

National Security Act Payments

Payments Under this Act Started on Jan. 1. So far 76,775 Persons in Michigan Have Received Benefits from the Act

Claims for lump-sum payments under the old-age insurance plan of the Social Security Act were distributed during January at the rate of 942 per working day, the Social Security Board announced today. Six months ago, in August, the daily rate was 165 from which level it climbed steadily through September, October, November and December, the successive daily rates for each month being 228, 363, 381 and 590.

During January a total of $745,691 was certified for payment to 223,538 claimant-workers who reached the age of 65 and the status of workers who died. The average amount of each payment was $31.68 or almost double the amount of $17 paid for all claims up to the end of August.

Pennsylvania with 2,929 headed the list with the largest number of claims certified, but the greatest amount of money went to New York where $97,175 was distributed among 2,763 claimants.

The largest claim that has been certified went to an employee who reached the age of 65. He received a lump-sum payment in January of $525. The largest death claim certified was for $420.

Since the government's old age insurance plan went into effect on January 1, 1937, $2,023,207 has been certified for payment to 76,775 claimants. Each of the claims paid amounts to 3 1/2 percent of the total wages paid to these wage earners.

John E. Ballenger mgr. of the Detroit office of the Social Security Board, 205 Federal Bldg., announced that in Michigan 1,094 claims were certified during January for a total of $35,391.44, or an average of $32.25 per claimant. To date the total number of claims certified in Michigan is 3,322 and the total amount of payments $90,649.83.

Retirement and old age pensions in this section have been increased by Social Security in some cases.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS BALL

The Young Democrats of Livingston county held a dance at the Red Hen Tavern, Portage Lake, Saturday night. A large crowd was in attendance with many coming from Lansing, Ann Arbor, Dexter and Detroit. The entire state central committee of the Young Democrats was present and they were introduced by Martin Lavan of Brighton, Livingston county, (member of the Democrat state central committee.) Pinckney was well represented at the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Miller and son of Detroit were week end guests of the W. C. Miller home.

Second Boxing Contest Held

Another Good Crowd Witnesses Second Boxing & Wrestling Program at Pinckney Saturday Night

Another Silver Gloves Contest was held at the Pinckney Community hall Saturday evening. This time a regulation ring was erected. Bud Kenner of Howell promoted the show Preston Pelky of Howell refereed the boxing bouts and Stanley Dinkel, the wrestling matches. The latter and Rollic Shehan acted as judges of the boxing bouts. Arnold Berquist and Lynn Hendee were time keepers.

Howard Read and Julius Aschenbrenner started the program with a wrestling contest. Both showed much agility in breaking holds and getting out from under and no falls were gained by either in the 15 minutes to them.

Lloyd VanBlaricum and Harold Hinchey wrestled in the second contest. VanBlaricum got one fall and was given the decision.

Billy Darlow Pinckney and C. H. Wiggins, Oak Grove, a couple of 120 lb. boys met in the first boxing event. The Pinckney entry landed the most blows and got the decision at the end of three fast rounds.

Bob Kerr of Howell met Don Riley of Dexter. Both are hard swingers and were on the floor several times as a result of missing hard swings. This bout was declared a draw.

Fritz Gardner of Pinckney got a technical knockout over John Fousner of Dexter when the latter became winded in the second round and could not continue. Fritz did not land often but kept boring in.

Two flyweights, Howard Haines of Pinckney and Joe Tonia of Dexter put on a fast three round exhibition in which not much damage was done. Haines was the faster and got the decision.

The main event was last. Don Fousner, Dexter, a former CCC boy, was opposed by Ray Frazee of Byron in what was to have been a six round bout. Frazee's rushing style has bothered his opponents previously and he has won all of his bouts. However Fousner quickly solved and knocked out Frazee one minute after the bout lighting action.

We understand more of these events will be held here and any boy is invited to enter these contests.

NEW SOUND EQUIPMENT

The Howell Theatre joins the other great entertainment palaces of the nation soon in installing "Mirrophonic Sound." The new sound system, product of many years research by the Bell Telephone Laboratories and the Western Electric subsidiary, Electrical Research Products Inc., is hailed as the greatest advance in sound reproduction since the same scientists and engineers evolved the first talking movies. Certain films, in the last few months, which build their entire appeal on climatic sound effects, are said to produce, when rendered with Mirrophonic Sound, a degree of excitement in the listening audience totally unexpected by those who saw the same films under old-style sound reproduction conditions.

Early Spring "Digging"

Used Car Campaign Is On this Month

Automobile Dealers Join in a Nation Wide Movement to Rid the Market of Used Cars and End the Auto Sale Slump

Convinced that automobile factories cannot hum with activity again until the used car jam is broken, manufacturers and dealers are planning a "super bargain" sale this spring.

Prices will be cut to the well known rock bottom, while dealers center attentions on improved reconditioning methods.

The used car business is a two billion dollar industry.

The petroleum institute estimated recently that of the 29,000,000 automobile owners in this country, 10,000,000 of them had never owned a new car.

For every new car a dealer sells he receives a used car.

It is an economic cycle that functions just as long as there is a market for used automobiles. When the market jams, then the backler starts that ends in shutdown of automobile factories.

The used car industry is more important to Michigan than to any other state in the country. Remember one of every six persons owe their livelihood in America to the automotive industry and its many ramifications. Verily, Michigan is on the national map in heavy black letters.

THOMAS EAGEN

Thomas Eagen died at a Jackson Hospital Friday. He lived on a farm in Webster township for many years and was later in the real estate business in Dexter. The funeral was held in Jackson Monday with the burial in Dexter. The deceased was a cousin of Mrs. Irving Kennedy and the late Mrs. Edward Spears of Pinckney.

