

The Pinckney Sanitarium Has Been Sold

Dr. Ray N. Duffy of Breckenridge, Former St. Louis Surgeon Took Possession of the Sanitarium Monday.

The Pinckney Sanitarium closed since last January was reopened on Monday by Dr. Ray N. Duffy of Breckenridge who purchased the place of Dr. Hollis Sigler last week. Dr. Duffy had heard of Pinckney as a promising location and came here to look the place over on May 15th. He called on Claude Kennedy, mayor of Pinckney who got him to consider the sanitarium. He came to terms with Hollis Sigler, administrator of the Sigler Estate and purchased the Sanitarium, barn and garage. Dr. Duffy is a graduate of the University of St. Louis, Missouri, and practiced there for ten years before going to Breckenridge where he has been for the past year. His family consists of himself and his wife. He will not operate the sanitarium at present, but will use it as a residence and office. Later nurses may be hired and the institution opened. We understand that Dr. Duffy has had considerable experience in the hospitals of St. Louis.

The Pinckney Sanitarium was established by Dr. H. F. and C. L. Sigler in 1901 and soon drew a large patronage. Howell, Brighton and St. Clair bridge were without hospitals and the doctors made working arrangements with the doctors there. It was damaged by fire about 1922 and almost completely rebuilt. Dr. H. F. Sigler died in 1926 and Dr. Claude Sigler assumed management of it until his sudden death on May 23rd, 1937. Dr. Hollis Sigler operated it until January 1st, 1938, since which time it has been closed. When it was in operation the staff consisted of the doctor, two nurses, a matron and a janitor.

By an odd coincidence Dr. Duffy takes possession just one year to the day after the death of Dr. Claude Sigler.

JURORS TO REPORT MAY 24

The jurors have been ordered to report at Howell on May 24 for the May session of court. Judge Collins held a one day session last week in which routine business was transacted. Steve Korn and Stanley Backlund, two Hiramack chicken thieves charged with stealing chickens from Mrs. Dodd, of Portland were arraigned, pled not guilty and will be tried later. Bail of $5000 was asked. R. B. Bennett, charged with forgery was ordered to appear in September for sentence. So was Otto Hill charged with drunkenness. The charge of wife desertion against George Jones was withdrawn. Leile Foster was admitted to citizenship. Ernest Dawson, Detroit, had his driver's license restored. The following divorces were granted: Rosie from Frank Baker, Ruth from Lawrence Perkins. The suit of Dwight Lawson vs Tyler Brogan was set for trial May 24.

Wm. Bruff aged 58 died suddenly Saturday evening in Howell. Since his health failed about two months ago he had been making his home with his brother Melvin in Oceola. He leaves two other brothers, Orin, Owosso and Marvin of Pinckney.

JUNIPERS AND APPLES

Our ornamental junipers have a pretty tough time along in late spring and early summer. There is a disease that alternates between the junipers and the members of the apple family. In the spring it manifests itself on the various junipers by producing an orange brown colored gelatinous mass. These persist for perhaps 10 days and produce the organism that infect the leaves of the common thorn or apple. The lesion on the apple leaf are circular and of an orange color. The organisms from these lesions produce the condition on the junipers the following spring. To combat this disease it is necessary to remove one of the host plants. Some people have tried to remove the masses from the junipers but it is not practical as the infecting organism travels a great distance.

National Air Mail Week

Celebration Over 20th Anniversary of Air Mail Stimulates Interest in Air Mail and Many Persons Send Air Mail for the First Time

The National Air Mail Week celebrating the inauguration of air mail over twenty years ago went over with a bang and many persons patronized the air mail for the first time. The Jackson Citizen Patriot was the only paper that failed to cooperate. Their grievance was that notwithstanding Jackson spent $100,000, building an airport, the mail and express companies refused to stop. The government's reason is that stopping at Jackson would slow down mail service. If the mail planes are to stop at all places their value would be lost as they would not make any better time than the railroads.

The special plane landed in this county about 9:00 Thursday. Postmaster Harry Murphy and President C. H. Kennedy of this village were there to greet it with a large number of others. There were over 800 passengers and mail from this county on the plane. Over 500 came from Howell. Pinckney sent 134 letters. Howell, Fowlerville and Pinckney were the only postoffices having the special cachet on their envelopes. Fowlerville's bore the inscription "Fowlerville's Home of Charlie Gehring". Howell's advertised the recreational facilities of the county, such as golf, tennis, swimming, etc.

16 special mail planes delivered 850 lbs. of mail at Detroit Thursday. The regular planes delivered 538 lbs. more and five other special planes came in the next day. Air Mail still continued to be received at the postoffices, some 12 more letters coming into the local office Friday to be sent out by regular air mail.

CELEBRATES 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Washington Lodge No. 65 F. & A. M. celebrated its 25th anniversary last Wednesday night. Six members of Washington Lodge of Pinckney attended. The Dexter lodge was started in 1913 and has had 55 masters during its existence and raised 1100 candidates. It has had but three places of meeting. Carl Bates was toastmaster and speeches were made by Harry Reed of Detroit, Judge Newkirk of Ann Arbor and Frank Wing of Fort Wayne, Indiana. The latter is 84 years old and was made a Mason in Dexter in 1874. Rev. Jerome of Detroit, former mayor of Dexter delivered the address. In reading the lodge history it was shown that the first visiting Masons ever to be entertained by the Dexter Lodge were three members of Livingston Lodge. This was in 1885 and the three Pinckney Masons were Dr. C. W. Haze, John Broughton and Marcus B. Wilcox.

WRESTLING AND BOXING

A Surprise for the Folks!

Norval O. Frye Passes Away

Norvil O. Frye, 71, died at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor, last Thursday after a long illness of a heart ailment. He was taken to the hospital a week before his death in hopes that something could be done for him but all efforts failed and he passed away on May 19 at 11:00 p. m.

