National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington—Congress has just passed another relief appropriation for the current year. This, like the earlier vote of funds, was done at the request of the President. The new sum is $250,000,000. Since the first appropriation for the current year was a billion and a half, we now find that federal relief during the current fiscal year will have cost at least $1,750,000,000. It may be added that the sum mentioned is in addition to local charity, community chests, etc., and also that it has been, or is being, spent in a period five years after we were told that the nation was about to be remade under New Deal ideals.

Now, it is a rather far cry from relief, the care of the aged and infirm, the destitute, to the question of politics. That is, it appears only to be a great gap between those two phases of national life. I insist it is very close; that there is no gap at all. I reach that conclusion because never before in history has there been such use of basic economics as in the last four or five years. That is to say, politicians have turned to questions of economics for their political buncome—and it ought to be added that when a politician tries to do something with fundamental questions, just there begins a grand mess.

All of which brings us to the point of this discussion. When President Roosevelt went into the White House in March, 1933, he was confronted with probably the most unfavorable conditions, insofar as business conditions were concerned, that any President ever has faced.

He called for a New Deal in handling the situation and he obtained almost unanimous support. Indeed, as we look back at that situation, the support was too nearly unanimous.

He had no opposition to point out weaknesses of what was proposed by the responsible officials.

I think I recall having written at that time that a stronger opposition would have been good for the country.

Some of the pitfalls would have been avoided, I am sure, if congress had not been so subservient and if the President had not yielded so completely to the theories of advisers who had no practical experience.

The people of the nation were in a mood to listen to anyone. They heard new phrases of what can and should be done—the more abundant life, the economic royalists, the crushers of the poor, and on and on.

But the trouble with the professor-advisers was that they ignored or did not know of another side to the story. In short, they believed that human nature had changed overnight and that a nation could be managed or directed or ordered as an individual. It has taken several years to re-establish natural facts and natural laws, but they seem now to be approaching that re-establishment through the processes that normally must be followed in a nation, as distinguished from an individual.

So, what do we have? I think the answer is that we have an administration headed by a man who is the victim of the advisers he selected. I believe it can be said that politically President Roosevelt is just as uncertain about where he is going as is the rank and file of citizens about where the nation is going. But he selected those advisers and, for the most part, continues to give them his confidence. They are still on the job. And in no better way has it been shown that they are utterly incapable of meeting national problems than is shown in the business of relief. Relief is more than just the care of those who must have help. Relief is a condition reflecting other conditions. The President and his theorists, therefore, must be charged directly with having failed. We have almost as many unemployed or under government aid as we had when Mr. Roosevelt took office.

I suppose someone will write to me asking what can be, or what should be done

Need Drastic Remedy about it. Anticipating that query, I will attempt to answer now, but I want to illustrate it.

A friend of mine has been ill for several years with an intestinal ailment. Physicians to the number of a dozen or more have studied the case. Finally, the use of a drastic remedy, a potent and almost poisonous drug, was prescribed. The doctor began by ordering the patient to take three drops, only three, at the start. The dose was increased gradually. In the last few weeks, my friend has taken fifty drops of the drug each day.

There is no assurance that the ailment will be eliminated. There can not be a determination for many months because the treatment is entirely new in medical annals. Thus far, there has been no appreciable change in the patient's condition. But the point is, after all, that a professional man who has devoted years to the study of a science would not attempt to cure a basic condition without first providing opportunity for the human body to adjust itself to the new conditions.

Now, I am somewhat old fashioned and hold to the belief that a whole nation of people, after all, will make progress if given the chance to do so. I further believe that their collective reasoning in the end will be right. They can not, however, be turned inside out unless there has been some preparation for the ordeal and they can not take a dose which is poisonous in quantity any more than my friend, the individual, could take it and live. In making that statement, I must make clear my conviction that some of the New Deal prescriptions were needed. A few of them were badly needed. On the other hand, I think it can be fairly asserted that a good many of them were never needed, never were usable or workable. They were poisons not intended by nature to be so administered to the national body.

