

Successful Alumni Reunion Held Here Saturday

Large Attendance of Old Grads Attends Gathering Held at School Auditorium Saturday Evening. Alumni Committee Has Balance Left After Paying Expenses.

The annual alumni reunion of Pinckney High School graduates was held at the school auditorium Saturday evening. The first event was a soft ball game between the high school and alumni. Both teams had strong line-ups and the score was tied at 3 to 3 in the 6th inning. Paul Singer and Don Swarthout were the opposing pitchers. In the 6th inning the high school scored three runs off Swarthout to go into the lead. They continued their attack in the 7th and Kollie Shehan relieved Swarthout. In all the high school scored 7 runs this inning before the side was retired. They added a run in the 8th and 2 in the 9th inning giving them the victory of 16 to 4. Paul Singer was the only home run hitter of the game.

Supt. J.P. Doyle Has Resigned

Ends 25 Years Service to Pinckney School. Ill Health Forces Him to Relinquish Duties

For the past year Joseph P. Doyle, has suffered bad health and spent considerable time in hospital. He was tendered a contract for another year by the school board and asked time to decide whether to accept it or not. Friday he submitted his written resignation to the school board. He is in a very nervous condition and the burden of supervising the school another year would probably retard his recovery.

This month Supt. Doyle finished his 25th year as superintendent. He came here in 1913 from the Michigan State Normal. His home was in Sanilac county, where he attended Deckerville high school and starred in athletics, football and baseball. While at the normal he was on the foot ball squad. He soon put Pinckney on the Athletic map. Back in the early days the eligibility rules were not so strict and he played on the high school team himself. Later under his coaching the Pinckney team won two class "D" championships in football in the state and one county base ball championship. One of his basketball teams reached the regional in the state tournament. Two athletes developed by him were given state mention. Don Swarthout was placed on the all state football team and Roy (Lefty) Reason on the all regional state basketball team. Mr. Doyle also played at second base on the town base ball team for several years back in the days when Jimmie Moran was pitching twenty victories a year for Pinckney. During his stay here he raised the school to a high plane and kept it on the accredited list of the University of Michigan. He was also active in public affairs and served on various organizations here. Mrs. Doyle also taught here for some 15 years, retiring two years ago. During Mr. Doyle's illness this year, the management of the school was under her able direction.

Mr. and Mrs. Doyle have purchased a fine home on the Black River in Crosswell, to which they expect to retire. They will be missed very much and their achievements will stand as a monument to them.

