March Court Term in Session

Circuit Court Session for March Started last Week. Guilty Pleas are Expected to Shorten this Term Considerably

The March term of Court opened last week. In honor of his 20th birthday anniversary of service in this circuit, Judge Joseph Collins was presented with a bouquet of roses, Judge Willis L. Lyons making the presentation.

The criminal cases, usually first on the docket, went all put over until later in the term. We understand that most of them are expected to plead guilty. They are John Marut, charged with assault against the person of Lois Webb, former Green Oak school teacher, Stanley Ward, charged with rape, and R. B. Bennett, charged with forgery. The other cases, George Jones, non-support; Clarence Holmes, shooting a cow, Lucine McCluskey, appeal, and Ralph Hall, violating the electrical law were all put over.

The appeal vs the estate of Catherine Teller was again put over as Frank Shields, one of the attorneys, is in Arizona.

The suit of Frank Lees vs the Howell Electric Motors started Tuesday. After some testimony was taken it was settled out of court.

A default judgement was given the Stabler Oil Co. against Richard Griffin to the amount of $676.49.

Martin Weikel had his drivers license restored.

Gertrude Martin was given a divorce from Robert Martin.

Thursday the suit of Tim Burke vs Thomas Ware and Alice Schoenhals started. This involves an auto accident. Don VanWinkle was the attorney for Burke and Hiram Smith for the plaintiffs.

Mrs. Rose Hendee was on the jury in the Lees-Electric Motors suit. Mrs. Alta Myer served on the jury in the Burke vs Ware and Alice Schoenhals auto damage suit. The trial lasted several days and Monday the jury brought in a verdict of no cause for action.

GUNDRY CONDEMNS ALARMIST

Auditor General, George T. Gundry, today condemned what he termed, "alarmists and propagandists," who he said were creating apprehension through untruthful statements regarding the forthcoming tax sale. Gundry said, "Those taxpayers who hold receipts showing that they have paid the taxes that are due, can thank their alarmist friends for the lively interest and forget them. If a taxpayer's property is advertised as delinquent, that advertisement should mean exactly nothing if he holds tax receipts. All that has happened in such a case is that the public book-keeping got behind in the unprecedented tax rush of last fall, and the advertising lists were compiled, by necessity, before all of the payments could be entered on the record."

Gundry pointed out that no law on the statute books of the state of Michigan will maintain a cloud on the title to a parcel of land for tax reasons if a proper receipt is held.

Letter

By Congressman Andrew J. Transue

Tax Changes

Modified tax revision was approved by the House last week as the Senate shifted its attention between governmental reorganization proposed by the administration and a general review of the TVA, the electric power "yardstick" of the government. President Roosevelt intervened in the TVA dispute to remove the three directors in an effort to ascertain the facts in the bottom of the two year quarrel among the directors. By a vote of 241 to 165 the House approved the tax revision bill after eliminating a provision for specially graduated taxes on closely held corporations. The "third basket" plan of the Administration was defeated for the third time by the House by a record vote despite the recommendations of the Ways and Means Committee and the probable loss of revenue of between $10,000,000 and $25,000,000. When the roll call vote was tabulated 234 Members voted against the special tax on corporations owned and controlled by a few individuals and 153 members, including your Congressman and a majority of the Michigan Democratic Delegation in Congress, voted to support the committee which had made an exhaustive study of the entire taxation problem.

Loss Substitute

To make up part of the revenue that would be lost if the House sent out provisions in the Senate and through a Congressional direction, the House approved by 249 to 166 a proposal to add 25 cents to the tax on each gallon of liquor. Your Congressman voted for the increase. As the bill was finally debated and sent to the Senate it contains changes that are exempted from the undivided profit tax for corporations with annual earnings of less than $25,000. The capital gains tax was made more flexible to give the maximum exemption to a 5% hold for five years and a reduced rate of taxation of gains from assets held more than 18 months and the final capital gains tax on assets held less than 18 months.

Midnight Oil

Night sessions were threatened for the second time this session for the Senate to act on the details of the proposed governmental reorganization were proposed by a bipartisan group of Senators opposing the Administration plan. Minority Leader Barkley announced that night sessions would be marked unless greater progress became evident in consideration of the measure that is one of the chief objectives of President Roosevelt to bring antiquated governmental machinery up to date. Night sessions were first threatened and finally tried out a few times during the filibuster against the anti-lynching group. The night meetings were soon abandoned and the minority group of opponents of the measure finally emerged victorious when two efforts were made in vain to establish the closure or the gag rule.

Interspersed throughout the reorganization debate was the current up-heaval in the TVA in which the three directors have made charges and have made counter charges until a thorough investigation has been demanded. A proposal for a Congressional probe has been made in the Senate following disclosures that the TVA paid $2,500 for a "perfect jackass" after spending almost as much as a the purchase price in traveling in search of the animal. The over rated bargain of jackass was eventually sold for $350 when he failed to live upto the expectations. Senator Norris of Nebraska, veteran progressive and credited with being the father of the TVA is leading the opponents to a Congressional investigation who prefer an investigation by the Federal Trade Commission in-kind. It is the first time Senator Norris has ever opposed a Congressional investigation.

CURRENT COMMENT

By the Editor

The number of families on the welfare in Detroit decreased 172 last week 883 cases were taken off the welfare and 611 new cases were added. Those who condemn the WPA as wasteful, inefficient and a money loser, will have a hard point to argue by the fact that 7,000 persons who were taken off the dole and put on WPA jobs failed to report for work. This shows that they preferred the direct dole to WPA labor.

The American Society of Tool Engineers held an exhibition in convention hall, Detroit last week of machine and tool progress. Primarily a trade show timed to coincide with the buying season in the country's production industries, the exhibition featured latest developments in machinery, tools and production equipment. The sale of tickets passed the 70,000 mark. Ford Lamb of Pinckney President of the Detroit Chapter of Tool Engineers was in charge of the exhibition.

It had to come. Last week Tuesday night, Leo Fitzpatrick cut off a radio program on WWJ which had set Loch Lomond to swing music. Other songs have been titrated in the same way. These old songs are beautiful and have been popular for years just what right has any radio jazz artist has to butcher them so their authors would not recognize them? It is time that this sort of thing was stopped. And while we are at it there is another angle to consider. The motion picture industry takes a popular book and mutilates and transposes it until there is little left of the original story. In Jimmie Fidler's preview of coming pictures he touched on Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, starring Shirley Temple, soon to be released. He stated that in order to fit it for Shirley it had been so changed and mutilated that it bore little resemblance to the play made famous by Mary Pickford.

The Detroit Free Press in an article Friday stated that on account of the mud-slinging tactics indulged in by Toy and Fitzgerald forces, Republicans doubted that either could be elected governor if nominated and were looking for a good dark horse candidate who could unite all factions. Fitzgerald had been classed the McKay candidate by the Toy Republicans while Toy is said to be the candidate of Harry Bennett of the Ford Motor Company and the Former Mrs. Fred Alger, former anti-prohibition leader of Wayne county. The Free Press thinks O. L. Smith would make a fine dark horse candidate. Maybe but in the past all efforts to stir up sentiment for him have failed. Two years ago the Young Republicans sought to put him over but found little sentiment.