We can go further. It can be said that no individual who is ill can work efficiently, if at all. That is true of our economic life which includes business. And business is everywhere—from the smallest general store at the crossroads near my Missouri birthplace to the gigantic Marshall Field company in Chicago, General Motors in New York, Aluminum company in Pittsburgh, or hundreds of thousands of others. Business can not get going at its proper pace if it is ill.

The business of the country has something more than its own body, however, as a problem to constantly watch. That general store that I mentioned may not be much concerned about Washington affairs, but it feels the impact of things done at Washington whether it recognizes them or not. The larger concerns, of course, feel Washington actions much more directly. So, in addition to the influence of markets, buying and selling of or among the general public, business is influenced by what is done here in Washington, and that may be bad medicine or good medicine.

Let us take just one or two examples of what I mean. One of the Biblical proverbs of the New Deal was the necessity for a law providing what the theorists were pleased to call "social security."

That includes old age pensions. New Deal campaigners sang many beautiful songs about caring for the aged, and certainly there are millions who have needed help. When it came to practical application of the plan, however, the boys started looking for the necessary money. Thus arose the so-called payroll tax for unemployment and old age pensions.

It sounded workable to many persons. It was a thing for the future

Practical Problem and there was not of where those who were to pay the tax would get the money. The time has arrived, however, where the beautiful theory is a perfectly enormous practical problem.

The first year's "take" by the government amounts to something over a billion dollars. Some of it, almost half, comes out of the pay envelopes of the workers; the remainder comes out of the pockets of the employers. It is turned over to "Washington" and when money gets into government hands it becomes unproductive. The result has been that in the last year there has been taken away from its owners more than a billion dollars that would have added at least a billion dollars to the buying power of the country if it had been left with the proper owners. That is one of the big reasons for the Roosevelt depression, as distinguished from the Hoover depression obtaining when the present administration took over.

COED STOCKINGS

KEEP THEM POOR

It takes a pair a week to keep a college girl supplied with stockings if one takes the word of the clothing and textile classes at Michigan State College in which her survey was made.

The reason?

Fashion places emphasis on the wearing of sheer silk stockings, says Julia Tear, assistant professor in textiles, who conducted the questionaires.

Those that buy chiffon were 36.7 per cent of the classes, 42 per cent purchased semi service and 21.8 per cent wear service weight hose. Prices paid show a similar rating as 36.8 per cent pay more than $1.15 a pair 34.5 per cent between $1 and $1.15, 23.5 per cent pay from 79 to 89 cents and 5.2 per cent found usable hose that cost less than 69 cents.

The 2,000 women students at the Michigan State College represent well dressed coeds. They are not slaves to fashion.

Yet Miss Tear from her textile classes draws an interesting sidelight.

The cost of hose is very high when compared with other garments. While so many girls pay $1 to $1.15 for a pair of hose that will wear only a short time, these same girls often pay $5 or even as little as $2.98 for a dress that is expected to serve a much longer time. That's where the necessity of following the dictates of fashions often perplexes fathers and mothers who are at home paying the bills.

GUNDY ON TAX SALE

Auditor General, George T. Gundry, asked the State press to aid in correcting some misinformation concerning the May tax sale.

Gundy stated that he believed that most of the difficulty lay in a misunderstanding of tax sale procedure by the tax payers.

He said, "If your taxes are paid in full, or pastdue installments are paid even though advertised, and even though offered for sale, no injury can be done to your property interests. The law protects you. If you hold proper tax receipts no law in Michigan will permit a cloud upon your tax title for tax reasons. You do not need to take your receipts to any one. The county treasurer (or Auditor General) who issued the receipts will withhold your property from the sale. If your taxes are not paid, go to your County Treasurer for information; no other County or Township official can possibly give you accurate information or advice".

