WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Two often the honeymoon is wrecked by the nagging of a three-quarter wife. The woman who never lets her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomfort from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three decades of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Much Talk, No Action

The house ways and means committee, it is true, is making some headway and a number of senators, including the powerful Senator Harrison of Mississippi, are asserting the necessity for a reversal of federal policy. But, again, there is much more talk than action, and in the meantime the country's business is sliding lower and lower.

The difficulty in the present situation and the thing that probably has been more responsible for the business slump than anything else is that business heretofore has been unable to tell what the federal government is going to do. It has become evident already that with a somewhat changed atmosphere in congress, there are many business men who are more hopeful than a month ago. Business men, big and little, are quick to note that there are senators and representatives who think the time has arrived for business to receive some consideration. And it ought to be added that unless business does get some consideration, this current depression is going to be as bad as the last one. The federal government must give attention to the agricultural problem and it must fit that job into some consideration of the other half of American life, namely, the commerce and industry outside of agricultural life.

It will be recalled that during the first two years of President Roosevelt's administration there was a flock of laws passed that were of great value to the country. Many of them were of a temporary character and were enacted on that basis. That would have been fine if the administration had stopped there. But it did not. The roaming herd of so-called thinkers who were scattered far and wide in federal jobs had to have their innings. At least they thought they had to have a turn at bat. All of their pet theories had to be tried out. The result: many laws that were purely experimental, dangerous, damaging and a burden to business.

With many millions of others, I expected at that time to see these queer looking laws shaken down, corrected, or repealed where it was found necessary. That has not happened. Again, the result: the country's business from the smallest general store at a cross roads or a garage or a gasoline station to the greatest corporation, like General Motors or Pennsylvania railroad, has had to suffer under the heavy heel of the national government. The reason that congress is showing signs of a movement that will revise the tax structure is because these smaller businesses out through the country have now got their fill of government red tape, complex reports, visits of investigators, new tax forms and levies, or what have you. Those people are making themselves heard here in Washington.

So if congress takes some action looking to a fair deal for business, just as it is quite determined to do something for agriculture, I entertain no doubt about the response it will get from the business interests. As far as business has made itself felt, it is apparently asking only to be treated equitably with labor. Every one knows that the last three or four sessions of congress have been frightened to death every time a labor leader showed up on Capitol hill. The reward given congress was the C. I. O. sitdown strikes, violence and a general mess. The condition has left a goodly number of senators and representatives a bad taste in their mouths.

There is plenty of dirty linen in the business closet. It has a hard wash day ahead to restore it to the respect of the bulk of the people. Business has been smug. It has thought too little, in many instances, of its obligations to the public at large. But surely there is a point beyond which federal punishment ought not go since there is a responsibility also in the other direction. Unless business gets a reasonable chance to stand on its own feet, how is it going to re-employ workers and reduce the relief rolls?

Every individual wants to earn some money. He wants a return for his labor. He dreams some day of a retirement, a lay off when he can watch the world go by. I can see no reason why the federal government should not encourage, rather than discourage, such a thing. It is the conviction of a very great many, an increasing number of people that the federal government is messing too much into business.

But aside from that phase. There are a number of things happening that are difficult to understand. At a time when business is sliding off like a snowball going down hill, the President steps out and orders an investigation by the federal trade commission into "high prices." The commission, of course, is directed at the business. I have no doubt at all that there will be a blast from some official pretty soon in the "business" again will be the "little fellow" and the public is suffering from the "trusts." There may be even a fireside chat because a President's voice penetrates everywhere.

At a time, too, when the prices of bonds and shares of corporation stock are sinking like they have double pneumonia, out bursts Chairman Douglas of the securities and exchange commission with a small cargo of dynamite about crooked dealings underneath in the stock exchanges of the country. Fortunately for the hundreds of thousands of small investors, the stock exchange quotations did not fall much further as a result of Mr. Douglas' learned remarks. The prices already had fallen below the knees. But the Douglas statement certainly gave no confidence to those who were beginning to believe that congress would try to undo some of the wrongs previously done.

Just about the same time and during frequent appeals from the senators and representatives that the tax laws had to be overhauled, the President sent a report to congress. It was a report by the New York Power authority, charging the power interests with some weird misdoings. I happen to know some of the folks on the staff of the power authority and I feel that they know just about as much about the power problem as I do—which is to say they are pretty dumb about the situation. Of course, those alleged economists have brilliant ideas about reforming America, and I am dumb about that, too.