Norvil Frye was born in Monroe county, Missouri, and spent his early life in that state. He was a salesman during the greater part of his life and travelled extensively. For a number of years he travelled for a grocery wholesale in Colorado with headquarters in Denver. Later he was a salesman for a nursery company in Illinois. Finally he came to Michigan where he was connected with the Greening Nursery Co. of Monroe, a salesman. While acting in this capacity he became acquainted with Mrs. Nellie Dunning of Pinckney and he was united in marriage with her on November 14th, 1923. Since that time he has resided here. He was a justice of the peace for eight years and was active in that capacity, trying many lawsuits and also doing considerable collection work. A member of Livingston Lodge No. 70 F. & A. M. he seldom missed a meeting and was active in all lodge affairs. His universal good nature and droll southern humor made him a favorite with all members. He was a member of the degree team and served efficiently on different committees. His politics were Democratic and he told the world so. In 1936 he was the Democrat candidate for drain commissioner and although defeated, made a good run.

His passing will be mourned by many in this section as he was the representative of the law in Pinckney and a worthy successor of the late justices W. A. Carr, W. B. Darlow and others who officiated in that capacity here in days gone by.

The funeral was held at the home Sunday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. John McLucas delivered the funeral sermon. Both Masonic and O. E. S. bodies attended and the Masonic burial service was delivered at the grave by the members of the Livingston Lodge, with Ford Lamb, W. M. giving the funeral oration. The burial was in the Pinckney cemetery.

TAX SALE GOES ON

The sale of land for delinquent taxes is still on at the county treasurer's office at Howell. Some Brighton township property was sold last week. This week it is expected that Howell Brighton, Pinckney and Fowlerville property will be put up. None of the descriptions in the county have as yet been put up three times as the law requires.

MASONIC RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF BROTHER NORVIL FRYE

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Creator of the universe to call Brother Norvil Frye from labor on the earth to rest and immortality in the Grand Lodge above, where the Supreme Grand Master himself presides; therefore be it:

Resolved, That we acknowledge the wisdom and goodness of our Supreme Grand Master and how in humble submission to the inevitable edict from the Supreme Grand East, He departed this life full of years, ripened with age and experience. NEXT WEEK-The Backhand Drive and Stroke.

School Operetta Is an Unqualified Success

OPERETTA DELIGHTS ALL

The operetta, "The Rainbow's End" given by the grade pupils of the Pinckney school under the direction of Mrs. Iva Meyers, musical instructor, was delightful and those who stayed away, and there were far too many, missed a real treat.

The stage was admirably decorated with both natural and artificial flowers and the children who participated were decked out in all the colors of the rainbow as birds, flowers, fairies etc. We understand that the women of Pinckney have been busy for several months past fashioning the costumes of all kinds.

Ross Lamb made an admirable don and gambled and waged his tail like the real thing. L. D. Haines was resplendent as Robin Red Breast decked out with a monocle and cane and electric greeting enlivened the audience. Garth Meyers played the croaking melancholy raven full of gloom. Jackie Haines was a perfect Jack Frost and Douglas Plummer, a Satey Frost King. Anna Lupo was the Brown Fairy. Dorothy Parker took the part of Nurse Nature whose flowers and birds are stolen by the Frost King and his Snowflakes with the aid of his allies the polar bears who vanquish Nurse Nature's brown bears in a furious battle. However, the Sunbeams come to the aid of the Nurse Nature, defeat the Frost King and his allies and the freezing flowers are saved.

The Snowflakes were Muriel Reed, Zora Plummer, Jean Craft and Lester Natus. The Sunbeams were Arlene Negus, Fanny Shirey, Johnny Vast and Jane Amburgey. The flowers were Rita Kennedy, Leona Campbell, Audrey Amburgey and Lois Shirey. The elves were, Maynard Clark, Donald Amburgey, Neil Baughn, Jimmie Meyers, Aaron Shirey.

The brown bears were Charles Clark, Pat Jeffreys, Jimmie Doolittle, Gail Shirey and the White Bears were Bobby Carr, Junior Doyle, Hollis Amburgey, Tommie Clark.

The operetta was filled with solos, duets and dances. A chorus rendered all the selections and also did a folk dance. Miss Virginia Baughn sang two solos and the Fowlerville string ensemble consisting of two violins and a piano played several numbers.

The children all took their parts well which showed the results of several months of continuous practice. Some of them were in last year's Easter pageant but many had never appeared in an operetta or musical number before.

History of Tennis Game

HOW TO PLAY TENNIS

No. 4. The Forehand Drive and Stroke.

The forehand stroke is the most important one in the game of tennis. About two-thirds of all the balls hit require the use of the forehand. It is the natural way of hitting the ball.

With a right-handed player it is the most natural way of playing and hitting the ball and when the ball is hit far to the left it is impossible to hit it, so it must be played with the backhand stroke.

In order to execute the strokes properly you must be in the correct position. In order to do this, you should run to a spot on the court about two or three feet to the left of where the ball will come up after the bound.

After you reach this position the left foot should be toward the net and the right back of it almost in line with the flight of the ball.

Your racket should start back as the ball strikes the ground, and should pass around the back of the body and upward, extending the arm at full reach. The swing should be continuous, not stopping the racket at the end of the back swing.

The weight of the body should be evenly balanced between the two legs when the back swing is started, transferring back onto the right foot evenly to avoid losing balance.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By Ye Editor"

Tuition scholarships worth $110 apiece were handed out by the U. of M. to 77 high school seniors in this state for excellence of work. In the list of names honored we did not see any from Livingston county. The bulk of the scholarships were awarded to city schools such as Detroit, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo. We wonder if the city schools are more efficient or is it because they have a larger number of pupils. Last year Mercede Merrill of the Pinckney graduating class won a scholarship at Michigan State Normal. These scholarships seem to be becoming more numerous thus opening new channels of education to pupils to be won by merit.