THE WELFARE PROBLEM

The Livingston County Press had a very good writeup on the welfare problem last week. There are now 217 people on the welfare in this county. The total amount paid out for relief during the month of January was $4,672.82. Of this $1977.82 was for food, shelter $94.65, clothing $42.05, fuel $546.39 and medical aid $339.96 dependent children $845.00 and aid to blind $27.50. 185 men are on work relief, 12 on soil conservation and 16 on tax survey. In Howell 61 families are on relief and 44 have work relief. We have no figures for Putnam but for last December the amount spent for relief was $45. The welfare load in this county has always been light. In Clinton county for the month of January the welfare cost was $11,000.

Filibuster Ends

Abandonment of the Senate anti-lynching filibuster last week fulfilled predictions of Senate Leaders and paved the way for immediate consideration of the supplemental WPA appropriation previously approved by the House. President Roosevelt returned to the White House after a brief stay at the Hyde Park residence and affirmed his confidence in battle ships as the backbone of American naval defense. The House of Representatives continued consideration of appropriation measures with the Interior Department Supply Bill scheduled as the chief item of business for Monday and Tuesday of this week.

By a vote of 58 to 32 the filibuster that started at January 6 and ended on February 21 with the tacit consent of many of the most ardent advocates of the anti-lynching bill that already has the approval of the House. The insistent demand for immediate action on the supplemental relief appropriation of $250,000,000 convinced friends of the anti-lynching bill that further persistence would alienate many supporters of the measure. The Senate passed the appropriation in the same amount that was approved by the House and the bill was sent to a joint conference to reconcile the differences in the detailed method of application of both bills. Whether the anti-lynching bill will be taken from its regular place on the calendar was a matter of speculation. In the event the bill against lynching is not revived in this session it will be the second time it has been talked to death by the Senate after gaining majority from the House.

Battleship Efficiency

Following restatements that recent tests showed battleships to be extremely vulnerable to sky bomber attacks President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference for an opinion on the relative worth of battleships in view of aviation developments. The President pointed out that battleships had been developed to maintain their efficiency. He alluded to the invention of the torpedo boat in his youth when many persons predicted the immediate end of the battle ship but battleships survived. He related that in the first three years of the World War submarines had a distinct advantage over surface craft but later new offenses and defenses equalized the balance. Praising the cooperation between the Army and Navy officials the President said this happy conditions made unnecessary the uniting of both units in a single department of defense.

Senate Activity

Late in the week the Senate passed the Independent Offices Appropriation and the First Deficiency Appropriation Bills after a heated debate about including the Gilbertsville Dam in Kentucky in the bill and as a "spoils system." The Senate finally adopted an amendment which would require Senate confirmation for the employment of new attorneys and experts receiving more than $5,000 a year and not taken from the Civil roster. Exemption from this amendment was made for the TVA. This week the Senate will consider the Treasury Post Office Bill.

Possible Compromise

After a two hour closed session of the House Labor Committee Friday it was announced that a compromise wage and hour bill is being considered to comply with President Roosevelt's request for such regulatory legislation. A suggestion to arrange a conference between the Labor Committee and the powerful House Rules Committee, which blocked the wage and hour bill at the first regular session, was dropped when members of the Labor Committee said such a conference might be construed as an abdication of the Committee's powers in Labor legislation. The Rules Committee with the vested authority to schedule debate on various measures before the House can block consideration of any bill despite the approval of the Committee that investigated the measure and recommended it to the House, as was the case in the wage and hour bill. While advocates of a floor for wages and a ceiling for hours of employment had not given up hope of achieving their objective it was indicated the Labor Committee might approve a maximum hour week of 40 hours without (Continued on last page)

Current Comment

Somehow we have much admiration for Prime Minister Austin Chamberlain of Great Britain. He certainly took a shellacking in parliament last week, being called a coward, poltron and about everything else with two master politicians, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill leading the attack. The crux of the situation seems to be that he is charged with failing to uphold the honor and traditions of old England but instead has made a secret treaty with Italy in which he agreed to recognize the Italian conquest of Ethiopia and restore the German African colonies. His motto seems to be "Peace at any cost" even to the loss of British pride. Doubtless he is convinced that war settles nothing and the nation that wins the war usually loses the peace treaty. The world war was supposed to be the war to end wars but from its ruins have sprung up two dictators in Mussolini and Hitler who have more power than the Kaiser ever dreamed of.

The Black Legion is said to have sprung up again and an investigation is being conducted in Macomb county where many people have been threatened with floggings it is claimed. It is evidently not political as Prosecutor Fitzgerald, a Democrat is conducting the investigation and Irving Little, a Republican justice of peace is the star witness against the Legion. Prominent politicians are said to be involved.

Frank Knox, late Republican vice presidential candidate struck a new note when he declared for the abolition of all tariffs in a speech last week. He flatly declared that they were nothing more than subsidies to industry in the same manner as the recent payments to farmers by the federal government and that it was inconsistent for industry to cry out against aid to the farmers when they themselves were receiving aid from the government in form of tariffs in order to stifle competition. Abolishing the tariff he declared was the only way to stop subsidies.

We read with regret that Vern Brown, Editor of the Ingham County News at Mason who has served five terms in the legislature will not be a candidate for re-election. Vern has given good value for money received during his terms in the legislature and is one of the best versed men on taxation in the state. He has had ambitions to go higher but too much on the independent order to build up a state-wide organization around himself. His articles on government waste, published in many papers during the Brucker administration made him unpopular with the Republican machine then. He should not be allowed to retire to private life. Ingham county usually has a whole flock of candidates for the 6th district congressional nomination and the result is that Genesee county usually elects her man. To the man on the sidelines it would seem that they could do much worse than nominate Vern Brown.

