

Soil Conservation Payments Are Now Being Made

Putnam Township Farmers Receive $3,226.33 in Soil Conservation Payments Saturday. A Total of $5,000 Will be Paid Out.

Claude Soper, Roy Dillingham, and Frank Bowers of the soil conservation commission met at the town hall here Saturday and handed out checks totalling $3,226.33 to some 70 Putnam township farmers who had elected to come under the soil conservation act. These checks ranged from around $10 to $200, depending on how much land the farmers elected to put into the soil conservation plan. 154 farmers in the township signed up and the balance will be paid off next Saturday.

This soil conservation act does not deprive the farmers of the use of their land or force them to let it lie idle. It is for the purpose of the building up of depleted land and to prevent soil erosion and washing away. For this purpose the farmer signs an agreement to plant crops which enrich the soil and prevent erosion. In the west this has become a serious problem and the prairie lands have been cropped so often that they have become deserts and blinding sandstorms are frequent. In the old days the buffalo grass which grew there prevented this.

F. & A. M. GRAND LODGE MEETS

The annual communication of the Grand Lodge F. & A. M. of Michigan was held at Flint last week. Dr. Albert Hughes, a former member of the Fowlerville Lodge was elected as grand marshal which means that in six years time he will become the master of the Masons of Michigan. Wirt Savery of Detroit, formerly of Dexter was elected master. The others in line moved up a step. Dr. F. Lambie is slated to be elected master next year at the communication which will be in Detroit.

Hugh McPherson, a member of the Howell Lodge was elected treasurer for the sixteenth time. The most important matter to be passed upon according to the dailies was the edict on gambling by Wirt Savery, master elect. He forbids all forms of gambling such as keno, bunco, slot machines etc., and stated that any lodge who sponsors them or allows them in their temples will face suspension. He also claimed jurisdiction in this matter over all organizations whose membership is strictly Masonic.

A committee was appointed to investigate the matter of building an office building on the Masonic home grounds at Alma to house the grand secretary and all the grand lodge records. They will report at the next communication at Detroit. The grand lecturer's dept. was also changed. The state was divided into 35 districts of 15 lodges each with an assistant grand lecturer over each.

All amendments were killed, by the fact that the lodges had not been notified the required 80 days in advance. Two brought up by resolution on the floor were also defeated. One asked sponsorship of the High Twelve International Noon Day Club and the other sought to amend the grand lodge constitution in 30 days instead of the years time now required.

Frank Clegg of Washington, D. C. first assistant to G. Edgar Hoover, of the FBI was the speaker Tuesday night. His subject was on the work of his dept.

All but 29 of the 516 Michigan lodges were represented.

Dr. Bryant of Detroit, a brother-in-law of Henry Ford, was elected as grand tiler.

ADMIT LIVINGSTON COUNTY ROBBERIES

Sheriff Kennedy and Undersheriff Bassett went to Toledo last week to visit two alleged chicken thieves held there who had confessed to numerous Michigan robberies. The two men held are Clarence Beach, who escaped from the Ohio state prison in February and his nephew, Walter, of Shiawassee county. The men admitted stealing about 2500 chickens and robbing numerous cottages. According to the sheriff's department they admitted taking chickens from Andy Nibbett of Pinckney and robbing several cottages at Patterson Lake. They are wanted in Ohio and will probably be tried there first.

Week and guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Reason was Ambrose Eichman and Gladys Morrow of Detroit.

Junior Hop Held Friday

Very Pleasant Evening Enjoyed at the Annual Junior-Hop Given by Pinckney High School at Auditorium

Friday night the annual J-Hop of the Pinckney High School was held in the High School Auditorium. This year about fifty attended, including the Juniors and Seniors and their guests and members of the faculty. The gym was attractively decorated in blue, yellow and green, green and yellow being the class colors and yellow and blue the seniors.

Just before intermission, the grand March was held, being led by Miss Victoria Kulbicki, president of the Junior Class and her guest, Mr. Joe Singer.

Everyone enjoyed a lovely evening due to the excellent music furnished by the Cooper orchestra of Jackson.

We hope the J-Hops in the future are as successful as the one of 1938.

DELINQUENT TAX SALE FINISHED SATURDAY

The sale of property for delinquent taxes was concluded at the county treasurers office Saturday as prescribed by law. Some Howell, Brighton, and Fowlerville property was sold but no bids were received on any of the Pinckney village property put up and the tax title is now owned by the state. This also applies to all other property which was unsold. In the northern part of the state this property will be turned into part of the forest and game reserves. In the rest of the state it will be sold. Very little property was sold at the tax sale but it caused thousands of dollars of back taxes to be paid by the property owners.

History of Tennis Game

No. 5. The Backhand Drive and Stroke.

By Tommie Alexander

The technique used in the backhand is much the same as the forehand. The only difference is that the ball is hit on the opposite side of the body.

The racket is swung around the body as in the forehand, your right and left foot given equal weight on the body, shifting the weight on the left foot as the racket is swung backward. The racket is then swung forward over the right foot at the end of the stroke.

Like the forehand the ball is hit in front of the body and exactly between the two feet. You should hit the ball between the knee and the waist, with the arm extended out from the body. To add velocity of the blow turn your shoulder and hip. A follow-through is necessary, keeping contact with the ball as long as possible. In order to keep the flight of the ball low put top spin on the ball. On a top-spin the ball will be higher than on the flat hit shot.

Remember to keep your eye on the ball. The ball must be hit, and to do this you must watch it closely. Watch the ball up to and through the moment of impact with the racket, keeping positions on the tennis court.