At the American Federation of Labor banquet held in Detroit last week that body went sled length for Gov. Frank Murphy and left little doubt that they would back him for re-election. Gov. Murphy spoke and in the course of his remarks said he was proud that he had been able to settle the automobile factory strikes last year without shedding a drop of blood. His opponents have sought to make capital of his handling of these strikes. For our part we stand with the governor and his bloodless method in preference to turning the guns of the soldiers on the labor classes. Herbert Hoover used violence on the bonus marchers in Washington D. C. and the blot will remain on his record forever.

2-WAY RELIEF FOR THE MISERY OF COLDS

The speed with which Bayer tablets act in relieving the distressing symptoms of colds and accompanying sore throat is utterly amazing... and the treatment is simple and pleasant. This is all you do. Crush and dissolve three genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases promptly; rawness is relieved.

You will say it is remarkable. And the few cents it costs effects a big saving over expensive "throat gargles" and strong medicines. And when you buy, see that you get genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—From this seat in the grandstand the view is quite clear that New Deal leaders are going out in this summer's primaries to nominate New Dealers against the conservative old line Democrats. I have looked into the local situation in a number of states and congressional districts and everywhere the line of cleavage is showing. And these things are happening notwithstanding the declarations of Postmaster General National Committee Chairman Farley that there will be no interference.

It is not the purpose here to report on every one of the states or districts where the battle is impending between New Dealers and old line Democrats. I shall attempt, however, to outline a few of them to establish what is going on and how the New Dealers are maneuvering to get a better grip on Democratic party machinery.

To do this clearly, it seems to me it ought to be recalled how President Roosevelt and numerous of his spokesmen have threatened those Democrats who have disagreed with New Deal policies in any serious way. The fight over the President's plan to rebuild the Supreme court of the United States caused a serious split in the President's support and it was immediately thereafter that threats were forthcoming about those who had refused to go along on the court reorganization. About the time that fight was in its most bitter stage, it will be remembered, Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania made a radio speech in which he attempted to kick certain Democrats out of the party. The White House denied any connection with that speech, but there were few who believed Senator Guffey was acting on his own initiative. That is to say, it appeared to be a New Deal policy, for the Pennsylvania Democrat often has served as the mouthpiece in that way.

There was comparative quiet for awhile, but those with ears to the ground noted many minor rumblings that, to the political wise, could mean only one thing. Those rumblings presaged another earthquake. They are increasing in intensity, too. We hear them from many directions.

Young James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President who is just now serving on a tour of duty as a lieutenant colonel in the marine corps, was in Florida last month. While there he took occasion to say publicly that Sen. Claude Pepper, a New Dealer, ought to be renominated and re-elected. Well, Senator Pepper is such an ardent New Dealer that he once said if anyone wanted to know his position all that was needed was to ascertain Mr. Roosevelt's views—because he would support the President on any question.

I am told from sources that I believe have an understanding of the Florida situation that young Mr. Roosevelt's endorsement may be the deciding factor in a close race. That is to say, the race was so tight between Senator Pepper and the able young Rep. Mark Wilcox that one guess was as good as another. Now, however, Representative Wilcox is asking the voters whether they shall determine who their senator shall be or whether they shall be told by the White House. It is said that broad resentment already has been created; so much resentment, indeed, that recently Mr. Wilcox made the statement that no campaign would be necessary on his behalf if only "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, grandchildren of President Roosevelt, would give Senator Pepper their endorsement.

Over in Pennsylvania another kind of a situation has bobbed up. In that state, the bosses have had trouble agreeing on their candidates, and finally they took their troubles to the White House. (I mean the Democratic bosses which have supplanted the Republican bosses who used to rule Pennsylvania.) The result of the White House confab was that Governor Earle will run for Democratic nomination to the senate so he will be alongside another New Dealer, Senator Guffey, and Charles A. Jones, Pittsburgh attorney, was picked as the nominee for governor. These selections were made by the state committee, which is controlled, of course, by New Dealers, and therefore those are about the only names of importance that will be voted on in the statewide primary. But the significance of these things is not so apparent until it is known that two or three important Democrats in Pennsylvania have withdrawn and have "retired from politics" as a result of the situation.

Now, in Indiana, there is still another picture. It is probably the most interesting of any now taking shape. In the Hoosier state, we are started off with an announcement from the steps of the White House by Governor Townsend that "Van Nuys must go." He referred to the Democratic Senator Van Nuys who had the temerity to oppose the President's court packing bill and who generally is regarded as much more of a Democrat than his colleague, Senator Minton, who remains inside the New Deal fence always.

The Indiana picture is further complicated by the smoke rings Paul McNutt is blowing around. Mr. McNutt, a former governor of the state and now high commissioner to the Philippine commonwealth, is running for the New Deal nomination for the Presidency like the well-known jackrabbit. He says, however, that he is not a candidate for anything. It is a statement that is hard to believe because the McNutt airplane flight from the remote islands, the speeches across the United States, the free food—free drink—free publicity party given for Mr. McNutt at an outstanding Washington hotel—all combine to spell the launching of a political boom of some kind. So, in Indiana, the Democratic state committee soon will be setting up a slate of its choice, and that choice will be satisfactory to the President. It means that these will be New Dealers. That is apparent because of the death sentence already pronounced for Senator Van Nuys. Of course, Mr. Van Nuys isn't licked yet, but that is the picture.

Then, the Indiana situation is, or ought to be, of great interest to the Republicans. I am told that if the Democratic committee, controlled as it is, should ditch Senator Van Nuys, he may decide to run as an independent candidate for re-election. He probably would not get anywhere in a machine controlled state like Indiana, but he might draw enough away from the Democratic vote to enable a Republican to win.

Now, out in Indiana there is a right up-and-coming young fighter on the Republican team. He is Rep. Charles Halleck. By virtue of the fact that he is lone Republican congressman from Hoosier territory, Mr. Halleck is in a splendid position to set off some fireworks. Mr. Halleck is highly regarded by Democrats and Republicans in the house. He is young, vigorous and keen. Furthermore, Mr. Halleck is neither a conservative nor a radical, and we are hearing more and more of a swing in the country that probably will land our political policies in the middle of the road, instead of on the wild-eyed programs of most New Dealers or the moss-backed policies of hide-bound Republicans of yesterday.

As I see the picture in Indiana, therefore, it is not impossible to conjure up a situation in which the New Deal attempt to drive Senator Van Nuys from politics would backfire to the extent of electing a Republican senator. Kentucky also provides a battleground. In that state, I think New Dealers made a great mistake and it may eventuate that the mistake will cost them dearly. Senator Barkley, the Roosevelt spokesman in the senate, is going to have to fight his hardest to win renomination over Gov. "Happy" Chandler. Kentuckians here who know the politics of their home state tell me that the governor is a real challenger and that he is a campaigner of genuine ability.