The Auditor General explained that the tax sale preparations were now completed and the compiled records were in the hands of the publishers in every county in the state. He also reminded the taxpayers that they may still pay their taxes up to midnight of May 2nd, the day before the sale.

Fred Pipp and Frank Robbins suffered broken legs and Dan Stewart badly injured at Brighton when a cream separator blew up in the National Food Products factory there.

5 REASONS

WHY YOU SHOULD HAVE TELEPHONE SERVICE:

1—CONVENIENCE You can order groceries in bad weather and run countless errands by telephone, without leaving the house.

2—PROFIT A telephone often is helpful in securing employment. And it helps save carfare and driving expense.

3—PLEASURE With a telephone, you can enjoy frequent chats with friends, and they can reach you easily when parties and "get-togethers" are planned.

4—PROTECTION In case of fire, sickness, burglary or other emergency, aid can be summoned instantly only by telephone.

5—PRESTIGE A telephone of your own is both a social and business asset. And it eliminates the embarrassment of asking to use a neighbor's telephone.

Philathea Notes

This is the week of the business meeting of our class. It was decided Sunday to hold the meeting at the church parlor at the regular time, March 9th, for the usual pot-luck supper.

Philathea should help spread the news of the coming church night on March 14, at 6:30 p. m. for supper followed by the program. Pot-luck and everybody invited.

In our lesson on Sunday we saw how Jesus' work was hindered by the unbelief of the people in Nazareth, his home city and how in our own case fear of criticism prevents much worth while Christian Service. It was brought out that constructive criticism can be a help in our work.

On next Lord's Day our topic will be, "Feeding the Hungry" with a study of a passage from Mark again, chapter 6, verses 30-44. Golden Text "Give Ye Them to eat."

The response to our Missionary plea was gratifying on Sunday. The Benevolence Treasurer reports one cent a meal box brought in one personal gift; and a $5.00 offering of $10.00.

We wish to express our thanks to the Telephone operator, Pinckney

Fire Dept. and all others who so willingly assisted in saving our home from fire Monday. Your services are deeply appreciated.

THOUSANDS ANNUALLY

In the rush to serve the public before the March 1st deadline for the purchase of 1938 automobile license plates, Department of State officials became impressed with the apparent carelessness with which thousands of motorists handled their car titles.

Annually great numbers of people are delayed in buying plates until they can locate their titles. This year an unusually large number of persons applied for duplicate titles, being totally unable to locate the original ones. In the last 15 days of February more than 5,000 duplicate titles were issued by the Department of State.

Motor vehicle owners are deprived from exercising ordinary legal rights in connection with their cars, if they lack titles. They may not sell them, trade them in, or even give them away without titles to prove their ownership.

Complications sometimes follow in the wake of applications for duplicate titles. A comparison of signature on the two applications may reveal a discrepancy which cannot be ignored; three applications in February disclosed that, innocently or not, persons had acquired stolen cars. The police were notified and asked to investigate.

Duplicate titles cost $1, as do original titles. Every application for a duplicate must be accompanied by a statement as to what happened to the original. Most people merely put it tersely as, "It was lost".

Also grant flowage rights covering the following pieces of property adjacent to the present Mill Pond.

No illness is taken less seriously nor neglected so often as the common cold. Strange, too, when one considers how many serious illnesses are often directly attributable to a cold. At the very first sign of a cold, proper care should be taken.

The wise thing to do, of course, is to follow a few simple rules of the resistance necessary to ward off health so that the body can build up colds entirely. A few of them are:

1. Eat sensibly. Include plenty of milk, fresh fruits, and vegetables in your diet.

2. Get sufficient rest.

3. Keep kidneys and bowels in good working order.

4. Drink at least six glasses of water a day.

5. Keep your feet dry—wear your rubbers.

6. Keep away from persons with a cold.

And Rickman ran into water to his knees, clasped the lieutenant's hand with a fervor which matched the tone of his words.