The auto industry has decided that overcrowding of the market with unsalable used cars has caused the present automobile slump and will put on a nation wide used car campaign to get rid of them. The used car has been a drawback to the sale of autos for some time and has stopped auto production before when the dealers have had so much money tied up in unsalable used cars that they were unable to stock new ones. Now a plan is being advocated by Alderman Kronk of Detroit to junk all cars unfit for travel. The federal government would pay about $100 apiece for them and use WPA labor to junk them. This plan has been suggested before but Mr. Kronk is the only one so far who has come out flatfooted for it.

Changes Come Fast

Washington.—Changes in President Roosevelt's policies have been coming so fast lately that about all I am able to do this week is to review the situation. I have gathered information and advice from many official sources in an earnest effort to understand what is happening, but with all of that I am quite incapable of what I would regard as a complete analysis. As the air pilot would report while flying through fog: the visibility is zero.

The proper basis for a start, therefore, appears to be with recollection that one of the cardinal policies of the Roosevelt administration was control of agricultural production to accomplish higher prices. Another basic plank is the foreign trade policies under which reciprocal trade treaties have been negotiated with numerous foreign nations. These two planks were designed to make markets available for what we produce, first, through scarcity of quantity and, secondly, to stabilize the world exchange of goods on price levels which we, in this country, considered to be worth while. Various other legislative acts and White House announcements came into the picture also, but we need not be concerned with them just now.

Well, the higher prices began to materialize. They came along to the point where eight or ten months ago there was genuine evidence of a speculative boom. Mr. Roosevelt said recently in a statement to the press that the outlook on this circumstance was a bit alarming. Suddenly, however, the depression settled down on the country. The President took note of it after a time and announced that prices had to come down in order to encourage buying by the consumers. That was in January of this year. Early in February, he told the press that there had to be higher prices to bring the country out of the depression. Subsequently—it was on February 18, I believe, he took another position on the price question. He said in a formal statement:

"It is clear that in the present situation, a moderate rise in the present price level is desirable and that this rise need not and should not extend to all prices."

So that now we are committed to a price rise on some commodities and present or even lower prices on some other commodities. It is to be presumed (because there is nothing to show a contrary view) that all of the machinery of government is to be used to bring about price rises in "some commodities" but not all of them.

However, to continue our review: I reported to you in December, 1937, and have mentioned several times since that there is a trust busting drive on that is as big and as broad as the famous "big stick" which Theodore Roosevelt used when he was President. Twenty-nine cases against so-called monopolies are pending now in federal courts and the federal trade commission has some others in process of prosecution. The prosecutions range all the way from ladies' half-size dresses and against individuals who design styles through the list to Aluminum Company of America.

Now, while the trust drive has been on (and some folks have been cruel enough to charge that the trust busting drive is to keep the folks from realizing we are in a depression), another thing has happened. I refer to the passage of the new farm aid legislation. I have not been able to understand the law, but Secretary Wallace calls it one of God's blessings to the farmers because he says that it will reduce or limit production and thereby force a greater return to the farmers. In Mr. Roosevelt's statement on the general price situation, however, he spoke of the new program as follows:

"Our program seeks a balanced system of prices such as will promote balanced expansion in production. . . . This is not a policy of restriction; it is a policy of abundance."

I seem to recall some phrases of a few years back which described the plans as leading, first, to higher prices for agricultural products through "scarcity"; then there came "the more abundant life" and later balanced abundance. I assume the "balanced expansion" must represent something taken in between the other policies, but I frankly do not understand. That is the reason why I have attempted this report to you by way of a review.

Although admitting that much of the new program is too deep for me to analyze, there are certain phases of it which have been operative and from which results have begun to show. Take the reciprocal trade treaties as an example. I came across some figures down at the Department of Commerce the other day and they were something of a revelation. They showed that in 1937 this nation of ours was importing more agricultural commodities than it exported. I could not find when that condition had obtained before. Certainly, there have been few times in our history when that has happened.

The department figures showed that the United States imported 18 per cent more commodities from the farms of the world than it exported from our farms. Further examination of those statistics reveals the disturbing fact that the bulk of those imports were things which our American farmers could have grown right at home. I can find no other reason for the condition than that the reciprocal trade treaties which were to bring us prosperity have taken prosperity to some other farmers.

The circumstance caused me to wonder then whether these trade treaties are not slowly grinding the American farmer into the dust. I have tried to find out how the new farm aid law, which restricts production further in the United States, is going to help this situation. Accepting Secretary Wallace's statement that it will result in higher prices for our farm products, will it not by the same token make a greater difference between foreign prices and our own? And if that be true, is not it to be expected that there will be more imports of farm products from foreign lands? My reasoning brings an answer of "yes" in each case, and so I cannot see where we are going to get "balanced expansion" out of those factors.

Now, as Al Smith used to say, let us look at the record as it concerns the trust-busting drive and its relation to prices, employment and the like. I simply have no patience at all with the big business groups that ignore or forget their responsibilities to the public. There is no excuse and can be no excuse for crushing any individual who is trying to run a business of his own. It is one thing, however, for a business to have grown big because it serves its public well and quite another thing for the same group to have attained its bigness through savage tactics.

That brings me to the recent conviction of the oil companies in a trial that was held at Madison, Wis.

Trust Busting

As far as I have read the record in that case, the basis of the charge by the government was that the oil companies had used a pricing system which was fostered by the infamous NRA, a policy laid down by congress. Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior, now one of the loudest mouths in the chorus of bust the trusts, insisted on the oil companies getting together. He wrote letters to them to that effect. Of course, the NRA was held unconstitutional but the decision was based on the question of congressional authority to delegate powers to the executive officers. It did not declare that congress had no right to grant privilege of agreement on prices for purposes of stabilization.

