

Pinckney Now Has a Resident Doctor

This Village Which has Been Without Regular Medical Service for the Past Year Now Has a Resident Physician

For the past year since the death of Dr. Claude Sigler in May 1937, this village has been handicapped by no resident physician. Instead, the depend upon neighboring physicians from Howell, Dexter, Stockbridge and Brighton. This has caused much inconvenience and at least one family has moved away from here on account of the lack of medical service.

Now this difficulty is a thing of the past. Dr. H. G. Porter of Detroit has moved to Pinckney and expects to open an office in the Harold Swart out or the former Richards home some time this week. This is in the nature of a homecoming for Dr. Porter as he formerly resided in this county when his father, Harry Porter, was associated with John and A. C. Watson at Unadilla in a novelty and parts factory. Later Mr. Porter went to Gregory when he opened a machine shop and also manufactured several novelties. The family moved from there to Lansing about 25 years ago.

Dr. Porter is a physician, surgeon and an osteopath. He graduated from the Des Moines, Iowa, college and was associated with Dr. Biggs of Detroit for a time but for some time past he has been engaged in private practice. He is married.

Pinckney welcomes Dr. Porter and assumes him of their support. His coming here fills a long felt need and he may be certain that everything in their power will be done to make his stay here both pleasant and successful. We predict for Dr. Porter success and our wish is that he may take his place as one of the leaders of this community as his predecessors, Dr. Charles W. Howe, Dr. Fred Sigler and Dr. Claude Sigler did before him.

The May 3 Tax Sale

Auditor General Gundry Explains Further Details of Tax Sale. Claims That Few Home Owners Are Involved in the Coming Sale on May 3.

Auditor General George Gundry said today that he had advised Gov. Murphy against any program to halt or change the May 3 tax title sale, which will effect approximately 1,000,000 parcels of real estate.

"The Governor rightfully wants to help needy home owners," Gundry explained. But the number of persons involved in the sale is comparatively small, and I think the danger of a kick back is great if we tamper with the program already arranged."

Governor Murphy, because of complaints from Home Owners who are tax delinquent, had asked Gundry to report to report to him whether remedial action is necessary or advisable. Gundry said that he thought it "bad propaganda" to hint that anything would alter the sale, in preparation for which the state has spent $500,000.

"A very great majority of the parcels involved are vacant lots or idle land, he explained. Only a few homes are involved. The persons who own these homes had a chance to come under the extended tax moratorium which ended last year. Most of those who cannot pay taxes now couldn't pay taxes then. Probably they will never be able to pay taxes. But thousands of people scammed and saved and borrowed to meet their delinquent tax obligations at the end of the moratorium in September. If another moratorium should be permitted now, these persons who did pay their taxes will suffer a greater hardship than those who didn't pay because they hoped more leniency would develop."

Two years must pass before a person whose property is sold to satisfy unpaid taxes can be disposed of, Gundry said, explaining that the owner has 18 months in which to redeem his property, and thereafter may occupy it for six months during the period of dispossession notice.

He suggested that a 1939 legislature could:

Set up a revolving fund to pay the taxes of needy home owners; exempt them from property taxes; grant them a life lease on their properties, title to pass to the state at death of owner.

The Legislature can meet and adjourn its regular session long before these people will lose their homes.

GOOD FARMING INSURANCE AGAINST EROSION LOSSES

Farms may be insured against erosion losses. Farmers pay for this protection with terraces, good pasture, sod, proper management of woodland, and the use of summer and winter crops. In other words, Soil Conservation Service workers point out, farmers pay the premium in their own efforts to protect their own land.

Like the premiums on many forms of insurance, soil insurance premiums often pay dividends in addition to the protection they afford. Properly managed woodland provides many valuable wood products. Sod crops and meadows which protect the land against erosion also provide grazing and hay. Legumes used in rotations build up the fertility of the land even while they guard it against washing or plowing.

Soil insurance also provides an annuity in increased yields and better balanced farming as well as benefits for future generations through protection of the Nation's soil resource.

Everyone might ask himself the question of the insurance man, "Can you afford to be without this insurance?"

Col. Met Chalkers arrived home from Lockhart, Fla., today. He says reports of his demise last winter were exaggerated.

National Air Mail Week Is from May 16-21

All Persons Are Asked to Try Out the Air Mail at This Time and Find Out for Themselves Its Great Service Possibilities. The Cost Is Small.

James A. Farley, Postmaster May 16-21, "National Air Week" as May 15, 1938 marks the twentieth anniversary of the inauguration of Air Mail.

At that time the Air Mail covered only 215 miles daily between New York and Washington, D. C. Today this little "National Air Mail" system has expanded to the system of 62,000 miles. The record of such remarkable progress should be perpetuated and commemorated.

One purpose of National Air Mail Week is to fully acquaint the public with the benefits of Air Mail.

The Domestic rate for Air Mail is only six cents per ounce or fraction thereof, instead of six cents in addition to ordinary postage as many people think. There also has recently been a reduction in Foreign Air Mail postage rates.

Particular attention should be called to the fact that C. O. D. shipments and insured mail also be sent by Air Mail. Special delivery on Air Mail is also advantageous especially over week ends when no regular carrier service is available.

Although Pinckney is not located on an air mail line, mail dispatched from this point makes connections with air mail service advantageous to patrons of this office at all times.

The Post Office Department is very desirous of making Air Mail work a complete success and has asked the cooperation of every postmaster in accumulating the public more fully with the benefits of airmail. The Department also desires of having every Post Office capable to help their community with National Air Mail week by using some sort of stamp or other appropriate for their locality. The office is planning some such card and will welcome any suggestion. These should be sent to a promotional or historic nature.