"Up the lake shore the glow of a great fire stained tree tops and spread across the water, lacquering it in black and gold. Drums sounded and the nasal voices of native women singing in chorus reached them, punctuated by shrill whoops. The grand medicine was in progress. The rum which Rodney had promised was taking hold on hearts and tongues.

Rickman explained this to Capes' query and rubbed his hands.

"He'll be there," he said. "The renegade, he'll be watching the dance! A fitting moment to drag him to answer this charge, Capes!"

"Tonight? He doesn't suspect pursuit, does he? My men are worn. Morning will do, surely, and—"

"You may have been seen! And if word reached Shaw that soldiery is at hand? What then, Capes?"

"But to march among the Indians with muskets? They're drunk, by the sounds. It might mean disaster, Rickman!"

"You mistake my meaning. We can go to Shaw's gate by following the shore. The place will be guarded. I'll reveal myself and tell the guard I want word with Shaw. That will bring him. Yes, and on the sun!"

He shrugged his shoulders and lifted upturned palms in significant gesture.

"We may as well be done with this, I suppose," Capes said and paused because a figure was running toward him up the slope; a small, cloaked figure.

"Lieutenant Capes? Lieutenant Capes?"

"A woman? Calling for him? Here in this wilderness fort?"

They'd had no warning whatever that Annette Leclerc was here, that she was running breathlessly up the slope, once she learned Capes' whereabouts.

"Lieutenant Capes?" she cried again but it was Burke Rickman who spoke.

"Annette!"

She came to a halt before them, one hand against the door frame for support, the other holding the long, maroon cloak close about her throat. Silence. Dumbfounded silence. And Capes, confused by the tableau, stammered:

"Ma'm'selle! Where did you . . . what brings you . . ."

"Orders, Lieutenant! I bring you orders from the commandante!"

She fumbled within the cloak as she spoke and brought out and thrust toward him a limp, frayed packet.

"Orders? What orders do you bring me, Ma'm'selle?"

"Orders calling you back," she said in a whisper, as if the completion of her errand had drained all the remaining strength from her body. "Orders revoking the orders that . . . brought you here."

She swayed then despite her hand on the wall and might have fallen had not Capes stepped quickly toward her, shoving the stupefied Rickman from his way, and encircled her shoulders with an arm.

Rickman's mouth opened but no words came.

"From the beginning this charge against him has been known to be absurd," she said easily. "But still, with the persuasion and persistence put behind the effort to ruin Rodney Shaw, the officials have not had the courage to follow any other course until Giles spoke."

"Giles?"

"Giles! The man has been as frightened of company vengeance as any other. But when it became known that Rodney had bested you here, Burke Rickman; when the last unfair move in the cruel game you play was made apparent . . . then forces were brought to bear upon Giles which brought from him the truth."

"Then," she said, "the problem was to overtake you, Lieutenant, and stop this unwarranted and disgraceful arrest. There was none to come. A detachment had been ordered to Detroit. The major could spare no men. Someone had to come and . . . there was no one else." Her voice broke and she swallowed bravely.

"Fools!" moaned Rickman. "It can't be! It's not believable that any such order could have been issued! I demand, Capes, that you read that order!" The other drew himself up. "I read it," he said stiffly, "but not because of your demands, Rickman. Please understand, I know my duty!"

It would peel a man's ears, the major had declared to Annette, and surely it had effect on the ears of this young lieutenant because his ears reddened as he scanned the lines of script.

". . . will disregard order to bring the alleged fugitive Shaw to Michilimackinac . . . will conduct yourself as though you were unaware of traders' contentions . . . will return to this post immediately with no delays for any reason whatsoever . . ."

Capes folded the sheet slowly, thrust it into a tunic pocket. He drew a deep breath, as of relief, and settled his belt decisively.

One of Rickman's hands twitched upward as though a blow had stung him. The lieutenant stepped past him, confronting Annette. He was puzzled, glanced briefly at Rickman, and addressed the girl.