You should remember the following: waiting for the ball, ready to hit the ball, position while hitting the ball, and position after ball is hit. NEXT WEEK-- The Serve.

MILFORD FIRM GETS FORD BRICK ORDER

A large crew of bricklayers are working on the new Ford plant under construction here, and this week the walls are rising steadily. The material for the outside is a buff brick and they were sold through the D. Boyle firm of Milford. The contract calls for 120,000 brick, which is equivalent to 8 carloads, which cars have been delivered and they come from Pennsylvania. In addition about 150,000 plain bricks will be used, but these are not included in the Boyle sale.

Plumbers and electricians are also on the job and supplies have been coming in all the week. The steam shovel continues to eat away at the bank and five huge trucks are kept busy hauling the dirt to the lower mill pond, where much clanked appearance is noted by the big fill being made. Circuit Court Is

Now in Session

Short Term Indicated as Few Cases Are Ready for Trial. Judge Collins Hands Down Ruling on the Electrical Law.

The May term of Court convened last Monday. The jury did not come until Tuesday. They were supposed to furnish a panel for the $200 damage suit of the heirs of the late Fred Kneer of Flint against Tyler Brogan. $10,000 damages were asked but the case was settled for $325 without a trial and the jury sent home until the following Tuesday.

Marlie Coon who has been employed at the sawmill at the Jim Henry farm was arrested for wife desertion. He pled guilty and was released on a $100 bond to appear for trial in September. He has a wife and five children.

This week the Teller Estate Case is set for trial. This case has been postponed from time to time owing to the illness of Frank Shields, one of the attorneys.

Judge Collins handed down his decision in the case of Wendel Squires vs. C. A. Pebbles, state electrical inspector. When the state electrical inspection law went into effect Mr. Squires of Brighton took out a license and was appointed one of the examining board for this county. Later he decided to disregard the law and was arrested for violating it. Then Squires started suit against the state electrical inspector to get a ruling on the constitutionality of the law. The case was heard at the March term by Judge Collins who took it under advisement. In his decision Judge Collins stated that in no way was the constitutionality of the law involved in Squires suit. That Squires took out a license and swore to comply with the provisions of the law and accepted a place on the examining board and helped to enforce it. That he failed to show that he had suffered any injury by the enforcement of the law, that he failed to take the stand in his own defense and made no attempt to rebut any of the evidence presented by the defendants. Therefore Judge Collins ruled that it was not necessary for him to pass upon the constitutionality of the law. R. Reed Fletcher, Brighton lawyer, represented Squires and Andrew DiMaggio of the attorney generals office the state electrical dept.

Another such case is still on the docket. However, this is a criminal case, as the defendant, Ralph Hall, has never taken out a license and has been arrested several times for violating it.

FARM HAND TAKES OWN LIFE

Wm. Gillman, 35, employed by Lewis Schmidt on his farm in Howell township, was found dead in the woods there last Thursday shot through the heart. According to the officers Gillman had seated himself near a tree, taken off his shoe and pulled the trigger of the shotgun with his toe. He is thought to have done this about 5:00 p. m. Wednesday as his watch which was struck by the charge stopped about this time. The body was found about 3:00 p. m. the next day. No inquest was held, the coroner bringing in a verdict of suicide.

HARRIS-CONWAY

The marriage of Clifford Conway and Mary Grace Harris of Ann Arbor took place at St. Thomas rectory Monday morning, Rev. Arthur Reckinger officiating. The couple were attended by Mary Conway and Catherine Bokres as maids of honor and Robert Harris as best man. They will reside in Ann Arbor where the groom is employed by the Detroit Edison Co. and the bride by the Ann Arbor Loan Co. The former is the grandson of the late Peter Conway of Pinckney and the latter is the daughter of Frank (Pete) Harris, a former Dexter resident.

A pleasant time was spent at the picnic Tuesday night given by the freshman class of the Pinckney high school at Highland Lake. Games, races etc. were indulged in. Bob Martin won a Weiner eating contest, getting away with over 30 of the luscious viands. He uses no mustard of those who did held them on Sunday or in the morning of the 30th so that they would not miss out on the other events scheduled. The members of the GAR to whom the day was sacred have passed on the present generation regards it as simply another holiday on which to make a whoopee.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By Ye Editor"

For some time past sex magazines have been on the increase in the newsstands. These pictorial periodicals started to accommodate the people who did not have the time or the inclination to read papers or the magazines and had to have the news of the day told to them by pictures. They were a success and more were started. These sought to stimulate sales by adding sex stuff. More and more was added until the limit was passed. The council of Ann Arbor banned the sale of 28 such magazines there last week and an ordinance sponsored by the churches of Detroit to do the same there was considered last week. However the Civic Rights Association, the UAW and Lawyers protested that it curbed the rights of free speech and freedom of the press. In it all magazine distributors would be licensed and the mayor would have the sole power to grant or cancel licenses. This last provision the organization claims was unconstitutional. These magazines have been riding for a fall and it seems about due.