There is trouble in the sugar beet fields and 400 special deputies have been appointed in the Blissfield area. The trouble seems to be that there is an effort on by the American Federation of Labor to unionize the sugar beet workers. They wish a union scale of $23 an acre for 12 ton yields and a dollar for each additional ton. The scale was set at $18 for a 7 ton yield. Notwithstanding the efforts to stop importation of Mexican laborers there seems to be much of it at the beet fields. 29 truck loads of Mexicans are said to have been turned back recently at the Ohio border by state police but evidently many others got through.

Probate Judge Hatfield of Berrien county has been sued for libel by a Chicago junk dealer because he stated in his book, recently published, that junk dealers encourage crime by buying stolen articles from children. The stopping of the sale of the book, "Children in Court" is also asked. Judge Hatfield has been writing for a number of papers on this subject. He and his wife also recently tried living on the welfare allotment of $2 per week and found this could not be done without injury to the health. We doubt that the Chicago man will be able to show a personal injury by the judge's blanket charge.

The tea leaf readers are now having a great time fortune telling the future by reading the results of the recent Pennsylvania primaries. Both Democrats and Republicans can find much food for comfort in the results. In both cases the conservative branches of both the Republican and the Democrat parties nominated their candidates. The big question is which party will enter enough to the progressives to get their votes. For they hold the balance of power. The Republicans cast more votes but so did they in the primaries of 1936 and the Democrats swept the state. Also this year the Democrats cast their biggest primary vote in the history of Pennsylvania. There are so many contradictions in the results that the diagnosis is very cloudy.

Walter Lippman, syndicate writer in several papers, writes on the spending program and his conclusion is that it has materially strengthened the chances of the Democrats this fall. Hoover started the spending business back in his administration but was too timid and spent too little to get any results. The Democrats coming into power had the good fortune to get in on a business upswing and spent and lent boldly enough to produce the boom of 1936. Here is where the Republicans made their fatal error. They cried from the housetops that pump priming would bring on a collapse of government credit and bring on runaway inflation. They cried wolf when there was no wolf and the politicians, federal, state and local, who love spending have ever since felt it unnecessary to pay any attention to them. When the government cut down its spending in 1937 another depression followed and all political reluctance to spending disappeared for it has been proved that a certain kind of prosperity can be by the liberal use of government credit and money. The fact is that it works well enough for a time to improve conditions and that American Resources are sufficient to support such a program for a long time to come.

Crop Law Bogs Down

Washington.—Almost before its operation is well started, the new federal crop law appears to be bogging down. From what I hear around the offices of senators and representatives at the Capitol, there is plenty of rebellion against the law which is supposed to plan agriculture on a scientific basis. Indeed, if one reads some of the letters, the conclusion is inescapable that Secretary Wallace and his "scientific planners" are going to have more trouble than a one-armed paper hanger in administering that law.

It is difficult to provide a clear analysis of the trouble because of the complex character of the law, the confusion as to what can and cannot be done under its provisions, the varying attitude of the farmers who are its "beneficiaries" or its "victims," according to their views. The problem of telling what is wrong is made the more difficult because practical people seem to be unable to get anywhere in their efforts to get the "scientific planners" to recognize human nature as well as the material forces that must be considered in farming.

I have talked with a number of Department of Agriculture people; individuals who are supposed to understand the crop control law. They are most convincing; the pen-and-ink sketches that they have made leave only the question as to the reaction of human beings. The department propaganda surely is sufficient to smother any criticism. It is formidable. But it, also, leaves that question of human relationships, wind and weather, to be determined. Even in that regard, every now and then Secretary Wallace issues a statement or makes a speech which seems to do away with any possibility of trouble from those influences.

In the meantime, however, the cotton growers of the South went into a rebellion about the acreage allotment. They succeeded in getting, rather in forcing, Secretary Wallace to obtain congressional action allowing for an increase of 2,000,000 acres of production this year. He went after that legislative action as an emergency, and there was plenty of sentiment in congress for it, because as a matter of cold fact there is a very large majority in the house and senate who doubt that the new crop control law is going to work. To the request for additional acreage, therefore, there was only a little objection since additional acreage meant an obvious increase in general production with the chance for increased return to the farmers who grow the cotton.

Only lately, another tidal wave of rebellion developed. It came from the corn farmers. They had received their allotments of acreage and, like the cotton farmers, they found themselves between the upper and nether millstones. Their rebellion surely lent credence to statements in debate when congress was considering the bill that it conferred more power on a federal agency than ever ought to be conferred in a free country, and that there was no possibility of this power being exercised wisely since none knew its scope. The cotton and corn revolt, therefore, would seem to support assertions in the senate that the two chief sponsors of the bill, Senators Pope of Idaho and McGill of Kansas, had no understanding of the measure they were fighting for. At least, the explanations they made never were able to permeate what I am pleased to refer to as my brain.

Farmers Protest

The corn protesters made their first concentrated move only recently at Macomb, Ill., and the sum and substance of that meeting seems to be that those farmers have had their bellies full of compulsory crop control. They called it un-American; they described it as ruinous and pledged united action against its continuation.

Of course, no one in Washington can tell exactly how many farmers are in sympathy with the position taken at the Macomb meeting. There are 500 counties in what is designated as the corn area. Whether there is a large majority against the compulsory, dictatorial type of law, or whether there is only a sizable minority can not now be accurately stated. It can be stated as a definite fact, however, that farmers do not spend their money to go several hundred miles for a meeting of protest unless they are being badly damaged. Communists and other radicals would go dashing anywhere to hold a protest meeting, but farmers are not built that way. So the Macomb meeting must be taken seriously. It must be given additional weight as well because it followed on the heels of heated protests from the cotton growers.

