History of Tennis Game

No. 1 The History of American Tennis

The United States saw its first tennis game in 1875, when it was introduced in this country by Dr. James Dwight. It became very popular in that year and its interest has grown ever since. In 1881 the United States Tennis Association was formed, and a tournament held in New York, with thirty five clubs entering. The same year a National championship was held at Newport, R. I.

A cup, known as Davis Cup was

By Thos. M. Alexander

Offered by Dwight F. Davis for international competition in the year 1900. Since 1900 the international matches have added a great deal of interest to tennis fans.

Tennis is one of the earliest games, its origin unknown. The old game of tennis was usually played by kings, and is sometimes referred to as the "Royal Game". The game is played with rackets and balls on hard grass, gravel, clay or asphalt. The balls are 2 1/2 inches in diameter, made of rubber, covered with felt. Rackets are 8 by 15 inches in diameter, having a hickory or ash frame, and a handle made of cedar. The frames are strung with gut or silk, usually strung very tight. Steel rackets are in use, but are not recommended by the author. A court 78' by 27' is used, being lined with tape or lime. The court has a 4 1/2' alley, used when four people play. The court is divided into halves by three foot net. Each half is again divided 21' from the net, and this space is bisected into rectangles, called RECEIVING COURTS NEXT WEEK. How to keep score—No. 2.

The free sound motion picture shows, sponsored by the business men will start on the square Saturday night, May 14.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAY IS SATURDAY NIGHT

The annual high school play will be put on at the Pinckney high auditorium on Saturday night, May 7. The play selected this year is a rollicking farce-comedy entitled "Fixing It for Father". It is directed by John Wise and put on by special arrangement with the Walter Baker Co. The specialties are songs by the 6th and 7th grades and tap dancing by Rita Kennedy and Rosemary and Muriel Read. Admission 25c and 15c. Reserved seats on sale at drug store.

BLACTOPPING OF ROAD IS STARTED

The county road commission is now engaged in blacktopping the one and a quarter stretch of road running south from the village to Harris Corners.

YOUNGLOVE PUPIL IS CHAMPION SPELLER

In the spelling contests held at the Pinckney high school last Friday in which pupils of the Pinckney school and district schools competed the championship was won by Caroline Lathers, 14, a pupil of the Younglove school of which Mrs. Ethel Smollett is teacher. Betty Baughn, the Pinckney school entry won second prize. The word the Pinckney entry failed on was seine.

Tax Sale Is on at Howell

Annual Tax Sale Starts at the Court House in Howell Tuesday. Few Sales Reported

Hundreds of people showed up at the county treasurer's office Monday at Howell to pay their taxes and save their property from the delinquent tax sale that started Tuesday. This complicated matters as it made it necessary to recheck the tax roll. Among the sections yet unchecked is Pinckney village. We understand the sale was started Tuesday and postponed to permit the rolls to be rechecked. The tax sales certainly has been the means of putting a lot of money into the hands of the county treasurers which otherwise they would not have received.

At the tax sale in Howell Tuesday one description was put up and the sale adjourned. Tuesday Unadilla and two were put up and again the sale was adjourned. All property must be sold 3 times. If there are no bidders the land reverts to the state. The owner can redeem it by paying the tax and one percent a month to the state.

TAKES NAVAL ACADEMY EXAMINATION

Ralph Otwell, Pinckney high school senior, who was recommended for an appointment to the United States Naval Academy by Congressman Transue took his entrance examination at the University of Michigan last week. If he passes he will go to Annapolis for his physical test. We commend Ralph for his success in securing this appointment. We believe he is the first local boy ever to be so honored.

WHITE . . . METZ

The marriage of Mrs. Mae White of Pinckney to Joe Metz of Howell took place at St. Mary's church, in Pinckney on Tuesday morning, Rev. James Carolan officiating. Only a few immediate relatives were present. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of Lee Lavey after which the newly weds left on a short trip. They will live at Howell where the groom is the janitor of the school. The Dispatch extends congratulations.

HURON-CLINTON VALLEY ASSOC. MEETS

The Huron-Clinton River Valley Assoc. is holding a meeting at the Hot-1 Old, in Lansing today. The object of this organization is to get a scenic drive built along the banks of the river from Dexter up the Huron to Milford and then up the Clinton River to Mt. Clemens. The total distance is about 147 miles. It is believed most of the right of way would be donated. No costs estimate is yet available and the method of raising funds or getting the work done has not yet been determined. Bruce McPherson of Howell is the county representative. Supervisor Norman Reason received an invitation to Lansing.

MATT BRADY

Matt Brady, 66 died suddenly at home in Howell Tuesday. He was working in his yard when he was seized with a heart attack. He lived only a short time after he was carried to his home. Surviving are his wife, formerly Blanche Moran, two sons, Joe and Edward, and two daughters, Katherine and Helen. Also a sister, Mrs. Mary Hoisel. The deceased was the son of the late Joseph and Ann Lavey Brady of Pinckney. In his younger days he was a race horse driver. Later he moved to Howell where he was in the livery business. For years he was salesman for the International Harvester Co. At the present time he was employed by the Citizens' Automobile Insurance Company as an adjuster.

The funeral and burial will be at Howell Friday at 10:00 a. m.

BOY SCOUTS APPEAL TO PINCKNEYITES

The Boy Scouts are endeavoring to earn money to attend camp this summer so if any one can help them by saving old papers and magazines, they will gather them up Saturday, May 14th.