Further: While this power authority report was being emblazoned upon the front pages of newspapers, President Roosevelt was holding long conferences with Wendell Wilkie and Fred Carlisle, who personize the "power trust," if there be a power trust. Mr. Roosevelt was talking with those men in an effort to get the large power interests to go ahead with construction and expansion programs to provide work for unemployed.

Different Picture

The political strategy of blaming everything on "big business" worked well for a time, just as the old demagoguery about "Wall Street" used to inflame thousands when a politician orated and slapped his legs with widely swinging arms. But the picture is different now. The attack on business has become a mill stone on business and it has crushed little as well as big—and since there are so many more smaller ones than there are trusts and monopolies, members of congress are hearing about it from men whom they went to school with at home.

But what is to be done? Let congress repeal about five hundred laws that force business to pay more for the privilege of doing business than it gets out of its whole volume; reduce or revise the direct taxes and bring the thousand and one items of tax out in the open so the people can see and know what they are paying; cut out forty or fifty of the silly experiments that were worked up by the coterie of individuals who are constantly feeding Mr. Roosevelt half-baked and cockeyed schemes for spending money and thereby reduce the federal expenses—these and many more of honest purpose can be done. If they are done, business again can employ workers and as it employs workers, they come off the relief rolls, and as they get wages, they buy. This means profits and profits mean tax receipts by the treasuries of state and nation.

To show how some of these taxes come about, I am told that Herman Oliphant, general counsel to the secretary of the treasury, promoted the ridiculous tax on undistributed profits of corporations. When it was pushed through congress Mr. Roosevelt said it would force corporations to declare dividends of all of their earnings and he was for it. It did just that. But when the corporations had distributed everything to their shareholders and their volume of business fell off, they had no money left to tide them over until business picked up again. Hence, some of them are on the verge of bankruptcy. I do not know where Mr. Oliphant got the idea, or how he sold it to Mr. Roosevelt. I do not know of any business connection that Mr. Oliphant ever had with any important corporation. It is important, however, to note that Mr. Oliphant has made no move whatsoever to defend this brain child that turned out to be such an unwanted baby. (And while writing about Mr. Oliphant, it may be noted that Secretary Morgenthau came out to the scene, there was never any need for a general counsel to the secretary of the treasury.)

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK—H President Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina of the Dominican republic persists in his impromptu war with Haiti, and

Ball Player Might Solve Latin Feud
President Molina is a rabid baseball fanatic, and only last June he was accused of stealing many of the best players of the American negro teams. The charges, quite violent and vehement they were, were made by the National Negro League of America, comprising six teams, and were backed up by Ferdinand Q. Morton, New York civil service commissioner, who is the Judge Landis of the league.

It was asserted that agents and emissaries of the President did repeatedly, by trick and device, snatch an ebony ball player wherever they might find him; that they had thus cashiered some of the best talent of the negro league. The Pittsburgh Crawfords were especially loud and insistent in their complaint.

The dictator of Santo Domingo learned fighting and ball playing with the United States Marines, with them eight years, until the end of the period of occupation in 1924. When he took over the country in 1930, by double-crossing old President Velasquez, his enemies said, he made baseball a major detail of his planned economy.

He helped build up the Central American league and brought through quite a few pennant winners. He throws big parties for the visiting teams at his palace in Ciudad Trujillo. He'll practically call out the army to surround a good ball player.

He was a farm boy when the marines came along. He worked up in the Dominican army from private to brigadier general, gaining the presidency by a clever coup d'etat. In 1933, he liquidated a strong opposition by putting it in jail. Several thousand exiles have for several years maintained a junta in New York city, led by Dr. Angel Morales, former Dominican minister to Washington. They have accused President Trujillo of wholesale killings and of ruthless suppression of all political rights and civil rights.

When Sergei Bensome, former secretary of war, was murdered in New York in April, 1935, the political enemies of the dictator said his agents had committed the crime. When he became president in 1930, at the age of thirty-seven, he was the youngest ruler of any sovereign state.

THE Republicans, like the Democrats, go to the Grove of Academe when they are short on ideas. Word from Washington is that they are sounding out Harri Willis Dodds, president of Princeton; James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard; James R. Angell, president emeritus of Yale, and Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, for the work of drafting a comeback program for the party.