At Pinckney, the office is planning to have a display of stamps and airmail week poster. The office is planning to have a display of stamps and airmail week poster.

Patrons of the Pinckney Post Office are requested to do their part in making National Air Mail Week a success and finding out for themselves the advantages of Air Mail.

BOTH FARMERS AND HOUSE- WIFE INTERESTED IN FARM PROGRAM

By planting crops this spring in line with farm acreage allotments under the 1938 Federal farm program, the farmers of Livingston County have the opportunity of working with all the other farmers in Michigan and the United States towards two goals:

1. Production of an amount of farm product for which they have a marketing outlet at fair prices.
2. Giving the consumers and industry supply of food and fiber that is more dependable and adequate at fair and more uniform prices.

With an indication now of huge surpluses of many farm products such as corn, wheat and beans going into the 1938 cropping season, the program offers an opportunity for preventing disastrous price declines.

If farmers will plant crops this spring in line with their acreage allotments, the supply of farm products next fall resulting from 1938 production is more apt to be in line with United States and export market outlets. In the past such a production has resulted in much higher and fairer income received by farmers for their farming operations.

In most cases the allotments this year mean reduction in acreages of soil-depleting crops. The cash payment made to farmers under the program is made to induce the farmers to adjust their acreages. The plan of the program can only be achieved if farmers will cooperate on a large scale.

The preliminary goals being sent to the farmers are computed from the information the county office has on record of the history of the farms for the past 3 years. If you have reason to believe this data is incorrect, please inform us at once.

EASTER DANCE— Tuesday, April 19th. St. Joseph Hall, Howell. Winkler's Orchestra. Admission 25c.

General has designated the week of May 15, 1938, marks the twentieth anniversary of the inauguration of Air Mail.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By Ye Editor"

The attempt to have the state delinquent tax rule declared void in Oakland County failed when two of the three circuit judges ruled the rule was legal. This action was started by George Cran, a subdivision owner and the Slater Construction Company. They claimed that the sale could not be held because County Treasurer Charles Sparks had failed to notify the individual property owners. The judges refused to allow this contention and the sale will be held next May 3rd. Next to Wayne County, Oakland county has the largest number of delinquent taxes in this state.

The press is making much of the fact that President Roosevelt refuses to state whether he will be a candidate for a third term. Senator Vandenberg thinks he should clear this air by making an announcement on the subject. The president has indicated that he does not care for a third term. However it is good politics to keep his opponents guessing. It will be well remembered that President Coolidge, when asked a similar question, answered, "I do not choose to run" which reply could be twisted either way like utterances of the Delphian oracle. His silence on this question keeps a multitude of candidates from throwing their hats in the ring and complicating the picture.

Lunt Dickinson called the maple syrup candidate for Lt. Governor has again made his appearance at the state capital with his customary gifts of syrup to his friends and as in the past has claimed as a sure sign that his hat will be in the ring for his old job. His candidacy is unwelcome to the rank and file of the Republican party because he is the No. 1 dry of the state of Michigan, and a staunch supporter of the Anti-Saloon League. The other candidates do not care for him as a running mate but with a large field of candidates which is likely this year, his dry support will be enough to nominate him. According to the recent Branch county vote the dry sentiment has not assumed important proportions for him to add any great strength to the ticket.

The Detroit City Council has adopted an ordinance banning Sunday auto sales and it will be illegal to keep auto sales rooms or used cars lots open on Sunday. It goes into effect in 30 days. The auto dealers sponsored the law. The butchers backed such a law a few years back but it failed to be adopted. We doubt that such a law is enforceable. We wonder if this will cause auto bootlegging to become the style.

Beware of Texas mule dealers. Some of them are said to be making a practice of buying up old mules, lifting their faces, painting them, an otherwise reconditioning them and shipping them into other states as young stock. They failed to stand up when put at heavy work. This recent horse shortage caused many mules to be shipped into Michigan among which are said to be many counterfeit ones.

The Detroit street car strike crowded all other news off the front page of the dailies last week. It seems to have been a peaceful strike with no violence. Some people who are against all strikes condemn the strikers as communists without being familiar with their side of the story. The reason for the shutdown of street car service is a battle between the street car men and bus drivers. The street car men, who are more numerous, claim seniority rights over both the cars and buses by means of a charter amendment, the people of Detroit approved. The bus drivers took the matter into court but lost. It was appealed to the supreme court which has not yet acted. In the meantime the bus drivers prevented the ordinance from being put into effect by securing an injunction from a circuit judge.

CHAPTER X—Continued

Almost daily canoes linked the trading post with the camp where Rodney Shaw recuperated. He had been sitting up, came the word; he had stood on his feet, later. He had walked a few steps. He was eating as a man should eat. . . . Basile came, an uneasy light in his eyes.

"The trader may return any day," he said, watching her face.

"What delays him, Basile?" she asked pointedly.

"My firmness. I plead and argue. I invent delays. For a week he has been going about from lodge to lodge, gaining strength rapidly but, as well, gaining impatience to return here. I must prevent that return here. . . . until the place is as he left it. . . . But, mademoiselle!"—quickly when she swayed as from a blow. "He has forbidden mention of you! Such a man! One does not know. . . . One knows he is in your debt. . . . One feels he should not think such thoughts. . . . But what does one do?"

Yes, what did one do? Too long in the forest, this Basile, to determine the strategy which would have brought him and these others peace. He was in distress. He knew the hotness of young blood should not frustrate the longings of young hearts. But how to arrange such matters, how to temper prejudice and arrange better understandings, he did not know.