"In a place of contention such as this," he said, "an island encampment seems advisable for a military party. May I . . . may I offer the security of my detachment as a neighbor? Or . . . or are there other plans?"

"I thank you, Lieutenant," she said, her gaze going to Burke Rickman. Then, significantly: "I will follow directly."

Capes hesitated, then bowed and disappeared through the doorway.

CHAPTER VIII

The girl stood there, holding the cloak about her, facing Rickman.

"Annette? This . . . this means what?"

"That at last I can speak truth!" she said, "after these weeks of shame and humiliation. Two great privileges have come to me tonight. The one is that I have repaired, as far as it could be repaired, a great wrong which I did Rodney Shaw. The other is that I can confess to you the falsity of my words at our last meeting. From the hour I struck at Rodney by betraying his plan to you I was in misery. And that morning of your departure, when you came to me for your farewells . . . when I begged you to remain; when I embraced you and kissed you"—with a shudder—"I was only acting a part."

"Acting?"

"Acting, Burke, to save my . . . the man I love."

"All I wanted you to believe that day was that I desired you to stay. I loathed you, I hated you, but I wanted you to delay, that Rodney might have some chance to capture the thing he wanted so!"

She spoke that, slowly, with great intensity.

"So that's your object, eh?" the trader cried, grasping her shoulder.

"So you confess to me your love for this start?" You make this journey to save him and humble me?

Is that it? Well, if that's it—"

"Burke! Let go! You hurt!"

"D'you think I'll let him have you? D'you think I'll let him have you? Why, if it takes the last breath that floods this throat I'll wipe this upstart out and leave for you not the memory of a strutting fool but of a corpse, spoiling in this wilderness!"

"Burke!" Her cry was faint and she writhed in his grasp. His fingers slipped from their grip on her arms, caught the cloak and as she writhed out of it and stumbled free he flung the garment behind him into the room.

"With soldiery here, you'd do that?" she cried and her words stayed him.

"Do you think that after this forced march, the military will return at once?" she taunted. "Men must rest, after such effort. And while they rest, warning will be given. Be assured of that, Burke Rickman. Sufficient warning will be given and protection for decent men will be at hand!"

She backed a step or two, turned, began to walk down the slope and broke into a run.

Annette found Capes awaiting her on the shore.

Would it be distasteful for his party to encamp near her? he asked. She protested that it would be reassuring and comforting.

"Then we'll move out to one of the islands," he said. "And before dawn, we'll leave this place behind!"—thankfully.

She gave him a curious look but, for the time, made no remonstrance . . .

And so a trader paced the beach, ocean seeping through his veins, gnawing his lips, muttering to himself, smiting the sand in helpless spite with his moccasined heels. An enraged beast, this Burke Rickman.

Up and down he paced, heedless of the growing clamor from the gathering of Pillagers. Rickman had not detected the alterations in the sounds from the calumet. The throb of drums, the chants of women, had grown louder and faster with the passage of time. Occasional whoops and yelps had grown to a continuous chorus of boastful cries. And then, of a sudden, it climaxed in an ensemble of screams and screeches and dwindled suddenly to no more than a murmur.

At dusk the drums had begun to sound, women seated in a wide circle about the post and fire, beating the tightly stretched skins with their palms, chanting to the measure they set of the greatness of all Pillagers.

The old men danced into the circle, stomping, bending forward then back, uttering valiant cries, swinging near and nearer the post as they sometimes sang, sometimes shouted to their own greatness.

Younger men trickled in, singing and shouting of their achievements until the space about the fire was filled with prancing, slowly swirling bodies.

Up and up to an unplanned crisis, the savage spectacle pitched itself.

Up and up went the tempo of the orgy; louder the singing, faster the drum beats, broader the boasting.

And now beside the post danced Running Fox, the son of Flat Mouth, beating the ground with his heels, not lifting the balls of his feet.