Concerning the New Deal mistake, it will be remembered when Mr. Roosevelt interfered in senate affairs by indicating his choice for the leadership upon the death of the great Senator Robinson of Arkansas. That was the occasion when the President wrote to Senator Barkley, addressing him as "Dear Alben," and thereby attached a title that has proved such a source of levity. When it became apparent that Mr. Barkley would meet opposition, the New Deal promoted a testimonial dinner for the senator and sent numerous New Deal wheel-horses to Louisville to attend. Among them was Marvin McIntyre, assistant secretary to the President. Well, the Chandler folks built up a testimonial luncheon for the governor on the same day. Although Mr. McIntyre reached Louisville in time, he "just could not make it" to get to the Chandler luncheon. So that was that, and hundreds of Kentuckians at once decided that the New Deal was going to have Mr. Barkley and that made them say to themselves that they would choose their senator. It is of such incidents that political victories and political defeats are made.

Another battleground yet to be mentioned is Iowa. Senator Gillette was among those who did not like the President's court reorganization scheme, and said so. From there on, he has been a marked man. He will have to fight for renomination, therefore, against a New Dealer—rather, an opponent of New Deal selection. Representative Wearin has announced that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses PROTEINS— The Foods That You Cannot Live Without

Eminent Food Authority Explains Why No Protein Means No Life—Describes the Kind and Amount Required for the Best Growth in Children—Good Resistance, Vigor and Endurance in Adults.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 30th St., New York.

FOOD is—and always has been—the central problem of life. But only in recent years has its true power been revealed, as a result of scientific investigation.

Fortunately, we now know what constitutes sound nutrition, and it is possible for every homemaker to plan meals that will enable her family to eat their way to health.

Topping the list of food essentials are the proteins. The Dutch chemist, Mulder, who hit upon this name, made a wise choice, for it means "to take first place."

And certainly the proteins are first in importance. For they are the stuff of which our bodies are built. Without them, there would be no life.

Every man, woman and child has a fundamental need for protein, because it is an essential component of every living cell and makes up a large part of the solids of a muscle cell. Evidently, a great many of the glandular principles and substances, which control the functions of the body, are also protein in character.

Protein is the only food element that contains nitrogen, and next to water, nitrogen is the chief constituent of the human body.

Protein Builds Bodies.

A new born baby weighs, on an average, from 7 to 7½ pounds, and the adult into which it grows may weigh 20 to 30 times as much. The vast amount of tissue necessary to construct a man is built chiefly from protein.

Once the adult body is built, however, protein is not required for the growth of new tissues, except under certain conditions, such as during pregnancy, when one is recovering from a wasting illness, or when an athlete is in training and the muscles are increasing in size.

Keeps the Body in Repair.

There is, however, a maintenance requirement for protein which continues throughout life, and which applies to both children and adults. For the body may be compared to a machine, on which it is necessary to make allowance for the wear and tear of parts. Protein is the only substance that will rebuild the millions of cells which each day cease to function.

Thus, we see that protein performs two vital services—First, it builds new tissues; second, it repairs worn-out tissues.

The Building Stones of the Body. Protein is found in many different foods, but unfortunately, not all proteins are equally valuable. That is because protein is a very complex substance, resulting from the union of 22 or more simpler substances containing nitrogen, and called amino acids. These are the true building stones of the body. Some protein foods may have only 7 amino acids represented in their substance; others may have as many as 15 or 16, and these also may be varied by the proportions of the kinds present.

Proteins Vary in Value.

Some of these amino acids are necessary to build new tissue; others will not build tissue, but are capable of repairing worn-out cells. Some protein foods are, therefore, more valuable to the body than others.

It is absolutely essential that the homemaker, charged with the responsibility of feeding a family, should be able to distinguish between those types of protein which are adequate for both growth and repair, and those that are only useful for maintenance.

For if the diet does not contain an adequate amount, or the right kind of protein, our bodies will be badly built and they will be improperly repaired and cannot wear well. As Dr. Eugene V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins University, the world-famous investigator and discoverer of vitamin A, puts it: "Unless the right kinds, with respect to the size and shape, are furnished by the food proteins, the exact pattern on which the muscle must be constructed cannot be formed and, in this case, growth is interfered with."

If you were building a house you would consider nothing less than the finest materials. You would know that cheap lumber and poorly made bricks could not produce a lasting building. In the same way, you must learn to discriminate between the various types of protein used for the supremely important purpose of building your children's bodies, or keeping adult physiques in perfect repair.

Some foods cost more than others and you should not be guilty of spending hard-earned money for expensive protein foods when the same amount of nourishment could be more economically obtained from an inexpensive source.

Where to Find Protein.

Proteins that will build new tissue, as well as replace worn-out cells, are known as complete proteins. In this class we have meats, fish, cheese, milk, eggs and some nuts.

Incomplete proteins are found in grains and products made from them, and in the legumes—that is, peas, beans, lentils and peanuts. The proteins of these foods are of high nutritive value, however, and when supplemented with other proteins, such as those of milk, will meet every bodily requirement.

How Much Protein?

The protein requirement varies according to size, age, and the kind of protein foods consumed.

To allow for growth, children require twice as much protein per pound of body weight as adults. That is to say, an adult requires daily one-thirtieth of an ounce for each pound of body weight, but a child needs one-fifteenth of an ounce for each pound of body weight.

The amount of protein food should usually constitute from 10 to 15 per cent of all the calories taken. If this plan is faithfully followed, there will be more than enough to take care of every requirement, because experiments indicate that a man who weighs 154 pounds, or 70,000 grams, needs a minimum of 44 grams of protein every day.

In planning the family dietary, a safe rule to keep in mind is to include in the daily diet: a quart of milk for every child, a pint for each adult; one egg, one serving of meat, fish or chicken, one serving of another protein food such as cheese, dried peas or beans, or a main dish made with nuts.

You can achieve wide variety and still provide an adequate protein ration within the limits of this rule. For milk may be served as a beverage, in soups, puddings, and as cream sauce. Eggs may likewise be varied in their method of preparation, or concealed in other foods. There are many fine meats, and the number of ways in which fresh, canned, frozen or dried fish can be served is legion.

Both cheese and nuts make sandwiches, salads and desserts, as well as main course dishes. Peas, beans and lentils can appear as soup, mock roast or croquettes. Grain products, which include cereals, macaroni and bread, may appear in any course in the meal.

In planning menus, always keep before you the ideal that an adequate amount of first class protein makes a first class man, whereas an inadequate amount may lead to stunted growth, functional nervous diseases, lessened efficiency and the earlier approach of old age.

In choosing proteins to feed your family—remember that they take first place among foods, and that upon their wise choice rests your future welfare, your destiny—your life!

Polishing Ethics— Pro and Con

When fine furniture leaves the shop of the manufacturer, its finish has been professionally treated, to preserve its beauty—prolong its endurance. And from that time on, this furniture is best maintained by a quality light-oil furniture polish—first, on the shop floor of the furniture dealer—and then in the home. This is acknowledged and accepted as the best way to heighten its beauty—lengthen its life! But unfortunately, many housewives coat the finish of their furniture and woodwork with various shellacs and veneers—using them as a substitute for a fine oil polish and rubbing. And what a great mistake this is! For these coatings form a false finish over the true finish of the furniture; and resin and other destructive elements in them dry out the wood—toughen it—leave a sticky residue. When many layers have been applied, they accumulate as a crust over the finish, clogging it and clouding the natural beauty of the grain. This is the slack way to care for furniture. If the home-maker really "cares for" her furniture, she will frequently rub on a reputable light-oil polish, to preserve it—keep it lastingly lovely!