A word to her would have sufficed; the repetition of Shaw's declaration that he had seen her cloak in Burke Rickman's quarters, and way to the goal would have been achieved. But he had not the fineness of perception, the insight into the complexities of youth to realize that. He was accustomed to obey Shaw's orders. Shaw had banned talk of the girl. He could not reason behind that command. On such disabilities, at times, do destinies hinge.

Slowly, as one in physical pain, Annette made her final preparations for departure. She prolonged each small operation as one will when loath to leave a place behind and it was near dusk when she finished and closed the small chest and with a deep sigh tossed her head.

She turned, then, to Rodney's table and, taking ink and quill and paper, sat for long, writing slowly, painstakingly, weighing each word she inscribed. Finished, she folded the paper and left it there and, dusk having fallen, she told her boatmen to be ready an hour before dawn and until the appointed time she lay staring at the glowing logs in the fireplace, numb and resigned.

During her weeks at Fort Shaw she had thought now and again of Rickman's menace. She was not particularly concerned, not afraid. Still, she had chosen such an hour for departure because none would know and she could be well on her way before the news had even a slight chance of spreading up and down the lake.

Still, as they breasted the point where Rickman stalked she felt a tenacity creep through her body and when they were beyond a sense of relief made itself known.

They stopped but shortly for food after daylight and then kept on going down the slow flowing tributary to the great Mississippi. Later they met a canoe paddled by two women who had been gathering rice. They were not Pillagers, not people of Shaw's domain, though living and hunting on its edge.

Around the bend, the woman in the stern said:

"That was the white medicine woman. It was she who cured the little trader of his sickness."

"She is the one woman who married a company runner says that Flaming Hair boasts he will take when he has had rum."

"It is said that both Flaming Hair and the little trader want her for a wife."

"She has the sign of running away."

"She has that sign."

The woman in the stern chewed tobacco rapidly.

"Flaming Hair would welcome word of her."

"It is so."

"And with only two skins of rice to trade he may open his hands wider if we give him that word."

"You are swift of thought, Wabegum. Let us go faster!"

"Yes, it will be good. My thoughts are like spring water."

CHAPTER XI

So Rodney Shaw came home to his fort, gaunt and still a bit pale, but erect in his canoe.

The wind blew chill that day but he had refused the capote which his men urged him to wear. He was not cold, he declared; the new life in his veins had plenty of warmth.

This was true. His splendid vitality had rebounded amazingly from the depths to which Mongazid's bullet had seduced it and his body felt no discomfort from the autumnal wind.

A chill, however, lay upon his heart and in his eyes as they stared across the water to his establishment was a bleakness. He felt as he had felt for days: as if the sun were permanently gone. In the beginning he had attributed the sensation to physical weakness but realized that this was an error. Toughened to hardship, with the splendid foundation of vigor on which to rebuild strength, his body had regained much of what had been lost. Not all, of course, but much. He could walk and paddle; his heart no longer pounded his ribs at slight exertion; his voice had recaptured its vibrant timbre. . . . Still, he felt cold.

He stepped ashore, now, without the feeling of achievement which he had anticipated.

Men left tasks and ran to greet him, shouting and laughing. A half dozen Indians loitering about the place stared. One of the engages had taken a native wife and Rodney stopped to speak to the girl and bid her welcome and try to make a joke about her husband.

He stood a moment before his quarters, looking about. A great flock of red-winged blackbirds, ready for their annual leave taking, rose and dipped and whirled above the fort like soot flakes tossing on a gale.

He was back, safe, alive, treading the ground of his stronghold, and it was good. . . .

Good to be there? A tingling stab ran his breast as he told himself it was good to be back within that stockade. He had ached and hungered to be back, thinking return would bring relief from the pall which hung above him. He would have been back days before had not Basile persisted in his argument that the trade, after all that had happened, demanded that Rodney be seen among the scattered hunters. This was reasonable and Shaw had yielded to the old man's nagging, restless though he had become.

That feeling of being under a cloud had increased with the days. He knew its beginnings, the time and the reason, but he would not let himself dwell on those. He knew it dated from the moment he had sent Annette Leclerc away.

He had sent her away in bitterness, but he had not wanted her to leave. His heart had wanted her to remain close to him, to comfort him, to hear the questions he ached to ask. But his mind would not permit that heart to have its way. She had been in Rickman's quarters here, after pleading in the streets of Mackinac with Rickman not to leave her. Surely, then, she had come to Rickman. She had served him, Shaw, but only as any woman would serve any man, wounded and in need.

A gnawing wonder harried him. Had she not, once or twice or thrice, actually felt the things her looks and touches told him she felt back there at Mackinac? Was there not, after all that had happened, a chance that her blood might call to his as his once had to hers? He'd wanted to ask her those things. His heart had. But his mind, filled with animosity and doubt, would not let his heart have its way; would run no risk of letting that heart demand its way. So he had banished her and the pall had settled.

Fish were smoking on racks of withes over a fire. A hunter was just unloading the carcasses of two deer from his canoe. Rice was heaped yonder on an oilcloth. Against the wall were newly delivered packs of fur from some native who was already discharging his debt. A well-stocked, profitable establishment, this; the sort of domain free men dreamed of building in the wilderness. It was his, despite opposition. It was his to hold easily, now. . . .

And yet, despite all this, it was not good to be here. The place was filled and yet it was empty; the fort had permanence and instability together; he had a feeling of homecoming and departure; much lay ahead but more behind, irrevocably behind.