As to the number of farmers represented in the Macomb meeting; that is to say, the farms and farmers represented by that protest, it might be enlightening to quote here the published statement of Claude

R. Wickard. Mr. Wickard is a divisional AAA director and one of the really close advisors to Secretary Wallace. Said Mr. Wickard: "Complaints have come against the corn allotments as high as 1,100 from one county."

Obviously there could not be that many complaints from more than a limited number of counties. But even if there are only half that number of protests from any considerable number of counties, the representatives and senators who voted for that legislation are bound to get plenty of kicks in the pants next November. And the plight of those members of the house and senate appears to be made worse by the statement attributed to the Department of Agriculture by Representative Andresen of Minnesota. Apparently, Mr. Andresen had been getting baskets full of kicks about the acreage allotments and went to the department to find out the facts. He returned to tell his colleagues on the floor of the house:

"The administration (AAA) will not yield an inch. The allotments have been made according to law and the farmers can take them or leave them."

In that statement, it seems to me, there is unbounded arrogance and Mr. Andresen did the country a service when he repeated it to the house of representatives. It is an attitude of the dictator, of the worst sort of regimentation and it bears out the very thing which Senator Borah of Idaho predicted would happen when he opposed the legislation. Senator Borah's blast in the debate was, of course, branded as the criticism of a Republican, and it was his colleague, Senator Pope, the Idaho New Dealer, who was running about the country last year as the chief member of a committee of senators which was drumming up sentiment for the legislation before the extra session of congress called last November.

By way of prediction, I think there can be no doubt that the wheat farmers will find themselves shocked, instead of their wheat, when they get their acreage allotments later. They will find that the law is compulsory, not one of free co-operation as advertised when the bill was being debated in congress.

Why the Rebellion?

What is the reason for these conditions? Why is there rebellion among the farmers when, according to Secretary Wallace, there was a great majority for application of the crop control provisions? Frankly, I believe there are several factors to be considered as having influenced the passage and subsequent application of the compulsory regimentation.

In the first instance, it is quite apparent now that many representatives and senators were subjected to red hot steam from professional farm lobbyists, from Secretary Wallace and his lobbyists and from the minority of farmers who wanted something, anything, that would cause the government to pay them money. That belief is predicated upon a knowledge that the vast majority of the farmers are too busy with their own affairs to be active in politics. The legislators thought they were doing what the farmers wanted them to do.

In the second place, there surely was much misrepresentation about the legislation. At all times and on all occasions, Secretary Wallace and those who were seeking to put over the legislation vigorously stressed the statement that the provisions of the plan were voluntary. There was to be no compulsion in it; the farmers themselves were to decide; the department here in Washington would do exactly what the farmers wanted. All of which is very well and good, except that the farmers were not informed how much pressure could be exerted to make them volunteer. They either had to "volunteer" or find they could market none of their product without being penalized.

What is the result going to be? Congress soon will be quitting for the year, and there is no likelihood of any amendment that will alter the situation—unless something intervenes to keep congress in session far into the summer months. The only thing to look forward to, then, is the result of the fall elections. If the revolt that is represented by the protests of the cotton and corn farmers is widespread, it will show up in the votes at election time. Those who fought so hard for it in congress will meet trouble in primaries and in the election as well. To me, however, there is an added significance. These protests reveal a growing sentiment among farmers, a resentment, against having the federal government bureaucrats run the farms from Washington.

WHAT TO EAT AND WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Describes the Need for IRON and COPPER

Shows How You Can Help to Avoid Anemia
by Including These Blood-Building
Minerals in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

OF ALL the nutrition problems that challenge the homemaker, none is more important than supplying her family's need for iron. This mineral is sometimes described as the supreme element in nutrition because it is an essential constituent of the blood.

How Blood is Constructed

If you should examine a drop of blood under the microscope, you would observe that it is composed of red cells and white cells. In normal blood there are about 25 million times a million red blood corpuscles, owing their color to the iron-bearing protein hemoglobin. They carry oxygen to all the body tissues, and remove the carbon dioxide formed during the combustion of body fuel.

A reduction in the amount of hemoglobin in the blood may cause shortness of breath, quickened respiration and an accelerated heart action. Lack of appetite, weakness, and a slowing of all vital functions may also result from the diminished supply of oxygen to the tissues.

Lack of Iron May Lead to Anemia

In many young people the blood does not function normally, though frequently parents are unaware that anything is wrong. You may scold them for being lazy, for lacking interest in their work, or never heeding the things you tell them, when the real trouble is due to iron starvation which, if long continued, may lead to anemia.

The person who has a tendency toward anemia usually tires easily and lacks pep; complains of cold hands and feet; worries over trifles, and may have a complexion that is anything but rosy.

The great danger of an iron-deficient diet is that it deprives the body of its chief defense against disease. For when the quality of the blood is poor, one becomes an easy prey to infection. Moreover, if a serious illness occurs, lowered resistance makes it difficult to fight it off.

Anemia may be due to loss of blood, deficient blood formation, or to increased blood destruction.

Two Forms of Anemia

In the body. The different forms of the disease are sometimes classified as primary and secondary anemia.

Primary anemia is usually known as pernicious anemia. It is a grave condition in which the marrow of the bones has lost its power to make red blood cells.

Secondary or nutritional anemia may result from loss of blood in an accident, or it may follow a long, infectious illness. For any infection lowers the iron reserve in the body. But the most common cause is a diet lacking in sufficient iron over a long period of time.

How Much Iron?

It is believed that about 10 per cent of the total hemoglobin in adults is destroyed daily. And for this reason iron-rich foods must be included in the diet every day.

Investigators have found it difficult to determine the exact iron requirement, but according to the latest estimates, from 12 to 15 milligrams a day will not only provide adequately for bodily requirements, but will allow a reasonable reserve.

Women Need More Than Men

Women require more iron than men, in proportion to the body weight, to make good the losses that occur during the menses. Expectant mothers need a generous amount of iron, not only to provide for their own needs and for the normal development of the fetus, but to create a reserve supply in the baby's body which will last through the period of lactation.