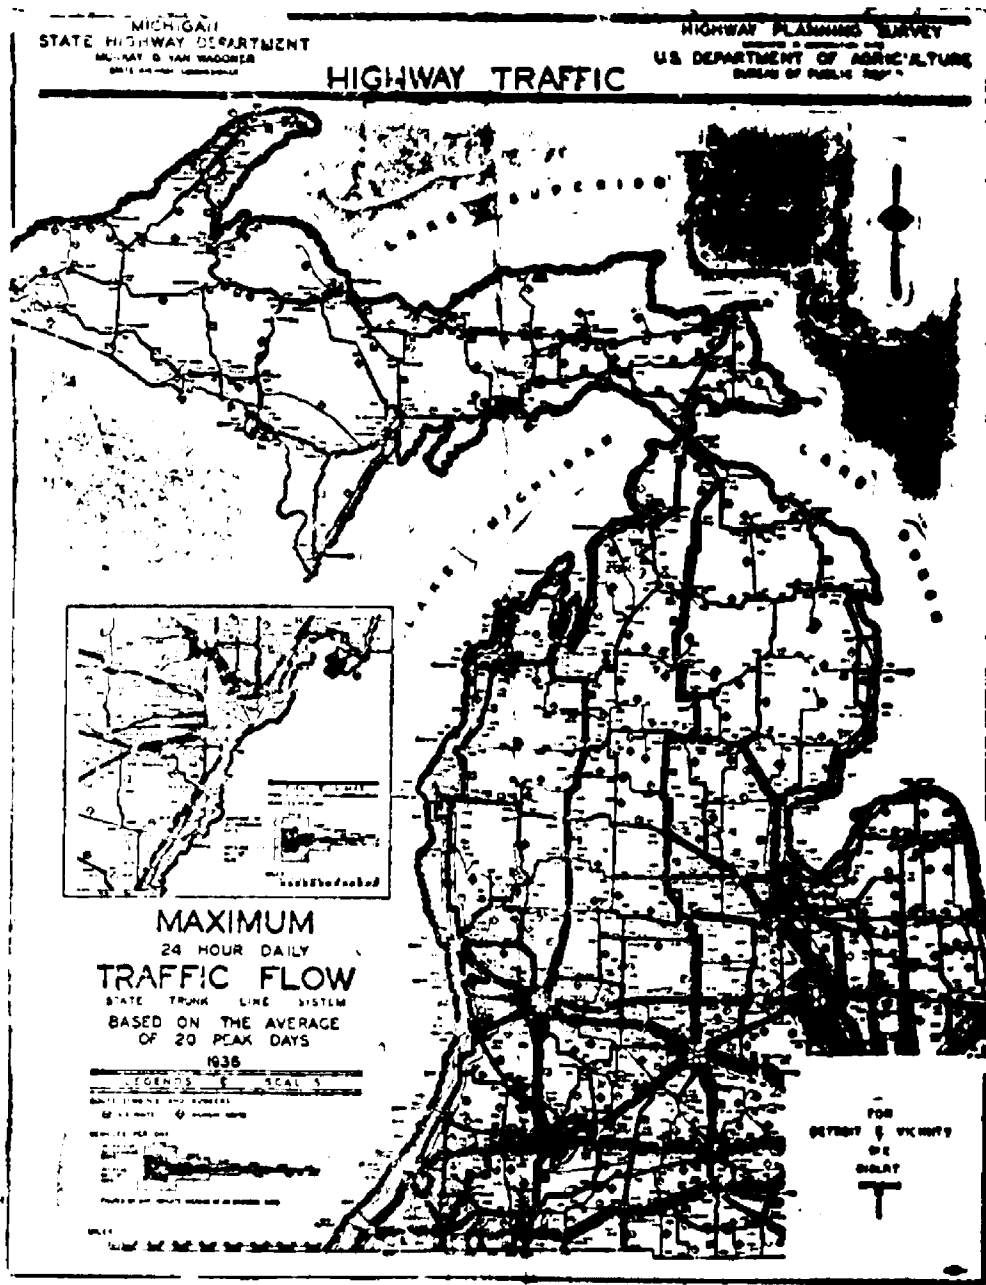

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Raymond Sorg, 22, Howell, Darlene Parks, 19, Howell; Norton Johnson, 23, Pontiac, Gladys Coll, 24, Howlerville.

We understand that the unemployed for this county should register at room 224, Federal Bldg., in Lansing, Michigan.

FISHING SEASON OPENS

The fishing season opened here Saturday and some very good catches are reported at Rush, Bentley Cedar and other lakes. The bass seem to have been biting very good. No casualties are reported as far as we know but several got wet. Dr. Harlow Shehan came out from Jackson accompanied by a lawyer friend. Dr. Shehan, his father, Wm. Shehan and the lawyer went out on Bill's lake in a boat. The lawyer was casting from the boat when he caught a lily pad. In trying to get loose he tipped the boat over, forcing the occupants to swim ashore. The expensive fishing outfit went to the bottom of the lake where it still remains and as the lake has a mud bottom the chances of recovering it by diving are all.

Seventeen Graduates Receive Their Diplomas Wednesday

Pinckney High School Class of '38 Passes into History Last Wednesday When Annual Commencement is Held

On a stage with a background of huge bushes of growing roses, the class colors of Green and Gold and the motto, "Life is Measured by Deeds, Not Years", the senior class of 1938 of Pinckney High School passed into history at the high school auditorium last Wednesday evening.