We might also look at some of the tactics employed by the government. Robert H. Jackson, who was the spearhead and spokesman for the trust busting drive, lately has been promoted to the job of solicitor general of the United States. Mr. Jackson told a senate committee considering his nomination that he had picked "the proper forum" for the oil case. He said the Department of Justice would continue to do it. They picked a New York court to hear the case against the Aluminum company in order to get the proper kind of a jury as they did in the oil case.

The tactics used in the Aluminum case seem to me to be almost reprehensible. For instance, the government had been anxious to set a date for the trial and the Aluminum company counsel urged early action. The record of that day in court in New York revealed that when Judge Knox proposed a date early in April, Walter Rice, one of Mr. Jackson's assistants, admitted to the court that the government did not yet have enough evidence to prosecute.

This seems far ahead from the price question. I wonder if it is so far off the subject. As I said earlier in this discussion, legal action against anybody, individual or corporation, is destructive, demoralizing and expensive. I know nothing about the merits of the oil case or the aluminum case or any of the others beyond what I have picked up in the records. On the other hand, however, it is plain for anyone to see no "price structure" can be arranged for "balanced expansion" if the federal government is going to decree one course of action for business with one hand and write an obituary for the same business with the other hand. That is to say, if the people are unable to know or understand what their government policies are, it is quite likely that those same people will continue to ask each other: "Where are we going and what is the end going to be?"

PIMIENTO BISQUE

THE soup described below is delicious. It has a delectable flavor and the rich color of the pimientos gives just the desired red touch to the finished product.

1 can cream of celery soup
1 cup milk
3 pimientos

1 tsp. salt
2 slices of onion
1 tsp. paprika

If canned condensed soup is used, prepare according to directions on the label and then add 1 cup of milk. If canned ready-to-serve cream of celery soup is used, pour the contents into a pan and add the cup of milk. Rub the pimientos through a sieve and add to the soup. Add salt, onion and paprika and heat until the soup is hot. Stir frequently to prevent scorching. Remove the onion before serving. Serves 6.

The food with red color in the main course might be a ring mold made with canned beets.

The red color for the dessert might be supplied by a raspberry gelatin made with a can of red raspberries.

What Is Proper Use of Furniture Polish?

In a recent investigation, it was proven that many, many homemakers use furniture polish incorrectly—pouring it on a dry cloth, for application to the furniture! This is a gross waste of the housewife's time, energy and her polish! And the latter is usually blamed. We refer, of course, to oil polish—for this type is best to clean, beautify and preserve the furniture. The best oil polish is not greasy, because it's made with a fine, light-oil base. The polish should be applied on a damp cloth—thoroughly moistened with water, then wrung out. Saturate this cloth with the polish—spread on—and rub lightly. The "wet" of the cloth smoothly distributes the polish—and the finish absorbs, receives it evenly! This correct procedure takes the "labor" out of polishing—and requires far less tiresome rubbing! A dry cloth is then used to easily work up the glow, which is even and uniform—the desired effect! This—and only this—is the proper way to use a good oil polish!

FOR THAT COUGH KEMP'S BALSAM

For Your Spring Wardrobe

DRESSES that not only satisfy your present craving for something new and spring-like, but also look ahead to a later season, too. Make them yourself at home, for very much less than you usually spend on clothes. You'll find it very easy to do, with the sew chart that accompanies each pattern.

Corsetette Waistline.

If you have a slim figure, this is the afternoon dress for you! The fullness over the bust, the sleeves cut in one with the shoulders, and the fitted waistline, are just as flattering as they can be! It's the kind of dress you can wear to bridges, luncheons, meetings, and for every afternoon occasion, with the assurance that it is not only smart but becoming.

Slenderizing House Frock.

Especially designed for full figures, this house frock follows straight, tailored lines, and fits beautifully. You can get into it in nothing flat, and it doesn't take long to make either, thanks to the complete and detailed sew chart that comes with your pattern. Make it up in a pretty, small-figure printed percale, and trim it with rows of old-fashioned rick-rack.

A Frilly Home Cotton.

This is perfectly charming, made up in dotted Swiss, voile or dimity, in some flower-like color.

TIPS to Gardeners

Grow Better Flowers

GROW better flowers by planting them in the kind of soil in which they can perform best. Though your soil may be good and rich, certain flowers will not do as well in it as in poorer ground.

In rich soil plant zinnia, petunia, portulaca, snapdragon, stock, heliotrope, marigold and salvia.

Nasturtium, love-lies-bleeding, Joseph's coat, celosia, alyssum, California poppy, calendula, love-in-a-mist and hollyhock are suggested by the Ferry Seed Institute for growth in poor soil.

Heavy soil containing clay is good for sweet peas, pansies, stocks, carnations, scabiosas, snapdragons and most of the popular perennials.

The following prefer a soil of light texture:

Petunia, Portulaca, celosia, hollyhock, love-in-a-mist, annual phlox, calliopsis, nicotiana and all the climbers.

In garden plots that are partially shaded grow calendula, balsam, mignonette, pansy and vinca.

King Coal

Statistics disclose a most unusual finding. Since the American colonies formed a country of their own in 1776, mined coal tops in value that of mined silver and gold. Since that year coal mined in the United States—up to last year—had a market value of $41,271,000,000.

This is about six times the value of all the gold and silver mined in this country during the same period. The produced coal value was enough to pay the government's current debt in full and still be $5,000,000,000 to the good.

The hand of FRIENDS

To reach for the telephone and call a distant friend... just for old time's sake... is one of those small but thoughtful acts which keep friendship alive. It disproves the cynical saying, "Out of sight, out of mind." It is the very hand of friendship reaching across the miles. And it gives the person at the other end of the wire one of the pleasantest of all human emotions... the satisfaction of knowing that, although far away, he still lives in the heart of an old friend.

HOW MANY OF THESE DESIRABLE features HAVE YOU IN YOUR PRESENT LAMP?