The percentage of iron in the baby's body is about three times that of the adult. Nature has wisely designed this reserve to make up for the low iron content of milk which constitutes the chief food during the first six months of life. Nutrition authorities believe, however, that better health results when an iron-rich food, such as egg-yolk, is introduced very early into the diet. This helps to prevent the slight anemia which was formerly regarded as unimportant, but which is now recognized as making the baby more susceptible to infection and retarding growth.

Children's Requirement High

It is desirable to keep the iron intake at a high level throughout childhood, for it has been discovered that better health results when a surplus is allowed above the daily requirement. But there is a very special need for iron in girls from the beginning of adolescence through the eighteenth year.

Iron-Rich Foods

To maintain top health and prevent the possibility of nutritional anemia, the homemaker must learn to meet the daily iron requirement of her family and not leave this vital matter to chance.

Iron-rich foods include egg yolk, liver, molasses, dried beans and peas, whole grain cereals, lean meat and green leafy vegetables. While milk has only a small amount of iron, experiments show that its iron is readily absorbed and is utilized to good advantage.

Eggs are such an excellent source of iron that one egg yields about one-tenth of the standard requirement. Lean meat furnishes a considerable amount, but liver is so much richer that it should be eaten frequently. Dried beans are inexpensive and when baked with molasses become a good source of iron.

It is a pity that parsley is so often used only as a garnish, because it has a higher iron content than most green leafy vegetables. Though potatoes contain only a moderate amount of iron, they are usually consumed in sufficient quantities to make them a significant source.

Copper Also Necessary

Investigation has demonstrated that adequate iron alone is not enough to prevent nutritional anemia, for the body cannot convert iron into blood pigment unless copper is also present. Therefore, in order to obtain the full benefits of iron, the diet must contain sufficient copper. Foods that supply copper in abundance are liver, nuts, dried beans and peas. Smaller but significant amounts are provided by whole grain cereals, dried fruits and poultry.

I shall gladly send to every homemaker a list of foods rich in both iron and copper, and also sample menus showing how to plan a balanced, blood-building diet.

I urge you to write for this material and keep the blood-building foods in mind when planning menus. Never forget for an instant that good blood is the best form of life insurance.

CONSERVATION DEPT. NOTES

A new state park within easy reach of the metropolitan centers will be established on Lake Huron near Port Huron at a cost of $70,000, half of which the St. Clair county board of supervisors appropriated.

The commission has appropriated $2000 to arm conservation officers. Recently two officers were severely beaten by a mob of 30 men in the AuSable river district in the county of Mason.

The dept. has purchased 3,812 more acres of land near the Pigeon River state forest. It is excellent game cover.

The state and the U. S. Forest Service have completed another land trade. The state gets 35,361 acres and the forest service 35,590.

Three new radio units to fight forest fires are being installed in obanity.

On June 2-8, 61,147 acres of oil and gas leases will be sold at auction by the state. The leases are all in northern counties.

There were 82 forest fires the second week of April. Then came rain and the number dropped to 18 the next week. Rain is always welcomed by the forest dept. as it invariably cuts down the number of fires.

The shore line of Michigan's inland lakes totals 5,200 miles.

N. C. Crowell of Vandercook Lake recently caught 10 fox pups alive.

The law now fixes the maximum take of perch at 50 for the great lakes and 25 for the inland waters.

The fishing season opens on all lakes June 25. The mild winter is expected to favor a good season. The carp is one of the hardest of fish.

Once a year, on Memorial Day, we respect and honor our dead. It is just and fitting that we do so. During the holiday period, however, we frequently forget our safety. In past years, many more dead have been added to our casualties because of reckless and unsafe practices on these week-and-holiday. Make this Memorial Day, we end a safety week end. Do not violate the rules of courtesy and the rules of the road. America can make Memorial Day a real day in the memory of our dead by safe, sane, sensible driving.

Gross gas tax collections by the Department of State for the first four months of 1938 were only 6 per cent less than for collections for the corresponding year of 1937, statistics show.

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, Detroit society youth. Great-Granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the "dark Dana," a trait shared by her and Cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad. Uncle Lynn, wheelchair invalid, adds his plea to Sally Ann to save Sarah Lynn, as does the girl's young brother, Bill. Another plea comes from Miss Pennington, "Penny," adoring governess of the girl, saying she is unhappy and misunderstood. At a family dinner party, Sally Ann first hears of Keaton Dana's ultra-modern wife, Ardine, who runs a roadhouse called the Stewed Prune, and is trying to wangle a fight with Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, famous for his refusal to fly women through their mutual friend, Jim Allison. Gunnar Thorwald arrives with Jim Allison, and Sarah Lynn is attracted to him. Duncan invites her to the Stewed Prune. Sarah Lynn refuses to drink anything but ginger ale, which Ardine herself serves. Cousin Mary Dana Webster tells Sarah she suspects Ardine and her friends of framing on Gunnar and Sarah Lynn, in an increasing stupor, decides to warn him. When Gunnar arrives, angry at Jim Allison for missing connections, he hears Sarah Lynn cry, "Go away! Don't come in! Ladybug, fly away home," and sees her carried out to the ladies' room, unconscious. Gunnar arrives at the Stewed Prune, where he sees Sarah Lynn, partly out of her stupor, imagines the sensations of flying, with Gunnar at the controls. Gunnar, flying to Los Angeles, senses someone standing behind him.

"Oh, glorious—glorious!" she stammered. "I don't understand—Am I here?—flying away in the night? Am I still pretending?"—her teeth were chattering with cold, with excitement—"in the Stewed Prune! It's so wonderful—so splendid!"