CURRENT COMMENT

"By-Your Editor"

The 17 seniors were attired in caps and gowns and wore the class flower, yellow roses. The growing rose bushes were furnished by two graduates, Ralph and Mary Jane Ottwell whose father has several thousand rose bushes growing at his estate at Pettysville.

The program was as follows: Invocation, Rev. John McLucas; salutatory, Miss Jean Adams; class history, Telephore Bourbonnais; the class prophecy, Miss Esther Berquist; class poem, Ruth Nash; piano solo, Miss Mary Jane Ottwell; class will, Vincent Young; class oration, Ralph Ottwell; vocal solo, Mrs. Earl Baughn; giftatory, Miss Mary Hoisel; valedictory, Miss Betty Carr; and song by the senior class.

Other members of the class are: John C. Carpenter, Junior Dinkel, Miss Ruth Gardner, Joseph J. Lesiak, Marc Edsel Meyer, Frances E. Shehan and Paul Singer.

The diplomas, in neat leather folders, were presented by Supt. Doyle. Incidentally it was the last of twenty-five graduating classes over which he will preside, he having been forced to resign on account of ill health.

The Albert and Sarah Wilson Memorial prizes in English were also presented by him. Miss Betty Carr won the first prize of $10 and Miss Jean Adams, the second of $5. The award of the medal in American History presented each year by the late Edward Kearney apparently ceased with his death.

CIRCUIT COURT NEWS

The jurors drawn for duty in the damage suit of Charles Ball vs. S. Kontak, Mrs. Laura Raymond, Ernest Hall, and the Bond Co. of Baltimore appeared for duty in the $38,000 damage suit, but were not needed as the case was settled out of court for about $3000. This was the maximum for which the bonding company could be held liable. As this case was expected to take a week or other case was ready and the jury was excused to come back this week Tuesday when the Ancil vs. Floyd English case is slated for trial. Next week the judge will be back to hear chancery cases.

NEW PINCKNEY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT HIRED

At a meeting of Pinckney school board held Monday night Elwin Hulce of Chelsea was hired as superintendent of the Pinckney school to succeed Joseph P. Doyle. Mr. Hulce holds a life certificate from the Michigan State Normal and a degree from the University of Michigan. He has had a number of years experience in teaching and was supt. of the Gregory school for two years. He is well known to the athletes of this section of a few years ago as he was a star basket ball player on the Chelsea team and also played base ball in the Tri-County league. In high school he played football.

Mr. Hulce has a wife and a year and a half old daughter.

We understand that the two other vacancies in the high school faculty have not yet been filled.

NO MONEY SCARCITY HERE

Is there a depression? Maybe, but still the people have plenty of money when they care to spend it. Last Wednesday night they paid over a million dollars to see a colored boy and a German middle aged man fight two minutes in New York City Michigan, a state said to be prosperous from the depression paid her share of it, 165 airplane passages were booked from Detroit to the fight and some 300 booked passage on the Detroit, the Michigan Central Detroit to New York City.

The $3,753,000,000 lending and spending bill has been signed by the president and already projects are being rapidly approved so that prompt action can be obtained on them. Some in this section are among those approved. Among them are Brighton, a water system, $45,000; Ann Arbor, a school addition, $64,000; East Lansing, college dormitory, $202,500; Jackson is circulating petitions for a proposed Monkey Run sewer system to cost $2,312,881. Many other projects in the state have been approved, most of which are schools and water systems. The cities where the greater number of unemployed seem to be getting the greater number of projects. Still the dailies and the press continue to hold the WPA up to ridicule while at the same time they hold out their hands for a share of it. This attitude is reflected in a recent election in Flint on which a proposition to raise the property tax from 15 to 21 mills was beaten about eight to one. Flint schools are hard hit and it has been hard to keep them operating. This means according to the press that Flint officials must go begging to Lansing and Washington for aid to operate their schools. All the propaganda printed against centralization of government seems to have been without avail as the voters are still willing for the federal government to assume their burdens.