A former member of the Republican National committee, who still keeps a few pipe lines open, tells me chances favor President Dodds, as to both choice and acceptance of the chairmanship of the program committee.

President Dodds, who looks and works like Woodrow Wilson, is a specialist in government. He has a generally liberal slant, but has been vigorously outspoken against bureaucracy and has steadily cried down the juggernaut state. The curse of "statism," he says, is the world's greatest menace. He would appear to fit into the picture of a rejuvenated and realistic party reorganization.

He has for years been known as an expert on plebiscites, electoral practice and, municipal government. He was a technical adviser in the Tacna-Arica boundary dispute and refereed the Nicaraguan election of 1928. Later he saved New Jersey $14,000,000 by a 150,000-word digest of a governmental reorganization survey.

He is a native of Utica, Pa., educated at Grove City college, Pa., and Princeton, with a doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania. He lectured on political science at Western Reserve, Pennsylvania and Swarthmore and became a traveling student of Latin America, finding there a useful laboratory of political techniques.

Princeton made him a lecturer on politics. It all sounds pretty dry, but he is always alert to the human equation and supplies his desiccated thesis with a dash of color.

The Story of the DESERTED CORNER

THIS is an actual experience of a small neighborhood store: A merchant was faced with the problem of drawing attention to the display counters in the back of the store. He found that customers would come in, look at merchandise and show cases in the front half of his store, and rarely walk back to the rear. Consequently, a considerable part of his floor space was a dead area—wasted as far as sales were concerned.

He decided to try and pull traffic to this "deserted corner" with the aid of light. He raised the illumination in this particular section to a level higher than that in the rest of the store, focusing the light on his counter displays. Results were immediate. Over 60 per cent of the customers were drawn to the hitherto neglected area.

To pull traffic to inactive sections of your selling space, use LIGHT. To attract attention to special displays and step up the sales of specific items, use LIGHT. To make potential customers notice your show windows, use LIGHT. It is more than a coincidence that the four New York City stores which have the best lighting are the stores which show the greatest net profit. Good lighting can be equally effective for the small store in the neighborhood community.

For competent advice on any phase of your store lighting, consult a Detroit Edison lighting engineer. He can frequently make helpful recommendations on improving your lighting to increase sales. This service is entirely without charge or obligation. Call your Detroit Edison office.

The enterprising man travels the poorest road—extending all he earns, he never turns his face toward future independence.

The miserly man tries to get there too fast. He saves the larger portion of his income and misses many of life's good things. But the thrifty man takes the middle road—he enjoys life as he steadily climbs toward his goal by striking a proper balance between spending and saving. He gets the best out of life all along the way.

*All vitamin factors are essential to normal bodily function. A deficiency in one or more of these constituents may result in retarded growth as well as subnormal health and vigor.

NOTE: Health authorities have repeatedly pointed out that the average person needs more vitamins A and D than is supplied in the ordinary diet. Furthermore as the above chart indicates vitamin D is not found in abundance in the foods we regularly ingest. Its principal source is not foods at all but depends upon the chemical action of ultra-violet rays of sunlight upon certain fatty tissues in the body. There is therefore a real need for supplementing the average diet with preparation known to be rich in vitamins A and D such as cod-liver oil, Haliver Oil (halibut-liver-oil) and certain other fish-liver oils.

VITAMIN A—An important aid toward maintaining integrity of the respiratory, digestive and urinary tract membranes. Often tested the disease resistant vitamin. Prevents certain eye conditions night blindness.

WHERE OBTAINED—Cod-liver Oil, Haliver Oil (halibut-liver oil) are by far the richest source of vitamin A.

VITAMIN B COMPLEX (B1 and B2 or G)—Stimulates appetite in certain cases and promotes optimal growth, as well as aids digestion. Prevents dermatitis similar to pellagra, and the nervous disorders called polyneuritis or beriberi.

WHERE OBTAINED—Vitamin B Complex is found chiefly in yeast, wheat germ, whole wheat, beans, peas, tomatoes, liver, kidney and various fruits.

VITAMIN C—Essential for scurvy Of particular use in defective tooth development and condition of malnutrition associated with latent scurvy.

It is available in pure form as ascorbic acid. The natural sources are vitamin C are oranges, lemons, grape fruit etc.