SPECIAL 2-LIGHT BULB
A single lamp bulb for two different degrees of light—100, 200 and 300 candle power. You can get the light you want for any seeing task.

SHADE WITH WHITE LINING
Scientifically designed to give maximum efficiency. This shade has a white (or ivory) lining which reflects light instead of absorbing it. A large opening at the top and bottom permits plenty of light to diffuse throughout the room.

DIFFUSING BOWL TO SOFTEN LIGHT
A diffusing bowl under the shade throws part of the light upward to the ceiling. It is then reflected back and spread over a large area, providing room-wide light that is soft and pleasant, without glare. Harsh shadows are eliminated.

If you want easy, comfortable seeing, 55 to 50 footcandles of light are none too much for reading, writing, studying, sewing and other everyday seeing tasks. The ordinary floor and table lamp in an average home probably furnishes only 5 to 10 footcandles. Supplement them with a modern new 3-light lamp... one with all the features shown above! These new lamps are surprisingly inexpensive.

YOU OWE YOUR EYES the very best of lighting—to guard against eye-strain and fatigue. Because eyes are slow to complain, because they try to adapt themselves to unsatisfactory conditions we frequently abuse them without realizing it.

Good lighting is a comfort that costs little money. You can afford to give your eyes good lighting for every seeing task. In the living room, be sure that there is a reading lamp beside every easy chair, and at each end of the sofa, in addition to the light furnished by the ceiling fixture or wall brackets. (Theshades on your reading lamps should be light-colored inside to reflect the maximum amount of light. A dark shade "soaks up" light.) At a child's study desk, one of the new I.E.S. study lamps, using a 150-watt bulb, will provide good illumination. In the kitchen, use a 100 or 150-watt lamp in the ceiling fixture, and a 60-watt lamp over the range, the sink, and the work areas. In the bathroom, use a 100-watt lamp in the ceiling fixture, and a 40 or 60-watt lamp on each side of the mirror.

If in doubt about any phase of your home lighting, please feel free to call in a Detroit Edison Home Lighting Advisor. He will give you helpful advice on your lighting problems. There is no charge for this service.

CERTIFIED SEED
Farmers are being exposed to the Belgian oats in many sections of the state. The Belgian oat has not been tested by our station but will be this year. It is interesting in this connection to note that a new named variety is periodically sprung on us before there has been a chance to test it. Back in 1921 the sale of Victory oats at $3.00 per bushel was quite prevalent. When the experimental station tested them for three years against Worthy and Wolverine they found there was no significant difference. About two years ago the Star oat was placed on the market selling for around $4.00 a bushel. Tests show that when grown under Michigan climatic conditions they were worth as much for seed as was the Wolverine variety and no more. The sample of Belgian oats had a test weight of 45 lbs. a bushel. However these oats had been carefully clipped and screened. The station has treated some of our certified Wolverine oats in the same way, and the test weight on these oats has been increased to 44.3 lbs. The growers of this state must be constantly reminded that the climatic conditions are different from those of European countries from which these varieties periodically come.

Nobody ever made a fortune growing oats in Michigan but there may have been money made by some one selling imported oats for seed.

THE COUNTY ROADS
When the final figures are available they will undoubtedly show that the heavy rains of February 12 and 13 caused damage to the roads far in excess of any other storm in the history of the county. All county trucks and men as well as a number of hired trucks and about one hundred WPA workers have been & still are busy filling washouts and much work remains to be done.

The damage was especially heavy in the northern part of the county where many roads were impassable. There still are many places in the county where roads are flooded and due to cold weather and in some cases poor drainage, the water is slow in receding. Extra precaution when driving will necessary for some time to come.

The Stockbridge Board of Commerce sent a delegation to Owosso on Thursday last to meet with other delegations interested in getting M-47 extended across the state from the Ohio line.

The Howell High School Debating Team won the Tri-County debating championship and will meet the team from Northern High School in Flint in March. This team won the state-championship last year.

Harry Apple, 51, of Saline, was crushed to death by a bull at the York State Hospital farm near Ypsilanti last Wednesday afternoon.

A $50,000 stock of liquor and wine was destroyed when the state liquor store on West Huron St., in Ann Arbor burned last Thursday.

Work has started on a federal WPA project of leveling, grading and clearing the new 7 and one half acre high school athletic field at Manchester. The total cost will be $10,926 of which the federal government will pay $7,916. There will be a quarter mile cinder track, football, base ball diamond, tennis court and soft ball diamond.

The cost of maintenance per inmate at the Southern Michigan prison last year was 92c per day. This is an increase as in 1935 it was 78.8c and in 1935 71.77c. The decrease in the number of inmates is blamed for the increased cost. The prison now has 4,365 inmates. In 1935 there were 5,035 inmates.

More cattle are owned in Michigan the past year than in the previous year. This increase is about two percent. Sheep and hogs have decreased and horses and mules are about the same.

Dundee high school for the second time won the basket ball title in the Huron Valley high school league, taking all eight games.

BLACK FEATHER

He ended with the question directed at Standing Cloud and the old chief rose quickly to his feet, amidst a growing tumult of voices. Black Beaver was up, as well, and crying to be heard, but with a majestic, silencing gesture, Standing Cloud stayed him and checked the confusion of voices.

"The little trader has spoken!" he cried. "The little trader has said he will do things which we can see with our own eyes. If the little trader's medicine is greater than Black Beaver's will we not be pleased to see it, my children?"

They would be pleased to see it, indeed! Cries of approval resounded. Short harangues followed. Rodney declared that he would start at dawn, so all might see, and turned to watch Rickman speak lowly and energetically with Black Beaver, urging the magician to some further strategy.

CHAPTER VII

Night again, and Rodney Shaw made his simple camp beside the headwaters of the Laughing Musquash.