Luren Dickinson, Michigan's leading dry, has tossed his monkey wrench into the Republican campaign by announcing his candidacy for Lt. Governor. His candidacy is resented by Fitzgerald as he is from the latter county and it is not considered good politics to pick two men from the same county. Tom lead also threw his hat into the ring and with 6 or 7 candidates the scramble for Lt. Governor will be a free for all. Both state conventions will be in Grand Rapids, the Democrat on September 30 and Oct. 1st and the Republican on Oct. 2nd. Detroit desired the Republican convention but Edward Barnard, Wayne boss settled the issue by voting his own vote and eight proxies for the furniture city. These conventions are not necessary as all candidates could as well be nominated in the primaries. Their only purpose is to keep the two party organizations together.

Many of our exchanges complain that Harry Toy's campaign for governor appears to be getting nowhere. He seems to be hobbled by an agreement that he would not attack his chief opponent Frank Fitzgerald. So far he has devoted his efforts to attacking Governor Murphy. As Murphy is not his opponent in the primaries this is on the order of a dog barking at the moon. His only way to win the nomination is to convince the voters he is a better man than Fitzgerald and that he does not seem to be doing.

He has made many speeches but Fitzgerald has made none, being content to visit the various counties and hold meetings with the boys who can get the vote out. In many counties, including Livingston, Toy has no organization.

More and more it looks like the campaign this fall would be a battle between capital and labor, with the GOP causing the capital side of the argument and the Democrats, the labor. Most of the GOP congressional candidates are anti-labor. Among these is Mayor Carey of Dearborn who ran in the 11th district. He has chiefly distinguished himself by his battles against the UAW an auto workers union and by his work at Dearborn forbidding them to distribute papers or literature at factories in the township. This has since been declared unconstitutional in January 1937.

WOULD DELAY

SCHOOL OPENING

Donald Kennedy, state highway commissioner, advocates delaying the school opening this fall until Sept. 15. At Labor Day he says northern Michigan has its greatest summer charm. Delaying the opening would lessen the huge labor day traffic as it would take those people out of it who are hurrying home so their children can enter school.

Jack Caldwell, sr., was quite badly burned while working at the Red Band Motor Co. at Howell one night last week when some gasoline he was using exploded.

President Roosevelt still has plenty on the ball and in the recent session of congress had all of his favorite measures enacted except the reorganization bill. Among those bills passed were spending bill, crop control, wages and hours, and monopoly investigation. The spending backed giving him absolute control bill was passed with no strings attached. Fortune, a big business magazine has just concluded a survey it finds President Roosevelt is still approved by 54.7 per cent of the voters; 34.4 per cent disapprove, while 10.9 per cent don't know. 47.2 per cent think congress should work more closely with the president, 40.6 percent want congress to be independent and 12.2 don't know. The magazine concludes:

"At the moment it does not look as if the Republicans could win more than three or four new Senatorships this Fall, and even the most sanguine of John Hamilton's supporters has not dared to claim more than 75 new seats in the House of Representatives. The Democrats will still have a heavy majority in both houses of Congress. Moreover the conservative Democrats will still be a minority in their own party." It goes on to say: "And the chances that any important number of Mr. Roosevelt's men will be defeated in the primaries this year are very thin."

"Whether the present situation is permanent or temporary, says Fortune, 'is beside the point. Every businessman who is not kidding himself knows that he does not know how to guarantee, without government intervention, the markets with which alone his free, competitive capitalism can function. Every businessman who is not kidding himself, knows that, of left to its own devices, business would sooner or later run headlong into another 1930. And every businessman who is not kidding himself ought to know that as long as these things are so, the electorate will force government into his affairs. It is neither possible nor desirable for a democratic government to sit by while a third of its citizens starve and almost as many more fear for their jobs.'"

FRUIT BULLETIN USEFUL IN STATE

Michigan's residents live in a land of milk, fruit and honey, so steps have been taken by the home economics division of Michigan State College to help families enjoy year around use of the state's bountiful fruit crops.