Housecleaning? NOTHING TAKES THE PLACE OF O-CEDAR FOR FURNITURE

More women use O-Cedar Polish and Mops than any other kind—for furniture, woodwork, floors.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—It has been stated frequently that 90 per cent of the residents of Washington are located here because it is the site and seat of the federal government. In other words, Washington is a great city because it is the capital of the nation. The statement is not completely the truth, but a bare analysis by whomever made cannot fail to demonstrate that there are thousands who live in Washington for the reasons mentioned.

In consequence of this condition, therefore, Washington news does not get into the newspapers of the country as does other news. The Washington date line in ninety-nine out of each one hundred cases is over a story that deals with some phase of government or politics. Since Washingtonians have no vote, Washingtonians cannot be in politics.

Nevertheless, sometimes there is news about Washingtonians that is of interest to all of the country. The observation is peculiarly true of a circumstance that has lately developed. Moreover, the case in point holds a lesson for the country as a whole.

Lately, congress passed a law establishing a minimum wage for women workers in the District of Columbia. The statute was rather loosely drawn, as it had to be if it were to work at all. It left much to the discretion of a controlling agency called a minimum wage board. One of the reasons why so much discretion was left to the local agency, however, was because the subject with which the legislation deals contains political dynamite and congress did not want to establish a precedent by going too far in fixing wages. So the District of Columbia was left a rather wide scope within which to build its minimum wage structure.

That was the basis for the circumstance above mentioned, the news about Washingtonians, the lesson for the nation.

The wage board started out to hold hearings to obtain facts about the wage level and what was needed by the women workers. Stenographers, office workers, clerks in stores and this and that and the other type of employed women. Finally, the board got around to waitresses and their wages. That was where the lid blew off, because who does not know that waitresses collect considerable money in tips? Promptly, up bobbed a red hot question: should the tips, or the average monthly "take" in tips be considered as a part of the wage of waitresses?

Well, the question has not been settled yet and even when an order is issued, it will not have been settled. It will go on and on and there will be some racketeers who will organize a society or something to fight for exclusion of tips as part of the wage, if that be the order. If the board eventually decides to exclude tips and fix a minimum wage without regard to tips, the employers will carry on a drum fire of criticism about it. Why? Because the question strikes at the very heart of the relationship between employer and worker.

Any worker naturally wants as much of a return for his or her labor as can be obtained. Any employer feels equally that he is entitled to obtain needed labor as cheaply as is possible. The waitresses, therefore, took the position that the proprietor had no right to consider the tips as a part of the wage. On the other hand, the proprietor—probably with the same justification—said in effect that without the job the waitress will not get tips, and that the owner who takes the risk ought to be allowed to count those tips as part of the compensation.

Further, the customers of the restaurant were entitled to some consideration, said the proprietors. That is, they argued that the customers were charged prices for food and service that would yield the proprietor a fair profit. The tips, it was held, were gratuities on the part of the customer and they vary in amount, some large, some small. If the wage rate was to be raised and the tips excluded—somebody would have to pay more for food. The waitresses used the argument that the tips were gratuities, just as the owners did, but since they are gratuities, said the waitresses, in no wise was it fair to include them in the wage scale.

And so the argument went! But the lesson remains. No better illustration is possible, I think, than the Washington waitress wage controversy; there is no better way to show how utterly silly it is for government to mess into private affairs. Whenever government sticks its hooked nose into private affairs, just there begins an unbalancing of human nature. That is to say, there is no substitute for negotiation between humans, each inately fair, each desirous of gaining justice according to his light.

Government can and does function admirably as the agency for protection of rights that are important rights of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. It can and does prevent encroachment upon individuals where such individuals can not protect themselves. But in matters of earning a living, just plain making money, government, in my opinion, has no place. Labor has organization where organization is necessary. Such organization does protect labor, generally speaking, because it has the right to strike. And in all probability, fixing of wages will hurt more than help labor.

While on the subject of expansion of government into every cranberry patch, it is interesting to note that some of the left wing New Dealers

Butting Into Business would like very much to put the federal government into the business of making small industrial loans. I think probably it will be some time yet before the nitwit section gets anything tangible into the open on the newest of their schemes, but it is true that they are now planning along those lines.

The thought of this group of so-called presidential advisers is that the federal government should start loaning money to small businesses so that those businesses will be independent of "the great banking trust." In short, it is proposed that the federal government should be equipped to make a loan of ten thousand or twenty thousand or fifty thousand to a small manufacturer so that he can expand his plant and take on new workers, etc., etc. It is suggested that perhaps there ought to be a new governmental agency created to handle this work so that it will be done "sympathetically" and with an understanding.

It all comes about apparently from the fact that the present administration has discovered, after five years in office, that there are great monopolies or trusts or something else in the way of combinations in existence. They have found that these monopolies are in control so far that the little fellow in business can not borrow money when he needs it to carry on his business. Something must be done for them, or else they can not have the more abundant life of plenty.

President Roosevelt has become intensely interested in having business become "home owned" or something of the kind. He has shown, for example, in his shots at utility holding companies how much he likes the type of operating company that serves its patrons and doesn't mix up in the tangle of corporations that operate in more than one town or city. They are good, according to the President, and they ought to have consideration. It might be that federal money loaned to them would save them from bankruptcy—or it might be that if they can't make a go of their business, they will go bankrupt anyway. If the federal government had a loan and a mortgage on their assets, they would become federal-owned after foreclosure. That surely would be one way for the federal government to enter the public utility business. It is just a possibility, I mean.

Every now and then some information leaks out about "emergency action" that was taken by government officials during the hectic days of the Hoover depression as distinguished from the Roosevelt depression. (The depression that was on when President Roosevelt took office in 1933 was labeled the Hoover depression in New Deal propaganda.) One of these incidents came out before the senate committee on public lands the other day. The committee was investigating the nomination of E. K. Burlew to be assistant secretary of the interior, and that formed the basis of an inquiry into general practices of the Department of the Interior which is headed by Secretary Ickes.

Mr. Burlew was answering questions as to how the department spent much of the three or four billion dollars appropriated to it for public works. Those were pump priming appropriations, if you remember, although as far as I can see the water has not started coming out of the pump yet. Anyway, Mr. Burlew let the fact drop that Secretary Ickes had bought two new automobiles in 1933. He said the purchases were due to the "emergency" and, of course, money for them came from the emergency appropriations. Senator Stiever of Oregon asked what was meant by the "emergency."

"Well, the secretary wanted the cars, and that was the emergency," Mr. Burlew replied amid laughter in the room.

Items of Interest to the Housewife

For Home Dressmaking.—Make a small pincushion and sew it to a "bracelet" of elastic. Stick some pins in the cushion, slip the bracelet on your left wrist and the pins are always handy.

Use for Old Shears.—Old shears are useful in salad making to shred the leaves of lettuce or other greens.