A DISTURBANCE IN UNADILLA

All evidently has not been as it should be in our neighboring township of Unadilla. Last Thursday, L. Knickerbocker, 39, a Standard Oil agent at Chelsea and Stanley Miller of North Lake were arrested for assault to do great bodily harm on the person of Arthur Blanchard, a Unadilla farmer. The two men are alleged to have forced their way into Blanchard's home in the middle of the night and beaten him up. Justice Knapp postponed the hearing until May 12. The men were released on bonds of $100 each. The affair is said to have started over remarks by Blanchard concerning Mrs. Miller in Miller's beer garden at North Lake.

TAX SALE HELD YESTERDAY

The various counties held their delinquent tax sales yesterday. All would not be completed however as the law allows for postponements if there is insufficient time to complete the sale. Treas. Sparks of Oakland county stated that only one description a day will be sold in order to give the clerks a chance to check all descriptions. About 50,000 descriptions are to be sold.

Political Dope of the Fall Campaign

It's Too Early Yet for Anything Definite but The Following Is the Gossip They Dish Out Around the County Seat

The primary and fall campaigns are drawing near and candidates for the various offices are being discussed. However, it is a long time to the elections and much can happen before then.

The state campaign is the only one in which there is much action now. Governor Murphy, Ex-Gov. Fitzgerald and Harry Toy, the gubernatorial candidates are all very active and have been touring the state. Murphy and Toy have been making speeches right and left, while Fitzgerald has confined himself to handshaking and visiting the leaders in the different counties. Despite his wish it now looks as if Governor Murphy would be unopposed in the primaries and that the two Republican candidates would furnish the fireworks.

While Toy has been soft-pedalling the McKay charges, his supporters have not. Fitzgerald felt himself compelled to answer a letter written by George Averill, editor of the Birmingham Eclectic to Merl Daffoe for his support of Fitzgerald. Fitzgerald in a letter published in the Charlotte paper denied that McKay was the purchasing czar and dominated the Fitzgerald administration and said that in the 20 years he had known McKay, the latter had not proposed one wrong thing. In fact he denied that there is such a thing as McKayism. Averill is a former president of the Michigan Press Association.

In the Congressional race it is said that two former Congressmen, Wm. Blackney of Flint and Seymour Person of Lansing will compete for the Republican nomination.

This county is expected to give Fitzgerald a majority over Toy in the primary. Toy has started his campaign here, speaking at the American Legion banquet and getting some publicity in the papers. Jay Sweeney and Burr Hoover are regarded as the Toy leaders here while the older politicians of the Lynn Gardner era are the Fitzgerald supporters.

In the county a complete slate was named to us. Efforts in the past to get some of them mentioned to run for office have failed and probably will again.

Senator Little will run again for state senator and his Democrat opponent may be Martin Lavan of Brighton. Charles P. Adams will be a third term candidate for the legislature. Thurber Cornell is also considering entering.

For sheriff, Fred Cronnenwett is being urged to run. Claude Fawcett is also looking the ground over.

For prosecutor Stanley Berriman, the incumbent, Joe Gates and Reed Fletcher are expected to enter.

For the other offices the present office holders will probably not have opposition as all we understand will be candidates for reelection.

On the Democrat side of the fence in the county all is quite and the nominees will probably have to be drafted except for sheriff where Irvin Kennedy will be a candidate for a second term.

We are told by one leading Republican that if he had his way every candidate would be opposed in the primaries as it forces them to go out and work and gets the vote out thus helping the other candidates.

Petitions nominating Melville McPherson, Howell, for governor were filed Monday. He is a Republican. Reports are that O. L. Smith for who petitions are out will withdraw. He does not like the charges made that he is a ghost candidate.

SENIOR PARTS AWARDED

Miss Betty Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Carr has been named valedictorian of the Pinckney high school class of '38. Miss Jean Adams daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Adams was named salutatorian.

The Carr family seems to have a monopoly on valedictories. Of their three children who have already graduated, Wayne and Ralph were valedictorians, Janice was salutatorian.

CURRENT COMMENT

Facist Italy and Nazi Germany, the Spanish revolution would have never happened. Since Hitler took over Austria and menaced Czechoslovakia England and Russia have been bluffed in to withholding aid from the Loyalists and France is too torn up by internal dissension to aid Spain. This country fears that if Mussolini conquers Spain he will then look for other countries to conquer.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By Ye Editor"

For some time the assertion has been repeatedly made that owing to the improvement of labor saving machinery yearly a great number of the unemployed will never be needed in industry again. This has been disputed by the statement that while the need of labor has been decreased in one branch of industry it has been increased in others. However, the action of the county welfare department in Genesee County would seem to bear out the first statement as it is announced that plans are being made there to ship 12,000 family men who have been there less than two years to other parts of the country, because, "They will never be needed by industry there." Welfare Administrator Luddington backs up his statement by saying a survey has been made and there is no possibility of providing work for this number and the welfare department will be unable to carry the increased load if they are thrown on relief.

Despite considerable third party propaganda being discriminated the Washington correspondent of the Detroit Free Press doubts that there will be a third major political party formed in 1940. For one thing the laws of 50 per cent of the states would have to be changed and it is too late for that. In 1924, "Old Bob LaFollette" found the ballot boxes of many states locked against him and in 1936 Lemke only got his name on the ballot in 13 states. Moreover, an independent liberal party would only play into the hands of a conservative and enable a conservative Democrat or Republican to steal into the White House in 1940 on a squeaky play.

Just what happened at the conference between President Roosevelt and Henry Ford last week will probably remain a mystery. The papers printed many articles on what they understood was said but failed to quote the exact words of either as no news correspondents were present at the meeting. Henry Ford absolutely refused to talk beyond saying he gave the president no advice at the meeting. In an article published in a Boston newspaper, he stated that he favored vice president Garner for president in 1940. Later Mr. Ford stated that this did not constitute an endorsement of Mr. Garner.