VITAMIN D—The sunshine vitamin prevents rickets by aiding in the utilization of calcium and phosphorus. Important in the formation of strong teeth and bones. Of special value to infants and growing children, and to expectant and nursing mothers.

Vitamin D is not found in much of the food ordinarily ingested. One of the chief sources of irradiated ergosterol, Cod liver-oil, Haliver oil (halibut liver oil).

VITAMIN E—Plays a role in normal reproductive function. It is contained in the wheat germ, cottonseed oil, corn oil, lettuce water cross and egg yolk.

To Our Savings Depositors

During the past seven years the condition of the money market has changed a great deal. In the nineteen hundred twenties it was possible to purchase securities in well rated concerns to yield from 5% to 6%. The Government has entered the market so strongly in the past four years, that interest rates have gradually decreased. Now prime investments, that is investments which we are satisfied to purchase with bank funds, yield the bank from one to three per cent per annum. In face of this decrease in income from bank investments we have continued to pay 2% on all Savings accounts, both books and time Certificates of deposit.

The securities purchased by the bank in the last decade at higher rates are now nearly all paid out and we are forced to look for investments in today's market. This condition makes it advisable to discontinue paying the 2% rate which we have maintained here tofore.

We believe you, our depositors, would prefer that we continue to purchase highly rated securities even if you have to sacrifice something in interest in your Savings accounts.

We have given this matter a great deal of thought and have tried to arrive at a rate which would be fair to both you and the bank.

Beginning January 1st, 1938, we will pay 1 1/2 % on all Savings deposits up to $2,500.00 inclusive, according to the rules governing Savings Books and Time Certificates of Deposit.

In making the above change we have always foremost in mind the providing of absolute safety for our depositors, just as soon as we are able to purchase the right kind of securities for better rates than are now obtainable we will be only too glad to reinstate the old order.

KITCHEN HEIGHTS

Adhering to the rule that makes many jobs hard to complete in Michigan rural and city homes often are caused by having working surfaces at incorrect heights.

These can be as much as 19 inches in difference in the average preferred height for such a job as cutting cloth and out for such work as can be done in the kitchen or the desk. Studies of working surfaces have been made by Irma H. Gross, professor in home management at the Michigan State College.

She finds that for rolling dough the average height is 38.7 in. from the floor. For cutting cloth the height is 35.4 inches. For beating, 31.6 for dish washing, 32.3 for ironing, 32.6, and for the surface of a kitchen planning table, 26 inches.

Less energy is required to do these jobs of homemaking when the posture of the body is correct rather than reaching up or stooping.

It's old fashioned to disregard the problem and say that it just can't be helped because individuals so. Probably most chores and jobs of home work have been done on working surfaces that were too low, Miss Gross points out.

Studies in Oregon and Washington brought answers from 562 women. They were classified according to their own body measurements and were asked to give their preference as to heights for various jobs. The majority found one certain height seemingly best for any certain type of work.

AGED ASSISTANCE GRANTS REACH PEAK

In a year end check of his dept's books, Auditor General George T. Gundry, today revealed that slightly more than sixty thousand aged residents of Michigan are now receiving old age assistance. This is an increase of twenty three thousand over the number aided by the state at the end of the fiscal year last July 1st. At that time the increased appropriation set by the last legislature became available and was matched by additional funds by the Federal government.

When the additional funds became available the age limit of those eligible for assistance was lowered from 70 to 65 years.

The bill for Old Age Assistance now amounts to $1,200,000.00 per month, with the State paying fifty per cent, or $600,000.00 and the Federal Government the rest, Mr. Gundry said.

Gundry stated that the average cost per funeral was $100 and that because of the high mortality rate of those on the assistance lists, new applicants were being added continuously to replace those who had passed on.

"So we're off to be married! Flat's all right with me," Jerry Field approved fervently.

Brooke, whose face was pressed against the back window of the roadster, twisted round in her seat. "Don't be foolish, Jerry. Of course we're not. That was a red herring drawn across our trail."

"Just why the red herring?" The ironic note in his voice gave her a chill tremor of dismay; she didn't care for the way in which his eyes narrowed as they peered through the wind shield. She protested:

"Don't speak like that, it makes me shivery, and goodness knows my teeth are fairly chattering now." She turned to peer from the rear window. "No car in sight yet. Can you go a little faster?"

"Not without a risk of skidding off the causeway and breaking our necks. Can't you see how the snow is plastering the wind shield. The squeegee barely moves. Why the haste?"