He walked into his quarters where Jacques was making a fire and again that feeling which had swept and rocked him at Mackinac asserted itself. Again he thought what it would be for a trader, coming home to lips and arms and eyes like hers. Again he saw loneliness and hardship without mellowing tenderness stretching before him down the years.

"Voilà!" muttered Jacques, rising from the hearth as flames crackled. Jacques went out, closing the door. Rodney moved slowly about. He stopped beside the table, staring down at the paper folded there. His name was inscribed on it in a fine and delicate script. Trembling, he snatched up the paper, opened its folds, sank to the bench and began to read:

My Dear Rodney:
When this comes to your attention your wish that I be gone will be wholly granted. I have spent days here unknown to you and I pray you will not be harsh with Basile when you become aware of it.

One of the objects of my coming here was to say to you that nothing you can ever think of me for the mischief I did will be undeserved. I attempted to say this at your bedside but you would not hear me out. I bear you no resentment for that dismissal.

I beg of you to consider this. When I betrayed your plan to Burke Rickman I was a girl, poised and hurt. I have matured. I believe, in the months that have passed and this maturity has only increased my perception of the enormity of my misdeed. I shall carry my regrets throughout life.

This is all I have to say, dear Rodney. It would have been a privilege to say it rather than write it. But, being the transgressor, I can ask no favor. I wish you only health and happiness and good fortune.

Annette Leclerc.

He looked slowly up from the paper, his mind completely in a swirl. She here? She. . . preparing for return? Return where? With whom? His heart pelted at his ribs and his throat swelled. A letter such as that, sweet, gentle, humble. . . . But her cloak had been in Rickman's quarters! She had come to him from the company fort! . . .

"Jacques!" he called, lunging for the door. "Jacques!"

Jacques was there. Not in answer to his call. But there, eyes large and excited and strained words on his lips.

"The clerk, Rich, from the company, awaits at the gate!" he blurted.

"Clerk? Rich? Company. . . . Devil take him! . . . Jacques, what of the man's letter? Was she here? When did she leave? What was. . . ."

A rising clamor of voices and pound of feet broke his question down. He moved slightly to look past Jacques and saw Conrad Rich racing toward him.

"Forgive this, Shaw!" Rich panted, coming to a halt. "They wouldn't let me in. . . . But it's more'n life and death that fetches me here!"

Rodney was struck by the genuineness of the man's emotion. "Annette!" he finally got the word out explosively. "She's on the way out and Rickman. . . . he's hard after her!"

Cold within Rodney turned to warmth, to heat, to fire.

"Is this another wild scheme?" he snarled. "Is this another attempt by you company hirelings to suck a man into a trap where he—"

"Shaw, leave off! It's no time for talk such as that! D'you think I'd be here if that was so? D'you think I'd risk my skin comin' here for trade? It's a woman this time, I'm to say, and there's none at our establishment to stand by her! Listen!" he said as Rodney's hold relaxed. "It's all he's planned on for days. It's all he's lived for, this chance at her! It drove him wild when she came, callin' the military back. 'Nd he schemed to kill you so's he could have not only the trade but her!"

"Military? She called them back?"

"Fore God, Shaw, didn't you know? But how could you? No, you couldn't! . . . Listen! Rickman sent back for the military to come 'nd drag you out of here to stand trial. They come. Capes. But Annette knewed it. She'd worked for you back yonder. She'd got Leslie's Giles to take your part so's they'd kill the warrant. But Capes was on th' way and there was no body else to send to call him back. So she come. . . th' night we fired your place, here. That's what touched Rickman off. I tell you, man! It drove him wild. She, standin' tellin' him as how she was lyin' when she begged him to stay at Mackinac; as how she only done it to give you a chance to get free and here ahead of us. He went mad, I tell you, man, 'nd ripped her cloak off and she had to run for it. . . ."

He paused again, panting, and Rodney stood before him, jaw loose.

"She didn't come. . . . to. . . him?" he asked in a whisper.

"Eh? Him! You didn't know? She didn't tell? When she was nursin' you she didn't give it away? Him? 'Twas you she come for, Shaw; it's you she loves! And she's goin' back and he's after her and it'll be like devils from hell tearin' at her tender flesh if he ever gets—"

Shaw was past him, then, spinning him to one side with an arm thrust, jerking open the door, crying:

"Jacques! . . . Jacques! . . . Two men and a light canoe! Now, Jacques, now!"

An hour's start, miles of advantage, had Burke Rickman.

As Rodney set his course to the southward to have the strategic shelter of the chain of islands, he made the other out, far, far off.

An hour passed, and two, without further sight of Rickman. The last island of the chain was a full league in length and beyond lay much open water. When they breasted this final shelter he cursed his boatmen and the canoe quivered as they drove blades deeper.

Jacques, in the bow, spoke guardedly:

"They have not passed beyond."

Out there was steel-blue water, sullen under clouds the hue of new iron. Upon it, as far as they could see, floated no other craft.

"Turn. . . so. . . ." Rodney extended his left hand; the bow swung toward the reed bed at the foot of the island. He picked up a rifle and examined the priming critically. Reeds hissed against the birch bark as they slipped into their cover, making on toward the far edge where, from concealment, he could watch for approach.

The channel between island and mainland was narrow. This oncoming canoe would pass within a stone's throw.

"Be ready!" he muttered, slowly lowering his head for better screening. . . . "Ready, Jacques. . . . The paddle on the bottom. . . . So! . . . Silently, at first. . . . Now. . . . Now!"

The bow swung outward; with stout shoves of the paddles they followed the point of the reed bed, out toward deeper water, out to cross the course of that other canoe.