Roy Larsen, publisher of the Life magazine, was acquitted by three judges in special session in New York state on a charge of obscene publishing. In a recent issue of his magazine he published still pictures from the film, "Birth of a Baby". This aroused much feeling at the time and the sale of Life was down on newsstands in some places. However, the limits seem to have become rather stretched in late years.

For some time workers have protested that they have had to stand all the wage cuts and layoffs while the high officials wages were maintained at high level. The workers protest never got anywhere. At a recent General Motors meeting of stockholders, one John J. Gilbert, a minority stockholder criticized the salary of Alfred Sloan, chairman of the General Motors Board as excessive. Sloan is said to be one of the highest salaried officials in the United States. Gilbert's charge was hotly denied by Lamont Dupont, another director, who stated that corporation must pay high salaries in order to keep successful executives.

The charge is freely made that the Communistic element here are to blame for the favor shown by the press to the loyalist force in Spain. We doubt that. Even the Detroit Free Press and Saturday Evening Post, who could not, by the widest imagination, be classed as Communist publications are inclined to favor the Spanish Loyalists. The truth of the matter is the press is fearful of what will follow when the Spanish insurgents win. Without aid from

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Danas," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad.

CHAPTER II

Sally Ann Dana got through the first difficult moments of her meeting with her third cousin by making persistent talk about the nonagenarian.

"But— isn't she priceless? Ninety-six—and so quick and keen and clear! She's like—what?—a crisp, brittle little old autumn leaf blowing along."

"Exactly," he agreed. "And I'm hoping that she may just blow on and away, some day. It should be like that."

"I believe it will be. One can't conceive of helplessness and indignities for her. I'm sure she'll just suddenly—and simply—stop."

She walked to the window and stood looking out, her back to him. "Gasp for your tea?" He rang. She turned toward him and he nodded approval. "You've pasted down the calendar, haven't you, Sally Ann?" He offered her a cigarette.

She shrugged, leaning nearer for a light. "Aunt Helena says I'm skin and bones."

"Nice skin and bones. The grand-girls, as the matriarch calls them, will thirst for your gore; a lot of too, too solid flesh at Danavale. Thanks, Jens. Miss Dana will pour for me. You remember Jens, Sally Ann?"

"Of course! How are you, Jens?" The tall, stooped Swede was very well and hoped she was the same. He arranged the tray with heavy care and went creaking away.

"Oh, this is nice!" the traveler said contentedly. "Did Jens make these sandwiches? Fancy—with those sledge-hammer hands! But—why the third cup?"

"Sarah Lynn. She's very keen to meet you here, rather than at home, or at Aunt Helena's."

Sally Ann's black brows lifted. "Must I muss up my first returning raptures with the Infant Class?"

"This child is rather special. Enough like you to be, in kennel talk, your little sister."

"Ah! The dark one! Great-granny wants me to take abroad? Well, I won't." She took a second sandwich. "I haven't the faintest intention of weighting myself with entangling alliances. I'm utterly, comfortably selfish and intend to remain so. That's what keeps me young and spry," she told him cheerfully. "Duty-doing Danas, I observe, wax portly."

The man in the wheel-chair laughed. "Isn't it astonishing how the dark legend persists?"

"Absurd, of course."

"Exactly. Though Cousin Adelaide—Sarah Lynn's mother—rose to battle with the foolish fable. She considers it a quaint and annoying tribal superstition. If Sarah Lynn is a square peg—which she does not for a moment concede—she must and shall, notwithstanding, be snugly fitted into her round hole."

"And does she bring it off?"

He shook his head. "Sarah Lynn merely walks through her part, usually scowling. Cousin Adelaide gave her a large and heavy coming-out party, but she didn't emerge. Now I fancy the idea is to get her married as expeditiously as possible and whisked away from the local landscape."

"Married? I thought she was a child."

"Nineteen. Her mother imported a pallid youth named Duncan Van Doren a couple of years ago—son of her dearest friend in her native Detroit, who needed a milder climate, winters, and who match-makes busily but to no avail."

"Ah?" said his third cousin civilly but without enthusiasm. "Lynn, you haven't said whether you liked my 'Musical Miles'?"

"Enormously! I wrote you, but the letter evidently passed you at sea. Extraordinarily nice piece of work, Sally Ann. The Salzberg 'Festpiece' chapter was a gem! You're having topping notices, aren't you?"

"Not bad. Someone's coming." A door had banged below.

"Come up, Sarah Lynn!" the man called.

But, thundering steps took the stairs in bounds and a boy of seventeen burst into the room. He was fair and freckled, with a wide mouth and singularly innocent eyes.

"Bill!" Lynn Dana greeted him, surprised. "This is Sarah Lynn's brother, Sally Ann."

"How do you do, Bill? Will you have some tea?"

"Goah, no," he said, shocked. "No, thanks, Uncle Lynn, I can't sit down. I got to beat it before Sarah Lynn gets here, and don't peep to her that I came, will you?" He turned to the woman with a vivid fusion of embarrassment and urgency. "Say, listen, would you take my sister with you when you go traveling again?"

Sally Ann smiled at him. "Afraid I couldn't do that, Bill."

"Gee, she's simply got to beat it, that's all! She can't stick around here much longer."

"But—why?"