Tasty Sandwiches.—To vary the plain peanut butter sandwich, mix peanut butter with chili sauce, spread on slices of hot buttered brown bread, and put together with crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with slices of dill pickle.

Bacon in Stuffing.—Bacon, chopped small, should be added to all stuffing. It gives a delicious flavor.

Before Baking Potatoes.—Let them soak in cold, salted water for 15 minutes. They will bake in half the time.

Haddock With Tomatoes.—Lay a small dried haddock in a pan with a little water and bake for ten minutes. Remove skin and bones, and flake the fish into large flakes.

Unratified Amendments. There are only five constitutional amendments which have been submitted to the states for ratification and which have not become a part of the Constitution. These are:

- Two of the originally proposed amendments, one relating to the apportionment of representatives and the second relating to the compensation of members of congress; congress proposed in 1810 an amendment relating to titles of nobility and in 1861 the so-called Corwin amendment to prohibit interference with slavery. The fifth is the child labor amendment, proposed in 1924. The last named is still under consideration.

Philathea Notes

Our ladies met at the church parlors for the March meeting on Wednesday last, for the social and business hour. Followed by the usual pot luck supper, several guests enjoyed the afternoon with us, and are always welcome also in our Sunday Class.

Mrs. Zuse conducted the Devotionals, followed the opening song. The Secretary's report of the February meeting and the roll call preceded several small items of business. A rising vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Zuse for her generous work on the wedding ring quilt, and plans were made for work on one presented by Mrs. Atto.

Mrs. Beulah Hendee invited the class for the April meeting when the roll call letter will be "K".

During the afternoon, Mrs. Elliott in behalf of the Philathea Class presented Mrs. Inez Zuse with a small token of our cordial appreciation of her efficient and interesting labors as teacher of our class with assurances of our ability to fill the place she has made in our group. Our sincere wishes go with her, as well as the rest of the "Parsonage Family" to their new field of labor. Mrs. Zuse has also been our class chaplain, and a very capable worker in all lines of Philathea class activity.

Four passages will be used on our next Sunday's lesson study on the subject "Keeping the Body Strong". These are Mark 6:53-56, Judges 13:12-14, 1 Corinthians 3:16,17 and the Romans 12:1, 2 (A Personal Aspect of Temperance.)

The Philathea were out in large numbers on Monday evening for the farewell reception to our pastor's family, held in connection with our regular church night fellowship. The young people contributed to the special features. The pastor's family and several members of the Clinton church were present as special guests together with Reverend and Mrs. Dawe of our state office.

Julius Aschenbrenner added another victory to his record when he defeated Bill Thompson, a leading amateur wrestler of Inkster in a 40 minute match Saturday night.

Howard Read has agreed to meet Aschenbrenner in a championship bout, which will be held in Pinckney soon.

IS AWARDED VAIL MEDAL

Theodore O. Hanson of Northport, plant employee of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, has been awarded the Theodore N. Vail medal in bronze in recognition of a "meritorious act of public service, beyond the normal performance of duty, that resulted in saving a life. The announcement was made by George M. Welch, president of the company, following citation of Hanson by the Michigan Vail Medal Committee of Award, meeting in Detroit.

On the night of May 30, 1937 while Hanson and his wife were driving near the Indian village of Peshwabtown, between Traverse City and Northport, they came on the scene of an automobile accident in which a man was badly injured and was in danger of bleeding to death. Hanson, who had taken the first aid course offered its employees by the Michigan Bell Company, applied a handkerchief-tourniquet to the partially severed arm of the victim and stopped the hemorrhage. He then took the man to a physician at Suttons Bay and later to a hospital at Traverse City for an emergency operation. Rounding a curve the man's car had crashed into another car without lights that was parked on the highway, it was stated. He credits Hanson with saving his life.

Hanson's is the 64th Vail medal presented to Michigan telephone men and women since the award was created 17 years ago in memory of T. N. Vail, twice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Six of the recipients were employees of Michigan telephone companies other than the Michigan Bell.

The Vail Medal Committee of Award also recommended five letters of commendation to telephone employees for unusual acts of public service performed during the past year. They are: Olga Veitengruber, chief operator, and her two sisters, Florence and Erma Veitengruber, operators at Frankenmuth; Phillip Colasanti, plant chief at Sault Ste. Marie and Vera Terongo, senior operator in the Townsend central office, Detroit.

The three Frankenmuth employees were commended for their attention to duty, presence of mind, and courage in the face of danger during a spectacular $100,000 fire early on November 23, which destroyed a large building housing three stores, burned telephone and power lines, scorched the telephone central office and other structures. Florence Veitengruber, who was on duty saw smoke issuing from the building and called Olga who verified the fact that the structure was on fire. The latter reported the fire to authorities and sounded the village fire siren. Both Olga and Erma hurried to the central office. At the request of the authorities, the girls, in addition to handling the unusually large volume of calls resulting from the conflagration, called Saginaw and Richfield for additional fire fighting equipment. They worked at the switchboard with their heads and faces in wet cloths because of the intense heat, which broke the central office windows and set fire to a window shade.

Colasanti, who was awarded a Vail medal in 1927 for saving the life of a boy who had suffered from a gunshot wound, rendered first aid during the past deer hunting season to a Cheboygan hunter who had accidentally slashed himself in the groin with a knife.

Miss Terongo was instrumental in saving the life of an aged Detroit woman who had turned on the gas jet and become faint before she could light it. The woman, partially regained her senses, crawled to the telephone, dialed the operator and was barely able to gasp, "Call my son—" before she again collapsed. Miss Terongo had the call traced, determined the street address and sent the police. Emergency measures saved the woman from possible asphyxiation.

Conservation Dept.

A book of data for forecasting forest fires is being prepared. This will show temperature, wind velocity, humidity, lack of rain, time needed to get fires under control, etc. By this means the danger area of the state will be determined.

A Milwaukee firm has paid $1,595 in taxes to avoid prosecution for the cutting of timber on tax delinquent lands.

Additional revenue to state from oil wells on state owned land in Gladwin county is promised by the Bentley well which is yielding from 150 to 200 barrels a day at the present time.

The states forest fire fighters will take the field next month for another season's work. This year they will have the use of 150 fire towers and numerous sub-stations. Last year was the lowest in forest fire loss in the state history.

The Michigan CCC approaches its 5th anniversary. The records show they have spent 127,349 days fighting forest fire, built 54 fish rearing ponds, spent 80,000 days developing lakes, planted 280 acres of hard wood seedlings, expended 60,000 days on soil life projects.

Michigan birds, fish and other wild life will be on display at Detroit on March 19 to 26 at the Michigan Garden and flower exhibition.

About 400,00 trappers and hunters have reported their game kills to the state. 180,000 have not yet reported.

There are about 34,500 square miles of deer area in Michigan which may be considered summer range. 10,500 if it is in the upper peninsula and 18,200 if it is in the lower.

The mild winter has been kind to Michigan game birds and artificial feeding was only necessary in rare cases.

SALES OF HALF YEAR PLATES SHOW GAINS

Despite legislation adding a 25 cent fee to the purchase price of half year licenses this year, sales will show an increase of from 20 to 25 per cent over those of last year, figures of the Department of State show at this time.