Camp, for him, meant a fire and a cleared place in which to lay his blanket. Not to lay his body. Just the blanket. A blanket spread half upon the ground and mounded up with branches to the size of a man's body and the balance spread across this hummock which would appear to vengeful eyes in the faint glow from embers as the figure of a man asleep.

While he smoked in triumph with the old men last night, he had watched Burke Rickman's face. He had seen the man stalk, finally, to his canoe with defeat gnawing at his pride. And he knew what to expect.

Fine opportunity, this, for a trader outgeneraled as Rickman had been! A chance for the attainment of a triple objective with a single blow. With Shaw gone, vengeance would be his, trade would be secure for the company beyond any possible challenge, and with Shaw unreturned from this errand into Windigo country, the influence of Black Beaver, already bought and paid for by Burke Rickman, would never again in that generation be questioned.

Just before sundown Rodney came to the deposit of white clay. He filled the square of sheeting he had brought with him, bound it to a package with thongs, and, in the last of daylight, made his camp which was to be no camp.

At some little distance, back against the bole of a tree, flintlock across his knees, he sat down to await what he told himself might be the most momentous interval of his life.

Rodney, even with the conviction that his life would be sought before dawn, dozed; wakened . . . dozed . . . wakened again with a start.

No sound, and yet an awareness of near danger spread through him like fire. He felt the skin of his back creeping and softly, slowly, making not the slightest rustle, he rose to his feet, rifle at ready.

His camp fire still glowed. He could see, from where he stood, the blanket folded over its deceptive pile of boughs. But not a sound.

And then suddenly a man stood before him, an outline of darkness against darkness. Vague, indistinct, unreal.

But the click of a hammer was not unreal! It was like a shot itself in contrast to the silence of the night and Rodney could discern then a kneeling figure strained forward and the faint gleam of light from the embers was caught on the barrel of a rifle as it swung into position.

He went blind with rage for an instant and heard himself cry out as the other rifle cracked and he fired blindly, wildly and knew he had missed when a gun clattered to rock and the vague figure swayed and lunged toward him.

He threw himself forward, grappling for the man's throat. A fist bashed into his mouth, throwing him to one side. He floundered to his knees and grappled again. His hand clutched Rickman's powder horn and jerked it loose and dropped it as he swung for better hold.

Rickman hurled himself on Rodney, bearing him down, and they rolled on the ledge. Fingers had Shaw's throat, now, holding him briefly while the other hand rummaged for a knife. But Rodney shook off the grip and prisoned the fumbling hand; rolled over; was free. Shaw worked a foot behind Rickman's, a hip against his hip. One hand over a shoulder and on the throat, the other encircling the man's waist, he heaved with all his strength and slowly his enemy yielded, fighting the leverage, making ragged sounds.

But he could not break the hold, could not stand against it. He did twist from Shaw's grip as he fell, though, and went sideways and down, over the rim of the ledge, disappearing from sight as Shaw poised to spring.

With a cry Rickman struck the water and Rodney, teetering on the edge, strained his eyes to mark the place where he would emerge. He heard, but could not see. The man gasped hoarsely as he came up but he began to swim at once.

Seconds passed for Shaw, dragging out painfully as the fear that the man would escape him became manifest.

"You wolverine!" he cried. "You dog, Rickman! . . . While a man sleeps, you'd . . ."

He stilled his own breathing for an instant and heard Rickman crashing through the forest, making downstream, far enough away to make pursuit futile.

And now Shaw returned to his establishment with half a hundred-weight of white, smooth clay in a package, with hunters trooping through his gate to stare at this burden and chatter about it and, finally, touch, with old men and young men overstepping natural reticence to make voluble protestations of friendship.

"That Is the Important Matter, Major!"

That was Rodney Shaw's hour of triumph. He had discredited the jessakid, and more. He had lifted himself in the eyes of these natives to a figure that would go down in song and story.

And in the house of the other trader was only black and murderous despair.

No Indians except that handful which had accepted his credits appeared before Rickman to beg tobacco and wheedle further presents. The place was all but deserted by natives and his men went about the tasks of repair to which they had been assigned with hushed voices and frightened glances at the commander's quarters.

Rickman considered this and that: night raid, ambush, long waits for a chance shot from a distance. None would do. Shaw was no fool. He would not expose himself or go unguarded, now. And, in a few days, his brigade would arrive and he would have men in plenty to protect him.

His face writhed in agony as he thought of those oncoming canoes. A week of trading and the Pillagers would be obligated beyond repair. So long as Shaw lived and was free to meet and greet hunters—

So long as the man was free! Then he stretched, as a man will who is suddenly at peace after prolonged trouble. And he laughed.

Rickman sat down after his laughter, and drew paper and quill and ink before him and began to write, slowly and at length. Then, staring through the paneless window, he saw Conrad Rich across the enclosure and summoned him with a shout.

"Yes, Burke?"

"There'll be a canoe leave to-night," the trader said. "Four men. Select them from the best. Antoine will be in charge."

"A canoe? Tonight? For Michilimackinac?"

"That! And by way of Green Bay. With the current behind, it will be a quicker march."

"But . . . but . . . I don't . . ."

"No, you wouldn't even guess! It's this, Rich: the upstart trader is a fugitive. Back yonder they've only guessed his destination, it's likely. This letter to MacIver—tapping the paper—"It makes guessing unnecessary. And what else it contains makes impressive the necessity of having the law reach even to here!"

So a light canoe left the lake of the Pillagers and went swiftly down the Mississippi and on the third day after its departure Rodney Shaw's canoe arrived.

Goods were hustled ashore and into the trading room and Indians came hurrying staring much and crowding greatly and talking in high-pitched, excited voices. Their futures lay wrapped in those travel-stained packages.