It was not Ardine Dana, but the dark, thin girl with the lost and lonely look he had noticed at the Henry Dana house, whom he had seen again, maudlin with drink. But now her face was white and her eyes blazed with thrilled rapture, and she seemed to be transported with a wild, incredulous joy.

Happy, triumphant over the success of their trick!

"Keep away from me, drunken fool!" he said savagely.

There was a stifled wall behind him but he did not look around. He busied himself with directions. Where—granted that he must forego the pleasure of pitching her out in mid-air—was the first place he could land her? Anywhere he could get his ship down with a semblance of safety!

Unless he carried her all the way to Los Angeles—or Glendale, which was his destination—and that was unthinkable—he must apparently detour to a place called Fresno.

A stealthy look, presently, showed him that she had settled herself in a seat, a blanket wrapped around her. Her face was pressed against the window, but she turned and saw him and started to rise again.

"I must tell you—" she began urgently, her voice shrill above the motor. "You must listen to me! I wasn't—I wasn't—They gave me something—" She started to stand up, to come forward again.

He made an imperative gesture. "Keep back. Do not come here. Stay where you are."

She dropped beside the window, huddling under her blanket, peering out into the quiet sky.

CHAPTER VI

Miss Pennington always marveled that her charge never wept, even in childhood, but Sarah Lynn was crying now, bitterly and uncontrollably, salt tears running into her mouth, shivering under her woolly coverings.

In spite of the cold, the stinging, biting air, she was seared and shriveled by the flame of Gunnar Thorwald's scorn and contempt.

"Keep away from me, drunken fool!"

The hideous irony of it—Sarah Lynn, flat-tire in the mad tempo of fourth generation Danavale because she would never take a drink! She looked at his rigid shoulders, at the relentless angle of the head in the sterner classic helmet and absolved him utterly. Why shouldn't he have believed the worst of her, seeing her there in that loathsome place, heavy-eyed and staggering and babbling?

"I'm not afraid!" she exulted. "I'm not the least particle afraid. I adore it. This won't be the last time—I won't let it be. I'm going to fly all my life. It's fun! It's heavenly! It's the kingdom and the power and the glory!"

There was a bump which threw her forward in her seat, and then they were thumping along over a field, terrestrial again, all glory gone. They turned and drew up presently in front of brightly lighted buildings with a big group of people before them. An attendant came running to meet them.

Gunnar Thorwald did not leave his seat. He spoke through the window.

"Thorwald, San Jose to Glendale."

"Gas?"

"Nothing. I land a passenger."

Without looking round, he indicated

Sarah Lynn with a motion of his shoulder.

The man opened the door and thrust in his head. "Getting out, lady?"

"I—yes, I suppose—" Sarah Lynn got to her feet, tripping over the blanket, gathering it clumsily into her arms. The attendant reached a hand to help her.

The Norwegian ace did not turn his head as she went by him.

"I am sorry," Sarah Lynn began unsteadily. Then the words came in a rush. "No, I'm not! I'm glad, glad! It was the most wonderful, glorious—"

The pilot was silent, eyes set forward.

"Look out, lady! Low bridge!" the attendant warned her.

Sarah Lynn, looking at Gunnar, lifted her chin defiantly and struck her forehead on the casing of the low door, and the man helped her to the ground, the blanket trailing. She raged at herself. Must she always be grotesque before him? Always a figure for scorn and loathing?

"Say, is that Gunnar Thorwald? Feller that flew the ocean?" the attendant wanted to know excitedly.

"Yes."

"Well—gosh! Hey, Eddie! That's Gunnar Thorwald! You know—the Norwegian ace?"

"The other came running. 'The deuce it is! Why, sure—that's his ship, all right. Hi, fellers!' he "Did he take our picture?"

waved a beckoning arm. "Know who that is?—Gunnar Thorwald!"

Sarah Lynn was aware of a gathering group as the plane took off.

"Can you feature that?" one of the workmen said in a low tone. "Just came down to dump her, huh?"

"Yeah; threw her out like she was a sack of mail."

"And look at her! What's the big idea?"

A large and noisy element was added to the crowd, pouring out of the bright waiting-room, a man in evening dress, a girl in bridal costume, half a dozen men and girls with flowers and old shoes and rice and confetti, all staring at Sarah Lynn.

A man in the company's uniform came up to her, touching his cap. "Beg pardon! Is there anything we can do for you? Would you like a taxi? I mean, where are you going?"

"To San Jose; to Danavale." She turned round then, coming out of her abstraction, painfully aware, suddenly, of the curious throng. Her face flamed. She gathered up the blanket and shook it and tried to wrap it around her.

"We haven't another plane to-night."

"I must telephone my father," Sarah Lynn said. "Where—"

The bride ran after her and caught hold of her arm. "Say, listen, sister," she said in a high, sweet voice, "are you in a jam?"

"I'm quite all right," Sarah Lynn said stiffly.

"Well, is that nice? Throwing you out like a sack of mail! Is that a good old Norse custom?"

"I want to telephone—"

"Here—I'll show you!" She picked up her glistering train.

Sarah Lynn followed her. "Is this Fresno?"

"Well, for Pete's sake! Didn't you know where you were landing? Yes, this is Fresno, and here's your booth. I'll wait for you."

"Thank you," Sarah Lynn said coldly. "It's not necessary."

She looked fully at her for the first time and took in the details of white satin and filmy veil and orange blossoms. "I mustn't keep you from—"

"Oh, that's all right!" she said easily. "It's just one of my wedding-dings! Married in Hollywood and flying to Frisco and set the ship down to say hello to a bunch of nit-wits. Go ahead and telephone your folks." The young man had followed them and he said something to her in a low tone. She nodded. "Don't shut the door, dearie—you'll smother in that box. I'll stand right here."

The youth lit a cigarette and strolled away, but kept within hearing distance.

"I want Danavale 3704. Yes. It's a suburb of San Jose. I want to speak to Mr. Dana—Mr. Edwin Lynn Dana."