He looked nervously out of the window. "Well—I can't make you understand, I guess, because I got to make it snappy, but she's different from most of the dumb eggs around here and my mother can't see it, and she makes her do all the things they do, and there's a dumb egg here from Detroit that my mother's always pulling for and Sarah Lynn can't see him with a spy-glass, but I'm scared stiff she'll just sort of boil over, if you know what I mean, and do something dumb!" He came to a breathless stop, his round blue eyes on her face.

Sally Ann found him singularly appealing. "Oh, I'm sure she won't, with you to look after her, Bill! Great luck for a girl to have a brother on the job."

"Yeah, but look—I'm in high school all day and in bed all night, account I'm in training, and she has to do all these dumb things, and she's absolutely cuckoo about my mother and she wants to please her and when my mother's sore at something, why Sarah Lynn just pretty near dies, so it's got me down, kind of, worrying, and—" he looked out again. "Gee! I gotta take it on the lam! Here she comes! Well, look—you kind of think it over, will you? Uncle Lynn, you tell her! He plunged out of the room and they heard him leaping down the stairs."

"Rather a dear, that lad!" Sally Ann said. She set her cup down and walked to the window to see a girl and a greyhound coming up the road at a smooth and lively speed. "She's wearing exactly the right dog for her type, isn't she?"

"Quite! It's a thing to watch—Sarah Lynn and Lightning skimming over the fields," said the man who had sat in a chair for more than 20 years.

Sally Ann walked to the fireplace and looked at a pipe-rack done in painstaking pyrography with some unconvincing red poppies painted in. Below, in unsteady letters, was the verse:

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

His eyes followed her gravely. "My word, Lynn! You still have it."

"Yes," he said.

Sally Ann was remembering the golden-curl, violet-eyed, mother-of-pearl maiden who had made that atrocity for Lynn Dana in the first frightful months after his accident. "If only she hadn't died!" she reflected.

Sarah Lynn came up so silently that the traveling cousin didn't know she was in the room until she heard Lynn say—

"Hello, Sarah Lynn! Why didn't you bring Lightning up?"

"I did ask her, Uncle Lynn, but she didn't care to, this afternoon."

It was an oddly deep voice for a girl.

"Sally Ann, meet yourself at nineteen!" the host said with the air of a showman.

She saw a thin young thing in a brown knitted sports frock and beret, olive-skinned, big-eyed, awkward now, in spite of the graceful swiftness she had observed from the window.

"How do you do, my dear? He flatters me! You are far nicer than I was."

"Am I?" the girl interrogated her gravely, looking at her swiftly and away again. "I don't think I can be."

"How do you take your tea, Sarah Lynn? Nice name, isn't it?"

"Lemon and cream. I mean lemon and sugar." She flushed and her cup rattled on its saucer.

"You might safely dive into the thickest cream. We"—she took her casually into the dark sorority—"never seem to put on upholstery."

The girl, however, could not be put at her ease for all the kind pains. Sally Ann had the feeling that she was silent because she was afraid of saying, "Please, please, won't you take me away?"—if she spoke, and she was sorry for her and a trifle bored and a good deal annoyed. Her first long-looked-forward-to visit with Lynn! She stood up presently, eyes on her wrist.

"Nearly six! I'd forgotten these afternoon Dana dinners! Aunt Helena'll be agitated. Want to walk along with me, Sarah Lynn?"

They went down together, stopping for a word with the ancestress. Outside, the greyhound, brindle-brown, sharp-curved and flat as a book-mark, sprang upon Sarah Lynn with extravagant rapture.

"Lightning, dear," she said absently.

The creature went bounding ahead of them. She made the traveler think of the figurines in white metal, futuristic and exciting, which had been a recent rage in Paris. "I don't believe I've ever met a greyhound socially before. Are they satisfactory?"

"I think so. She doesn't mind very well, but I—"

"—don't mind very much?" Sally Ann finished for her.

"No. I think it gives her more character. All the other dogs are so busy heeling and retrieving and charging and obeying." She was clearly more comfortable now, falling into rhythm with the older woman's long strides.

"I know. They strive to please. There is something rather servile about it, crawling back to lick the foot that kicks them, dying on their master's grave. Lightning, now, would hardly die on your grave unless it fitted in conveniently with her regular plans for her demise?"

Sarah Lynn gave a sudden laugh, deep and brief. "Oh, that's so absolutely true!"

"Well, here we are at Aunt Helena's. Nice to have seen you, Sarah Lynn. I'd like a walk with you and Lightning soon."

Her hostess was waiting in the hall, dressed for dinner, and there was the pleasantly muted sound of other Danas foregathered in the living-room.

"I'll be done and down in 20 minutes, Aunt Helena," the guest encouraged her.

The limp brown lace had been painstakingly pressed and her bath was drawn, but a short and stocky figure rose up before her.

"Miss Dana! If I might bother you a moment?"

"Penny! How do you do, Miss Pennington?"

stop, his round blue eyes on her face.

Sally Ann found him singularly appealing. "Oh, I'm sure she won't, with you to look after her, Bill! Great luck for a girl to have a brother on the job."

Light-Hearted Fashions

THE approach of summer makes us all long to get into bright, easy, carefree clothes, even if we're planning to vacation at home, with occasional week-ends at the lake or seaside. These two patterns bring you styles that both tailor quickly and easily in denim, gingham, seersucker or jersey. Use a brilliant handkerchief print for the top—any sturdy cotton. Here's a holiday outfit you'll thoroughly enjoy.

The Adorable Dirndl.

Nothing is more popular, because nothing is more becoming to slim young figures. It's such a gay, easy-to-wear fashion, and the square neckline is flattering. For a dirndl, choose something in a lively print—linen, chintz and percale are best. Be sure the colors are as complimentary to your skin as that fitted, shirred waistline is to your figure!