Half year permits totalled 438, 635 in 1937; half year plates manufactured thus far for 1938, total 574 400, with final figures not available until late this summer, these plates being valid until Sept. 1.

Sale of half year permits lagged conspicuously this year until only a few days before the March 1 dead line, yet when the deadline had been reached, many branch offices had sold more than they had throughout 1937.

Branch managers report that economy rather than necessity, have dictated many half year plate sales. Many persons to whom windshield stickers had been objectionable in the past, bought half year plates without hesitation.

Law enforcement officers throughout the state prefer plates for their ready identification of cars; the public was benefited by the change of plates because they can be handled more quickly than stickers. Inmates of the State Prison of Southern Michigan at Jackson, were given needed additional work, as a partial solution to the prison labor problem; Michigan steel and other products were used by which stickers were printed outside of Michigan.

The manufacture of 1939 plates will start immediately after requirements for 1938 are met.

{The Harvest}

EACH year since 1930 the utilities of Michigan have led the entire nation in the number of farms electrified. In the last eight years, the number of farms served by THE DETROIT EDISON COMPANY has tripled. Here is the record:

Year	Old Territory	New Thumb Territory
1930	9,796
1931	16,305	(Detroit Edison began serving it Nov. 1, 1935)
1932	12,137
1933	12,400
1934	14,167
1935	17,170	1,750
1936	18,760	3,370
1937	20,359	6,818

Note that the number of farms served in the Thumb increased by 5,156 or 310 per cent in the twenty-six months since The Detroit Edison Company began to serve it. To bring electricity to these 5,156 customers, the Company built 1,497 miles of farm line.

To farm families, electricity is even more important than to city dwellers, for on the farm electricity shoulders many burdens that city people never carry. Electricity performs over 100 tasks for the farm and the farm home. It eliminates much drudgery from farm life. For 10 or 15 cents a day, electricity performs such tasks as pumping and carrying water, the back-breaking labor of washday, cooking, grinding cattle feed, milking cows, and a score of other chores. The electric rates the farmer pays to us are exactly the same as the city residence pays—resulting in an average of 3.47c per kilowatt-hour for farms—and this rate includes without charge lamp renewals and many fussy little repairs to appliances.

The farmer tilling the land, who sows the seed and reaps the harvest, is a vital part of the economic system. And any group of farmers in the Detroit Edison service area who want electricity have always been able to get our service by a fair contribution to the cost of building the necessary line. In Michigan farm electrification has been a reality for ten years.

lyn Mansfield, instructor in textiles and clothing at the Michigan State College.

A brief clothing budget is the secret.

First on the shopping list, remembering to purchase what is economical but attractive, is a suit, Miss Mansfield finds. If the budget allows not more than $15 she suggests a wool flannel man tailored suit priced as low as $11. Popular colors are Oxford gray, light gray, black or navy blue.

These suits are rather severe in their tailoring so the tailored type of blouse rather than the "fussy" kind can be picked out for as low as $1 in cotton broadcloth, or in silk or rayon for as little as $2.

For hats, Miss Mansfield suggests a felt roller, costing as little as a dollar. There is a newer type called the Outdoor Girl, made of doeskin felt and adding more style than the roller. Prices for these are a little under $3 for some of the hats.

Fabric gloves in color are inexpensive.

sive. Some this spring have a narrow lacing of leather around the cuff and gloves backs. This dents the budget to its extent.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

He led them, crouched over, to the stockade and along its southern exposure toward the entrance. The man on guard stood just outside, looking down upon the flat. His rifle leaned against the pickets.

"Now!" Rickman choked, and rose and ran. The guard made no outcry that would reach his fellows. He gasped in surprise as he whirled to the sound of softly thudding feet. Rickman was upon him, bearing him down, clapping a hand over his mouth, hammering the man's skull with his other fist.

"His feet, first!" he hissed, and Conrad and the other drew the man's heels together and bound the ankles tightly with a thong. His shirt was drawn over his head and tied there, gagging and half-suffocating him, and then his arms were trussed behind his back.

"Now!" cried Rickman. "Rich, follow me. Philippe, watch the guard!"

And he ran within the gate, making for the glow of embers where fire died in the open space between buildings. Fuel was there. He threw a handful of light stuff on the coals, kneeling to blow them to flame. By the light he selected a pine knot and another and another.

Rich moaned in apprehension, but Rickman only cursed, with never a look toward the gate. The pitch ignited, and, handing Conrad two of the blazing knots, bearing two himself, he ran for the storehouse.

"Quick! Fuel, now!" Rickman cried. "Heap it against the logs! More. That light stuff! It's the blaze we want!"

Crackling flames leaped into the bundles of twigs, dancing up against the logs of the structure, lighting the place, feeling for hold in the wall.

"Good!" he cried. "Come, now! As fast as ever you can!"

And he led the way toward the gate, making great speed with his long legs, Conrad pressing hard behind. The guard rolled and threshed as Rickman called to Philippe to follow.

Before they were well out of sight he had his hands free and was tearing at the buckskin shirt over his head. He opened his lips, then, in a mighty shout for aid, and, not trusting to voice alone, floundered to his rifle, cocked and fired it, and, on the shot, Shaw's men turned. They stampeded up the slope, entered the gate and with buckets fell upon the flames, which, in the dampness and chill of the night, were even then dying down.

From a safe distance Rickman and his companions saw the glare on Shaw's buildings fade.

"There was no chance," muttered Conrad Rich. "The air is heavy. Flame could not take hold."

The trader looked at him with a sneer.

"Did you dream I hoped for destruction by fire? You've stayed too long at headquarters, Rich. Into bed, now, both of you. And I am not there," he said impressively. "Remember, you do not know where I have gone!"

Bewildered, Rich, knowing only a part of the plan and the boatman less than that, they left him, skulking swiftly for their quarters, heavy with apprehension and puzzlement.

And when they had passed the gate and it was swung shut again, Rickman walked to the bushes where Mongazid crouched, and whispered in the native's tongue. The hunter launched his canoe and Rickman followed in another. They paddled silently into the lake, the native turning westward and the trader shoving his frail craft into the overhanging branches of a small island.

The fire had done no more than lightly scorch the thick walls of the storehouse. It was out. No damage was done. But Rodney Shaw moved among his excited men with an ominous silence and deliberation.

He wanted to be sure; to make no move until certain that he would live to regret nothing. Again he confronted the guard. The man was certain, was he, that the company trader himself had been there?

"Yes, master. With two." He rubbed gently a wrist, wrenched by thongs. "With the clerk and a boatman. I saw them all before the shirt was bound over my head. And the trader himself entered the enclosure."

Rodney turned from the chattering group, walking stiffly toward his quarters. He blew up the fire on the hearth and rose to confront Basile, who had followed. The man's eyes questioned him, begging mutely to know what was in mind.

"We've enough of skulking and ambush and assault under cover of darkness," he said. "The time has come, Basile, for a settlement. And openly, as whites fight."

Shaw's long Kentucky rifle rested on deer antlers above his bed. He took it down, turned it over critically, opened the pan cover, tossed out the priming and poured fresh from his powder horn.

Then Basile asked his question: "This night?"