"While I'm telling you I'll keep watch. The excitement began upon my return from the play."

She told him of leaving her town car in the garage, of stopping in the purple gloom under the hemlock to look at the lighted windows of the stone houses crouched on the ledge; her breath quickened as she repeated the words of the man who had produced the newspaper clipping:

"It's the picture of the dame who said: 'He was a swell-dressed fellow! I'll have to date her up.'"

"That was what the Cassidy girl said about the man they suspect robbed Mrs. Hunt!"

Field's voice was sharp, his personal problem was submerged in a mounting tide of excitement. The car shot ahead like a whippet unleashed.

"I know that now. The certainty as to who he was flashed through my mind while I was dressing, and the suspicion that he might be at the Other House tonight to lift—that's the technical term, isn't it—Mrs. Gregory's gorgeous diamonds."

"Why didn't you phone the police?"

"With Henri in the house? I may be a slow thinker but I'm not absolutely dumb."

"And the suitcase?"

"A touch of theater. I thought if one of the gang saw us starting, he might suspect he had been discovered, but if he heard what I told Taku he would feel secure. Elopements happen every day."

"Not in my young life," Jerry Field retorted crisply.

They maintained a breathless, alert silence until the roadster turned a corner into a street which had an air of lonely spaciousness. Just ahead bulked the combination jail and police headquarters, gloomy and ponderous.

"Shall I come in with you?" Field asked, as he stopped the roadster before a heavy iron door and cut off his engine.

"Yes. I may need you to corroborate my story. When I burst in upon them in this gown, they may think I'm crazy. Hurry! We don't know what is going on at the Other House."

Field slipped his arm within hers as they mounted the snowy steps.

"I'll stick around and wait till you call me. Don't shiver, sweet thing. You're not afraid of the inspector, are you?"

"Afraid! No. Haven't I been cross-examined by him almost every day since what Sam calls 'our late unpleasantness'? It's just the Reyburn temperament."

Her satin sandals skidded treacherously in the corridor as she confronted a policeman whose nose, criss-crossed with a network of fine veins, had the effect of a red "stop" signal.

"Where's the inspector? I must see him. Matter of life and death," she confided breathlessly. In her excitement she caught the man's arm and shook it. He scowled at her, looked beyond her at Jerry Field; his expression melted.

"Inspector's just come in. He's in the radio division. Go through those swinging doors up them stairs to the tower."

Brooke was through the doors before the man had finished speaking. Three or four men leaning over a great U-shaped table looked up as she entered the room. With a muttered exclamation, the inspector left them and came forward.

A man sitting at a telephone said something in a low voice to an officer before a microphone. Tubes in the broadcasting apparatus crackled into life. He said slowly and distinctly into the mike:

"Calling car 3131. Car 3131. Car 3131. Go to K and Tenth street."

Brooke commanded breathlessly: "Listen to me, Inspector. The man who robbed Lola Hunt is serving supper at the Trent h-house on the point!"

Inspector Bill Harrison smiled, a curious smile.

"Wish I'd known this before, Miss Reyburn. I've just come from the point, following a tip I had. What's the dope on this bandit? Is it the same guy you saw at the Supper club?"

"It must be, Inspector. Tonight—Before she had finished telling of the alleged waiter's remark about Maggie Cassidy's picture, machinery was crackling again and the man at the microphone was broadcasting distinctly:

"Calling car 1942. Car 1942. Car 1942. Go to Trent house on point. Inspector will meet you."

Inspector Bill Harrison was out of the room before the man at the microphone had completed the call. One of the officers turned over two discs on the U-table; the other frowned at her with the bluest, most Irish eyes she ever had seen as he answered her unspoken question:

"We don't dare be more explicit over the mike, Miss. The thugs pick up the messages."

"I hope they get there in time, Sergeant?"

"Time for what, Miss?"

"I think—I think he's there to get Mrs. Gregory's diamonds—she's—she's simply plastered with them tonight."

Jerry Field was pacing the lower corridor when she reached it.

"It's about time you appeared, Brooke! I was just coming up to look for you. What do we do next?"

"Back to the party of course."

The wind whirled her short hair, clutched at her velvet wrap as they went down the jail steps. As Jerry Field tucked the robe about her wet feet he looked up. Snow had settled in the brim of his soft hat, whitened his shoulders.