They glided from their shelter into full view and Shaw rose to his knees, swinging the rifle to his shoulder, and in the split instant consumed by this movement he saw Rickman's face; amazement, bewilderment, high fright and venomous hatred.

Hiking Is Not Lost Art; Many People Average More Than Five Miles a Day

Hiking for health and pleasure is not a lost American habit. It persists in spite of what many believe. There are those who decry the automobile as being responsible for the public's lack of interest in this most healthful exercise. They say where once we would walk a dozen blocks to keep an appointment, we now hop into a cab. Instead of walking two or three miles to work in the morning, we grab the nearest bus.

Yet with all this pessimism, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News, the American public is just as much a race of walkers as it was in the days of "Old Dobbin." Although the automobile has changed the walking habits of many, it has not brought any change in the daily footsteps of a multitude of workers. The plowman behind his team still walks many miles a day. The postman contributes his 10 miles. The patrolman, night watchman, surveyor and school children still add up their daily foot mileage. And what of the golfer who does at least eight miles over 18 holes; the commuter and suburbanite who walks an equal distance cutting the lawn, hoeing the garden or exploring the adjacent subdivisions or woodlots; or the bill collector, messenger, floorwalker and conductor on a local railroad train? Surely their average must be well over five miles a day, and this is all any physician would recommend as a health builder.

Pedestrianism is not a lost art. It persists in every walk of life in spite of the comforts and conveniences the automobile has brought.

Papillon, Native of Mexico
The papillon is not thought to be a European dog but a native of Mexico and brought to Spain by returning soldiers, says a writer in the Los Angeles Times. There is a striking similarity between this tiny stout-hearted pal and that of the lovely long-haired Chihuahua. This breed was interbred with the dwarf spaniel, and the offspring the true papillon.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Silk Patchwork for the Guest Room

A LETTER comes from a reader enclosing rough sketches of stitches from a silk patchwork quilt. She writes, "I inherited this quilt from a great aunt and it is the final touch of luxury in my guest room. It never occurred to me that I could make one like it until I saw your article about patchwork stitches in the paper. I am following your advice about using an old wool blanket as a foundation—only I am using the best parts of several worn blankets. I plan to join the blanket sections with whipped seams and then arrange my final patches along the joinings."

Depend upon a modern homemaker to figure out efficiency methods! And here are the stitches she sends. The many-hued silk, satin, and velvet pieces are first pinned or basted to the foundation with lapped edges turned as shown here. If you would like to know how to make more of the fascinating stitches used to sew the pieces in place, you will find them in the new book offered herewith. Be among the first of your friends to make one of these gay quilts. It is the smart thing to use one anywhere that you would use an afghan.

Collecting and arranging the luxurious bits of silk and inventing new embroidery stitch combinations is just about the most exciting of all the new revivals of Victorian home arts.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' latest book on SEWING—Gifts and Embroidery—is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches are illustrated; also table settings, crochet, embroidery designing; fabric repairing; novelty gifts and dress accessories. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions. Available to readers who will send name and address and enclose 25 cents (coin preferred). Just address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Public condemnation of convicted drunk drivers is reaching high proportions. And justly so.

Is there any reason under the sun why a man should be permitted to drink more liquor than he can control, step into a high-powered automobile, and drive recklessly down our highways, injuring and killing innocent people? There is none.

It is remarkable that in many cities and counties through our nation, information is being given and even courts have been induced to attempt to enforce laws against drunk drivers.

License of drunk drivers should be revoked. The law should be enforced. Drunk drivers should be punished to drive automobiles. The law should be enforced. Drunk drivers should be punished to drive automobiles.

4-H CLUB WINNERS

Results of the 1937 State program recently published by Mr. A. G. Kerrunen State Club Leader, show that Livingston County has received a fair share of the State Honors. According to these results night

Light is Cheap!

You can operate this 100-watt lamp
2 hours 47 minutes for 1 cent
(at average residence rates)

a penny
provides over 2 1/2 hours of good room-wide
KITCHEN LIGHTING

WHAT a difference good lighting makes in the average kitchen! A bright, cheerful room is so much more desirable—it speeds work along so much faster and makes the surroundings so much pleasanter—that it is a wonder any woman will consent to be without it. Very few of them would be, if they realized how little it costs!

A 100-watt lamp in the ceiling fixture, for example, will provide good room-wide kitchen lighting—and you need not worry about leaving it on! The cost for two-and-a-half hours is less than a penny. A 60-watt lamp over the range is a great help, too—and one over the sink. Both of them together cost less than a penny for two hours' operation. A bright, attractive kitchen is NOT a luxury—you can enjoy it for the price of a postage stamp! Why put up any longer with a drab, dreary room? Remember that LIGHT is one of the cheapest things you buy... use it for a cheerier, more inviting kitchen.

SAVINGS and Confidence

It is our privilege to know how many savers young and old men, women and children

Somewhat it seems that as a group, they have a little more confidence than other people. Perhaps this can come from knowing that they can take advantage of any opportunities that may arise requiring cash. Perhaps they feel less anxiety because they know they are prepared for unforeseen trouble.

Or perhaps it's just because they see their way clear to the goal they have set. Whatever the reason, wouldn't you like to join them in saving.

"MOTHER IS ALL BETTER, THANK YOU"

It is generally conceded that America leads the world in the quality and extent of telephone service.

Important factors in this supremacy are the efforts of the Bell Telephone Laboratories "to find a better thing or a better way," and the experience and skill of the Western Electric Company, the manufacturing department of the Bell System.