A couple of gubernatorial bubbles burst last week when Dan Knaggs, Monroe mayor and E. Eaton, Plymouth who achieved momentary fame withdrew from the contest for governor. The former was the hero of the press when he repulsed the CIO during a strike at Monroe. Eaton found that his mushy dinner was insufficient to elect him governor and that sentiment around the state for them was nil. No one takes the candidacy of Mel McPherson or O. L. Smith seriously. So that narrows the field down to Frank Fitzgerald and Harry Toy. Now it looks as if Fitzgerald would win with ease. Toy's anti-union stand will prevent him from getting a big enough majority out of Wayne County to overcome Fitzgerald's outstate lead. Outstate Toy has no organization at all to speak of. Toy is supposed to have one in this county composed of those who don't like the Fitzgerald-McKay combination. However this county's opposition to Wayne County candidates is well known and it will undoubtedly be in the Fitzgerald column. So the Toy men will stay near the fence but will be ready to jump on the Toy band wagon and grab the gravy in case all indications are wrong and he cops the nomination.

In the meantime Gov. Frank Murphy will apparently have no serious opposition. Lt. Gov. Nowicki has filed but this is considered an expedient to get Gov. Murphy's name on the ballot and to prevent the Democrats from going over to the GOP camp, as they would if their candidates name did not appear on the ballot. Also he wants the advertising a primary campaign would give him. The opposition to him comes from three principal sources. First from those who never voted for anyone but a GOP candidate and never will, second from those who think he should have ordered the militia to massacre the CIO when they pulled their first sit-down strike at Flint and thirdly from those who do not like his religion. This last class is more numerous than you think. You remember what happened to Al Smith in 1928. As to the increased state payroll, that cuts little ice. The state payroll has been increasingly yearly since Alex Grosbeck's time as commissions, departments and bureaus are added. Fred Green beat Grosbeck on a cut expenses program and failed to keep his promise as the payroll increased under him. So did it under Wilbur Brucker, Wm. Comstock and still another increase took place during the term of Fitzgerald. These candidates all promised the impossible and could not deliver.

Memorial Day seems to have been fittingly observed with double headed ball games, motor boat races, horse races and prize fights and also the great auto race at Indianapolis. The day was made a national holiday so that the memory of the soldiers who died in the civil war could be honored. Now that is a small detail of the observance. Few towns and cities held memorial day services and many

Washington
DigestNational Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington.—It is curious how trade winds blow in politics. We, here in Washington, have just witnessed what can well be called a phenomenon. It grows out of the primaries in two widely separated states, Florida and Pennsylvania. The fact that it was a Democratic primary in each instance, however, makes possible this analysis and discussion of details.

Phenomenon

Taking up the primaries in their order, there was the primary in Florida where Sen. Claude Pepper, 100 per cent New Dealer, indorsee of Townsend old-age pensions, and himself indorsed by James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, licked the pants off of his challengers. He polled more votes than Rep. J. Mark Wilcox and former Gov. Dave Sholtz combined. It was, without doubt, a New Deal victory for which the President can claim justifiable credit.

The second primary was that in Pennsylvania where there were three candidates for the United States senatorial nomination among the Democrats and three for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. There were two candidates for the Republican nomination for each of these offices, as well, but that fact will be treated later.

Few party primaries in modern times developed the bitterness that flamed in the Democratic test in Pennsylvania. It was the first time that organized labor, as such, had come out into the open with avowed candidates and it was the first time Democratic National Chairman Farley has taken a hand in attempting to tell the voters of a state what to do. In addition, there was a state party committee which insisted upon selecting a slate of candidates in regulation boss fashion. So there were all of the elements of a rough fight, and it happened according to forecast.

Mr. Farley made an eleventh-hour public appeal to the Democrats of Pennsylvania "for harmony." He asked them to nominate Governor Earle for the United States senate. Governor Earle was the choice of the state committee faction. Mr. Farley also asked that the Pennsylvanians nominate Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, for the governorship. Mr. Kennedy was thrown overboard by the state committee but he had the open indorsement of John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O. labor union. He also had the backing of Sen. Joseph Guffey, who has constantly served as President Roosevelt's voice in the United States senate. The Farley recommendation thus cast out Charles Alvin Jones of Pittsburgh, state committee selection for the governorship, and it threw Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia into the discard as far as the Democratic senatorial nomination was concerned. Mayor Wilson was a Lewis-C. I. O.-Guffey candidate.

The Farley announcement, made on the day before the primary, built up resentment even from the men he indorsed. Governor Earle barked loud and long; so did Lieutenant Governor Kennedy.

Mr. Earle won. Mr. Kennedy lost. Mr. Jones won, and shouted about it. Mayor Wilson lost and bellowed about the interference. And after the smoke cleared away, Mr. Farley said promptly, in effect, "Let's all get together and elect our Democratic candidates."

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, wrote a statement while the sun was coming up on the day following the primary. He bounced biting words right off of Mr. Farley's head. In substance, he said the Pennsylvania primary showed: 1. The voters of any state resent interference from the national headquarters as regards their party nominees. 2. The voters of Pennsylvania showed they will have nothing to do with John L. Lewis, despite the fact that probably that state is the most tightly organized for the C. I. O. of any state in the country. 3. The Democrats of Pennsylvania are tiring of the "crack-pot brains" of the Roosevelt administration.

Mr. Hamilton, further, called attention to the fact that two present Democratic members of the house of representatives were defeated for renomination. Representative Stack, an admirer of Father Coughlin, radical radio priest, and Representative Crosby, author of Townsend plan bills in the house, were supplanted. The Republican chairman sought to connect their defeat with a trend away from radicalism which he says is inherent in the New Deal, because Mr. Stack sometimes went beyond New Deal ground.

Now, as to the Republican battle: James J. Davis, present senator, was renominated over G. Mason Owlett, backed by the Republican state committee, and Judge Arthur H. James was nominated for the governorship over former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who, like Mr. Kennedy, was approved by John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. as acceptable. So again, the voters took things into their own hands and their state committee selections were taken on where the voters liked the man.