"Let's make a break for town, sweet thing, and make that yarn you told Taku the truth."

The expression in his eyes, the break in his voice hurt her. She said unsteadily:

"Please, Jerry! I can't care for you that way. Take me back quickly, will you? We mustn't miss Sam's party."

"Oh Sam! Sam is your white-haired boy. He's all that you Reyburn women think of or care about. I believe you'd sell your soul for him!"

After one look at his grim mouth and gloomy eyes, Brooke snuggled into her corner of the seat.

They sped in silence through the night. Toward the east the drab, heavy clouds were thinning before a spreading radiance.

"I believe the snow is letting up, Jerry. Look! The moon is trying to break through! Drive faster. I can't wait to know what has happened."

"Don't worry, you'll get to the party all right."

Brooke ignored his gruffness. "Of course I want to get to the party. Then I shan't feel guilty that I dragged you away from the fun and congratulations. Leave me at Look-out House. I must change these soaked sandals before I join the festivities. Here we are."

From the top of the steps she looked down at Field who was looking up at her.

"I'm sorry, Jerry," she whispered softly, before she entered the house and closed the door behind her.

"He doesn't really love me, he's a spoiled boy who wants what he can't have," she reassured herself, as in her boudoir she changed her wet sandals.

She readjusted the rhinestone and emerald clip on her white frock, sprayed perfume on her hair, powdered her nose, accented her lips. She shook her head at the looking-glass girl.

"Stalling, aren't you, Brooke Reyburn? You dread to face Mark Trent with that will you've kept back for two days, don't you? Get going!"

She crossed to the desk, found the key where she had hidden it.

"Zero hour," she said aloud, and unlocked the drawer in which she had placed the will.

The drawer was empty.

CHAPTER XIV

People coming, but not going; music never stopping. It was that kind of a party.

To the accompaniment of the hum of voices, the stimulating beat and throb of the orchestra, the distant faint tinkle of silver and glass,

Sam Reyburn made slow progress through the gay, colorful crowd on the lower floor of the Other House, grinning at girls in lovely evening frocks who cooed over him; frowning at men who tried to detain him. From where he stood on the lowest step of the circular stairway, Mark Trent watched him. "All this praise is heady stuff for a boy," he thought, and then reminded himself that Sam wasn't a boy. Why wasn't Brooke with him to share the honors? She had been the first to leave the hall, the man in charge of the parked cars had told him. Where was Jerry Field? He hadn't appeared either.

A curious premonition turned him cold. Of course Brooke hadn't meant it when in answer to his sarcastic suggestion she had said she would end Field's torment. Hadn't she? There had been infinite determination in her crisp retort:

"I will. Tonight."

"Seen Brooke, Mark?" Sam Reyburn inquired as he approached. "I want her to be the first to know that I'm to get a contract; that I have an option in my pocket and a check."

Mark Trent laid his hand affectionately on his shoulder.

"Great stuff, Sam, great stuff. I was sure that the New York producer was hooked when he spoke to me."

Sam grinned. "Offered you the lead in a Broadway production, didn't he? He's a publicity hound. Think of the headlines:

"Leading Insurance Executive Leaves Lucrative Business for the Stage." Will you do it?"

"What do you think? How's the party going, Mrs. Gregory?"

Mark Trent smiled at the woman whose blazing tiara on her marcelled white hair, and plastron of diamonds on her purple velvet gown dimmed what sparkle life had left in her tired eyes. She answered crisply:

"Listen to the hubbub and you won't ask the question. Your party has brought out tails and white ties, Mark, that's a triumph in itself. I always know what guests think of my parties by the way they dress for them." She patted Sam's sleeve.

"My boy, your play is the sweetest, loveliest, most heart-wringing thing I've seen on the stage for years. Where's your sister? I want to tell her what I think of it."

"That's what Mark and I were wondering. She left the hall before the rest of us; she told me before the first curtain was rung up that she would dash home to change for the party."

Mrs. Gregory's face grew a shade less colorful. "I don't like her not being here. I don't like it. I've been uneasy about that girl every moment since she testified at the inquest about the strange man who passed through her room the night of the filling station hold-up. The man hasn't been caught. She knows too much. They may try to put her out of the way."

The strong lenses in Sam's horn-rimmed spectacles magnified the horror in his eyes.

"What an awful suggestion, Mrs. Gregory! What a gosh - awful thought!"