There was at once panic and reassurance in the sound of her father's voice, thick, drowsy, amazed.

"It's Sarah Lynn. I'm at Fresno. Fresno. F-r-e-s-n-o! Why, I flew down. Flew! With Gunnar Thorwald. What? I don't know where Duncan is. Oh, Dad, please—I'll explain everything when I see you. How can I get home? I haven't any money." She was silent, listening.

"Yes, at the Fresno airport. Shall I wait here? What? All right. Yes; the Californian hotel and ask for Mr. Pond. How soon can you get here?—Tell Mother not to worry, please! I'm perfectly all right. Yes—I understand—Mr. Pond, Californian hotel." Her voice, thin, strained, hoarse, warmed suddenly.

"Oh, Dad, it was glorious—glorious!—yes. Good-by."

The young man came close to her, speaking with controlled excitement. "You're Miss Dana? From Danavale? I used to work on the newspapers in San Jose. You flew down with Gunnar Thorwald? Well, of course you did," he grinned, "but what I mean is, weren't you going all the way to Glendale with him?"

"No," Sarah Lynn said briefly, aware now of the avid curiosity in his gimlet gaze.

"Isn't it a fact he vowed he'd never take a woman up in his ship?"

"Yes."

"And then he kidnaps you in a blanket and—"

"He did not!" she defended him hotly. "It wasn't his fault—I mean, he didn't intend—" she stopped, confused.

"Why did he dump you out like that? Didn't you ask him to set you down at Fresno? But you didn't know it was Fresno, did you? I guess maybe it was a pretty wild party, wasn't it? Do you mind telling me just how—"

The bride put a protective arm about the forlorn, thin figure. "Lay off the interview, Beanie! Isn't it a girl's privilege to get out and walk home when she wants to? Probably the Great Dane got a little too primitive and she—"

"No!" the girl said vehemently. "It wasn't his fault! I told you it wasn't his fault!" She walked away from them, her blanket spreading out behind her like a train, and spoke to the uniformed attendant. "I want a taxi, please."

"Wait!" the bride ran after her. "There's a flock of cars here. I'll have somebody drive you. Look—I'll come with you myself!"

"Please don't trouble," Sarah Lynn was rigid. "I want a taxi, please."

"No trouble, lambie! Hi, Larry!" she hailed the groom. "Listen, angel: I'm driving this child to the hotel. Back in a jiff!" She flung her long white gloved arms about him and gave him a painstaking cinema kiss. "No, of course I won't run out on you, beautiful! You just stay here and play with your wooden soldiers and the first thing you know it'll be Christmas morning!"

The young man spoke to her in a low voice. "Hold everything for a sec, will you, Kit? I want to get the two of you together, with your train and her blanket. Boy, is this a wow or is this a wow?" He beckoned to a man with a camera who came swiftly forward. "All right, Mike; make it snappy."

The bride arranged her veil and settled the little lace cap, and thrust her arm through Sarah Lynn's. "Come along, babe! Well, will you look who's here!"

Sarah Lynn glanced up. There was a soft explosion, a dazzling flash.

"Slack!" the reporter said gleefully. "It's a knockout!"

"Oh!" Sarah Lynn cried out in panic. "Did he take our picture? He mustn't! My mother would be—"

"Don't you worry! I know how his stuff turns out—we might as well be a couple Native Belles of Mo-zamee village. Here we are, hon!" She shepherded Sarah Lynn to a car garlanded with white streamers. "Californian hotel, Tommy, my lad, and let 'er step!"

The instant they were out of hearing the youth hung himself upon the telephone and shouted a number.

"Hello! Nick? Say, feller, just pin the ol' ears back and listen! What a story! Ready? Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, who has just flown the Atlantic, and who has taken a vow never to fly a woman in his ship, set the Hermod down at Fresno at 2:45 a. m. and unceremoniously landed Miss Sarah Dana, of the famous Danavale colony, exclusive suburb—he drew a reviving breath and went on—"Of San Jose, and I got a picture that's a honey—the gal in a formal and a blanket—blanket, yeah, b-l-a-n-k-e-t, standing beside Kitty Medill, Wild Woman of the Air, Hollywood's stunt-flying fool and her nth bridegroom!"

The big and beautiful lobby of the Hotel Californian was dimly lit and drowsy, the exquisite Regency cocktail room was asleep, but the man behind the desk was wide-awake and cordial.

"Why, hello, Miss Medill!" Then he laughed. "Beg pardon! I mean, Mrs. Van Dalton!"

"Old stuff, big boy. Don't you ever read the papers? Sure, I'm another bride. I checked the groom out at the field while I brought you a customer. This is Miss Dana from up north. She was flying to Los and changed her mind, and she wants to stay till her folks come for her. Make her comfortable, will you?"

"Gladly!" His puzzled gaze went from her bridal finery to Sarah Lynn's blanket. "Will you register, Miss Dana?" A buzzer sounded behind him and he turned to answer the telephone. "Yes, Mr. Pond?—just arrived this minute. Very well, Mr. Pond." He turned back to them. "Miss Dana, your father telephoned. Mr. and Mrs. Pond will be right down. Won't you have a chair?"

"Then everything's jake, and here goes the bride!" She waved aside Sarah Lynn's stammered thanks with a heavily jeweled, well-decorated hand which was slightly grimey. "You tell your Big Swede I don't like his fireman's hat! Tell him all the regulars over here wear boudoir caps." She gave her a comradely hug. "Don't let it get you down, dearie! By!" She spread out her satin train, dropped her eyes with maidenly reserve, folded her hands and went out of the lobby with slow and timid steps, balancing uncertainly on the balls of her feet at every pace, humming tenderly—"Here comes the bride—"

The hotel man and his wife came hurrying down immediately, kind, concerned. Mr. Pond understood perfectly: her father had explained the situation and asked them to make her at home until he arrived: it was a privilege to be of some slight service to her father's daughter.