The Patterns.

1332 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3 3/4 yards of 39-inch material for the bolero and slacks; 3/4 yard for the top.

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Butter the Raisins.—A good way to keep raisins from going to the bottom of a cake is to roll them in butter before placing them in the batter.

Grease the Paper.—Grease both the pan and paper when lining cake pans.

Washing a Raincoat.—Soap should never be used when washing a raincoat. Instead, use a solution of one pound of alum to three gallons of water.

Odors Eliminated.—Left-over vegetables having a strong smell, such as cabbage, onions, cauliflower, etc., should be put into a glass jar and the top screwed on tightly before placing in the refrigerator. Otherwise the whole ice box will take up the unpleasant odor.

Icing Will Not Run.—If you will dust your cakes with cornstarch before icing, the icing will not tend to run.

Keeping Sliced Bananas.—You can keep ripe bananas from turning dark after slicing if you cover them with any fruit juice or sprinkle them with lemon juice.

Grind Cheese.—When using cheese for macaroni, potatoes, etc., do not grate it. Put it through the fine cutter of your meat chopper and you will not have any small pieces left over.

Hanging New Curtains.—Baste a tack in new curtains under the top hem where it will not show, then if the curtains shrink when first laundered it will be easy to let out the extra length.

Prevents Smoke.—To avoid smoke when making griddle cakes, use a salt bag instead of fat to prevent them from sticking.

Merely fill a small, clean cloth bag with salt and rub it over the hot griddle each time fresh batter is put on.

Wash Before Using.—Launder new linens before you use them. As snowy white as your new table cloth or sheets may look, they are bound to be affected by handling of prospective buyers and sales clerks, or by the dusty air in the store. You will be surprised to see the amount of dirt that appears in the water when you wash these new articles for the first time.

Whale Is a Mammal

One of the commonest popular errors of zoology is the notion that the whale is some sort of fish. It is not; it is a mammal which went to sea. The whale is warm-blooded, has a well-developed brain, and in all other respects shows a far higher organization than any of the fishes. Its young are born alive, and are suckled and cared for by the mother as with land mammals.

Editor Spikes Idea of Germ Warfare; Likens Current Gabble to Propaganda

Rumor had it, during the World war, that the widespread epidemic of the fatal so-called Spanish influenza was of German origin. The story was that the Germans had promoted this disastrous epidemic and, to prevent the world from knowing of their deed, had drawn a red herring across the trail by dubbing the disease Spanish. It was neither German nor Spanish; the rumor was simply propaganda, according to the editor of Scientific American.

Today, he says, there are many people who talk of bacterial warfare with as much credulity as those who were duped by wartime rumor mongers. Recently there was a discussion of germ warfare in the German military publication, "Deutsche Wehr," based on a report of an Italian medical officer. Apparently some Germans and Italians are studying the possibilities of the method as a paralyzer of the enemy's morale.

Talk of germ warfare became so insistent during the World war that the League of Nations later set up a commission to study wholesale contagion and infection. The commission reported that a man-made epidemic would be limited by our present knowledge of hygiene and microbiology and, further, that such epidemics would not have decisive effect upon the issue of hostilities. So far as experts know, this holds true today, and effectually answers the German article—until much more is learned of the subject.

Apparently study will continue, the editor says. What the breeders of ghastliness will have to do before success—awful death to their enemies—rewards their efforts will be to discipline their germs. Otherwise, the scourge inevitably would backfire, no matter how far inland the germs were distributed. Explosives still will do a better job against the enemy.

Statistics show that the number of traffic accidents increases after sundown despite the fact that there are fewer cars on the road at that time of day.

Night driving requires additional care and slower speed. Possibly the primary reason for the fact that the greater percentage of accidents occurs at night is the tendency of so many motorists to drive at daylight speed. The lights on present day automobiles, although much improved, still do not throw a beam far enough to allow us to see objects a great distance ahead. Consequently we do not have sufficient time to apply the brakes when we come upon a stalled truck or another object on the highway.

As daylight grows dim, decrease your speed and increase your cautiousness.

BUYERS CAUTIONED ON USED CAR TITLES

Officials of the department of the state caution purchasers of used cars the titles of which bear the liens on their faces, to secure discharges of liens from dealers, for their protection.

It is pointed out that while original purchase liens on new cars are noted on the faces of titles, proof of discharge of liens is limited to original owner's statement to dealers when they assign titles. A dealer may in good faith sign the title when selling the car, indicating that no liens are against it. A first mortgagee, however, may remove the car if the original lien has never been discharged. While it is true that the subsequent purchaser may have the recourse to the dealer for his representation as to the absence of liens, there is no remedy if the dealer has in the meantime gone out of business, instances of which have occurred.

Frank W. Carney, director of the motor vehicle division of the department of state, has issued special instructions to all branch managers concerning the handling of titles submitted for transfer, when he appears on their faces. Discharge of liens of finance companies, or state of Michigan at a public sale, is required. The question of the transfer of the title has been transferred to the subsequent purchaser, are required.

Precautions to guard used car buyers have been adopted, in view of the recent activity in the used car market, through sales through both dealers and individual owners.

WHAT IS THEIR PLAN?

Already the consistent opponents of the Roosevelt Administration have begun their clamor against the enactment of the relief and business revival program which was the subject of the President's recent message to Congress. Mr. Snell, the extremely minority leader in the House, of course sees in it a usurpation of the Congressional functions and an advance to dictatorship.