A new bulletin in color, "Fruits for Year Around Use," is available by writing the Bulletin Room, Michigan State College, East Lansing. The number of the publication is Circular Bulletin No. 164.

Ruth Griswold, author, points out reasons for writing the bulletin and compiling the recipes, by summing up five reasons for eating fruit.

Their delightful color and delicious flavor stimulate jaded appetites.

They add minerals and vitamins in a universally well-liked way.

They supply bulk in a desirable form.

They combine well with other foods and add zest to every day meals.

Charming Styles for Sports or Afternoon

THE play suit is practically guaranteed to give slim young things a good time at the beach or in the country, because it's so gay and so flattering. And the graceful afternoon dress will make any woman who wears it look slim, cool and smart! Start right in to make whichever one best fits into your plans. You'll be delighted to see how easy it is, and what a saving it means to sew your own by means of these patterns, each with sew chart included.

The Play Suit.

The suit itself has pleated shorts and a square neckline. The skirt, skirted at the top, and tied round the waist, may also be worn as a cape, long enough to cover the play suit. Either way, it looks extremely fetching and flattery. Make this suit of calico, jersey, percale or sharkskin, with the head kerchief to match or contrast.

The Afternoon Dress.

Here's just the type of dress you want for summer afternoons—graceful and soft, with short, full sleeves and deep v-neckline that will be cool on the hottest day. The back is perfectly plain, straight and slenderizing. The jabot ripples at the sides and is plain in front, so that it looks soft without being bulky. The shoulders are smooth, the hips becomingly snug. For this lovely dress, choose voile, chiffon, georgette or handkerchief lawn.

The Patterns.

1484 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39-inch material for the cape-skirt; 3 yards for the play suit. Head kerchief takes 1/2 yard.

1532 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material for short sleeves; 5 1/2 yards for three-quarter sleeves.

Success in Sewing.

Success in sewing, like success in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. To help you turn out clothes professional looking in every detail, we have a book which plainly sets forth the simple rules of home dressmaking. CHAPTER IX—Continued

"Sarah Lynn—" he said her name queerly in a choked voice, and kissed her, a fierce kiss, deep and desperate.

Then she was leaping out into swift and stinging air and was amazed to find that she did not immediately fall. The speed of the Hermod was carrying her along beneath it, face downward, with her arms and legs spread out like a starfish. There was the strange sensation of traveling across the air rather than through it.

"He kissed me!" she exulted. "Gunnar kissed me!"

She began to fall, her body twisting and turning. Now she was looking up at the plane, now down at the earth which was coming swiftly, perilously closer.

"There's something I must do, now!" she thought anxiously. "Oh, yes!—The cord! But where is that ring?"

Her fingers fumbled for it. It seemed to be lost in the webbing. Why hadn't she kept her hand on it all the time? She turned over again and saw the Hermod still above her but further away, somersaulted and saw the earth rushing up to meet her. Why hadn't Gunnar taken her higher than three thousand feet?

Sarah Lynn thought suddenly of her mother. She had a poignant picture of Adelaide Dana's upstairs sitting-room, pretty and peaceful, with potted plants whose every leaf glistened, and a canary warbling tenderly in an expensive cage, and quantities of framed photographs of her big brothers and herself and young Bill in all stages of infancy and childhood.

She found the ring and gave a desperate jerk.

Now! She knew exactly what would happen. The rip-cord would release the pack and the spring ribs of the little pilot chute would open instantly, catching the air and dragging the main chute out into a long line and the wind would rush in at the bottom and expand it. It simply couldn't fail: Gunnar and Conrad and Vance Le Roy had checked it thoroughly. "And even if it doesn't work," she told herself sensibly, "there is the emergency chute! I'm not rattled," she rejoiced. "My mind is running like a clock. And Gunnar kissed me! He was white as a sheet and scared to death about me, and he kissed me! And it was the kind of kiss—"

There was a weird noise which was something between a whistle and a shriek: something was fluttering overhead, and then snapping, loudly, urgently.