But, to get back to the premise upon which I started, it has been most interesting to note the veering of the political winds. Shortly after the Florida primary, there was a hurrying for cover by dozens of Democrats in the house of representatives. They thought they saw in those results a swing again to the New Deal, a restoration of the President's popularity. New Deal spokesmen around Washington did not let any grass grow under their feet. They used the Florida results to advantage. In good political fashion, they whispered and hinted and sometimes said out loud that the boys who went against the New Deal would get their spanking.

And to their credit, it must be said they did a good job. For example, I am convinced the vicious wages and hours bill that was locked so securely in a house committee would never have been brought out except for the reaction from the Florida primary. Seldom, if ever, has there been so much haste in signing a petition for report of a bill as was observed in the case of that legislation. Generally speaking, I believe it is a fact that New Deal backbones were stiffened all along the line by Senator Pepper's renomination—which assures election in Florida.

Came then the Pennsylvania primary, a vote that was preceded by charges of graft, bribery, bossism, etc., and the Farley "harmony attempt" in the day before the polls were taken. And came then a sudden revival of the fight that anti-New Deal Democrats were making prior to Florida's vote. Maybe the Florida vote did not involve clear-cut New Deal issues; maybe it was Pepper's machine, maybe it was this and maybe it was that—anyway, their thoughts were running: Maybe Pennsylvania is a better barometer. And each one is analyzing that vote in an effort to apply the result to his own district.

Whatever their conclusions are, there is one thing definitely established. Organized labor's most ambitious political effort flopped. It was washed out of the road. The Pennsylvania rout of organized labor of the John Lewis brand is made the more significant because of the link with the White House disclosed through Mr. Farley's indorsement of Mr. Kennedy. It may be, of course, that President Roosevelt did keep hands off, but it is quite another matter to convince the average person that the White House was not involved. For one thing, the Pennsylvania results seem to show that the John Lewis claims of political strength can be discarded as so much hooey.

Another thing to remember about the Democratic primary results in Pennsylvania projects itself into the future—to 1940, to be exact. The victory by Mr. Jones in the fight for the gubernatorial nomination destroys the control of Pennsylvania Democrats so long exercised by Senator Guffey. He cannot be called the boss again under any stretch of the imagination. And when it is time for election of a successor to Mr. Guffey, the best political judgment available predicts Mr. Guffey's disappearance as an entrant. As to the 1940 projection, attention ought to be directed to the fact that probably Mr. Jones, and not Mr. Guffey, will determine what Democratic presidential aspirant shall have the great block of 72 votes in the national convention. This seems certain whether Mr. Jones wins or loses the race for governor. He is established as head of the party. All of the indications now perceptible promise an alignment of the Jones faction, now controlling, with the more conservative group nationally, including Sen. Pat Harrison, Vice President Garner and men of that type. So, it is seen that the Pennsylvania primary can, and is almost certain to, have an important reaction on national Democratic strategy.

In addition to these circumstances, there is talk going around now that the anti-New Deal faction in Kentucky is determined to do business. In that state, of course, Senator Barkley, the Roosevelt majority leader in the senate whose selection to the job was made in the famous "Dear Alben" letter, has a tremendous bulge. Cold analysis of the situation does not afford much comfort for the forces of A. B. "Happy" Chandler, who seeks the Barkley scalp. The point is, however, that anti-New Dealers among the Democrats think the Pennsylvania situation may possibly be reproduced in Kentucky.

THERE are, perhaps, more false notions concerning fats than any other class of foods.

Some homemakers, considering them as "fattening" only, try to eliminate them entirely from the diet. Others have the impression that foods containing fat are difficult to digest, and for this reason deprive their families of many delicious and healthful foods. Both points of view arise from ignorance of dietary facts.

Fats Are Necessary to Health

Fats have a number of important functions to perform. They are a concentrated fuel food, having more than twice the energy value of an equal weight of protein or carbohydrate.

One-half ounce of fat, that is one tablespoon, yields 100 calories, and were he able to eat it, a man could obtain an entire day's fuel from three-fourths of a pound of fat. It is interesting to note that it would require nearly eight pounds of cooked rice to give the same number of calories.

In Oriental countries, where large populations live in great poverty, fat is usually scarce and it is necessary to consume huge quantities of food in order to meet the daily fuel requirements. As a result, most of the people develop distended abdomens.

Children Must Have Fat

Because fat is such a compact food, nutritionists agree that for growing boys and girls, and men engaged in strenuous physical exercise, fat is almost essential, if they are to get enough total calories.

There is also experimental evidence that at least a small amount of one or more of the unsaturated fatty acids must be supplied by the food if normal nutrition is to be maintained. And two competent investigators found, experimentally, that the presence of fat in the diet tends to conserve vitamin B in the body.

Some fats, especially those from animal sources, are rich in vitamins A and D, and fats made from vegetable oils may contain vitamin E.

Fat and Hunger

Perhaps the greatest service performed by fat is its ability to give "staying power" to the diet—to satisfy hunger. In this respect, it directly affects the disposition and may influence the ability to enjoy life.

The shortage of fats in European countries during the World war graphically demonstrated how a deficiency of this class of foods can destroy the morale of entire nations.

With supplies cut off or very greatly curtailed, the warring countries found it necessary to ration fats closely. As a result, their people were always hungry and dissatisfied, even when their actual needs were satisfied. In this connection, it is interesting to note that a slice of bread and butter or margarine will delay the onset of hunger longer than a slice of bread and jam, even though the number of calories may be the same.