"Ee-eyah!" he cried and struck the post with his half axe and told of the wolf he had caught with bare hands.

"Ee-eyah!" he screamed and struck again and shouted that he had outrun a frightened deer.

Mongazid sees with a clear eye," he said. "He can never escape the fury of Flat Mouth alone. He was wise to come to the house of the great company. In the trade it is skin for skin. In your trouble it is a life for a life. Open your ears," he said and stepped closer and looked about and spoke softly.

Mongazid listened, betraying no emotion. When Rickman had finished he grunted.

"My life for the little trader's life it is. But the hunters are his friends. The old men are his brothers. Mongazid would not live to come for the three packs of beaver you promise."

The young man could not invade Fort Shaw and slay the master. He could not stalk him where others were about. The problem, then, was to entice Shaw away, to give Mongazid's trade gun a chance beyond observation. And, at the same time, arrange the circumstances so he, Rickman, would be above suspicion . . .

"Wait here," Rickman said grimly. "Let no eye see you. Lie in these bushes and I will come. Flaming Hair will make the way smooth for Mongazid to earn his packs of beaver!"

Conrad Rich rolled from his blanket at Rickman's barked word.

"Into your clothes, man! and get Philippe."

And so three men, one fearful, one bewildered, one silent and intent, went hastily along the shore toward Fort Shaw.

"The guard is alone," Rickman whispered. "He stands there with the gate wide. The place is empty; the others are watching the mourning. Come!"

Indians Linked With East in Trick in War Songs; Japanese Used Same Scheme

Even in their music, American Indians have preserved small clues suggesting oriental ancestry. Not that Indians are to be thought of as descendants from Chinese or Japanese civilization. Their stemming off from an ancestral tree goes far back to Mongolian-type tribes that roamed to the northeast tip of Siberia and thence, from time to time, crossed into the northwest tip of Alaska.

After that they were Americans, and their descendants "Indians." They brought some crafts and customs with them. They learned many new ones in America, and some groups like the Mayas evolved high civilization.

Anthropologists are greatly interested to detect what Indians owed to Asia, and from what parts of that homeland they gleaned their old culture.

Now, it develops that Indians in the Southwest had a psychological trick in war songs, of raising the song a semi-tone as it progressed giving Mongazid opportunity to slip away. And when they had lifted the lolling head and saw that the flow of life was running into sands instead of limbs, the wailing began.

It was that wailing which finally attracted Burke Rickman's attention.

He stared, scowling, toward the scene of wailing and it was then that he made out a canoe coming toward him from the westward, silhouetted against the fire glow.

"Who are you?" Rickman asked.

"Mongazid, trader. I come for the shelter of the company trader's lodge."

Rickman grunted. He owed Mongazid nothing. The youth had refused to trade with him but a few days before.

"Speak quickly, then," he growled.

"I go to the company house because I have poured sand over the son of Flat Mouth, who is the brother of your enemy."

Rickman grunted. "Killed Flat Mouth's son?"

"It is so. It was the dance of the Calumet. Running Fox boasted lies; he took the glory from my song with his lies. When I heard him stealing my great deeds my knife struck deep to his heart. I lay in the darkness a long time. Flat Mouth went to his lodge to meditate while they wailed. Then he came back and stood by his son's body. He made a talk. He said that for killing his son I must bring him three packs of beaver before the leaves come again. If I do not I must bare my breast for his knife. If I do not come for that he will take the life of my brother. The company trader's heart has much room. I come to him to be his slave if he will save me from my enemies who are his enemies. I cannot live alone."

Scowling, Rickman listened. Here was a native in need; here was a hunter whose life was at stake and one in such a strait may be used. Inspiration swept and shooed him, making his mouth dry.