Shaw nodded sharply. "Of course. The country does not grow larger; hours increase the cramping. I'm crowded"—with movements of his elbows as though driving them into bodies pressed closely about.

"Not... not alone?"

"You futter like a maiden! What's safer than going alone, and at night? Will he be looking for that? Not he! Besides, there are things that won't let a man wait, Basile, and tasks in which one cannot ask another shoulder!"

He was gone, smiling tightly, and Basile crossed himself as he watched the departure. It was what a man like Shaw would do, he knew. His capacity for enduring persecution had been reached. Basile knew that. And another knew that. Burke Rickman had read Shaw's character aright and now he waited in safe seclusion, warmed by a sense of impending success after long failure.

It was more than a league by land to the company fort, but Rodney covered the distance as rapidly as a man in haste would have done by daylight.

A pine tree threw its dark shadow over the stockade. He made for this, his only protection from the lately risen moon. He slung the rifle across his back by its thong, drew away, ran forward, touched the upright logs with one foot, grasped for the top, caught, and swung upward.

No sound. The fort lay peacefully in the moonlight. Rifle in his hands, again, he dropped to the ground. He did not hesitate, but went on quickly around the corner of the building, running for the entrance.

"Rickman!" he rasped. "Out of your blankets, Rickman!"

A movement. A strangled cry:

"He is not here! He's not here, Shaw!"

It was Conrad Rich, terrified and quaking in his bed.

"Where is he, then?"

"God help me, I don't know!" the man moaned. "I don't know, Shaw! The last I saw 'im was outside the gate, an hour or more ago. Oh, a devil's nightmare, this! Shaw, if you value your life and your safety, go back to your fort!"

The clerk was out of his bunk, then, advancing in the moonlight, one hand extended in pleading.

"Stay where you are, Rich."

Shaw's eyes, sweeping the recesses of the room as Conrad halted, had fallen on a garment lying across a bench in the moonlight. It was a cloak, a woman's cloak; a long cloak, of heavy, maroon stuff. And, at sight of it, his heart seemed to stand still in his breast.

He had seen that cloak before. He had held the figure, wrapped within its folds, in his arms. Annette Leclerc's cloak... Here? She must be here, then. And an odd compound of emotions ran him; rage and jealousy and regret. Regret! That was odd, for a trader out to kill. Odd, indeed! So odd that it unsteadied him, almost frightened him. The regret was that the cloak lay here, instead of in his quarters!

So she had come all this way to Rickman, who would not remain with her, despite her public kisses and embraces! A definite sickness ran through him.

Where was Rickman? None knew. Gone, then? Expecting a revengeful sally such as this? Hiding? Fearful of retribution?

Ah, could Shaw have guessed the truth! Could he have but known that he walked into a trap! He retreated to the upper end of the enclosure, where the stockade threw its heavy shadow and stood there, rifle across his arm.

He would stay. He would stay there on hostile ground until the company trader showed himself. Then he need never again give opposition so much as a second thought... But a queer despair weighted his determination... Annette here?

And while he waited, Burke Rickman eased his canoe up the lake until he was abreast the medicine lodge, its fire, its mourning natives.

Continually his eyes traveled the moonlit surface of the lake, on the watch for another craft. The canoe came from the shore by the flat after Rickman had whistled as a plover a score of times. It came somewhat cautiously, but when he whistled again the approach was faster and shortly it came close and the Weasel, his hair caked with mourning mud, looked inquiringly into the white man's face.

He listened closely to what Rickman said. He greedily snatched the tobacco offered him. "It will be done," he promised, and turned and paddled shoreward again.

Dawn. Rodney Shaw watched it come from his station within the company stockade.

Burke Rickman stretched and grumbled in his hiding place on the islet and observed that the east was paling, the moon losing its lustre.

And far up the sluggish waters of a river which flowed into the lake, young Mongazid grasped overhanging bushes and held his canoe motionless.

He dragged his canoe out and returned to replace the dogwood twigs his landing had ruffled. He pushed on cautiously and reached the bend above where, on the other bank, he could see a lone old woman with a withered leg, hobbling about a smudge of fire before an otherwise deserted lodge. Zhesheben, Little Duck, this; her daughters had left her behind, denying her the holiday of the medicine and the whisky which she loved.

He went on, walking silently and swiftly through the lush carpeted forest until he was half a league above the encampment of the old woman. There he lay down in tall grasses which grew on a high bank overlooking the stream. His eye was good, his hand was steady, and three packs of beaver awaited him. That far meant life and life was sweet; the life of a white man, who has no ways of retribution when it is not known who strikes, was as nothing at that moment compared to his own life.

CHAPTER IX

The night had not been good to the Weasel. He had been cuffed and clubbed away from the whisky.

But the Weasel had a story to tell. Did they not know, he demanded of any who might hear, that Shaw had driven this company trader from his fort? Yes, the little trader had gone there in the night heavy with weapons and the one of flaming hair had fled.

"Like a frightened fox, he ran, this company trader with whom I must trade!" he protested. "Like a woman, he runs from the little trader. And who gives his coward's heart shelter in this time of danger but Black Beaver, who said that he was our friend while he lied to us? This Rickman skulks in Black Beaver's lodge, afraid of the sun, afraid of the moon and stars."

So, from mouth to ear and ear to mouth the news ran, reaching Basile when, at broad dawn, after hours of sleepless worry, he came out of Shaw's stockade to look for his employer.

Until the sun rose Rodney Shaw continued his vigil. Then, rising stiffly, he went slowly down to the gate, heedless of the faces peeping at him from the cracks of doors, flung aside the bar and looked across the placid lake to see Basile, approaching in a canoe.

"Chloroform All Men at Age of Sixty," Osler Statement, Made in Playful Spirit

Some years ago Sir William Osler, British physician and professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins university, who made the statement that men should be "chloroformed at sixty" found that it was accepted by so many persons as a serious proposal on his part that he thought it advisable later to point out that it had been said in a somewhat playful spirit.

His observations on "the comparative uselessness" of elderly men were made in the course of a farewell address at Johns Hopkins university, February 22, 1905, at a time when he was approaching the 60s himself.

"I have two fixed ideas, well known to my friends," he said; "harmless obsessions with which I sometimes bore them, but which have a direct bearing on this important problem. The first is the comparative uselessness of men above forty years of age. My second fixed idea is the uselessness of men above sixty years of age,

"Come away!" the clerk growled. "Come, before some company engage strikes from behind. Rickman has gone."

"Gone? Where?"

Tersely the story that the Weasel yelled was told and Shaw drew a deep breath.

"Out!"—with a gesture. "I want the canoe."

"Of course! I follow! No, don't squall warnings, Basile. I should have guessed, he'd go straight to Black Beaver when driven from his den... Oh, save your warnings! I'm no fool. I'll go as far by the usual route as I safely can and then swing into the encampment from the rear!"

He was gone, then, leaving Basile on the beach, grumbling and mumbly.

It was a morning of wondrous silence, of gorgeous peace, of vivid color. The tranquility of late summer, the peace of a flawless day. But in the affairs of men, no tranquility, no peace.