Different Fats Compared

As sources of energy, the different food fats are very similar. Thus, the homemaker's choice may be determined by preference, convenience, economy, and the use to which the product is to be put.

The various forms of edible fats and oils are derived from both animal and vegetable sources. They include butter, margarine, lard, compounds, which are a mixture of animal fats and vegetable oils, hydrogenated fats, and the liquid vegetable oils.

Butter and margarine are used chiefly as a spread, and it is interesting to note that the annual per capita consumption of margarine is steadily increasing, as homemakers have discovered that the use of this less expensive product releases more money for milk, fruits and vegetables. Margarine is interchangeable with butter for dressing vegetables and in doughs containing spices, fruits and chocolate. Its shortening power and keeping qualities are similar to those of butter.

Lards, compounds and other shortening fats are useful not only as a means of increasing palatability and food value, but to add flakiness to baked foods and to produce a crisp coating which seals in the minerals and vitamins of fried foods.

Lard is used chiefly as a shortening for pastry, and a good grade will be found to be white and free from objectionable odors. The highest grade, called leaf lard, is produced from the leaves of fat in the sides of the hog.

When made by a reputable manufacturer, the compounds prepared especially for cake making, for shortening pastry and for deep-frying, are wholesome, highly nutritious and give most satisfactory results. They are a most economical form of shortening.

Digestibility of Fats

Because of their ability to retard digestion somewhat and thus give satiety value to a meal, the impression has grown up that fats are "difficult" to digest. This results from confusing the length of time required for digestion and the completeness with which a food is digested.

When "digestibility" is regarded in the popular sense of the ease, comfort and speed with which the digestive organs carry on their work, it is conceded that fats in general retard the secretion of the gastric juice and thus cause food to remain longer in the stomach.

On the other hand, most fats have such a high coefficient of digestibility, that under normal conditions only about one-twentieth of the fat eaten escapes digestion. Experiments indicate, for example, that the body is able to ample, that the coefficient of digestibility of oleomargarine is 97.55 per cent.

It is sometimes erroneously stated that pastry is indigestible. This statement is without foundation, provided the pastry is made from a high grade shortening and is properly baked. Similarly, fried foods come in for a great deal of criticism that should not be charged to the use of fat, but to incorrect methods of cooking. If food is properly cooked in fat that has a high smoking point, there will be no opportunity for decomposition products to develop.

How Much Fat?

Nutritionists have ample evidence that health is best served when 30 to 35 per cent of the total energy value foods is provided in the form of fat. This will include the fat of meat and the fat used in cooking the many delicious fried and baked foods which make eating a pleasure.

Questions Answered

Mrs. M. L., Jr.—Dandelion greens make an excellent food. They contain more phosphorus than any other common leafy vegetable, and supply vitamins A, B, C and G.

Miss C. B. R.—It is difficult to compare the iron content of meats because of variations in the amount of fat. It has been established, however, that organ meats, as liver and kidneys, contain more iron than muscle meats, and that pork and lamb contain much less iron than beef.

Mr. F. K. C.—Answering your query as to whether pineapple juice possesses special properties as a laxative—all fruit juices contain fruit acids, which tend to have a stimulating effect upon the entire digestive tract. However, the pulp of any fruit is far more effective than the juice in providing normal elimination.

Mrs. N. H. R.—As to whether a tendency to overweight is inherited: the body build is inherited. That is, some individuals tend to be short and stocky; others are tall and slender. However, there is no reason why the stocky individual should allow himself to become obese. Frequently, a condition that is blamed on inheritance can be traced to faulty habits of diet, exercise and sleep, passed from one generation to another.

BUYING FABRIC

TEST KNOWLEDGE

Modern mothers ask questions when they select fabrics for the children's clothing.

Will the cloth shrink, fade, wear well or soil easily? These are some of the things they want to know.

They may expect very little shrinkage from sanforized preshrunk fabrics, advises Margaret Partlow, instructor in textiles and clothing at Michigan State College. Likewise they may expect that colors will stay bright from vat dyes and that durability is promised by firm even weaves.

Sun-uits to be true to name ought to have tops of coarse mesh fabric or marquisette, Miss Partlow reports. The more open the weave, the more sunshine reaches the child's body.

WATERVLIET—A freak asparagus of the Mary Washington variety is on exhibit here. Raised by F. Woodworth of Southwest Waterliet, the stalk is 17 inches long, three inches wide, and weighs one pound.

OVID—In spite of his age, C. W. Hier of Shepherdsville still likes to go trout fishing. At the age of 91 this year, Hier secured his trout license shortly before the season opened, and signed his name without the aid of glasses.

HARRISVILLE—Three one dollar bills that had been placed in an envelope for a money order and left in a mailbox on a rural route west of this city were missing when the mail man called. Investigation revealed a bird had started to build a home in the back part of the mailbox, and was using the greenbacks to feather its nest.

ROMEO—An original Currier & Ives print was recently found by Bruce Brandenburg in the third floor of the main street building where he resides, and is now on display in a Romeo gas station. It depicts two men, one in tatters and one properly dressed posing in an easy chair. The first man is represented as saying, "I give credit" and the second, "I sell for cash".

HARBOR SPRINGS—worried because one of her choice white leghorn hens seemed to be on a sit-down strike, refusing to move all day, Mrs. E. J. Hanns finally found out why. The hen had laid an egg measuring seven and three quarters by six and one-quarter inches.