It was an awful thought, but improbable, almost impossible, Mark Trent assured himself. With difficulty he cleared his voice of hoarseness before he accented:

"You've been reading mystery stories, Empress, confess now, haven't you? Just the same, we'll start on Brooke's trail at once. What is it, Kowa?"

He spoke sharply to the servant who had wormed his way through the crowd of dancers who overflowed from the library to the hall.

"Much obliged. Madame Gregory's car here. Chauffeur say to tell her storm bad, very bad. She better get home. He know she not like to be out in storm."

"Tell him to wait. I won't go till I know where Brooke is," Mrs. Gregory snapped.

"Did you see Miss Reyburn come in, Kowa?" Mark Trent inquired. Of course, the suggestion that she was in danger was absurd, but it was getting under his skin.

The Jap's slanting eyes narrowed to mere slits. He put his lips close to Mark Trent's ear and whispered:

"Miss Reyburn tell Taku she and Mr. Field go to marry, thank you. She carry suitcase, sir."

"What!"

Had he shouted the word? Mark's eyes flashed from Mrs. Gregory to Sam Reyburn. Both were regarding him anxiously, but apparently neither had caught the content of Kowa's whisper.

"Has anything happened to Brooke?" Mrs. Gregory's lips twitched, tears filled her eyes. Sam caught Trent's arm.

"What did Kowa say? What did he say?"

Mark Trent steadied his mind. He must reply to their questions. What should he say? He couldn't blurt out the truth here. Perhaps Brooke had flung that remark at Taku for dramatic effect. But the suitcase—

"Mark! Mark! Why don't you answer?"

He looked down into Mrs. Gregory's eyes, terrified now.

"Brooke is perfectly safe. She—There's Field! Ask him where she is. He saw her last. Go get him, Sam! Go get him!"

"No need, he's coming as fast as he can push through the dancers, and Ted Stewart is at his heels. They are white as sheets. What's all the mystery? The air is full of it. My skin's turning to gooseflesh. For Pete's sake, where's Brooke, Jerry?"

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Make This Attractive Ottoman.

GET a wooden box from the grocer. It should be about as long as the width of the chair with which the ottoman is to be used. The depth of the sides should be four inches as shown here at A.

The legs should be made of two by two's or you may have a set of nicely turned legs from an old table or other piece of furniture that may be cut down to the right length. Fasten in place with long screws through the corners of the box as shown here at B.

About half a bat of cotton will be needed. Put five or six layers of the cotton on the top, cutting the first layer about four inches smaller all around than the top of the box. Place it in the center. Cut the next layer a little bigger and the others still bigger until the last one is the same size as the top. Now, cut a layer of cotton to go over the top and down over the ends as at C and another to go over the top and down the sides as at D.

Cut a piece of heavy muslin to fasten tightly over the cotton. Cut the corners of the muslin as at E. Sew with heavy thread as at F and then tack as at G.

To make the cover, stretch the top tightly over the muslin and sew it along the sides through the muslin, then make a straight four-inch band to go all around and add the ruffle to it.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 2110 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Witty Dr. Holmes

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, the famous essayist, author and physician, father of the late justice, met a man who had devoted himself to lecturing throughout New England, without much ability for the task. In other words, he was much of a bore. "What are you about now?" asked Dr. Holmes. The answer was, "Oh, lecturing as usual. I speak at Dedham this evening." "Good," said Holmes, "I'm delighted to hear it. I never liked those Dedham people."

Over Sixty-Eight Years of Safe Banking

It must be New Year's for we are deluged with a profusion of prognostication. good year ahead, a bad year ahead, about the same war or no war, all the seers are saying. The outcome of all this point counter-point is that no one can see the future.

Our conclusions are that the old rules will protect the individual; logically a balanced budget with a proper aspect to thrift. Budget and be secure in the knowledge that if the times are better than 1937, all will be able to save more, and if no better, all will be able to say, "We had a pretty good year at any rate."

We wish everybody a Happy, Prosperous, and "Better Than Ever" New Year.

A NEW METHOD OF DETECTING MARIHUANA

The use of marihuana is new in this country and there has been no sure way of detecting this drug, the continuous use of which causes insanity. Scientists now believe they have found a way to detect it by means of a water flea or daphnia, a tiny microscopic animal, a 300th part of a gram of marihuana dissolved in chemicals and poured over the water fleas instantly kill them.
