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1252 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 30-inch material.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Help Live

"Live and let live," was the call of the old, when men pulled apart and when there was a cold chill in the heart of the race. "Live and help live," is the call of the new, the call when all the race is kin and dreams come true.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you must as well realize it. When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three or four of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Health Protection

The opening of schools means the congregation of large armies of children into groups. This means that the chances of disease contagion are greatly increased, especially for children entering school for the first time.

To offset the danger, there are the following procedures which every parent and teacher should support. (1) Abolish competitive attendance devices and rewards. (2) Let every parent promise himself to keep his child at home upon the first appearance of any ailment, complaint, sign or symptom. This measure alone would prevent much misery and illness. (3) Endorse immunization as a routine procedure. This includes vaccination against smallpox and toxoid injections to prevent diphtheria. Undoubtedly, we shall soon accept similar measures against other communicable diseases. (4) The morning health inspection by the teacher during the first five minutes of the session. (5) Immediate exclusion from school of every child showing any departure from normal. (6) Support the health authorities in asking that all children be given a test to determine the possible presence of tuberculosis. (7) Have a qualified interested physician employed by the board of education. School athletics will be the subject of Dr. Ireland's next article.

Joyful Mornings

A LOVED hymn which has sustained and inspired many begins with the lines:

"Still, still with Thee when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh, and the shadows flee,
Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee."

These words emphasize the joy and light which illumine thought as one realizes the presence of God.

There may be those who do not look forward to the morning awakening, because to them it seems but the beginning of another day of care or worry or fear. And there are others who have yielded to the habit of allowing some time to elapse before arousing themselves to being thoroughly awake and responsive to good for the new day. But all may awaken each morning with joy and energy, fresh as the birds, when it is realized that, even though sleep has intervened between the experiences of one day and those yet to come in another, we are still with God, still loved, guided, supported, protected by the adorable Father of all.

Even though there may have been in the human experiences of yesterday evidences other than those of the peace and joy which come with the realization of God's presence, yet the dawn ushers in a new day, in which a discordant past need have no part. Each may awaken quickly, if he will immediately turn to God, and much may be accomplished in joyous, spiritual thinking if begun early. Prompt, right mental activity helps to make the day harmonious and fruitful, and to overcome any sense of discord resulting from whatever in the previous day may have been unworthy and regrettable.

Many have learned to engage at once, upon awakening each morning, in quiet prayer and contemplation of God's glory and God's gifts to His children—joy and peace and health.

It is not necessary to dwell in surroundings entirely desirable to human sense, in order to experience joyful mornings. No matter where one's home may be located, one may always realize God's power to dispel the night dreams that may have come with the darkness, or the waking dreams of a not too happy past or present experience.

Suppose one feels in the morning that the night has not been restful, one may not be glad that the dawn has come and another day has arrived. Then, if that one will but turn his thoughts from self to meditate on God and His creation, he will realize that the new day promises all the possibilities of joyous, new experiences. And if one persists in thinking of God first each morning, the habit of undue self-contemplation will surely disappear.

With practical application, Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, refers to the experience of sleeplessness on page 385 of Science and Health as follows: "You say that you have not slept well or have over-eaten. You are a law unto yourself." If one who has not slept well will refuse to voice or retain in thought that experience, and will persistently remember that God is always with His children, he will learn to anticipate only joy in the new day, knowing that also, by such true thinking, the fear, and therefore the experience of other wakeful nights will be averted. When we comply with the demand to think truly before we go to sleep, we shall not awaken thinking untruly or unhappily.

Further on in the hymn quoted from above are found the words: "So shall I ever be in the bright morning,
When hearts awaking see the shadows flee."

The true awakening is the heart's awakening to the truth about God and man, by which one realizes health, harmony, and peace. This spiritual awakening is possible.

Each one may voice his grateful praise in the words of the Psalmist (Psalms 139:17, 18): "How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them; if I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: when I awake, I am still with thee."—The Christian Science Monitor.