IRON RIVER—Brushing the dirt from a little slip of paper that lay in his yard, J. H. Harding found he held a check dated 1904 and drawn on the old Commercial bank, the first bank in Iron River. The check was written by Patrick Kelly, one of the first businessmen of Iron River.

GLADSTONE--A mass release of "prisoners" from a "jail" occurred here recently, but it was a little different than such events usually are. In the early quiet of a Sunday morning, some daring person defied the law and entered the city dog pound, releasing nine strays just collected. Besides giving the dogs the freedom the release solved a growing food problem.

DEARBORN--I had to force you to arrest me! I'm out of work, broke, and hungry. That is what Jack Semans, 21, told police officers recently after he had adopted novel tactics in search of free room and board. Semans calmly announced that he had smashed a windshield of a police tow car. He got his free meals for 30 days.

TO MAKE OR BUY? ITS A QUESTION

Whether to make or purchase the clothing for children puzzles many a householder's manager.

It wasn't so long ago in children's clothing at Michigan State College concerned only the texture of goods and how clothing should be put together by the home seamstress.

Times are changing. After a fine study of the cost of clothing made in the home and that available in ready to wear stores, there is so little difference in the result that the solution is left to the person who has the work to do, whether to make the clothing at home or purchase in a store.

Conclusions reached by Miss Margaret Partlow, instructor in textiles, are that if a person likes to sew, has some time and skill, knows values in fabrics, then without doubt she is adding concealed savings to the bank account by making children's garments, otherwise it's a tossup.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Jeffreys were Mr. and Mrs. Gene Chandler and daughter, Linda Lou, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Chandler and Lucy Jeffreys of Kalamazoo. Miss Lucy Jeffreys remained for a visit.

SYNOPSIS

Sarah Lynn Dana, youngest of the Dana women of Danavale, Calif., chafes at the well-ordered life approved by her mother, Adelaide, who is trying to marry her to Duncan Van Doren, a society young man. Great-granny Dana, covered-wagon pioneer, and community matriarch, recognizes in the girl the restless adventurousness of the dark Dana. She shares by her and cousin Sally Ann Dana, traveler and author, and pleads with Sally Ann to take the girl abroad. Uncle Lynn, wheelchair invalid, has his plan to save Sarah Lynn. As does the girl's young brother, Bill. Another plea comes from Miss Pennington, "Penny," adoring governess of the girl, saying she is unhappy and misunderstood. At a family dinner party, Sally Ann first hears of Keston Dana's ultra-modern wife, Ardine, who runs a roadhouse called the Stewed Prune, and is trying to wrangle a fight with Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, famous for his refusal to fly women, through their mutual friend, Jim Allison. Gunnar Thorwald arrives with Jim Allison, and Sarah Lynn is attracted to him. Duncan invites her to the Stewed Prune. Sarah Lynn refuses to drink anything but ginger ale. Cousin Mary Dana Webster tells Sarah she suspects Ardine and her friends of framing her on Gunnar, and Sarah Lynn, in an increasing stupor, decides to wait him. When Gunnar arrives, angry at Jim Allison for missing connections, he hears Sarah Lynn cry, "Go away! Don't come in! Ladybug, fly away home," and sees her carried out to the ladies' room, unconscious. Gunnar arrives at the airport, Sarah Lynn, partly out of her stupor, imagines the sensations of flying, with Gunnar at the controls. Gunnar, flying to Los Angeles, senses someone standing behind him. When he realizes it is Sarah Lynn, he shouts, "Keep away from me, drunken fool!" will listen to no explanation, and detours to Fresno. Thrown out at Fresno, like a sack of mail, Sarah Lynn is greeted by a group headed by a bride and groom, who recognize Gunnar. While the "bride" drives Sarah Lynn to the hotel to await her father, one of the party phones the story to the newspapers, identifying the two fliers, and the "bride" as Kitty Medill, wild stunt flier.

Sarah Lynn felt that Mrs. Pond understood even more perfectly. She was equally hospitable, but her shrewd, bright eyes were evaluating the frowsy hair, the bedraggled dress, the blanket. "I'll make you a cup of chocolate, and you must have a good hot tub."

"And a sound sleep," her husband added. "Your father can't make it under four hours, so you must just relax and be comfortable."

Danavale rang and rocked with Sarah Lynn's exploit. Mary Dana Webster went at once to the parents and stated her firm conviction that the child had been drugged, but Ardine slid out of their questionings like quicksilver.

The nonagenarian summoned Sarah Lynn. "Your Great-grammer wants you should come over, quick's ever you can get here," the flat tones of Emma Waters, the maid, stated over the telephone.

The girl set out at once, the greyhound flashing on ahead. Lightning was a solace in the first very vocal days of Danavale's disapproval.

The matriarch was chirping and cackling with excitement and approval. "Well, I declare, Sairy Lynn, if you didn't up'n put out same's I did! Crawled into the flyin' machine and hid just like I did in the covered wagon! Don't surprise me a mite! Proud of you. And I'd admire to meet your beau sometime. You fetch him over to see me, Sarah Lynn."

Her great-granddaughter cringed. "Great-granny, he isn't at all! He despises me. You don't understand. He is furious because—"

"Oh, well, now, don't you fret!" the ancestress comforted her. "Your Great-grammer was kind of like that, first off. Some are. Thought they'd ought of sent me back and was real harsh in his talk, but land—he come round in no time. You'll see!"

Sarah Lynn went upstairs where her Cousin Sally Ann was having tea with her Uncle Lynn. They were the most satisfactory of all her adherents.