"Mongazid sees with a clear eye," he said. "He can never escape the fury of Flat Mouth alone. He was wise to come to the house of the great company. In the trade it is skin for skin. In your trouble it is a life for a life. Open your ears," he said and stepped closer and looked about and spoke softly.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

Witnesses Irked.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee, which last year investigated widespread espionage in American industry last week resumed hearings and heard Ernst T. Weir, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corporation deny that industry had provoked the recession. The Committee hearings will be resumed this week and will consider serious charges leveled at the Committee by some of the witnesses to the effect that the civil liberties of some of the witnesses had been infringed upon by the refusal of the committee to release them from Committee subpoena that makes them subject to call for future testimony.

Although the House was not in session the Sultan found prompt service.

COMMITTEEMEN ATTEND MEETING OF AAA PROGRAM

Members of the Livingston County Agricultural Conservation Committee attended a meeting on Saturday, of March 5, at Ann Arbor for an explanation of details of the 1938 agricultural Conservation Program, and the changes made in the program in accordance with provisions of the Agricultural Act of 1938, which became a law on February 16, 1938.

The committeemen who attended the meeting relative to the Conservation Program are: Earl Grubb, Chairman, Roy Dillingham, George Kirshman, S. B. Thomas, County Agent, Betty Gartrell, Secretary Treasurer, Josephine Grostick, Mrs. Leona Allen and Mrs. Anna Earl.

State chairman, Maurice A. Doan pointed out that five Michigan counties, Branch, Hillsdale, Lenawee, Monroe and St. Joseph, are included in the commercial corn-producing area, and that if corn marketing quotas are put into effect under the new Farm Act, they could apply only in these counties.

No corn marketing quotas can go into effect under the new Farm Act unless the total supply this fall exceeds approximately 2,800,000,000 bushels and farmers in the commercial area vote approval of quotas by a two thirds vote. No wheat marketing quotas are possible in any event this year unless additional funds are provided with parity payments to wheat producers.

Changes in the 1938 program, line with the New Farm Act, include the addition of wheat to the list of soil-depleting crops for which special acreage allotments are established. The revised program includes a special payment for wheat acreage, as provided earlier for corn & potatoes. The rate of the wheat payment will be 12 cents a bushel on the normal yield for the acreage included in the individual farm adjustment.

The rate of payment for corn planted within the acreage allotment is 10 cents a bushel, on the normal yield for the farm. The rate on potatoes is 3 cents a bushel on each acre planted up to the limit of the farm's potato allotment on the basis of the normal yield for the farm.

On the acreage within the farmers' total soil-depleting allotment under the program that is not planted to wheat, corn, or potatoes, the farmer who cooperates in the program will receive payment of $1.25 per acre with adjustments in the rate for the farm's productivity.

Cooperation will be an advantage to nearly all farmers in the county, Chairman Grubb said. They will receive payments that will help them improve their farm practices and increase the fertility of their farms.

"CONSERVATION"

C. Houston Goudiss

We announce with pride a new feature in this issue, "What You Eat and Why," by C. Houston Goudiss, noted food authority, radio speaker, author and lecturer, famous as the man who knows food "from soil to serving, from table to tissue."

One of these articles will appear each week, and we know housewives and mothers will look forward to them for the accurate, worthwhile information they contain on foods and their relation to health. This is not a recipe column. Mr. Goudiss has designed it to serve as a link between laboratory and layman in the food field, interpreting modern scientific knowledge in the language of the home maker, giving her the elemental facts regarding new discoveries and the part played by food in building and maintaining health.

Every woman wants to know what foods will benefit her family and why, and that is just the information that Mr. Goudiss will give. Watch for the articles each week, make a scrap book of them for ready reference. They contain valuable information every home maker has been wanting.

Politics are beginning to warm up in this county for the fall campaign. Representative Charles P. Adams will we understand be a candidate for a third term. We understand that some of the Republicans are endeavoring to get Thurber Cornell to run against him in the primaries. Judging by the runs Charlie Adams has made in the past it will take a mighty good challenger to beat him. On the Democratic side Ross Robb of Conway is mentioned. Efforts were made to get him to enter in 1936 but he refused.