Because of our association in the Bell System, every improvement so produced is made available promptly for us in Michigan... a continuing assurance of high-quality telephone service at reasonable cost. That is why Michigan's telephone service is as fine as any telephone service in the world.

And that is why your telephone... although it can connect you with any of 35,000,000 other telephones all over the civilized globe... retains such simplicity that even a child finds it easy to use.

Do you want to SAVE MONEY?

The Standard Ford V-8, with 60-horsepower engine, gives you a lot of car for a little money.

300,000 new owners acclaimed the "Sixty 60" last year. Hundreds a day are buying it in 1938. Why?

Because it is priced low—includes essential equipment without extra charge—and goes farther between filling stations than any Ford car ever built. Owners all over the country report averages of 22 to 27 miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

But economy isn't all the story by any means. The Standard "60" is built with the same precision as the De Luxe "85," and has the same 112-inch wheelbase chassis. It is easy to look at and ride in —as well as easy to buy and run. There's a Ford dealer near you.

COATS GO LONG OR SHORT

can take their choice this year of their new coats, but the better be for either dress or short swagger type if this is anything.

For news this spring, for several years have coats been a part of the customer's wardrobe by Evelyn Mans, economics instructor in Michigan State College.

Classics in coat she finds all the straight top coats of tweeds topped with fox or polar wolf collar. For length and height many women are picking the tuxedo type coat which is fitted and tailored. The comfort and style add to this coat because it looks well worn open or closed.

The Michigan state College instructor has been surveying the work of manufacturing in this country as well as fashion hints offered from Paris.

New York fashion leaders are suggesting bloused coats, delman sleeves gathered and pleated coat fronts. Some of the bloused coats are shirred like a dress but tightened at the waistline with corselet belts or with set in belts. The blouse may be only in the back of the coat or all around

THE ROAD TO HELL

Not long ago, a man from Ann Arbor was heard to express himself rather emphatically regarding the desirability of resort sites in the northern part of Washtenaw County along the Livingston County line. For summer homes some of the best places in the country were in and around Hell and along Hell Creek. The only difficulty lay in the narrow and dangerously crooked highways leading to that district.

According to reports and proverbs the road to Hell is an easy one. Also is it stated that the road to Hell is paved with good intentions. As regards the first proverb, it is admitted that it is untrue as the road is not easy, either on the ease, disposition or one's automobile. But the second proverb is probably nearly correct as the condition of the road its dangerous curves and narrow pavement might lead one to think that good intentions were the only attention it had received.

We understand that the State Highway department is hard put for an excuse to place this highway between Dexter and Ann Arbor in a condition to meet the heavy load. Were this highway 132 a highway that lead any where, we would be doubtless given some attention.

Our contention is that it must lead somewhere because of the heavy traffic. There is no road more crowded during the resort season than 132 on week ends. And the constant toll of disabled citizens and autos may be laid to what? Good intentions? If the Honorable Highway Commissioner will not investigate this matter, we are certain that the intolerable conditions that now exist will be remedied.

At any rate if anyone in Ann Arbor or points east wishes to go to Hell, our instructions would be to pass through Dexter even though the road is paved with good intentions. There are but six and one half miles of Highway 132 where one will get dizzy from dodging heavy traffic on a pavement filled with holes and bumps. And when passing through Dexter, stop for a while and get direction from those who know and also get acquainted with us.

Hell lies eight miles north and five west. And Dexter lies on the road to Hell.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Leslie Hore-Belisha, British secretary of war, made himself somewhat of a national hero several months ago when he shook up the army command, upped the youngsters and sent the oldsters back to their club chairs. The report of his ultimatum demanding a change of foreign policy is a stand-out in the current news.

There was something like consternation among British conservatives early in 1937, when Prime Minister Chamberlain named the incidentally Jewish Mr. Hore-Belisha for the war post. There was no hint of anti-Semitism in their attitude, but just then certain optimists among them were trying to fool Britain into the German orbit, and there were alarmed predictions that Hitler would be enraged and seek quick vengeance.

That didn't come off, and the new war secretary started a whirlwind army clean-up and all-around reconditioning campaign, to the satisfaction of all hands. Seventy-nine-year-old Sir Ian Hamilton, who had been in command at the Dardanelles, said, "Thank God we are under a proper soldier and will not be shot sitting down."

He has spent a lot of time badgering his elders, and still has many of them to work on, as he is only forty-three. When, a brash young Oxonian, he ran for parliament, his opponent tagged him as "the nonentity of the college bench." He nailed this on his mast-head, spoofed the opposition cleverly, and romped in.

He was a dispatch carrier in the war, then a major, a reporter on a London newspaper, with convenient underground pipelines to the front page and the headlines.

He became financial secretary of the treasury in 1932 and later minister of transportation. He is a demon for detail and has swarmed all over England, inspecting equipment, barracks and army kitchens.

He is of medium stature, round-headed, with roached, graying hair, unmarried and given to night forays, checking this or that detail of the military establishment.

AT LEAST six times in the past 150 years, the Rothschilds have been counted out, and they have always come back—like John Barleycorn and Old King Cotton. Now the arrest of Baron Louis von Rothschild is reported from Vienna. The era which founded their dynasty was disquieting like this one. The Romanoffs, and the Hapsburgs, Matternich and Diaraeli and all the other kings, conquerors and statesmen came to terms with them.

Baron Louis is the head of the house. The catastrophic fall of the Creditanstalt bank of Vienna in 1931 was supposed to have wrecked them.

A few weeks later, they were shoveling money into American securities, and, it was reported, snagging a stray million here and there by a fast overseas play on francs, an old family custom.