"After all, it was a gorgeous adventure," the traveling clanswoman said. "At your age I'd have adored it."

"I did," Sarah Lynn said quickly. "I do. Only—the way it happened—"

Lynn Dana said, "I've just remembered a chap I know rather well, an airman, Conrad Jordan. He's undoubtedly met this Gunnar lad, or he will, and I intend to see, Sarah Lynn, that he gets the truth."

She flushed hotly. "Oh, that's good of you, Uncle Lynn, but you mustn't bother. It wouldn't make a bit of difference to him. I mean—he has such contempt for—for everybody mixed up with it—"

"When you come abroad with me we'll do a lot of flying, Sarah Lynn," the older woman said. "I like it enormously. The glamour never goes out of it for me."

They were casual, comfortable; Sarah Lynn stayed on and on, listening while they talked to each other. She walked home in the dusk with her greyhound pacing demurely beside her.

She found the old governess reading ardently, with four library books opened about her.

"I'm just refreshing my mind a bit on Norse history and legend, my dear," she greeted her charge, lifting pale, protuberant eyes. "I was rather rusty, so to speak. Quite marvelous people, the Norsemen."

The Vikings, voyaging all about Europe, conquering, learning, amazing. Women and children went along to the wars, you know. Valiant, but hard, they were. Listen to this bit"—she lifted a worn volume of history—"The early Norseman had a keen mind, but his heart was as much steel as his sword; he loved battle and stormy seas; he admired the brave, the clever, the strong; for the old and feeble he had no interest, for the suffering no sympathy; the weak he despised."

"Yes," said Sarah Lynn. "I know."

Sarah Lynn liked Europe—Sally Ann's Europe, and Sally Ann's Europe liked Sarah Lynn. She sat in silence for the most part, looking and listening ardently, and presently people began to notice her, clad to type for the first time in her life, and to speak pleasantly to her, and after a while she was answering with confidence.

One day in Paris Sally Ann hooded her typewriter and said, "Let's fly somewhere, shall we?"

She let Sarah Lynn savor the timetables first—"Imperial Airways"—"Suddeutsche Lufthansa"—She read avidly—"Baggage-Refreshments—Noise—Air-sickness"—enchanted to learn that a fourprank." She was painstakingly fitting purple carbon between her crisp pages and kept her eyes on her work. "Nice to have it cleared up, isn't it?"

"Yes," her young cousin said.

Sarah Lynn went out of doors and looked up at the sky. She would never see Gunnar Thorwald again, but when she came into his mind—not of her own importance, but because she was the symbol of his rage—he would not say, "Keep away from me, drunken fool!" He would say, "Poor thing!" But would he? She remembered every word of the old governess' historical excerpts: "His heart was so much steel as his sword; for the suffering he had no sympathy; the weak he despised." But at least it would be a somewhat different quality of contempt.

Sally Ann took her gaily to Salzburg where a friend was singing in the "Rosenkavalier" and left her there for a blissful week, and told her she might fly back to Paris by herself. Sarah Lynn would always remember that long day's flight as her actual initiation to the air. The through plane was booked solid, and she was elated to have to change three times and to do it alone.

Sarah Lynn talked excitedly to Sally Ann about her long day's

The plain cousin sighed. "Well, at any rate, she's got Sarah Lynn back again."

"Ah, but has she? Geographically, yes; psychologically, no! Something's happened to the child, Mary. A sea change—no, air! Mary, I'm telling you! The last of the queer, dark Dana girls has found her element."

"You mean she'll actually be a flier? Have her own plane?" She shook her head. "Cousin Adelaide won't listen to the idea, and can you imagine Ed Dana going against her?"

"Ah, but reinforcements are rapidly galloping to the rescue, headed by Great-granny, tailed by the dashing and heroic figure now before you."

"Lynn! You're going to finance her?"

He nodded. "Yes. But not a word to anyone."

Gunnar Thorwald came to meet Sarah Lynn. He spoke at once, without greeting or prelude, "I ask you to pardon."

Sarah Lynn stood still, staring at him.

He took off his helmet and absurdly she recalled Kitty Medill's high, sweet voice in the dim-lit lobby of the Hotel Californian at Fresno—"You tell your big Swede I don't like his fireman's hat!" His hair was the guileless yellow of unsalted butter, and he had a lean, stern, young face and ice-blue eyes. Their grave gaze was steady upon her. He said again, "I ask you to pardon. I know now the truth. I have shame of my rough words."

She bent her head. "Thank you," she said unevenly.

He put his quaint head-gear on again and continued to regard her seriously. "You like to fly?"

Color came flooding back into her face. "Oh, better than anything else in the world!"

"Now? You will come?"

Helwas asking her to fly with him. Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, who never flew women, who had scorned and despised her, was asking her to go up in his plane. She heard herself making a vague sound and she saw that it must have seemed like acceptance because the tall youth nodded.

"So! We go to tell them." He turned into the little dooryard with its cinnamon pinks and candytuft and China asters and stood aside for her to precede him through the narrow door, up the precipitous stair. Gunnar Thorwald in the first little old Dana house with the matriarch and the man in the wheelchair, and a stranger, and Jens serving tea with heavy care, his huge shoes creaking as always.

She sat silent in her dress and cloak and beret the color of ancient brick and Lynn Dana's eyes were warm upon her.

The Norseman put down his cup and rose. "We fly," he stated briefly.

The stranger, who was Conrad Jordan, stood up, too. "I'll drive you out to the field," he said.

"I'll telephone your mother, Sarah Lynn," her uncle said.