Rodney Shaw passed the island, with Rickman leering at him from his shelter and trust in treachery high in his heart, and pressed on for that river where Mongazid lay waiting, an agent of destruction.

Shaw rounded a point, swung toward the land and entered the river. He reached that bend where the old crane raked ashes from coals and dangled a shred of meat there on a stick, blinking her lashed eyes with their baleful lights. He called a bluff greeting to Little Duck, but she did not reply; just stared sourly at him and mumbled.

The day held silent. The air was clear, so clear and so still that small sounds were distinct. Also, the sounds of a paddle, ever so cautiously wielded, traveled a great distance.

Mongazid heard and a slight tremor ran his frame; not of dismay or of compunction, but of preparation. He raised himself to elbows and knees, safe in his screen of long, cured grasses. Shaw came, and the Indian raised his gun.

But one does not shoot a man with a face like that from in front, not even when his concealment is perfect. One waits. From the rear it is safer.

On went Shaw, eyes raking the banks, seeing nothing to alarm. His jaw was set, gray eyes glowing. In a short distance, now he would land and pounce by foot to Black Beaver's lodge. He was abreast Mongazid's hiding place. He was beyond, but not far enough; the current ran swiftly in this bend. A movement above might be seen from the corner of an eye, keen as those gray ones... He was turned, with his back squarely toward the high bank as he drove his canoe to the inside of the bend, and Mongazid rose to one knee. He came up slowly, silently. The trade rifle rose to his shoulder, he pressed his cheek to the cool stock, he squinted over the coarse sight.

A busy woodpecker ceased its prodding for food and darted away as the sound of the shot ripped the stillness.

In the canoe there, the man rocked forward as though a heavy stone had been flung against his back. He threw out a hand to grasp his rifle. The weapon steadied him but slid along the gunwales as his weight came on it. He reached with the other hand, sought to brace himself, turned, fumbled for the trigger, and another shot ripped the serene silence.

But that bullet tore no flesh; it rent only water, fired as it was without sighting, in the last fractional second of consciousness. The gun slipped from flexing fingers and thudded into the canoe bottom. With a long, retching breath, Shaw doubled slowly forward, twisted once and lay still.

HOW to SEW By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Stitch a Shirred Valance to Buckram

PLANNING draperies is as exciting as planning a new frock. Color, fabric, suitability, style. Curtains sound the keynote of a whole room, and this is the time of year to be thinking about them. The chintz draperies with shirred valance shown here are dignified and yet charmingly informal. They are easy to make; they have the smart tailored effect that is usually obtained only by using a valance board, yet they are hung on ordinary double curtain rods of the type shown here at A.

The side drapes are made of full widths of the chintz and are hung on the inside rod with plain casings at the top. Cut the valance material the desired depth and twice as long as the space it is to fill after it is shirred. Hem the ends and bottom. Now, make a row of gathers along the raw edge at the top, another row 2 1/2 inches below the first and a third row 1/2 inch below the second. Cut a piece of buckram 4 inches deep and as long as the outside curtain rod. Bind the ends of this strip. Place the shirred valance edge wrong side down on the strip of buckram as at B. Cut a casing strip wide enough for the rod to slip under it after the edges are turned, and place it over the valance edge as at C. Stitch the casing, strip and the valance to the buckram as shown. Turn the valance over to the other side of the buckram and stitch through the other two rows of shirring as shown. Slip the outside curtain rod through the casing and the valance is ready to hang.

Are you in a rut about your curtains? Do you know the different methods that decorators use to give windows individuality? In her book SEWING for the Home Decorator, Mrs. Spears has told the whole story with sketches and text. Slipcovers, difficult dressing tables, and making of lamp shades, how to bring furniture up to date and many other technical problems are treated in this useful dollar saving book. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred), to Mrs. Spears, 210 So. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

TVA turmoil. The President repeatedly during a seven hour session asked the Chairman Arthur Morgan to furnish substantiation for the grave charges he has made against the other two directors Harcourt Morgan and David Lilienthal. Repeatedly the Chairman Morgan declined to accede to the President's request asserting he preferred to testify before a Congressional investigation committee. After the heated session the President set a new precedent by giving a stenographic account of the meeting to the newspapers.

Primer Ready

United States Housing Authority Administrator Nathan Strauss announced during the week that as an aid to the building industry the entire $500,000,000 appropriated by the immediate embarking of low cost and slum clearance projects throughout the nation. Congress hopes that Congress, is available at once for the combination of slum clearance and the lenient regulations and requirements of the new law designed to stimulate home building will contribute materially to a building upswing.

Attention Needed

The pressing need for WPA work to relieve hardship and suffering in the sixth district of Michigan has been stressed with great urgency for every project in the District so that approval of worthwhile projects may be expedited. In the last few weeks WPA projects in Howell, Mason, Lansing and Flint and throughout Livingston, Ingham and Genesee counties have been launched to take up the unemployment slack. One drainage project was given exceptional consideration and treatment when the President was informed of its imperative need in Flint.

WPA approval was obtained last week after engineers had investigated for three weeks the million dollar water softener and extension to the water and sewage disposal plants in Flint. This project, if finally sanctioned by the budget and Comptroller General and signed by the President will provide work for six months for 1,155 men in addition to making large savings in Flint's annual soap bill.

"SPIRITUAL BEING"

When spiritual being is understood in all its perfection, continuity, and might, then shall man be found a God's image. This is scientific reasoning which reveals the unbroken line of beneficent activities that are inherent in true consciousness and expressed in the ideal man. As we rid ourselves of the old, worn-out concept of man as material and mortal, we put on the true or new man with all the attendant benefits. The ever-available Christ-idea inspires us to relinquish the false concept of God, man, and the universe which is responsible for a limited, intermittent, and uncertain sense of harmony, satisfaction, and peace.

We derive unceasing benefit only from that which inspires us to spiritual thinking and living, for this is the only way by which we come to regard good as more normal than evil, and so escape the penalties exacted by the belief of evil as real. This is the only way by which we can maintain the true thinking which unflinchingly contributes to the highest ends of life.

Reaction, relapse, and retrogression are human concepts, which can never hinder or stop the continuous and eternal unfoldment of infinite Truth, from which emanates all that is constructive and beneficial. It is normal for us to be happy and healthy; and the law of divine Mind is ever-operative and available to establish harmony in individual consciousness and experience.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Red Coral Always Prized
It is red coral that is and always has been prized, not solely for jewelry and buttons, but as a charm to bring safety, health and secrets not revealed to the ordinary person. As ancient Gauls rushed headlong into battle, they trusted their safety to their swords, strength and the "magic" coral imbedded in their shields or helmets. Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." The world's red coral comes from the reefs off the Mediterranean coast of Africa, says the Washington Post, and is obtained chiefly by Italians.

What Next?

That question is prominent in the minds of all people today. America has always gone on to greater prosperity after a set back. Let us assume that this set back is basically only a phase of the business cycle which will operate regardless of legislation or of the dictates of man. When we accept this formula, we see that the old rules of honesty, hard work and thrift will again bring a reward in the form of renewed profits.

Let the old rules of business be our guide. Save out of present income, so that when opportunity for profit presents itself, we will be able to take advantage of it.