Louis and his brother, Alphonse, were living in regal splendor when the Creditanstalt failed. They had great estates and magnificent art galleries, shooting lodges, a huge Franz Lehar chorus of retainers, deer parks and a brace of medieval castles. Much of these holdings slipped away, as Louis, with somewhat less than the usual family zest and acumen in financial affairs, turned to a study of philosophy and the arts.

It is 132 years since Napoleon, after Austerlitz, made mince-meat of the Holy Roman empire and even more ruthlessly dismembered Austria. Nathan, James and Solomon von Rothschild, sons of Mayer Anselm, founder of the line, not only saved their holdings, but extended their dominions to the remotest corner of Europe.

These vast ramifications of their fortune, one of the largest in the history of the world, were in land, steel, coal, manufactures and munitions, and, in later decades, in oil and hydroelectric power.

Libraries have been written about them, one notable record being Zola's "L'Argent." Their continental money matrix has been a stabilizer at times. It is possible that the Vienna jail door clangs the end of a dynasty and an epoch—but not quite certain. History will tell.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses WATER--the Elixir of Life

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York.

OF ALL the elements required to support life and maintain health and efficiency, water takes precedence. Without it, the protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins, which build and repair tissues, provide motive power for the body engine, and regulate the complex processes necessary to existence would be utterly useless.

Water is the magic stream through which all nutritive elements are carried into and through the body and there held in suspension. It is the ever-ready messenger which distributes heat, moisture and body-building material, where and as it is needed.

Man Is a Sponge

Our bodies are like water-logged sponges, for we carry water to the limit of our capacity. A human being is more than two-thirds water, and this proportion must be maintained. If health and strength are to be preserved.

There is enough water in a person weighing 150 pounds to fill a 15-gallon barrel. Muscles, liver and kidneys are about 80 per cent water, the brain 85 per cent. Even bone is made up of more than one-third water, so you can see that the old adage "dry as a bone" is not strictly accurate.

No cell can function unless it is constantly bathed in fluid. Furthermore, the cells depend upon water to transport their foods through the blood. This alone requires ten pounds of water in constant circulation.

We may term these functions an incoming service. But it is equally important as an outgoing stream. The cells need water to flush away their waste products. And if the surface of the lungs is not kept moist, there can be no intake of oxygen, no output of carbon dioxide.

Without water, no waste would be carried out of the body. Poisonous substances would remain to wreck the system within a short time. Water flushes the countless channels of physical existence—even while we sleep, for it constantly passes from the body through the lungs and skin, as well as through the bowels and kidneys.

Water Starvation

Where do we get all this water? When we are thirsty, we take a

WE OFFER ★ A New Food Department

★ All the accumulated knowledge and experience of C. Houston Goudiss, the man who for 30 years has exerted a wide influence on the food habits of this nation, are now available to homemakers through the series of articles now appearing in this newspaper. These discussions are as fascinating as fiction, as up to date as tomorrow, and, above all, authoritative. For no matter what aspect of food is under discussion, C. Houston Goudiss knows whereof he speaks.

★ His work has been a devotion to the study of food, both from the productive and the manufactured standpoint. He believes that better food means a better nation. Sharing these views, we have secured him to assist in carrying out our aims—to be the best available guide in the most important of all matters that affect the homes of the readers of this newspaper—for health, happiness and prosperity depend first of all upon food.

★ Every homemaker will want to clip these articles, and save them. She will find them invaluable aids in keeping her family properly fed.

drink and there the interest of most people ends.

Few individuals give proper consideration to supplying the body with all the water it needs. Yet, when the water content of the body diminishes, health and life are in danger. A loss of 10 per cent of body water is a serious matter and a loss of 20 per cent is usually fatal.

It is only in rare instances—such as when lost in a desert—that man actually dies of thirst, for even when no fluids are drunk, water is consumed with food. But all about us we see men and women suffering from the effects of water starvation. Some indications of this are dryness of the skin and lips, mucous membranes and scalp. There is also danger of damaging the kidneys which require water to flush away the acid products of metabolism. And very often constipation can be traced to a deficiency of water, which is necessary to soften the contents of the intestinal canal.

None of these ill effects may be feared if you take enough water.

How Much Is Enough?

A healthy, normal individual requires about four quarts of water every 24 hours. That requirement varies somewhat with the season. In hot weather there is a greater elimination of water through perspiration and that loss must be replaced.

However, it is not necessary to drink four quarts of water a day. For part of our needs are supplied by food. The body draws upon three sources for its water: First, water taken as a drink or in other liquids; second, water supplied by foods, especially fruits and vegetables, for although solid foods appear dry, most of them are in fact from 75 to 95 per cent water; third, water formed in the tissues in the combustion of fuel foods. Fat gives the most water when burned. In fact, it produces more water than the weight of the original fat. Sugar gives the least.

Foods Rich in Water

A half-pound potato contains nearly a full glass of water. Some other foods that are more than 70 per cent water are asparagus, berries, string beans, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, cucumber, eggs, citrus fruits, cherries, grapes, melons, apples, raw and cooked greens, milk, onions, cooked green peas, boiled potatoes, sauerkraut, shell fish, meat stews, tomatoes and squash.

Foods containing less than 30 per cent water include butter, cakes, candies, ready-to-eat cereals, crackers, dried fruits, nuts, potato chips, sausage, bacon, syrups and zwieback.

Avoid the Dry Habit

In addition to the water consumed with food, every normal individual should drink about six glasses of liquid daily—as water, milk, coffee, tea or other beverages.