"Oh, but not until after I've gone!" she cried out in panic. The nonagenarian gave her shrill cackle. "You just up'n put out, Sairy Lynn, quick's ever you can," she chuckled. "If there's any to do about it, you tell 'em your great-grammer said you could!"

Sarah Lynn sat beside Conrad Jordan in the small, swift car, and the Norwegian ace doubled up his length in the rumble-seat. They had telephoned from Danavale and the Hermod was being warmed up when they arrived, and she saw Gunnar Thorwald walk round it once, twice, and again, in eagle-eyed inspection, before he took his place.

"We fly," he stated briefly.

course lunch would be served on the Silver Wing... glamorous name! she pored over the pictures—the Koln cathedral from the air—Regensberg beside the Danube—

"We'll buzz over to Munich and hear some music, first. I need it. Music motivates me," the writer said.

Sarah Lynn reveled in every stage of it, the motor to the field, the brisk and business-like comings and goings of planes. She vibrated to every bump as they taxied down the field and took off with the sudden sense of lifting wings.

"Yes," Sally Ann nodded, watching her understandingly. "I adore this instant always. Elan!"

Germany from the air was an orderly universe; every tree in the toy forests seemed to have been set in with perfect precision; the tidy towns looked as if a careful child had placed its play villages in neat patterns on a great, green rug.

"You liked it?" her cousin wanted to know when they came down. "No reason why you shouldn't do a lot of it over here."

She wrote that night to Lynn Dana:

"I wish you might have seen the flash and shine of her! I think she's found her element. After all, isn't the air the last frontier for the queer, dark Danas of the day? Why don't we make an aviatrix of her? I'm sure Great-granny would finance her."

His answer came in something under four weeks.

"I liked hearing of her first flight, and I like your idea enormously. Great-granny kindled to it at once, but we must be wise as serpents. Cousin Adelaide may have lost a battle, but the war is not over. Young Van Doren is back from Detroit."

"I wrote my flying friend, Conrad Jordan, and he made it his business to meet young Thorwald and tell him the truth about Sarah Lynn's stowaway. He said the lad took it very decently. Jordan's very keen about him. That's a break for Thorwald; Jordan will be a far better guide for him over here than poor Jim Allison."

"You'll want to tell Sarah Lynn that the blot is off the 'scutcheon. I imagine it still matters."

Sally Ann gave it just enough importance. "Oh, Sarah Lynn—wait a minute! Letter from Lynn, and you'll be glad to know that his aviator friend has told Gunnar Thorwald all about Ardine's low-comedy" thrills all the way into Paris from the airport, but her traveling cousin was quiet and unusually affectionate. She must have been worried! She made her drink a cup of hot broth and drew a steaming tub for her, and when she was in the bath a mood of high happiness came over Sarah Lynn. After her bath she threw on a yellow robe and when Sally Ann's voice sounded at the door she faced her, glowing, sparkling.

"I'm frightfully sorry, my dear, but I'm afraid you must sail tomorrow. Your mother. There's a cable. They're afraid of pneumonia."

CHAPTER VII

"Of course it might well have been going to be pneumonia," Mary Dana Webster conceded reasonably.

"And Adelaide being what the English amiably call 'a bit on the plump side,' it might well have been going to go hard with her," Lynn Dana contributed.

Sarah Lynn had been home for a fortnight, and her mother, large and languid in expensive negligees, was ruling her realm from a mid-Victorian sofa.

Many Chemical Elements Now Used in Mills; Gold, Silver, Platinum Important

A least 57 of the 92 chemical elements found in and above the earth, or three-fifths of the total, may be found in steel mills, says the American Iron and Steel Institute. Even gold, silver and platinum have their uses, while some of the rarer gases may also be present, although unintentionally.

Plain carbon steel, the most common product of the industry, may contain sixteen elements other than iron, although it is commonly described by its percentage content of carbon, manganese, phosphorus, sulphur and silicon. However, on careful analysis it will probably be found to contain also traces of oxygen, copper, nickel, arsenic, tin, cobalt, nitrogen, chromium, molybdenum, aluminum and antimony.

In the case of carbon steel, this latter group of elements is not consciously introduced by the manufacturer and the amount of each is so small that little effect is produced on the steel's physical properties. Many elements, however, are intentionally added in specified amounts to produce steels of superior physical properties. Among such elements are chromium, cobalt, columbium, copper, manganese, molybdenum, nickel, silicon, titanium, tungsten, uranium, vanadium and zirconium.

Some of the elements unintentionally present in steel are introduced because they are present in iron ore, which often contains, in addition to iron and oxygen, minute quantities of aluminum, arsenic, calcium, copper, hydrogen, magnesium, manganese, phosphorus, potassium, sodium, sulphur and tin.

Air contains, besides oxygen and nitrogen, minute quantities of the gases argon, krypton, neon, and xenon. Thus these elements enter into steel-making as great quantities of air are blown into blast furnaces. As much as 440,000 cubic feet of air, weighing nearly four tons, are used for every ton of pig iron produced.

"CONFIDENCE"

Most writers blame our present economic difficulties on lack of confidence. If we ask ourselves whether we lack confidence in our ability to provide a living, we will undoubtedly say that we have that confidence. If we ask whether we can spend our savings now with confidence, the answer is "No". The latter type of confidence is causing the continuance of the present "recession". Nevertheless the business cycle is bound to turn economic history repeats with greater regularity than political history.

With this in view let us have confidence that our elusive prosperity will return. Save now to take advantage when the upturn comes.