In the morning trading began, with hunters and their families thronging the stockade through all the hours of daylight and for long after darkness had fallen.

They moved about eyeing this, fingering that. Little offered was new; the great bulk of the goods were staple, and after the inspection a pipe was lighted and, squatting on the floor about Shaw, while Basile and others brought goods, the debts were accepted. Tobacco was passed but Shaw shook his head firmly at requests for whiskey. When the trading was finished, whiskey would again be passed; not before.

For days this procedure was routine. For hours at a time Rodney sat on the floor of his trading room, bargaining, arguing.

"Net thread, my brother?" he might say. "Four plus of net thread. That is all. The ball of thread is the skin. Skin for skin. Or."

"No, Zhing-wauk. No spirits. No more than the taste when we end our trading. At the grand medicine I will give my brothers plenty. Not before."

After the fifth day following Basile's arrival, few hunters remained near the establishment and Rodney's men were busy with preparing the place for the rigorous seasons to follow. But some Indians remained nearby and among these was the Weasel, once ejected from the post but, in this period of Shaw's good will toward the band as a whole, tolerated within the stockade.

He was given no attention, shouldered out of the way, while Shaw dealt with more dependable individuals.

Then the Weasel would seat himself at a distance and scratch his back with a stick and lament.

Each day he performed so, but each night he paddled from his lodge across the lake to the company fort and met Burke Rickman and whispered what he had learned.

And so Rickman paced his enclosure and drank and fumed and counted the time, reckoned the miles his letter to MacIver would be borne that day, estimated the weeks it would be before the opposition fort would find itself without a leader.

The canoe reached Mackinac. Rickman's letter was handed at last to Donald MacIver. And the Scot, and other company heads read and frowned and set their minds to the task in hand.

MacIver climbed the hill and sat with the major and the grizzled old officer, veteran of many an Indian battle, was far less comfortable than he would have been under fire of hostile savages.

He grumbled and protested and roared. But he gave in, knowing a surrender in the field, in such an instance, was a lesser hazard than a disturbance in Washington, and a canoe with Capes, the lieutenant, and four soldiers embarked that day, the warrant for Rodney Shaw safe in an official dispatch case.

And then, indeed, the major was in for it.

Flying up the hill to the fort, Annette Leclerc burst in upon the old soldier. And the major My-deared and There-thered, and paced before his desk and pulled at his mustache and harrumphed as he admitted that, yes, soldiery was on the way to bring young Rodney Shaw back to answer to a charge of murder.

"But it is not so, major! It is common talk in the town that the thing was infamously gotten up to delay Rodney! Your own surgeon has said the man died from no knife wound!"

"But the warrant exists!" the major thundered. "And Leslie's man Giles does not deny the story that Shaw and his employer quarreled over the goods. What can I do?"—And his boots went clump, clump, clump as the lovely Annette dropped her face into her hands and wept.

And after a time he patted her hand and his gruff voice grew almost gentle.

"There! . . . That's better, my dear! . . . And what is that in your hand? A feather? A black ostrich plume . . . Oh, I did not know it was some secret!"—as, flushing quickly, Annette thrust the remnant of the black plume into her bodice and began to talk of Giles . . .

So down the hill again as the sun sank went Annette, dismayed but purposeful; and along narrow streets. And a few who happened near felt their eyes bulge as the mademoiselle walked alone on the beach with the gnarled and leathery Giles, now an employee in the great warehouse . . .

At midnight the major roused at the rapping and descended to his door and there was Annette.

"Giles will make affidavit!" she gasped. "He tells that Leslie gave his goods to Rodney without reservation! He tells before witnesses, and he will say so to the marshal and the justice!"

"So all is settled!" boomed the major. "So when young Shaw returns he will be vindicated and free to—"

"Returns? Returns?" The sharpness of her cry, so in contrast to her look of a moment before, caused the major to hesitate. "That is the important matter, major! That he be not returned! Do you not understand?"—with an impatient stamp of a tiny foot. "Burke Rickman is there. If Rodney is taken from his establishment by soldiery, even for a brief absence, his trade will be gone! It is all Rickman asks, major! Another message must be sent, recalling the lieutenant and voiding the warrant!"

Annette clasped her hands beneath her trembling chin in an ecstasy of hope which went out like a snuffed candle when the major threw up his arms in a helpless gesture. Because, that day, an order had arrived calling a detachment to Detroit and the garrison would be so drained of men that it would be impossible to spare others for such an errand as was proposed.

Indeed, he'd write an order to recall Capes! He'd write an order that would bring Capes back to his post without even stops for food and rest! On his honor, that order would be something to read; he'd write an order to peel a man's ears, but he could not send it. There was no chance . . . no chance whatever. But let any company or individual come to him again and try to wheedle him into pulling chestnuts from the fire and see what happened. He'd skin them alive, he would . . . But this time nothing could be done. Nothing whatever . . .

And so, as eastern stars faded, Annette went slowly down the hill, cheeks as wet with tears as the grass was with dew, the black feather tight in a hand which clenched desperately.

Nightfall. And a canoe making its weary way toward Rickman's establishment, stared at in the gathering dusk by men at the stockade gate.

"The fort!" came a voice from the canoe, as paddles ceased dipping. "Is this the Astor establishment?"

"Yes! Who asks?"

"Capes, from Mack—"

"Ah, Capes! Capes, at last! Land here, Capes! Here, you men, help them! So. Quickly, but easy . . . Ah, Capes!"

A Colorful Luncheon Set

WE HAVE been hearing a good deal about American handcrafts lately. Of course, quilts have always been important among our needlework handcrafts. So many readers have written asking me for more of the old fashioned embroidery stitches that were used in making crazy patchwork that I have collected dozens and dozens of these quaint stitches from old quilts.