"It's opening!"

Then a gun went off somewhere, a shocking, thunderous boom, and her downward progress was halted so abruptly that she thought her arms and shoulders were being torn loose from her body. There were uncounted instants of confusion and terror, and then peace enveloped her.

Her chute opened and was functioning perfectly. She was floating gently, and everything was quiet about her, a sweet, celestial quietness which was soothing and comforting.

She could see the ambulance moving slowly to keep in line with her. She had lost the Hermod for the moment, but surely Gunnar would land as quickly as possible and come to her. That kiss, she felt, was not final: it must be a prelude. Even if it had been given in high excitement, it stood for an emotion which wasn't to be disposed of with this adventure. Filers did not marry. Oh, didn't they? Then what?

There was a confused clamor of voices, cheerful, exultant.

"Good girl!" Conrad Jordan said, lifting her to her feet. "Perfect performance!"

"Atta girl!" Vance Le Roy was unfastening her harness, warmed for once into enthusiasm.

"Where is Gunnar?" Sarah Lynn demanded.

Old Pete from the airport was swearing softly and happily, paying her high praise with picturesque embellishments.

"Hold still—" Conrad Jordan had taken out his handkerchief and was wiping her face, and there was bright blood on the white linen.

"What's that from?" she asked impatiently. "I'm not hurt."

"Of course you're not, just a scratch or two when you were dragged."

"Where's Gunnar?"

"He'll be here just as quick as he can set the ship down," her uncle's friend said. "Now we'll just get aboard and let them run us back to Lynn and the old lady—" He was steering her toward the ambulance.

"I'm not hurt. I'm not going to ride in that thing!" she told him spiritedly. "Where will he come down?"

"Quickest way to get there," he said, taking her arm in a firm grip. "We'll all pile in. Half a mile away!" He lifted her and set her inside and a white-suited orderly grinned and congratulated her.

"I want Gunnar," Sarah Lynn said.

"He'll be here in a jiffy. Lynn and your Granny need to see you before they're convinced you're safe, though we signaled them. Well, did it all come off according to schedule? Did it follow the pattern?"

"Oh, perfectly! It was heavenly after the chute opened," she answered, stooping to look out of the ambulance window. "I don't see the Hermod."

"But you can hear him? Right over us," Vance Le Roy said.

The matriarch and the cripple and the old governess greeted her in character. The ancient woman saw in her the reincarnation of her own dim, daring youth, choosing, as she had done, the brightest adventure of her period, and the paralytic sublimated his own helplessness in her courage and skill.

"I told 'em it was all plumb foolishness, tagging you round with that hospital wagon, Sairy Lynn," her great-grandmother said. "I said you'd come down like a leaf off a tree. Us Danas we most generally do what we set our minds to! Leastways, us dark ones."

Lynn Dana smiled into her eyes. "I'm glad for you," he told her,

Now!

"glad and proud. You've given me my best moment, Sarah Lynn."

Miss Pennington's high color was faded but her diction was as crisp as always. "Let me tidy your hair a bit, she bustled up to her. "I should have thought to have you wear a close net."

The girl slipped out from under her hands. The Hermod was down and Gunnar Thorwald was out and running toward her. She went to meet him.

"I'll know as soon as I see his face," she told herself. "I'll know the first second—"

Gunnar was still white, but she saw at first glance that he was angry, and her heart turned over in terror. There was in his pale face a look of fright and of fury. She did not know what it meant.

Then he reached her, and she knew immediately and entirely what it meant, for he caught her into an embrace of urgency and iron and bent his bare yellow head and kissed her again, and the kiss on the earth differed only from the one at an altitude of three thousand feet in facility and duration.

Sarah Lynn was held in a vise; she could not move her body or her lips, but her mind ran and leapt and soared.

"He does care! He cares—and he's furious—but he can't help it!" Suddenly his arms loosened about her and he held her off, putting her thoughts into words.