If Franklin D. Roosevelt promulgated the Ten Commandments Mr. Snell would be quick to point out that the proclamation was a subtly disguised effort of the Chief Executive to assume authority to regulate the morals of the American people and that if Congress endorsed the proposal it would mean the absolute destruction of the American form of government and the setting up of a Fascist system in this country.

The distinguished columnist Frank Kent and Mark Sullivan, of course condemn it. That is why they are writing for the papers.

It is to be observed that none of these economists and statesmen suggests a better plan or any substitute plan, for bringing about re-employment, providing for the destitute, or getting business back to healthy activity. They deplore the situation and, consistent as ever, they insist that anything that the President does to attract youngsters in the spring, must be wrong. It is a pity that such a question, which has been a question of the practical and educational trend offered in a little garden in government, is being decided by a billion-dollar director of the nursery at the Michigan State College.

By Congressman Andrew J. Transue

Tax Exemption

While Congress in both the House and Senate, was moving toward final consideration of the Conference Committee's Report on the Tax Bill, President Roosevelt submitted to the Congress a new message on taxation, in which he called upon Congress to put an end to tax exemptions, both of State and Federal salaries. The President, Members of Congress and all Federal employees, with the exception of Federal judges holding office prior to 1932, now are subject to Federal Income Taxes. The suggested legislation will make state and local government employees subject to Federal income taxes and conversely Federal employees subject to state income taxes.

No Amendment Necessary

In this special message to both the Houses of Congress the President asserted that the language of the 16th amendment to the Constitution plainly calls for collection of taxes "on incomes from whatever sources derived". And further, that because the courts through a series of judicial decisions have read into the 16th amendment a policy of reciprocal tax immunity, the President voiced the opinion that those same courts could correct the situation by future decisions. For this reason, Mr. Roosevelt expressed the belief that it is not necessary to undertake a constitutional amendment which he referred to as a "cumbersome and uncertain remedy".

Menace to Fiscal System

The chief executive said that the continuing practice of issuing tax exempt securities, "has created a vast reservoir in the hands of the very persons who equitably should not be relieved of taxes on their incomes". "This reservoir now constitutes a serious menace to the fiscal systems of both the states and the Nation because for years both the Federal Government and the States have come to rely increasingly upon graduated income taxes for their revenues". In regard to exemptions on State and Federal salaries the President said: "Tax exemptions claimed by such State and Federal officers and employees once an inequality of relatively slight importance has become a most serious defect in the fiscal systems of the State and Nation, for they rely increasingly upon graduated income taxes for their revenues."

Congressional Opinion

The general consensus of opinion in Congress was that the recommendations of the President along these lines should be adopted, and nearly all thought that the exemptions of State and Federal salaries should be removed. The only opposition that appeared was from those who differed in the manner that these reforms were to take effect, that is, whether by constitutional amendment or by an act of Congress.

Trust Buster

President Roosevelt's long-awaited "Anti-Monopoly Message" was sent to the Congress last Friday. It was one of the longest the President has written and called on Congress to authorize a comprehensive anti-trust investigation: to stop the progress of collectivism in business and turn business back to the democratic competitive order. The study proposed by the President would be conducted by the Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Justice, and the Securities and Exchange Commission, and calls for an appropriation of $500,000.

Wages and Hours

Paradoxically the consideration of the revised Wages and Hours legislation was a little farther from and a little closer to consideration by the House all at the same time. On Friday the House Rules Committee voted 8 to 6 to pigeon hole the measure which ordinarily would sound the death knell for the bill. However, Chairman Norton of the House Labor Committee moved at once to file a petition which if signed by 218 members of the House will discharge the Rules Committee from further consideration. The recent election of former Representative Lister Hill of Alabama to the Senate, no doubt, has given some of those who voted against the Wage and Hour Bill food for thought, as Senator Hill voted for the bill when a member of the House, and it was an issue in his campaign in this state of the deep South. So sure do some feel that the measure will come before this session and pass the House that plans are already afoot to filibuster the bill when it reaches the Senate.

Voteless Voters

For months the nation's capital has been witnessing an election campaign which came to a climax last Saturday, not a climax as one would expect wherein the person receiving the most votes is elected to some office or other, but one in which no matter how many people vote, or how great the majority is one way or the other on the issues involved nothing will happen for it is just a "Straw Vote".

Taxation Without Representation

Ever since the present Commission form of government was put in effect in 1873 the people of Washington have been devoid of any say in their government; how they will be taxed; or how the money will be spent. The whole purpose of the election is to show Congress the sentiment for local government and hoping thereby to have some sort of franchise granted to the residents of the capital. The campaign has rivaled any of those in our larger cities, meetings have been held, charges and counter-charges made, proclamations issued and even a "League of Voteless Women Voters" has been formed. The whole was climaxed on last Friday evening when the citizenry participated in an old-fashioned torch light parade. Perhaps nothing will come of it but at least the Washingtonians have had the fun of their first election in 67 years.

Hamburg

The honor roll of the Primary Room of Hamburg village school, Miss Helen Wenderlien, teacher for the month of April, those pupils neither absent nor tardy during the month is announced as follows: La Verne Bisard, Donald Briggs, James Featherly, Mary Gilboe, Robert Gilboe, Charlotte Gray, Roland Hackbarth, Ernestine Keenman, Evelyn Keenman, Robert Koskovich, Duane Leach, Floyd, Lee McMichael, Donald Moon, Edward Moore, Robert Moon, Mary Moore, Robert Moore, Barbaradell Way and Cheri-Nan Winkelhaus, Duane Leach is a beginner.