Usefulness of Tin Cans Just Begun
When Empty; Serve Many Purposes

Deep in Inner Mongolia, across the wastes of the Gobi desert, there is a monastery with a glistening gold roof. Well, anyway, it looks like gold from a distance.

Roy Chapman Andrews, the famous explorer, thought it was until, on approaching closer, he found that the roofing materials had come from Bayonne, N. J., rather than some hidden mine in the desert, says the United States Steel News.

The roof was made of tin kerosene cans, hammered flat. Rust from the uncoated edges gave it its golden appearance.

In the same part of the world, in the remote sections of Manchukuo, the railroads are sometimes plagued with bandit trouble. The guards assigned to protect the trains and passengers have developed a new type of armored shelter—baled tin cans.

The cans are dried by heat, then crushed into bundles or bales by large presses and used for the construction of bulletproof block houses.

The list of odd uses for tin cans, which crop up in the most unexpected places, is almost endless. There are, for instance, the Chinese morticians in San Francisco who use tin cans to ship back to China the ashes of Chinese who want to be buried in the homeland.

Nor can we forget the compressed tin cans which are used instead of crushed rock in building roads in West Palm Beach, Fla., nor the baled cans with which the bed of the Los Angeles river is "paved" to prevent it undercutting its banks.

In South America, purchasers of canned goods in large quantities demand tall, six-gallon cans, because they have a cash value of 50 cents each as water carriers. After the natives have punched holes in the top, to insert the pole on which the can is carried, it will still hold five gallons of water.

Ventriloquism

Voice cannot be produced by a ventriloquist in the stomach or anywhere except in the larynx. In ventriloquism the speaker takes a full breath, keeps the muscles of the chest, neck, lower jaw and lips as motionless as possible, and speaks with the mouth almost closed and the glottis narrowed, not allowing the air to escape through the nose. The lower lip is slightly retracted, and rested against the upper teeth, and the tongue articulations are greatly altered. Much of the deception depends on suggestion as to the source of the sounds.

Washington News News Letter

By Congressman Andrew J. Transue,
Recovery Program
Second Chance

Wages and hour legislation was the chief subject on the House docket this week as the Senate prepared to consider the Administration's plan to relieve unemployment throughout the nation. Last week President Roosevelt signed the naval expansion bill to give the United States the largest navy in the history of our nation.

Blasted out of the restraint of the Rules Committee for the second time by the petition method the revamp wages and hours bill was scheduled for consideration on Monday and Tuesday in the House. The new bill offered by the House Labor Committee would fix a minimum of 45 cents an hour and a maximum of 44 hours a week for all concerns engaged in interstate commerce. The bill includes a sliding schedule that will, in three years, fix the minimum wage at 40 cents and the maximum hours at 40 a week.

The majority of the House membership including your Congressman signed the petition to discharge the Rules Committee from further consideration of the bill in the record time of two and a half hours. More than a month was needed last year to get the required 218 signatures on the discharge petition and the bill was finally sent back to the Labor Committee. The second bill does not include any differential in favor of southern sections of the country. Sponsors of the measure anticipate that national regulations for wages and hours will protect and increase the purchasing power of the working people of America.

Alternations Contemplated
The Senate is due to receive the relief bill passed by the House by a large majority and referred to the Senate Appropriations Committee that has been holding hearings daily for the last week on the measure. The Senate will decide whether restrictions will be added to the House bill to prevent the Public Works Administration from granting money to municipalities for construction of municipal power plants in opposition to existing privately owned utilities. This restriction was approved by the Senate sub-committee by a narrow margin as an alternation of the bill approved by the House.

Federal grants for municipal utility construction have the sanction of the United States Supreme Court, which last January ruled that such procedure was "lawful competition from which no legal wrong results". This decision was handed down in one of the suits instituted by private utilities to stop the government from assisting cities that wanted to own their own power plants. It was considered one of the strongest cases presented by the private utilities against the TVA. In the event the Senate should approve this restriction it would be one of the controversial issues for consideration by the joint House and Senate Committee.

Appropriations Increased
Other changes in the bill approved by the Senate sub-committee and sent the TVA. In the event the Senate and possibly for additional consideration by the House include increases of $212,000,000 for the farm parity price payment budget and an increase of $175,000,000 for the WPA. The WPA added appropriation would take care of eight months instead of seven so the work would not be interrupted next winter while a new Congress considers the problem. The House allotment for WPA is $1,250,000,000. These suggested increases would add almost $400,000,000 to the $3,154,000,000 House measure.

Michigan Airmail
Prospective airmail through the Sixth District to Sault Ste. Marie was safeguarded by your Congressman and other Michigan Democratic Members of the House last week when an amendment to the Civil Aeronautics Bill was approved after a prolonged debate. The amendment will enable the Post Office authorities to go ahead with airmail extensions previously contemplated and investigated. A localized dispute in Texas threatened the amendment for a time until other sections of the country affected by the amendment joined in the drive.

Hon. John Leucke, Michigan's majority Member on the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of the House, explained that the amendment simply protected work already done by the Post Office investigators. He declared the amendment would not earmark any appropriated funds but gave assurance that the time and money spent in previous investigations would not be wasted.

Over Sixty-Eight Years of Safe Banking

Memorial Day

Looking at our heading we see the phrase "Over Seventy Years of Safe Banking". In that period of time there have been some five armed conflicts. Two major wars, the Spanish American and the World War, have been fought, several minor wars such as the Indian Wars, The Boxer Rebellion, The Mexican Expedition of 1914 the Nicaraguan Expedition.

On Memorial Day we honor those men who died for their country both at home and abroad, not only in the wars named but in all.

Our wish is that they did not die in vain; that they helped in some way to make the United States of America the greatest Democracy ever known; that their sacrifice will secure to posterity the Democracy they fought to protect.