"I have not wanted this," he frowned in grave anger. "It is not my wish, my plan. Freedom I like. But—" he looked young, bewildered, agast, and on his pale face were scarlet flecks from the still bleeding scratches on her own.

Sarah Lynn tugged at her handkerchief and pulled it out of her pocket. She was smiling, and she felt very gentle. "There is blood on your face," she said tenderly.

"Your blood!" he said sternly. "It is your blood upon me."

Sarah Lynn stood on tip-toe and wiped the little red smears away as handily as a mother would have done.

"So," he stated unhappily, "now I must love you!"

"I knew you did," she told him. "You could not know. I did not know, until the moment when you would make the jump."

"That's what I meant. When you kissed me. It was different from any other kiss I ever—"

He said quickly, sharply—"You have, then, the so great knowledge of kissing? Who has instructed? Who—"

"Well, I should say so!" Jordan agreed genially. "Miss Sarah Lynn Dana, daring young aviatrix, completed a sensational parachute jump with all the nerve and skill of a professional."

But the Norseman was not to be deflected. "Always I have said: fliers shall not marry." He looked at Sarah Lynn again with grave resentment, sighed, lifted his hands, palms upward, let them drop. "I make now the discovery that I love this girl."

"I think," Sarah Lynn murmured with a sudden accession of shyness, "I ought to ride back with Great-granny!" She ran away swiftly to the car.

CHAPTER X

Gunnar stood still in a clump of madroños when he and Sarah Lynn were out walking after lunch.

"Now we talk," he announced stiffly.

Sarah Lynn halted before him, standing with folded hands.

"Love I did not want. Love, I said always, was a weakness."

"I know," she nodded meekly. "Freedom I wanted; freedom like birds in the air." He seemed to be accusing her of having ruined his plans.

"I'm sorry," Sarah Lynn said. "I mean, I'm sorry you're so furious about it and so miserable, but after all"—she tried to sound reasonable and detached—"birds do come down sometimes, don't they, and build nests and—"

He shrugged his lean shoulders. His mouth looked beaten, baffled. "Everything blocking the way, I have conquered. Now this conquers me. I know it. Never can I lose you. If I fly across the ocean, still you are there. My life breaks in pieces. What now can I do?"

Sarah Lynn thought wistfully of one thing at least, and apparently the same idea occurred to him, for his long arms shot out and caught her to him in a straining hug.

"So, then! It is finished!" he lamented.

It was beginning, she exulted to herself.

He released her and took her thin shoulders in a tense grip. "There remains a thing for you to tell," he said imperatively. "How have you the deep knowledge of kissing?"

"Oh, but I haven't, really!"

"Yet, you said you could tell—"

"Well, of course—boys—it always happens. But it doesn't count at all," she said earnestly. "Duncan was always trying, but—"

"From this day"—the ultimatum sounded—"you jump no more; you kiss no more."

"Very well," Sarah Lynn agreed in a small voice.

He frowned and sighed. "Tonight I speak to your father."

"Oh, Gunnar, not tonight, please! Let's wait a little—"

He shook his head. "We quickly marry. We go to Norway."

They got to Norway. She sat down limply with her back against a pungent laurel. "Gunnar! It takes my breath!"

He sat down beside her. "It is my country. Also, I have there the good chance."

"My mother—" Sarah Lynn said in a stricken voice.

He disposed of her mother briskly. That was the way it happened to mothers: daughters grew large and made marriages and went away with their husbands.

Husbands! Marriages! Norway! The world was filled with strange and startling words.

"Gunnar, have you noticed that funny old thing on Uncle Lynn's wall—the pipe-rack in burnt wood, with the verse?"

He nodded.

"Did you read it?"

"It matters not how strait the gate—"

"Yes. I have thought, 'But of course! It must be straight. How shall a gate be crooked?'"