A NEW WALT DISNEY COMIC

"I couldn't keep house without a telephone"

WHAT a convenience sometimes to be able to shop by 'phone! No need to "drop everything" and go out on particularly busy days—or in bad weather.

How nice—and how important—to be in touch with the world even when you're home alone! The pleasant chat with the friend you don't have time to visit... the last-minute arrangements for spontaneous get-togethers, bridge games, movie parties and general good times with people you like—all these are made possible by your telephone.

No wonder so many women say: "I couldn't keep house without a telephone!" In so many practical ways this modern servant pays its own small salary—and for good measure adds much to the joy of living.

Philathea Notes

The class meets with Mrs. Meda Henry on Wednesday afternoon May 11th, for its quarterly Missionary meeting and regular business. Members and friends are cordially invited. The program committee for this meeting is composed of Mrs. Catharine Corey and Mrs. Mabel Dinkel.

A good class attendance and interest in the lesson last Sunday, with the discussion centering about Mark 9:14-29, "Following Vision With Service". Then for next Sunday the topic will be "Co-operating in the Service". Mark 9:30-41.

We were glad to see new faces in our Sunday School and trust they will feel the welcome we like to extend.

Next Sunday is "Mothers' Day," to be observed in our Church with appropriate services and with floral offerings brought in honor of these dear ones.

Quick Embroidery for a Luncheon Set

HERE an embroidered border is plainly shown. No pattern is necessary. Book offered here with contains other interesting borders of this type. Space your stitches just as they are here. The embroidery should be done in a light and a dark color. Use all strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery thread. Color suggestions are—dark and lighter blue thread on white material—dark green and light yellow on light green material—black and bright blue on pale yellow—deep rose and brown on pale pink.

Baste 1/2-inch deep hems around both mats and napkins. Working from right side with double thread, make two rows of running stitches in the dark color, as at A, catching through the hem. Thread a blunt tapestry needle with the light thread and weave through the running stitches keeping needle pointed to the left as at B. Next, weave back again, as at C, still pointing the needle to the left.

Readers who have received their copy of Mrs. Spears' book on Sewing, for the Home Decorator, will be pleased to know that Book No. 2 is now ready. Ninety embroidery stitches; fabric repairing; also table settings; gifts; and many things to make for yourself and the children. If you like hand-work you will be pleased with this unique book of directions for every article illustrated. Postpaid upon receipt of 25 cents (coin preferred). Just ask for Book 2, and address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Appliqued Kitchen Towels

"When I was in Montana," said the old bore, in the smoking room, "I had an interesting experience. One morning, as I was shaving, a fierce lion came into camp. I seized a pan of water and threw it at the beast, and it slunk miserably away."

There was dead silence for a moment, then a little chap in the corner chimed in. "Say, boys," he said, "I can vouch for that story. Five minutes after it happened I was walking along the same road. I met this lion, and I stopped to stroke his whiskers. Boy, those whiskers were wet."

New Beauty for the Home

Self-polishing wax for the household is practical—protective—and popular! Its already wide use is increasing yearly, throughout the homes of the country. And it is the efficient, up-to-date homemaker who regularly applies this amazing product to the floors of her home. The unusual feature of a good self-polishing wax is the maximum beauty it affords, with the minimum labor—both in application and upkeep. It's on in a jiffy—dries thoroughly in 20 minutes—and results in resplendent floors that gleam like satin, look like new, and "dress up" the entire house. A quality self-polishing wax is urged, however, for it is more resistant to dust and dirt, its richer content lasts longer, and shows up to more glowing advantage the natural color and pattern of the wood. Yes, a good self-polishing wax is truly a domestic gem that is inexpensive—time and trouble-saving—and definitely beautifying!

FLOORS POLISH THEMSELVES

...with O-Cedar Self-Polishing Wax. No rubbing—simply spread it on and let it dry—then watch your floors sparkle! Non-slippery, long-wearing—eliminates scrubbing—dusting alone keeps floors clean. Full qt., only 85¢.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses

FOOD PRESERVATION and Explains How to Protect Your Family Against the DANGERS of TAINTED FOOD

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York.

A DISTINGUISHED nutritional scientist once remarked that it is a small favor to keep people alive on a poorly chosen diet. For with the wrong food, they may not get one-fifth of their potential efficiency into their lives; they will drag themselves through miserable days, never knowing the joys of physical fitness nor enjoying the abundant health that comes from a perfect balance of nutriment.

The Perfect Diet May Not Be Safe to Eat

But even the homemaker who plans an ideal diet may be undermining the health of her family by feeding them spoiled or tainted food which carries the deadly germs of disease.

We frequently hear stories of death or serious illness caused by food contamination. And it is significant that the improper care of food in the home is most often responsible. One physician has gone so far as to state that there is no estimating the number of persons who, while not sick in bed, feel "rather poorly," "not strong," or "kind of run down" because improperly preserved food gives them insufficient nourishment.

Homemaker's Responsibility For Food Sanitation

An enormous amount of time and money is expended to put foodstuffs in your kitchen in a fresh, palatable and safe form. Laws govern the manufacture, transportation and merchandising of every food product and an elaborate system is maintained for the inspection of meat. But all this care can be undone if food is not adequately refrigerated in the home.

From the moment that meats, fruits, vegetables and groceries reach your kitchen, the responsibility is yours.

Causes of Food Spoilage

Spoilage in food is due to the ravages of a vast army of micro-organisms which cause it to sour, decay or putrefy, depending upon the nature of the food.

There are three classes of micro-organisms which develop in food—bacteria, molds and yeasts. All three are notable for their minute size, rapid growth and wide distribution.