Most people drink far too little water. Women often have the mistaken notion that water will make them fat. To demonstrate the fallacy of this idea, a world-famous physician once remarked that if that were true, poor people would long ago have adopted the practice.

It is possible to drink too much water and those who are suffering from disease should be guided by their physician in determining the amount required. But most normal people could increase both mental and physical efficiency by taking more of this magic fluid.

Drink Water with Meals

The question is often asked—"Is it wise to drink water with meals?" The answer is "Yes."

There is evidence that the drinking of a reasonable amount of water with meals by normal individuals stimulates the secretion of gastric juice, thereby improving digestion. It has also been demonstrated that it aids in the absorption of food by the body and retards the growth of intestinal bacteria.

The homemaker should be just as conscientious in providing her family with sufficient water as with adequate amounts of the other food substances. For water must be included in the list of essential food constituents. It is in truth, the ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. T. R.—Answering your question as to what is the most efficient time to begin reducing—the proper time is when the weight first begins to climb above normal. Most people wait until they are 20 or 30 pounds overweight and then reducing becomes more difficult.

Miss T. P. G.—Yes, there is a stimulant in cocoa that closely resembles caffeine in coffee. But a cup of cocoa contains less of the stimulant than is found in a cup of tea or coffee.

Mrs. A. R. M.—No, milk is not fattening. Women especially fear that milk will increase their weight, but this fear is not justified, since a pint of milk, or two large glasses, only supplies 340 calories.

Why . . . an Oil Polish?

And here, home-makers, is why: The oil element in polish is absolutely essential to all fine wood! For the same reason that we oil machinery—water our plants—massage cream into the face—is oil polish used! The same principle applies—for wood definitely requires this attention to keep it "alive!" The best oil polish has a fine, non-greasy oil base—and it is just this—when rubbed or massaged into the furniture—that prevents the wood from checking, drying out, splitting or cracking. Furniture will not do any of these things, when cared for—and it is the combination of the "oil" and the "rubbing" that prevents it! For the quality oil-polish "feeds" the hungry finish—keeps the wood young! Other polishes may give a quick, easy-to-achieve luster—but a little time and energy (it should not be labor) on the part of the housewife, will pay dividends in the looks and long life of her furniture and woodwork. All experts agree that an oil polish properly used (apply on damp cloth—as directed) is not only better—it is vital! And so, home-makers, take this important tip: Always use an oil polish—and the best one!

Washington News

Letter

By Congressman Andrew J. Tansue

REORGANIZATION DEFEATED

Washington, D. C. Governmental reorganization as proposed by the administration was defeated late last week when the House of Representatives voted 204 to 196 to recommit the bill to the Reorganization Committee. This vote was equivalent to killing the measure for this session after one of the most intensive debates in the history of the House and after Congressional officials had been deluged with thousands of letters and telegrams. Your Congressman voted with the minority in the close competition after amendments had been accepted by the committee which included one provided that a majority of Congress would have the final say in regard to any reorganization taking place under the bill. In final analysis the vote became a test of confidence in President Roosevelt and your congressman and all but one of the Michigan Democratic Delegation in the House voted to signify that we have complete confidence in President Roosevelt who has lead this country out of its depression and who has done more for the underprivileged in this country than any recent occupant of the White House.

ANALYTICAL CONSIDERATION
From an impersonal and impartial viewpoint aside from the propaganda that has been spread throughout the nation in an effort to shake the confidence of the people in President Roosevelt, the Reorganization Bill with the accepted amendments was a good measure worthy of the support of the majority in the House. Before the flood of Propaganda loosed almost everyone conceded that Government machinery should be reorganized and modernized so that duplicated activities of various agencies could be consolidated for the benefit of modernized methods without which industry and private business could not exist. It was an effort to do what President have tried to do for 30 years. But the propagandists, who had shouted the loudest for business efficiency in Government, were the first to cry "Dictatorship" when the Administration tried to give them the efficiency the country demanded. The amendments that had been accepted and the assurances that were given that there would be no changes in the Conference Committee to defeat the purpose of the amendments, simply gave to the President the authority to reorganize the government and any part or all of his plans could have been defeated by a simple majority in Congress.

REEMPLOYMENT LEGISLATION

The reemployment plan announced last week by your Congressman in conjunction with four other members of the Michigan Democratic Delegation in the White House, was progressing satisfactorily and had reached the stage where a tentative draft of a bill had been prepared. When the measure is ready for presentation to the Congress it will be introduced as the results of a comprehensive study of economic and industrial conditions by the five Michigan Congressmen. The plan would abolish relief and W. P. A. in favor of direct subsidies to industry to give employment to 3,000,000 persons taken from Government assistance, every person who wants to work will have a chance to work. At the White House plans were discussed to start priming the pump again with a Presidential message to Congress in the process of preparation. The President announced he was not quite ready to reveal details of the proposed plan for a new series of Public Works. It was stated that $1,000,000,000 would not be sufficient for relief of the unemployed.

HOME BUILDING

Home building continued as the bright spot in national economic picture as Federal Housing Administration organization had broken all previous records with a business record of $100,000,000 during March. This represented 95 per cent in home mortgages and was 40 percent more than the same month last year. On the announcement of a new public spending policy the stock market took an upward turn for the first time in several weeks and at the end of the week the economic outlet was described as "brighter" by economic experts.

ADEQUATE PROTECTION

Army Day in Washington revealed in a parade of 12000 soldiers, marines and military school cadets, that the United States, while a peace loving nation, is not lagging behind in world development of armament. The artillery and tank exhibits in the parade with tanks on rubber treads and capable of high speeds,