"It's a different kind of straight, Gunnar! This means narrow. You know, in the Bible, 'the strait way.' A girl made that for Uncle Lynn, just after he knew he would sit still in a chair all his life, and he's kept it there all these years although he's not a sentimental person at all, and it looks so pathetic among his etchings and his beautiful books. He must have loved her, I think. That sort of poetry is terribly out of style, now."

"It matters not how strait the gate, How charged with punishments the scroll, I am the master of my fate: I am the captain of my soul."

"Like hoop-skirts or bustles and bangs. People don't read—"

"That I like," Gunnar interrupted. "Captain of my soul. It is good."

"Yes. But the thing I'm thinking of is the 'strait gate,' Gunnar. That comes first, you see. And before I can think of Norway, and us, I must tell my mother and that will be the straightest gate in my life."

He laughed. "You jump over it! And I wait for you on the other side."

But Sarah Lynn shook her head. "No; you don't jump over strait gates. You crawl through."

Danavale was difficult for Sarah Lynn in those days. It was a joyful escape to have Conrad Jordan invite them to a house-party at his Lake Tahoe lodge. He was staging an air tour to demonstrate the practicability of an airport at an elevation of over 6,000 feet in the High Sierras, and Gunnar Thorwald, Norwegian ace, making the fifteenth plane in the meet, gave international importance to the event.

Sarah Lynn rode with him in the Hermod, flying over the Santa Clara valley and the Sacramento. It was perfect flying weather, clear, bright, calm, with boundless visibility.

"This is the way our life is going to be," the girl told herself. In just a little space of time the trials and the tears would be over—beneath them, behind them.

Gunnar Thorwald was thrilled and stimulated; she had never seen him so alert and eager.

"This also I like!"

He brought the Hermod, swift messenger of the gods, smoothly and slyly to the earth and Conrad Jordan came hurrying to meet them, elated with the triumph of his project—15 shining ships of the air on the line at Rabe's field.

Conrad Jordan got to his feet and moved restlessly about the beautiful big room with its dark wood and mellow leather and hearty Navajos. It was evening.

"Play, please," Gunnar said from the hearth.

Conrad Jordan sat down at the piano and hunted through a pile of music.

The youth lifted himself on an elbow. "No! The music you have yourself made."

His host nodded. He had found the shabby notebook he was looking for and took out some clippings. "Here's a thing I found in a paper—"

"The Feeling of Stars." Random lines; faded jotted down bits of his favorites here and there. I've been meaning to work out something," he smoothed out the printed slip and read aloud: "I am in love with high, far-seeing places—and this—"

"Space, and the twelve clean winds of heaven—" He began to play, feeling his way among the notes, the chords.

Make a Pattern For a Slip Cover

By Ruth Wyeth Spears

THE most economical way to cut a slip cover is to make a pattern first. Do this before you buy the material, then fold several bed sheets the width of the fabric you wish to buy, and lay the pattern pieces on them to estimate the amount of goods needed. Some of the pattern pieces may be made of paper, though unbleached muslin is better for parts that must be fitted. Allow 1 inch at all seam lines to insure an easy fit, and 3 inches for a tuck-in all around the spring seat as shown here at A. Cut the sections with straight edges, then pin them in place and shape them to follow the lines of the chair as at B. Also mark each pattern piece with an arrow, as shown, to indicate which way the grain of the goods should run. The lower sketch shows the pattern pieces pinned on the slip cover material. Brush fringe accents the main lines of this slip cover. The top of the fringe is stitched in place at the same time the seams are sewn.

NOTE: Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. It contains forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slip covers and curtains; also dressing tables; lampshades and other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid (coin preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St. Chicago, Ill.

The Powers tap dancing team of Royal Oak put on their act and responded to three encores. The boy is the son of Mable Sigler Powers, an old grad. Mrs. Lola Moran Danforth of Flint sang several selections, one of which was the song she sang on the occasion of her graduation at Pinckney. The Haines Children's Orchestra played and sang several songs and responded to encores. Their last number was dedicated to Miss Green and Supt. J. P. Doyle. Then followed a number of talks by old grads.