Not all micro-organisms are the enemies of man; some are useful in the preparation of foods such as cheese, sauerkraut and bread. These need not concern the homemaker. But the harmful bacteria will flourish wherever conditions are favorable to their growth.

There are two important factors governing food preservation. One is the maintenance of a constant temperature of from 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit—under no circumstances should food be stored at a temperature higher than 50 degrees, or bacteria will multiply so rapidly as to make it unsafe to eat. The other is to maintain the proper degree of moisture in the air—neither too much, which encourages the growth of micro-organisms, nor too little, which dehydrates fruits and vegetables.

Appearance of Food May Be Deceptive

The great danger of food that is improperly stored is that it may become spoiled without advertising that fact. Appearance is seldom a reliable guide and unless your refrigerator is efficient, food may become unfit for consumption before spoilage can be noted by sight, taste or smell.

All types of protein foods harbor bacteria which multiply very rapidly at temperatures higher than 50 degrees.

Safeguard Children's Milk

Milk is the most perishable of all foods, because it is an ideal medium for bacterial growth. If this master food is to be kept safe for children, it must be stored at a temperature not higher than 45 degrees.

Careful studies show that there is very little increase in bacteria when milk is held for as long as 48 hours at a temperature of 40 degrees. But when the temperature was allowed to rise to 50 degrees, almost 30 times as many bacteria developed.

Foods That Spoil Easily

The rapid multiplication of bacteria also occurs in other foods having a high protein content, including meat, meat broths, fish, gelatin, custards, creamed foods, peas and beans.

Once food has begun to deteriorate, it must be discarded or it may endanger health. Cooking will not make spoiled foods fit for consumption.

How to Prevent Mold

Molds are another form of spoilage that the homemaker must constantly battle. Mold will grow on almost any substance, but is particularly likely to occur on acid foods, as lemons, oranges, tomatoes and berries; on neutral foods, such as bread and meat; on sweets, notably jellies and preserves, and on salty foods, including ham or bacon.

Molds may develop quickly or slowly, depending upon the temperature and degree of moisture. They thrive under the influence of warmth and moisture and may remain invisible to the naked eye for as long as 36 hours.

Mold growths may be destroyed by boiling temperatures. They may be retarded by keeping food in the cold, dry circulating air provided by an efficient refrigerator.

A good refrigerator is the best investment a family can make. It enables you to take advantage of bargain prices to buy food in quantity. And it safeguards health by preventing contaminated food from finding its way to your table.

An efficient refrigerator also preserves the flavor and texture of meats, fruits and vegetables, so that you enjoy these foods at their best. But its greatest contribution to human welfare is the preservation of food so that it will nourish your body instead of poisoning it.

Questions Answered

E. W.—It's a fallacy to assume that brown sugar is "more nutritious and healthful" than granulated sugar. It is true that brown sugar contains traces of mineral elements, while white sugar contains practically none. But the amounts are variable and never significant. Regardless of color, sugars make their sole contribution to the diet through their carbohydrate content. The caloric value of white sugar is a trifle higher than that of brown, the difference amounting to 91 calories per pound.

Mrs. S. T.—When thoroughly chewed and given a proper place in the diet, cheese is usually well digested. Experiments performed by the United States Department of Agriculture demonstrated that an average of 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed.

Mr. B. M. G.—Yes, cooking vegetables leads to a reduction of their energy values, as well as mineral salts. In general, there is a reduction of from one-third to one-half of the carbohydrate after cooking in water. Frequent reheating cannot be recommended as thrice-boiled vegetables contain little available carbohydrate, and the greater part of their minerals and flavor is also lost.

LIVINGSTON COUNTY FARMERS PLANT CROP IN FOREST TREES

Livingston County is witnessing the planting of an unusual crop this spring. A crop that will not be harvested for years to come, yet that will yield many benefits each year, for on many farms in Tyrone and Hartland Townships trees are being planted. Not fruit trees, but forest trees. A half dozen different kinds of evergreen, oak, walnut, hickory, ash and many others, including trees and shrubs that will give winter food and cover for wildlife. 108,000 in all.

Long, winding contour furrows sweeping across the high bluff on the south end of Jim Murphy's and in a worn-out pasture on Ray Robinson's, attract the attention of neighbors, who, bested by their curiosities, make frequent inquiries as to what it is all about.

"Giving it back to the Indians!" is the jovial reply coming from Frank Monroe, onetime teacher in the Howell and Hartland schools and now in charge of forestry and erosion control project.

"There is nothing mysterious about this tree planting," Mr. Monroe continues. "Nature intended these slopes for trees and originally put them there and now that man has found out that cropping or pasturing doesn't pay, he is heeding Nature's device and is putting them back to trees."

"Nature lovers often see beauty alone in trees, but these land owners who cooperate with us in planting these trees also see a crop," Mr. Monroe continues. A crop that earns money immediately in many places by stopping the usual annual loss from crops that yield so low that the don't pay investment in seed and labor of putting them in, a crop that pays its way by controlling erosion and enhancing the valued the farm and last but not least, a crop that can eventually be harvested periodically for hundreds of years if proper care is used in selected acres to be cut and allowing proper reseed-ing."

Summer Outlook

One and all are more mildly interested in what is ahead this year. We know that what one man says is often contradicted by another one interpretation of a set of statistics differs from the next one.

Roger Babson maintains his consistently optimistic viewpoint. He looks for improvement due to government spending and completion of seasonal adjustments in most industries. Low prices cannot go begging for long when raw materials are needed.

Crop reports indicate a big wheat harvest, but growing conditions may cause thinner growth. Corn is reported to remain about the same price-wise.