This gay little double house effect built upon blanket stitches with chain stitches flaunting from all gables was the invention of someone's great-grandmother and I couldn't resist using it for a luncheon set of light blue linen. It originally adorned a light blue satin patch in a quilt and all the other colors indicated here in the sketch are the original colors.

All the strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery thread were used for the luncheon set. The mats were hemmed first and then the blanket stitches were taken through the hems to make a firm edge as shown at the lower right. All the other stitches used are clearly illustrated. Just the edge stitches without the little houses were used for the napkins. Many more authentic old patchwork stitches are illustrated in a new leaflet which is free upon request with the booklet offered herewith.

Cleaning Hair Brushes.—To remove grease and dirt from hair brushes and combs, wash them in a quart of water to which a teaspoon of ammonia is added; rinse and dry in the sun.

Fluffy Meringue.—If you like fluffy meringue for your pies, add a teaspoon of baking powder to the well-beaten whites of two eggs before adding the sugar.

Sweet Omelet.—A tablespoon of sugar added to the regular omelet batter will produce a sweet omelet that is especially popular with youngsters.

Washing Parsley.—Parsley washed with hot water keeps its flavor better and is easier to chop.

Glowing Lamps.—Here's a tip for country readers who use gas or lamps. Never wash the glass globes as it makes them crack. Sprinkle methylated spirit on a clean soft rag, rub it on the globes, leave for a few minutes, and then polish. They'll be like new.

Faltbooting, New Sport in America, Is Old in Many European Countries

An outdoor sport, new to America but practiced for years in many European countries, made its debut in New York recently when a special train was chartered to take over 200 persons interested in faltbooting to the Connecticut river to enjoy the introduced sport.

The faltboot originated in Germany, observes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News. It is a folding boat which, when assembled, combines many of the features of an Eskimo kayak with those of our Indian canoe. It is made of rubberized sail cloth, waterproof canvas and sticks, and can be folded into a couple of bundles about as large as a suitcase. The "boat" can be assembled in a few minutes and holds water-tight compartment fore and aft. A cockpit in the center will hold one or two persons. It has a low center of gravity and will not tip easily and can breast rapids, small falls and white waters found in swift-flowing streams. It has no rudder and is guided solely by double-bladed paddles. For shooting rapids the boat is equipped with a spray cover forward which can be fastened around the waists of the paddlers. An inflated cushion and back pads absorb the shock of riding bounding waves or shooting rapids.

The advocates of this sport say that in Europe the sport has advanced to such a stage that many rivers have been completely charted and special guide books issued for faltboot fans. As a sport it is exciting and healthful and spills are frequent, but the boats help keep the over-turned occupants afloat until they reach shore or touch river bottom.

Water enthusiasts should take kindly to this sport, for there are many fine, swift-flowing streams where faltbooting would be found at its best.

setting minimum wages for concerns engaged in interstate commerce. E. sub-committee may be appointed to try to harmonize the many pending measures. One of the chief obstacles in the Committee's path is the opposition of the American Federation of Labor to the establishment of a board with discretionary powers as suggested by the administration. The AF of L wants Congress to set up a national minimum wage of 40 cents an hour and a maximum work week of 40 hours to regulate all interstate business.

Estate Value
Paper money has its birthplace and graveyard in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving at Washington. While in one part of the Bureau presses are rolling out more than $18,000,000 a day in new money, the souvenir stand in the entrance is selling pulp models of the capitol, Washington Monument, Liberty Bell and silhouettes George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Martha Washington, made from old money that has been reduced to pulp in the Treasury macerators at the rate of $10,000,000 a day. The pulp souvenirs of Washington represent former money value ranging from $1,000 for the silhouettes to $10,000 for the capitol and the Monument. They sell for 25 cents to 50 cents for the Monument with a thermometer on the side. When the amount of old money to be destroyed is too much for the macerators, Treasury officials order it shoveled into an incinerator. In the macerators water and acid to destroy the silken fibers reduce the once proud greenbacks to a grayish pulp that would be perfect for relief maps made by school children.

A., Lansing, starting at 12:30 o'clock.
Melville McPherson of Kent county will be the principal speaker and Mrs. B. D. Niles of Jackson is in charge of arrangements. All candidates for the Republican nomination for governor have been invited.
Arrangements have been made to have tickets available in each community or they may be obtained of Mrs. Earl Logue, 539 S. Cedar, Lansing.

NEW AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM MEETING SET

The recently enacted farm bill together with its effect upon the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program will be discussed at a meeting in east Lansing this week.

Among those who will explain the program procedure will be two men from Washington, Mr. John B. Wilson, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and Mr. Warburton, of the Extension Service. The state their representatives, and the state agricultural conservation committee extension service specialists will be present at the explanation of the new program procedure.

The meeting will be followed by district meetings to be held throughout the state in order that county committeemen may become familiar with the new program.

The new program provides, as in previous programs for soil conservation and in addition, the systematic storage of food and feed surpluses or big crop years for use in years of shortage is encouraged by the use of loans.

PLATE FOR '38 TAKE 1,500 TONS OF STEEL

Motor vehicles of the state will be carrying 1500 tons of Michigan steel in the form of license plates in 1938, an increase of about one-third over tonnage in previous years. The 10,000 gallons of enamel covering these plates weighs about 40 tons.

The increased purchase of Michigan steel and paint arises through decision of Leon D. Case, Secretary of State, to substitute metal half year permits for the windshield stickers of previous years. About one plate in three is a half year permit. Stickers were purchased in previous years from an Illinois firm.

The 1937 legislature added a 25 cents to the cost of half year permits, to cover bookkeeping and other costs. Metal plates are made at the State Prison of Southern Michigan for about 11 cents a pair, and provide much needed prison labor; the stickers cost about 4 cents each.
